00111316

Digitized with financial assistance from the Government of Maharashtra on 18 July, 2018

THE LAW WAS GIVEN BY MOSES BUT GRACE AND TRUTH CAME BY JESUS CHRIST.

AN

Historical, Critical, Geographical, Chronological, and Etymological

DICTIONARY

OF THE

HOLY BIBLE.

In THREE VOLUMES.

Wherein are Explained all the PROPER NAMES mentioned in the Old or New Testament, whether of Men, Women, Cities, Countries, Rivers, Mountains, &c.

AS ALSO

Most of the Significant and Remarkable APPELLATIVES that any where occur therein.

111316

With ACCOUNTS of

All the NATURAL PRODUCTIONS, as Animals, Vegetables, Minerals, Stones, Gems, &c.

The Whole digested into Alphabetical Order, and Illustrated with above

ONE HUNDRED AND SIXTY COPPER-PLATES.

Representing the Antiquities, Habits, Buildings, Sepulchres, and other Curiosities of the JEWS.

To which is annexed,

BIBLIOTHECA SACRA, or a Copious CATALOGUE of the Best EDITIONS and VERSIONS of the BIBLE;

With a large Account of the most Valuable

COMMENTARIES, EXPOSITIONS, and PARAPHRASES upon the Whole, or any Part thereof, and the Authors of the same.

AND

An ample CHRONOLOGICAL TABLE of the History of the Bible, a Jewish Calendar, Tables of all the Hebrew Coins, Weights, and Measures, reduced to our own. A Dissertation upon JEWISH COINS and MEDALS; another upon the TACTICKS of the ancient Hebrews, by the Chevalier FOLARD: concluding with a Literal Translation of all the Hebrew, Chaldee, Syriac, and Greek Names in the Bible.

With PREFACES proper to each PART.

Written originally in French,

By the Reverend Father Dom AUGUSTIN CALMET, a BENEDICTINE Monk, Abbot of Senones.

And now Translated into English, from the Author's last Edition, with occasional REMARKS, by

SAMUEL D'OYLY, M. A. late Fellow of Trinity-College in Cambridge, and Vicar of St. Nicolas, Rochester:

AND

JOHN COLSON, M. A. F. R. S. and Vicar of Chalk in Kent.

VOL. I.

LONDON:

Printed for J. J. and P. Knapton, D. Midwinter and A. Ward, A. Bettesworth and C. Hitch, J. Pemberton, J. Osborn and T. Longman, C. Rivington, F. Clay, J. Batley, R. Hett, and T. Hatchett.

MDCCXXXII.

//'''C'D

' ' ' '

(C 5 ' ' ' " % 2 " '

! ' ' ' + %2 * 3 & %2 "

4 ' 8 ' &

' ' / , ' " ' ' ' '

' $! 9
' ' ' ' ' '
! "' #' ' '$%% "' '& # ' "'
"' #"' ' "' # "' ' "' %# (' !)
' ' & # ' %"' ' ' ' ' '
' ' ! # ' * "' ' % "' # ' ' ' '
$%% ' "' ' + ' ' ' ' + '
! # ' ' ' "' ' ' ' ' ,# ' ' '
' - "' ' ' . ! "' ' ' ' '
$ # ' '& # '/# !
& # ' %' # '(' '0 ' ' ' + ' ' # ' $# "' ' "' ' ! '& "' ! ' ' 1'
' ' 2 # ' ' ' ! ! 1 ' ' '
"' %# ' "' "' # ' "' "' * #"3 ' "'
' (' ' ' ' ! ' ' ! # ' # "' '
' '% ' ' ' ! % ! ' ' ! "' ' '
' ! ' 4 # ' # "' # ' ' . '
' ' 5 ! 647 00 ' % ' ' "' ' ' (' '
% # ' ! ' ' ' . "%
"' #"' ' ' '0 "' ' ! ' ' 1'
"' "' # ' ' & # ' (' # ! "' '
! ' ! ' ' # "' "' ' ' # '
& #"' "' ' ! (' #' ' ' ' '0 # "' '
! ' 8 ' '$ "' ' ' ' ' ' . % '
! &' #' ' ' ' ' ' ! ' ' ' . #
"' + 8 ' "' ' # ' ' "' ' 0# 8 "3
' # ' ' ! ' # ' ' ' ' 9 "'
' "' - "' ' ' % ' & # ' %' ' '
' ' "' ! ' ' , ' ' #"' #% '
% #

% # " # # # +
$% . # 4 0 #
% # % % : # "" $! 1
% ! " & # " ! ! "
% 0#%% 6 0 " ! !
% " + 8 7" 5)
! " # ! # & # # "
9 " % %%
; 3 #% # ! # & #
% " # "" ! # $
# % # & # "
! < " ! =% >? ! %
& # " ! # ! " ! %
! ! 0 " % #
. @?
& # % " ! # #""
" 6 %% #
- "" ! # A #
#% ! , # $ " & # "
%% # & # ! $)
" ! ! . 4
! ! # ! # # "B "
! #" =% 8 #
& # %" % " % #
& # - % "")
" $%% " = #)
! " ! # # "
! (! %# (- " - # "
% ! % 1 %
! #

+ "

$ & &

& ( )

$ / 4 .
: '

THE

TRANSLATORS PREFACE.

THE Publick is at last presented with a Work, which has been long promised, and had been delivered much sooner, if the Persons concerned in it had not been solicitous to procure an Impression of it in English, from the last and most perfect Edition of the Original. The Author thought proper to enlarge his first Design with the Addition of two Volumes, published under the Title of a Supplement, distinct from the two former Volumes; with which these were afterwards incorporated, the new Articles inserted in their proper Places, and the Improvements of the rest disposed according to the References in the Supplement, so as to make one entire Work, reduced under one and the same Alphabet.

How much Delay must have proceeded necessarily from every Variation in the Author's Scheme will be easily imagined by the Reader; who now the whole is at last finished, will, we hope, receive with Candour what is here offered to him with Respect. We shall not, according to the general Humour of Translators, grow tedious with excessive Commendations of our Original: But we may be permitted to acknowledge that Merit in Father Calmet which all the World allows him; and concur with the Learned of all Opinions and Persuasions, in declaring, that he has applied Abundance of good Literature to the Service of Religion, in clearing obscure Passages of the sacred Writings, in reconciling Difficulties and appearing Contradictions, in examining Original Texts, and in performing all the Offices of a judicious Historian, Critick, and Commentator.

While we are doing this Piece of Justice to our Author, we do not forget that he is of a different and very dangerous Communion; but St. Jerome *has taught us this Lesson, bonis adversariorum, si honestum quid habuerint, non est detrahendum. The Reason of which Proceeding is so agreeable to natural Equity, that we are sure a more partial Behaviour, on the score merely of a Diversity of Sentiments, would be very inexcusable to Men of ingenuous and free Spirits.

We have not therefore maimed him by retrenching or disguising any thing delivered by him; but in those Articles which have a more immediate Relation to the peculiar Tenets of his Church, we have faithfully expressed his Sense of them, without any Apprehension of spreading the Infection of such Errors as an ordinary Capacity may discover, and every intelligent Protestant is able to confute.

Not that we have been absolutely negligent in this particular; some little Memorandums being added in the Margin, at all proper Opportunities, in order to awaken the more unwary Reader, and arm him against Surprizes; as well as to declare our own Dislike of such corrupt Inno-

* Hieron. Ep. 65. ad Pam. & Ocean.

vations

[illegible]

[illegible]

ERRATA:

PREFACE Page iv. Column 1. Line 40. for Alberstad, r. Halberstadt, p. v. c. 1. l. 2. r. Long.

P. 1. c. 1. l. 12. r. dixi, at Bottom for &, r. δ, p. 2. at Bottom r. the true Year, c. 2. l. 32. dele of, p. 3. c. 1. l. 40. r. a Native, p. 6. c. 2. l. 68. r. Fable, p. 12. c. 1. l. 28. for and r. &c. p. 13. c. 1. l. 23. dele 3. c. 2. l. 25. and 30. r. Capital, p. 16. c. 2. l. 30. for Dr. r. D. p. 18. c. 1. l. 22. dele from the Beginning of the Paragraph to this Action, p. 29. c. 1. l. 51. r. Ptolemy, p. 31. c. 1. l. 23. r. 2555. p. 32. c. 2. l. 9. r. dancing, p. 33. at Bottom r. Ἄκρα, p. 34. c. 1. l. 41. dele own, p. 39. c. 2. l. 37. r. disposed, p. 40. c. 1. l. 58. r. have, p. 46. at Bottom r. sagum, p. 46. c. 1. l. 56. r. ambulavi, p. 51. c. 1. l. 7. r. palliatum, l. 43. r. had, p. 52. c. 1. l. 41. r. Batrick, at Bottom r. Assareth, p. 58. c. 2. l. 46. r. owneth, p. 64. c. 2. l. 11. r. farther, p. 65. c. 2. l. 48. r. Julius, l. 49. r. forth, p. 75. c. 2. l. 38. r. Meat-offering, p. 81. c. 1. l. 44. r. would, p. 85. at the Bottom r. Epitaphio Paulæ, p. 95. c. 1. l. 54. r. Gerasa, p. 96. c. 1. l. 4. r. there, l. 8. r. commotions, p. 97. c. 2. l. 58. for some Fields r. Lands, p. 98. c. 2. l. 43. r. this, p. 104. c. 2. l. 18. r. 1917. p. 107. in Margin r. [illegible], p. 110. c. 1. l. 18. and 59. r. Oecumenius, c. 2. l. 53. r. After, l. 56. r. Eliphaz, p. 112. in Margin r. [illegible], p. 114. c. 2. l. 55. r. where, p. 116. in Margin r. Ἀμάθους, p. 126. c. 2. l. ult. r. Fathoms, p. 128. at the Bottom for monendo r. non Credo, p. 132. at the Bottom r. dies, p. 135. c. 1. l. 44. r. Husbands, p. 138. c. 2. l. 47. r. Ossifraga, p. 141. c. 1. l. 16. dele the, p. 145. c. 1. l. 17. r. difference, p. 153. c. 2. l. 9. r. Onias, p. 154. c. 1. l. 3. r. Olympias, p. 175. c. 1. l. 8. after to r. conform, p. 178. c. 1. l. 38. for of r. at, c. 2. l. 22. r. Persons, c. 2. l. 60. r. Naharaim, p. 190. c. 2. l. 40. after rather r. as, l. 50. r. letter, p. 194. c. 1. l. 9. r. reading, p. 198. c. 2. l. 55. r. times with, p. 202. c. 2. l. 18. r. Inarus, p. 206. in Margin r. פרע p. 215. c. 1. l. 8. r. qua, p. 235. c. 2. l. 58. r. Boulaye le Goux, p. 235. c. 2. l. 3. dele the, p. 240. c. 1. l. 3. r. Shimei, p. 241. c. 2. l. 12. r. her, p. 256. c. 1. l. 42. dele the, l. 58. r. Vesta, p. 260. c. 1. l. 59. r. Vitellianus, p. 263. at Bottom r. Naashon, p. 265. c. 2. l. 44. r. past, l. 63. dele the, p. 273. at Bottom r. Darvenus, p. 280. c. 1. l. 4. for told r. laid on, p. 281. c. 2. l. 3. r. Navarre, p. 282. c. 2. l. 32. r. Beroth, p. 284. c. 2. l. 38. r. Lord who, p. 286. at Bottom r. Polyg. p. 287. c. 2. l. 28. for of r. to, p. 288. c. 1. l. 36. r. Peor, p. 290. c. 1. l. 41. r. Gorgias, p. 294. c. 2. l. 3. r. Ecclesiasticus, p. 295. c. 2. l. 25. r. Impossibility, p. 230. c. 1. l. 43. r. edimantium, l. 45. after commentarius, add Hieron. Ep. 9. ad Salvinam, p. 313. c. 2. l. 44. r. that they, p. 316. c. 2. l. 12. for first r. preserved, p. 320. c. 2. l. 38. r. Writings, at the Bottom for ἐξῆς r. ἐφῆς, p. 321. c. 2. l. 35. r. four, p. 322. c. 2. l. 13. r. Salmon, c. 2. l. 37. r. where, p. 334. c. 1. l. 18. r. Metatron, c. 2. l. 8. for II r. IT, at Bottom for ט 40 r. ם 40. p. 339. c. 2. l. 59. r. there, p. 346. c. 2. l. ult. r. converted, p. 351. c. 1. l. 55. for with r. of, for of r. with, p. 354. c. 2. l. 23. for them r. it, l. 29. for Branches r. Trees, p. 364. c. 1. l. 17. r. Staff, p. 370. c. 2. l. 5. r. is, l. 6. r. It contains, l. 7. r. casts, p. 375. c. 2. l. 14. r. between, p. 378. at Bottom r. deliratiorem, p. 380. c. 2. l. ult. r. Abraham, p. 381. c. 1. l. 12. r. plundering, p. 389. c. 2. l. 52. after to r. the, p. 395. c. 2. l. 60. r. whom, p. 396. c. 2. l. 46. r. write, p. 401. c. 1. l. 32. r. prove, at Bottom r. habitus, p. 402. c. 1. l. 19. for four r. those, c. 2. l. 24. dele II Darius &c. c. 2. l. 26. for III. r. II. p. 404. c. 2. l. 32. for IV. r. III. p. 419. col. 1. l. 18. r. thoughts, p. 423. c. 2. l. 61. r. Ogyges, p. 424. col. 2. l. 57. r. 18th. p. 425. c. 1. l. 30. r. fifteen, p. 436. c. 2. l. 58. r. adored, p. 442. c. 1. l. 34. and 36. for their r. year, p. 461. c. 2. l. 50. for in r. at, p. 463. c. 1. l. 31. r. Dragon's-well, at Bottom r. ἀρχαίων, p. 479. c. 2. l. 44. for twelve r. three, p. 511. c. 2. l. 58. for Male r. Malchus, p. 513. c. 2. l. 4. r. government, p. 518. c. 2. l. 8. r. Ogyris, p. 524. c. 1. l. 1. for it r. this kind, p. 537. c. 2. l. 24. r. Origen, c. 2. l. 31. r. difficiliorem, p. 538. c. 2. l. 39. for those r. the, p. 541. c. 2. l. 52. r. had, l. 54. r. Parson, c. 2. l. 27. and 35. r. Theos, p. 556. c. 2. l. 57. dele if, l. 60. for in r. on, p. 567. c. 1. l. 4. [illegible], l. 71. r. [illegible], p. 590. c. 1. l. 19. r. Trachonitis, p. 603. c. 2. l. 61. for in r. of, p. 622. c. 1. l. 18. r. ambiguous, p. 633. c. 2. l. 51. for them r. him, p. 642. c. 2. l. 32. r. [illegible], p. 645. c. 1. l. 89. r. Sina, p. 675. c. 2. l. 26. r. Aphrodite, p. 707. c. 2. 34. r. Hyperbolus, p. 740. c. 1. l. 55. after came, add in, p. 774. c. 2. l. 1. for day r. dispute, p. 782. c. 2. l. 27. r. his, p. 804. at the Bottom r. Tigranes, p. 813. c. 1. l. 16. r. them, c. 2. l. 30. r. inextensible, p. 815. c. 1. l. 24. r. peccatum, c. 2. l. 3. r. fault, p. 816. c. 1. l. 15. for that r. the, p. 817. c. 1. l. 22. r. sings, p. 819. c. 1. l. 60. r. Cedrenus, p. 820. c. 1. l. ult. r. foot, p. 823. at Bottom r. assutæ, p. 824. c. 1. l. 34. r. Batanæa, c. 2. l. 57. r. Polychronius, at Bottom r. Ricaut, r. du Cange, p. 827. c. 1. l. 49. for Aaron r. Levi, p. 828. c. 2. l. 46. r. Children of Israel, l. 7. r. time r. in which, p. 834. c. 1. l. 39. r. Molis-ambo, l. 53. r. difference, c. 2. in Margin r. בְּקִבְּצִאֵל p. 838. c. 2. l. 30. r. coasts, p. 852. in Margin r. וְישַׁטְרוּ p. 855. c. 1. l. 42. r. Kahen d'Ain, p. 858. c. 2. l. 8. after to r. make, p. 870. c. 1. l. 58. r. motions, at Bottom r. Rahen, p. 878. c. 2. l. 23. for these r. there, p. 885. c. 2. l. 53. for how r. cow, p. 887. c. 1. l. 32. r. Seas, p. 913. c. 1. l. 9. r. whose, c. 2. l. 49. r. kinsmen, p. 914. c. 2. l. 53. r. he saw, p. 917. c. 2. l. 51. r. Obadiah.

G R

$ C 6"

. 2 $ *

)

0 2)) 0

: ⇒ 4 +7 ?

& 1& 0 4 1 I XQ R %) " 9 ! -

4 % % " A ?A - / %) $ #

1 # + + $ 9 9+

0 % @ % 1 $ # : / ## $ " "

2 % $ " % , Q " "

" / + / # 6)

1 # , @ + 1 ## - !

1 , $ $ # / " " #9

$ % " / , # 1 , / a - + 9 - 1 . .

/ J % ! " # / / 5 ! 9 - L$ #- " +

" 0 / V , / % #) 9 " 1 - M

J 0 ! " # # % 9 #- B -

/ % / # 0 A $ NO 99 " + #- @ M

$ / , / + 0 / / -# % # % # "

A50 # # 5 # # + / " # # 9 9 #-F # 9

B # + 0 # 1 (C $# $ &

4 # % % " / # , 2 ! ! ##

/ # $ 4 5 H 1 9 ! % #+

@ - .

, + # $ " , 6 / , 1 & / I !T 0 ,

> % , # Q 4 / V / 9 . / 9

@ / # $ 0 3 / %

0 " $ # % 1 0 4 -

, 0 + 0 0 4 + D / ! : / 0

% , $ + N % 4 4 ?

" " ! + $ *

& - $ #W " " $?4 [:

" # - # - @ A

" $ $ + / (? / 3 / %

% # % , / # / 1 Q * %

1 / # % V % , / # 0 #a % $

, / " % $ " $ 4 # $ / , # $, + #

+ % $ / " " $ 0 $ # 0 $ % A

* ((

/

@ D

[illegible]

G

1\' ' ' + 0 ' ' '' ' %' # ' ''3 , '% '% '% / ' '
' ' ' " " '3 ' M\' '# A' $ $ ' % / #' , ' 0 ' + #' ' 0 '
+ :' + %' ' ' '' ' #' ` ' #0 + ' '' ' 4 # '% '
' # ## ' , ' ' ' $ ' % / # ' ' / , ' ' '' ' ' #
$ @ ' ' # ' ' ' 3 ' % '' / " " ' ' 3 ' '' $ ' ' @ V
1 / # ' ' ' @ # # ' % ' # ' ' ' ' % ' # , ' '
' # ' ' ' ' L\' ' / " " 'A ' ! " ' '' " / ' + / ' $ $ '
' + ' ' " ' ' % ' ' % / # 0 ' ' 4 ' '% ' 3 / ' '
' / " " $ ' D\' ' ' + ' % ' ' ' / ' #
+ ' & , ' '' ' ' ' '' '' #% ' ' ## ' '' #3 ' '
' , ' # / + $ + ' % ' ' 0 A # + / $
' $ " ' 8 5 ' 9\' ' " # + / ' 0 + , ' + '
' 3 / , @@ % ' ' %' , '% E % ' ' / ' '' ' 3 ' ' % ''
'á ' ' / ' ## ' ' ' % ' " " ' # $ ' 0 ' # $ # / ' '
% ' ' ' ' ' " / , # ' ' ' / $ / ' # ' / " ' ' # '' / ' # @ + V
' # , ' # ' 3 '% '% ' 0 ' # . ' ' @ '' ' ' $ / ' (+ ' #
' % # ' ' # ' ' ' % ' ' ' ' / ' & # / ' $ / ' ' ' ' 0 ' , '
' # ' ' % 3 ' '' / ' @ 0 ' # + , ' % ' ' @ / ' 0 '
' + ' ' ' '' ' $ + % , + # ' '% ' ' ' ' / + + ' # '
(' ' , ' ## + ' ' ' ' % 4 ' + ' '' ' ' ' , '% ' 0'' , ' 4 ' ' ' ' ' / 0 # , ' + + # 9 ' ' 0 @ $
' ' ' + ' '' ' ' ' '' $ ' % + ' % ' % ' '
8 / ' ' " # , ' ' 0 ' " , ` " " ' # , ' ' + N # , '
' (' ' '' ' - + " ' / V # ' ' '%. ' 0 ' # ' " " `
" ' ' + ' / $, ' '' 3 '% ' / ' '' 0 % + $ ' 3 ' '' '
' ' 3 ' ' $ ' ' $ ' + # $ $ ' %, $ ' % ' 0 ' # ' 0 #
' ' ' " ' ' + '' % ' A 1, $ ' 8 / '% ' / '% ' # $ # I
+ 5 ' , ' 5 # ' ' , ' ' ` ' % Y / ' # ' ! ' '
' ' ' @' ' % ' A ' ' 0 ' / ' ' $ ' ' ' % '
/ .# % ' $ ' ' ' 4 ' + ' & ' % ' # + ' / , ' 0 @ # , R
3 ' ' '' % ' V ' $ ' " ' ' / ' (' ' ' + ' # , / ' ' (`
Y / ' '' ' 4 ' ' 4 ' 5 , ' , + + ' ' ' , , ' '' * 9
$ 5& $ " : ' + Y + / 9& $, ' 2 ' % ' G / ' $ " # ' @
/ ' # 1 ' $ $ V ' ' 3 ' # # ' 2 - ' ' ' '
0 ' '' ' ' # " # " Q ' ' ' / # ' 0 ' , # / ' ' " A
3 ' ? ' ' ' (# ' ' ' ' 5 ' ' ' ' , ' ' ' I ' 0 ' / #
, ' ' / ' ' ' '' $ ' ' 0 ' # ' ' ' 3 ' $ ' " ' ' 1 `
+ ' $ " ' # # ' '' ' / " ' # 1 # ' ' / $ 9 # % ' + ' % '' ' ' 4 " ' ' $ ' @
3 ' '' ' " / ' 9 / $ ' ' ' % ' + + # ' ' # @ `
/ + ' ' , ' % ' ' + / ' ' $ ' $ ' + ' A% ' ' # 5 ' # X ' % ' & ' + '
% ' ' # V ' ' ' ' % ' " ' ' 5 ' ' + ' 4 / ' '' ' $ " '
0 ' ' % ' $ ' ' / " ' ' $ ' , / ' ' 4 2 V # ' ' # ' % '
" / ' / ' + ' ` ' ' ' # ' + / ' 2 ' '6 '
/ ' '' ' 4 # ' XAQ , ' ' $ ' ' ' @ ' '' ' ' G
' ' 3 , 5 ' '' / ' ' / ' ' ' ' 4 2 ' ' ' + ' $ $ ' / " ' ' ' @ ' '' ' # % 0 ' / # # 9 ' % + ' '
% ' & ' $ ' $ ' # ' 1 / # @ ' ' ' ' ' ' , Q
0 ' " ' # ' / ' ' ' # + 0 ' '' ' & $ ' # & + ' ' 5 @ '
' ' ' ' , ' ' ' ' # '' ' / # , ' ' # # ' 2 V , 5 '
% ' ' ' 41# ' '' ' , ' / ' 1 / # , ' # '' ' '
% ' # ' , ' " # V # $ + ' 4 ' ' 4 ' " ' '
' ' @ '' ' / ' % / # + 0 ' 4 0 ' $ V ' ' / ' ' ' + '
/ ' ' " " / ' ' ' '' $ ' % + $ ' / " ' & + ' # ' 0A
/ , 9 # ' % ' / # ' $ ' / ` ' ' 0 ' 0 ' ' ' , ' 0 # # V '
' ' # ' 1 ' ' # ' '' / ' % ' ' # 0 # , ' $ # , ' +
$ $ ' ' ' ' 4 ' $ ' ' # ' 2 ' + / $ V # , / ' ' '
+ ' + % ' W & ' , ' ' ' ' ' " " ' X ' & + ' ' / # , ' # 5
: % ' ' / # # ' ' $ " ' 0 ' ' / ' # ' ' ' ' / ' (+ ' '
' 3 / , ' ' , ' " / + ' ' # ' / ' ' / # , ' # 2 # ' ' 0 '
' ' @ '' ' ' ' $ ' ' / ' / ' ' % ' , ' ' / " ' $ ' # ' # `
/ ' $ $ ' # '' $ ' & + ' , A ' ' W# ' ' + ' (' ' 5
' # ' * 0 ' ' '' ' Y / ' ' ' ' ' @ ' '' ' @ # ' % # '' + '
/ # ' '' ' " / V ' , / A X ' " # + ' # 8 2 ' 0 ' # ' A
' '

@ D

' $ ' 1 / # # 9 # ' ' , `
, ' ' $ + # $ ' $ ' + # / # " , # '
+ - + " 4 0 # % " # 90 # ,
3 , " 1 / # 0 , " 0 / + ` # # % #
/ V # " / 9 ' ' #
1 / # ' , ' ' #] 5 ' $ @ '
A ' ' 1# ' ' 4 " " ' ' 0 , ' , / + $ / + 3 `
Q , # # ' (+ / + # ' & $ $ 3
/ % , 9 / # + ' / ' ' # 0 # 0 / # % $ /
$ $ $ $ @ $ $ $ /
J , $ ' # $ ' ' % / +
! ' 0 $ 5 , / 1 " " %
, $ " # # 4 # / . # % IS
1 , $ " $ + , ' 0A @ " / + + I
' / 4 + & K L 4 A ## # " F / V
4 , K " % 4 QPQK # # A
$ / ! " ' + / # 5 , , * ' * '
% , ' / # ` @ % , + , $ @ # # ,
+ & ! # & ' $ (
G # $ ' M ? & ! # , ' / " " . # 9 # J = = = I
% ' $ 3 " / , ' # '
& 1 0 ' ? # # % " # * ! '
# # % & A ! # ' + / #
$ $, # / # ' $, 4 # # W
' 1 0 / # # " # ! , > (J : S _
& ! C " , # % & *
% % %
@ % # # ; 8 N ; J _ < D # / / # & 5 " , F
/ + , ' ' / 3 % 0
6 $ " # , , ' 0 # / " # Y / '
, # , $ % ' ! $ " / # / 1 % V
, ± # ' + 3 % & $ '
, / # + @ $ ' / A ! " , ' / # A / @ %
' / : % # # ' , / # % $ " # + ' # , , $ G
$ + ' 0 / # # @ ` , Q # @ # `
% , + # 0 # # ' 0 A + % # % & '
/ $, $ ' ! $ " I 2 F I 4
& + # $ % % 2 " . > (,
/ " , # . . A 2 4 2 9
! @ A 4 " 4 % 4
% ' ## # / # , # % % % A
0 # , / " ± @ 0 / ' 3
$ 2 4 , / % # ' / ' $ / , 9
0 1 0 # , / 0 ' (+ #
$ @ ! + + ' 9 # ! # '
% ' # " , #
' ' / $ O - % : '
, , ' $, , % # # 5 $ # @ %
, % # 4 ' + E # % % " / , ' # " $ " ' # JDLT , O # / # &
' $ ' 8 ! , 4
$ / $ " , , # 4
' 0 # @ # @ # O & # %
! # ! ' $ # , / + # $ / #
, / + 3 ' " " ! # % 4 0 ' # / , # 0
4 / + / , JDLE
% / Q ## # # ` 1 + #
" , & , " / , # 1 .
/ # , 3 % 0 , # # 5 / # #
' " # " # ' ' %
#
; % 5 % 4 " ' ' % ; ; % 0 % , 5 %
W 2 _ < > 3 , 0 (' '
2 4 ' # / + / . # ' % # 3 I 4 4 '
. % / # @ # # " / $ '
% % % ' $ " # " < '

[illegible]

N B R

. / 4 4 # # / 3 '
. 9 1 "
4 % K 4 A # ? " " $ %
% K U % # * / + # " #
0 99 , / # 4 #
4 A + 0 1, $ 0 +/ $ @ $
" $ 1+ # , A , ' / " # / "
$ & $ % "" ' " " $ 4'
$ # @ & 0 / 0 " / , # $ / , + ! " % 4 ' " ' /
. @4 " ' % " ` " / A3 ' + .
. K4 3 ' 3 ` V / " 4
/ V $. % # 8 , 4 . KH
/ ! " ' / ' ' 0 % / ! # * E
@ " / /# % 4 " 8
/ ' + $ # $ /# # - $ $ `
2A + # # $ # , / " "
8 % # # - $ $ 0 + + 0 / / 0 # +
4 " % - + " + A
- + " 4 # " / '$
% # / $ / % 3 # 4 4 `
3 , $ % A 0 0 + 4 #
@ " , # / - T 4 '
& 0 / ' / @ # 0 I # 0 # ' ' 3 A
$ / ' $.# 6 , 1, ' $ ' $ / % ' $
% / 8 / % , $ / 3 , # '
, $ " / # % % ' $ / " " / #
+ + 3 ' / $ " & A & ! %
1 , . # # # # % & ' $ V % E
$ # + # / $, # 1 4 ' 4 0 %
% + 0 % (+ % 4 [,
3 4 1" @ ' V 1, $ * / $ 8 4! 9 # " #
' # % 4 # % = " $
$ # / # $ ' / (0 # # $ ' ' ' # A
% % ' ' ' % % , 3 , 1" @ # #
$ ' ' " @ / % %& ' $ # %
0 % ' / " - + " ! 9 . 4 ! " $
% % 8 , 9 $ ' ' / # /
4 # " 0 # $ $ # " `
+ / V " / / "
: % " G + 3 ' . 3 ' # / # V
% @ $ $ # ! " 8 ' A
$ + # + ' % ` 0 9# $ $ + E
% ' # % / $ " # 4 K , 3 0
" " ' # + & % / #
, $ " ' # @ @ % 0 ' " @ # +
$ # ? # % # . K 4 # @ %
' # , . " / / A & @ % , %
. / # ' # , 0 # , 3 / , /
@ % ' / + $ # % % * / $
$ # ' & + # " / , # %
% # , + / # 4 JSEL % * / $ 8
+ 4 ' ' / $ " 0 + % 1 @ % `
1 0 % # ' 0 .# 8 3 * / ' % % / # # A
4 ' + , # % ' 0 $ " " , / 0 (+ / " ! $
+ @ " / # 0 ' / # ' 8 / V
$ # 4 / + / $ % 0 # / # $, 0
$ % % # ! ` / #
" # " # ' ' @ 7 % #+
$, ' + + (+ / + % / %
' # * / $. ' 8 * 9 " ' ' , " ' $ @ ' / ! `

W I " (" + '

'0 'K

' #' ' Y/ '% ' / ' ' & ' % ' 0 ' + 0 ' ' (0 ' '' ' ''
3/, @' % 0 ' '0 '$/ ' , + #' 3 , '% ' $ ' ' '# % ' '
' $'' ' +', # '/" ' ' ! ` " / ' #' . 4'G #' ' '
/ ' '' '4 '+ ' % ' ' %' , '# ' $/ ' ' " '' , ' ' '0 ' # ' '' % /#' 0 ' #' ' / + ' ' $" ' ' #' #' + ' / ' % `
' ' ' ' ' ' , ' ' 0 , ' / ' $ +' ' # , ' /$A'
/ ' ' '' ' '/"" +'/'% '$ '' ' ' !" ' ' /+ '/ ' '
'' ' $ ' ' ' ' # ' #' % ' ' ' '' ' +' & + ' ' , ' '
'& ' '' ' ' 0 ' /,9 5 '#' A' 1 '' #' $ '' ' ' ' % +'
,/ #' , ' $' ' / ' # V' ' ' '& @' '% ' @' ' " A'
'0 '3 '% ' ' / ' ' 1 #' % ' ' '3 '' + ' @ ' ' $'
$ ' @ ' ' ' , '/ '/' ' / V' ' ' @' ' '' ' / '% ' `
, ' ' ' / #'/ ' ' , '/" ' / ' ' ' ' ' ' ' #' ' #' `
-/ #' #' ' ' ' ' ' ! ` Y/ ' '' ' #' & ' $ V' ' ,'
$ ' '' & + ' 1 ' ' % #' ' % '& # ' ' $' ' #' ! 4'
3/, @' +' ,' ' '# #' ' ' '4 ` # # #' ' $' ! ' #' 3.
' '' ' , ' ' ' @' ' % ' " 0 #' 1, $ ' 8 ' " ' '' ' % /.#' , ' ' + , ' #' ' ' & / ' 6' '$ ' /$ ' `
#' !" ' +' / ' ' ''1 ` #' #' # +/ ' #
' ' ' ' + #' '% '% ' /` & ' / C' ''4 # '+ '
+ #' '' ' , / ' '% '% ' 0 ' # ' '$ ' '1 %' '+ ' ' ' '
0 / .#' ' 0 #' '8 / '% ' #' '' 0 ' ' ' + '
' ' " #' % ' % ' 0 ' @ ' '' / ' 8 # ' ' ' " '
+ ' , ' ' / ' ' 'FN $ ' /, 9 # % / '+ 0 +' $ 0 ' '& /, ' '
2 ' * 9 ' " " ' #' ' ' ' "/, ' ' ' !' '' @ ' ' 0 ' " / '8 # '
K ' ' 4 # ' '' ' , ' ' ' ' #' & ' 0 #' '1 0 '% ' /+ '
1 5 6' $ $ ' /" ' " / V' / A 0 ' , + #' ' ' ' ' Y/ '
' ' '% ' ' ' / ' 0 ' " ` ' ' ' ' / ' ' ' + '
" ' ' '(' ' ' #' A' ' $'% $'% ' , %' % '% ' 5 V'
'$' '' ' , '9' % ' !" '# '' / ' #' ' ' ' ' ' $ ' $ ' ' '
& $ ' $" ' '& ! ' '' '* / + ' ' ' '' ' #' , / ' ' '
% ' ' ' ' %' ! # ' ' /` ' % ' , ' ' : ' ' ' #' , ' '
' '' J '3 0 ' '& % ' '* / + '5 ' ' ' ' '
/ ' #' 0 ' ' '5 @ ' '' % '% ' $' ' " / ' '' '(9'
' " / V % '' ' ' / ' ` ' , / ' 0 ' ' '# % ' '% '% '
+ ' '' '$ ' '$ $, ' 0 ' #' ' #' +' $' ' " " ' /A'
0 / ' ' !" ' ' $ ' '' 9' ' ' + +' ' '1, $ +'
3 ' " / ' ' $ ' #' '' ' @ '% '+ / ' '1"/A'
8 / 9' ' '% '% '@ %' '' ' / ' ' ' , / #' ' $
/' $ ' 8 ' 0 ' #' $ ' '' '% '1" @' '' ' , ' '+ `
4' 49' '' ' ' #' A' '% ' ' '' '& ! ' #' '
'/ ' '' (+ ' #' " '= ,' ' * ' '' V' #' % '% ' '# '
'4 # '$ ' , ' @ #' / " ,' ' 0 ' @' '' " / ' " / ' ' ' ' , #+$ ' '' / ' %/' ' % ' + 0 ' ' / $ $ ' '' '% ' '
, / ' 0 ' ' ' / "" $ ' ' 5 #' $ ' / ' '' ' / ' '' $' = ''
' 0 ' ' # '' 3 + $ ' '1 A' ' , +' 0 #' ' ' ' ''
#/# ' ' ' " / ' #' '/"" ' ' " / ' '' '4 '' / '' #' `
' '' ' @ '% ' ' '' ' +' '3 , ' & $ ' #' '
+ ' ' ' #' - + " ' '' / $' ' '' ' @' ' 0 '
' #' + V' '' '3 ' $` 9Y" .#' ' + '% 0 ' ' ' '
$ % ' (% ' ' #' ` '& ! ' '3 + ' " / A'
$ ' '' ' . 4' '' '3 ' + ' * / + ' & + / $ ' #' & $ / # V'
" / ' ' $ ' # 4 ' ' ' #' % ' 0 ' ' #' /+ ' '' $' '+ 0 '
' ' ' @ ' $ ' , ' '# #' ' ' ' ' $ " ' 7 % #+ ' '' '
' (, ' ' ' ' ' ' $ ' $A' '% ' 0 ' ' (' '+ ' , '
' ' #' '0 ' / ' ' / ' " ' ' ' ' ' ' " +A #' ' ' Y/ '
' '% '% / #' #' ' " / ' ' 0 ' , ' ! #' ' ' ' ' `
> % ' #0 + ' W ' '' (+'% ' ' '' / ' / ' ' '$ + '
' #' ' ' " $ ' ''% ' ' 0 ' , ' , ' ' $ " ' ' ' ' '& + '
#' '# '' ' / V' #' '% ' ' + ' % ' ' $ " # / ' '
0 ' '$ ' @ ' % ' ' ' ' '' '4 # ' + + ' / ' ' , #+ '
/ $ $ ' ''% ' '+ '' #' / " ' ' ' +' ' "" #' ' / ' '
0 ' / , 9 # , ' '' ' Y/ '% ' 0 ' ' ' #'
1 ' '3 '% ' , + ' ' ' '' ' ' +' ' ' !" ' '
/ $ #

' O ' R

$ # ' @ ' # / ' ' ' " ' 3 ' # 4 ' " ' " 3 '
$ ' " / ' / " ' ' ' ' # ' O ' ' +
1 ' + ' ' 8 ' O ' (% ' # ' 3 ' ' % ' $ ' % ' % ' '
$, ' " ' . % ' % ' O ' ' ' / # / # ' O ' ' " ' 4 # A
' 1 % ' % ' ' ' , ' ' / # ' " ` ' ' ' O ' $ / ' , + # ' '
/ ' ' ' ' ' , / ' @ % ' ' % ' (, / ' " ' " ' % ' ' % '
, ' . ' # . ' / ' ' % ' * / $ ' ' VW ' / " ' ' - `
" $ ' ' # ' ' % ' O ' + O ' + " ' " 2 ' ' ' 3 '
1 , $ ' / ' " ' / ' $ ' " ' " A % ' # , ' ' ' $ / ' # ' # , '
' . 4 ' % ' + O ' ' @ # " ' ' " O ' +
' O ' / # # ' ' @ ' $ @ , ' % ' ' " " # ' $ '
/ , ' ' " $ ' 4 ' ' # " ` # " ' ' O / ' ' % ' '
/ ' & # ' 5 ' % ' O ' ' # (' ' O ' , ' ' / , 9 # V ! $ " ' " ' '
" ' O ' : / # + ' " 3 ' " ' ' , ' ' ' . ' % ' 2 ' '
7 + ' ' 3 ' # . ' " ' 3 ' / ' ' ' 4 ' + ' " ' 4 # ' '
" ' ! ' ' " ' - O ' ' ' ' ' ' / # ' # + ' " '
" . ' / # ' ' " 4 ' " ' , ' % ' O ' + ' ' # / A
7 + ' " ' # % ' ' $ ' ' & $ ' O ' ' " ' ' # ' ' '
! O ' ' - ' # ' . 9 3 ' # ' ' ' ' ' ' '
' + ' 3 ' ' + 8 ' % ' N - ` @ + ' " . ' , ' ' " 4 ' #
+ ' & , ' " K 4 4 # ' ' ' # " ' ' ' ' /
& , ' " ' ' # ' / ' " ' * ' ' + ' % '
4 ' # # / [' " $ ' ' ' , ' ! " # # ' 3 ' O ' '
' " / ' % ' ' + ' # $ $ ' ' # ' # '
' / $ ' 4 # ' % ' ' ' 3 / `
' O ' ' ' ' % # ' ` ' % ' , / # ' " " ' $ ' & '
+ ' " - . ' % ' ' ' , ' (' ' ' # $ ' " " `
' $ # ' $ ' ' / ' ' % ' O ' / ' ' ' " " ' , 9 # ' " / ' '
' , ' ' % # , ' ' - ' & ' ' ' % ' $ ' " 3 ' ' 3 A
" $ # ' ' ' ' % ' O ' 1 , ' ' ' " . # , ' / , O # V "
' + ' 9 # ' ' " 9 ' / ' ' ' 1 , $ ' O ' , ' $ # ' ' % ' , / '
' ' " ' * / + ' 5 ' ' ' ' % ' + ' ' , ' ' # +
' ' ' * % ' $ + ' # ' ' ' $ ' ' " / ' O + ' 9 '
' ' ' " ' O ' ' ' + ' / ' , / ' ' $ ' ' O '
' ' ' # " ' % ' O ' # ` # $ ' ' # ' + ' " ' $ + '
' ' # ' % ' % ' # + ' ' " " " ' $ ' O `
O ' , ' O . # ' ' " " ' 8 ' ' 8 ' ' + ' ' ' ' O ' ' ' ' ' # ' #
$ ' ' ' @ ' ' 4 # ' % ' % ' O ' " # ' '
' ' ' ' ' $ $ ' # ' , / ' # ' "
@ % ' ' ' ' $ ' ' ' ' ' 8 ' ' , ' $ " + ' " '
. 4 ' O ' ' + ' ' ' ` @ ' % ' O ' # # # ' , ' % E
+ ' W + ' $ ' , ' ' ' ' # ' ' % ' ' ' ' 1 # / ' ' ' '
" ' 4 ' ' / # ' ' ' / # ' " " / ' % ' ' / ' , ' 2 4 ' * 4 ' 4 " . , ' # ' ' # ' % ' ' 3 ' ' ' ' ' , / # '
' (' ' " 7 + ' 3 ' ' # 3 ' % ' ' O ' " / ' + / ' "
' 1 " ' ' ' ' % ' O ' 1 , $ ' ` ' $ 5 ' , # / ' # , ' '
' ' + ' % ' O ' ' ' @ ' ' , ' # ' ' / , 9 # ' % `
" ' ! # ' ' @ ' ' / O ' ' ` " ' # ' " ' , U ' ' $ A
+ ' & , ' ' $ ' ' + + ' " " # ' & ' % ' O ' $ ' ' 1 '
' # ' ' 4 ' / ' ' " . 9 ' ' / # ' O ' ' ' ' ' " `
' , ' ' " 4 ' G # % O ' ' " / ' " O + ' ' ' @ ' '
4 ' O ' , ' $ # ' ' 4 ' ' ' ' ' V # ' % ' O ' % '
$ ' , ' ' / " " # , ' ' & , (/ ' ' Y / ' ' , / ' ' #
' + ' % " % ' % ' " / ` $ ' % ' ' 4 + ' " $ " + ' $ '
' ' / ' ' ' @ ' % ' ' ' % ' ' ' # " $ @ + ' ' 9 / # `
' - + " ' " ' " / ' ' / ' ' " $ F & ' ' % ' " `
7 % # + ' " ' , + ' ' % ' ' " A " ' ' ' $ ' ' (, ' # , / ' @ '
' # " , ' ' ' ' # ' $ ' , ' + # ' @ % ' % ' / ' O '
' ' $ @ + ' ' 3 + ' ' ' ' / # ' % ' ' O ' * / $ ' " ' " / '
" ' " / ' / ' ' % ' O ' O ' # % ' & ' ' ' $ ' ' ' " / `
' % ' (+ ' ' ' ' # 1 + ' ' ' ' ' / ' ' ' $ " '
' " ' , ' ' ' % ' O ' ' ' # % ' ' 8 ' % ' " ' 7 % # + '
, ' $ / ' ' ' % ' @ % ' # $ ' 3 " ' ' ' ' + ' # ' " 3 ' #
' ' ' & ' - + " ! " ' ' $ ' ' O ' ' 3 / A
" ' ' 9

=ˢ D

, / ˢ ˢ ˢ / ˢ% +ˢ ' %ˢ , ˢ / ˢ4 # ˢ , ˢ ˢ %ˢ ˢ3 / , ' ˢ
, #ˢ - / # Wˢ #ˢ @ ˢ 4 ' ˢ ' $ˢ % ' # +ˢ ˢ , + #ˢ ˢ / ˢ ' ˢ Aˢ
1*N' ˢ% ˢ ˢ ˢ ' $ #ˢ $' # +ˢ ˢ ˢ4 # ˢ ˢ ˢ$ ˢ
ˢ / ˢ # 0 / ˢ ' ˢ ˢ9 $ # ˢ & + ˢ ˢ ˢ %ˢ , / ˢ $ ' ˢ 0 ˢ
ˢ1 0 ˢ , ˢ + 0 +ˢ ˢ ` +ˢ , ' # ˢ $ ' ˢ / / ˢ ˢ ˢ ' Aˢ
+ / ˢ 'ˢ @ ˢ % 'ˢ % ˢ 0 ˢ ˢ % ˢ ˢ , ˢ $ ˢ% ˢ ˢ ˢ / , 9 '
% ˢ ˢ+ ˢ / $, ˢ ˢ ˢ$ + ˢ ˢ ˢ ˢ3 ˢ% ˢ ˢ ˢ ˢ
ˢ , ˢ ˢ , ˢ $ˢ ' ˢ ˢ #ˢ ˢ ˢ ˢ ˢ 'ˢ$ ˢ1 0 ˢ ˢ3 `
Q9 X% ˢ% ˢ ˢ ˢ / , 9 ˢ$ ˢ 0 ˢ / $ ˢ & ˢ 0 ˢ ˢ , ˢ
ˢ ' # ˢ ˢ ' ˢ ˢ ˢ ˢ , ˢ % ˢ@ % ˢ / + / ˢ ˢ ' ˢ ˢ
#ˢ / " ˢ ˢ ˢ # ˢ ˢ % 0 ˢ " Aˢ ! " ˢ #ˢ " ˢ ˢ & # @ ˢ
$ ' ˢ ˢ $ ˢ ˢ ˢ @ ˢ #ˢ / ˢ 'ˢ ˢ ˢ #ˢ ˢ @ ˢ % ˢ
ˢ 0 ˢ % ˢ ˢ ˢ " / ˢ ˢ ˢ ˢ " / , ' #ˢ . ˢ $ " ˢ `
ˢ ˢ ˢ ˢ ! ' 0 ˢ ˢ , ˢ $ " ` ˢ ˢ ˢ3 ' ˢ% ˢ ' / #ˢ ˢ ' ' ˢ
#ˢ ˢ ˢ% ˢ ˢ4 # ˢ9ˢ 4 / + ˢ 'ˢ $ ˢ & ˢ ˢ ' ' ˢ
, ' # ˢ 8 ˢ ˢ ˢ 'ˢ ˢ ˢ ˢ 0 +ˢ ' ˢ ˢ ˢ / " ˢ$ ˢ4 ' ' ˢ
! / #ˢ ˢ4 + ˢ % ˢ + ˢ3 ' Aˢ +ˢ ˢ ˢ 'ˢ ˢ 4 ˢ
$ $ # ˢ 0 #ˢ ˢ #0 + / ˢ
(' ˢ & ˢ3 : ' ˢ #ˢ 3 ' ˢ$ ˢ 1# ˢ 'ˢ ˢ*5 / ˢ ' ˢ4 4ˢ
, ˢ9 @ .#ˢ + ˢ ˢ ˢ4 ' ˢ ' Aˢ #ˢ E ˢ ' &2 % #+ ˢ ˢ ˢ ˢ 'ˢ
0 ˢ3 ' , ˢ 'ˢ ' # ˢ 0 ˢ , ` Fˢ ˢ# $ #ˢ ' 0 # ˢ ˢ ' / # ˢ
+ #ˢ / ˢ ˢ " ' ˢ ˢ Y / ˢ 'ˢ ˢ3 ˢ ˢ ˢ ' ' ˢ / Vˢ ˢ Hˢ
ˢ 4 ˢ #ˢ $ ˢ 'ˢ ˢ #ˢ ˢ #ˢ 0 ˢ ˢ ' ˢ @ ˢ 'ˢ
. % ˢ ˢ8 + / ˢ ' ˢ ˢ ˢ ˢ ! " ` ˢ #ˢ & ' $ ˢ #ˢ ! $ #ˢ " `
ˢ 'ˢ $ˢ , ˢ% ˢ ˢ% ˢ ˢ3 ˢ / ˢ ˢ3 ' + ˢ % ˢ ˢ ˢ
% ˢ , ˢ ˢ ˢ $ @ ˢ& + ˢ $ ˢ ' Aˢ ˢ ˢ 'ˢ 5ˢ + ˢ #ˢ $ Aˢ
' , ˢ #ˢ ˢ #ˢ , ˢ ˢ ˢ ` 5 ˢ ! " # ˢ / # ˢ * 4 ˢ . . ˢ
, / ˢ ˢ ˢ , ˢ / # ' # +ˢ 'ˢ ˢ . 4 ˢ) 4ˢ #ˢ * 4ˢˢ ˢ
ˢ ˢ " / ˢ #ˢ ' ' ˢ ˢ ˢ ' ˢ 'ˢ # +ˢ ˢ % ˢ ' $ #ˢ
. ˢ / ' $ ˢ #ˢ $ ˢ ˢ ˢ " ˢ% ˢ #ˢ
ˢ ' ˢ $ " #ˢ ˢ , ' ˢ ` % ˢ , ˢ #ˢ , ˢ $ ˢ ˢ ˢ
ˢ ˢ # +ˢ #ˢ + 0 +ˢ ˢ ?4ˢ #ˢ " 4ˢ ˢ $ #ˢ% ˢ
" " ˢ Y / ˢ 'ˢ ˢ #ˢ % ˢ #ˢ , ˢ ' ˢ +ˢ , ' ˢ " D' ˢ #ˢ , ˢ ˢ
#ˢ ˢ $ # ˢ . 4ˢ= / ˢ ˢ& 0̸4ˢ ' $ˢ3 " ˢ ˢ 4 ˢ 4 ˢ
@ ˢ ˢ & % ˢ 'ˢ , ˢ ˢ& , ` 4 ˢ ! X 4ˢ #ˢ 2 5 4Vˢ #ˢ
ˢ #ˢ ˢ 'ˢ ˢ % 0̸4ˢ #ˢ ˢ , ˢ ˢ0 ˢ ' + / ˢ #ˢ ˢ , ˢ
T ? 0̸4ˢ & $ " ˢ ˢ $ ˢ , / ˢ , ˢ $ / ˢ 0 ˢ ˢ ˢ@ #ˢ 'ˢ (`
ˢ ˢ - ˢ ˢ / ' ˢ 'ˢ # ˢ / ˢ ˢ ˢ $ # ˢ ' ˢ 4 ' 0 ˢ ˢ
, / ˢ , ˢ ' ˢ ˢ b / Vˢ / ` / +ˢ 0 ˢ ˢ #ˢ + ˢ ˢ #ˢ
$ ˢ , ˢ #ˢ 'ˢ $ Vˢ ' " #ˢ $ ˢ #ˢ " 5 " ˢ $ + ˢ 0 ˢ Aˢ
3 ˢ #ˢ * % ˢ 'ˢ ˢ $ ' ˢ , #ˢ ' " #ˢ ˢ ˢ3 ' ˢ , ' # ˢ $ ' ˢ
3 ˢ ˢ ˢ ˢ (#Vˢ #ˢ $ ˢ Aˢ ˢ ' 0 #ˢ ' ˢ ˢ$ @ ˢ ˢ , Aˢ ˢ& + ˢ , ' # ˢ % ˢ% ˢ 5ˢ Aˢ ' 0 ˢ / " ˢ# ˢ" " ˢ ˢ #ˢ
" ' #ˢ # +ˢ ˢ ˢ4 ' 5 ˢ $ ' ˢ ' $ / ˢ + ˢ # #ˢ ˢ ˢ @ ˢ
ˢ% ˢ 0 ˢ 'ˢ $ˢ ˢ " / ' ˢ ˢ 'ˢ ˢ #ˢ & ' $ ˢ & ˢ @' ˢ
. / L . ˢ ˢ % ˢ % ˢ / " ˢ ˢ3 ˢ 'ˢ " +ˢ
ˢ ˢ ˢ& + ˢ % 'ˢ $ ˢ ˢ ˢ / " " $ ˢ ˢ ˢ ' ' ˢ # ˢ 'ˢ
ˢ ˢ ˢ ˢ ˢ ˢ " / ˢ ˢ $ ˢ4 % ˢ # ' #ˢ ˢ% / #ˢ " ' ˢ
ˢ ˢ0 ˢ ˢ ˢ% ˢ 0 ˢ @ Cˢ / ˢ ˢ $ $ / ˢ ˢ $ @ ˢ ˢ $ ˢ / ˢ 'ˢ $ˢ ' Q ˢ ˢ #ˢ ' ˢ ˢ # ˢ ˢ ' ˢ $ˢ ˢ ˢ , +ˢ " Aˢ
" / ˢ . 4 ˢ N $ˢ & 0 ˢ / # #ˢ ˢ ˢ3 / , ' ˢ% / .#ˢ , ˢ+ #ˢ
#ˢ $ $ ˢ ' / " " +ˢ ˢ% ˢ ˢ ' ˢ ˢ ˢ , ˢ %ˢ #ˢ + + +ˢ
% ˢ ˢ/ ˢ " " #ˢ ˢ , ˢ$ ' ˢ" , , ˢ #ˢ , ˢ ˢ 'ˢ ˢ3 ' ' ˢ #ˢ
#ˢ $ ' ˢ + , ˢ ˢ& / ˢ +ˢ ˢ % ˢ 'ˢ ' ˢ+ #ˢ ˢ # ' # +ˢ ˢ
ˢ&' $ Kˢ / ˢ ˢ #ˢ / ' ˢ ˢ 0 ˢ 'ˢ ˢ # #ˢ ˢ
$ ˢ 'ˢ ˢ ˢ ˢ# ˢ ˢ ` ˢ" ' ' +ˢ1 ' ˢ #ˢ ˢ ˢ ˢ
' ˢ ' ' $ˢ 0 ˢ +ˢ % ˢ% ˢ 0 ˢ 3 ˢ ˢ ˢ ' ' ˢ 'ˢ ˢ3 / , ' ˢ
#ˢ / ˢ " ' #ˢ ˢ8 + / ˢ ˢ , ˢ , Aˢ $ 5 ˢ , ˢ ˢ 0 ˢ " / #ˢ ˢ+ ˢ
1 , / ˢ Vˢ / ˢ % ˢ " ˢ ˢ1 ' ˢ / $, ˢ 'ˢ3 ˢ ˢ , ˢ + 0 #ˢ ˢ ˢ ˢ% ˢ 0 ˢ $ ˢ ˢ ˢ ˢ& / ˢ ˢ ˢ 0 ˢ ˢ ˢ #ˢ ˢ ˢ+ ˢ ! Aˢ
" ' ' , ˢ ˢ ˢ , ˢ $ ˢ #ˢ , ' / ˢ " ˢ " ' +ˢ ˢ # ˢ ˢ ˢ
#ˢ ˢ% ˢ 0 ˢ ˢ ' $ ˢ# + ˢ .#ˢ $ " $ ˢ #ˢ + ˢ / " ˢ% ˢ ˢ
#ˢ ! " $.#ˢ ˢ . ˢ Y / ˢ ˢ $ " ' #ˢ ˢ ˢ 'ˢ 4 ' ' ˢ
#ˢ %ˢ ˢ ˢ ˢ , ˢ / ˢ + 0.# & ˢ ˢ# ' + / #ˢ , ˢ # ˢ " #ˢ
* (ˢ1 4 ˢ

' ' + +' '' ' ' ' 1 ' & $ ' ' ' ' ' ' ' 5#. '
' ' / ' 1, $ $ ' '/ ' $ ' $ ' $ " #' ' # '
" ' ' '1, $ ' 3 ' '' ' ' / '. 4' ' " / ' , + '
' '' $ @ +' 'G #' ' ' ' ' ' $ F & ' / ' . ' % '
0 ' , + + ' ' , +' ' ! # ' ' ? ' #' ' @ ' 0 ' % '
+' ' ' ' '' $ ' 3 ' ' ' , ' , ' ' $ ' ' 3 , ' ''
+ ' '' $ ' + ' +' ' ' + #' & ' F 8 % ' ' ' ' / ' '
! ' '' ' ' ' ' '' ` Y / ' #' ' #' $' ' ' + #V'
$ ' ' # ' '' ' ' 4 '" A' #' '% ' ' ' ' #' # $ '
' '' $ ' $ ' % @ ' ` / ' '& ' V' ' ' '' '
' @ ' % ' . 4' 4' # ' +/ #' % ' # +' ' ' 4 ' '' , ' ' ' ' , ' ' '@ % ' & '# #'
& $ ' #' 3 ' #' ' ' ' ' " ' ' , 0 ' '' ' ' 9'
'' " / ' / ' '@ "' / ' ' ' ' #' % '% ' ' / #' '# +/ ' '
@ ' #' ' / #' / '1# ' '3 W ' ' $' $ '' ' ' ' 4 'W'
' '' ' 0 ' 9K ' '/ " " ' ' ' , / #' % ' $ @ ' % '
' #' ' ' 0 ' + ' ' ' !' ' +' '' '& ! ' '' '
" ' ' # ' ' '0 ' " ' / # ' ''& ' $ @ ' $' A'
' $' / "' #' # % ' ' '3 ' ' , ' '' ' ' # 0 ' '1+ `
% '% ' '$ '' $ 5 ' $ 5 , ' ' ' $ #' ' ! " '' ' #' '/ A'
#' $ ' '" / ' +' ' + V' ' ' $ '% '& $ ' ''
' " ' $' / ' ' $ ' #' , + ' 1 ' ' # ' ' ' ' +' '" `
$' ' ' 7 % #+ ' '' $ ' $ @ ' A' / ' +' ' ' #'
0 ' +' " ' ' $ ' #' 0 0 ' / ' '' ' + 0 + F ' $ ' , ' 'A'
8 5 ' ' ' #' / $ ' '% ' ' ' '# ' ' ' ' $ '4 ' + '
' $ #' # $ #' ' , ' ' ' ` #' + 0 '% '% / + ' ' ' '' '
+ ' ' '+ '' ' ' '1, $ ` ' ' '4 # ' #' / " " $ ' 0 '' A'
$ ' , ' ' % ' ' # 0 ' %' #' ' '% '' '$ '4 ' `
+ ' ' ' " / ' / @ % ' ' / ' #W ' ' '' ' '% '% '
1 " ' #' '3 ' + '% ' % 0 ' '3 / , '' ' " " #' ' , ' +' ' ' + ' ' '' 0 # , '% '' '

AN

Hiſtorical, Critical, Chronological, Geographical and Literal DICTIONARY OF THE BIBLE.

A.

A, A. This is what we meet with in ſeveral Places of the Vulgate Bible, viz. Jer. i. 6. and xiv. 13. in Ezek. iv. 15. xx. 49. and in Joel i. 15. In all which Paſſages, A, a, a, are to be underſtood in the Way of Exclamation, as if it were ſaid, Alas, alas, alas! In Jer. i. 6. Et dici a, a, a, Domine Deus, ecce neſcio loqui qui puer ego ſum. This one might think to be the ſtammering of a Child that cannot ſpeak diſtinctly. But the Hebrew reads only ahah, or heu, once without Repetition; and after the ſame Manner, in ch. xiv. 13. as well as in the Places above cited from Ezekiel and Joel. So that in all theſe Paſſages the Tranſlation ſhould be Alas! without ſaying any thing more.

A. The Apocryphal Goſpel concerning the Infancy of Jeſus Chriſt[a], informs us that the Schoolmaſter who had requeſted our Saviour might be ſent to him, was preparing to ſhew him his Alphabet, but that Jeſus repeated it all entire to him before he had learnt it of him, and began even to explain the Prophets to him. Another Copy of the ſame Goſpel imports, that his Maſter having pointed out to him the Letter a, or Aleph, Jeſus deſired to know of him what the Letter Aleph meant; that is to ſay, he asked him the myſterious Signification of it; and as his Maſter was reproving him with Threats, Jeſus diſcourſed to him concerning the ſeveral Letters of the Alphabet, of their Figures-

[a] Apocryph. N. T. & Fabricio, Edit. p. 166, & 207.

[illegible]

AARON IN HIS HIGH-PREISTS HABIT . according to Braunius .

1. The Linnen Tiara, or Bonnet of ye Preists .
2. The Head-band of the Preists .
3. The Highpreists Hat, with the twisted Cap and Plate of Gold.
4. The Highpreists Under-cap and Head-band, like that of the other Preists .
5. The Plate of Gold with its Flowers according to the learned H. van de Wall.
6. The Plate of Gold, according to Villalpandus
7. The Same according to Braunius .
8. The High-preists Ornaments for his Head with his Hat & Golden Plate according to Villalpandus

A

$ $ N C R $ $

' ' ' # ' 3 $ + ' 0 ' ' $ ' & , ' # ' # A=E 9
' , ' ' % ' ' - # ' " # '' ' ZI % ' $ " ' ' % ' `
/ ' !Y/ ' ' $, # # ' % ' $ " # ' ' ' % ' # '
[! $ S ' " / ' ' ' ' '' ' 1 ' ' ' (# ' * 4 $ `
5 ' - # 6 ' ' # ' % $ # # ' _=E ' ' , + + '
, , ' ' ' $ ' ' # ' @ ' % ' ' " ' ' , ' + ' + ' #
' # +' ' $ ' / # ' ' .# ' # / # ' 3 ' ' % ' ' '
' ' ' $ ' # ' , + ' ' ' ' / A '' + ' ' '
, / + ' / # ' # ' 0 # ' ' $ ' ' ' / $ ' ' % ' # " `
- # ' ' ' + ' 3 '' ' , ' ' ' " #
3 ' % ' ' , , ' ' ' " # & ' ! ' : 4 ' ' 3 " ' $ / $ / +
$ ' / " ' ' ' ' % ' ' ' % ' ' + ' ' * 4 # ! ' ' (# / '
" / ' ' ' " ' 1 ' ' 2 , ' ' 3 + / ' ' , @ / ' $ + $ ' % '
' ' A " V % ' % ' ' 1Y / ' 3 ' ' M # ' ' $ " ' # / $ # " '
' , / ' ' 1 ' % # ' ' / , ' ' ' ' 3 " ' / ' ! ' / + ' % ' / $!0 '
$, # # ' % ' % ' ' % 0 ' " ` ' ' " # $ ' ' , % ' 0A
/ ' ' ' ' % ' ' $ ' + ' # ' # # ' # , ' ' 3 + / ' % '
' ' ' ' & , ' ' 3 . ' % ' ` ' # ' ' % ' - # 00 / + '
+ 0 # ' # ' ' ' / ' ' 3 ' # ' $
" ' # ' + ' 3 ' . ' % ' / # ' * 4 0 + @ ' % 0 ' # ' 1 $ WQ '
% ' % ' " / ' ' ' ' % A ' ' ' % 0 ' & , ' #
!A!! ' ' # ' $ ' ' ' ! ' & , ' % ' + 0 # ' ! @4 1 " ' ' " # $ ' ' '
5 JE ' N & ' 0 + ' ' ' ' + ' 3 ' . ' # & , ' ' # ' 0 + ' / A
% ' ' 1 , ' ' ' ' ' # , % / " ' ' / " ' ' ' $ ' ' ' & , ' ' 8 # % ' ' % 6 ' ' ' A " ' % / ' ' , + # ' # / " ' ! KA
% ' % ' $ " ' # ' ' ' 3 ' ' ' $ ' ' ' + ' 3 ' ' & ' ! '
- : # ' I ' % ' ' # ' % ' % ' 4 ' % ' ' # ' % ' @ ' / '
' ' ' V # ' % ' # , ` ! @% ' % ' % ' $ # ' / ' ' ' `
% ' ' , , ' ' % ' @ % ' $ # & ' " " # ' , ' ' 0
' - ' # 2 ' ' ' ' ' % ' (0 ' 5 ' ' / ' ' ' , 9 , / ' ' % ' % ' ' ' ' $ ' 0 ' ' ' % ' ' ' ' # ' % ' '
' ' ' ' ' ' 1 , $ ' + " ' % ' ' ' ' , . ' 4 ' , ' ' & '
3 + / ! ' ' [K ' ' $ ' ' ! # # # , ' % ' " # ' > 0 '
' ' ' , ' $ ' % ' - # ' @ ' ' ' ' % ' ' ' ' " `
" $ ' # ' # 0 ' ' ' A ' + ' " / ' ' $, ' ' ' 3 ` 3 ' # +
! ' 4 ! ' ' ' ' * ' 0 + ' ' $ # ' ' 4 / + ' '
$ ' 0 " $ / $ / # + ' ' * 4 ' ' ' ! ' ' ' & , ' ' . ' , ' JLA
J ' A &Y ' O ' ' ' . ' ' ' % ' % % $ ' ' # ' / ' ' - ' # ! 9
' ' / ' ' ' ' * ' ' T ' # 3 ' & ' % ' ' ' '
' # ' ' ' (# ' ' ' ! ' % ' @ # , ' 8 ' ' ' $ - # ' ' ' (0 '
' ' # 9 * ' 84 $A 3 / ' $ ' / " ' $ ' ' ' " # $ + ' 6 _A
' ' WW $ # ' ' / @ % ' (" ' 5 % ' ' ' ' 1 ' ' % ' ' + ' 8 ' ' '
9T< ' , A 3 / ' ' 0 + ' " # ! @ ' A ' 8 $ ' ' % ' ' ' '
&/ + d5W ' @ % # + # ' 8 / ' #WK @ ' ' ' + ' 3 ' ' % ' / # ' 3 '
5 DP ' 8 + 0 ' * 4 , ' ' ' ' $ " # ! ' # * 4 Y9 + / ' ' '
' ' $ ' $ ' ' ' ' ' ' ' # ' ' - # ' % ' ' A
' !0 ' # ! ' ' ' / " ' + ' ' * ' # $ # # 5 ' ' ' @ ' ' @ ' 9 / $ ' 04 ' K
5 6 ' W V ' " # # ' ' 3 ' 5 ' ' ' ' ' # # ' $ ' T ' >WA
' # # , + # ' $ ' ' $ / ' ' ! % ' ' 1 / @ ' ' ' ' ' ' 3 A
=A , A , ' , + ' ' ' ' & , ' ' ' / G ' # $ ' # (# ' # ' ' ' ' (# ` fW & ' # ! ' , + ' ' ' & , ' # # ! ' ' ' # / ' * ' ' ' $ ' 00
W=T= ' , A ' ' " ! ' # ' $ # ' ' ' % ' * 9 8 ' % ' @ % ' $ " . # AW5
' ' 0 + ' / ' # - A ' ' ' , ' + # ' ' 8 ' '
JDTP 0 $ $ ' ' ' ' 3 " ' - # # 0 # ' ' ' , ' # + ' ' ' ' " . # ' $ A
' 1 # + ' + ' ' ' ' , ' ' ' ' ' ' ' , ' 3 ' ' $ ' ' ' $ @ , ' ' # ' ' ' " ` 0 % ' ' ' ' 3 " ' # " / ' $ '
+ ' 1% % # 5 ' / " ' # ' ' ' T ' , ' # ' ' ' $ # / ' , ' '
' 8 # ' 1 $ $ # # ' ' 8 ' ' ' / + ' + ' 3 ' , # 9 ' , + ' # ' '
#

W ' W $ ' " / ' 4 ' " ' ' ' ' $ ' ' ' ' ' ' % * 4 ' ' I ' '
Q , Q , ' I ' #
. - ' ' * ' @ ' $A + 6 TL ' " ' %

$ $ @ E D $ $

1 # # + / # # # % f % 8 $ / $ #
# % , / # , * 4 # ! $ / , # + 0 $
W=g_ , A 0 / f + # # 0 # # / $
DDT5, $ / # 4 $ 8 A / 1
& / ? 4 + 0 / # # , / # V
* + 'g $ / $! & $ F f # # (#
& (# ! # ! f % + 0 / $ # #
* 4 & , / 0 A f % , (# 3
+ 0 $ # % $ f # 1 #
+ 0 $ 3 # $ + f 3 $ + 3 V (#
3 V , / # $ % $ f $ 3 # 1
$ # # $ % 4
, - " / / " $ " A * 0 0 0 ! ! $ "
- # + # $ % 3 # ! % . 4
- $ % % # % (% = # %
+ , # " # # / " % 3 # , 0
$ " # $ % 3 $ + # / # # + 0
% $ + # / # , / + / + 3 % / A
% $ + , / # # # ! # $ +
$ # + 9 , + 3 0 + # 8 /
& $ " $ 3 / # #
3 " V % (! # $
- $ % - # # , / 0 4 / 4 # @
@ # 3 / " @ $ ` & 4 %
, # % A " : / # + ` # % / *
$ # % - # 2 @ % % 0
% # @ 4
/ + @ $ 9 %6 / & 4 4 4
+ 0 @ # # 8 % , 0 / "
- # @ : % V % 4
+ + 0 # $ % ! # %
/ $, & , 3. % / . " A
% - # / " " + , + " (
% % + 0 # 1 $ $ /
$ / @ ! # 8 0 3
4 / # , / ` . % 3 /
/ $ % / , " # $ #
g # # 0 + " / $ $ 8 / $ $ # , $
, / # # A " $ + 3 4 #
" " / & A + # 5 # 4 # ! " A
g , % / $ # 0 # , $ &
4 % / * 4 A + / " " # ! %
$ # # $ % A + V % # 4 /
> & % " " # / $ @ A
, 0 + 0 # + 6%6 + / # . K4 $
6 # , + 0 1 / # # ! 9 - 4 #
$ / # $ / # 4
f $ # ! # 3 A ! @4 " / A6
f # # , 3 " $ / # / @ % # & "
f $ / 0 + / / 3 4 / <
f (# 1 # ! # # * V # %
f % 0 / $ # # / " / 9 , /
$ @ 3 " 3 , , / % QQ5
f + 0 / $ $ $ # $ # 3 $ " $ * . [
f / / : # + A % 3 " , # %
f $ / # . - # # $ + 3 5
& $ # $ 3 ! # # $ * 4 * T
f (% + " # + A # 44 # / A
f + $ # $ + # $ + 3 # & , / A
f # 0 % # $ 1 , $ 0 , + + 4
f # K4 # ! KA # # / # @ " 3 1 A f + + % 8 / # $ $ 7 % # + 3 !! =TA
& (# % # 4 " " $ " "
f # " # $ # % / 1 A A + $ + " $ f # + % / $ #F # # / " / " $ V
f # / " $ / $ $! 4 $ # % $

% $ + ' $ $ ' 0 ' $ - 0) & #
' - 0 % % '% % # /"
& % 0 $ '# + Y/ # + % 8 ' ,
' 0 @ " : ' $, , + + ' ! $ 0 ,
, % ' # # ' ,/ / 5 $` ' " % % # "
" # + ,' 0 ' 0 1 ' * (' * - # ' 0
' $, % ! # Y/ # , ! ';5 W5
& ' 4 % % $ # J ?
, " & " # , X ? $
- # " " # & 0 # A " 2 .
' + # " . ? . I 4 4
- # & # , $ % $ ` * $! *
/ / # # % # , / 4 * $
% " = , $ % ? 2
! # 4 + " 7 % #+ * 3 9
- ' " ' +& + '/ / # ` '
" + 4 $ # # & 0 0
- # " + A% " / & 0 # + $ " /
/ Z 1 0 " 49 # '
, / # $ % , + % & " &
! % , # , 10', 5 ! % " . $ @ ' , ' $, & # & 4 "
" # % % * 4 ' ' 4 . 4 '
" 3 " " 3 / # " ! 4 4 4
% " & 0 A , / ' 4 & $ "
% " " # , - # $ A " % % , / , S 4V
1 " , * 4 4 1 " # # # & $ " , /
' + " - # 2 # 9 " 0 , " 4 & . 4
0 '/G (* H # % , 0 4 3 %
J_ @ % # , / " % $ $ ' # '/ 0 (# "
A% @ + # % ! / + $ " + +
, ' 2 - / # # % 3 " , & @ A
/" % + # " % /" 4 $ " A
& 4 $ / / 1 ' $ $ # "/ , ' # , $ " ! 4
" / # 3 # + # ' , , / $ A $ $ # % % , #
" ! ' # $ % / + , / . 0 @ , @
" * 4K4 ! % (A 4 . - % 1 `
+ "/ . # & $ / +
- ' " 3 " # 7 % #+ A 4 " ' $ /'
, / # * $, " ($ " % % /
8 0 / % - # / # % + ! +/ # & $
! # $ $ / # 0 " ! T'
/ & 3 ' 4 + - ! 4 7 + " 9
% $ + # 3 0 + "% ` % " # % 0 + 0 /
+ - # 2 % % 4 ' % / # # `
% $ " ' $ # = # % #
3 " & " 8 / 1 A % ' $ # " $ / / /
/ " /' @ # ' # % % " ' $ # , . 4
& / $ " % " / # . = /" /
+ $ " 3 # / 4" $ % $ % ! 4 %
& $, + # $ @ (# % /" & $, A
" $ & " # + / + /) # : E
' $, & " # # , , A % / * ? 4 E
$ # , 4 % .
" " 4 " / /" E : 6 $ 4 " 3
4 "90 $, % # % / U 2 9
% 50 $ 0 / , 9 + 0 4 4 2
, / # 1, $ 5 + % # ` - 4 * 4
' / # + ! % * - # " 4" 3
& 0 # + A% * 2 ? 4 *
#/# # # # % ? 2 # / 4 , E
- # " # 0 $ $ 4 2 . 9 4 2F 9
! # * 4 # 4 /
" # # $ A 2 2 9
/ / , /+ $ % . 2 2 + 4

2 9 (#. 8 /" & % #
/ 2 , @ (, `
% $ 4" 3 / ? % % 0 # # ' %
4 2 % 0 # "5. 4 '/'' 5
? ? 2 ' $ / @ # & /
3 3 ! 4K " # # (.
/ " 3 # / 0 / . " : % 4" & ' 3 " +
* 4 2F ? 3 0 ! #
/ & # % , # `
@ / " # # /" % ' $ 0
% / " # /" 4 % '
4 ' 4 . : / ' $ V
. 4 / # $ d0 0 /" % ' / # 6 A
& $ / A Q9 0 ' % + %' ' # + `
, + / 4 / / E / # ' Y/ 1 + "
/ \ 4 % / # , 1 / # 5
. 9 $ " , / # + 0
K / / / $ " K. 4K , / % #
/ / ! 4 % # & % 7 + "
> : K 0 4 / , ' + "! 4 #
I 3 + , $ K5 4$
4 3 K " # 0 # / '
4 7 + % ' $ ' ' /
\ 4 4 3 % 4'
K " ! 3 1 1, + / " M + ' / #
3 2F 4 + , $ "! 4 %
' + ' 2YK " 1
] / $ / $ # , &/ $ #
\ " 4 ' W $!? % ' + '
, @ (/ A # % % 4 %
F # " K # ## 2 9 @ $.# ! ' # !? , A
4 ' / , " / 0 / 1, " 1 ' $ 9 " % 0 & `
2 4 0 4 ' A # " ' 3 " ,
R # 0 # '' ' $ " ' 1$ " ' /" /
" $ " 4 & $ 4 '' / % A
7 +! 4" 2 9 #+ # T # ' 4H
4 % 5 0 # 7 + # & / " / 0 / . (K! C
$ 3 " % / + / $ A 4 # ! 4K / 0 /
$ + $ # ` % / # / , 0 1, # , / ' / #
0 # 7 +. & 1 , + 9 # , #
% , 0 , ' # (% (% " @ + ' $ +
% 0 , : " @ + / 0 / , / '' / # ' $ K
' 3 ' / $ " # , & / , '
#@ ' / + 'W A 1, $ # + .# # (`
@ 9 ' % @ # @ / " ` / " # & $ ' $ / " # 'W
% (% 0 $ # " / 7 + %
3 % / / 0 # " 9
2 2 4 4 0 4 ' " #
2" 1 5 DEE DEJ DE_ # 0) 4 7 N Q" ! $ " A % $ `
K><=S ' , # ' $ 8 A
7 + ! 4 ! 4 % ' ` / $ ' 3 " " $
, / ' % $ 5F 1 / # @ / " $ $ $, A
' + 0 $! $ # " " / & # " /
1 " % # 0 6# ' $Q ! ! @9 + 9 (
% ' + ' + & " " " # % / / `
% + # + + V , / # ' %
$ " V $ $ 0 % + / # / @ #
& # $ + ' 3 " , % 4 ' 8 0 #
O 4 # * 4 3 % 4 ' + # / # # H
% (/ 0 / # 0` 1 # W ! 4 7 + "
" % ' $ $ + % % # , / #
#@ " % 1 $ " '' / ' " 4 % , + # / , $
! . %

/' , FJ ' FG6 3 G GGA W 8 0 # (2 - '
1 4 . , , ,+ W , @H $ / ". @4 ' ' ' ' T
W 3 " # 3 ' F JA

$ < $ @ D $ < -

! 4' % '# " 0.# $' ' & ' . % ' % '# # ' '/" ' ' / A 7 + ' # ' ' $' ' ' '2 ' ' '3 + ' ' ' ' % +
' - 0 ' ' '3 ' # # $ ' # , ' ' ' # % ' " 4
' " ' ' # ' ' / ' $ ' ' ' ' LDL ' % ' % ' ' ' '
8 # ' ! % ' % ' ' , # + ' ' 4 4 ' # + ' ' 0 / `
' + ' ' , / + $ ' ' ' ' + '
+ $ ' % , ' ' % @ / " ' ! C ' ' 0 ' ' 2F 4 ' $ `
4 ' # " 0 ' % ' $ ' ' + ' 3 A .# ' , ' & ' ' 7 + ' ' % K4
$ ' ' ' ' ' ' / ' ' ' - ' ' ' ' & $ ' ! ' ' , ' M 7 +
' % ' ' / + ' ' / + ' 0 ' % # ' 3 " ' " / 4 5 4 $ ' ' [19
' ' 0 ' # 0 + ' # # 1 , $ ' ' ' ' ' [I 4 ' 1' ' H ' ' '
' ' ' , ' @ ' / " ' , + + ' ' ' " ' ' ' 0 ' ' ' ' $ ' % '
' % ' ' ' $ ' # , ' # , ' ' 4 ' % ' # 0 ' '
' ' ' " " # ' ' , ' 1" # ' A / ' ' $ ' ' 8 ' ' / ' % '
" ' ' # ' ' ' 3 ' ' ' $ " A % # ' ' ' ' / ' / # K# % '
' " ' + ' ' ' ' ' A # / + ' ' # , ' / ' ' / ' '
$ ' ' % ' $ $ # ' % # ' ' ' ' ' ' ' ' ' ' ' : # ' '
' , + + ' ' ' 4 ' & ' $ A ' ' 4 ' ' ' ' / ' ' ' 0 ' (+ / '
" ' ' / # ' # ! 4KH A / ' ' $ ' ' '
+ ' # ' $ ' , @ ' ' ' 7 + A 1 ' / ' , # ' . '
$ ' ' ' @ ' (0 ' ' # A ' " # + ' ' ' ' ' & , ' ' ' #
' .# # , .# 3 $ ' ' ' ' , / # ' ' / ' ' ' ' , ' #
? G4440' . ' ' # # 1 , $ ' ' % ' R ' [% ! / 4 ! $ & ' % ' $ " ' #
' ' 0 + ' ' ' , # $ ' 0 ' / A ' $ ' ' ' / # ' # ' ' ' $ '
% ' ' $ V ' ' 0 + ' / ' # ' 1 ' ' $ ' ' , ' ' # ' , ' ! [' ' ! A
/ , 9 , ' ' # ' + ' ' 1 / # , ' " / A ' ' $ V 4 # ' '
' .# ' ' , ' # + ' , ' ' % ' 1" @ ' ' $ ' ' ' 0 ' 3 ' 4^9
/ ' ' ' 2 4 ' # $, # ' ' ! ' $ ' ' ' ! ' ' 4 ' ' ' % #
3 ' X $ ' ' # ' 0 ' ' $ ' / 4 ' A
& ' / ' % ' 0 ' ' $ ' › " % ' % # \ ' & ' / ' & ' ('
% ' ' ' $ ' ' ' ' ' ' ! 4 ' , ' ' # 2 ' % ' 3 ' ' ' ! ' " ` $ ' % ' $ ' % ' % ' ' . 4 ' ' & ' * 4 # # ' # ' ' $ '
' ' ' # % ' ' ' ' # / ' . ' # ' @ ' QPA
, ' 4$ / ' ' ' 0 ' , 4 A0 4RM '
$ # ' / V ' ' . 4 ' # # ' , + ' ' ' ' ' + ' ' 3 ' ' + ' ' X ' D
' " ' ' ' 8 / ' 2 % ' 3 ' +
' & ' ' ' 0 / + ' 5 ' # A ' ' ' $ ' ' 4 '
, 0 ' + ' ' ' ' ' 4 ' ' ' 9 ' ' / ' ' ' . 4 * 4" ! K9
4" ' / # ! 4 , 0 ' ' ' ' ' ' ' + ' ' + ' " ' ' A
' ' ' ' 3 + ' ' ' ' A ' ' " ' + % ' . 4 ' $ '
' ' 4 ' ' / ' 0 / ' % ' " A ! ' ' ! / ' # ' ' ' ' @ ' * 9
" .# ' ' ' 0 ' ' ' 4 % / ' ' * ' G" DL ' ' + '
0 ' % ' 0 ' ' $ ' # ' ' / ' ' + ' # ' ' / ' , ' ' 4 ' , + '
' ' / # ' ' + ' ' 2 4 [' 6# ' " ' / # ' ' " ' % '
' % ' ' $ " ' ' # ' ' ' ' % ' , ' " + $ ' % ' ' % # '
' ' 49 ' ' % ' ' A ' % ' ' 1 00 / # ' T ' '
' ' ' ' & $ ' 0 # ' ' ; ' * * " DL ' . " ! U " ' ' ' JD '
" ' ' ' % ' ' + ' ' " !
+ ' ' 2 4 4 ' ' ' ' $ ' + ' ' ' "
1 / # ' ' ' ' 3 ' % ' # 2 ' ' ' % ' 0 ' 0 # ' " A $ ' 0 '
' / , 9 # ' , ' ' ' ' , ' , + .# ' ' ' ' ' ' # " ' % , ' % ' ' ! ' 6 Q A
' ' ' ' ' ' 2 4 ' % ' ' % ' , A " . 4 J ' " + ' ' ' - A 0 # ' . 4 ' # , / + ' 0 ' # ' ' ' ! ' ' ' 2 4 ' % @ ! " '
' % ' 3 " ' ' 8 ' 4 ' ' ' '
" ' . ' , ' ' 0 5 ' ' ' ' LDE ' 4 1 (' ' ' ' ' ' ' & ,
% ' ' % ' ' ' % ' ' ' . E ' ' ' % ' ' # ' ' ' 8 $
4 ' , ' 0 + ' 5 ' ' ' 9 1 ' " J=
4 ' % ' ' ' $ ' % ' ' ' J ' 4 ' ' ' ' M . ' ' '
' % S ' % ' , + ' ' ' ' 4 ' & , ' ' ' # ' : / # + ' '
' ! 0 ' 0 M T0' ' / ' ' ' % ' 3 ' ' ' / # # ' ' 9 # + ! '
' ' ' / ' 0 / ' ! 4 / # ' # ' _ DE ' , ' ' : ' / ' ' ' ' , '
' ' ' 0 ' ' 7 % # + ' ' / ' , ' ' ' 0 / 5 ' ' JJ<D ' ' 9 / # + .#
3

6 ' + ' # ' 6 " ' J<L ' ' U$ $9 ' ' $ 6 / ' , * ' " AL * A
' ' 0 H ' 4 : ' ' 6 9 6 ' SC& * H ' & / ' ' $ '
! - F ' . - ' , ' 6.1# $ ' ' 0 ' " + ' , , 5 , ' 3
* EJ ' 1 ' 8

$ < G I R $ <

. ' + ' ' #' % ' , / #' ' + ' '' ' 8 @' - #' % ' " #' '
' ' ' (#' '' '' ' ' ' 1 %' ' ' '' + ' ' ! '% ' + `
' ' ' #' ' - #' ' % ' #' ' , ' #' ' '' ' $ " , ' '
' ' ' & ' % ' % ' ' ' ' ' $ ' %' - #' + 0 ' ' ' @ ' '' " `
+ ' $ # ' / ' ' '' ' ' 3 / " ' , ' ' ' ' ! ' ' ' # ' # ' @ % '
3 , ' '' ' , ' ' b / ' ' % ' , ' 8 ' ' ' $' 0 W ' % '
#' ' _T=< ' , ' ' : ' / ' ' ' JJDD ' / $ #' ' '' + ' ' , ' ' '
, ' ' ' 0 / + ' 5 ' J JDT ' 5 , / ' ' % ' @ % ' ' ' " `
_ ' 2 1 ' '' ' & , ' '' , ' ' 0 +' ' 4 ' # ' ' ' ' 8 ' ''
' ' . ' ' ' / '' L# # '' ' #' + 0 +' $ '' / ''
L ' 2 1 ' ' ' ' ! ' #' ' ' / + + ' ' '' ' 0 ' ' $ #'
gK 0 * ' ' 4 ' + ' '' @ +
D ' 2 1 ' ' ' '' * ' 05 ' ' $ $ ' + ' ' ' / ' / '
, ' 7 +' . ' ' ' ' 3 " '' >4 0 ' ' %5 ' - # . ' "
% ' 4 # ' ' @' ' " ' A ' '' ' . ' ' ' #' ' 9 A'
+' ' @' '' ' (% ' % ' #' ' '' ' % V' , / ' ' ' ' , ' %
, ' ' / #' ' ' ' & $ " + #' , / ' ' 3 '% ' ' $ # '
T!! 0' _E 2 1 ' ' ' , + +' ' ' & , ' / ' '' ' @ ' % ' ' . ' (' '
Q ' '' ! $ 1 ' % ' + 0 ' ' ' / 4' '' % ' ' % ' ' ' ' '' 1, $ ' `
J ' 0 ' 4' 8 $ $ ' % $' ! ' % ' #' ' '
SP 4 - ' ' ' ' $ ' 1 / #' $ ' h ' % ' ' ' / + ' '
+ 0 ' , ' ' 7 +' '' , @4 '' ' ' " " / ' '' Y / +' f' % ' ! '
! T '' ' ># ' $ " ' & ' #' ' ' #' / #' " $ ' , `
$ ' $ " ' ' % / ' ' & ' ' ' ' $ ' ' ' ' 3 / ' ' 1 `
& ' % ' ' ' / ' ' +' ' " ' $ ' , ' / #F ' $ / '
, ' #' , / ' '' ' + ' ' ! 9' % 0 ' ' ' ' ' 0 +' `
' % ' % ' ' ' ' ' 8 / ' ' 0 #' ! ' ' + ' % ' $' ' ' 8 #'
, ' % ' ' %6 ' $ " ' % 99' ' $ / # #' $ '
' #' * ' ' ' ' / ' +' ' # ' & ' " / ' # ' ' 1" ' ' ' 5
' / ' % ' % ' # #' , ' ' $ ` ' ' ' 1 / $ ' '' ' / `
$ #' '' & TT '' # ' % ' ' # ' #' ! " ' ' ' # 0 # #' / " ' ' 7
' " , , ' ' ' & $ ' , ' ' ' $' 1, $ ' $' ' % ' 9 % A , ' ' ' < '
, ' ' % ' # ' ' ' #' ' ' #' ' % ' ' ') V' 1, $ ' + ' % '
' $ ' 8 ' % ' ' $ " ' & ' ' W' ' % ' ' 7 ' ' ' % #' ' '
$ ' '' % ' * ' # ' W' ' 3 A' @ ' % 0 ' ' ,
! ' , ' - # . ' " " $ ' A' ' #' '' ' 9 ' 3 , ' +'
/ # #' ' ' / V' ' ' ' # #' ' % # ' 0 ' ' (#' # $ # #' ''
/ ' ' $' ' , ' 9 / #' , ' ' 8 $ ' ' % ' ! ' % ' 9' ' % ' ' A'
, / ' ' ' + ' ' ' $ #' ' ' '' $ ' ' % . #' ' ! ' 3 ' ' , K4') > ' '
' ' / ' $' / ' '' ' 8 / ' ' ' ' ' 3 ' %' - #' " / A
(' ' ' #' ' '' ! ' #' '' #' '
/ ' % ' , ' ' ' #' ' '' ' W\W 4' 1 ' '' " ' ' ' , / A'
' , ' ' : ' / ' ' ' $ ' ! ' ! ' ' " 0 ' ' 4 ' 0 ' ''
' '' " ' ' ' #' ' % ' / # ' 9' #' ' ' ! ' ' ' $' # 9'
& % 5F ' , 0 ' ' ' % ' ' % \ & 0 ' ' 1 % ' ' & $, '
/ + ' ' , +' , ' ' '' # ' #' ' , ' ! 4 ' % ' ' ' / # #' #
' '' ' #F ' + ' $ ' ' ! ' 3 $ ' ' ' / ' ' / , ' ' (+
' ' % ' , ' J= ' ' ' ' % ' ' . ' ' / ' / ' ' ' % '
' $ @ ' ' 1 0 ' '' LE ' , ` ' ' & # ' $ +' ' 4'
% ' ' ' ' ' ' % ' ' & ' ' ! K4' , +' $ / # . #' ' ' 3 ' ''
' ' 3 " ' ' ' ! / ' ' ' ' # 4'' / ' +' ' $ ' / `
% ' , ' ' ' ' $ ' & $ ' % ' ! $ ' '
' ' #' # ' # ' ' ' $ ' '' ' 8 ' % ' '' "
, ' # '' ' W ' #' ! ' 9' ' ! ' / #' % ' ' '
+' ' / ' #' , ' ' K T' 0' ! ' ' '' , ' W' & ' ' '' ' 4 / ' ' ' ' '' #' ' ' ' ' 1 % ' 0 ' ' ' ' # #' , ' ' $' ' 8 ' ' 8 / ' '' ' (, / ' L ' + V' , / ' ' ' $ ' ' '
' ' ' / , # $ ' '' ' ' V % ' $ #' ' . " " ' ' #' ' A'
! ' ' ' " #' '' ' @' ' 8 A' # 6' ' ' * 4' ' $ # ' ' $
'
: ' " ' 6 Y ' ' J ' ' L' , ' N' 0 ' 6' / ' " ' $ " ' [' ' ' $ ' K' & ' ' - '' $ ' Y / ' , ' ' - ' ' 6 / ' ! #' C' , (' " ' J< ' f & A'
+ / $' 1 ' ' ' - ' 0' ' i & ' 1 ' '<S' W' 3 / # ' $ + ' 6' ' ' - ' $ ' JP
W 3 ' 4' * ' ' ? ?@ ' 4' , ' ' ' / ' '% ' 4' 4' / @ '
' ' 4' ! ' H 4 ' ' ' ' ' ' ' ' + 4' ' ! '
' 1 j ' % 0 ' ' ' 4
- ' * ' ' U ' ' ' ' + 6' G 6
W : ' " ' Y' ' ' L' ; ' - / 9 . ' & 0 ' ' ' ' (#' @' ' ' $, ' " / # `
' ' (" # ' / ' # ' , , ' ' " ' ' J ' ' LA 6' * # ' ' ' & ' ' " " DA

$ < @ ≠ D $ <

[illegible]

$ < @ J $ <

+ / " # % # 18 K * ! 9 & %
1, $ 3 ' / #
4 " 0 # % 0 ' + A " # 4 , % 4 #
+ % + # % - 4 1 ' $ % / #
# % @ # % - 0 $ 4 $ #
$ # , / / + , ? 9 , ' + # # / + (/ @
% 5 0 ' $ # $ 0 % 9 _
1 $ 0 , / # 4 " & % , % 2 4 6 W
8 $ $ & # A # 4 , ' / A
$ # ' # $, + " M # $ 3 # , # / A
/ # 0 # @ # , $ # ' ' $ V $! `
* + , # # # + $ 4 $ " ' $ / % , 1
' $ & $ ' $ 1, $ % / @ ! 4
0 # ' $ $ # 3 ' ! , % [# 4
' + " " , ' 3 # 4 . 4 #
3 " , + ' $ $! 4' " % / + + 0 #
% @ # # # # 0 / # , . + %
$ @ ! " $ - # / # V % '
% / " " @ # , $ @ 1, $, 0 +
- # A # % 0 + 1 $ " ' ` , 0 $ # 5
+ $ ' @ $ ' % # & 0 ' + " 3 # (
' / $ 0 + @
& @ # T ' $ % / % (A W ,
>/ - / # b / , ` 0 + $ % W
% # ! " # # ' $ @ " / " `
' + 0 3 ' ' > . Y / + /
! / ' 0 ! # # 3 " Y /
1 " @ $ $ # $ ' 3 ' A
, ! D ! + / , 8 " # , / # ? 4 # " 4
/ - # $! ' 0 # $ 0 %
V # % # # + / 1 # 4 (
- # $ 9 0 + ' ' # # % % 3 0 #
" # - ' # , , ' 4 & ' @ 9 9
8 # ' ' " @ 0 [A - % $ $ # # 9
4 & ' $ " ' $ " Q 3 $ % 1 0 @ #
W ^ * # ' 5 Q 9 ($ # / ' / ' "
? @ 4 V # / 0 / - " / / , ' + # # " 0
" $ # $ / " $ " " ' +
% # , " ' / # + / ' A / ! " ' ' '
! ' ' ' 5 # # ' + / $, % % @ , 1 0 %
L = A $ # $ + / ! % 2 3 / 0 A
(/ @ _ $ / Y / ! # % # ' & / % /
! % @ $ A $ + 0 , ' %
" ' # , $ / " ' @ % # " A
$, " " @ # ' ' A / " @ 0 ' + % '
& / # : / ' 3 / % , % $ 9 / # +
$ # ' % ' $ # + ' %
+ % ' ! # * - + % 0 / $ $
1 0 , $ # , ' ' +
$ + $ (' " # ' + ' 3 #
$ $ # / # A # ' 0 # /
' # & ' " $ # , ' 0 +
" " , + Y / % 0 ' # , /
/ # $, 4 % # / + - / # #
$ % + , + + %
4 , ' / T $ # 4 5 + % / A
$ # $ $ $ $ ' $ ' + # %
% ' ' * 0 4 / " 0 # ' $ " " +
/ 0 / 6 4 $ 0 ' ! ` # , 0 #
A # . @ # , % . # @
. ' 1 # % / $ + A
/ # $ + 4 ' ? 4 # " 4 4 $
/ " % + ' # " , 0 ' # & &' A
2 1 $! - ! 9 0 + F 1 $ '

0 # # 1. & ' ! ! ! : / / ' , (

$ <   D $ <

" V % # #" '' , , % @ " , A
, - @ % & , A .
% % / # 0 , ! # + # / ' % # * # % # *
& & % + , / 4 ! 1 @ $ ' $,
' # # / A 4 # %" -
' " # @ / & 2 , 3 4 , + + & , (@ 3 . . 0 0' ' '
(# , , # . 1 & 4 / + O
" & , * % 0 # T ? 7 + .
' / (+ / ' $ ' A _) 4 ! 0 _
% # 4 # . , 0 1 # % #
% $ @ , ' + # . % 0 + / ' #
: /#9 (8 & * 1 4 5 % $ % # $ ' " / , ' CCW # + 4 ' ! $ (E : / ' # # $ # $ % ' " - 0 $, 0 # ,
! 4 1 " , , $ " $, + #
$ % ! , % . 44 # 9 3 " Y / 7 + $ & N$
2 4 @ " " # # _PEP
& % # ! / 5 , ' JJPJ , ' 0 / + : A
2 % $ 0 % , JJP=
$ % ! ' 1A (0 !
(& - & + # + # / 4
' / # 8 # , + + . . $ W
, % @ % 1 & ! K K
1 0 9P # % % , @ , 2 9 # + 3 ' $ +
G - . 4 1 % # , $. 4 ' $ $! $
#% ' + ' * 4 " , , ! % $ S
' Q5 , + / $, , 9 & # # ' P0 HN
JJJ_ 9. 4 % # ' # , - # 3 ! % $
' 5 + 9 + ' 5 ' " / ' / % / + % " ' 0 # ' $ / + ` & / + / # ' # , 9 # # # / # AJ
. 4 % 1 ! @ + ' ' & / # b /
@ (# + 3 ' % / 0 A
(A (! 9 ' ! % / +
% 5 ' SH / 1 / # , ' # , 6# 1 ' , #4 K
$ % 4 4 " 4 + h 3 $ @ 8 `
+ 3 ' ! $ % 4 $ T , +
% # / ' $ ' / " O ? & / X
: / # , # * ' 0 * 9 % $ $ % + 3 9 ' :A
» 9 4' 3 V ! # / @4 # O ?
(A 1 & O 1 * E % 4 3 1 & \ `
4 % # / # ' $ 4 ! / `
! . # ' $ + % V % !
' $, 0 , # 15 ! (
$ 3 % % ' % # # % # " 0 # , % 3 #
, $ 4 ' $. _P P # O ?
. % # 0 " ' $ # 8% 5 A
(A 1 & & 1 % ' / # ' # / + % ! A
3 * , # . " " ' / ' 0 8 $ 3 # `
. . 4 K ! 9 + 3 # 5 % # , $ #
% ! % ' ! + 3 ' : 6.Q'
8 / + ' $. V 0 2 1 & $ ' $ $
" ' $ 0 E + 0 ! 8 !
4 ' + , / # % $ % 0 , 9 / ' % @ +
5 / 2 * 4 $ " # ! 9 * ? ! '
% $ $, ' ` 1 $ + 0 , E
$ " '' # . / # # / ' 4 ' ' A
/ $, . . & . 4 ' & % % # N M / D
W 5 f>PK A1# #% %# , 92 & # & 1 % / *
9 $! A ' % - , ' 0 " / # ! + ' 5
Y$! _k $, # / 4 & 8 / # + V %6 & A
7 T % b99 99 ' # % F * / ! # ! D
A / # A 14

3 : + 2 2 (3 4
: N" , Y F D S N * J N # F S G A 5 31 ' K / [' (1

& , ' '' , '' ' 3 6$ ' # / ' 9 0 # P' + ' ' $' ' ' 5
'' '& , ' ' ' $ '% ' '& , 'A' " #' '3 ' ' #' / #'
' ' , / ' #' '3 4' $ ' ? ' 0 +' / # ' #' '4 + ' ' #' W6
/ ' '' '' ' '' +' @ ' ' '' / ' ' ' ' ' ' #' # #' '4 ' '
'" " '3 , ' '' ' 0 &' ' ' ' ' '% '@ % ' '# / '
% ' ' ' 0 ' + ' '% + '% '' ' ' ' '# $ #' ! ' ' ' ' F
% ' ' / # #' #' ' @ ' ' ' A' ' 0 #' ' / '% ' + ' `
>' 0 GX%' 6 ' / # #' # 0 @ ' @ % #+ $ ' #' % ' '4 ' '' ' ' #' '' - #' % + +' ' ' @ ' ' ` / +' ' ' ' / , #' % ' 0 ' ' '
#' % '1 V' ' / +' / @' ' $ ' % ' '# / @4' $ " ' #' % ' $ #'
' (' , ' '' ' ' #' ' ' / A '' ` ' $ ' & '1'' , ' '' ' + '% '
+' V' % ' ! ' ' 0 ' $ ' ' 0 ' A+ ' % ' ' ' #' # '
' 0 ' ($, ' ' ' ' 3 A '8 +' #' ' 1' 1 1 (' ' ' '' ' #' ' '
7 #' ' ' ' '' + 8 ' 6' * ' * ' #' 1 , '
1 (' ' [. '' '8 ' '') ' ' ' 0 ' 11 ' D
' #' & ' #' - #' ' ' ' ' '2 1 ' '8 ' '' O ' '' ' C W '
6' ' ' 7 +' '' ' . / K%' '8 $ ' % *
18 O 7 ' '' '& , ' '' , ' 9' ' ' '8 ' '' b / ' ? '
#' & % ' '' ' % ' ' '' ' ' #' ' '' * ' . '' ! ' J=
' ' ' + ' ' '' $ D' 2 1 ' ' 4 / + ' '' 1 '
1A - ' , % ' #' & ' # / K4' ' #' ' ' ' ''X$
'8 ' GK' ! ' #' #' % ' 7 +' '' >' '% ' ' ' ' 5 '
' '' ' ' #' ' " " ' . '% ' #' O '
0 ' 1 , ' '' ' 1 ' ' ' '' ! ' ' + A'
WKA 1 - 1 (' % ' ' '' ' '' ' ' ' A' 3 ' ' #' . . '% ' ' / $ #' + A'
' '' '' #' ' ' ' 4 ' % ' % ' ' '& ' , '8 ' ' A'
$ #' '2F / '% '3 / ' "A' ' $' - #' G' , / ' ' ' #' '' .#' 1 '
>." #' ' ' ' F' 1# / ' ' +' % ' ' + '8 ' ' #' '' @ +' ' ' $' # '
1' $' '3 / ' ''% '' / #' ' ' '' / A '' + ' & ' A'
9 , ' ' +' & $ ' ' ' / '% ' ' $ ' "" .#' % ' + '4 ' ' '$ '
'@ " ' '8 @ ' / ' 'KK(' ' ' '' ! ' #' ' '
% # ' ' '' '& , ' '' . ' #' '4 # ' '' '& , ' ' ''
* '# '' ' ' $' ' ' ' ' ' ' ' '' ' #' D=JD ' , ' ' : / ' *' '
& , 'N K' 3 . K ' ' / #' ' ' * ' ' ' D G : ' , ' ' '0 / + '9 'JDPE 'WT555WWW
'' & " '# #' '3 ` ' $ $ ' ' '' " ' (0' ! 'W'
9 / # ' ' '3 " ' ' '8 @ ' '& ' #' ! '% ' 0 @ '
, / '% ' ' ' + ' ' ' ' ' $' % ' ' #' , ' ' + ' ' @ ' ' A'
' " # +' $' ' $' , , V' , ' ' #' 8 ' ' ' ' & ' 9 `
/ +' ' '& $ ' '' ' , # ' ' / ' ' ' / # #' ' ' $ $ #' '' - #'
; ' ' '' ' ' " ' ' ` $ $ # ' ' '# 0 .#' ' '3 ' '
'4 '% ' * '% ' $ ' ' 9' ' , ## +' $' ' ' ' ' '' ' ' '
\ ' ' ' ' +' '' ' " ' 2 / ' & $ ' ' ' / #' , ' $ " .#' ' ' W'
'1 , $ ' '' '3 " ' ' $ '# ' +' 0 ' '' '& $ " ' $ '1 " '$ 6 7' P'
' $ '3 ' ' ' $' $' ' # ' '' ' / ' ' ' ' % ' '% '% '
' " " ' / $' ' G' ' '& $ ' '' " / ' #' , ' - #' ' ' ' 0 ' ' ' '8 / '
+' % ' ' 8 ' 0 ' #' & $ ' '' #' ' ' $ $ ' ' $ ' $ f '
>+ ' 9 +R' #' / ' % #' ' ' ' , / ' ' - #' @ ' ' #' $' ' #' '
> $ ' 0 'A% ' ' " # ' #' A' $' '% '3 ' '' ' + 5 ' '
#' ' $' $ ' #' ' / # ' A' # ' '" ! ' $ #' 0 ' ' ' $'
' ' ' ' / ' #' ' $ @ ' ' % #' ! , ' ' ! $ " ' ' Q '
[# / ' '3 ' , / ' #' $' ' ' 3 ' ' '' ' ! ' ' ' 5 '
5 5 ' ' 8 / + 0 ' #' , ' ' ' % % ' - #' Y / ' ' ' ' '
3 ' #' , ' # $ ' .#' ' # 6F & ' ' 0 ' $
, +' " #' ' $ ' ' ' + .#' $ ' ' 1' 1 : ' ' ''. '% '
'1% ' '% / #' # ' '& ' #' ' % ' ' ' ' '7 +' '' ' '& , ' & '
'8 $ ' ! ' , +' ' $ #' % ' > / +' 3 / '% ' ' #' % ' '0 '# `
@ #' '' % ' ' / , #' #' / ` + / ' 49. ' V' #' 6' ' 0 +'
#' '# / 4' ' + ' $ # ' ' ' # 5 ' #' ' ' '# ' ' + ' #' @'
' ' ' ' / #' ' " ' '8 / F $ ' '3 '' ' ! ' ' '% / #' `
'' ' ' ' 1 , ' # #' % '3 0 ' ' 0 '9' ! ' ' '% '#' ' ' '% / #' # '
' # % ' ' '' ' $ ' $ ' : # #' ' '% / #' , ' ' '3 , ' '' '
> ' ' 0 DA ' '' '4 $ ' ' F ' 'A' 8 $ '% '' / ' 0 '8 / ' `
' .#' $' '3 ' ' #' 1 , ' ' / " ' / ' #' , A $ #' , ' '3_ K GO '1@ +'
6P ' , ' ' # ' 0 ' 5 ' ' ' '4 ' # ' ' $' . 'W*6A WQ'

6' $ ' , 0' ' '8 ' $' ' $' ,Q ' '' A '' +WV' ' ' ' " # #' ' X' '
' ''3 ' / $ ' f 9 , , '' (A 9 ' ' f& @ N' $' (" # ' ' Q0 !

$ <   G   F   1

' 7 # , ' ,9 L 9 # ' #
/ # , # 3/ ' $ A ? 7 + . 4
I " # 1 + /# ! $ "$ 1 %
. / # # 4 /+ 'O % % @ # ,
, ' 9 '/ , $ $ #] ! . . , % & $
' 0/ + P=T " #
R 2 1 8 % 7 + . # A % 4 # ..
' & " $. $ T ! # "
$ % X * ! * - 4 /+ / # % $ "
> - ! ? " " ? # + A 3 % $ / # ' , / # A
0 # ' ! /' , / 1, $ O 8 >P5
_A * , # $ 5 . % / ! WW
(! , #0 # , 6 # , A ! % % +5 9
% $ # , + ' / # %
/ $, 0 555Q N / # # , %9 2 1 8 7 + =4 9
8 5 I 1# 9ED $ # % % 3T % 7 + !
, ' : ' P=D , ' 0/ ` 4 & - $ A
+ 5 P=T + # # 7 +# $ % %
59 1 $ " # , # A + $, /' # $, #
/ ' 8 # # ' + ! 4 OK !
=EDP , : 5 $ " .# 1 / $ " / "
P=J , ' 00 + 5 P== % % $ / .#
2 1 8 7 + 0 # 1 # 5 @ # " 0 ,
1 +W ' ' 7 + 35 % ' + $ 6 # \
! ! 0 ++ 1 ($! "5
1 M KD 55 # $ " ' / , / # # /W ! 2 1 .
! . # A 1 ('$ 3 0 Q -9
55 # $ " # /" / 2 4 /" % - , % - # ! %
" # % 5 % ' &% # % , 5 WK 4 % 1 , $ $
%#6 6 $ # .# + $ # ! - ! - " ! +
DE #TE 5 / # # 5 /' # # % K3Y 4 # 2 #
'Q) 5 4 $! % / 9F5 #
5 # % + +/ 2 1 , 0
% 5" 5 + + + $, 0 1 (. ?
5 # / , $, $ 0 $ # + , $ / 5 / ! ! !
'Q / # / # + ! 0 % /
/5 " (# / A% % + , / + / / $ `
'R ! 1" + . # .# 3 $ / " 4 ! Q
, # $ 1 1 (- 7 + 2 X
5, e % / $ 6 5 0 + % 0 + , ! $ 6# %
,' 5, 5 5 \ + $! KH $ % / % !
#% Q $ / $' 7 , ! ' # $ $ # @
" # # 3 " %'% % # + # F / - # # # " $ $
' 8 % , + / (# # $ " $ ## % 9 " " # $
% - $ & 3 ' , $ # # + # .# $ %
* #+ & / $ " = - # / @ # # / #
$ % & # $! / , # !
. @ # $ % , $ / # 1+ ! / 5
8 / @ # ' 0 / # # A + @ / " /
' # / " " ! ? "/ / + ' $! 1 % , F
* ' @ 1 0 $. G & ! # @
$ 5 , . ! 4 # W $ # $ " # $, +
3 4 % , $ / / # 0 # , $! &
/ $, # / # # . 9 % , / % # $
, # / + / # @ % , + ,
+' + $ & , $ 8 , / , ! 91
" ! % + 5 + # 5 $ # + 3 $ #
" % . A # A W + 0 % / # " 0 # A
5 # , Q % / "' . ' + + " / * % $ `
" 1# $ 0 0 + 8
% + $ # / 0 5 $ $ + 0 !]T /
% $ # % # % # ! " $ ' $ @
' ! 4 /+ ! / 5 # $ W 0 $ # $
" " # LED=W , : A / ' + " 4 $
% ' P= _ , 0 / + P== % $ + , $,

\9 ' " $ Y (22

[illegible]

$ '8 ' &/ 'n/' ' $' ' ' '/ A ' ' ' '' ' '8 '% '
' / ' '' /')' 0 +' 'D #' ' , ' # ' " ' Y/ ' #' ! 9'
' #5' #' #' ' , '% ' ' ' , ' '' + ' ' '% / #' 0 ' `
#% ' ' +' '0 ' '' ! ? '' $ " #' 1, $ +' + '' ' ' '
& ' (#' " $ #' 4 0 ' ' ' '0 ' '% / #' ' 0 ' 0 / #' / ' '' V
' $ +' 6 , ' ''% ' , / ' ' '% +' ' ' ' " " ' ''
% ' , + +' ' ' ' F ' ' 9 ' # ' , #' ' / ' '% '
'' ' #/#' # ' #' ' / ' '' ' ' '1 / # , ' # 0 #' , ' '1 `
! - ' % ' #' $ '' #' 0 ' , '% '% ' $ #' / ' '' ' '
' '' ' , '8 ' ' W #' #' #' ' ' $ ' ' + ' $ A'
' ' ' % ' , ' ' 0 #' ' $' 0 ' ' # ' '' ' #' ' ' ' $ ' #' #' ' $, / ' # ' ' ' / ` $ ' ' #0 + / ' 3 ' ' + + '
'% ' ' # + ' '@ ' $' ' ' IA & ' / ' $ @ ' / ' ' '' ' #'
/ ' '% '' ! ' #' ` 3 '% ' ' ' ' ' , ' ' / '
+ ' '' % ' % ' # +' ' $' O ' # ' ' $' ' $ ' ' ' + ' ' $, / '
% $' ' #' ' ' - 0 / ' ''%? ' # ' #' ' ' @' ' ' , ' '% #' $ A'
& ' '' ' ' 1 #' 0 #' ' * ' , / # ' ' $ ' ' 0 ' ' ' ' " ' ' ' ' ' '% '% $ ' ' ' + ' % '3 " ' ' '% '' ' ' $ ' '
$ ' ' , + ' ' / ' ' # ' ' / " M ' #' $' $' ' ' '
/ #' 1 $ " ' + ' ' ! V ' # ' ' '% ' ! K ' ## + '
% ' ' ' $ ' $ ' + ' 1, $ ' & " ' ' Y/ ' '3 ' #' $ ' ' % #' '
+ ' #' $ #' ' + ' % #' ' $ ' ' # ' ' + + ' $' '
% '' & ' : ' # ' ' ' $ +' '3 '% / ' ' F (' ' , ' '
'% ' " 0 #' ' '% '3 " ' '% ' ! ' ' ' ' ' #' > % #'
+' ' $' ' ' #' '% ' $K '& " ' ' $ ' $ ' ' ' ' $' #0 '
$ # ' # ' 0 #' ' ! '% ' ' " '% '% ' ' ' ' ' ' " `
'% ' '8 ' '% ' / ' '' " ' ' ' W $, / ' # ' # ' #' ' / '
% '% '% ' # ' ' #' #' , @' ''# ' ' $' ' / ' '1 '
+ 0 ' ' ' ! - ' , / ' ' ' V $ ''/" I $' ' ' ' # ' ' 0 '
#' ' '% ' # 0 +' ' A ' ' $ ' ' , ' ' # %' ' '& " '
' 'O ' ' #' $' ' $' ' / ' '' ' ' #' ' ' / " ' $' % '
#' , + #' $' ' ' ' 8 '% / ' + 0 +' $' '
/ 9 & ' + 0 ' #' / ' #' / ' ! " ` ' 0 ' A / ' '' ' $ " 6M '%6 ' '
' " . - 4 ' '' '% ' ' ' , + #' ' ! " #' ' ' #' $ ' 1 ' " " '
.4 0 ' / ' ' ' 9 # / ' ' * +' , ` ' ' #' + ' '' ' #0 A'
' A +' $ ' ! #' #' ' ' / ' #0 +' % / # ' $ ' 1 ' " " '
$' 9 % ' 0 ' ' $' " / ' '' '%# ' #' @ % ' 'O '% $' ' # #' ' '
- ' , ' # ' " 6 ' '' '% ' $ ' ' ' # ' / ' ' , #' + 0 ' $' '
' " ' ' + '% ' ! ' ' '' ' $ V & ' '' '
: / #+' ! 0 # ' ' $' O '% ' $ $ # #' ' @ #' ' , #' ' , ' # ' 0 # ' #' '
LE ' ' % + ' ' ' #' $ # ' $ '' 5' & '% ' ' #' ' $' " '
' '' ' #' #' ' / $, ' '' & " ' % ' ' ' ' '' ' # '% ' ' ' #'
/ ' ' ' / + ' $' ' @ ' ' / ! " #' - ' ' ' % 'O '
8 # ' #' ' ' 8 / ' '' ' V ' ' $ ' " " #' / " ' ' $ `
' ' 0 #' ' $ ' % # ' $' / # ' ' ' ' ' , / ' " # ' ' '
' ' 0 / ' '' ' # @' + ' #' @' , ' &/ #' '' ' & ' 'O ' " '
$' ' '3 ' ' " 0 ' , ' '$ ' 2 ' 5' ' . ' ' ' * 5 %'
' + + +' ' ' + ' #' + 0 +' ' [>' ' ' ' ' * 4' 4' ' ' '
$ ' ' " " / ' ' @' , / ' $5' 4' / 4' '' ' + ' ' # A'
#' @ ' ' #0 + '% ' ' / A' $ ' ' ' $' ' ' ' ' `
" M ' 0 ' ' ' ' # " 0 ' / ' '' 1'' % ' $ ' & ' & ' / " ' , ' 0 +'
% ' '@ '' ' ' '& ' ' $' ' , ' ' # ' " / '% ' $' ' '% '
% ' $ + ' $ + ' ' $' O ' $ ' + ' , / ' ' @ ' #' ' +' ' ' '
' ! $ - ' ' ' '% ' / " ' 1 / # " / ' / ' ' Y / ' ' ' '
' ' #0 ' ' ' ' / $, ' '' ' % ' ' #' # $ #' / " '% ' ' & " ' & '3 ' + ' $ + ' , ' " #/ #' % ' ' ' # ' ' ' $' ! ' #'
' ' " " '' '' ' - ' ' ' > (' ' % '% ' ' ' ' # ' ' Y#' " / # '
4' TK ' ' K ' ` ' ' ' ' ' ' ' / #' ' %' ' # 0 / '
' T' ' RK 4' 4'' '% # ' ' + + ' $' ' ' , ' '1 9 ' '' '
T'' ' / 4' %' $ + ' , ' / # ' #' ' + ' 3 ' 4' ' ' * '
' '' ! '% ' ' ' +# ' ' / $ ` ' ' ' 4' , $ '
, V' , / ' ' ' & ! ' ' $ ' ' $ ' ' ' ' J ' 4 ' ` ' 34' ' 4' '
' ' Y / ' ' ' 'U 4 ' (' ' ' ' H ' ' '
' ' ' ' " , ' ' ' / ' ' # ' + ' ' ' ' ' ' ' 9' ' 9 ' ' $ ' 1' $ ' 0 ' $ / ' ` $ #' / ' ' ' % / ' # / , '
#' ' @' ' '% ' ' W ' , ' ' V % ' ! ' $ # ' #0 +

* IH(' 1

[illegible]

* 9 # + ' ' 2 " % # / # ' # + $ ' "
#! - 5 % / # 0 " # $ % % #V
? "0 " 8N' , / # / % / # '/'' `
J 1 4 # / |4 + "% + '' 3 .
'' 1 JL " 1 % (' , # , % A K 9
9 2 1 1 "% =5 " % # / " ' 0
> 2 1 $ ' , ' + ' $! % , `
: 0 2 1 1 / ") 9 + # 0 . ! ' % #
2 1 @ % % A
1 8 , ? # # / 0 '' ' 0 (+ / + V
. / " N' , / # / @ .# O + $
1 1 6 # _ (# " $ # "" , 9 . 0 + # ' # % # ' + / $, $ #
". " / # / " # - # % / # 0 + #
* / $ # 3 ! $ A 5
4 : F $ # # # " "# / 4 !
4 ! / $ $ # # @ A !0
9 4 % J % " % $ % W
, . + 0 , ! 4 1 !
9 ' ' 0 , / ' ' 0 / # # # ' 0 ' # " / / "
1 $ " 0 + / # @ " + / # # # ' %
5 # , / # . % % + $ V , / @ % % !
_==9 , W 8 / # # ' " " .# $
9 # % / + ' % & $ # $ " B 4
' 5 / + / " - 1 (8 *
0 / + "' 9 2 1 % " " 6# % % C !) ' 0 ". E
7 $ + % # .# + !) 4 ! "
966A LDA # * 4 # ! ' 1 " 2 4
% # - / #' # ' / 5 3 J 4 0
+ - - 6 & , " " 0 % ' / # # , ?? 2 $
5 % ' , 3 % " / + + A3 EA PJE , A - # ' # , , / ' + 3 / (' W @ %
$, 1% % # / " 0 / & ' "! 0 "
% % " # A ! / # : / # + 3
/ $!0 0 $ # ! 44 . . 4 ! U
1 - / + $ 0 J = /
% & , " 3. 1& (' ! " # /
Z/ +] ! , / ' 0 ' # ` # % L
+ $ # % #0 .# , : 4 ' O 5 5 Q 5 #
3 ' " / 1 , $ / + 3 A " / 0 / . # +
1 , % $ + $ $ 8 ' * '0" JL
% # & # ! % " A 8 " # -
' # $ % % " $ ' % (4 $ " # 0 # % 3 9
1 7 + R , / ' / / + $ T + & 3 # / " A
'W 7 + $ # ' , / # # @ % " # $ * , 5 # .
' % / # ' 0 + 8 "
' W 4 ! # A / % + #
JEJ , A $ # + + % , 0A & , . & % $ ' A
% ' $ + '' ' A $ ' ' $ $ $, % % X #W
J5J= 3 % % % $ # " 3 " # / # 3 4 (% _5DP
7 + . 0 V # 'A # / % , # #0 + &
7 + " 6# $ # % , - . ! # ! % AJEDD %A
X :SA 'R , ' : ' / ' =KR , ' $ $ # # & " " # /
0 / + 5 : JL 3. . K4 $ + # ' X ED
> 1 1 " O # O C 8 % $! 9 W $
2 # / |4 % " $ # . *
0 " $ # " 4 $ # . ' #
" " - # / K4 $ 1 $ $ # % 0
! 0 I / # 3 9 - , "" # % " # / `
' $ " % % , 3 # % 0 " 0
(# % % # " # / K # / + 0
/ # # ' @ & - % 8 % , # # $
/ " " " @ + # / % % # 8 % . # V '
! " 0 # $, + 0 + $ # % + # %
! $ / # & $! 0A $ 4 95 # ! % , %
00 J< + # .# % K4 & $ ` , ' " # / &

$ < 5 @ I D

' "O # / K4 ' ' " % # 3 " '
! #! % / .# ' $! " # V
%' ! % ! $ '% ' # % # ! # , %
+ "8 % # W ` / # # $ # % $ 5
' / # @ " / ' ! % / / " $ $ # # "" # $ A
/ + + # ' " 7 + + I / ' /
' ! 0! / # $ @ $ ` + / , ` # >
' 1, $ 3 , G , / ,' 0A ? * 4
+ ' / # " / ' / $ / '
' / @ $ % # # / * 4` $
" # @ # $ " $ % / " 7 +. 3
! % # + " A # % / 7 % #+ ' ! C
' 1, % ' ! / / A # ' + $ / F # +
K2 ! K4 % $, + + ` ! , + $ [@
.# , / $ $ ` $ ' # - # # ' +
. # # % % "1" @ + $ " 0 # ' , , .#
/ 4 , % ` $ - 0 + ,
%# K ? 4 4 $ 4 !
? H . " # # / , + ' $ # "% # " ' .#
! 4 / ? 1 % # " / , @ $ #
. @ 1, $ 8 / ! # #
' $ $ 1, / # # & / $ " $ 3 , $ " # $ / ' / '
% $ % # % ' $ + / " $ # ' "%
3 / / "! % / # + 0 `
$ $ ' ! Y / # % + & / # #
. % / ' / , n % 4 # " 9# , ' : ' / ' JEDD , `
% , / ' + "% $ 3 / # ' 0 / + JEDT
, $! ! % ' + " 0 @.# 1 &1 " # % '
*5 ,5/ " # % 6# ! 3 ! 4 & C - ! 0
' ? 3 / 9 4 % ' ! 4
K : / # 4 #
' 9 / ' 4 # $! - W ;
. ? K U ($, # $ ' %
0 / + 5A 3 I ` * % @.# / " 4
JEDT % / 3 , $ # & + / / % `
' / & " / + $ 1# 5
4 0 # ? ? # 1# ! /
?) QW 1' " 1# ' $ +
4 / 3. , $, , / @ % , / `
' / $ @ " $ " 1# % $ %
, / ' .# ! & ! # # % (/ ' # #
+ ' a# / ` $ / # , $, /
+ + 4 4 * 4 , ' $, $,
3 / ' % % " , # 9
3 % / F 4'
? * 1' & & 1 &1 8 4 `
/ ' # # $ % # (&1 ' # , # #A4 @
@ # + $ % + , 1 " #
% % / # , + * , @ % 1# . 4 % % #A
$ 4 / + % % # , # / & $ " . , I $ A
, / % + 0 0' G GG $ # ! 4 4 # , X' N Q
8 ! $ ' $! # % 5
, + 1" # 3 . # / + + W
' 0 / " # / # / A # , " 4 / `
% / + / " $ % # / # 2 4 ' + " 5 !
% % Y / $ % $ % $ % $ + ' . W
+ # 4 " ' # / 0 # - # # $ " / " $ %
$ % , / # ' $ # % #+ # & $ " % #
+ $ ' $ # , # $ % @
+ # # 0 / # / 3 & 4 +
" $ ' # % 1 + / # $ # / ' + ' # 6
/
W . J GG/6LWU 4 0) % 9 / 4 4
* 2) 0 4 * %/ 4 (4 * +9 4 ' / '
$ N 0 N / $ W
! 0 S
1 0 16 + " $ $ 0
- $ / ' / 1 '

$' < JPD $ <'

/ ' ' % +' - % $ ' ' ' #' , / ' '
#A' 0 ' ' $ "' b / ' ' #' ' " %' #' + ' 8 @ ' 5'
' $ ' ' " / ' ' ' / +' #' ' ' ' ' / #' ' #% ' + A'
% $ ' '' " ? @ ' / ' ' ' '' ' ' ' " #' ' #' ' 5
5 - X ' ' 4 / + ' b / ' / ' ! ' ' ' [(' ' * '
5["Q' . KT' #' ' ' ' T+' . @A ' ' ' _ETD' , ' ' 9 ' ' ' '
[' ' P % $ ' ! ' ' #' ' ' + ' ' " " ' [PJ< ' , ' ' ' 0 / + ' ' JP_E
#$' ' ' ' 4 ' W $ ' ' ' ' ' 0 +' , ' A'
* ' a=A ' ' % #' #' ! ' @ ' ' ' ' % ' ' ' # X ' d* # AAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAA " %eeeeee e' ' eeeeee ' ' ' % ' +' ' + ' ' W \ PW K
'' ' ' ' ' '' ' #' 7 + ' ''% ' #' ' ? ' !
M H ' , ' ' : ' / ' ' JPP' ' , ' ' 0 K 0 ' % ' ' 3 A' '
0 / + A I ' JPP# ' ' 1" ' '' '' ' " ' " / ' #' ' Y / ' #' 0 +'
'' ' (' ' ' ' 8 . ' / ' % ' 0 @ ' $' ' a# ' ' ' " +'
* #' 1 4 ' # # 1# ' ' ' '' " ' ''. ' ' # ' #' $ ' @' '
$ %&& 5 % 0' 9 ' ' $ '' '' ' ' % ' + + #' ' ' ' " ' + ' % ' ' " %' ' 9 ' ' % +'% ' ' , " , / - #' + 0 +' #' , / + ' $' , @' ' % '' '
! ' 5' , ' / # ' # 0+' ' / #' ' / ' ' ' 9 #' !9 ' % 5 ' '
<Q' A' V' #' ' ' ' ' ' / ' .#' ' ' 0 ' . 55 ?5 ' * 5)
- ' ! ' " ' / ' ' $' ' 4 K ' %' #' 3 ' '' ' $ ' ' + ' $ ' $ ' , A'
$' ' ' ' ' 8 / F / ' - #' $ / A' ' % #' $ ' + ' ' $ ' #' " A'
/ ' ' ' / #' $ W' & ' & ! ' '' ' * / A' #' $' % ' #' # '' $ ' ' ' #
0 5 ' 0'' S ' ' 00' ' ' % H' ' ' ' 0 ' '' ' $ ' ' ' ' '' #' - A! 0
0 .#' ' $' ' ' ' 4' #' #' ' ' - #' ' ' ' ' ''
9 + $ ' / ' & @ + 0 +' ' ' ' ' (#' A'
' " ' ' ' " , , ' '' / # #' ' % #' ' ' 3 $ ' ' % ' ' #' $ # '
' ' ' $, + / ' '' ' #' - ' ' ! ' + 0 ' $' ' ' ' ' / T K' W0' '
% ' ' + ' ' ' ' ' ''- ' ' ' ' / #' " ' ' ' (/ #' ''
' $' % ' 3 ' - #' @' ! ' ' #' ' ' 3 ' ' 1 / #' , ' '
' $' ' ' (#' '' 3 $ ' ' 1 ' / $ / ' ' ' ' '' 0 ' ' I='
' 0 ' @ ' ' ' ' ' # $ ' A' #' ' - ' #' / #' ' : + A'
>' #' ' ' 8 ' ' * ' ''1# ' ' ' ' / " ' 0 +' ' , ' ' '' '
' ' ' ' + + #' $' ' ' ' @ ' ' ' #0 #' + ' #' ' ' ''% 9'
'' - ' % ' ' 4' ' #' $ 0' ' ' $ " #' 0 ' '" ' ''
' ' 3 ' % ' ' (#' #' #' ' ' ' % ' #' ' ' $ ' '
! '' & ' ' ' ' ' ' $ ' ' 0 $ + +' ' '' ' 1 / #' % ' ' ' * ' % ' 2 ' 0 ' # ' , ' ' - #' $ + ' " ' $'
! K4' 8 ' # #' 8 $' ' # ' 3 $ ' % ' ' #' $ # ' ' $' '
! ' % ' ' >(. ' % ' % ' ' / $ / ' 3 '
1 ' ' 3 ' '' ' '' ' 4'' - #' ' ' ' ' $ #'9 Q5 I_ ' ' ' ' !0 '
;' ' " $ ' #' ' + 0 ' $' ' " " ' '' '' ' #' _EPH ' , ' ' : ' / ' ''
! ' 1' / ' #' ' "' ' + ' ' $ JPES ' , ' ' ' 0 / + ' ' JPJJ' / '
WX & ' 3 ' % 0 ' # #' ' Y / ' ' ' ' # +' ' ' ' #' 0 # ' , + '
I ' ' '' - / #' ' #' 0 #' ' ' ' ' ' ' ' % ' $ " V'
% ' ' ' + ' $ ' $ ' ' ' ' %5 "D6ICDK' $ " .#' ' ! '
;' 0 ' ' ' / ' ' % ' ' + #' ' ' ' ' $ + ' # ' ' ' ' 9# ' #
8 $ ' % ' , + #' $' ' + ' ' % ' ' 0 ' ' ' ' 0A'
' ! ' ' ' " / ' ' $ ' 3! 0 ' ' +' , ' f' ' ' / ' : ' , ' % '' #V' , /
' ' J ' ' %' ' ' 4' % / #' , ' ' + ' '' ' (#' "" +' ' ' '
%' 'W' / #' 9 $ ' % 95' ' / ' '' ' # ' $ $ # #' ' ' / '
% ' % ' #' $ + ' ' '' ' ' ' $' ' ' ' ' #' , ' $ ' / , $ ' 0 ' '
$ ' , / ' @ ' % ' ' (' ' ' '' ' ' ' F ' / $ #' ' ' ' ' JPJ5' : %' ' ' % ' ' ' V' ' # ' ' #' ' / ' ' #' ' $ ' $ ' ' A ' % ' # 0 .#' ' ' ' + 0 ' $ 0 ' ' , ' $ + ' '' 3 ' ' ' ' '' ' #'
' ' 5 ' ' ' ' ' & ' H' % ' ' #V "D ' , ' ' : / ' ' ' ; : N' , ' ' '
#' / ' 1 ' % ' ' ' ' / $ $ ' 0 / 5 ' [$ "
/ ' % ' @.#' '' ' 2] ' % ' @' & ' ' ' ' ' ' '' ' ' ' , ' % ' #' % / #' 0 ' $ # ' #' _JES ' , ' ' : ' / ' ' ' 5CX
' ' ' '' ' ' , / ' - #' '' ' #' $' % ' , ' ' ' 0 / + ' A# ' JT5S' ' (#' `
2' + ' 3 + / ' ' ' % ' , + #' % #' ' 0 ' % ' ! ! ' #'
' ' ' ' ' ' 8 $ ' % ' 0 ' $ ' % ' : ' #' $ 5 ' ' $
! ' ' ' ' #' / #' ' 9' ' + #' ' ' ! ' ' ' '
= ' ' ' " .#' ' & ' , % ' % ' , #' ' ,
, ' #' ' % ' ' $ ' $ ' , ' ' ' ' % ! ! ' '' ' ' ' Q

[illegible]

#_J=9 3 + , / 2 ' % $ " / $ AW6
+ ' ' 0 # % 8 ' ! ' % @ A
&% 0 QX ' % ' , $ ' ! T %
' # _JD= , ' : JT== + ! # ' % H
, ' 0 / 5 9 : T=P % ' 0 3 ' 0 % $ V %
' ! # # ' % 0 # 0 " /
- 0 ! % # ! ! 1 / + # + `
% " , , , 9. , / , ` $ @ # # , A
+ ' $ # # $ Y / # % ! - + >
$ / # " " % / # 0 0 # / ' H
' ' ' " " # , ' ! " # ! 4 " + $A
3 " ' $, # , 5 - # $ #
- + $ % $ QX , " 4 " / $
, ' , / + ' $ + $ 9 ' % + = % / #
' % + / 0 ' # ' + + # $ ' 0 / '
(# % 4 ' / # $ + %
/ # " # + + 0 + ` 2 4 ' $ $ # ! T # 8 `
/ , 1 $ # # A ! 9 - # `
" / ' P / % / ' 3 9 % #
' 3 " % # # # & !
1 , & $ + , ' '
' $ 8 # # * % (' ! ! # # ' $
0 # " / , + + & # ' $ 3 " 5 1 1
& 3 / , ' % $ # , ' " / % " $
3 " " ' / W & , # &
/ # # @ 0 5 % # $ + / %
Y / 0 ' ' 0 3 / # % 0 ` / + 0 , ' 7 + `
+ # 1 @ 3 1 # ! , / ` 4 / + @ " ' # ,
% ' # $ / # ' % % , / , $ &
+ / ' $ / 3 # $ % ' + , 0
! " # 0 + $ ' , M + % " ' #
C 221 * + % # ' T % # / & , +
/ ' * % # / " ' / # ' # #
, + Z= $ % ` ' / # , , % 1
% % $ $ + $ $ 1 / : # , $ + (#
3 - T ! / # - $ ' # ' ' 0 + ' A
% 3 / # / # , # A $. % 0 # & E
' # a # , / + " ? 4 / + ' # % 5 % $ $ # `
' , - # Q# / + & + 0 # 1 / # , '
' Y / ! @ 4 3 " # ' $ # 0 V # " " `
$ # # # + # # ' 0 0 / ' %
1 % @ 4 2 ! T T # 4 , / ' % " 0 ' +
5 # % $ #) , % $! T & @ 4 - / # # 0 `
WJDT , # ' ! O . ? * # - / # # + %
. K ! 5 b . / ' ? I / # % 9 % / / % ' & ! # %
" # ' 3 " % A $ # , ' 0 0 $ $ # / `
0 / + A , % ! # ' + A + $ $ # ' $. # ,
i ' , / # ' > , . # % % $ % A
0 # / # # # ' 0 / ' 0 # # , 0 # 0 + V
1 ' # # % / % + # % , + # 3 ' / ' / '
W ' # , / # % % W ' ' # $ % % %
! 9 , A 8 # # - 0 " * - % # ' / # , + / # # % +
" / ' # ' # % ' / # ,
(6 & ' 3 " M 9 , $ ' / # , " / #
0 / 9 + A # * 4 , / 0 3 4 ! K % # # " " , , / `
5 X # 1 ' # 0 1 , $ @ % # + % # + , % # % " /
3 ! # 1 " @ % + 5 / # + / # V , / % , + `
$ $ # $ 1 1 " 5 / / % 1 % # 0 #
9 ' ! 4 % # # A 0 $ / % ' # #
C ' $ 3 ' $ / $ 0 # + V # / #
! K / % I $ / , # ' # , , / + '
! T # - # ' ' 2 V , # % # # $ $ #
/ ' ! + , , 6
!
& @ @ , 4 . , , W " 9 , d
> % ? ? . 0 (H 5 6 % % ? - 1
' / # % 3 # 2W % * 1 4 b
b # # % & $

[illegible]

[illegible]

$ <   @ _D D $ <

- % % , / "
:4 , ' # . #, 4" ' " % " #, # 0 / `
4 $ @ 4 #, 4 , # , # % # # 8 '
- # , 4 K 4 / + % ' "" / 5"
/ # / # Q % + # ,
4 $ & 4 ' A # / ! ' $!
@ / , - #. "" $ "" # / "
4 $ # / 1 # 4 0 $ $ # ' A
+A * 0 42 4 + $ " / # A
+ 1Y/ % " # " M @ # $ % % " ,
0 / # % % 4 4 $, # " ' #
% 0 # 55 % , , $ # $
, + # $ M % 1 / # , A/ # # +
, ' % ,9 5 " #@ ! " #
1 # H & , A % # " % ' $ "
4 # 0 +, , + # / # / + $, 0
/ # * # & $ " % , # $ + ' 0 A
3 4 % % , $ " % " / % ' A
'/ 1, $ 3 # & 3 , @ " % , @ # % " * '' # % " 6 $ @
- # R T , 0 $ A 0 + $
$ / ` - # ' % # K!' ! 2 ?
'/ + $ W / # , 4 4
0 / 2 4 9=
! * KH - #' * 4V
% / # A , 4 - !0P
' # " & $ " ' $ & 1 $ A X A
* # , @ 1 % # 4 +
# 3 , ` ' A - #
+ + 3 & 5" $ $ #
* # 2 ? 4 3 + $ % / # &/ 4 0 # / +3 + %
@ 3 + $ + # / " ' $A ! # 0 # # % " #
# # @ 0 " # / " # '' F /
$ % , /' # 2 ?4 0 ## # ' 0 / $
" # # $ / / Y/ & & / ' / # $ `
, @ % # , * % A @
! 4 " '/ " / " 3 + 0 # 3 @
& # 3 4 % Y/ # ! # # 0 # # $ # A
& $ " , / * ! " / ` ' # $ % + /
16 0 / % # $ + # $ + $ ##
% $ # " # / # & ` " / # # $ $ # $ A
% # % / # 4 0 ` " # , / $ $ / %
" & $ " $ # / " # ' " #
* ' # # 0 ' + / " " ' / # '' / V
&/ + / # # ' % # # %
KRF % ' + ' $ + # , 0 #, $ 5 # $
, 0 # ' $ $ " , $ # '
% 5, Y $ % # # , / $ $ $ # / # # 9 #
& $ " & / ! $ " # # + ' % % & / - # `
$ $! + + # 0 # '/ / '/ [
$, 3 " / " # 1 $ ` + ' 3 + 0 ' !1Y
" & $ " *
* , / , ! 0 " ` , + @ ' $ % + /
, , $ 8 # ## # c * # " / + %
* 44 / # , " # $ / / *
3 , 9. # + ! $ " ' $ + / "
- 0 " # / # , / @ % #+ # , $
& / ' 5 ! & * I : "" "8 %
" # - # $ $ 1, ,' + # 2
. 0) $ / " ' !
& (# '% # ` 8 % * W & , 0
2 4 4 4 " U O 4 + ,
? 4 S $ % ! # % `
$ $ 4 0 , ' 0 5Q # 8O 2 4 9

! 1# $ 0 + ' , #
$ % & ! # ' ( ) # * % + % W 4 . K
% , % -

'8 #' "8 ', / '% ' '% ' 4' #' " $5' 0 #' ' ' + ' '
% ' , '& ' ' ' ' '8 / ' 1# ' " $' ' ' @ #' $ '% 5 A'
' $ ' / ' " ' / / ' '8 ' 0 +' 4' ' $ +' ' - #
"' ! ' $ ' , ' % #' ' ' , ' ' 5' & '8 ' " ' / ' 0 ' , '
#' #' $' ' '8 #' ' #' " 0 ' + ' ' ' $ $ # ' " '
+' $ ' " ' $ ' ' 0 ' , ' ' + '3 'V' ' ' " ' #'
@ ' ' " ' @ ' % ' ' A' & ' $ ' #' '3 " ' 0 ' " A'
1 , #' ' $ " #' $' ' '3 ' " " ' ['8 '
& ' 'W ' @' " ' 1, ' #' , # ' ' - #. ' $ $ # '
% ' ' #' / ' "% ' ' ! = & ' ' , ' $ ' $ # ' " ' `
' +' ! KH' : / ' ' ' ' ' ' +' $ ' ' ' ' " '
- ' 1 7 +. (, 15ESP_ ' V' #' ' ' #' / " ' ' '3 `
#' ' ' ' $ ' * / $ ' ' ' ' 4 A' ' ' '3 , ' ' ' " ' "# ' '
/ ' " ' ! 4 '3 ' "! 0 9' ' #' ' " ' ' ' + ' 0 '
- ' / " ' ! H' 4 ' " / ` ' ' ' ' / ' 1 ' ' "! '
#' / " ' ' 'T ' " * ' / " '% ' - 4 ' #' ' ' #' " ' # '
' ' ' ' ' ` ' ' $ $ $ #' ' ' ' " 9K'
, ' '8 ' 0 ' ' ' #' ' " ! ' " / ' "' 4' " #' ' '
' ' ' " 4' ' JJJP ' ! 9' , ' ' # ' " / ' #' ' `
KH' & $, '% '# ' 0 #' ' ' + + ' " ' ' ' ' '% # '
' % ' " / ' . ' @ % ' ' #' " ' $' ' " ' " # ' ' / ' "
. '% ' .# ' & ' # ' " ' ' $
3 '% ' ' '0 ' ' #' $ ' ' ' , / / '& ' ' #' "! E
- #' #' 0 '($ " '% ' ' / #' ' ' ' #' ' ' ' ' , ' $, ' #'
" '% ' '% '# " ' #' & ' % '+ '0 ' "'3 ' $ ' 0 '
* 4' 0 ' , ' + ' ' " ' ' ' ' 0 .#' ' ' + #' ' . . 4' '
'& $, ' ' '$ @ ' ' ' ' / ' '#% ' ' +' $ ' ' ' ' #' '
3 + $ + ' ' ' ' , +' ' " ' 5 " ' 4' ! ' #'
* ' * ' #' . " & ' 9' ! ?'P' $ '% ' 0 ' ' ' ' 4' , / ' ' / ' 0 ' ' 0 ' " 0 #' (' #' ' ' (`
* 'G' % ' ' '3 ' + / + '6 ' " ' - # ' " '% 4'
% ' , / #V' #' ' 2 ?4' ' % # ' #' 4 " ' ' 5 #' ' '
+ #' ' ' ' Y / / ' "' 0 ' @ ' $ +' '
& ' " '% ' ' 0 #' ' ' " ' ? ' , ?' #' . T ' '
+ ' ' ' ' ' ' @ " ' ' ' & ' ' $ ' $ # '
% ' @ % ' ' / #' , ' 4 ' #' " ' ' '2 ' #' ' $ ' , #'
0 ' , ' ' . 4' #' 3 + ' ' ` , , ' ' ' + '0 / ' ' ' / ' '
' ' ' ' % 1 1 ' #' % ' 0 ' ! $ #' '% / ' " 9 / # '
' (' ' ' ' ' " ' , / ' 1" ' ' " '% ' ' + '# ' " $ " '
/ " ' * '% '$ @ ' " ' " / ' 1 ' ' ' ' ' + ' " ' ' ' A'
% ' ' / ' / " ' ' / " " ' ' ' ' ' #' % 4 I - 4 ' ! '
'% ' ' " '% ' ! ' #` 0 6W ' ! 4' ' '% 4'
#' ' 0 ' ' #' ' ' . ' 1" @ ' " ' ' ' / $ " ' " ! '
: '0 ' / ' 0 / ' ' ' / ' ' ' - 5 ' ' f' @ ' ' " ' " " '
5A ' ! '# ' #' ' ' ' ' ' ' ' @' "! K4 ' % ' % ' + '
' " ' $ +' ' ' ' % ' #' '+ #' ' ' , # ' # " / ' `
'0 '% ' + #' 1 ' ' " ' ' 5 ' / ' +' '4 $ ' ' 0 ' "! E
W ' ' ' " " ' ' " ' + / ' A' " & ' . 4' @ % ' ' , / ' '
' ' ' ' , +' ' #' % ' ! ' . ' $' ' +' 3 ' #' ' T5 '
#' . ' ' ' 7 +# $' " 0 ' 3' $' ' * 4' # ' ' '
#' ' 1! +' 0 #' ' ! KH' A' #' '& ' ' "1# 'W' #'
(/ @ !0 ' 1% ' ' ' ' " ' "@ ' ' " " ' ' ' 1 , $ ' ' @ ' & ' * ' ' A'
WX6 ' ' ' " ' & ' $ " ' ! 0 ' 1 " " ' "8 '% ' " ' ' '4 # '
'% / 41K ' % '@ %' ! '$ ' " % '3 " ' , 0 'O 4G '% '
, ' ' # '% ' ' . 4' # ' ' + '3 " ' ' , ' ' $ '
%

' ' ' ' ' . ' ' ' ! $! ' #' / 01 2 3 $ # ' 'T' "A KA
4' # $ ' ' _ ' 3AS<S' S<T' ' ' '5 $ #' ' 6 ' 7 8 ' % ' 1# - % ' ' 9' : % " ; '
* , ' & ' 31 $ ' 1# 31 , ' * < ' P' ' JS' JT' Q : % ! ' , = ' ' H 6' 1 # <
, ! $ ' / %# > ' % ' ; ') ' "3 $ ' ! < % ' ? ' '@ A' < ' '51
! $ ' ; % ' A' B ' $' ' 6 ' ! ' ' ' ' # ' C $ ' # ' D : $ #' , # ' E ! ' '
> . 4' , ?' ' ' (' , $' 4' ' ' ' ' !0 ' ' . K ' ' ' '
IF V' ' ' ' " ' ' ' ' & " 3 ' ' ' ' ' ' + 4' ' ' '
4' ' ' * ' ') ' ' * 4'
5 ' : . ! ' , ! $ ' * ! ' 1$' $ $ ' * ' ' % $ < $ < ' ' =1 1< 5 ' - . 2
! ' 1 $ ' 8 ' B
% ' # " * # 1 ' 4' / ' 4d ' ' ' 4! ' 'E % < ' ' ' F) > Q ' ' (' ' 4
4 'N ' ' ' , ?' ' " ' 'H ' - ' * ' ' ' ' 4' ' '
O 8 # ' ' ' ' (! * R ' ' ' , ? ' 7' " , $' ' 4' "

with Abraham. They affirm him to be the Author of the Books which they call Zend *, Pazend, and Vostha, wherein all Points of their Religion are comprehended [y]. But we have said enough of these spurious Books.

ABSALOM, the Son of David, born of Maachah, the Daughter of Talmai, King of Geshur, was, according to the Scripture, the most beautiful Man in all Israel, and had the finest Head of Hair. (2 Sam. xiv. 25.) When he had his Hair cut, which he had once a year, because it was heavy, and incommoded him, it weighed two hundred shekels by the King's weight; which two hundred shekels may be computed to be about one and thirty Ounces, which is indeed pretty extraordinary, but by no means is incredible; since by the relation of Perriwig-makers, there are some Women who have two and thirty ounces of Hair upon their Heads [z]. Absalom had a Sister named Tamar, who also was extremely handsome. Amnon, the Son of David, but not by the same Mother, conceived so violent a Passion for his Sister, that it made him languish away exceedingly. He prevailed with the King to let Tamar come into his chamber, and prepare something for him to eat. While she was there he ravished her, and then dismissed her with Reproach and Shame.

(2 Sam. xiii. In the Year of the World 2972, before J. C. 1028, before the vulgar Æra 1032.) Absalom received her into his House, and resolved to revenge the outrage offered to his Sister. He took no notice of it to Amnon, expecting perhaps that the King his Father should punish so wicked an Attempt. Two years after, Absalom going to a Sheep-shearing at Baal-hazor, near Ephraim, invited the King thither, with all the Royal Family. David excused himself, but, pressed by Absalom's Entreaties, he consented that Amnon and his Brethren should go. When they were warmed with Wine, Amnon, by Absalom's Direction, was assassinated; (In the Year of the World 2974, before J. C. 1026, before the vulgar Æra 1030.) upon which the King's Sons fled immediately to Jerusalem. Absalom, for his part, retired to King Talmai, his Mother's Father in the Country of Geshur: There he continued for three Years, in all which time David gave himself no trouble in pursuing him; but Joab, Absalom's Uncle, observing a Fondness in the King's Heart for his Son, found means by the Interposition of a Woman of Tekoah, who spoke to the King to procure his Consent for Absalom's Return. (2 Sam. xiv. In the Year of the World 2977, before J. C. 1023, before the vulgar Æra 1027.) Absalom came back therefore to Jerusalem, but David would not suffer him to come into his Presence. He continued thus for two Years in Disgrace, at the end of which Time he sent for Joab with a purpose of engaging him to intercede with the King on his behalf; but he refusing to come. Absalom commanded his Servants to set fire to a Field of Barley belonging to him, which he being informed of, he came and made his complaints to Absalom: (In the Year of the World 2979, before J. C. 1021, before the vulgar Æra 1025.) Absalom confessed that this was done by his Orders, with the hopes only of having an opportunity thereby to desire his Mediation with his Father, to intreat the King intirely to forgive him, and admit him to his Presence. Joab went, and related all that had passed to David, who order'd Absalom to be introduced, immediately embraced him, and received him into favour as before.

After this Absalom set up a magnificent Equipage, looking upon himself as presumptive Heir to the Crown; (2 Sam. xv.) and every morning he came constantly to the Palace-gate, calling all those who had any business, and came to demand justice of the King, saying, Whence are you? and when they had reported their Business, he told them, Your Matters indeed seem good and right, but there is no Man deputed of the King to hear you: O that I were made Judge in the Land, that every Man which hath any Suit or Cause, might come unto me, and I would do him justice! And when any Man came nigh to do him reverence, he put forth his Hand, and took him and kissed him. He was thus for four Years preparing the Minds of the People, and winning by degrees upon them; and when he thought he might declare himself, he desired permission from the King to go to Hebron, under pretence of performing some Vow there, which he had made during his Abode at Geshur. (The Text reads 40 Years, but several Latin MSS. Josephus, and Theodoret, read 4 only. This happened in the Year of the World 2980, before J. C. 1020, before the vulgar Æra 1024.)

He went therefore to Hebron, attended by two hundred Men, who followed him in the Simplicity of their Hearts, without having the least Knowledge of his wicked Design. At the same time he sent particular Persons, whom he had made his own intirely, throughout all the Tribes of Israel, with Orders to sound the trumpet the Religion of Abraham. —— Not only the Jews, Magians, and Mahometans, but the Sabians, and also the Indians, all challenge him to themselves, at the great Patriarch and Founder of their several Sects, every one of them pretending that their Religion is the same which Abraham professed, and by his Reformation established among you; and to restore this Reformation was all that Zorastres, Mahomet, and the Author of the Sabian Sect, whoever he was, pretended to.

* Dr. Prideaux calls this Book Zendavista, and by contraction Zend. The Vulgar he says pronounce it Zundavestow and Zund. The Word originally signifies a Fire-kindler, which Name the Impostor gave it, because, as he pretended, all that would read this Book and meditate thereon, might from thence, as from a Fire-kindler, kindle in their Hearts the Fire of all true Love for God and his holy Religion. —— This Book Zoroastres pretended to have received from Heaven, as Mahomet his Alcoran, and in every Oratory and Fire-Temple a Copy of it is kept at this Day in the old Persian Language, out of which at certain stated times the Priests read a Portion of it to the People. Prid. Connect. &c. P. 1. B. iv.

[y] Herbelot's Bibliot. Orient. p. 16.

[z] See M. le Pelletier of Roan, his Dissert. upon the Weight of Absalom's Hair. The Journal of Trevoux, 1702, p. 176.

ABSALOM'S TOMB.

pet, and publish every where that Absalom was King at Hebron. Hereupon there was very soon a great resort of People to him, and Absalom was acknowledged by the greatest part of Israel. David was informed of Absalom's Revolt, and that all Israel was of his Party; David therefore and his Officers fled from Jerusalem, leaving no other Guard in the Palace but the King's Wives. Absalom, without loss of time, went directly to Jerusalem, where he was received without any Resistance. Abitophel advis'd him publickly to abuse his Father's Concubines, that all the People might comprehend by this Action that the Breach was without hopes of Reconciliation, and might continue firm to him, without any thoughts of returning to their Obedience. (2 Sam. xvi.)

At the same time Abitophel proposed to Absalom that some Troops might be sent in pursuit of David, that so he might be quite oppress'd before he had leisure to look about him, and gather strength; but Husbai, David's Friend, who pretended to be of Absalom's Party, diverted him from this Council, and gave notice of it secretly to David, advising him to pass the Jordan with all diligence, and throw himself into some place of Defence, where he might be able to secure himself. David therefore retired to Mahanaim, which was before the Residence of Ishbosheth, the Son of Saul, and there received several Reinforcements from those who continued faithful to him. (2 Sam. xvii.)

Absalom the next day marched against David with all his Forces, and having cross'd the River Jordan, dispofed himself to attack the King his Father. David on his part order'd his Troops to march out of the City under the Command of Joab; and both Sides engaging, Absalom's Army was routed, and cut in pieces: twenty thousand were killed upon the Spot, the rest saved themselves by flight. Absalom was mounted on a Mule, and as he fled into the Forest of Ephraim, and was passing under a large Oak with very thick Boughs, his Head was intangled in the Branches, and his Mule going on swiftly, he hung between Heaven and Earth. (2 Sam. xviii.)

A Soldier seeing him in this Condition, gave intelligence of it to Joab, who ask'd him why he did not kill him; and the Man answered, Tho' I should receive a thousand Shekels of Silver in mine Hand, yet would I not put forth mine Hand against the King's Son; for in our hearing the King charged thee and Abishai, saying, Beware that none touch the young Man Absalom. Then said Joab, I may not tarry thus with thee; and he took three darts in his Hand, and thrust them through the Heart of Absalom. And while he was yet breathing, and hanging on the Oak, ten young Men that bare Joab's Armour, compassed about, and smote him and slew him. His Body was carried off, and thrown into a great Pit which was there in the Wood, and a large Heap of Stones was laid upon him.

Now Absalom in his Life-time had erected a Pillar in the King's Valley, saying, I have no Son, and this shall be a Monument to perpetuate my Name. He called the Pillar therefore after his own name, and it is called unto this day Absalom's Place. This is what the Author of the Books of Samuel tells us. There is a Monument shewn at present Eastward of Jerusalem, in the valley of Jehosaphat, which is said to be this of Absalom's. After the death of Absalom, the Scripture says, They took him, and cast him into a great Pit in the Forest (of Ephraim, where the Battle was fought) and laid a very great Heap of Stones upon him, &c. (2 Sam. xviii. 17.) From hence it might be concluded that he remained buried under these Stones; but we may believe with more probability, that David, who lamented him with such excessive grief, remov'd him from thence, in order to have him laid in the Sepulchre belonging to the Kings, or perhaps some where about the place where the Monument which is still at this day shewn to Travellers, was dug in a Rock.

It is a little Chamber wrought with a Chisel out of one piece of Rock, standing apart at some little distance from the Mountain, being a Square of eight paces from out to out. The inside of this Cabinet is all plain, but the outside is adorn'd with some Pilasters of the same kind of Stone. The upper part or Covering is made in the form of a Conick Pyramid, pretty high and large, with a kind of Flower-pot upon the Top. The whole is about four or five Fathoms in height; the Pyramid is composed of several Stones, but the Monument itself is square, and cut out of one Block of Stone.

This may be very well called the Pillar or Hand of Absalom; for the Hebrews give every thing the name of Pillar which is set up for a Monument, and call every thing by the name of Hand which is made use of to shew and preserve the Memory of any thing. For example, that which Saul erected on Mount Carmel, to perpetuate the Remembrance of his Victory against the Amalekites, is called Hand. (1 Sam. xv. 12.) And Moses, in the Book of Exodus, seems to allude to something like this, when after the Battle with the Amalekites, he says, that the Hand is upon the Throne of the Lord, as a Monument of their Malice, and of the Vengeance which God by reason thereof, would one day take on them. (Ex. xvii. 16.) Josephus, speaking of Absalom's Monument[a], says it was a marble Column, distant tant about two furlongs, or three hundred paces from Jerufalem. Travellers affure us, that all who pafs by Abfalom's Pillar throw a Stone at it, to fhew theft abhorrence of the Son's Rebellion againft his Father. There is fo great a Heap of Stones near it that they almoft hide the lower part of this Monument.

[a] Joseph. Antiq. l. 7. c. 9.

2 Sam. xviii. 18. The Scripture feems to intimate, that when this Prince erected it, he had no Children. It is faid however four Chapters before that he had three Sons and one Daughter of exceeding beauty, whofe name was Tamar: But there is fome probability that thefe Children, at leaft the Sons, did not live; for there are perfons who believe that Tamar his Daughter married Rehoboam, King of Judah. The death of Abfalom happened in the year of the World 2980, before Jefus Chrift 1020, before the vulgar Æra 1024.

2 Sam. xiv. 27.

Obfervations upon Abfalom's Defeat by David's Army in the Foreft of Ephraim. 2 Sam. xviii.

The order and difpofition of the two Armies, as defcribed by the Defigner, do not agree entirely with my notions of this matter. The Action was in a foreft, where the Troops were ranged, not according to the order ufual at that time, but according to the nature of the Ground, which muft have been a rule to the Combatants. Here one would believe that the Battle was fought in a plain. The Army marched in order of Battle againft Ifrael, fays the Scripture, and the Battle was in the wood of Ephraim; which proves that there were fome few trees in this place, where formerly there had been an Engagement, wherein Gideon got the better of Zeb and Zebah. Here is a paffage which deferves our Obfervation: Confiderato David populo fuo, conftituit fuper eos Tribunos & Centuriones. David having reviewed his People, fet Tribunes and Centurions over them. In this there was nothing new; the Jewifh Armies, as well as thofe of other Afiaticks, were divided into Regiments, and thefe into Companies, and the Companies were fubdivided into three parts. David was not the firft who introduced this difcipline, and thefe Subdivifions among his troops, the Captains over hundreds, and Commanders of thoufands, whom the Vulgate calls Tribunos & Centuriones. This would induce me to believe that David had been deferted by the greateft part of his Forces and principal Officers, who were gone over to Abfalom's Party; fo that this Prince was obliged to levy a new Army, to diftribute it into Regiments of a thoufand, which he fplit into Companies of an hundred each, which proves that his Army was much more numerous than Jofephus [b] allows, who tells us that it confifted of no more than four thoufand men. Dom Calmet is of Grotius's opinion, which is oppofite to that of Jofephus: For, fays he, David never would have hazarded a Battle, if his Army had been fo much inferior in number to that of his Enemies. This however does not prove that he actually did not run this hazard, becaufe we every day fee fmall Armies beat others that are more numerous, when they happen to be commanded by able Generals; and Joab, who was a very great Captain, risked very little by encountring Generals of much lefs experience and capacity for Command. I am very well perfuaded that David's Army was a great deal inferior to that of the Rebels. The Scripture fays nothing of the difpofition of the two Armies in the Foreft; it only tells us that David marched in order of Battle againft Ifrael. The wood and the nature of the Country would fcarce have permitted him to draw up in a parallel line: it is my opinion that they engaged in Bodies and fmall Detachments; and as David's Army was doubtlefs not by half fo ftrong as the other; he muft have left large intervals between the feveral Bodies, becaufe they fought independently of one another, by reafon of the extraordinary depth of the Files, and particularly when they were fo far exceeded on their wings, without troubling themfelves about being broken, whatever intervals they left between them. Abfalom was defeated, and his Army cut in pieces, and twenty thoufand Men were left upon the fpot. I fhould not be furprized to find that four thoufand Men, to keep to Jofephus's computation, fhould overcome a great Army, but I fhould be fcarce able to comprehend how fo fmall a number could kill twenty thoufand.

2. Absalom, of Jerufalem, induced Manahem, the Son of Judas the Galilæan, to think of making himfelf King of the Jews [c], in the twelfth year of Nero's Reign, and the fixty fixth of the vulgar Æra.

3. Absalom, Uncle and Father-in-law to Ariftobulus, King of the Jews. He was made prifoner by Pompey at the Siege of Jerufalem [d], in the year of the World 3941, before Jefus Chrift 59, before the vulgar Æra 63.

ABSALON, the Ambaffador of Judas Maccabæus to Lyfias, General of Antiochus's Army, who was firnamed Eupator, 2 Macc. xi. 17.

ABSTINENCE. Many are of opinion that the Men who lived in the firft Ages of the World, before the Deluge, abftained from Wine and Flefh meats, becaufe the Scripture exprefly takes notice that Noah after the Deluge began to plant a Vineyard, and that God permitted him to eat Flefh; whereas he gave Adam no Gen. ix. 20.
other food than Herbs and the Fruits of the Earth. But the contrary opinion is Gen. ii. 16. iii. 17, 18, 19.
fupported

[b] Jofeph. Antiq. l. 7. c. 9. [c] Jofeph. de Bello, l. 2. c. 33. [d] Jofeph. Antiq. l. 14. c. 8.

ſupported by many learned Interpreters, who believe that the Men who lived before the Deluge denied themſelves none of the pleaſures of wine and good cheer, and the Scripture in few words intimates enough to convince us to what an exceſs of Corruption they were grown, when it tells us, that all Fleſh had corrupted his way upon the Earth; [Gen. vi. 11, 12.] and that if God had not permitted them to uſe either Fleſh or Wine, they wou'd have taken very little notice of his Prohibition.

The Law ordained that the Prieſts ſhould forbear the uſe of Wine during all the time of their being imployed in the ſervice of the Temple. [Lev. x. 9.] The ſame Abſtinence was enjoined the Nazarites for the whole time of their Nazariteſhip or Separation. [Numb. vi. 3.] The Jews abſtain from ſeveral ſorts of Animals, whereof we have ſpoken under the general Article ANIMALS. St. Paul ſays that Wreſtlers abſtain from all things, in order to obtain a corruptible Crown; [1 Cor. ix. 25.] that is to ſay, they abſtain from every thing which may weaken them: And in his Epiſtle to Timothy, he blames certain Hereticks who condemned Marriage, and the uſe of thoſe Meats which God hath created. [1 Tim. iv. 3.] Among the primitive Chriſtians ſome denied themſelves the uſe of ſuch Meats as were prohibited by the Law, and Fleſh that had been ſacrificed to Idols. Others looked with contempt upon theſe Acts of Forbearance, as unprofitable, and made uſe of that liberty which Jeſus Chriſt had procured for his Followers. St. Paul has laid down very wiſe rules as to this particular, whereof we have an account in his Epiſtles to the Corinthians and Romans. [1 Cor. viii. 7, 10. & Rom. xiv. 1, 2, 3.]

The Council of Jeruſalem, which was held by the Apoſtles, enjoins Believers converted from Heatheniſm to abſtain from Blood, from Meats ſtrangled, from Fornication and Idolatry. [Acts xv. 20.]

St. Paul requires the faithful to abſtain from all appearance of Evil; [1 Theſſ. v. 22.] and with much ſtronger reaſon from every thing which is really evil, and contrary to Religion and Piety.

ABUBUS, the Father of Ptolomee, by whoſe procurement his Father-in-law Simon Maccabæus was aſſaſſinated in the Caſtle of Docus, 1 Mac. xvi. 11, 12, &c. In the Year of the World 3869. before J. C. 131. before the vulgar Æra 135.

ABUMA, a City of Judah, the place of Zebudah's Birth, the Mother of King Jehoiakim[a]. But in the ſecond Book of Kings this City is called Rumah. [2 Kings xxiii. 36.]

ABYSS, or Deep. Hell is called by this name in Scripture; as are likewiſe the deepeſt parts of the Sea, and the Chaos, which in the beginning of the World was covered with Darkneſs, and upon which the Spirit of God moved, Gen. i. 2. [Luke viii. 31. Rom. x. 7. Rev. ix. 1. xi. 7. &c. Gen. vii. 11. Ex. xv. 5. & alibi paſſim.]

The ancient Hebrews, as well as the generality of the Eaſtern People at this day, were of opinion that the Abyſs, the Sea and Waters encompaſſed the whole Earth; that the Earth was as it were immerſed, and floating upon the Abyſs, almoſt, ſay they, like a Water-melon ſwimming upon and in the Water, which covers a ſmall moiety of it. Farther, they believed that the Earth was founded upon the Waters, or at leaſt that it had its Foundation on the Abyſs. [Pſ. xxxiii. 2. xxxv. 6.] Under theſe Waters, and at the bottom of this Abyſs, the Scripture repreſents the Giants to be groaning and ſuffering the puniſhment of their Sin: There the Rephaims are confined, [Job xxv. 5.] thoſe old Giants, who when they were living made the People round about them tremble. Laſtly, in theſe dark Dungeons it is, that the Prophets deſcribe to us the Kings of Tyre, Babylon, and Egypt to be lying down and buried, yet alive and expiating the guilt of their pride and cruelty. [Prov. xi. 18. ix. 18. xxi. 16. Pſ. lxxxvii. 11. lxx. 20. Iſai. xxvi. 14. Iſai. xiv. Ezek. xxviii. 10. xxxi. 18. xxxii. 19.]

Theſe depths are the abode of Devils and wicked Men: I ſaw, ſays St. John in the Revelations, a Star fall from Heaven, and to him was given the key of the bottomleſs Pit. And he opened the bottomleſs Pit, and there aroſe a ſmoke out of it, as the ſmoke of a great furnace which obſcured the Sun and Air; and there came out of the ſmoke locuſts which ſcattered themſelves over the whole Earth.... And they had a King over them which is the Angel of the bottomleſs Pit, whoſe name is the Deſtroyer. [Rev. ix. 1, 2, 11.] And in another place, the Beaſt is repreſented to us as aſcending out of the bottomleſs pit, and making War againſt the two Witneſſes of God. [Rev. xi. 7.] Laſtly, the Angel of the Lord deſcends from Heaven with the key of the bottomleſs Pit, and a great chain in his hand. He laid hold on the Dragon that old Serpent, which is the Devil and Satan, and caſt him into the bottomleſs Pit, and ſhut him up, and ſet a ſeal upon him, that he ſhould deceive the nations no more till the thouſand years ſhould be fulfilled; and after that he ſhould be looſed a little ſeaſon. [Rev. xx. 1, 3.]

Fountains and Rivers, in the opinion of the Hebrews, are derived from the Abyſs or Sea. They iſſue from thence thro' inviſible channels, and return thither thro' others of their own forming upon the Earth. [Eccl. i. 7.] At the time of the Deluge the depths below, or the waters of the Sea, broke down their Banks, the fountains forced their Springs, and ſpread over the Earth, while at the ſame time the Cataracts of Heaven were opened, and overflowed the whole World. [Gen. viii. 11.]

The Abyſs which covered the Earth in the

[a] Joſeph. Antiq. l. 14. c. 8.

the beginning of the World, and was put in agitation by the Spirit of God, or by Gen. i. 2. an impetuous Wind, this Abyss was so called by way of anticipation, because it afterwards composed the Sea, and the Waters of the Abyss issued from it, and were formed by the flowing of it: or if you please, the Earth sprung up out of the midst of this Abyss, like an Island rising out of the Sea, and appearing suddenly to our Eyes, after having been for a long time conceal'd under water.

ACABARES or Chabares, was a Castle or City situated upon a Rock, which Josephus fortified during the War between the Jews and Romans[t].

Gen. x. 10. ACCAD, a City built by Nimrod, the situation whereof is not very well known. The Septuagint read it Archad; whereupon it is conjectured that it was situated upon the River Argad in the Sittacene.

ACCHO, called since Ptolemais, lay north of Mount Carmel, with a Harbour to the Sea. It fell to the Tribe of Asher, Judg. i. 31. vide & Jos. xix. 25 in Græco. upon the division. They who were employed in the holy Wars called it Acra. The River Belus falls into the Mediterranean at the foot of Accho, towards the North of this City. The Israelites would Jud. i. 31. not extirpate the Inhabitants of Accho; and it continued in the hands of the Canaanites, or Phœnicians. It is often mentioned in the Books of the Maccabees under the name of Ptolemais.

ACELDAMA, or rather Chakel-dam[g], Mat. xxvii. 8. Acts i. 19. the inheritance or portion of Blood; by this name was that Field called which the Priests purchased with the thirty pieces of Silver that had been given to Judas Iscariot, as the price of Jesus Christ's Blood. Judas having brought this Money back into the Temple, and the Priests not thinking it was lawful to make use of it for the service of so holy a Place, because it was the price of Blood, they bought a Potter's Field with it to be a Burying-place for Strangers. This Field was shewn in St. Jerom's time South of Jerusalem; and is still at this day shewn to Travellers. The place is very small, and covered with an arched roof, under which the Bodies that are there deposited, are, they say, consumed in less than three or four days. Drutmar, a Monk of Corbie, says, that in his time there was an Hospital in this place for the entertainment of French Pilgrims, in their Journey to the Holy Land.

ACHAIA, a Province of Greece, whereof Corinth was the Capital. St. Paul Acts xviii. 12. preached at Corinth, and in Achaia. The Acts of St. Andrew relate how he suffered Martyrdom in the same Province.

ACHAICUS, a Disciple of St. Paul's, whom this Apostle recommended in a peculiar manner to the Corinthians. We know nothing particular of Achaicus's 1 Cor. xvi. 15, 17. Life. He, with Stephanus and Fortunatus, was the Bearer of St. Paul's first Epistle to the Corinthians, in the 56th Year of J. C.

ACHAN, the Son of Carmi, of the Tribe of Judah, having discovered a Scarlet Cloak, an Ingot of Gold, and two hundred Shekels of Silver among the Spoils of Jericho, took and concealed them, against the express prohibition of God, who had cursed the City of Jericho, and devoted it to ruin, without reserving the least thing belonging to it. Some days Josh. vi. 17. after Joshua sent three thousand Men to take the little Town of Ai, which was Josh. vii. 1, 2, 3. three or four Leagues distant from Jericho. But they were charged by those of Ai, and obliged to fly. However, the loss was not great, thirty six only of the Israelites being killed in the Action; but notwithstanding their loss was so inconsiderable, they were much discouraged. In the Year of the World 2553, before J. C. 1447, before the vulgar Æra 1451. Joshua and the Elders rent their Clothes, and put dust upon their Heads[*], crying to the Lord, and conjuring him not to forsake his People in the midst of their Enemies. Then the Lord said unto Joshua, Get thee up, why liest thou upon thy face? Israel hath sinn'd, and they have also transgressed my Covenant; for they have taken of the accursed thing, they have stolen and dissembled also, and they have put it even amongst their own Stuff: Therefore I will be with you no more, unless ye destroy the accursed from among you. Up, sanctify the People against to morrow, the lot shall discover him who is guilty of this Crime, and he shall be burnt, with all that belongs to him.

The next day therefore Joshua assembled all the Tribes of Israel, and having cast lots, the lot fell upon the Tribe of Judah, then upon the Family of Zarhi, then upon the House of Zabdi, and last of all upon the Person of Achan; to whom Joshua said, My Son give glory unto the Lord, confess your fault, and declare what you have done, without concealing any thing. Achan replied, It is true that I have sinned against the Lord, and look what I have done. Having seen among the spoils a scarlet Cloak, and two hundred Shekels in Silver, with an Ingot of Gold, of fifty Shekels in weight, I took them and laid them in a pit which I dug for this purpose in [t] Lib. 2. de bello, c. 25. Vide & in ejus vita p. 1013. [illegible] [g] חקל דם or חלק דם, Hæreditas Sanguinis.

[*] This was an expression of Sorrow in use among the Ancients almost generally, and not peculiar to the Jews; that it was so among the old Latins, appears from those Lines of Virgil,

———It scissâ veste Latinus,
Conjugis attonitus fatis, urbisque ruinâ, Canitiem immundo perfusam pulvere turpans. Æneid. lib. 12 in my Tent. Joshua immediately sent some People to Achan's tent, who found there what he had mentioned; and having produced the things in the presence of all the Israelites, they laid them out before the Lord. Then Joshua and all the People taking Achan, with what had been discover'd in his tent, the Gold, Silver, and Furniture, his Sons and Daughters, his Oxen and his Asses, his very tent, and every thing belonging to him, brought all into the valley of Achor, and said to Achan, Since thou hast troubled us, the Lord shall trouble thee this day; then they stoned him, with all those of his Family, whom they presumed to have been accomplices in his Crime; and all that he had was consumed with Fire. They laid together a great heap of Stones upon him, which remains there to this day. This is the account given by the Author of the book of Joshua. This fell out in the year of the World 1553, before Jesus Christ 1447, before the vulgar Æra 1451. The place where Achan was stoned was afterwards called the Valley of Achor, and lies to the north of Jericho.

ACHARIS, is a Greek word[h], which signifies in general an ungrateful, uncivil, troublesome, or impertinent Man, Eccles. xx. 21. Homo acharis quasi fabula vana in ore indisciplinatorum assidua erit; the unbred, impertinent, and troublesome Man is as tiresome as the insipid buffoonries of ignorant and mean People.

1. ACHBOR, the Father of Baal-hanan, King of Edom, Gen. xxxvi. 38.

2. ACHBOR, an Officer belonging to King Josiah, who was sent by this Prince to consult the Prophetess Huldah concerning the book of the Law, which had been found by the High-priest Hilkiah, in the year of the World 3380, before Jesus Christ 620, before the vulgar Æra 624. (2 Kings xxii. 14.)

3. ACHBOR, the Father of Elnathan, spoken of in Jerem. xxvi. 22. We shall say something of ELNATHAN under the Letter of his Name.

ACHIAB, Nephew to Herod the Great, and Governour of one of the Fortresses of Jerusalem. Herod falling sick at Samaria, Achiab prevented Alexandra the Mother of Mariamne, in her design of seizing the several Fortresses of Jerusalem[i]. Upon another occasion he hinder'd his Uncle Herod from laying violent hands upon himself, and killing himself as he intended in his excess of Grief, with a short Sword which he held in his hand[k]. He likewise render'd ineffectual the efforts of two thousand Men, who kept the field, and fought an opportunity to attack him[l].

ACHIM, the Son of Zadok, Father of Eliud, of the Tribe of Judah, and Family of David. Achim is named in the Genealogy of our Saviour, Matt. i. 14.

1. ACHIOR, the Friend and Relation of Tobit; he was as well as Tobit of the City and Tribe of Naphtali, and carried by Salmaneser to Niniveh, where he always was very intimate with Tobit.

2. ACHIOR, General of the Ammonites, who joined Holofernes's Army with the auxiliary troops of his Country, in that General's expedition into Egypt. The inhabitants of Bethulia having shut their Gates against Holofernes, and refusing to execute his orders, he called the Princes of Moab, and Commanders of the Ammonites, demanding of them, with great passion, who those people were that opposed his Passage, for he presumed that the Moabites and Ammonites, being neighbours to the Hebrews, could better inform him of the truth than any other persons. Then Achior, General of the Ammonites, answer'd, My Lord, these People are originally of Chaldæa; their Ancestors dwelt first in Mesopotamia, and because they would not worship the Gods of the Chaldæans, were obliged to leave their Country, and settle in the land which at present is possess'd by them. He continued to relate to him Jacob's descent into Egypt, the Miracles wrought by Moses for the deliverance of the Israelites, and the Conquest which they had made of Canaan. Lastly, he told him that this People had at all times been invincible, and were protected visibly by God as long as they continued faithful to him; but that as soon as they shewed any marks of Infidelity, God never failed to take vengeance on them. Now therefore, added he, learn whether these People have committed any fault against their God; if so, attack them, for he will deliver them up into your hands; if not, we shall not be able to resist them, because God will undertake their defence, and cover us with Confusion. (Judith v. 2, 3, &c.)

Upon hearing these words, the great Men of Holofernes's Army, moved with indignation, were inclined to fall upon him and kill him; and Holofernes, transported with fury, said to Achior, Since you have taken upon you to be a Prophet, in telling us that the God of Israel would be the Defender of his People, to shew you that there is no other God besides Nebuchodonozor my Master, when we have put all these People to the edge of the sword, we will destroy you likewise, and you shall understand that Nebuchodonosor is Lord of all the earth; and, that you may yourself experience the vanity of your own Prophecy, I will have you carried to Bethulia, there [h] Ἄχαρις Minimè gratiosus.

[i] Joseph. Antiq. l. 15. c. 9. p. 531.
[k] Ibid. l. 17. c. 9. p. 509.
[l] Ibid. l. 17. c. 12. p. 607.

there to run the same risks with this People, whom you believe to be invincible. They carried him therefore through the Hill countries till he came pretty near the City; there they tied his hands behind him, and fastened him to a tree, that the People of Bethulia, who were come out against them, might take him and carry him into the City, where, in the midst of the Elders, and in a full assembly of the People, he declared to them what he had said, and what had happened to him: Then all the People of Bethulia fell with their faces to the ground, and with great cries begg'd God's assistance, beseeching him to vindicate the honour of his Name, and humble the pride of their Enemies; after which they took Achior and comforted him. Ozias, one of the great leaders of the People, received him into his House, and made a splendid entertainment for him.

Achior continued in Bethulia as long as the Siege lasted; and when God had deliver'd Holofernes into the hands of Judith, and she was returning to the City
Judith xiii. 17, 28, &c. with his Head, Achior was called, and Judith spoke thus to him: The God of Israel, to whom you have borne testimony, has this Night, by my hands, cut off his head who was General of all these Infidels; and immediately she drew out the head of Holofernes, and shewed it to him, saying, Behold the head of that Man who insulted the God of Israel, and boasted that he would put you and us to the edge of the sword. Achior seeing the head of Holofernes, was so terrified, that he fell with his Face to the ground, and his Spirit failed him; but recovering soon after, Judith said to him, Blessed art thou throughout all the house of Jacob, for the God of Israel will be for ever glorified in thee among all People who shall hear mention of thy Name. After this Achior abandoned the Superstitions of the Heathen, believed in God, was circumcised, and received into the number of the Ch. xiv. 6, &c. Israelites.

The War with Holofernes is by some fixed to the time of Manasseh, King of Judah, in the year of the World 3348, before Jesus Christ 652, before the vulgar Æra 656: According to others it fell out after the return from the Captivity of Babylon. Upon this subject see the Commentators, and our Preface to the book of Judith.

ACHIRAM, or Ahiram, of the Tribe of Benjamin, was chief of one of the great families of this Tribe at the time when Num. xxvi. 38. they came out of Egypt.

ACHISH, King of Gath. David having resolved to withdraw to some distant place from Saul, who sought an opportunity to take away his life, retired to Gath, a City in the land of the Philistines, where 1 Sam. xxi. 10. Achish then reigned. The Officers belonging to Achish seeing David, asked the King whether this was not that David who was respected as the King of his own Country; whether this was not he of whom it had been said at a publick time of Dancings, Saul hath killed his thousands, and David his ten thousands. David having heard these Discourses, began to apprehend his life to be in danger; he therefore counterfeited madness before the Philistines, scribbled on the doors of the Gate, and let his spittle fall down his Beard. Then Achish said unto his Servants, Lo, you see the Man is mad, wherefore then have ye brought him to me? Have we not Madmen enough without bringing him too hither? David therefore by this Stratagem got out of Gath, and escaped this danger, in the year of the World 2944, before Jesus Christ 1056, before the vulgar Æra 1060.

Three or four years after, David having first in all probability acquainted Achish with his intentions, sent him an offer of his Services, and desired to be received either in the City or some other part of his Dominions. Achish, who knew the valour of David, and the subject of that Discontent which was between him and Saul received him willingly in Gath, with six hundred Men, their wives and children, which he had brought with him. In the Year of the World 2947, before J.C. 1053, before the vulgar Æra 1057. 1 Sam. xxvii. 12, &c.
Here they continued for some time; after which David said to Achish, If I have found Grace in thine eyes, give me a Place of retreat in some Town in the Country, for why should thy servant dwell in the royal City with thee. Achish therefore gave him the property of Ziklag, and there David settled. Now during his four months abode in Gath, he made frequent excursions with his People, and plundered the Neighbours round about, killing all the men he met with, lest any one should discover where it was that he made war. In the mean while he persuaded Achish that he ravaged the lands belonging to Judah, and from thence brought all the Spoil he took, part whereof he never failed to give him. Achish therefore confided absolutely in David, saying, He has done so much mischief to his own People, that he will never more think of returning to them, and so will be always engaged closely to my Service.

About two years after the Philistines took the Field, in order to encounter the Israelites; and David had orders from Achish to prepare to march, and imbark in this war with him; whereupon he replied to Achish, Surely thou shalt know what thy Servant can do: The other then said, that he would at all times trust him with the guard of his Person. The Philistines therefore being come to Aphek, a Town situated in the great plain or valley of In the Year of the World 3949, before J.C. 1051, before the vulgar Æra 1055. 1 Sam. xxviii. 1, 2, &c.

1 Sam. xxix. of Jezreel, David and his People march'd in the rear with Achish. Then said the Princes of the Philistines to Achish, What do these Hebrews here? To this he answer'd, Is not this David, which hath been with me these days or these years, and I have found no fault in him? But the Princes of the Philistines were wrath with him, and said unto him, Make this Fellow return, and let him not go down with us to battle, lest in the midst of the Combat he turn upon us, and endeavour to reconcile himself with Saul at the expence of our Blood. Then said Achish to David, Surely as the Lord liveth thou hast been upright, I approve thy whole Conduct; thou hast given me no reason for complaint, but thou art not acceptable to the Lords about me, return therefore that thou mayst not offend them. David answer'd, What have I done? and what hast thou found in thy Servant so long as I have been with thee unto this day, that I may not go fight against the enemies of my Lord the King? Then said Achish, To me thou art as an Angel of God, but the Princes of the Philistines have determined that thou shalt not engage with them in the Battle. David returned therefore the next day to Ziklag, which, during his absence, had been plunder'd by the Amalekites. David continued but a very little while with this Prince after the Battle of Gilboa, wherein Saul and his Sons were slain. From Ziklag he came to Hebron, in the Tribe
2 Sam. ii. 1, 3, &c. of Judah; from which time there is no more mention of Achish in Scripture.

ACHOR, a Valley in the Territory of Jericho, and in the Tribe of Benjamin, where Achan, his Sons and Daughters were Josh. vii. 24. stoned to death, and burnt in the year of the World 2553, before Jesus Christ 1447, before the vulgar Æra 1451.

ACHSAH, the Daughter of Caleb, who was promised by her Father to him, who should take Kirjath-sepher, which, upon the division, was fallen to his Lot. Oth-
Ch. xv. 16, 17, &c. niel having taken it, married Achsah. After the Wedding, while they were conducting her in a ceremonious manner to her Husband's house, Othniel persuaded her to ask her Father Caleb for a field that was well watered: She therefore lighted off her ass, and threw herself at her Father's feet, who desiring to know what she would have, she answer'd, Father, thou hast given me a South-land, give me also Springs of water. And he gave her the upper Springs and the nether Springs, or a field water'd with good Springs as well as with the Dews and Rains.

ACHZIB, is the Town of Ecdippa, situated near the Mediterranean, between Tyre and Ptolemais. See ACKSHAPH.

ACKSHAPH, a City belonging to the Tribe of Asher. The King of Ackshaph was conquer'd by Joshua. Some are of Ch. xii. 20. Akshaph. אכשף opinion that Ackshaph is the same as Ecdippa, a Town of note upon the Mediterranean, between Tyre and Ptolemais: Others will have it that Ecdippa is describ'd in Joshua under the name of Achzib. Ch. xix. 29. אכזיב Akzib.
The Arabians at this day call a Place three hours distant from Ptolemais, towards the North, Zib, which is the place where formerly stood Ecdippa. It is probable enough that Ackshaph and Achzib are but different names for the same Town of Ecdippa, upon the Coast of Phœnicia.

ACRA, is a Greek word, and signifies in general a Citadel. The Syrians and Chaldæans make use of it likewise in the same Sense[m]. King Antiochus gave orders for the building of a Citadel, northward of the Temple, upon an eminence which commanded this holy Place[n]; for which reason this Hill was called Acra. Josephus[o] says, that this Eminence was in the form of a Semicircle, and that Simon Maccabæus having driven away the Syrians, who had seized on the Citadel of Acra, demolished it, and spent three years in levelling the Mountain upon which it was built. The ruins of it were thrown, by his directions, into the Vale below, that no Situation hereafter should command the Temple. Upon Mount Acra was built afterwards the Palace of Helena, Queen of the Adiabenians[p], Agrippa's Palace[q], the place where the publick Records were lodged, and that where the Magistrates of Jerusalem assembled[r].

1. ACRABATENE, a Canton of Judæa, extending itself between Naplouse or Shechem and Jericho[f], inclining towards the East. It was about twelve miles or four leagues in length. The Acrabatene had its Name from a place called Akrabbim, seated at nine miles or three leagues distance from Shechem, Eastward[t]. Josephus speaks of the Acrabatene in several places.

2. ACRABATENE, another Canton of Judæa, upon the frontier of Idumæa, towards the Southern extremity of the Dead Sea. This Canton derives its name from Akrabbim, which in the Vulgate is translated the Staircase of Scorpio. There is mention made of this Acrabatene in the first Book of Maccabees. Num. xxxiv. 4. 1 Macc. v. 3.

ACROSTICKS, Acrostick Writings. See the Article LETTERS.

ACTS OF THE APOSTLES, a Canonical Book of the New Testament, which contains a great part of St. Peter's life, and of St. Paul's, beginning at the Ascension of our Saviour, and continued as far as St.

[m] Græc. Ἄκρα. Syr. Chald. אקרא [n] Joseph. Antiq. l. 12. c. 7. & 14. [o] Ibid. l. 13. c. 11. p. 446, 447. [p] Joseph. de Bello, l. 7. c. 13. [q] Joseph. Antiq. l. 20. c. 7. p. 964. [r] Joseph. de Bello. l. 7. c. 13. Ἀρχεῖον καὶ τὸ Βουλευτήριον, &c. [f] Euseb. in voce Ἀκραβείν. Item in Ἰδουμαία. Vide & Joseph. de Bello. l. 2. c. 11. [t] Vide Euseb. in Akrabbim.

St. Paul's arrival at Rome, after his appeal to Cæsar, that is to say, this book includes the Hiſtory of eight and twenty or thirty years. St. Luke has been always taken for the Author of the Acts. After that he had deſcribed the Actions of Jeſus Chriſt in his Goſpel, he reſolved likewiſe to leave the lives and actions of the firſt Apoſtles, and a Relation of the wonderful manner, wherewith the holy Spirit formed that Church which Chriſt had redeemed with his Blood.

OEcumenius [u] calls the Acts the Goſpel of the Holy Ghoſt, and St. Chryſoſtom [w] the Goſpel of our Saviour's Reſurrection, or the Goſpel of Chriſt Jeſus riſen from the Dead. Here in the Lives and Preaching of the Apoſtles, we have the moſt miraculous inſtance of the power of the Holy Ghoſt; and in the account of thoſe who were the firſt Believers, we have the moſt excellent pattern of the true Chriſtian Life; ſo that in this work, tho' St. Luke ſeems to give us but a plain narrative of Facts, yet herein does this divine Phyſician, according to St. Jerom's expreſſion [x], offer to us as many remedies, fit to heal the diſeaſes of our Souls, as he ſpeaks words.

It is believed that St. Luke's principal Deſign in the compoſition of the Acts, was to write a true Hiſtory of the Apoſtles, and of the foundation of the Chriſtian Church, in oppoſition to the falſe Acts and falſe Hiſtories which begun to be diſperſed up and down the World. The fidelity and underſtanding of this holy Evangeliſt have been ſo much valued by the Church, that all other Acts of the Apoſtles which appeared either before or after him, have been deſpiſed by it, and thoſe only adopted which were of his own compoſing. We ſhall hereafter give a Liſt of the ſeveral ſpurious Acts, the names whereof have been handed down to us; for few of them have been preſerved entire.

The exact time wherein St. Luke wrote the Book of the Acts is not known: It is agreed that they were penn'd after his Goſpel, and muſt have been written two years after St. Paul's abode at Rome upon the firſt journey that he made thither, that is to ſay about the ſixty ſecond or the ſixty third year of the vulgar Æra; for St. Luke ſpeaks of this journey, and of St. Paul's continuance at Rome for ſuch a time after it. He might have written it at Rome while he remained with St. Paul during the time of his Impriſonment; for St. Luke ſtay'd with him for the two years of his abode at Rome till his Deliverance.

St. Luke wrote this work in Greek, and his Greek is generally purer and more elegant than that of other Authors of the New Teſtament. Epiphanius ſays [y], that this Book was tranſlated by the Ebionites out of Greek into Hebrew, that is to ſay, into Syriac, which was the common language of the Jews in Paleſtine; but theſe Hereticks corrupted it with the mixture of many Falſities and Impieties, injurious to the memory of the Apoſtles. St. Jerom [z] aſſures us, that a certain Prieſt of Aſia added to the true genuine Acts, the Voyages of St. Paul and St. Thecla [a], and the Story of baptizing a Lion. Tertullian tells us, that St. John the Evangeliſt having convicted this Prieſt of varying from the truth in this Relation, he excuſed himſelf, ſaying, he did it purely out of love to St. Paul [b].

The book of the Acts has always been eſteemed canonical in the Church. The Marcionites [c] indeed, the Manichees [d], and ſome other Hereticks, rejected it, becauſe they were ſenſible that their errors were too clearly condemned by it. St. Auſtin ſays [e], that the Church received this work with great edification, and read it every year in the aſſembly of the Faithful. St. Chryſoſtom complains, that in his time this Book was too little known, and that the reading of it was too much neglected. As for himſelf, he very much extols the advantages of it, and maintains with good reaſon that it is as uſeful as the Goſpel.

APOCRYPHAL ACTS OF THE APOSTLES, ſuppoſed to be written by Abdias, the pretended Biſhop of Babylon. The Impoſtor, who compoſed theſe Acts, gives himſelf out to be a Biſhop ordain'd at Babylon by the Apoſtles themſelves when they were upon their Journey into Perſia. This work is neither antient nor authentick: It was not known either to Euſebius or St. Jerom, or to any of the other Fathers who lived before them. The Author ſays that he wrote in Greek, and that his Book was tranſlated into Latin by Julius Africanus, who is himſelf a Greek Writer. He cites Hegeſippus, who lived in the ſecond age of the Church. In ſhort, the lives of the Apoſtles which he gives us do ſo abound with Fables, that we can ſcarce look upon them as any thing better than a Romance very ill put together.

THE ACTS OF ST. PETER, otherwiſe called the Voyages of St. Peter, Periodi Petri, which we have at preſent under another title, Recognitiones ſancti Clementis, are much longer than they were formerly. This is a book ſtuffed with viſions fions and fables, that come originally from the school of the Ebionites [f].

[u] Œcumenius in Acta, p. 20. [w] Chryſ. in Acta, homil. 1. [x] Hieronym. Ep. 103. p. 9. [y] Epiphan. hæreſ. 30. c. 3 & 6. [z] Hieronym. de Script. Eccleſ. [a] M. Grabe, in his Spicilegium of the Fathers, has given us an Hiſtory of S. Thecla, which he believ'd to be the antient Hiſtory mentioned by St. Jerom. [b] Tertull. de Baptiſmo, c. 17. [c] Tertull. l. 5. contra Marcion. c. 1, 2. [d] Aug. de utilitate credendi c. 3. & Ep. olim 253. nunc 237. n. 2. [e] Aug. Ep. 315. novæ Edit. n. 1.

THE ACTS OF S. PAUL, were composed after the death of this Apostle, as a Supplement to S. Luke, and a continuation of his Narrative from the second year of St. Paul's first voyage to Rome, to the very end of his life. This Book, which is entirely lost, must have been twice as long as the Canonical Acts of the Apostles, since in a Manuscript cited by Cotelerius, it is said to have contained four thousand five hundred and sixty lines or verses; whereas in the same Manuscript it is aver'd that in the genuine Book of the Acts, written by St. Luke, there are no more than two thousand five hundred. Eusebius, who had seen this Work, says it was a spurious Piece, or without any authority.

THE ACTS OF S. JOHN THE EVANGELIST, mentioned in Epiphanius [g] and S. Austin [h], contain incredible Stories of this Apostle. The Encratites, Manichees and Priscillianists, made use of them: It is probable that the Author of the Synopsis, who is said to be Athanasius, may quote them under the title of S. John's Voyage. These are thought to be the Acts of St. John, which are among the others published under the forged name of Abdias.

THE ACTS OF S. ANDREW, mentioned in S. Austin, and received by the Manichees, were different from those which we have at present under the name of the Priests of Achaia. The Manichees [i], Encratites [k], and Apotacticks, made use of the Acts of S. Andrew. See Epiphanius, Heres. 61, & 62.

THE ACTS OF S. THOMAS, S. Austin cites something out of them: [l] He says, that the Manichees particularly made use of them: Part of them is to be met with in the life of S. Thomas, written by the counterfeit Abdias. M. Simon thinks he has found these old Acts of S. Thomas, under the name of Voyages, Periodi Sancti Apostoli Thomæ, in a Greek Manuscript of the French King's Library, N° 1832. He gives us some fragments of them in his observations on the Text and Versions of the New Testament.

THE ACTS OF S. PHILIP. This was a Book which the Gnosticks made use of; Pope Gelasius placed them among the Apocryphal Writings. Anastasius the Sinaïte has preserved a fragment of them in his work concerning three Lents, published by M. Cotelier, among his Monuments of the Greek Church, Tom. 3. p. 428.

THE ACTS OF S. MATTHIAS [m]. Some have imagined that the Jews for a long time had concealed the original Acts of the Life and Death of S. Matthias, written in Hebrew, and that a Monk of the Abby of S. Matthias at Treves, having got them out of their hands, procured them to be translated into Latin, and published them: But the Criticks will not allow them to be genuine or authentick [n]. It is probable that the Jews abused the honesty and simplicity of the Person to whom they communicated them.

ADADA, a City in the Southern part of Judah. Josh. xv. 22.

ADAD-RIMMON, or Hadad-Rimmon, a City in the Valley of Jesreel. There the fatal Battle was fought, wherein Josiah King of Judah was killed by the forces of Pharaoh-Necho King of Egypt. Adad-rimmon was afterwards called Maximianopolis [o], in honour of the Emperor Maximian. It is seventeen miles from Cæsarea in Palestine, and ten miles from Jezreel [p]. 2 Kings xxiii. 29.

I. ADAH, one of Lamech's two Wives, was the Mother of Jabel and Jubal. The names of the rest of her Children (for it is presumed that she had more) are no where mentioned. Gen. iv. 19. One day, upon what occasion we are not told, Lamech said to his two Wives Adah and Zillah, Hear my voice, ye Wives of Lamech, hearken unto my Speech; for I have slain a Man to my wounding, and a young Man to my hurt. If Cain shall be avenged sevenfold, truly Lamech seventy and seven fold. Ch. iv. 23. See the Conjectures of Commentators on this matter.

II. ADAH, the Daughter of Elon the Hittite, and Wife to Esau. She was the Mother of Eliphaz. Ch. xxxvi. 4.

I. ADAIAH, of the Tribe of Levi, the Son of Ethan, and Father of Zerah, 1 Chron. vi. 41.

II. ADAIAH, of the Tribe of Benjamin, the Son of Shimhi, 1 Chron. viii. 21.

III. ADAIAH, of the sacerdotal Race, was the Son of Jeroham, and Father of Maasiai, 1 Chron. ix. 12.

IV. ADAIAH, a Jew, who returned from Babylon; he was one of those who dismissed the Wives, which, contrary to the Law, they had taken from among the Gentiles.

ADALIAH, the fifth Son of Haman, who was hanged, with the rest of his Brethren, by the command of Ahasuerus. Esth. ix. 8.

ADAM,

[f] See what Cotelerius says of these Recognitions, in his Fathers of the first Age. See likewise M. Fabricius's Apocr. N. T. p. 759, &c. [g] Epiphan. Hæres. 47. [h] Aug. de fide c. 4. & 405. contra adversar. Legis & Prophet. l. 1. c. 20. [i] Aug. de fide contra Manich. c. 38. & alibi. [k] Epiph. Hær. 42. [l] Aug. lib. contra Adimant. c. 17. & lib. 22. contra Faust. c. 79. & lib. 1. de Serm. Domini in monte c. 20. [m] Bolland 24 Februar. [n] See M. de Tillemont, T. 1. of his Eccl. Hist. p. 1186. and M. Fabricius's Apoc. N. T. p. 782. [o] Hieronym. ad Zach. xii. vide & ad Ose. i. [p] Itin. Jerosol. antiq.

ADAM, was the first Man created by God. It is said, that he was called Adam by reason of the reddish colour of the Earth out of which he was formed; for Adam in Hebrew signifies red [q]. This name denotes likewise every Man in general. God having made Man out of the Dust of the Earth, breathed in him the Breath of Life, and gave him Dominion
Gen. i. 26. ii. 7. over all the Creatures of the Earth. He created him after his own image and resemblance, and blessed him. He placed
Ch. ii. 8. 15. him in a delicious Garden, that he might cultivate it agreeably, and feed upon the
Ver. 16. 17. fruits of it; but at the same time left this command with him, "Eat of all the "Fruits of Paradise, but of the Tree of "the knowledge of Good and Evil thou "shalt not eat of it; for in the day that "thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely "die.

Some little time after, God brought all the Beasts of the Earth, and all the Fowls of the Air to Adam, that he might Ver. 19. see by what names he would call them; and Adam gave to every one of them their true name; such a name as best suited them, and described the principal properties of them: Now all other Animals had been created by pairs, male and female, and Man only was without a Fellow-creature of his own species: Wherefore God said, It is not good for Man to be alone; I will make an Help-mate for him. The Lord caused therefore a deep sleep to fall upon him, and while he slept he took one of his Ribs, and closed up the Flesh instead thereof; and of the Rib which he took from Man made he a Woman, whom he presented to him, when he awoke. Then said Adam, This is now bone of my bone, and flesh of my flesh; she shall be called Woman, because she was taken out of Man [r]. Therefore shall a Man leave Father and Mother, and shall cleave unto his Wife, and they two shall be one Flesh. And they were both naked, the Man and his Wife, and were not ashamed. Adam called likewise his Wife's name Eve [s]; because she was the Mother of all living.

Now the Serpent, which is more subtle than any Beast of the field, came to Eve, Ch. iii. and said, Why has not God permitted you to eat indifferently of all the fruits of Paradise? The Woman answered, that they might eat the Fruit of all the Trees in the Garden, one only excepted, which they were forbidden to touch lest they should die. And the Serpent said unto the Woman, Ye shall not surely die; for God doth know, that in the day ye eat thereof, then your eyes shall be opened, and ye shall be as Gods, knowing Good and Evil. The Woman therefore seeing that the Tree was good for food, and pleasant to the eyes, took the fruit of it, eat, and then gave it to her Husband, who likewise did eat of it. At the same time their eyes were opened, and they knew that they were naked, and having sown fig-leaves together, they made themselves aprons for a covering to their nakedness: And as they heard the Lord walking in the garden about sun-set, they hid themselves from his presence amidst the thickest trees of Paradise. Then the Lord called unto Adam, and said unto him, Where art thou? He answered, I heard thy voice in the garden, and I was afraid, because I was naked, and I hid myself. And God said, Who told thee that thou wast naked? Hast thou eaten of the Tree whereof I commanded thee that thou shouldst not eat?

Adam replied, The Woman, whom thou gavest to be with me, she gave me of the Tree, and I did eat. And the Lord said unto the Woman, What is this that thou hast done? And the Woman said, The Serpent beguiled me, and I did eat. Then the Lord said unto the Serpent, Because thou hast done this, thou art cursed above all Cattle, and above every Beast of the field; upon thy belly shalt thou go, and dust shalt thou eat, all the days of thy life. And I will put enmity between thee and the Woman, and between thy Seed and her Seed: It shall bruise thy Head, and thou shalt bruise his Heel. Unto the Woman he said likewise, I will greatly multiply thy sorrow and thy conception, in sorrow thou shalt bring forth Children, and thy desire shall be to thy Husband, and he shall rule over thee. As to Adam to him he said, Because thou hast hearkened unto the voice of thy Wife, and hast eaten of the Tree, the fruit whereof I had forbidden thee to eat, the Ground, for thy sake, shall be cursed, and in sorrow shalt thou eat of it all the days of thy life. Thorns also and Thistles shall it bring forth to thee, and thou shalt eat the Herb of the field. In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat Bread, till thou return unto the ground; for out of it wast thou taken; for dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return.

Then the Lord made coats of skin for Adam and his Wife, and clothed them [t]; and said, Behold Adam is become as one of us, to know Good and Evil. And now, lest he put forth his hand, and take also of the Tree of Life, and eat, and live for ever; therefore the Lord God sent him forth from the Garden of Eden to till the ground, from whence he was taken. So he drove out the Man; and he placed at the [q] Joseph. Antiq. l. 1. c. 1. אדם. Πυῤῥός. Rufus. [r] איש, Ish Man, אשה, Isha, Woman. [s] חוה, Chavvah, vivifica or vivens. [t] Literally, Coats of skin, or Coats to cover their skin, their nakedness, כתנות עור, Tunicas pellis. Chald. vestimenta honoris 70. Χιτῶνας δερματίνους.

P. 36

A GENEALOGICAL TREE OF ADAM AND EVE'S DESCENDANTS, to the deluge Gen. iv. v.

the East of the Garden of Eden, Cherubims, and a flaming Sword which turned every where, to keep the way of the Tree of Life. It is not known how long Adam and Eve continued in Paradise. Interpreters are very much divided upon this point[t]. Some allow them to have lived there many years; others many days; and some again but many hours. We think they might have remained there for ten or twelve days, and that when they were forced from this delicious place they were pure Virgins.

In some little time after Eve conceiv-
Gen. iv. 1, 2, &c. ed, and brought forth Cain, saying, I have gotten a Man from the Lord. It is believed that she had a Girl at the same time, and that generally she was delivered of twins. Scripture takes notice of but three Sons that Adam had, Cain, Abel and Seth, and does not say particularly that he had any Daughter: But Moses will not suffer us to doubt at all of his having many Children, when he tells us, that he begat Sons and Daughters. He died at the age of nine hundred and thirty years;
Ch. v. 5. before J. C. 3070. before the vulgar Æra 3074. This is all we learn from Moses concerning our first Parent. But Interpreters do not stop here; they have proposed a thousand questions on this subject. It is true, no History can furnish us with more room for questions of curiosity and consequence; and we should be scarce able to excuse ourselves if we did not examine some of them in this place.

It is agreed that the Serpent, which tempted Eve, was the Devil, and nothing else; [v] that infernal Serpent, who envying the privileges of Man in innocence, tempted him, and was the cause of his forfeiting all those advantages which he had received from God at his Creation. But in order to make this trial of his fidelity, he assumed the form of a Serpent; and of what kind of Serpent? Some[x] believe that the Serpent had then the use of speech, and conversed familiarly with the Woman, without her conceiving any distrust of him; and that God, to punish the malice with which he had abused Eve, deprived him of the use of Speech. Others[y] believe, that the Devil transformed himself into a Serpent, and spoke to Eve under the figure of this Animal. Others[z] maintain, that a real and common Serpent having eaten of the forbidden Fruit, Eve from thence concluded, that she too might eat of it without danger; that in effect she did eat of it, and incur'd the Displeasure of God by her disobedience. This, say these Authors, is the plain matter of fact, which Moses would relate under the allegorical representation of the Serpent conversing with Eve.

Cajetan will have this whole story, as it is recited by Moses, in the way of dialogue between the Woman and the Serpent, to be figurative only, to signify the inward suggestions of the Devil, and the Woman's weak resistance. Others affirm, that the Serpent's speech was nothing but his hissing; and that Eve understanding all Creatures by their voices, apprehended what this Animal had to say to her, by the noise it made. Lyranus reports the opinion of some to be, that the Serpent put on the face of a beautiful young Woman to tempt Eve. We are assured[a], that the Hereticks called Ophitæ, or Serpentini, believed Jesus Christ to be the Serpent which tempted the first Woman; for which reason they bred up a Serpent, which at a word from their Priests would creep under their Altars, lick up their Oblations, and then retire to its hole. After this they would advance towards the Altar, and receive the Sacrament, being then perswaded that Jesus Christ himself, under the form of a Serpent, had sanctified it. Tertullian[b] and Epiphanius tell us[c], that the same Hereticks believed the Serpent which tempted Eve to be a certain Power or Virtue, produced in the shape of a Serpent by Saldebaoth, out of vexation for what God, the Great Jehovah, had done in making Man to walk, who before was no better than a worm. Some Rabbins believe that Sammael Prince of the Devils came in person to tempt Eve, mounted on a Serpent as large as any Camel.

The nature of the forbidden Fruit has been enquired into, and what sort of Tree it was which bore it. Some Rabbins believe it was the Vine[d]; others that it was Wheat; Theodore, who is quoted in Theodoret, St. Isidore, and Procopius, tell us that it was the Fig-tree: And this opinion they ground upon the circumstance of Adam and Eve's covering themselves with Fig-leaves immediately after their Transgression. Others think it was the Cherry tree; the generality of the Latins will have it to be an Apple-tree. But we must confess, that there is nothing certain in this matter, since nothing has been said by Moses concerning the nature of this tree.

Many Jewish Writers [e] have asserted that Man and Woman were created together, and were fasten'd together by the shoulders, having four feet, four hands, and two heads, alike in every thing excepting Sex, and that God having cast them into a proa profound sleep, separated them, and made two Persons of them. Eugubinus [g] affirms, that they were joined together not by the back, but by the sides; so that God, according to the Scripture, took the Woman from Adam's side; but Moses, instead of saying this, declares, that he took a rib from Adam, out of which he form'd Woman. Many fabulous Stories are told of Adam's stature and beauty: Some have maintain'd [h], that he was the handsomest Man that ever was, and that God before he form'd him assum'd an human body of the most perfect beauty, after the pattern whereof he created Adam. In this manner it was literally true they say that Adam was made, after the image and resemblance of God.

[t] Vide Mos. Barcepham de Paradiso, & Perer. in Genes. iii. & alios. [v] The Devil is called Serpent, or the Old Serpent, John viii. 44. 2 Cor. xi. 3. Rev. xii. 9. [x] Joseph. Antiq. l. 1. c. 2. Basil. Homil. de Paradiso. Ephrem apud Barcepham de Paradiso. [y] Cyrill. l. 3. contra Julian. [z] Abarben. in Gen. iii. [a] Aug. de hæres. c. 17. [b] Tertul. de Præscript. c. 47. [c] Epiphan. de hæres. 37. [d] Sanhedrin. fol. 70. Bemidbar Rabbi fol 170 & 238. [e] Rabb. Samuel, Abarbanel, Manasseh Ben. Israel. vide Leidegger hist. Patriarch. &c.

Others [i] have declared, that he was the greatest Giant there ever was, which opinion they pretend to prove by these words of the Vulgate, Josh. xiv. ult. Adam maximus inter Enachim (ibi) Hebrone, situs est. The Rabbins tell us [k], that this first Man was of so prodigious a stature, that he reached from one end of the World to the other; but that after this Transgression God pressed his hand heavily upon him, and reduced him to the measure of an hundred Ells. Others allow him to have been nine hundred cubits in Height, and maintain that God reduced him to this measure at the request of the Angels, who were frighten'd at his first stature.

There has been much dispute in the Church concerning the Salvation of Adam. Tatian and the Encratites were positive that he was damned; but this opinion the Church condemned. The Author of the Wisd. xi. book of Wisdom says, that God deliver'd him from his Sin; Custodivit & eduxit illum a delicto suo; and the Fathers say that he did hard Penance. The Rabbins believe the same: Some will have it that Adam and Eve continued in a state of Continency for an hundred years after their Fall; others say but thirty, and some again but fifteen. No one knows the place where our first Parents were buried: Some of the Antients believe [l], that they were interr'd at Hebron, which opinion they ground on the words of Joshua Josh. xiv. ult. already cited by us; Nomen Hebron ante vocabatur Coriath-Arbe. Adam maximus ibi inter Enachim situs est. But the Hebrew text of this Passage is otherwise explained, thus; And the Name of Hebron before was Kirjath-Arba, which Arba was a great Man among, or Father of, the Anakims: Others in greater number hold [m], that Adam was buried upon Calvary, and this opinion has its Advocates even at this day. There is a Chapel to be seen upon Mount Calvary, dedicated to the honour of Adam [n]: But St. Jerom confesses [o], that this opinion, which is very proper to sooth the Ears of the common People, is not however the more certain for this Reason; Favorabilis opinio, & mulcens aurem populi, nec tamen vera.

Adam has been reputed the Author of some books; it has been supposed that he was master of a great deal of profound and very extensive Knowledge. His giving names to the several Animals not only proves, as the same persons alledge, his Dominion over them, but likewise his vast knowledge of the Properties belonging to them, God having created him perfect, there is no question to be made but that he gave him a very clear and comprehensive Mind; but all this speculative Science and superior Genius is not inconsistent with the experimental ignorance of those things which are to be learned by use only and reflection. There have been People who believed that he invented the Hebrew Letters. The Jews say he is the Author of the ninety first Psalm, which begins with Bonum est confiteri Domino. They affirm that he composed it soon after the Creation: The Gnosticks likewise had a book intitled The Revelations of Adam, which was placed among the apocryphal Writings by Pope Gelasius. The same Pope makes mention also of a Book called Adam's Penance. Masius [p] speaks of another of the Creation, which is said to have been composed by Adam. The Arabians [q] inform us that Adam received twenty Books which fell from Heaven, and contained many Laws, Promises, and Prophecies.

The antient Persians relate [r] the Creation of Adam and the first of Mankind in such a manner as deserves our notice: They say that there was a God before all things, and that he is the Author of them; that having resolved to manifest himself by his Works, he created the Universe, and divided it into six parts. First he made the Heavens and their Spheres, which he adorn'd with great and small luminaries, such as the Sun, Moon and Stars. He created also the Angels, some of whom are placed above others, according to their rank and dignity, and Heaven was appointed to be the abode of those who should keep God's Commandments, and live piously in this life. After he had finished this great work, he rested for six days, to instruct us that time and meditation are necessary necessary for the execution of great designs.

[g] Eugubin. in Cosmopœia. [h] Idem ibidem, Salian. Annal. T. 1. p. 106. [i] Philo de mundi opificio Joan Lucidus. [k] Vide lib. Sanhedrin. & Bartoloci, T. 1. p. 65, 66. [l] Hieronym. in quæst. Hebr. & in Epitaph. Paulæ. [m] Origen. tract. xxxv. in Matth. Epiphan. hæres. 46. Ambros. l. 10. in Luc. Hieronym. in Matth. xxvii. [n] Quaresm. T. 2. l. 5. p. 481, 482, &c. [o] Hieronym in Matth. xxvii. [p] Apud Salian. T. 1. Annal. p. 230. [q] Hottinger. Histor. Oriental. p. 22. [r] Histoire de la Religion des anciens Persans, c. 2. imprimée à Paris, 1667. in 12mo.

After this he made Hell, which he placed in the lowest region of the World; from whence he banished all sort of light and consolation, that it might be a place of horror and punishment for the violators of his Laws: Here, as well as in Heaven, he made different Dwellings, wherein the wicked were to be tormented according to the measure and quality of their Crimes. About this time Lucifer, chief of the Angels, and some of his order, having conspired against God, in order to wrest his sovereign Power from him, God threw them headlong into Hell, and changed their figure into a black, hideous, and terrible form, and thus confin'd them in Hell, where they are to remain till the end of the World; then sinners shall receive their punishment, and undergo the sentence of their Condemnation. After this God again rested, and forbore working for five days more.

The third work of the Creation was the Earth or terraqueous Globe, which includes the waters and dry element; so that the Waters make the Earth fruitful, and the Earth includes the Waters within their just bounds. This great work being over, God continued five days without producing forth any thing.

The fourth work was that of the Creation of Trees, Plants, and Herbs, that so the earth might bring forth fruits, and every thing which might serve for food to Man and Beasts: After which God rested from his labours as before.

The fifth work was that of Beasts, Birds, and Fishes, which were to live upon the earth, and feed on what it produced. The World being adorned, and furnished with all sorts of Creatures, God again ceased from working for five days.

Lastly, he undertook his sixth work, and made Man and Woman, Adamah and Evah, for whose use all things had been form'd. In order to have the World peopled with more speed, God appointed that Eve should be deliver'd every day of Twins, and that for a thousand years Death should not diminish the number of Mankind.

Lucifer, who had been cast down headlong into Hell, studied how he might do mischief to Man, and tempt him to incur the guilt of Sin, and so deprive him of all his happiness. God, in order to prevent the evil effects of his Malice, appointed certain Overseers to have a vigilant eye upon his Creatures, in order to preserve them in the state wherein he had created them. The care of the Heavens he allotted to one Hamul, the care of Angels to Acrob, the care of the Sun, Moon, and Stars was given to Isoder, that of the Earth to Soreb, that of the Water to Josab, that of Animals to Sumbola, that of Fishes to Daloo, that of Trees to Rocan, that of Man and Woman to Cooz; lastly, he set Sertan and Asud as a guard to Lucifer and his accomplices, to prevent their doing mischief to his Creatures.

This did not hinder Lucifer from tempting Men, and engaging them in many disorders, which obliged God to destroy them by a Deluge which cover'd the whole Earth, and spared but very few of Mankind, from whom all the present inhabitants of the World are deriv'd.

The [f] Banians, who are People that dwell in the East Indies, and are dispersed over the Kingdom of Cambaye, say that God, intending to display his Almighty Power, created the Universe, that is to say, the Earth, Air, Fire and Water, which are as it were the basis of all sensible Creatures. These four things were at first mingled and confounded together; God separated them by blowing upon the Waters with a kind of great trunk; hereupon they immediately swelled, and became like a vastly large round bottle, in the shape of an egg, which extending itself gradually, made the Firmament that encompasses the World, light and transparent, such as we now behold it.

After this he created the Sun and Moon, which he placed in the Firmament, in order to make the difference of Seasons. By this means the four Elements were disentangled; every one was dispersed in its proper place, and each perform'd its function; the Air filled every thing that was void, the Fire gave light and action to all things by its heat, the Earth produc'd its Creatures, and the Sea likewise. To every one of them God gave the seminal virtues necessary for production. Thus this great World was finished, which was divided into four parts, as it had been form'd of four Elements; and these four parts are the East, West, North, and South.

This World was to last four Ages, and to be peopled by four sorts of Men, married to four Women, made particularly for them: God therefore set about the Creation of Man after he had form'd the Universe. He commanded the Earth to produce out of its intrails this excellent Creature. The Earth obeyed, and immediately there appeared the head, then successively the other parts of Man's body, into which God breathed life and motion; his eyes were open'd, and Man employ'd the first operations of his Mind in acknowledging and adoring his Creator. At the same time God gave him a Woman like unto himself for a companion: The Man was was called Pourous, and the Woman Parcontee. They lived together and had four Sons; the name of the first was Bramon, of the second Cuttery, of the third Schuddery, and of the fourth Urise.

[f] Histoire de la Religion des Banians, traduite de l'Anglois de Henry Lord, à Paris 1667, in 12mo.

Each of these four Men had a constitution peculiar to himself, according to the element which principally prevail'd in him. Bramon had most of the Earth in him, and consequently was of a melancholy humour; Cuttery had a great deal of Fire in his constitution, and was of a martial and warlike spirit; Schuddery was phlegmatick, and was of a gentle peaceable spirit; Urise was of an airy constitution, and had a ready wit for Invention.

God gave Bramon, as the most serious and composed, a book wherein the laws of Religion were written; to Cuttery, as the most valiant, he gave a sword and scepter, to command and govern Mankind, and contain them within the bounds of Duty; Schuddery, who was of an easy meek spirit, received balances from God, and a sack filled with all sorts of weights hung at his girdle, in order to carry on the business of Merchandising, and teach Men to trade; lastly, God gave Urise, who was of a subtle airy spirit, the gift of Invention, Mechanicks, and Arts, together with a sack filled with all sorts of mechanical instruments.

God did not permit Pourous and Parcontee to have Daughters, lest their Brothers living with them might pollute themselves with some incestuous act; but he created four Women for the four Sons we having been speaking of, and disposed them in places remote from the habitation of the first Men; one in the East, another in the West, a third in the North, and a fourth in the South; that so the Sons of Pourous seeking for them in these places, the Propagation of Mankind might be more easily and speedily carried on over all the Earth.

God having resolved to people the World, sent Bramon towards the East, with the book of divine Laws in his possession: Here he met the Woman whom God had design'd for him, and who was of a Stature and Constitution like his; he took her to wife, and was the Father of the Eastern People. This Woman's name was Savanee. Cuttery, the second Son of Pourous, took his Rout westward, and in like manner met the Woman who was appointed for him; she was called Todicastree: She did not yield without fighting; she had as much courage as her Husband, and was arm'd as well as he. They fought for three or four days; at last Todicastree was taken, and became the Wife of Cuttery: They peopled together the West. Schuddery, who was design'd for Trade and Merchandising, went northward, with his Weights and Balances, and having met with Pearls and Diamonds, took abundance of them; afterwards he found the Woman who was prepar'd for him: she was called Visagundah; he married her, and was Father of the Northern People. Urise, the fourth Son of Pourous, whose talent was Invention, Industry, and Mechanicks, departed with his instruments, and took his rout towards the South: He travers'd seven seas, and passed them by the help of a vessel of his own inventing. Upon his arrival into a country called Derpe, he built a fine house there upon the Sea-shore. Some time after the Woman whom God had created for him walking that way, drew near to his House to take a view of it, Urise came down to see her, and expressed his Admiration and Affection to her; but Jejunogundah, for that was her name, retiring, Urise courted her for several days following, and at last she yielded to his desires, became his Wife, and by their means the whole Southern part of the Earth was peopled.

The four Brothers, after they had thus peopled the World, found themselves inclin'd to return to the place of their first Original: Hither they came from the four corners of the World; but they quarrelling, and their Children falling into very great disorders, God destroyed them by the Deluge. Thus ended the first age of the World.

The Mahometans likewise, after their manner, relate the Creation of Adam and Eve, their fall, and that of the Angels[f], and add several particulars which we read nothing of in Moses. God, they say, by rains of long continuance prepared the slime of the Earth out of which he was to form the body of Adam; after this he sent the Angel Gabriel, and commanded him to take out of seven lays of earth of each an handful. Gabriel obeyed, declared to the Earth what orders he had received from God, and withal mentioned that the Lord had determined to extract that out of her entrails with which he proposed to form Man, who was to be the Monarch over her, and God's Vicegerent. The Earth amazed at this proposition, desired Gabriel to represent her fears to God, that this Creature whom he designed to form out of her bosom, would one day rebel against him, and draw down his curse upon her. Gabriel returned and made a report to God of the Earth's remonstrances; but God resolving to execute his design, dispatched Michael, and afterwards Asraphel, with the same commission. These two Angels returned in like manner to report the Earth's excuses, and absolute refusal to contribute to this work.

Last

[f] Alcoran, Chap. of the Stone. See D'Herbelot. Bibl. Orient. p. 55, &c.

Laſt of all, the Lord deputed Azrael, who without ſaying any thing to the Earth, or asking any queſtions, took haſtily and carried off by force ſeven handfuls of ſeven different beds or lays out of the maſs belonging to her, which he carried to a place in Arabia lying between Mecca and Taïef. Azrael, as a reward of this action, received a commiſſion from God to ſeparate the ſouls of men from their bodies; for which reaſon he is called the Angel of Death.

It is ſcarce credible that the Muſſulmen ſhould literally believe a creation in this manner; but we read this as a tradition in their Authors. Mahomet ſays no more than that God created and framed Man partly out of a ſandy earth, and partly out of a ſtinking ſlime; but as for the Genii, he had already framed them out of a hot glowing fire. As to this difference of Earth made uſe of in the formation of Adam, it is of great ſervice to them in explaining the different colours and qualities of Men who are derived from it, ſome of whom are white, or black, others tawny, yellow, olive-coloured, and red: ſome of one humour, inclination and complection, others of another quite different.

The Angels therefore having with their hands kneaded this Earth brought by Azrael, God with his own hand formed out of it a human ſtatue, which being left for ſome time in the ſame place to dry, the Angels had leiſure to examine it, and Eblis, or Lucifer, the firſt of them, having viewed it on all ſides, and ſtriking it upon the breaſt and belly perceived it ſounded; from thence he concluded, that being empty within, it would be liable to ſeveral wants and temptations in order to fill itſelf; then turning to his companions, he ſaid to them, If God ſhould oblige you to acknowledge this Monarch, whom he propoſes to eſtabliſh as ſuch over the Earth, what would you do? They anſwered, It would be highly neceſſary to obey God. Eblis ſaid as much; but with a ſecret reſolution to do nothing of it.

Some time after, God communicated his Spirit, or his enlivening Breath, to this Statue, infuſed Life and Underſtanding into it, and clothed it in a wonderful dreſs, ſuitable to its dignity. At the ſame time he commanded the Angels to fall proſtrate before it, as a Mark of honour and reſpect. The Angels obeyed; Eblis only refuſed ſubmiſſion, and was therefore driven out of Paradiſe. Adam was placed in his room, and ſoon after God took out of his left ſide, while he was ſleeping, the Woman whom he gave him for a Companion. Adam in a very ſhort time after received God's command, forbidding him to eat of a certain fruit, on pain of falling under his Curſe.

Hereupon Eblis reſolved to be revenged on Adam: He aſſociated with the Peacock and the Serpent, and approaching Adam and Eve had a long Converſation with them, wherein he perſuaded them to eat of the forbidden fruit. They had no ſooner taſted of it but the ſplendid Habits wherein they were dreſs'd fell at their feet, they diſcerned themſelves to be naked, and being aſhamed of their condition ran towards a Fig-tree, with a deſign of covering themſelves with its leaves. Soon after they heard a voice like Thunder, crying out to them, Come down, and depart out of this place: You ſhall become enemies to one another, and ſhall have your habitation and ſubſiſtence for a time on earth.

Adam therefore was thrown headlong from Heaven to Earth, and fell, according to the moſt general opinion, in the iſle of Ceilan, upon Mount Serandib. Eve fell at Gidda, a port of the Red Sea, pretty near to Mecca. The fall of Eblis happened to be at Miſſan, near Baſſora; the Peacock's at Indoſtan, the Serpent's at Niſibe, or Iſpahan; that is to ſay, in the places where theſe Cities were built in after-times.

In the Iſle of Ceilan, or Zeilan, which is the ſame with Serandib, or Zeran-Dir, in the middle almoſt of the Iſland, they ſhew ſtill at this day a very high Mountain, which the Arabians call Rahoun, and the Portugueze, El pico d'Adam, or Adam's Mountain, upon which there is the impreſſion or mark of a Man's foot, which they ſay is Adam's. This impreſſion of his foot is, they ſay, ſeventy cubits in length; and they aſſure us that at that time Adam's other foot was in the Sea. But Robert Knox, an Engliſhman, who lived twenty years in this Iſland, in his Account publiſhed in the year 1681, makes this print of Adam's foot to be no more than about two feet in length[a]. Others[b] tell us that it is a Tradition, not in the Indies only, but over all the Eaſt, that Adam was buried there. But we ſhall ſee other opinions a little lower, concerning the place of his Death and Interment.

Adam therefore finding himſelf alone in this Iſland, deſtitute of every conſolation of any kind, reflected upon himſelf, and being touched with Repentance, lifted up his Hands and Eyes to Heaven, imploring the clemency of his Creator. God, moved by his Repentance, cauſed a tent or pavilion to deſcend from Heaven by the hands of Angels, which they ſay was placed in that very ſpot where Abraham built afterwards the Temple of Mecca.

Gabriel

[a] See Les Notes de M. Renaudot ſur le voyage de la Chine de deux Arabes, p. 134. [b] D'Herbelot Bibl. Orient. p. 806.

Gabriel shew'd him all the ceremonies which were to be made use of in this Sanctuary, in order to obtain the pardon of his Sin. Adam went thither, and performed every thing which he was enjoined to do. Soon after he was conducted by the same Angel to Mount Arafat, where Adam and Eve met again, after a separation of above two hundred years.

From thence they retired into the Isle of Serandib, or Ceilan, where they employ'd themselves in cultivating the Earth, and multiplying their Family. Eve lay in twenty several times, and at each had two Twins, one whereof was Male the other Female. Adam lived 960 Years, of all which, according to the Mussulmen, he spent but half a day in Paradise; but then they explain this day by one of Paradise or the other World, which is equivalent to a thousand years with us; so that this half day was equivalent to 500 years. During his whole life Men had but one Religion, and were often visited by Angels, who assisted and instructed them. The number of Men at the time of Enoch's translation amounted to forty thousand.

They assert that Adam was buried near Mecca, upon Mount Aboucais. Others think that Noah, at the time of the Deluge, put his Body into the Ark, and took care to have it carried to Jerusalem by Melchisedech the Son of Shem his Grandson. The Eastern Christians, and many of the Fathers, have followed this Tradition, and believed that he was buried on Mount Calvary, at the very place where Jesus Christ was crucified. They shew a Chapel still to this day, at Naplouse, or Samaria in Palestine, which goes by Adam's name, and is there respected by the Turks [y]; but the ancient Persians are of opinion, that he was buried at Serandib, and that his Sepulchre was guarded by Lions at the time of the Giants making War against one another.

The Mussulmen believe that Adam was inspired by God, and that a ray of the Divinity passed successively from him to other Prophets. They suppose him to have written ten Volumes, for so we are to understand them, when they say, that God sent them down from Heaven to him.

Some Rabbins, and oriental Authors [z], inform us, that Adam, during the time of his Separation from his Wife, after the Commission of his Sin, as some will have it, or after the Death of Abel, according to others, begat Genii, or familiar Spirits, who, as the Ancients affirm, had Bodies, to whom likewise they apply what is said in Scripture, That the Sons of God beheld the Daughters of Men, and took such of them as they pleased for Wives. Others maintain that these Genii, or Ginns, or Dir, as the Arabians call them, are Creatures older than Adam, that they having rebell'd frequently against God, he resolved to give the government of the World to a new species of Creatures. To this end he created Adam, and commanded the Ginns or Dir to obey him. They who refused submission to him, having Eblis or Lucifer at their head, are what we call the evil Angels; the rest who continued in their duty are the good Angels, or Sons of God; both are corporeal, and even subject unto death.

We shall have another opportunity to speak of Adam in the Articles TERRESTRIAL PARADISE and ADAM'S LANGUAGE, or the first original Language of the World.

Besides the three Sons of Adam whose names are given us by Moses, and are Cain, Abel and Seth, the Eastern People [a] have likewise preserved the names of two others, viz. Abdal-Harth and Rocail. The last was, as they say, the Patriarch Seth's younger Brother, and was perfect Master of the most elevated and obscure Sciences. His Understanding was so lively and penetrating, that he seem'd to be more of an Angel than a Man. Surkrage, who was a powerful Dir or Giant at that time living, desired Seth to send his Brother Rocail to him, to assist him in the government of his Dominions. Seth accordingly sent him, and Rocail became first Minister to this Prince, for whom he built a Palace and a Sepulchre, of so magnificent a Structure, and with so much Art, that there were several Statues belonging to it, of different Metals made by talismanick art, which moved and acted as if they had been animated.

This gives us a specimen of the Eastern People's way of thinking, and the particular Character of their Wit; it shews how much they are lovers of Fictions, of Wonders and Mysteries; for we are not to imagine that all which they relate of Adam, and the other Patriarchs is to be always understood literally; they are frequently no more than Allegories, or moral Reflections included in certain kinds of Parables.

The Cabalists, who are a species of Jewish Doctors, that cover moral, physical and theological Truths under mysterious and dark Expressions; the Cabalists, I say, tell us of the first Adam, Adam Kadmon [b], who is the first and most perfect Emanation that proceeded from the Essence of God, and the first of all that was created in the Beginning. They represent present him like a Man, with a skull, brain, eyes, feet and hands, but some profound Mystery is included in every one of these parts: His skull signifies Wisdom, his right ear Understanding, his left Prudence, and so of the rest. Some Christians have thought, that hereby they described Jesus Christ, the second Person of the Trinity: It is true the Cabalists believe that God, not intending to create the World immediately by himself, created it by the first, the celestial Adam, thereby displaying his Power in a more perfect manner: But they acknowledge that this first Adam had a beginning, and was not without Imperfections; he could not therefore be the Son of God whom we adore.

[y] D'Herbelot Bibl. Orient. p. 56. col. 2. [z] Idem, p. 243. [a] Idem ex Thahmurath Nameh.
[b] Abrah. Cohen-Irira Philosoph. Cabbal. Diss. 6. c. 7. See Basnage's Continuation of the History of the Jews.

The Talmudists tell abundance of fabulous Stories relating to Adam and his Creation[b]. They say that at the first hour of the day God collected the Dust together, out of which he designed to compose him, and so disposed it as to receive the form which he was to give it; at the second Adam stood upon his feet; at the fourth he gave the several Animals their names; the seventh was imployed in the marriage of Adam and Eve. The Lord, as it were a Brideman, conducted her to her new Spouse, with her locks curled, and dressed out in all her Ornaments. At ten a-clock Adam sinn'd, immediately after which Judgment was pass'd upon him; and at twelve he began to feel the punishment of his Sin, and the effects of the Sentence which had been pronounc'd against him. According to the Rabbins[c], Adam was created so excessive tall that he touched Heaven; but after the guilt contracted by him, God put his hand upon his head, and reduced him to a less enormous stature. These Extravagancies they would support from the following passage in Deuteronomy iv. 32. God created Man upon the Earth, and from the one side of Heaven unto the other. They found his Diminution upon this other passage in Psal. cxxxix. 5. Thou hast beset me behind and before, and laid thine hand upon me. The matter of his Body was taken out of different Provinces; the head out of Palestine, the trunk out of Babylonia, and the other parts from other Provinces.

The Angels, upon sight of this unmeasurable Creature, murmur'd at it, as if the Lord had proposed to make a second God in person; but he put a stop to their Murmurs by resting his hand upon the head of Adam, and reducing him to a thousand cubits in stature. They who undertake to explain these expressions, tell us, that God created him with a vast extent of Knowledge in all the sciences of Nature, but that after the commission of his Sin, God deprived him of many Prerogatives which before he was possess'd of.

They add, that he was of so elevated a Nature, that the matter of his Body was so subtle, fine, and thin, as to be almost like the Angels; that he had as perfect a knowledge of God and his Attributes as a creature is capable of. He was not unacquainted even with the incommunicable name of God, Jehovah; for when Adam had appropriated their several names to all the brute Creation, God asked him What is my name? Adam answer'd Jehovah, he who is. This they say Isaiah points to in these words: I am Jehovah, that is my Name; that is to say, the Name which Adam gave me at the beginning of the World. Is. xlii. 8.

As Circumcision is, according to the Jews, the seal of the Covenant between God and Believers, they have imagined that Adam was created circumcised, and, as much as he could, defaced the mark of his Circumcision by violating the covenant of the Lord at his Fall. They ground this Vision upon a passage in Hosea, which runs thus; But they like Adam have transgressed the Covenant; they have dealt treacherously against me. Hos. vi. 7.

Some have imagined that Eve was the forbidden Fruit, which he could not touch without Sin; that the Serpent having first eat of it, produced Cain, who consequently was not the Son of Adam; that the latter was so afflicted at the death of Abel, that he continued an hundred and thirty years without coming near his Wife, after which time only he began to have Children after his own image and resemblance. Some are of opinion, as has been before observed by us, that during this interval he begat Genii or Spirits, which others think were born of Adam and his first Wife, whose name was Lilith. See the Article Lilith.

Notwithstanding the repentance of Adam is so particularly taken notice of in Scripture, and St. Austin [d] mentions his Salvation as the common opinion of almost the whole Church, and that the Son of God at his Resurrection deliver'd him out of Hell, together with the rest of the Just, who expected there his Coming; notwithstanding all this the Church has never thought itself obliged publickly to consecrate his memory, nor place him in the rank of Saints; but neither has it believed itself concern'd to prevent several private Persons from paying a religious worship Gen. iii. 17, 18. Wisd. x. 1.

[b] Midras Tehillim. Ps. xcii. Vide Basnage, ibid. t. 4. p. 186. [c] Gemar. Sanhedrin. fol. 582.
[d] Aug. Ep. 163. nov. Edit. p. 575. Et de illo quidem primo homine quod eum inde (ex inferno) solverit, Ecclesia fere tota consentit quod eam non inaniter credidisse credendum est, undecunque hoc traditum sit, &c. Vide & de peccatorum meritis & de nat. & grat. contra Julian. l. 6, &c.

ſhip to him. There is a Chapel built to him on Mount Calvary [e], upon preſumption that he was buried there: This Chapel is ſerved by Greeks, but it is not perfumed with Incenſe, nor is any particular Veneration paid to it, like other Chapels or Altars in the publick Proceſſions. The Greeks put Adam and Eve together, with all the righteous of the Old Teſtament, and honour them on the nineteenth of December [f], or, more properly ſpeaking, on the Sunday which immediately precedes the Feſtival of Chriſtmas. They moreover celebrate the baniſhment of our firſt Parents out of Paradiſe with a religious mourning, and very doleful Prayers on the fourth of February, or firſt day of their Lent. Some Latin Martyrologies commemorate Adam upon the twenty fourth of April: There is a Julian Calendar which takes notice of him on the twenty fourth of December, and ſome Martyrologies make mention of the creation and death of Adam on the twenty fifth of March, as it were with a deſign of bringing the firſt old Adam nearer to the new, who was conceiv'd and died upon the ſame day, according to many of the Ancients.

We ſhall ſpeak of the PRÆADAMITES in the Article particularly deſign'd for them.

ADAMA, one of the five wicked Cities which were deſtroyed by fire from Heaven, and buried under the waters of the Dead Sea. It was the moſt eaſterly of all thoſe which were ſwallowed up; and there is ſome probability that it was not intirely ſunk under the waters, or that the Inhabitants of the Country rebuilt a new City of the ſame name upon the eaſtern ſhore of the Dead Sea; for Iſaiah, according to the Septuagint, ſays, that God will deſtroy the Moabites, the City of Ar, and the remnant of Adama.

Gen. xix. 24.

Iſ. xv. ult. Ἀρῶ τὸ σπέρμα Μωὰβ καὶ Ἀριὴλ, καὶ τὸ κατάλοιπον Ἀδαμᾶ.

ADAMAH, a City of the Tribe of Naphtali, Joſh. xix. 36. The Septuagint call it Armath, and the Vulgate Edema.

ADAMI, a City ſituated in the Tribe of Naphtali, Joſh. xix. 33.

ADAMITES, [g] a ſort of Hereticks of the ſecond Age: The Author of this Sect was one Prodicus, a Diſciple of Carpocrates; they aſſumed the title of Adamites, pretending to the innocence of Adam, whoſe nakedneſs they imitated in their Churches, which they called Paradiſe. Community of Women was one of their principal tenets; they lived, or made a ſhew of living, in Solitude and Continency, condemning the ſtate of Matrimony; and when any of them were guilty of any particular crimes, ſuch an one they called Adam, and that he had eaten of the forbidden Fruit; and when they expelled him from their Aſſembly, they drove him, as their phraſe was, out of Paradiſe. This Hereſy was renewed in theſe laſt Ages by one Picard [h], a native of Flanders, who retired into Bohemia, where he introduced this Sect. There were ſome in Poland and England who were followers of it, and the modern Adamites are ſaid to hold their Aſſemblies in the night-time, and to obſerve theſe rules exactly, Swear, forſwear, and reveal not the ſecret. Some Anabaptiſts are accuſed with falling into the extravagances of the Adamites.

ADAR, the twelfth month of the eccleſiaſtical year among the Hebrews, and the ſixth of their civil year. There are but nine and twenty days in it, and it anſwers our February; it ſometimes enters into the month of March, according to the courſe of the Moon. See hereafter the Article MONTHS.

On the third day of Adar the building of the Temple was finiſhed, at the ſollicitations of Haggai and Zechariah, and the Dedication of it made in a ſolemn manner. Ezra vi. 15. In the Year of the World 3489, before J. C. 511, before the vulgar Æra 515.

On the ſeventh day the Jews celebrate a Faſt upon the occaſion of the death of Moſes.

On the thirteenth day they celebrate the Faſt which they call Eſther's, in memory of that obſerv'd by Mordecai, Eſther, and the Jews of Suſa, to divert the calamities with which they were threaten'd by Haman.

On the fourteenth they celebrate the Feſtival of Purim, on the ſcore of their Deliverance from the cruelty of Haman, Eſth. ix. 17.

The twenty fifth day is kept in commemoration of Jehoiachim, King of Judah, advanced by Evil-merodach above other Kings, who were at his Court, Jerem. lii. 31, 32.

As the Lunar year, which the Jews have been uſed to follow in their calculation, is ſhorter than the Solar year by eleven days, which at the end of three years make a month, they then inſert a thirteenth month, which they call Veadar, or a ſecond Adar, which has nine and twenty days in it.

ADAR, a City in the Tribe of Judah, Joſh. xv. 3. Euſebius places another Town of this name in the neighbourhood of Lidda or Dioſpolis, in the canton of Thamna.

ADAR, or Hazer-addar, a Village taken notice of in the book of Numbers, xxxiv. 4.

ADARCONIM [i], a ſort of Money, whereof there is mention made in 1 Chr. xxix. 7. and Ezra viii. 27. The Vulgate tranſlates it golden Pence, the Septuagint pieces

[e] Quaresm. t. 2. l. 5. p. 481 & 483.
[f] Bolland. die 4. Febr. p. 449. t. 3. Apr. p. 260. t. 3. Mart. p. 541.
[g] Vide Epiphan. hæreſ. 52. Theodoret. hæretic. Fab. l. 1. c. 6. Auguſtin. de hæreſ. See M. Bayle's Dictionary under the Name of Adamites.
[h] He lived in the fifteenth Century.
[i] אדרכונים Adarconim.

pieces of Gold. We do not question but that these Adarconim * were Daricks, a sort of gold coin, which some [l] value at twenty drachms of Silver, and others [m] at eleven livres, eleven pence, nine deniers, and a quarter of French Money. See hereafter DARCMONIM, which is the same with Adarconim. Herodotus [n] says, that Daricks were first coin'd in the Reign of Darius, the Son of Hystaspes, who lived long after the Author of the Chronicles and Ezra; but the Scholiast of Aristophanes affirms, that they were first made current by another Darius, who lived long before Darius, the Son of Hystaspes †.

ADARSA, or as it is called in Greek, 1 Macc. vii. 40. Adasa, a City of the Tribe of Ephraim, four miles from Bethoron [o], and not far from Gophna [p]. We place it between the upper Bethoron and Diospolis;
1 Macc. vii. 45. because it is said in the Maccabees that the victorious Army of Judas pursued the Syrians from Adasa to Gadara, or Gazara, which is the length of one day's journey. The same City of Adarsa is called likewise Adazer, and Adaco, or Acedosa, in Josephus [q]. Here it was that Nicanor was overcome, and his Army put to flight by Judas Maccabæus, notwithstanding that his Army consisted of three thousand Men only, and Nicanor's of thirty five thousand. Josephus tells us, that Judas, in another War, was killed in the same place [r].

ADBEEL, the third Son of Ishmaël, and Head of one of the Tribes of the Ishmaelites, Gen. xxv. 13.

ADDAN, Cherub and Immer not being able to prove whence they derived their original, at their return from Babylon, were excluded from the number of the true Israelites, Ezra xi. 59.

ADDAR, the Son of Bela, the Son of Benjamin, 1 Chron. viii. 3.

ADDER. See ASP.

ADDI, the Son of Cosam, and the Father of Melchi. He is placed by S. Luke among the Ancestors of Jesus Christ, according to the Flesh, Luke iii. 28.

ADEODATUS, filius saltus, polymitarius de Bethleem; that is to say, Given of God, the Son of the Wood, a Weaver of Bethlehem; or to speak more correctly according to the Hebrew, Elhanan the Son of the Jarim, who were Weavers of Bethlehem; or according to the Text of the Chronicles, which seems to be more pure, Elhanan the Son of Jaïr, a Beth-lemite, slew the Brother of Goliath. This, in all probability, is the very Elhanan spoken of in 2 Sam. xxiii. 24. who was the Son of Joab's Uncle by the Mother's side; that is to say, Son to one of David's Brothers, who was a Native of Bethlehem, and very much distinguished by his valour. The passage of Samuel being thus restored, the Difficulty is easily resolved, which some have started concerning Adeodatus filius saltus, which several Interpreters [s] have endeavoured to confound with David. Elhanan did not kill Goliath, but the Brother of Goliath, whether by the word Brother we understand his Brother in blood, or barely one like him.

2 Sam. xxi. 19. אלחנן בן יערי ארגים בית הלחמי.

1 Chron. xx. 5. ויך אלחנן בן יעיר את לחמי אחי גלית.

I read, יעיר בתלמי את אחי גלית.

ADER, the Tower of Ader. St. Jerom observes [t], that the place where the Angels declared the Birth of Jesus Christ to the Shepherds, was called by this name, Luke xi. 8, 9. It is said that the Empress Helena built a Church upon the same spot, the remains whereof are seen at this day. See Mich. iv. 8. Turris gregis.

ADER, one of those who took the City of Gath, 1 Chron. viii. 15.

ADIABENE, a Country in Assyria, thro' which the River Lycus passes, and discharges itself into the Tigris. The name of Adiabene is not to be met with in our Vulgate; but Josephus [u] speaks much of Helena Queen of the Adiabenians, and of Izates her Son, who were both Converts to Judaism in the time of the Emperor Claudius, about the year of J. C. 41. There are some Authors [x], who believe that this Queen and her Son embraced Christianity, and that Josephus had a mind to do honour to his Nation by a Conversion which belonged properly to the Christian Church. But I see the marks of Judaism only, both in Helena and Izates, and am of opinion, that Adiabene is the Province of Ava, thro' which the River Ahava, or Adiava runs. See hereafter AHABA.

ADIDA, a City of Judah, at which place Simon Maccabæus encamped, in order to dispute the entrance into the Country

[l] Gronov. de pecunia veterum, l. 3. c. 7. [m] M. le Pelletier of Roan. [n] Herodot. l. 4. c. 166. [o] Joseph. Antiq. l. xii. c. 17. [p] Euseb. in Adasa. [q] Joseph. Antiq. l. xii. c. 17. & de bello, l. 1. c. 1. [r] Joseph. de Bello, l. 1. c. 1. p. 710. b. [s] Chald. Rabb. Rupert. Raban. alii recentiores. [t] Hieronym. Ep. 27. [u] Joseph. Antiq. l. 20. c. 2. [x] Orosius, l. 7. c. 6.

* The Adarconim of the Scripture, and Darkonoth of the Talmudists, so called from the Greek Δαρεικοί, Darics. A Daric was a piece of Gold of the value of one of our Jacobus's. See Prid. Con.

† It was Darius the Mede, who coined a great number of pieces of pure Gold called Darics, or Stateres Darici: This Darius was the first King of the Medes and Persians, who coined Gold Money. They were stamped on one side with the effigies of an Archer, who was crowned with a spiked Crown, had a Bow in his left hand, and an Arrow in his right, and was clothed with a long Robe. I have seen one of them in Gold, and another in Silver. They were of the same weight and value with the Attic Stater, or piece of Gold Money weighing two Attic Drachms. Darius seems to have learnt the art and use of Money from the conquered Kingdom of the Lydians, and to have re-coined their Gold; for the Medes, before they conquered the Lydians, had no Money. The Lydians were the first who coined Gold and Silver; and Crœsus coined Gold Monies in plenty, called Crœsei; and it was not reasonable that the Monies of the Kings of Lydia should continue current after the Overthrow of their Kingdom, and therefore Darius re-coined it with his own effigies, but without altering the current weight and value. See The Chronology of the ancient Kingdoms amended, by Sir Isaac Newton, p. 319, &c.

try with Tryphon, who had treacherously
1 Macc. xiii. 13. seized on his Brother Jonathan at Ptolemais. We think this to be the Adida mentioned in 1 Macc. xii. 38.

ADIEL, the Son of Adiel, of the Tribe of Judah, 1 Chron. iv. 36.

ADITHA, or Adatha, Adia, or Adathaim, a City belonging to the Tribe of Judah, Josh. xv. 36. Eusebius mentions two Cities of this name Adatha, one lying towards Gaza, the other towards Lidda, Eastward of this City.

ADLAI, principal Herdsman to King David, 1 Chron. xxvii. 29.

ADMATHA, one of the seven principal Officers belonging to the Court of Esth. i. 14. Ahasuerus.

ADMIRE, Admiration, Admirable. Besides the common signification of these words, which all the world is acquainted with, the Hebrews often make use of them to signify the conduct of God, as well towards his Children as Sinners, in trying or rewarding the one, and chastising the other, in this or in the other world. The Lord
Ps. iv. 3. hath shewed his wonders to his Holy One, Mirificavit Dominus sanctum suum. Shew xvii. 7. thy marvelous Loving-kindness, Mirifica misericordias tuas, &c. I will make the Exod. viii. 22. ix. 4. Land of Goshen to be admired, Faciam mirabilem terram Gessen. That is to say, I will distinguish it in a wonderful manner from the rest of Egypt. The most learned Interpreters agree, that the Hebrew פלא Pale. Pale, or Pele, which is generally translated admirable, signifies properly to distinguish, *separate. See likewise Exod. ix. 4. Faciet Dominus mirabile inter possessiones Israel, & possessiones Ægyptiorum. In this sense every thing remote from the common course of Life or of Nature, every thing which is any way distinguishable, is admirable.

ADMIRABLE, is often placed for difficult, or even for impossible. Sarah laughing when the Angel promised to make her
Gen. xviii. 14. the Mother of a Son, he answered, Will this be admirable to God?

It is likewise taken for what is above our capacity or condition. Such knowledge is too wonderful for me, I cannot Ps. cxxxix. 6. attain unto it, Mirabilis facta est, scientia tua ex me, or pro me. And in another cxxxi. 1. place, I do not exercise my self in great matters, or in things too high for me, Non ambulari in magnis neque in mirabilibus super me. There is nothing admirable be-Ecclus. xxxix. 20. fore God, says the Son of Sirach; nothing is hid from his eyes. And the Man born blind, upon his being healed by Jesus Christ, It is admirable that ye should not know whence he is; and yet he hath opened mine Eyes. It is said somewhere, that our Saviour admired, for example, when he admired the Centurion's and the Wo- Mat. viii. 10. Luke vii. 9.
man of Canaan's faith. That is to say, he expressed himself as if he admired it; Mat. xv. 28.
for admiration being the effect of ignorance, it is impossible that he should admire any thing. Why askest thou thus after my name, seeing it is admirable? It is Judg. xiii. 18.
above thy comprehension, and of no service to you to know it. My love to thee, O Jonathan, is more admirable†; greater, 2 Sam. i. 26.
more ardent, than that of a Lover for the person whom he is most passionately fond of. The Stone which the builders refused, is become the head Stone of the Corner; Ps. cxviii. 23.
this seems admirable to us. It is an effect of God's power.

ADNA, a Levite, who, when the Jews returned from the Captivity of Babylon, forsook his Wife, whom he had married contrary to the Law. Ezra x. 30.

I. ADNAH, a valiant Man of the Tribe of Manasseh, and one of those who left his party, to espouse that of David. 1 Chron. xii. 20.

II. ADNAH, General of the Troops belonging to Jehoshaphat King of Judah. 2 Chron. xvii. 15.

ADOM, or Adam, a Town upon the Banks of the River Jordan. Some[a] place it upon the Dead Sea, below the place where the Israelites passed the Jordan. Others place it much above, towards Scythopolis and Zarthan; and this is its true Josh. iii. 16.
situation.

ADONAI, is one of the names of God. This word signifies properly My Lords, in the plural number, as Adoni signifies My Lord, in the singular number. The Jews, who either out of respect or superstition do not pronounce the name of Jehovah, read Adonai in the room of it, as often as they meet with Jehovah in the Hebrew Text. But the ancient Jews were not so nice: There is no Law which forbids them to pronounce the name of God.

ADONIBEZEK, King of the City of Bezek, in the land of Canaan, seventeen miles from Naplouse eastward[c]. Adonibezek was a powerful and cruel Prince, who took seventy Kings, and having order'd the extremities of their hands and feet to be cut off, made them eat the remains of what was served up to him under Judg. i. 4. vi. 7.
his table. After the death of Joshua, the Hebrews finding themselves to be press'd within too narrow a compass by the Canaanites, who endeavour'd to keep their footing footing in the Country, consulted the Lord, that they might know who should lead them to the war against their Enemies. The Lord directed that they should put themselves under the conduct of the Tribe of Judah. This Tribe engaged that of Simeon to unite with it, in order to reduce the Canaanites, who possess'd several places within their allotment, with a promise mutually to assist those of the Tribe of Simeon in making a conquest of what the Canaanites still possess'd within their Division. The two Tribes marched therefore against Adonibezek, who was at the head of an Army of Canaanites and Perizzites. They beat him, killed ten thousand of his Men, and having taken him alive, they cut off his toes and fingers: Then Adonibezek acknowledged the justice of this Punishment, and owned that God treated him in the manner wherein he had treated the seventy Princes who had fallen into his Power. The Hebrews afterwards carried him to Jerusalem, which they were going to besiege, and there he died, in the year of the World 2585, before Jesus Christ 1415, before the vulgar Æra 1419.

[a] Celler. Geogr. antiq. l. 3. c. 13. [b] אדני Adonai, Dom. Gr. Κύριος, יהוה Jehovah. [c] Euseb. in loc. in Βεζεκ.

* And this Interpretation is followed by our English Translators, who in the several places cited by our Author, read set apart, sever. Buxtorf, under פלא observes, Sunt & quædam ex hujus verbi formâ, pro segregare, quæ pertinent ad פלה Niph. Segregari, separari. Buxt. Lex.

† The Author, in this passage, varies from the Text, where David describes the affection of his Friend to himself, not his to Jonathan. I confess, Errors of this nature are very inconsiderable, and not worth remarking; but few of more importance have escaped this diligent and exact Writer.

ADONIJAH, the fourth Son of David and Haggith, was born at Hebron, at the time when his Father was acknowledged King by one part only of Israel, while the most considerable paid obedience still to Ishbosheth, the Son of Saul. Adonijah seeing his eldest Brothers Amnon and Absalom were dead, believed that the Crown of Judah, by right of birth, unquestionably belong'd to him; and as his Father David, towards the latter end of his Life, was fallen into so weak a condition that he could take no care of the affairs of Government, he thought he should endeavour before his death to have himself acknowledged King: he therefore set up a magnificent Equipage, commanded chariots to be made, took Horsemen into his service, and fifty Men to run before him, and these at all times attended him. David his Father was not displeased with his doing this, and never reproved him for it. Adonijah was then the eldest of the Royal Family, extremely handsome in his person, was beloved by the King his Father, and had a strong party in the Court.

2 Sam. iii. 4.

1 Kings i. 5, 6, &c.

He had a very close engagement, particularly with Joab, the General of David's Armies, and with the High-priest Abiathar; and these were the two persons who had more interest in the King than any others of his Dominions; but neither the High priest Zadok, (for at that time there were two High-priests in the Kingdom) nor Benaiah, the Son of Jehoiada, Captain of the King's guards, nor Nathan the Prophet, nor the body of David's Army, were of his party. One day therefore, Adonijah having made a great entertainment for his Adherents near the fountain of Rogel, eastward of the City, and below the walls of Jerusalem, he invited all the King's Sons to it except Solomon, and the principal Persons of Judah, except Nathan, Zadok, and Benaiah. His design was to procure himself at that meeting to be proclaimed King of the Country, and to get possession of the Government before the death of David. But matters fell out quite otherwise.

Nathan having understood what was transacting, went directly to Bathsheba, the Mother of Solomon, and said to her, Do you know that Adonijah designs to get himself proclaim'd King? and do you observe the danger which you and your Son Solomon will be expos'd to if he succeeds in this attempt? Be advis'd therefore by me; go to the King, tell him what is doing, and put him in mind of the promise which he made you, that Solomon your Son should be his Successor, and while you are thus conversing with the King, I will come in as by surprise and second what you shall have said. Bathsheba therefore went immediately to the King, and while she was talking with him, the King was told that the Prophet Nathan was there. David gave orders for his admission, and Nathan address'd himself to him in these terms: My Lord O King! is it by your orders that Adonijah has directed himself to be declared King, and Successor to your Majesty? for he has this day made a great entertainment for the chief officers of the Army, and the great men of the Court; and after it was over they all saluted him with the cries of Long live King Adonijah: But neither the High-priest Zadok, nor Benaiah, nor Solomon, or myself, were invited by him.

Then David, commanding Bathsheba to be again called in, swore to her that he would perform the Promise he had made in favour of Solomon; and sending immediately for Zadok, Nathan, and Benaiah, he said to them, Take my guards with you, mount Solomon upon my mule, conduct him to the fountain of Gihon, which is westward of the City, and at this place let Zadok and Nathan crown him, and with trumpets sounding proclaim him King of Israel, with cries of Long live King Solomon. After this you shall bring him back hither, and seat him on my Throne; he shall reign in my place, and I will put the Government of Judah and Israel into his hands. This was all immediately executed, and all the People being got in crowds together, the sound of Instruments was every where heard, and the acclamations of the People, saying, God save King Solomon. Jonathan, the Son of Abiathar the High-priest, gave notice instantly of this to Adonijah, Joab, and all those of his his party who were still in the tent where they had been eating.

Upon this they rose from table in great fright, and retired every one to his own home: Adonijah went out with the rest, and fearing lest Solomon should put him to death, retired to the Tabernacle, and laid hold of the horn of the Altar of Burnt-offerings, which being reported to Solomon, he said, If Adonijah would shew himself a worthy man, not a hair of his head should fall to the Earth; but if Wickedness should be found in him, he should surely die. King Solomon therefore sent, and they brought him down from the Altar, and he came and bowed himself to King Solomon; and Solomon said unto him, Go to thine House. This happened in the year of the World 2989, before Jesus Christ 1011, before the vulgar Æra 1015.

[In the Year of the World 2990, before J. C 1010, before the vulgar Æra 1014. 1 Kings ii. 13.] Some time after David dying, Adonijah waited upon Bathsheba, the mother of Solomon, who said to him, Comest thou peaceably? He answer'd peaceably, and that he had a favour to ask of her. Thou knowest, added he, that the Kingdom was mine, and that all Israel set their faces on me that I should reign, howbeit the Kingdom is turned about, and is become my Brother's, for it was his from the Lord. And now I ask one petition of thee: Speak, I pray thee, unto Solomon the King (for he will not say thee nay) that he give me Abishag the Shunamite to Wife. Bathsheba promised him to speak unto the King about it, and in effect did so, telling him that Adonijah would be glad to have Abishag for his Wife, who had been given to David to warm him in his old Age. To this Solomon replied, Why dost thou ask this of me? ask for him the Kingdom also, (for he is mine elder Brother) even for him, for he has the High-priest Abiathar already for him, and Joab the General of the Troops. Then Solomon swore by the Lord, saying, God do so to me and more also, if Adonijah has not spoken this word against his own life. I swear by the Lord Adonijah shall be put to death this day. And Benaiah, the Son of Jehoiada, being sent to execute this order, fell upon Adonijah and slew him, in the year of the World 2990, before Jesus Christ 1010, before the vulgar Æra 1014.

ADONIKAM, returned from Babylon with six hundred Men of his Family. [Ezra ii. 13.]

ADONIRAM, the principal Receiver of Solomon's tributes, and chief Director of the thirty thousand men whom this Prince sent to Lebanon, to cut timber for his buildings. [1 Kings v. 14.] I cannot tell whether he may not be the same Person with Adoram, who had the same Employment in the beginning of Rehoboam's Reign. See ADORAM. [1 Kings xii. 18. & 2 Chr. x. 18. xi. 9.]

ADONIS. The text of the Vulgate in Ezekiel viii. 14. imports, that this Prophet saw Women sitting in the Temple, and weeping for Adonis; but according to the reading of the Hebrew text, they are said to weep for Tammuz, or the hidden one. [Ezek. viii. 14. מבכות את התמון.] Among the Egyptians Adonis was adored under the name of Osiris, the husband of Isis *: But he was sometimes called too by the name of Ammuz [b], or Tammuz, the concealed, to denote' probably his death or burial. The Hebrews in derision call him sometimes the Dead, because they wept for him, and represented him as one dead in his coffin; and at other times they call him the Image of Jealousy, because he was the object of the God Mars's Jealousy. [Ps. cvi. 28. Levit. xix. 27. 28. Ezek. viii. 3, 5.] The Syrians, Phœnicians, and People of the isle of Cyprus, called him Adonis; and we are of opinion that the Ammonites and Moabites gave him the name of Baal-peor [c].

The manner wherein they celebrated the festivals of this false Deity was this: They represented him as lying dead in a coffin, they wept for him, bemoaned themselves, and sought for him with great eagerness and inquietude. After this they feigned that they had found him again, and he was living: At this good news they shewed marks of the most extraordinary joy, and were guilty of a thousand lewd practices to convince Venus how gladly they congratulated her upon the return and recovery of her Husband, as before they had condoled with her upon the loss of him, and his death. The Hebrew Women therefore, of whom Ezekiel is speaking, celebrated the Feasts of Tammuz or Adonis in Jerusalem, and God shewed the Prophet these Women weeping, even in his Temple, for this infamous God.

The Rabbins tell us, that Tammuz [d] was an idolatrous Prophet, who having been put to death by the King of Babylon, all the Idols of the Country flocked together about a statue of the Sun, which this Prophet, who was a magician, had suspended between Heaven and Earth: There they began all together to deplore the Prophet's death; for which reason a Festival was instituted every year, to renew the memory of this Ceremony, at the beginning of the month Tammuz, which answers pretty nearly to our June. In this Temple a statue was erected, representing

[a] Vide Plutarch de defectu oracul.

[c] See our Dissertation on Baal-peor, before the book of Numbers.

[b] Kimchi, Maimon. alii Hebr. Vide & Sant. Pagnin. in Thesauro.

* The Greeks worshipp'd Isis and Osiris under other Names; as for example, under that of Bacchus, and the Arabians under that of Adonis.

Ogygia † me Bacchum canit;
Osyrin Ægyptus vocat;
Arabica gens, Adoneum.

† Aug-…

presenting Tammuz to the life. The Statue was hollow, the Eyes were of lead. Below a gentle fire was kindled, which insensibly heated the Statue, melted the lead, and made room for the People to believe that the Idol wept. During all this time the Babylonish Women who were in the Temple fell a shrieking, and made strange lamentations. This is the Story they tell us. But I should be glad to see good Proofs of it.

As to Adonis; the account we have of him from fabulous History is this. Adonis was the Son of Cyniras, King of Cyprus, and Myrrha the Daughter of this Prince. So that he was at once both the Brother and the Son of Myrrha. He was so very beautiful that Venus run away with him, and lived with him in the midst of a wood, where Adonis exercised himself in hunting. A wild Boar having unhappily killed him, Venus lamented for him in an inconsolable manner. The Eastern People, in imitation of her mourning, generally established some solemn days for the bewailing of Adonis. The Poets relate, that Venus obtained the favour of Proserpine to have her Minion restored to life, and that he should pass six months on Earth, and six in Hell. Hereupon those publick Rejoicings were founded, which succeeded the Lamentations of his death. Some say he was of Syria, others again of Cyprus, others again of Egypt. See those Authors, who treat of Fables; and in particular, M. Le Clerc's Biblioth. Universelle. T. 3. Septemb, 1686. An historical Explanation of the Fable of Adonis.

What the fabulous Relations tell us concerning the Birth of Adonis, is much the same with what we learn from the sacred History concerning Lot's Incest with his Daughters. Myrrha the Daughter of Cyniras King of Cyprus, conceived an infamous Passion for her Father; she was got with child by him, without his knowing it, and was delivered of Adonis. Chemosh was the Deity of the Moabites. Moab sprung like Adonis, from an incestuous Conversation. There is some affinity between the words Chemosh, and Ammuz or Tammuz, whom we take to be the same with Adonis. Adonis, as Macrobius informs us, was the Sun; Chemosh likewise represented this Luminary, and under this Idea was adored by the Moabites.

The Scene of Adonis's History is said to have been at Biblos in Phœnicia[f], and this pretended Deity is supposed to have been killed by a wild Boar in the Mountains of Libanus, from which the River Adonis descends. This River once a year changed the colour of its Waters, and appeared as red as Blood. This was the signal for celebrating their Adonia, or Feasts of Adonis. It was not lawful to omit the observance of them; great Lamentations were made at this time thro' Town and Country, they cried dreadfully, whipt themselves, and imitated all the Ceremonies of the most serious Mourning for a dead Person. After the Mourning was ended, they performed the funeral Solemnities for him as one just deceased. The next day it was given out that he was alive, and had ascended into the Air.

The common People were persuaded to believe, that the Egyptians, at the feasts of Adonis, sent a Box by Sea made of rushes or Egyptian paper, and fashioned in the form of a Head[f], in which a letter was inclosed, informing the Inhabitants of Biblos, a City above seven days journey distant from the Coasts of Egypt, that their God Adonis, whom they apprehended to be lost, had been discovered. The vessel which carried this Letter arrived always safe at Biblos at the end of seven days. Lucian tells us he was a witness of this Event. Procopius, S. Cyril of Alexandria[g], and some other learned Men, are of opinion that Isaiah alludes to this superstitious Custom, when he says, Wo to the Land shadowing with wings, which is beyond the River of Ethiopia: that sendeth Ambassadors by the Sea, even vessels of bul-rushes upon the Waters. Some translate, That sendeth Images or Idols by the Sea[h]. But the Hebrew signifies properly Ambassadors deputed thither by Sea, to carry the news of Adonis's Resurrection. In our Comment on Isaiah, we have given another sense to this Passage, which has no relation to Adonis.

Is. xviii. 2. השלח בים צירים. 70. Ἀποστέλλων ἐν θαλάσσῃ ὅμηρα. Mittens in mari obsides.

The Heathens who were reproached with the impertinency of these Feasts of Adonis, and the childish and shameful subject which had given occasion for them, explained things by saying that Adonis, by his Death and Resurrection, represented the Sun, which every year is more remote from us during the Winter, and advances nearer to us in the spring; or Seeds sown in the Earth, which die there before they shoot up and appear above ground. But these Explanations come too late. It is a large concession, to allow that the Women of Israel, who worshiped Adonis, intended no more than paying their Adorations to the Sun: These, it is very credible, were limited to Adonis the Husband of Venus, or, if you please, to Osiris the Husband of Isis: For it is very probable, that in Ezekiel's time none had as yet any knowledge in Judea of the Deities or Theology of the Greeks.

ADONIZEDEK, King of Zedek, or Jerusalem; for this City is believed to have have had four names; viz. Salem, Jerusalem, Jebus, and Zedeck. A proof of this laſt name we have in Melchiſedeck; that is to ſay, the King of Sedech, or Salem. Adonizedeck therefore having underſtood that the Inhabitants of Gibeon had made their compoſition with the Hebrews, and that the Cities of Jericho and Ai had been deſtroyed by them, was ſtruck with terror, and conſidered how he might put a ſtop to the Conqueſts of the Iſraelites. He ſent to Hoham King of Hebron, to Piram King of Jarmuth, to Japhia King of Lachiſh, and unto Debir King of Eglon, inviting them to join with him, in order to go and take Gibeon, and chaſtiſe the Inhabitants who had ſubmitted to the Iſraelites. Theſe five Kings therefore marched againſt Gibeon, and beſieged it.

[e] Lucian de Dea Syra. [f] Idem Ibidem βυβλίνην κεφαλήν. Vide & Bochart. Phaleg. l. 4 c. 2. [g] Procop. & Cyril. Alex. in Isai. xviii. [h] Bochart. loc. cit.

[Joſh. x. 1, 2, &c. In the Year of the World 2553, before J. C. 1447, before the vulg. Æra 1451.]

The Gibeonites, upon this, ſent in haſte to demand Succours of Joſhua, who was ſtill at Gilgal. Joſhua, without delay, choſe ſome of the moſt gallant Men of his Army, and marching all night, fell in with the Enemy at break of day. The Lord ſpread terror among their Troops, and Joſhua made a great ſlaughter of them. He purſued them towards Bethoron, cutting them in pieces till they reached Azekah and Makkedah. In this battle the Lord ſhowered down Hail-ſtones upon them, and ſtopped the Sun and Moon at Joſhuah's prayer.

The five Kings having ſaved themſelves by flight, went and hid themſelves in a Cave, near the Town of Makkedah; which being reported to Joſhua, he gave orders for ſtopping the mouth of the Cave with large ſtones, and left Men ſufficient to guard it. In the mean time, the Iſraelites continued the purſuit till Evening; and when they returned unto the Camp near Makkedah, Joſhua gave orders to have the mouth of the Cave opened; and producing the five Kings before the whole Army of Iſrael, he ſaid to the principal Officers, Come near, put your feet upon the necks of theſe Kings; fear not, nor be diſmayed; for thus ſhall the Lord do to all your Enemies, againſt whom ye fight. And afterwards Joſhua ſmote the five Kings, and ſlew them, and hanged them on five Trees, and they were hanging upon the Trees untill the Evening; and when the Sun was going down, Joſhua commanded that they ſhould take them down off the Trees, and caſt them into the Cave wherein they had been hid, and laid great ſtones in the Cave's mouth; all which was executed.

ADOPTION, is an action whereby a Man takes a Stranger into his family, in order to make him part of it, acknowledge him for his Son, and deſign him for the heir of his Eſtate. I do not find that Adoption, properly ſpeaking, was in uſe among the Hebrews. Moſes ſays nothing of it in his Laws, and Jacob's Adoption of his two Grandſons Ephraim and Manaſſeh, is not properly ſuch, but a kind of Subſtitution, whereby he intended that the two Sons of Joſeph ſhould have each their lot in Iſrael, as if they were his own Sons. Thy two Sons, ſays he, Ephraim and Manaſſeh, are mine, as Reuben and Simeon they ſhall be mine. But as he gives no inheritance to their Father Joſeph, all the favour he does him is, that inſtead of one part which he would have had to divide between Ephraim and Manaſſeh, he gives him two: The effect of this Adoption related only to the increaſe of fortune and inheritance between the Sons of Joſeph. [Gen. xlviii. 1.]

Another kind of Adoption in uſe among the Iſraelites conſiſted in the obligation one Brother was under to marry the Widow of another who died without Children; ſo that the Children born of this marriage were look'd upon as belonging to the deceas'd Brother, and went by his name, a practice which was cuſtomary before the Law, as we ſee in the Hiſtory of Tamar; but neither was this the manner of adopting ſo well known among the Greeks and Romans. [Deut. xxv. 5. Ruth iv. Mat. xxii. 24.] [Gen. xxviii. 8.]

Pharaoh's Daughter adopted young Moſes, and Mordecai Eſther. We are not acquainted with the Ceremonies obſerved on theſe occaſions, nor how far the Privileges of Adoption extended, but it is to be preſumed that they were the ſame with thoſe we meet with in the Roman Laws; that adopted Children ſhared in the eſtate with the natural Children; that they aſſumed the name of the Perſon who adopted them, and became ſubject to his paternal Power who received them into his Family. [Exod. ii. 10. Eſther ii. 7, 15.]

By the paſſion of our Saviour, and the communication of the Merits of his death, which are applied to us by Baptiſm, we become the adopted Children of God, and have a part in the inheritance of Heaven. This is what St. Paul teaches us in ſeveral places; Ye have not received the Spirit of bondage again to fear, but ye have received the Spirit of Adoption, whereby we cry Abba Father. And, We wait for the Adoption of the Children of God. And again, God ſent forth his Son to redeem them that were under the Law, that we might receive the Adoption of Sons. [Rom. viii. 15.] [Ver. 23.] [Gal. iv. 5.]

Among the Mahometans[1] the ceremony of Adoption is performed by obliging him who is adopted to paſs through the ſhirt of the Perſon who is adopting him. For this reaſon, to adopt among the Turks is expreſſed by ſaying to draw any one through one's ſhirt, and an adopted Son is called by

[1] D'Herbelot Bibl. Orient. p. 47.

by them Akietogli, the Son of another life, because he was not begotten in this. Something like this is observable among the Hebrews: Elijah adopts the Prophet
[* 1 Kings xix. 19.] Elisha, and communicates the gift of Prophecy to him by putting his mantle upon him, Elias misit pellium suum super illum; and when Elijah was carried away in a
[2 Kings ii. 15.] fiery Chariot, he let fall his mantle, which was taken up by Elisha his disciple, his spiritual Son, and Successor in the office of a Prophet.

Moses dress'd Eleazar in Aaron's sacred [Num xx. 26.] vestments, when this High-priest was upon the point of being gather'd to his Fathers, to shew thereby that Eleazar succeeded him in the functions of the Priesthood, and in some sort adopted him for the exercise of this Dignity. The Lord told Shebna, the Captain of the Temple, that he would deprive him of this honourable station, and substitute Eliakim, the
[If. xxii. 21.] Son of Hilkiah, in his room. I will cloath him with thy robe, saith the Lord, and strengthen him with thy girdle, and I will commit thy Government into his hand. St.
[Rom. xiii. 14. Gal. iii. 27. Ephes. iv. 24. Col. iii. 10.] Paul in several places says, that Christians put on the Lord Jesus, that they put on the new Man, to denote the Adoption of the Sons of God, wherewith they are invested by Baptism.

ADOR, is probably the same as Adora. See 2 Macc. xiii. 20.

[2 Chr. ii. 9. 1 Macc. xiii. 20.] ADORA[l], or Adoraim, sometimes called Ador or Dora, was a City belonging to the Tribe of Judah, and could not be far from Maresa, or Narisa, near Eleutheropolis, in the Southern part of Judah, and upon the confines of Idumæa.

1. ADORAM, the Son of Tou King of Hamath, who came commission'd by his Father to congratulate David upon the victory which he hath obtain'd over Hadadezer, King of Syria, 1 Chr. xviiii. 10. In the second book of Samuel, Ch. viii. 10. Adoram is called Joram.

2. ADORAM, chief Treasurer to Rehoboam. This Prince having provoked the ten Tribes by his too haughty and imprudent answers, and given them occasion to make a Schism, and separate from the
[1 Kings xii. 14. 15. 18.] house of David, thought he should be able to appease them by sending to them
[אדרם] Adoram, who was chief Receiver of the [אשר] Tribute-money, or principal Surveyor of [על] the works. Whether he intended to re-
[המס.] duce the People by gentle or by harsh means, or whether he designed to make some concessions to the People who were so violently inraged, by putting Adoram into their hands, who had been the instrument of those vexations which they had suffer'd under the preceding Reign, (for many believe Adoram to be the same with Adoniram, who had executed the same office under Solomon;) however this may [1 Kings iv. 5. v. 14.] be, the People, who had been extremely irritated, fell upon Adoram, stoned him, and put him to death; whereupon Rehoboam got as soon as he could into his chariot, and returned to Jerusalem. This happened in the year of the World 3029, before Jesus Christ 971, before the vulgar Æra 975.

3. ADORAM, principal Receiver of the tributes under the Reign of David, may [2 Sam. xx. 24.] be the Father of Adoram who had the same employment under Solomon and Rehoboam. See above ADORAM and ADONIRAM.

ADORAIM, a Town fortified by Re- [2 Chr. xi. 9.] hoboam, perhaps the same as Adar or Hazer-addar, a City belonging to Judah. See above what has been said of this place under the name of ADORA, and Reland's Palæstin. T. 2. p. 547.

ADORE. This word, taken in the literal and etymological meaning of it, borrowed from the Latin, signifies properly to carry to one's mouth, to kiss one's hand, or to kiss something, but with a sense of Veneration and Worship. If I [Job xxxi. 26, 27.] beheld the Sun when it shined, or the Moon walking in brightness, and my mouth hath kissed my hand, this also were Iniquity, that is to say, if I have adored them by kissing my hand at the sight of them. And in the book of Kings, Yet I have left me [1 Kings xix. 18.] seven thousand in Israel, all the knees which have not bowed unto Baal, and every mouth which hath not kissed him. Minutius Felix[m] says, that as Cæcilius pass'd before the statue of Serapis, he kissed his hand, as is the custom of superstitious People. They who adore are used to kiss their hands, says St. Jerom[n], and to bow down their heads, and the Hebrews, according to the propriety of their Language, put Kissing for Adoration; for this reason it is said, Kiss the Son, lest he be [Ps. ii. 12.] angry, and ye perish from the right way, that is to say, Adore the Son, and submit to his empire. And Pharaoh speaking to Joseph, And according unto thy word shall [Gen. xli. 40.] all my People kiss, Receive your orders as the commands of God or the King. The word Adore in Scripture is taken not only for that Worship and Adoration which is due to God only, but likewise for those marks of outward respect which are paid to Kings, great Men, and superior Persons. In Adoration of both kinds Men bowed their bodies very low, and often threw themselves prostrate on the Earth to demonstrate their respect. Abraham, prostrate upon the ground, adored the three Angels who appear'd to him under a human form at Mamre. Lot adored them [Ch. xviii. 2.] in [l] Joseph. Antiq. l. 13. c. 17.

[m] Minutius in Octavio.
[n] Hieronym. contra Rufin. l. 1.

in the same manner upon their arrival at
Gen. xix. 1. Sodom. It is very probable that neither of them at first sight took them for any other than Men. Abraham adored the
Ch. xxiii. 7. People of Hebron, Adoravit populum terræ; he fell prostrate before them, entreating them to sell him a Burying-place for Sarah. The Israelites understanding that Moses was sent by God to deliver them from their servitude in Egypt, bow-
Ex. iv. 31. ed their heads and worshipped the Lord. It is needless to multiply Examples of this way of speaking, they are to be met with in almost every page of Scripture.

ADRAA, in the Batanæa, five and twenty miles from Bostri [o]. It is the same as Edrai. See hereafter EDRAI.

1. ADRAMMELECH, the Son of
If. xxxvii. 38. 2 Kings xix. ult. Sennacherib, King of Assyria. This King returning to Nineveh after the unhappy Expedition which he had made into Judæa against King Hezekiah, was killed by his two Sons Adrammelech and Sharezer, while he was at his devotions in the Temple of his God Nisroch. It is not known what induced these two Princes to commit this parricide: Some conjecture that they were ingaged to it by a report that Sennacherib had vowed to sacrifice them to his Gods; but of this conjecture there is no Proof. What we know certainly is, that these two Princes, after they had murdered their Father, fled for safety to the mountains of Armenia, and that Esar-haddon their Brother succeeded to the Crown. The death of Sennacherib is placed in the year of the World 3295, before Jesus Christ 705, before the vulgar Æra 709. Adrammelech and Sharezer, the Sons of Sennacherib, are called in Said Son of Botrik, Anzar-melach, and Scrassera: The last of these names comes very near that of Siassernera, which the Arabians give King Sennacherib.

2. ADRAMMELECH, one of the Gods adored by the Inhabitants of Sepharvaim, who were settled in the Country of Samaria, in the room of those Israelites who were carried beyond the Euphrates. The People of Sepharvaim made their Children pass through the fire in honour of
Ch. xvii. 31. this false Deity, and another called Anamelech. The Rabbins say that Adrammelech was represented under the form of a Mule, which is not at all probable: There is much more reason to believe that Adrammelech was the Sun, and Anamelech the Moon; the first signifies the magnificent King, the second the gentle King. Many of the Eastern People adored the Moon under the name and form of a God, not of a Goddess.

ADRIA, a City of Italy upon the Tartaro, in the State of Venice. It gives its name to the Adriatick Sea, which is some-Acts xxvii. 27. times called simply Adria: And altho' this name, rigorously speaking, belongs only to the Sea which is inclosed within the Adriatick Gulf, yet in the Acts of the Apostles the sacred Author, describing the Navigation of St. Paul, takes it for the Sicilian and Ionian Sea.

ADRIAN. We do not find the name of this Emperor in the Bible, but we are of opinion that he is described in that passage of the Revelations where it is said,
Rev. viii. 10, 11. that upon the third Angel's sounding the trumpet there fell a star from Heaven, which caused the death of an infinite number of Persons. The text runs thus: And the third Angel sounded, and there fell a great star from Heaven, burning as it were a lamp, and it fell upon the third part of the Rivers, and upon the fountains of Waters. And the name of the star is called Wormwood, and the third part of the Waters became Wormwood; and many men died of the Waters because they were made bitter. By this star was described Barchochebas, the famous Jewish Impostor, who prevailed with his Countrymen to rebel against the Romans. The Emperor Adrian sent Tinnius Rufus and Julius Severus, who carried on a bloody war with them. See below the Article BARCHOCHEBAS.

The Emperor Adrian, who did not love the Jews, because he had seen the disturbances produced by them under Trajan, resolved to mortify them, and keep them in subjection, by sending a Colony to Jerusalem, and building a Temple there to Jupiter. Jerusalem at that time was not very considerable, and since the ruin and destruction of it by Titus, could have recovered itself but very imperfectly. The Jews not being able to endure that this Colony of Strangers should come and inhabit their City, and introduce there a foreign Religion, began to mutiny, [p] about the Year 134. [q] Barchochebas who appeared about the same time, and undertook to procure himself to be owned for the Messiah, animated and encouraged them in their Rebellion. The presence of Adrian, who was then in Syria and Egypt, kept them within the bounds of Respect. But as they were enemies to the Romans, they forged bad Arms for them [r], with a purpose of disabling them from making any use of them, in the encounters which they themselves might have with them; they afterwards raised little Forts with Walls, in places which seemed most for their advantage; and made subterraneous Passages for the better holding a communication with one another, and concealing themselves from the pursuit of their Enemies; but these were so many vain efforts efforts, which the Romans at first despised.

[o] Euseb. in Artaroth. [p] Xiphilin. p. 262. Dio cass. p. 131. [r] Xiphilin. loco cit. [q] Basnage Hist. des Juifs, T. 2. l. 4. c. 8.

But when they saw that the number of the mutineers encreased, that they fought like People in despair, that the thieves of all the neighbouring Provinces join'd them, with the hopes of Booty, and that their Rebellion had an influence upon the adjacent Countries, and even staggered the whole Universe, as a certain Historian expresses himself, they were obliged to alter their measures. Tinnius Rufus, who sometime before had been the Emperor's Lieutenant in Syria, was at that time with the same character in Judea; he attacked the Jews, and killed great numbers of them, but then the loss of Men was considerable on his side too. Adrian therefore sent a Reinforcement to him, notwithstanding which he was routed in several skirmishes. At last Adrian sent for Julius Severus, one of the greatest Generals of his Age, from England, in order to make head against them. Severus thought it too hazardous to engage the Jews in a set Battle, who were too numerous; he therefore attacked them in small Bodies, cut off their Provision, and at length marched and laid siege to Bether, or Bethron, which served as a place of retreat for them.

The City defended it self with much obstinacy. Barcochebas, who had shut himself up in it, encouraged the Jews with vain promises of Succour. The Town was taken[s], and the Romans made a dreadful Slaughter in it. The Jews say, that more People perished there than came out of Egypt; and they have inserted an Hymn[t] in their Liturgy for the 18th of the month Ab (which answers to July and August) wherein they call Adrian a second Nebuchadnezzar, and beg of God to remember this cruel Prince, who destroyed four hundred and eighty Synagogues: They reckon that the number of Jews killed in the several Battles and Rencounters, amounted to five hundred and fourscore thousand. The Jews say that the Skulls of three hundred Children were seen upon one stone at Bether; that the streams of Blood were so large as to carry away Stones of four pounds weight into the Sea, which was at the distance of four miles from the City; lastly, that the Lands thereabouts were so fattened with the dead Bodies, that they were not dunged for seven years afterwards[u].

The number of Roman Soldiers and auxiliary Troops that perished in the course of this War, which lasted, as S. Jerom[v] and the Rabbins say, three years and a half; or as others only two years[x], was very great; and Dio remarks that the Emperor, when he wrote to the Senate, relating the Success of this War, did not venture to use the common form in the beginning of his Letters, If you and your Children are in good health I am glad of it; I and the Army are in good condition; by reason of the great losses which he had sustained in this War. Dio, l. 69. p. 794.

This Affair being over, Adrian took care to have the building of Jerusalem finished, the name whereof he changed to that of Ælia, which was the name of his family; he drove the Jews out of it, forbad them, under a severe penalty, ever to enter it[y], commanded a great number of them whom he had made prisoners during the War, to be carried to the fair held near the Turpentine Tree, where Abraham was believed to have received the three Angels; there they were sold at the price of Horses; and what could not be put off here, was conveyed to another fair held at Gaza. The rest were sent to Egypt[z]. S. Jerom[a] applies the following words of Zachariah, to this calamity of the Jews, I will feed the flock of Slaughter. And the Hebrew Doctors explain these words of Jeremiah Jer. xxxi.
as relating to the same War, A voice was 15.
heard in Ramah, Lamentation and bitter Weeping, Rachel weeping for her children, &c. The Jews purchased with a sum of Money the liberty, not of entring Jerusalem, but only of looking at a distance on it, and going to lament the fall and desolation of it.

We are assured that Tinnius Rufus, or, as the Rabbins call him, Turannus, or Turnus Rufus, plowed up the spot of ground on which the Temple formerly stood. There are some Medals of Adrian's shewn to this day, which were struck on this occasion, on the reverse whereof Judea is represented like a Woman, holding two naked Children by her, and sacrificing upon an Altar[b]; to signify, probably, that the Emperor had subdued Judea, and constrained it to sacrifice to false Gods. In another Medal we see Judea on her knees, submitting to the Emperor, and three Children begging mercy of him[c].

From this time, as no more Jews were suffered in Jerusalem, we begin to find Bishops taken from the Gentile Converts to Christianity.

ADRIEL, the Son of Barzillai, married Merab the Daughter of Saul, who at first was promised to David. Adriel had 1 Sam.
five Sons by her, who were delivered up xviii. 19.
to the Gibeonites, to be put to death before In the Year of the Lord, in revenge for the Cruelty the World which Saul their Grandfather had exercised 2987. before J. C. against the Gibeonites. The Text of the 1013. before the second vulg. Æra 1017.

[s] The 10th of August, in the 18th year of Adrian, of J. C. 135.
[t] Hieronym. in Dan. ix.
[u] Hieron. Chron. an.
[c] Freher. de Num. Censûs, p. 3648.
[x] Basnage Hist. des Juifs. t. 2. p. 133.
[a] Hieron. in Zach. xi. 7.
[v] Basnage Hist. des Juifs. t. 2. p. 138.
[y] Euseb. Hist. Eccl. l. 4. c. 6.
[b] Tristan. Comm. Hist. Adrian, p. 363.

ſecond Book of Samuel imports, that theſe five were the Sons of Michal and Adriel; but there is all the probability in the world, that the name of Michal is put for that of Merab; or that Michal had adopted the Sons of her Siſter Merab.

ADRIS, or Edris, the ſame with Enoch. See ENOCH.

ADRUMETUM, a City of Africk in Lybia, Capital of the Province of Byzatium. We read in the Acts of the Apoſtles, [Acts xxvii. 1, 2. Navigantibus nobis in Adria.] that St. Paul in his firſt voyage to Italy embarked in a Veſſel that was going to Adrametum. But it is much more probable that we ſhould read Adramyttium in the Text; becauſe we know St. Paul was going into Aſia, as St. Luke teſtifies, and Adramyttium was a maritime Town of Myſia, in Aſia Minor, over-againſt the Iſland of Lesbos.

ADULLAM, a City belonging to the [Joſh. xv. 35.] Tribe of Judah, ſituated in the Southern part of this Tribe, towards the Dead Sea. Euſebius[d] ſays, that in his time it was a large Town, ten miles from Eleutheropolis, Eaſtward. Rehoboam rebuilt this place, and ſtrengthned it with good Fortifications. [2 Chr. xi. 7, 8.] Judas Maccabæus incamped in the Plain of Adullam, and there paſſed the Sabbath-day. [2 Macc. xii. 38.] Joſhua killed the King of Adullam. [Joſh. xii. 15.] David, during his flight, hid himſelf in the Cave of Adullam. [1 Sam. xxii. 1, 2. 2 Sam. xxiii. 14.]

ADULTERESS. The ſtory of the Woman taken in Adultery, and preſented to Jeſus Chriſt, which is related in the [Joh. viii. 3.] Goſpel of St. John, is not to be met with in many Greek Copies of this Evangeliſt. S. Jerom obſerves[e], that ſo long ago as his time there was nothing of it in many Books, as well Greek as Latin. The generality of the Greek Fathers never read it. Of three and twenty Commentators in the Greek Catena on St. John, not one has explained it; which induces us to think that it was not inſerted in their Books. Maldonat aſſures us, that of all the Greek Copies conſulted by him, he found it but in one; viz. in that which contains Leontius's Comment on St. John; nor does Leontius ſay one word of it in his Comment; and in the Greek Text which is joined with it, this ſtory is marked with Obeliſks, to ſhew that it was added to the Text. Dr. Mill cites many other Greek Manuſcripts, wherein it is not to be ſeen. Neither Origen, S. Chryſoſtom, Theophylact, nor Nonnus, had any knowledge of it. Nor can Euſebius[f] be ſaid to have read it, ſince he takes notice that it was contained in the Hebrew Copy of St. Matthew which the Nazarenes made uſe of. It is true, ſome aſſert that Euſebius has acknowledged this ſtory in his Canons, or in his Harmony of the Goſpel; but others[g] maintain that he had a regard, not to the Hiſtory of the Adultereſs, but to the verſes which precede it.

To all this they add, that the Armenians have ſuppreſſed this paſſage in their Bible, that neither the Syriac printed in the Polyglots of Paris and London, nor the old Gothic Verſion by Ulphilas read it. The Manuſcripts wherein it is to be met with vary extremely; ſome have it inſerted only at the end of St. John's Goſpel, others at the end of the XXI Chapter of St. Luke; others in the margin of the VIII Chapter of S. John; others again mark it with Obeliſks, to denote that it is dubious. Euthymius, who mentions it in his Comment, confeſſes that it is not in the beſt Manuſcripts. Thus you have the full force almoſt of what is ſaid againſt this Story.

What is produced in favour of it ſhall now follow. All the Copies made uſe of by Robert Stephens, to the number of 16, and thoſe conſulted by Theodorus Beza, which amounted to 17, one only Manuſcript excepted, which is cited by him, read this Story. Thoſe likewiſe which Dr. Mill had recourſe to, for the moſt part do acknowledge it. Tatian, who lived in the year 160, and Ammonius, who lived in 220, have owned it to be canonical, and placed it in their Harmonies of the Goſpel. The Author of the Apoſtolical Conſtitutions[h], and the Synopſis aſcribed to Athanaſius, have it; S. Jerom, S. Auſtin, Ambroſe, and the other Latin Fathers, have made no ſcruple of receiving it, tho' they were not unacquainted with the differences of the Greek Copies. S. Auſtin[i] conjectures, that ſome of the faithful of too little judgment, or even ſome who were Enemies to the true Faith, expunged this Story out of the Copies of S. John, leſt our Saviour ſhould be thought to authorize the diſorder, by forgiving it ſo eaſily. Many Syriac Manuſcripts of good antiquity read it; and we meet with it in all the printed Copies, both Greek and Latin; it ſhould be admitted therefore without any difficulty. You may conſult, if you pleaſe, the Commentators on the VIII Chapter of S. John, Dr. Mill's Annotations on the New Teſtament, M. Fabricius's Cod. Apocr. N. Teſt. Tom. 1. p. 355, &c. and the Authors by him cited.

ADULTERY. The Law of Moſes puniſhed Adultery with the death of both the Man and Woman who were guilty of this crime. When any Man, prompted [Levit. xx. 10.] by the ſpirit of Jealouſy, ſuſpected his Wife to have committed Adultery[k], he brought [d] Euſeb. in locis in Adullam. S. Jerom, places it at eleven miles diſtance from Eleutheropolis. [e] Hieron. l. 2. contra Pelag. c. 6. [f] Euſeb. l. 3. Hiſt. Eccl. c. 39. [g] Simon hiſt. critique du N. T. p. 150. [h] Conſtit. Apoſt. l. 2. c. 24. [i] Aug. de conjug. adulter l. 2. c. 7. [k] See Levit. v. 11, 12. and the Commentators on this place; and Philo de ſpecialib. legib.

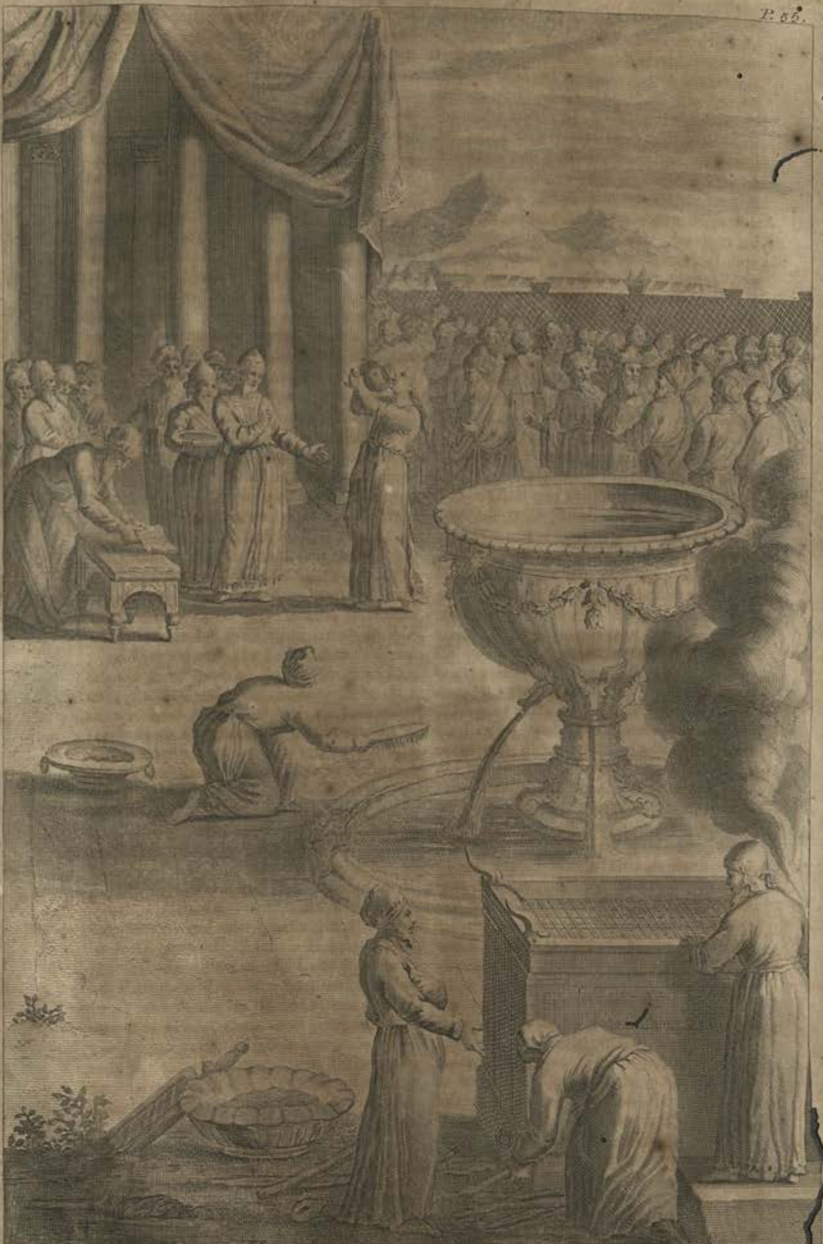
*

P. 56.



CEREMONIES ABOUT THE WATERS OF JEALOUSY.

[illegible]

B 5)

$ - C N Q / 6 5)

4 ' " + % % ." , # / $ #
)8 + / " + / #W # '' + $A . ; : $. 4
' + # 4 % , / + " $ ' " #
. . % " + @ / " . # ' #
$ / #% + + / # 0 $ ' / & % , /+
/ + $ ' " @ ' : : / % $ % , + # "
$ # " 0 % F #
% # % +V 2 A . 4 + ` # $ # # % + #
+ / " # + $ % % , 0 # + % " + /
$ ' # (I / 4 # ' $ $
! . 4 ` 4 / & $ " & % ' #
` # & . 4 '% 6# " / 0 # ' + & 9 " # , 1" # + 3 `
. K ' / $ % % ' ! .# &
1 " / $ # % : , $, $ ' $ $
$. / % $ ' 0 3 " $ ' + .
+ / $ % # * % " ' 0 # $ + . 4
+ $ $ $ # ' / 4 % , ' $`
/ ' % % # + 1 % ,
9 / ' 0 / ' $ $ " @4
3 ' % + / 0 $ % ' / $ # .
% ' # ' / % & $ J % 0 ;
& U 9 , ' .# % # ' , + '`
4 4 U U 9 $, ?
* / & $ %
$, 0 $ + 0 , / '] $ 4 % " ! 9
1" @ # ' / ' ' 6# 1 , $ 0 , @4 8 $ # % # 9
$ % $ / '' .# , - . % % $
/ $ # + % f % # & % & $ `
4 e " " , / $ " % . %
% ' $ % # , * 4 $ # #V $, I E
[K / !!C $ 3 , 4 4 % / " / / " @
I 4 % ' # 9 + ,
* % " # / " - % @ #
. - % # , = # ,
% - 0 " # /
Z . 4 9 K2Y E 2 T EJ ! 4G % $ % # # `
3 # 0 % / 0 / %
* 4& E , % ' # + %
@4 3 I ' 3 # , 4
4 1 & % ' # / # / 5 . 4 %
9 ' 2* & , , $ " / # , 4 # / #
/ . E , + " / $ + 0 `
XSA 1 , / + , ` ! @ # " , +
0 # % % ' $. E . 4 . # # ! / #
. " ' # / + ! V ' $ #
" $ / ' 0 , # # # ' " 3
' . $ % 0 / # 1 , $ " ' #
& 0 $ # , / 0 / ' , ' # 0 . 4 % %
2 LE ? % %5 ' $. , - ' " 6 # # `
. # ' & 0 + $ V , / ' $ 5 $
% @ # ! , % % , / - C I 0 % , A
% 3 # $ . . , A
(3 1& (1 & % ' 0 $ ' $ $`
$ + 0 . % " ! % , / `
$ " ! , / ' : ' / , / # + . $ # / '
' F a D ' # " ! U 0 % , 4 %
, # . 4 ' , ## + ' $, # - , +
$ / " " # / ! " .# / / 0 # A
J $ '' % 0 / $ ' / # . # , $ `
, #
)W 0 $) # ! , J L W 8 + / W #4 / ! A _ W * # $! ! N " _S " 0 # "
W3 / # 0 " ' ! W # 3 / " JL 6 0 / " A F 5 " "
3 # N JD W
> O : $ / 4 4 W % / % 4 ! 4
* ? : Q' / # + ' / 0 ## F Y / , N $ / $ " / $ / # / $ Y / # " / $ 3 " Y / $ A
, / #0 3 + J _

$ 5 N QS R $ 2 2

, # ' & ' # & 'A + " '' $ + 4
? % % % , ' / ' $ /
2 # 2 B . 8 ! $ " & / # $ SA
2 % ' ! & $ +A 8 6 # ' 9
' 8 / # , $ % _ & / # $
$ " / # % ' 0 $ A % 1 0 , 8
! ' % ' " @ + , $ / 1
9 5 ' % + 0 & , . V % / # $, ' # V
C5 ' % # % # # / " & , LV & - #' / # $
% 4 T 4 4 4 , 9 - # / + , '
f>:WA ' / $ ' $ # % ' $ 4 / + V D / # $
2 4' 4 / + 8 . ' L =
[' $ + 0 % ' 8 L <
% % ' $ + /
" & + ' ! # " % L S " %
" + 5 & , 8 . ' # V T &
' ! $ " @ $ / 8 A A % / # $, 4 / + `
' $ " # 2 A A % L P
* + ' + # 8 * T % 0 + 0 '`
8 / # # ,
& J " ! 0 # 1 # ' / A % + / + 0 0 + % / " #
, @ * 4 # # , $ + `
?4 # ' ' 'W: / # % JE 1 % ' , ## $
' # 4 / + $
& * 0 $ " # % ' ! 4 / + .
L__T , ' : A 4 / + 4 / + %
' SS_ +
& @ + & % " 2 , 1 / 3 , '
?4 # _T_E (% ' $ $ $ #
, ' : ' / ' ' J JTE ! $ # % % % 8 `
& * + / # @ # . 4 / + , 9 #
, + % + # 8 _S<5E % + $ #
& 8 / # " _T=5 " # L # % '
& 5 " & L_=S , ' , , 8 # ! #
: ' / ' SDL $ / ' , " A
& * 0T ! 0 " ' # ! $ " , / ' $
' 0 ' 0 L<5SD , ` % / M # , '' ,
' : ' ' L_5 W / ' $ L # (% % & . 0 % , + 1 ' 1, $! $ " $, " . 3 # DDEL # ' / # , ' (%
LI=" _ , ' : ' ' LET , ' " / ! " ' # ' " " 0 $ L
0 / + 5 LJ_ & . 4 " 4 1 % , 8 .
4 1 " & ' ' , @ / , # ' !
* 4 " , + + % 2 #
" + ' # / / $! 4 0 $ # 4 ' A
& 5 ' , " : ' / ' A % 2 K4 %
DEEE _= " # / , # % 0 +
' ! # , ' / ' 0 / + 5 8 1 ' / " % % @ " 9 % ` # 1 % " " # " ,
" % % 4 @ ! ' 5 # 4 # * T M ' N
/ 0 / . % 1 / # @ " " # & 2 6DA
JS__ 9 . $, ' / # &
3 $ " " # " / L
' ' ! + + $ % # @ %
' 0 , @ , , # ' [
2 ' # 2 , % & #
& , % . C Q + * 1 / +
, 3 $ 4 , + # 0
> 8 8 1 1& & % ' # ` / /

> 3 I : % A #) 4 ? 4]
4 / ! 4V 4 4 9?(3
, 4 4 9 7 +# $ - @ ! & 4 4
* ! 2 LJ_ # % V
? 4 , % 3 #
3 F @ * 111

$ * ' $ @' =T D $ * $

' ! ?1' & ' * ' , 0 ' /'' #' #' 0 +' $ '' #' ' '
@ % ' ' '! ? % ' % '#% ' % '% ' ' , ' '@ "' / "' % ' '
' ' $ ' ' ' + , / #' "' , # ' '' ' $ ' ' (#' % ' ' A ! !0 9'
* ' % ' , #' ' $' ' , ' ' ' #' % ' ' * ' '% ' . . ' , A'
7 + ' # # #' ' $' O)' & ' #' 0 ' $' ' ' $ # # 'JS'
$ ' $ ' , ' 1 ' #' ' + ' ' / ' , / ' " ' #' % ' ' ' ' ' % / #'
4 & ' +' ' / ' % ` # ' ' ' $ $ ' '' ! ?' ' $' / A'
' ' 4' #' ' " #' , ' ' # ' 0 ' #' % / #' $ @ ' ' ' '
' @' '' . . ' % ' $ ' % / ' $ ' & ' "A' 3 ' 0='
- ' ' 8 ' ' . ' " #' ' ' ' '' #' _=J= ' , A' ;^ <'
% ' 4 ' % ' % ' - 0 / ' '' ' ' ' : :DTS ' , ' ' '0 / + ' 5 ' JDPJ
' #' ' ! 4 ' ' ' 6' ! 0C' , / ' ' / ' / # #' ' ' ' ' (#' , / ' @'
4'' . '' ! U'' ' ' ' _D' $ $, #' ' $ ' % '
! ' ' ' ' ' ' + ' ' ' ' % ' 1 , $ ' ' ' 3 " ' #' ' $A' _=Ln' 9 '
' ' +' + / #' ' $ $ # #' (' ' ' (0' ' 'm' 5 :A '
- ' ' 3 " ' #' ' ' = !' / #' $ ' + ' ' ' !/' / ' ' m m WW
' ' ' '' ' 1 0 ' 4 " ' '' / ' $' ' " ' #' # ' ' 0 ' +' + %' '
0 / ' ' , ' ' ' % / #' ' ' , + +' ' $ F " ' $' ' ' '
' ! _T' + ' $ ' 0 ' ' ' 'V' #' ' # ' ' ' +' ' ' ' , / ' ' ' J _ L'
1 ' ' ? ' ' ' ! 4' ' ' $ ' / ' ' ' A' , ' ' #' $ ' 1 ' ' #' / @`
+ ' ' ' / ' / # ' ' $ " ' + ' !' #' " ' $ ' #' 1 ('
((! ' ' ' / '' ' + ' (' / " ' ' ' / #' / ' ' # ' '
#' ' ' ' ' ' / ' ' '' 0 $ (!' ' 3 " ' #' 0 +' ' $, #' $ '
' # $ /' 3 @ ' ' @ ' ' '' ' ' # ' / " ' ' 0 %' '' $ ' '
' ' $ 'V' #' ((!' W , ' 0 ' ' / $, ' $ / #' ' % ' / # #'
' $ " ' $ '' % ' ' / #' / " ' / ' #' ' % / ' @ +' ' '
' ' @ #' , ' ' 3 " ' ' / ' #' ' '' ' & , ' '' 0 (# '
' $ ## ' '' ' @ A" ' #' , ` % ' $ # ' ' " ' #
+ #' ' ' ' ' 3 ' ' ' ' A' +' #' ' ' ' ' ' / '
$ b' #' " " ' 0 (' ' # ' '' ' ! ' ' ' ' " ' ' '
) !' '' "# ' / " ' ' $ ' '' ' ' / #' ' $' 6 . #' ' #(' % ' '
+ ' ' ' % ' ' ' % ' ` 0 + ' ' * /' ' @' ' '
/ #' ' ' 0 ($ ' , 0 #' ' #' 7 +' 0 ' #' " ' 0 #' $ ' % ' '
'' ' ' 0 ' $ ' ' (' #' , ' ' '' ' "' #' ! ' ' 8 + '
' 4' % ' / ' #' % ' ' #' ' ($, ' #' ' ' ' #' $ ' $ #0' ! ' ' #' 0 #' ' ' >. ' 0 / , ' " ' ' ' ' 1" ' & ' $ '
b' : ' 1 ' 696 6' ' ' ' ' ' ' ' ' ' ' #' '' ' (#' ' (' +
' '' : ' ' =T ' ' ' % ' + +' ' 1 ' " ' $ ' ' 1' 0 ' ' / "' (' '
. ' #' #' # ' # #' ' 9' , ' 7 +V' ' ' ' ' / #' , @' ' $'
' !! ' ' (' ' $ ' 3 " ' ! 9 ' % +' $ ' #' ' ' " ' $ #' $ '
JE' ' 4' 0 #' ' #' $ +' ' 0 ' ' $ $ # $ ' #' ' (
(' #' ' $ " ' ' @' ' A' #' ' #' / ' ' (#' ' +
" ' . ' + # ' #' , # +' $ '' #' & ' ! ' # ' ' ' ' % ' ' $ '
#' ' ' ' ' #' & / ' ' ' ' ' (' % ' % ' / #' % ' ' $ ' '
- ' ' ' ' ' ' ' . 9 4' ' . ' = % ' ' '' #' ' / A '' +'
, #' ' ' ' % ' ' - # ' #' / ' ' (#' / ' '' ' 19 ' % ' '
' # 0 ' $' ' ' #' ' '' ' #' @ ' ' $' ' !/' '
- ' # ' % ' #' ' ' (' # %' ' ' (' ' 3 ' ' A'
+ ' ' ' % ' % ' " ' ' , , / + ' / #' $ ' #' # ' 1' 0 ' " ' $ #'
' (' ' + ' ' ' ' / ' ' A' ' $ $ # $ ' '' ' (# ' #'
1% # ' & ' ' % ' # ' ' ' , ' (' ' #' ' ' $ ' ' '
, / #' ' , / ' ' ' ' # ' ' . ' , +' '' ' "' $ ' ' #'
' ' ' $ ' '' ' (#' . 4'' ' ' % +' '' ' ! ' % ' 1' 'H
@ %' ' ' " / ' '' ' ' ' '' #' (' ' # ' & ' 0 ' , / + ' $ '
! 4'' & ' ! ?4' ' ' / '' #' ' $' ' !' 9' ' ' 3 " ' 1" #'
$' ' ! V' #' ' , 0 ' ' , ' ' '' ' " ' #' '' ' ! '
' 8 ' 0 ' ' ' + ' '' * "' & ' ' ' ' / ' ' (#' ' - #5' #'
4 ' 0 ' ' ' ' ' + ' 0 ' ' ' ' % ' 0 ' / ' # ' # ' & '
@ " ' ' ' ' '' ' (' #' / ' (' ' #' 1' % '
- - ' 7 +' '' ' ! ? 4'' & ' ' ' % ' ' ' (#' ' #' ' '
! ? 4' 0 +' / $ ' @ #' ' ' + ' #' ' #' / ' $ ' '
3 4' ' ' # ' ' ' ' ' & ' (' ' + ' #' / ' $' '
$ +' / ' '' ' % ' ' % ' , / ' % ' ' (#' #' @ ' ''
' @ +' / # ' ' ' + / ' % ' ' # 9 +' $ ' #' '' ' +' 7 +# $

>' 3 " ' # , #C ' * ## ' 1' ' 9JE' - $ ' : 6
6' A / A' ' / # ' ' T ' : ' " ' $ Y ' :' _E' '

$ * ' $ @ ? M D $ *

7 +# $' ' ' % '% / #' 0' '+ '8 ' 0 A# ' '$ # '8 ' '
! / 6 #' $' 'V , / ' % ' #'Z $' ' ' '8 $ ' '8 #' #' A'!!!2 '
' - #' Y/ #' ' ' ' ' V ' '' ' 0 #' '3 ' '/ _'
/ A '' + ' , / ' " ' ' ' , # '= '3 ' #' " ' #' ' '" '
5' ' ' ''' # # ' , ' $ ' % ' ' ' $' '' ' ' ' & '' " ' ' '0 ' ' ' ' '' '' #'1# ' 0` % '$ # ' ' '& $" ' #' , ' ' ' +' ' #' ' ' #' ' '! '7 +' '' (#' #' '% ' ' ' 'JP'
! ?' ' , ' , /+ ' / ' $' % ' #' 8 'A' / ' "" #' , ' '(%'
% ' '% '" #' ' $' '' ' % '% ' ' , ' ' ' " '' ' ' "/ A'
#' $, +' ' 0 ' $, ' ' # \ ' / ' '1' " ' A
' , ' ' " #' ' $' ' + ' , '?' , ` - & ' ' " / ' ' #' ! 9'
'# 'H #' % ' ' #' ' $' ' 4' ' 4V #' ' '% '
' % #' ' $ # ' $ ' # ' & ' ' $ ' '' ' '1, $ ' " ' '
1, ' ' ' ' ' , ' # ' $ +' ' " / ' 1' ' #' ' @ ' ' $ ' ! !!0
$ ' #' ' % #' ! ' ' " ' ' $' ' 0 ' '% '% ' ' ' ' / #
, ' ' ' (#' ' - " & / ' ! ' $ ' '' ' ' ! 4' ' ' @ % ' ' ' 7 +' ''! ?' ' ' #' ' ' ' , / ' ' ›(' #' ' 4'' & ' '$ ' , '5
' '' ' #'_PLE' , ' ' : ' 'JESE' ' ' '' $'= ' ' #' ! '% 9' 6'
, ' ' '0 / + ' * 0T'' JESD 0' ' '% 0V ' ! ' Q'
_@ 0' = - ((' ' ']$ 5 ' ' ' 0' ' 0' ' ' ! ' 9'
$ ' ' ' ' ' , #' . E ' ' ' #' +' $ 9'
JJ' '++ ' ' ' '' ' '4 #' ' ' ' ' " ' ! ' #' ' ' `
#' '' * ?' 46' " ' ' ' + ' ' ' ! ' ' ' ' ! 4' $ '# ' ' ' $' ! ' ' ! 4 ' ` # '' ' ' / ' #' " ' $ ' ' ' % # ' '% ' , ' '% ' , @' #' % '0 '% '
- 3 ' & ' ' ' ?' % #' #' 0 ' ''+ #' #' @ ' $ ' ' &'' '
' + ' ' " " '8 #' "' & ' ' ' ' $ @ ' /" ' #' * '' ' '' + ' & '
'' '% '% ' ' / ' ' $ +' ' ' + ' '" #' #' + +'
4' '' '3 $ 0 ' / '% ' #' ' $ $ '0 '" ' +' ' '
#' , ' ' $ ' & '% ' ` , ' ' ' ' $' " ' #' ' ' ' /`
, #' '$ $ ' '' ' ' ' /"" '% ' '$
. 4 . '$ # '% ' ' " ' '% - ' 8'& ' (4 ' ' $ '
' ' / #' ' ' / ' ' & , ' ' " # +' ' ' ''. 4' ' 0 'W
8 ' 0 '% '@ " ' ' ' / '% #' , '+ '# 0 # #' ' ' !' +
' 0 +' ' ' ' $ $ '3 ' & ' ' ' ' ! #' ' $' ' , + +' '' % ' 0 ' #' '% #' '' 0 ' #' ' #' ' '4 /+ 5' #' $ " `
, #' ' ' '% '# ' ' #' ' / ' #' ' !' / # #' #' ' ' '
8 ' / ' ' + '% '+ ' $ " ` ' !'
' #' ' % ' 0 ' ' #' & ' ' #' + ' ' $' '4 /+ ' '
, /+ '% ' $'= , ' ' ' ' #' ! @4' $ +' ' ' (#' ''3 ` 3 '% ' '% '# ' +/ #' ' ' ' ' $ ' '_ET_' $" #' ' / ' / # #'
' / + ' #' $ # ' ' / " " ' '" @' #' % ' ' !'
'' '1 #. ' # ' #' #' ' #' + 0 ' & ' #' + ' '' ' # ' ' $' ! 9'
' ' '7 ' ''3 ' & ' / 'A' K4' ' ' '3 $ #' (#' '
$ ' , '+ #' #' / # , ' ' ' + ' ' '# 0 ' '' ' 4' / ' ''
' '# + #' ' #' % ' , / ' #' ' ' ' ' ' ' '' ' #'_'5_'L' ' `
2 ' ' ' ' ' ' " ' ' ' ' E / # ' ' / ' / # #' #' '
4' $ " ' ' , ' ' ' ' ' $ ' & ' ' / ' + ' ' $' ' + +' / ' ''
' '# " ' #' '3 ' ' ' ' '' $A' ' ' ' ' / # ' '' ' & $ " '
, ' #' % / #' ' # ' #' ' ' , '% ' ' ' ' '' ' #'_PP_'
% ' $F 3I ' ' ' ' ' ' @ ' / "' ' / ' / # #' #' ' 0 ' '
' ' ' ' 4' 4' ' ' ' '
@4' % ' ' ' ' / ' ' 9' & ' ' ' ' + ' '' ' # ' ' $' WQHA'
? ' ' ' 4' '% $' ' ' K4' +' ' ' / # ' '' '& $ `
4' ' ' ' 4' ? '' + ' " ' ' ' , ' " 0 ' ' ' '
/ ' ' ' 4' ' ' ' ' ?' `' '' ' #' LDJ<' ' ' / ' / `
' ' ' ' ' ' ' ' . ' # #' % ' ' / '
` ' ' / ' ' `' + ' '3' ' ' & ' ' ! ' + ' '' ' ' ##' '' $' '`' % '3' ' ' 4'`' ' ' , ' " 0 ' ' ' ' '
' '` . 4' '% ' "" #' ' ' '
& ' . 4' #' '# 0 ' ` '' ' #'DEEE' #' ' ' ' / ' '
$ '% ' #' , $ ' ' ' , ' ' '0 / + 'A \ ' #' / # ' ' 0 '
' ! 4' % ' ' 1" @ +' '' " / # #' ' / ' ' #' ' / '

1'
W & '& '# ' ' ' ' ' ' '% ' / ' $, +V , / ' ' " / + ' # * / + '# ' & ' '
& ! '% '% ' 0' # #, ' ' 4' $, ' ' # XX 4
: ' " ' Y' , 'JD' 'J' ;' /' , ' ' + $
* (' 1' &

I shall not inlarge so far in this place as to reconcile, or even represent only, the different Systems of the antient and modern Chronologers concerning the years of the World. They who would be well informed of these matters, will without doubt go as far back as the first sources, and consult those Authors who have expresly treated on this subject. We for our parts have chosen to follow Usher in the Chronology of the Old Testament, with some little differences only, where we think we have reason to vary from him. Among the pieces annex'd to this Dictionary there is a chronological Table which is agreeable with this System, and we have endeavour'd to conform ourselves to it in all the dates which we have inserted in the course of this Work.

Every one knows that there is a great disproportion in the age of the Patriarchs, as it is expressed in the Septuagint, and in the Hebrew text. This difference, with regard to the time before the Deluge, amounts to about five hundred fourscore and six years. According to the Septuagint, the Deluge happened in the year of the World 2242, but according to the Hebrew and the Vulgate in 1656. And after the Deluge from the six hundred and first year of Noah, which is the next year after the Deluge, the Septuagint reckon eleven hundred seventy two years to the seventieth year of Terah, whereas the Vulgate reckons no more than two hundred ninety two years, which makes a difference of nine hundred and fourscore years; so that including the five hundred fourscore and six years before the Deluge, there will be, upon a computation, one thousand four hundred sixty six more in the Septuagint than in the Vulgate.

No one has hitherto been able to discover the true motive which could oblige the Septuagint thus to lengthen out the lives of the old Patriarchs: Some have conjectured, that their design herein was to secure the sacred Books from the censure of the Heathens, who not knowing how to credit the relation of the long lives of the Patriarchs, maintain'd that one of our years was equivalent to ten or five of theirs; so that one who had been said to live eight hundred years, in reality had lived no more than eighty, or at most but an hundred and sixty, and so in proportion of others. However this may be, there is scarce any question to be made but that the Septuagint multiplied the Patriarchs years; for there is no reason for placing the diminution of these years to the account of the Hebrew Writers.

As to the length of the year, according to the computation of Moses and the old Hebrews, there is no doubt but that from the time of Noah it consisted of twelve months of one and thirty days; the proof whereof appears in the particular account of the days of that year wherein the Deluge happened, which is very accurately given us by Moses. We shall speak of Cainan, whom the Septuagint, as some pretend, have added in the text, under the Article of Cainan. As to the differences between the Hebrew and the Septuagint, with relation to the years of the Patriarchs, the Reader may consult Isaac Vossius, De Ætate mundi, & de LXX Interpretibus, and F. Pezron, in his Antiquite des tems retablie.

You have here a particular account of the seven Ages of the World, according to the Greek text, together with the proofs abridg'd after M. Boivin the Elder's System, who has been labouring with great application for fifty years to clear this part of ancient Chronology.

		Years
I Age.	From the Creation to the Deluge, lasted	2262
II Age.	From the Deluge to the Confusion of Languages	738
III Age.	From the Confusion of Languages to the Call of Abraham	460
IV Age.	From thence to Jacob's going into Egypt	215
	From thence to the departure out of Egypt	430
V Age.	From thence to Saul	774
VI Age.	From Saul to Cyrus	583
VII Age.	From Cyrus to the vulgar Æra of the Christians	538
	Total	6000

I Age, 2262 Years.

From the Creation of Adam to the birth of Seth, Gr. Bible, Gen. v. 3. Cedren. p. 6.	230
From thence to the birth of Enos, (Gen. Gr. v. 6.)	205
From thence to the birth of Canaan I. (Gen. Gr. v. 9.)	190
From thence to the birth of Mahalaleel (Gen. Gr. v. 12.)	170
From thence to the birth of Jared, (Gen. Gr. v. 15.)	165
From thence to the birth of Enoch, (Gen. Gr. v. 18.)	162
From thence to the birth of Methuselah, (Gen. Gr. v. 21.)	165
From thence to the birth of Lamech, (Gen. vulg. v. 25.)	187
From thence to the birth of Noah, (Gen. Gr. v. 28.)	188
From thence to the Deluge, inclusively, (Gen. vii. 6, 11.)	600
Total, according to the best Reading of the LXX.	2262

These

These 2262 years are attested by Julius Africanus, in Syncellus, p. 20, 53, 83, by Epiphanius in his Heresies, p. 5; by S. Austin, in his City of God, l. 15, c. 13, & 20. and upon Genes. ix. 2. This is according to five copies, viz. three Greek, one Latin, and one Syriac. By the Paschalion or Alexandrian Chronicle, by Godfrey of Viterbo, by Honorius of Autun, by all the Collections of various Readings upon the LXX.

Note, the 167 years from Methuselah to the birth of Lamech, instead of 187, are the Transcriber's fault in most of our Greek Bibles. This mistake is not in the Greek editions of Basil and Strasburg; besides, it is corrected by the Hebrew, the Vulgate, and Josephus. According to this erroneous reading, the Deluge would have happen'd in the year of the World 2242. Methuselah therefore, who, according to all our Bibles and Josephus, lived 969 years, must have died fourteen years after the Deluge; whereas, according to the proper and right reading, he died six years before the Deluge, St. Austin's City of God, 15, 13. at the end.

II Age 738 years.	Years
From the Deluge, exclusively, to the birth of Arphaxad Josephus i. 7. not 2 years. Arphaxad is the third Son of Shem.	12
From thence to the birth of Canaan II. (Gen. Gr. ii. 12.)	135
From thence to the birth of Salah, (Gen. Gr. ii. 13.)	130
From thence to the birth of Eber, (Gen. Gr. ii. 14.)	130
From thence to the birth of Peleg, (Gen. Gr. ii. 19.)	134
From thence to the birth of Reu, (Gen. Gr. ii. 18.)	130
From thence to the confusion of Languages in the year of the World 3000, according to all the Ancients	67
Total	738

III Age 460 years.
From thence to the birth of Serug, (Gen. Gr. ii. 20.) in the 132^d year of Reu	65
From thence to the birth of Nahor, (Gen. Gr. ii. 22.)	130
From thence to the birth of Terah, (Joseph. i. 7.) The Bibles say 28, 29, 79, 179. but these numbers do not make Abraham and Amraphel square together, Gen. xiv. 1.	120
From thence to the birth of Abraham, (Gen. ii. 26. Joseph. i. 7.)	70
From thence to the call of Abraham, (Gen. xii. 4.)	75
Total	460

Note, Abraham was called in the year when Terah died; Terah therefore did not live above 145 years, as the Samaritan text imports, which is the Mosaick Hebrew: The 205 years therefore of the other text are the Copier's fault, who makes the Bible contradict itself; for Abraham being born in the seventieth year of Terah, must have been 135 years old at the death of his Father, and not 75, as all the Texts say.

IV Age 215 years.	Years
From the call of Abraham to the birth of Isaac, (Gen. xxi. 5, 17.)	25
From thence to the birth of Jacob, (Gen. xxv. 24, 26.)	60
From thence to Jacob's journey into Mesopotamia, (Gen. xxxi. 38, 41.)	71
From thence to his return into Canaan, (Gen. xxx. 25. and xxxi. 38, 41.)	20
From thence to his going into Egypt at the Age of 130, (Gen. xlv. 6, 11. and xlvii. 7, 9.)	39
Total	215

The sojourning of the Israelites in Egypt, (Exod. xii. 40. Judith v. 9.)	430
Shepherds in Goshen.
Jacob Israel, at Goshen in Egypt, (Gen. xxvii. 28.)	17
Joseph Psontomphanech, aged 56 years, reigns at Goshen	54
Total	71

The Descendants of Joseph.
Hicsos or Kings, Shepherds according to Manetho in Josephus, Apology 1. 5.

	Yrs.	M.
Ephraim or Salatis	19	0
Beria or Beon	44	0
Rapha or Apachnas	36	7
Reseph or Apophis	61	0
Thale or Janias	50	1
Thaan or Assis	49	2
Total	259	10

Hacsos or captive Shepherds.

Laadan	40	0
Ammiud	40	0
Elisama to the 80th year of Moses, at which time he departed out of Egypt,	19	2
Total	99	2

	Yrs.	M.
See Gen. xv. 13.	215	0
	71	0
	259	10
	99	2
Total	645	0 for the four parts of the fourth Age.

V Age

V Age 774 years	Years
From the 80th year of Moses to his death, or to Joshua,	40
Joshua	27
Aristocracy of the Elders, then Anarchy, I. Idolatry,	18
I. Servitude (Judg. iii. 8, 10.)	8
Othniel (Judg. iii. 11.)	40
II. Idolatry and Anarchy	30
II. Servitude (Judg. iii. 14.) under Eglon the Moabite	18
Ehud (Judg. iii. 30.)	80
III. Servitude (Judg. iv. 3.) under Jabin the Canaanite	20
Deborah and Barak (Judg. v. 32.)	40
In the year of the World 4418. Before J. C. 1582. Attick Æra by the Parian Marble.
IV. Servitude (Judg. vi. 1.) under the Midianites, Amalekites, Ishmaelites	7
Gideon Jerubbaal (Judg. vi. 8, 11, 21, 25, 32. and viii. 28.)	40
Abimelech the Tyrant (Judg. ix. 22.)	3
Tolah (Judg. x. 2.)	23
Bedan (Sam. xii. 11. & Clem. Alex. p. 238.)	14
Boleas (Clem. Alex. p. 238.)	23
Jair (Judg. x. 3.)	22
V. Servitude (Judg. x. 8.) under the Ammonites	18
Jepthah (Judg. xii. 7.)	6
Ibzan (Judg. xii. 9.)	7
Ebrom (Clem. Alex. p. 324.)	40
Elon (Judg. xii. 11.)	10
Abdon (Judg. xii. 14.)	8
VI. Servitude (Judg. xiii. 1.) under the Philistines	40
Samson (Judg. xv. 20. and xvi. 31.)	20
Anarchy under the High-priests (S. Theoph. of Antioch, l. 3. p. 134.)	40
Africanus in Syncellus, p. 174 & 176.
Hebrew Tradition in Cedrenus, p. 96, or 84. in the year of the World 4725, before Jesus Christ 1275. The Argonauts, Samera, Semei, Semergar, Simmichar, Semané (S. Theoph. Antioch. l. 3. p. 13.)	1
Anarchy under Joseph the High-priest, of the race of Eleazar, (Joseph. 8. 1.) Julius Africanus in Syncellus, p. 174. Julius Hilario Cedren.)	30
Eli I. High-priest, descended from Ithamar, a Judge (1 Sam. iv. 18. Cedr. p. 49.)	40
In the year of the World 4791, before J. C. 1209, Troy sacked.
VII. Servitude under the Philistines, Ahitob being then High-priest	21
Samuel Judge and Prophet	40
Total	774

VI Age under the Kings, 583 years.
Under Saul (Acts xiii. 21.)	40
David (2 Sam. iii. 4.)	40
From the beginning of Solomon's reign to the foundation of the Temple	3
From thence to the destruction of the Temple, according to the series of the several Reigns in Judah	430
The Captivity in Babylonia (Jerem. xxv. 12. and xxix. 10. and Dan. ix. 2.)	70
Total	583

VII Age 538 years, according to the mathematical Canon.
From Cyrus at Babylon to Alexander the Great at Babylon	206
From that time to Ptolemy the Son of Lagus	27
From thence to Augustus	275
From thence to our Æra in the year of Rome 754	30
Total	538

AGEE, the Father of Shammah, one of the gallant men in David's army, 2 Sam. xxiii. 11.

1. AGRIPPA. Marcus Agrippa, the favourite of the Emperor Augustus. His name is not to be met with in the canonical books of the Old or New Testament; but as he is mentioned in Josephus and Philo, and has some part in the History of the Jews, we shall say something of him in this place. Augustus gave him his daughter Julia to Wife, and the Government of all Asia. Herod the Great, who had all the obligations in the World to him, went and paid his respects to him at Mitylene; from thence he conducted him to Jerusalem [d], where he was received with extraordinary honours. Agrippa never spoke of his reception without great satisfaction; he beheld with respect the beautiful order which was observed in the Temple, offered an hecatomb in it, entertain'd the inhabitants of Jerusalem at a great feast, and granted every thing to Herod and his People that they desired of him. In this journey he visited Sebasta and Cæsarea, which Herod had built in honour of Augustus, and was charmed with the magnificence of the Jewish Monarch, and the splendor of these two Cities. This journey of Agrippa to Jerusalem was made in the year of the World 3990, before Jesus Christ 10 years. The name of Agrippa is said to come from the Latin, æger partus [e], because they who come into the World with their feet foremost come into it with most difficulty, are generally more unhappy than others, and are very subject to have sore feet.

2. AGRIPPA

[d] Vide Joseph. Antiq. l. xvi. c. 2. [e] Aul. Gell. Noct. Attic. l. 15. c. 16. & Plin. l. 7. c. 8.

2. Agrippa, firnamed Herod, the Son of Ariſtobulus and Mariamne, and Grandſon to Herod the Great, was born in the year of the World 3997, three years before the birth of our Saviour, and ſeven years before the vulgar Æra. After the death of Ariſtobulus his Father, Herod his Grandfather took care of his education, and ſent him to Rome to make his court to Tiberius [f]. The Emperor conceived a great affection for Agrippa, and placed him near his Son Druſus. Agrippa very ſoon won the good graces of Druſus and the Empreſs Antonia. But Druſus having been carried off by a ſudden death, all thoſe who had been much about him were commanded by Tiberius to withdraw from Rome, leſt the ſight and preſence of them ſhould renew his affliction. Agrippa, who had indulged his inclination to Liberality, was obliged to leave Rome, overwhelm'd with debts, and in a very poor condition. He did not dare to go to Jeruſalem, becauſe he was not able to make a figure there ſuitable to his birth; he retired therefore to the Caſtle of Maſſada, where he lived rather like a private Perſon than a Prince. Herod the Tetrarch his Uncle, who had married Herodias his Siſter, aſſiſted him for ſome time with a great deal of Generoſity: He made him the principal Magiſtrate of Tiberias, and preſented him with a large ſum of Money; but all this was not ſufficient to anſwer the exceſſive expences and profuſeneſs of Agrippa; ſo that Herod growing weary of aſſiſting him, and one day reproaching him gently with his bad œconomy, Agrippa was ſo affected with it, that he took a reſolution to quit Judæa and return to Rome.

In the Year of J. C. 23.

In the Year of J. C. 35.

But as he wanted Money, Marſyas a ſlave, whom he had made free, addreſſed himſelf to one Protus, a Perſon of the ſame condition about Berenice, who conſented to lend him twenty thouſand Drachma's [g] upon Marſyas's ſecurity, provided Agrippa, who was already in his debt, would give him a bond for twenty thouſand upon the receipt of no more than ſeventeen thouſand five hundred. Beſides this Sum, he borrowed two hundred thouſand Drachma's of Alexander Alabarch, or Chief of the Jews at Alexandria, upon condition that Cypros, Agrippa's Wife, ſhould be anſwerable for them; beſides, Alexander would pay him part only of this ſum at Alexandria, for the reſt he remitted to him into Italy as ſoon as he arrived there.

The Emperor Tiberius then kept his Court at Capreæ, and Agrippa, before he proceeded farther on his journey to him, gave him intelligence of his arrival, and deſired his leave to wait on him with his reſpects. Tiberius, whom time had cured of his affliction for the death of Druſus, ſent him word that he was glad to hear of his return, and deſired to ſee him at Capreæ. Thither he went, and the Emperor, as a mark of Diſtinction, gave him an apartment in his Palace, and received him with abundance of careſſes.

In the Year of J. C. 36.

The next day Letters were brought to the Emperor from Herennius, who had the care of his affairs in Judæa; wherein he informed his Maſter, that Agrippa having borrowed three hundred thouſand pieces of Silver out of his Majeſty's Exchequer, had fled out of Judæa without paying them. This news very much diſturbed Tiberius, and ſo far exaſperated him againſt Agrippa, that he commanded him to leave the Palace, and pay what he owed. Agrippa was not dejected at this unlucky accident, but addreſſed himſelf to the Empreſs Antonia, and deſired her to lend him this ſum of money. Antonia, who loved Agrippa for his Mother Berenice's ſake, could not refuſe him this favour; and by this means Agrippa cleared himſelf of this troubleſome Affair. Tiberius hereupon received him again into his good graces, and commanded him to attend Tiberius Nero, the Son of Druſus. Agrippa having more inclination for Caius Caligula, the Son of Germanicus, and Grandſon of Antonia, choſe rather to attach himſelf to him; as if he had ſome prophetick views of the future elevation of Caius, who at that time was beloved by all the world. The great aſſiduity and agreeable behaviour of Agrippa, ſo engaged this Prince, that he was not able to live without him.

One day as they were together in a litter [h], Agrippa ſaid to Caius, I wiſh I could ſee the day when this old Man (ſpeaking of the Emperor) would be going into the other world, and leave you maſter of this, without meeting with any obſtacles from his Grandſon Tiberius Nero! how happy would the World then be, and how over-joyed ſhould I be to ſee this lucky moment! This diſcourſe was over-heard by Eutyches, a ſlave whom Agrippa had made free; but for the preſent he took no notice of it. However, ſometime after, believing he had reaſon to be diſſatisfied with Agrippa, he deſired an opportunity of ſpeaking to the Emperor, and ſaid he had things of the utmoſt conſequence to impart to him, relating to Agrippa.

Tiberius

[f] Vide Joſeph. Antiq. l. 18. c. 7, 8, & ſeq. Et de Bello, l. 2. c. 15.
[g] The Attick Drachma may be valued at eight Pence and one Denier, and conſequently twenty thouſand Drachma's make 8082 Livres French, or about 700 Pounds.
[h] In the year of J. C. 36. Joſeph. Antiq. l. 18. c. 8. & de bello, l. 2. c. 15.

Tiberius was very flow in every thing he did, and was contented, for that time, with only giving orders that Eutyches fhould be confined. Neverthelefs, Agrippa, who knew nothing that his fervant had to tell, and believed himfelf to be intirely innocent, preffed Tiberius very much to hear what Eutyches had to fay, and put an end to this affair. The Emperor, who loved Agrippa, made no hafte to enquire far into this accufation. Agrippa therefore at laft made ufe of the Emprefs, and as it were forced Tiberius to have Eutyches produced, and hear what he had to fay againft his Mafter.

Agrippa hereupon was loaded with fetters, and committed to the guard of an Officer, who obferved him narrowly, but not without fhewing fome regard to him, in confideration of Antonia, whofe commands he had for fo doing. Tiberius dying fome time after, and Caius Caligula fucceeding him, the new Emperor heaped many favours and much wealth upon him, changed his iron fetters into a chain of gold, fet a royal Diadem upon his head, and gave him the Tetrarchy which Philip the Son of Herod the Great had been poffeffed of, that is to fay, the Batanæa and Trachonitis: To this he added that of Lyfanias; and Agrippa returned very foon into Judæa, to take poffeffion of his new Kingdom.

In the year of J. C. 39.

The fight of his good fortune having raifed the envy of Herodias his Sifter, Wife to the Tetrarch Herod, fhe engaged the King her Husband to undertake a journey to Rome, with hopes that he too might obtain the title of King from Caius. But he was fcarce got to Italy, before Fortunatus, one to whom Agrippa had given his liberty, arrived alfo, with letters from his Mafter, wherein he accufed his Uncle Herod with having carried on a fecret correfpondence with Sejanus, and with having private intelligence at that time with Artabanus, King of Parthia; and for a proof of this, he affured the Emperor that there were Arms lodged in his Arfenals fufficient for feventy thoufand Men. While Herod was receiving audience of Caius, Fortunatus came, and prefented Agrippa's letters to him. He immediately opened them, and having read them, he asked Herod whether it were true, that he had fuch a quantity of Arms. Herod, not being able to deny it, was banifhed into Gaul, and his Tetrarchy was given to Agrippa, in the year of J. C. 40.

In the year of J. C. 40.

The Emperor Caius having undertaken to make himfelf adored, and defiring to be reverenced as a God, had a mind to have his Statue fet up in the Temple of Jerufalem. But the Jews oppofed this defign with fo much refolution, that Petronius had not courage to purfue it any farther, but took the liberty to reprefent in a letter to the Emperor, what refiftance he met with from the Jews. Agrippa, who was then at Rome, coming to the Emperor at the very time while he was reading this letter, Caius told him, that the Jews were the only People of all Mankind who refufed to own him for a God, and that they had taken arms to oppofe his refolution. At thefe words, Agrippa fell down, as it were in a fwoon, was carried home, and there continued without fenfe or knowledge of any thing till the next Evening. As foon as he was a little recovered, he wrote a long letter to Caius, wherein he endeavoured to foften him, and his arguments made fuch an impreffion upon the Emperor's mind, that he defifted for a time at leaft, and in appearance, from the defign which he had formed, of fetting up his Statue in the Temple.

Caius being killed in the beginning of the year following, Agrippa, who was then at Rome, contributed a great deal, by his advice, to maintain Claudius in the Empire, to which he had been advanced by the foldiers. But in this affair Agrippa acted a part wherein he fhewed more cunning and addrefs, than fincerity and honefty: for while he made a fhew of being in the interefts of the Senate, he fecretly advifed Claudius to be refolute, and not to abandon his good fortune. The Emperor, as an acknowledgment for his good Offices, gave him all Judæa, and the kingdom of Chalcis, which had been poffeffed by Herod his Brother. So that Agrippa became on a fudden one of the moft powerful Princes of the Eaft, and was poffefs'd of as much or more than had been held by Herod the Great his Grandfather. He returned into Judæa, and governed it to the great fatisfaction of the Jews. [i] But the defire of pleafing them, and a miftaken zeal for their Religion, induced him to do an unjuft action, the memory whereof is preferved in Scripture.

In the year of J. C. 41. Jan. 25.

Near the Feaft of the Paffover, in the year of J. C. 44. S. James major, the Son of Zebedee, and Brother to S. John the Evangelift, was feized by his order, and put to death. He proceeded alfo to lay hands on S. Peter, and imprifoned him, waiting till the Feftival was over, that he might then have him executed. But God having miraculoufly delivered S. Peter from the place of his confinement, the ill will of Agrippa, in this particular, had not its effect. After the Paffover, Agrippa went from Jerufalem to Cæfarea, and there had Games reprefented in honour of Claudius [k]. The inhabitants of Tyre and and Sidon waited on him in this place, fuing for peace. This Prince being come early in the morning to the Theatre, with a defign to give them audience, feated himfelf on his throne, dreffed in a robe of filver tiffue, worked in a moft admirable manner. The rifing fun darting upon it with its rays, gave it fuch a luftre as the eyes of the fpectators could fcarce endure. When therefore the King fpoke to the Tyrians and Sidonians, the people and the flatterers about him began to cry that it was the voice of a God, and not of a man.

In the year of J. C. 44. Acts xii. 1, 2, 3, &c.

[i] Jofeph. Antiq. l. 19. c. 4. [k] Antiq. l. 19. c. 7. & Acts xii. 19, &c.

Inftead of rejecting thefe impious flatteries, Agrippa received them with an air of complacency, and at the fame time faw an Owl above him on a cord. He had feen the fame bird before, when he was in bonds, under the reign of Tiberius, and it was then told him, that he fhould be foon fet at liberty; but that whenever he faw the fame thing a fecond time, he fhould not live above five days beyond it. He was therefore extremely terrified, and at the fame time the Angel of the Lord fmote him, becaufe he did not give God the glory. They were forced to carry him back to his palace, where he died, at the end of five days, racked with tormenting pains in his bowels, and devoured with worms. Such was the death of Herod Agrippa, after feven years reign, in the year of J. C. 44. He left a Son of feventeen years of age, of the fame name, Agrippa, and three Daughters, viz. Berenice, who was married to her Uncle Herod, her Father's Brother; Mariamne, betroth'd to Julius Archelaüs, the Son of Chelcias; and Drufilla, promifed to Epiphanius the Son of Archelaüs, King of Comagena.

3. Agrippa, the younger, Son to him we have been fpeaking of, was at Rome with the Emperor Claudius, when his Father died[1]. The Emperor was inclin'd to give him all the dominions that were poffefs'd by his Father; but they who were about him diffuaded him from it. He kept Agrippa four years longer at his Court, and fent Cufpius Fadus into Judæa, till this young Prince, who was then but feventeen years of age, was in a condition to reign. The year following, the 45th of J. C. the Governour of Syria coming to Jerufalem, intended that the High Prieft's ornaments fhould be put into the hands of Fadus, and was for compelling the Jews to deliver them, in order to be kept within the tower of Antonia, where they had been lodged before, till Vitellius committed them to the cuftody of the Jews. But they giving good fecurity for them, were permitted to fend Deputies to Rome on this affair, who by the credit and good offices of young Agrippa, fo managed matters, that they were maintained in the poffeffion of their privilege, and the pontifical ornaments were continued in their cuftody.

In the year of J. C. 48. Herod King of Chalcis, and Uncle to young Agrippa, dying, the Emperor gave his dominions to this Prince, who notwithftanding did not go into Judæa till four years after, that is to fay, in the year of J. C. 53. when Claudius taking from him the kingdom of Chalcis, gave him the provinces of Gaulanitis, Trachonitis, Batanæa, Paneas, and Abyl ne, which formerly had been in the poffeffion of Lyfanias.

After the death of Claudius, his fucceffor Nero, who had a great affection for Agrippa, to his other dominions added Julius in Peræa, and that part of Galilee to which Tarichæa and Tiberias belonged. Feftus, Governour of Judæa, coming to his Government, in the year of J. C. 60. King Agrippa and Berenice his Sifter went as far as Cæfarea to falute him; and as they continued there for fome time, Feftus talked with the King concerning the affair of S. Paul, who had been feized on in the Temple about two years before, and within few days before his vifit had appealed unto the Emperor.

Agrippa faid to Feftus, I have long de- Acts xxv.
fired to hear this Man fpeak. To-morrow, 13, 14, anfwer'd Feftus, you fhall hear him. On & feq.
the morrow therefore, when Agrippa was come and Berenice with great pomp, and were enter'd into the place of Audience, Paul was brought forth, and Feftus faid, King Agrippa, and all Men which are here prefent with us, ye fee this Man about whom all the multitude of the Jews have dealt with me, both here and at Jerufalem, reprefenting to me with great inftances and cries that he ought not to live any longer; but when I found upon examination that he had committed nothing worthy of death, and that he himfelf had appealed unto Auguftus, I determined to fend him, of whom I have no certain thing to write, unto my Lord; wherefore I have brought him both before you, and efpecially before thee, O King Agrippa, that, after examination had, I might have fomewhat to write; for it feemeth to me unreafonable to fend a Prifoner, and not withal to fignify the crimes laid againft him.

Then Agrippa faid unto Paul, Thou art Acts xxvi.
permitted to fpeak for thyfelf: Hereupon 1, 2, &c.
Paul ftretched forth his hand, and anfwer'd for himfelf, I think myfelf happy, King Agrippa, becaufe I fhall anfwer for myfelf this day before thee, touching all the things whereof I am accufed of the Jews; efpecially becaufe I know thee to be expert in all cuftoms and queftions which are among the Jews, wherefore I befeech thee to hear me me patiently. After this he declared he was in bonds only for maintaining the Hope of Israel, that is to say, the Resurrection of the Dead. Then addressing himself to Agrippa, Does it seem to thee a thing incredible, says he, that God should raise the Dead?

[1] Jofeph. Antiq. l. 19. c. 7. & l. 20. c. 1. & feq. & l. 2. de bell. c. 21, 22, 23. In the Year of J. C. 44.

After this he related the several persecutions which he had promoted against Christians, and the miraculous manner wherein God had converted him while he was going to Damascus, with a design of searching after and imprisoning them. While he was speaking of the Resurrection, and the Apparition he had seen in his way to Damascus, Festus said with a loud voice, Paul thou art beside thyself, much learning hath made thee mad. To this Paul answer'd, I am not mad, most noble Festus; but speak forth the word of Truth and Soberness: For the King knoweth of these things; for this thing was not done in a corner. King Agrippa, believest thou the Prophets? I know that thou believest. Then Agrippa said unto Paul, Almost thou persuadest me to be a Christian. And Paul said, I would to God that not only thou, but also all that hear me this day, were both almost, and altogether such as I am, except these bonds. Then the King, and all that sat with him rising up, Agrippa said to Festus, this Man might have been set at liberty, if he had not appealed unto Cæsar.

Agrippa deprived Joseph Cabeï of the High priesthood, and gave it to Ananus [m], in the year of Jesus Christ 62. This was that Ananus who put to death James Minor in Jerusalem, near the time of the Passover [n]. But this action gave such general disgust to all, that Agrippa took from him the High-priesthood, which he had enjoyed but three months, and gave it to Jesus, the Son of Damnæus. Some time after he allowed the Levites, who were appointed to sing in the Temple, to wear the linen robe, which had hitherto been reserved for the use only of the Priests. And as part only of the Levites were employed in singing, and the rest were taken up with other offices in the Temple: He permitted these too to learn to sing, that so they might have their share in that Privilege which he had granted to the others.

While every thing was disposed for a Rebellion in Judæa, Agrippa did all he could to quiet the minds of the People, and incline them to peace. But his endeavours were too unsuccessful; he for some time indeed suspended, but could not intirely suppress the passion of the Jews, who were exasperated, and drove to the last extremities by the cruelties and insolence of their Governors. They declared openly against the Romans, in the year of Jesus Christ 66, and Agrippa was forced to join his troops with those of Rome, to reduce his Countrymen, and assist in taking of Jerusalem. After the destruction of this City, he retired to Rome with his Sister Berenice, with whom he had always lived in an indiscreet manner, which had given occasion for much talk very little to the advantage of either of them. He died at about seventy years of Age, towards the year 90 [o].

AGRIPPIAS. Herod the Great, to do honour to his friend Agrippa, the favourite of Augustus, gave this name to the Town of Anthedon [p], lying upon the Mediterranean, between Raphia and Gaza. See ANTHEDON.

AGUR. We read a Chapter in the book of Proverbs with this title, The words of Agur the Son of Jakeh, which, according to the signification of the original terms, may be translated thus, Verba congregantis, filii vomentis; or according to Lewis de Dieu, The words of him who has recollected himself, the Son of obedience. The generality of the Fathers and Commentators will have it, that Solomon describes himself under the name of Agur the Son of Jakeh [q]. Others conjecture that Agur as well as Lemuel, in Chap. xxxi. 1. were wise Men who lived in the time of Solomon, and were his Interlocutors in the book of Proverbs, an Opinion without the least shew of probability. This book is nothing like a Dialogue. It is likely enough that Agur was an inspired Author, different from Solomon, whose sentences it was thought convenient to join with those of this Prince, because of the conformity of their matter. What could ever have obliged Solomon to disguise his name in this place? for what reason could he have chang'd his style and manner of writing in this Chapter only? for it is certain that the thirtieth Chapter of Proverbs is penn'd in a way very different from the rest of the book: Besides, could it become Solomon to say as this Author does in the second verse, Surely I am more brutish than any man, and have not the Understanding of a man. And to speak after this manner to God, Give me neither Poverty nor Riches: Certainly these words are not consistent with the dignity of a King like Solomon. But who then was Agur? when and where did he live? This is what no one has yet been ever able to tell us.

(Prov. xxx. 1.)

1. AHAB, King of Israel, the Son and Successor of Omri. He reigned two and twenty years, from the year of the World 3086 to 3107. He did evil in the sight of (1 Kings xvi. 29. Ch. xvii.)

[m] Antiq. l. 20. c. 8. [n] In the year of J. C. 62. See Euseb. l. 2. c. 23. Hist. Eccl. Joseph Antiq. l. 20. c. 8. [o] M. de Tillemont's Destruction of the Jews, Art. 83. p. 589. & Not. 41. [p] Joseph. Antiq. l. 13. c. 21. [q] Ita Patres, Beda, Lyra, Hugo, Dionys. Carthus. Arboreus, Rab. Solom. Cornel. Tir. alii.

of the Lord, and exceeded all who went before him in impiety. He married Jezebel, the Daughter of Ethbaal, King of the Zidonians, who introduced the Idols Baal and Aſtarte among the Iſraelites, and engaged Ahab in the worſhip of theſe falſe Gods. God being provok'd by his ſins, ſent the Prophet Elijah to him, who declared to him that there would be a Famine of three years continuance; after which he retired, left King Ahab, or Jezebel his Queen, ſhould procure his death. The Dearth having laſted for three years, Ahab ſent Obadiah, who was Governor of his houſe, to look for ſome good paſture in the Country, that he might pre-
1 Kings xviii. ſerve ſome at leaſt of his Cattle. In his journey he met Elijah, who commanded him to go and tell Ahab that Elijah was there. Ahab came immediately, and ſaid to the Prophet, Art thou he that troubleth Iſrael? And he anſwer'd, I have not troubled Iſrael, but thou and thy Father's houſe, in that thou haſt forſaken the Commandments of the Lord, and haſt followed Baalim.

He afterwards deſired him to gather all the People unto Mount Carmel, and with them the Prophets of Baal; and when they were thus aſſembled, Elijah cauſed fire to deſcend from Heaven upon his ſacrifice, as we ſhall ſee in the Article of Elijah. After this he obtained of God that it ſhould rain, and the Earth recover its former fertility. This happen'd in the year of the World 3096, before J. C. 904, before the vulgar Æra 908.

Six years after, that is to ſay, in the year of the World 3103, Ben-hadad, King
Ch. xx. of Syria, laid ſiege unto Samaria, and ſent Ambaſſadors to Ahab in the City with this meſſage, Thy Silver and thy Gold are mine, thy Wives alſo and thy Children, even the goodlieſt, are mine. To this the King of Iſrael anſwer'd, My Lord, O King, according to thy ſaying, I am thine and all that I have. And the Meſſengers came again from Ben-hadad, ſaying in their Maſter's name, Thou ſhalt deliver me thy Silver and thy Gold, and thy Wives and thy Children; and I will ſend my Servants to-morrow unto thee about this time, and they ſhall ſearch thine houſe, and the houſes of thy Servants, and it ſhall be that whatſoever is pleaſant in thine eyes, they ſhall put it in thine hand and take it away. Then Ahab called all the Elders of the land, and ſaid, Mark, I pray you, and ſee how this Man ſeeketh miſchief. I have yielded to all that he at firſt demanded, and he is not content with what is mine, but will have likewiſe what belongs unto my Subjects. And all the Elders and all the People ſaid unto him, Hearken not to him nor conſent. The Ambaſſadors of Ben-hadad returning to him, reported the reſolution of the Samaritans. Whereupon he ſent to Ahab, and ſaid, The Gods do ſo to me, and more alſo, if the duſt of Samaria ſhall ſuffice for handfuls for all the People that follow me. To which Ahab replied, Let not him that girdeth on his harneſs, boaſt himſelf as he that putteth it off. Ben-hadad was drinking in the ſhade with other Kings that accompanied him when he receiv'd this anſwer, and ſaid immediately to his People, Set yourſelves in array, and they ſet themſelves in array againſt the City. At the ſame time there came a Prophet unto Ahab, ſaying, Haſt thou ſeen this great multitude? behold I will deliver it into thine hand this day, and thou ſhalt know that I am the Lord. And Ahab ſaid, by whom? Even by the young men of the Princes of the Provinces. Ahab added, Who ſhall order the battle? And the Prophet anſwer'd Thou. Then Ahab reviewed the Princes of the Provinces, and found their number to be two hundred thirty two. After this he reviewed the People likewiſe that were in Samaria, and found that they amounted to ſeven thouſand. They made a ſally at noon day, while Ben-hadad was drinking, and overcharg'd with wine, and the two and thirty Kings that followed him were with him in the ſame condition. The young men of the Princes of the Provinces marched at the head of Ahab's little army. Ben-hadad had notice that Ahab's People were come out of the City, and he ſaid, Whether they come to talk of Peace or to engage, take them all alive. The young men notwithſtanding, followed by the inconſiderable army of Iſrael, advanced, and killed all that oppoſed them. Hereupon a panick terror ſeized on the Syrian army, and they all began to fly. Ben-hadad himſelf mounted his horſe, and fled with his cavalry. Ahab ſeeing this, purſued the Run-aways, killed great numbers of them, and took a very conſiderable booty.

Then the Prophet of the Lord came to Ahab, to infuſe new courage into him, Ch. xx. 22, & ſeq.
and caution him to be upon his guard, becauſe Ben-hadad would return againſt him the year following. Accordingly at the year's end he return'd, and incamped at Aphek with a deſign of giving battle to the Iſraelites. The King of Iſrael marched againſt him with an Army much inferior in force and number; but a Prophet from God came and aſſured him of the victory. (In the Year of the World 3104, before J. C. 896, before the vulgar Æra 900.) Both Armies were ranged in order of Battle for ſeven days ſucceſſively. At laſt upon the ſeventh day the Combat began; the Iſraelites killed an hundred thouſand of the Syrians, and the reſt fled to Aphek. But as they were preſſing to get into the City, the walls of Aphek fell upon them, and killed ſeven and twenty thouſand more. Ben-hadad throwing himſelf upon the clemency of Ahab, this Prince received him into his own chariot, made an alliance with him, and permitted him to go, upon condition that Ahab should be allowed to make Streets and Market-places in Damascus, as Ben-hadad's Father had done before in Samaria.

This Clemency shewn so unseasonably, provoked the Lord. A certain Prophet said unto one of his companions, Smite me; and upon his refusal to do so, he said unto him, Because thou wouldst not smite me, as soon as thou art departed from me, a Lion shall slay thee. And as soon as he was departed from him a Lion found him and slew him. He said then to another Man Smite me, and the Man smote him and wounded him. The Prophet disguised himself with ashes upon his face to prevent his being known; and going to the King, said, Thy Servant went out into the midst of the Battle, and a Prisoner was deliver'd to my care with this Charge, Thou shalt answer for this Man with thy life, or shalt pay a talent of Silver: In the midst of the distraction and perplexity which I was then in, turning to one side and the other, the Man on a sudden disappeared. Ahab answer'd, You have pronounced your own sentence. Whereupon the Prophet wiping the dust from off his face, said to the King, Because thou hast let go out of thine hand a Man whom I had destined to utter destruction, therefore thy life shall go for his life, and thy People for his People. Ahab returned to Samaria in great indignation, without concerning himself much about the Prophet's Prediction. This happened in the year of the World 3104, before J. C. 896, before the vulgar Æra 900.

The year following 3105, Ahab desiring to make a Kitchen-garden near his Palace, requested of one Naboth, a Citizen of Jezreel, that he would sell him his Vineyard, because it lay convenient for him, and withal told him, that he would either give him a better, or would pay the value of it. The Lord forbid, said Naboth, that I should give the inheritance of my Fathers unto thee. Ahab therefore returned in great passion to his house, threw himself upon his bed, turned towards the wall, and would eat nothing. Jezebel his Wife coming in, asked the reason of his great concern, and being informed, she said, For one who is King of Israel, your Authority indeed is very great: Rise, eat, and take your rest, for I will undertake to put Naboth the Jezreelite's Vineyard into your possession. She immediately therefore wrote Letters in the name of Ahab, sealed them with the King's signet, and sent them to the Elders of Jezreel. The Letters were drawn up in these terms, Proclaim a fast, and set Naboth on high among the People. And set two Men, Sons of Belial, before him, to bear witness against him, saying, Thou didst blaspheme God and the King, and then carry him out and stone him, that he may die. These orders were but too punctually executed, and Ahab being informed of Naboth's death, immediately took possession of his Vineyard.

As he returned from Jezreel to Samaria, the Prophet Elijah, by God's direction, met him, and said, Hast thou killed, and also taken possession? Now thus saith the Lord, in the place where Dogs licked the blood of Naboth, shall Dogs lick thy blood, even thine. And Ahab said to him, Hast thou found me, O my Enemy! And he answer'd, I have found thee: Because thou hast sold thy self to work evil in the sight of the Lord, behold I will bring evil upon thee, and upon all thy Family. If Ahab dies in the City the Dogs shall eat him, if in the Fields the Fowls of the air shall eat him. And for Jezebel, of her the Lord spake, saying, The Dogs shall eat Jezebel by the way of Jezreel. Ahab hearing these words, rent his clothes, and put sackcloth upon his Flesh, and fasted, and lay in sackcloth, and went softly. Then the Lord said to the Prophet Elijah, Seest thou how Ahab humbleth himself before me? Because he humbleth himself before me, I will not bring the evil in his days, but in his Son's days will I bring the evil upon his house. But as Ahab's Repentance was neither sincere nor persevering, God nothwithstanding inflicted some part of this punishment upon his Person, but did not extirpate his Family till the reign of his Son Ahaziah, as we shall see in another place.

Two years after Jehoshaphat, King of Judah, making Ahab a visit in Samaria, at a time when he was preparing to attack Ramoth-gilead, which Ben-hadad, King of Syria, unjustly detained from him, the King of Israel invited him to accompany him in this Expedition, which Jehoshaphat consented to, but wished that some Prophet of the Lord might be first consulted. Ahab therefore assembled all the Prophets of Baal, in number about four hundred, who all concurr'd in saying, Go up, for the Lord shall deliver Ramoth-gilead into the hand of the King. And Jehoshaphat said, Is there not here a Prophet of the Lord besides, that we might enquire of him? Ahab said, there is one, Micaiah the Son of Imlah, but he doth not prophesy good concerning me, but evil. And Jehoshaphat said, Let not the King say so. Micaiah therefore was called. In the mean time the two Kings were in an open place near the gate of Samaria, seated each upon his throne, dressed with a Magnificence truly royal, and all the Prophets of Baal were about them, counterfeiting inspired Persons; and one among the rest, Zedekiah, the Son of Chenaanah, making himself

In the Year of the World 3107, before J. C. 893, before the vulgar Æra 897. 1 Kings xxii.

self

ſelf horns of iron, ſaid, Thus ſaith the Lord, With theſe ſhalt thou puſh the Syrians, until thou haſt conſumed them. The reſt alſo propheſied the ſame, each after his particular manner, and exhorted the Kings to march reſolutely againſt Ramoth-gilead.

Ahab's officer, who went in ſearch for Micaiah, told him, that the Prophets all foretold nothing but proſperity to the two Kings; Let thy word therefore, ſaid he, be like the word of one of them, and ſpeak that which is good. And Micaiah ſaid, As the Lord liveth, that which the Lord ſaith unto me, that will I ſpeak. He went therefore to Ahab, who asked him whether he ſhould march againſt Ramoth-gilead. Go, ſaid Micaiah, and proſper, for the Lord ſhall deliver it into thine hand. The King added, I adjure thee, that thou tell me nothing but that which is true, in the name of the Lord. Then Micaiah, putting on a more ſerious air, ſaid, I ſaw all Iſrael ſcattered upon the hills, as Sheep that have no Shepherd; and the Lord ſaid, Theſe have no maſter, let them return every man to his houſe in peace. Then Ahab ſaid to Jehoſhaphat, Did I not tell thee, that he would propheſy no good concerning me, but evil? Micaiah added, Hear thou therefore the word of the Lord, I ſaw the Lord ſitting upon his throne, and all the hoſt of Heaven ſtanding by him, on his right hand and on his left; and the Lord ſaid, Who ſhall perſuade Ahab, that he may go up and fall at Ramoth gilead? And one ſaid on this manner, and another ſaid on that manner. And then came forth a Spirit, and ſtood before the Lord and ſaid, I will perſuade him. And the Lord ſaid unto him, wherewith? And he ſaid, I will go forth, and I will be a lying Spirit in the mouth of all his Prophets. And he ſaid, Thou ſhalt perſuade him and prevail alſo; go forth and do ſo. It is this evil Spirit, which hath animated all thy Prophets, who endeavour only to engage thee in that which will be thy ruin.

At the ſame time Zedekiah the Son of Chenaanah ſmote Micaiah on the cheek, and ſaid, Which way went the Spirit of the Lord to ſpeak unto thee? And Micaiah anſwered, Behold thou ſhalt ſee in that day, when thou ſhalt go into an inner chamber to hide thy ſelf. Then Ahab gave orders to his people to ſecure Micaiah, and carry him to Amon the Governour of the City, and to Joaſh the King's Son, and ſay, in his name, Put this fellow in priſon, and feed him with the bread of affliction, and with the water of affliction, until I come in peace. And Micaiah ſaid, If thou return at all in peace, the Lord hath not ſpoken by me. And he ſaid, Hearken, O people, every one of you. Ahab therefore, and Jehoſhaphat marched againſt Ramoth-gilead, and the King of Iſrael ſaid to Jehoſhaphat, I will diſguiſe my ſelf, and enter into the battle; but put thou on thy robes. For he knew that the King of Syria had commanded two and thirty Captains that had rule over his chariots, ſaying, Fight neither with ſmall nor great, ſave only with the King of Iſrael. Theſe officers therefore having obſerved King Jehoſhaphat to be dreſſed in royal robes, took him for the King of Iſrael, and fell all upon him with great impetuoſity; ſo that this Prince ſeeing himſelf preſſed ſo cloſely, cried out; this diſcovered him, and when he was known, he was purſued no longer by the Captains of the King of Syria.

But God, in order to fulfil his word, permitted one of the Syrian army to ſhoot a random arrow, which pierced the heart of Ahab: He ſaid therefore to his charioteer, Turn thine hand, and carry me out of the hoſt, for I am wounded. The battle laſted the whole day, and Ahab continued in his chariot with his face turned againſt the Syrians. In the mean while his blood was ſtill iſſuing from his wound, and falling on his chariot; and in the evening he died. Then proclamation was made by ſound of trumpet throughout the army, that every man ſhould return to his own city and country. The King of Iſrael therefore being dead, was carried to Samaria, and there buried. His chariot, and the reins of his horſes were waſhed in the fiſh-pool of Samaria, and the dogs licked his blood, according to the Lord's prediction. Such was the end of Ahab, in the year of the world 3107. before J. C. 893. before the vulgar Æra 897. Ahaziah his Son ſucceeded him.

II. Ahab, the Son of Kolaiah, is one of the two falſe Prophets who ſeduced the Iſraelites at Babylon. The Lord Jer. xxix.
threatned them by Jeremiah, with deli- 21, 22.
vering them up to Nebuchadnezzar King of Babylon, who ſhould put them to death in the preſence of thoſe who had been deceived by them; and that all the people ſhould make uſe of their name, when they would curſe any one, ſaying, The Lord make thee like Ahab and Zedekiah, whom the King of Babylon roaſted in the fire.

The Rabbins, who in this particular are followed by ſeveral expoſitors, believe theſe two to be thoſe Elders of Judah, who endeavoured to corrupt the chaſte Suſanna, and upon their unjuſt accuſation procured her condemnation. But Daniel, Dan. xiii.
by inſpiration from God, diſcovered their 1, 2, 3. wickedneſs to the people, and they were ſtoned. This laſt circumſtance, which is ſet

Dan. xiii. 61. set down in expreſs terms in [r] Daniel, deſtroys the opinion of the Rabbins, who confound theſe two Elders with Ahab and Zedekiah; theſe laſt were roaſted in the fire, the others were ſtoned.

AHARAH, the third Son of Benjamin, 1 Chron. viii. 1.

AHARHEL, the Son of Harum, 1 Chr. iv. 8.

I. AHASUERUS, Dan. ix. 1. otherwiſe called Aſtyages, (Dan. xiii. 65.) and Artaxerxes, (Dan. vi. 1. in the Greek.) See hereafter the article of ASTYAGES.

II. AHASUERUS. This Prince was born about the year of the Julian Period 4165. of the world 3455. before J. C. 545. before the vulgar Æra 549. After the death of Cambyſes King of Perſia, in the year of the world 3482. Seven Magi of the country uſurped the ſovereign authority [s], pretending that Smerdis, the Son of Cyrus, and Brother of Cambyſes, was living, and that it was he who reigned. But Oſtanes, one of the great men of Perſia, having enquired of his daughter, who was one of the King's concubines, whether he who reigned, that is, the firſt of the Magi, had ears or not, (for Cyrus, or, according to others, Cambyſes, had cut them off) ſhe anſwered he had none. Then he knew that the Magi, and not Smerdis, were in poſſeſſion of the kingdom [t].

Oſtanes communicated this to the principal Lords of the Court, who having engaged themſelves by oath to kill the King, immediately departed, and went to the palace. They forthwith diſpatched all thoſe whom they met with, and being come to the apartment of the Magi, they attacked them: Theſe defended themſelves and wounded two of the Conſpirators; but the Conſpirators being the ſtrongeſt, one of them, called Gobryas, laid hold of the principal of the Magi, and as his companions were apprehenſive of wounding him inſtead of the Magus, becauſe this buſineſs was acted in an obſcure place, Gobryas cried out to them, and bid them pierce the enemy thro' his own body, leſt they ſhould miſs him. But Providence ſo ordered it that the Magus was killed, and Gobryas not ſo much as wounded. Thus theſe ſeven conſpirators delivered their Country from the oppreſſion of theſe uſurpers. (In the Year of the World 3483. before J. C. 517. before the vulg. Æra 521.)

Six days after the ſeven conſpirators met to deliberate upon the form of government which they ſhould eſtabliſh in Perſia; Oſtanes was for a Democracy, or popular Government; Megabyſus for an Oligarchy, that is for a Government to be lodged in the hands of ſome few choſen perſons; and Darius the Son of Hyſtaſpes, whom we call Ahaſuerus, for Monarchy, or a regal Government. The laſt opinion carried it; and they agreed that the next day, before the riſing of the Sun, they ſhould all meet on horſeback at the ſame place, and that he whoſe horſe ſhould firſt ſalute the Sun by neighing, ſhould be acknowledged King of Perſia, and ſucceſſor to Cambyſes. Darius's Groom hearing this, in the evening carried his Maſter's horſe with a mare to the place where they were to meet; ſo that the next day as ſoon as Darius's horſe came thither, the ſmell and ſenſe of what had paſſed there the evening before, ſet him a neighing, which was worth a kingdom to his Maſter; for immediately the other ſix conſpirators diſmounted, and ſaluted him by the title of King of Perſia [v].

Darius being thus ſeated in the throne of Cambyſes, married Atharſa, Daughter to Cyrus the founder of this Monarchy, and who had been firſt of all Wife to Cambyſes, then to the Magus who had uſurped the Crown [w]. In the ſecond year of his reign, the Jews who had returned to Paleſtine, encouraged by the exhortations of the Prophets Haggai and Zachary, began to ſet about rebuilding of the Temple, which work had been interrupted nine years before, under the reign of Cambyſes. (In the Year of the World 3485. Hag. i. 1–15. & ii. 2–9, 10. Zech. i. 1–6. Ezra iv. 6.) Hereupon the Governours of the Province ſent thither by the Perſians, came and demanded by what authority they undertook to rebuild this Edifice? The Jews anſwer'd, in purſuance of an Edict publiſhed by Cyrus in their favour, who permitted them to undertake this work. (Ezra v. 3, 4, 5, 6, 13.) In the mean while, theſe Governours wrote to Darius concerning this affair, and told him that Cyrus's Edict ſhould be at Babylon, deſiring to receive his orders. Darius gave directions to enquire after the Edict, and having found it at Ecbatane, he confirmed it, and commanded his Officers to aſſiſt the Jews in the execution of this deſign; and to furniſh them with things neceſſary for their Sacrifices, and for the fabrick of the Temple. Theſe orders were obeyed, and in a little time the work of the Temple was advanced very conſiderably.

The next year Ahaſuerus made a feaſt for the principal perſons of his Empire, in the palace of Shuſhan, wherein he ſhewed the utmoſt magnificence. The feaſt was continued for an hundred and fourſcore days, (Eſth. i. 1, 2, 3, &c.)

[r] The Text does not ſay literally that they were ſtoned; but only that they were treated as they would have uſed their neighbour; and that they were put to death according to the law of Moſes. Now the law condemns Adulterers to be ſtoned; and as this was the puniſhment which they would have had Suſannah ſuffer, they were made to undergo the ſame in the way of retaliation. [s] Val. Max. l. 9. c. 2. Ammian. Marcell. l. 23. [t] Vide Juſtin. l. 9. Herodot. l. 3. Cteſiam, &c. [v] Herod. l. 3. c. 85—88. Juſtin. l. 3. [w] Juſtin. l. 1. Herodot. l. 3. c. 88.

days, or six months intire. After this term the King invited all the People, great and small, that were present in Shushan the Palace, and commanded that preparations should be made to entertain them for seven days. Nothing could equal the splendor and magnificence of this Banquet. The Entertainment itself, and the manner wherein it was set out, was suitable to the grandeur of the most powerful Monarch in the World. Vashti the Queen treated likewise the Women in the King's Palace. Upon the seventh day Ahasuerus being more gay than usual, and well warmed with wine, ordered his principal Eunuchs to bring the Queen, and produce her before the People, that they might have an opportunity to observe her beauty; for she was perfectly handsome: But Vashti refused to come, which so provok'd the King that he call'd his Council to consult what their opinion was of Vashti's behaviour: They declared that she had not only offended the King, but that her disobedience to his Orders might engage other Women to use their Husbands in the same manner, and that their advice was for the King's divorcing her, and taking another Wife.

This counsel was followed, and Esther, the Niece of Mordecai, a Jew by Nation, was made choice of to be wedded to Ahasuerus, as we shall see in another place. Mordecai did not declare who he was, but was contented to stay at the Palace-gate, to enquire after his Niece Esther's health. Nevertheless, when Haman had obtain'd an Edict from the King, condemning all the Jews to death and confiscation of their Estates, he engaged Esther to wait on the King, and petition for a revocation of this Edict. Now Ahasuerus had forbidden all Persons whatever, upon pain of death, to come before him, unless sent for, or unless he held out his scepter towards them when they came near his Throne. Esther run Esth. v. 1, 2, 3, & seq.
the hazard of appearing without being called: The King extended his scepter towards her, and desired her to let him know what it was that she requested of him. Esther humbly entreated him to come that very day to an Entertainment which she had provided for him, and to bring Haman with him. Ahasuerus came, and the repast being ended, he commanded Esther to ask what she pleased of him, and it should be granted. Esther said, that the only favour she had to beg of him was, that he would come again with Haman the next day to an Entertainment which she would prepare for him; to which Ahasuerus consented; and Haman, who thought himself at the height of all his good fortune, had no other uneasiness than that of observing that Mordecai did not prostrate himself before him as he pass'd by.

In the mean time something happened which extremely humbled him. The King Ch. vi. 1, 2, 3, &c.
the night following could not sleep, and ordered the several Journals and Annals of the years preceding to be read to him. They fell upon that particular part wherein it was related how two Eunuchs having conspired to take away the King's life, one Mordecai discover'd the Conspiracy, and preserved him. Ahasuerus interrupted the Reader, and asked if Mordecai had been rewarded. He was answer'd no, that Mordecai had received no recompence at all. The next morning early Haman came to the King's Levée, to desire that Mordecai might be hanged upon a gibbet which he had provided for this purpose: Ahasuerus gave orders for his admission, and before he spoke, said to him, What shall be done unto the Man whom the King delighteth to honour? Haman, who believed that all this favour was intended for himself, replied, Let this Man be dressed in the royal robes, let him be mounted on the same horse which the King himself generally rides, and let a royal Diadem be placed upon his Head; let the principal Person of all the great Men belonging to the Court hold the reins of his horse, and walk before him to the most publick part of the City, proclaiming all the way, Thus shall it be done to the Man whom the King delighteth to honour. The King answer'd, Make haste and serve Mordecai the Jew in the manner you have mentioned. Haman did not dare to disobey the King, and Mordecai received an unexpected honour, which was not at all agreeable to him, by reason of the danger to which he saw all his Brethren expos'd.

In the mean while, Dinner-time being come, enquiry was made for Haman, who was to bear the King company at the Entertainment which Esther had prepar'd for them. Ahasuerus in the heat of his Wine, said again as he had done before to Esther, What is it that you would ask or Ch. vii. 1, 2, 3, &c.
desire of me? She replied, If I have found favour in thy sight, O King, let my life and my People's be given me at my petition, for we have all been given up to be destroyed, and utterly extirpated. The King answer'd, And who is it that dare undertake what you mention? Esther said, This Haman whom you see is our mortal Enemy. Haman hearing this, was quite confounded, and the King at the same time rose up in passion, left the place where they were entertain'd, and went into the Garden, which was near. Then Haman threw himself at the Queen's feet, who was lying upon the bed, on which, after the manner of the Persians, she had been eating. Ahasuerus at that instant returning, and seeing Haman on the Queen's bed, What, faid he, will he force the Queen alfo before me in my own houfe? As the word went out of the King's mouth, they cover'd Haman's face, looking on him as one condemned to die. Then one of the King's Eunuchs faid before the King, Behold alfo the Gallows fifty cubits high, which Haman had made for Mordecai. Then the King faid, Hang him thereon.

Efth. viii. 1, 2, &c. After this he gave Haman's Employments to Mordecai, and his forfeited eftate to Efther. He cancell'd the Edict which appointed a general maffacre of the Jews to be upon the thirteenth day of the month Adar, gave Letters to the contrary, and permitted them to take vengeance on their Enemies on the very day which had been appointed for their deftruction. All this was tranfacted in the years of the World 3494, 3495, 3496. As the reft of Darius's life has no relation to any part of facred Hiftory, we fhall not enlarge upon his Wars and Conquefts. This Prince died in the year of the World 3519, before J.C. 481, before the vulgar Æra 485, after a Reign of fix and thirty years. He was fucceeded by Xerxes, whom he had by Atharfa or Vafhti, of whom there has been mention made in the beginning of this Article.

We have adhered to that opinion which explains what the Scripture tells us of Ahafuerus, Efther's Husband, as relating to Darius, the Son of Hyftafpes: Notwithftanding, as the matter is not without difficulty, we fhall here propofe what Dr. Prideaux has written againft this opinion, and in favour of his own, which is, that Artaxerxes Longimanus was he whom the Scripture calls Ahafuerus, Efther's Spoufe. Herein he differs, as he himfelf acknowledges, from two great Men, Ufher and Jofeph Scaliger. Ufher believes that Ahafuerus was Darius, the Son of Hyftafpes; and Scaliger that he was Xerxes. I fhall here fet down what he fays againft Ufher's opinion, and confequently againft our fyftem, fince we have adopted that of Ufher, tho' not in every thing, as may be feen by our Comment.

Ufher believes that Darius, the Son of Hyftafpes, married Atoffa, who is the fame as Vafhti, afterwards divorced by him, and that he took to Wife likewife Ariftone, the Daughter of Cyrus, and Widow of Cambyfes, who is the fame as Efther. But this opinion is contradicted by Herodotus[x], who informs us that Ariftone was the Daughter of Cyrus, and confequently could not be Efther, who was young. He fays farther[y], that Atoffa had four Sons by Darius, without reckoning Daughters, and that fhe had all along fo great an afcendant over him, as to prevail with him to declare her Son Xerxes his Succeffor, to the exclufion of his own Sons.

We forefaw this objection in our Comment upon Efther[z]; and without venturing to fay who Vafhti was that was divorced by Ahafuerus, we have fhewn that neither Atoffa, whom we take to be the Daughter of Cyrus, nor Ariftone, who was a virgin when he married her, and might well be Efther, that neither of them were difmifs'd by Ahafuerus. Herodotus fays expresfly in his third book that the Daughter of Cyrus, and Wife of Darius, was Atoffa[a].

Dr. Prideaux adds[b], that the principal reafon which engaged Ufher in the opinion by him maintain'd, is the Saying in the book of Efther, that Darius, the Son of Hyftafpes, laid a tribute upon the Land, and upon the isles of the Sea, which we read Ch. x. 1. likewife in Herodotus[c]. But Strabo[d] attributes this to Darius Longimanus, which our Author would have us explain of Artaxerxes Longimanus.

As for Scaliger[e], he thinks Xerxes is the Ahafuerus of the Scripture, and his Wife Ameftris Queen Efther. He grounds his belief only upon the refemblance of Names: But the feveral marks wherewith Hiftory defcribes Ameftris, prove invincibly that fhe is by no means the Efther of the Scripture. Ameftris, the Wife of Xerxes, had a Son by this Prince, who was of age to marry in the feventh year of his Father's Reign[f]. She could not therefore be Efther, who was not married till the feventh year of his Reign. There is nothing more neceffary to deftroy Scaliger's opinion.

Let us now enquire into the reafons brought by Dr. Prideaux for Artaxerxes Longimanus. In the firft place he fhews that Jofephus[g] in exprefs terms affures us that Artaxerxes Longimanus was Efther's Husband. The verfion of the Septuagint, and the Greek additions to the book of Efther, call Ahafuerus Artaxerxes. There are feveral circumftances in thefe additions which cannot be applied to Artaxerxes Mnemon: The extraordinary favour wherewith Artaxerxes Longimanus honour'd the Jews, proves farther, that in all probability he had married a Jewefs. This opinion is maintained by Sulpitius Severus, and many both of the Antients and Moderns. This is what is urged in behalf of this opinion. See likewife our Preface to Efther.

[x] Herodot. l. 3 & 7. [y] Herodot. l. 7. fub initium. [z] Comment. fur Efther I. 9. [a] Herodot. l. 3. c. 68 & 88. [b] Prideaux's Hiftory of the Jews, Part 1. Book 4. [c] Herodot. l. 3. c. 89. [d] Strabo, l. 15. [e] Scalig. de emendat. temp. l. 9. [f] Herodot. l. 9. [g] Joseph. Antiq. l. 11. c. 6.

Ezra vii. 15. AHAVA, a river of Babylonia, or rather of Assyria, where Ezra gathered those Captives into a body, whom he brought with him into Judæa. We are of opinion, that the river Ahava is that which ran along the Adiabene, where the river Diava, or Adiava, is known to be, upon which Ptolemy places the City of Abane or Aavane. This is probably the Country 2 Kings xvii. 24. xviii. 34. xix. 13. called in the books of Kings, Ava, from whence the Kings of Assyria translated the people called Avites into Palestine; where likewise in their room they settled some of Ch. xvii. 31. the captive Israelites. Ezra intending to pick up as many Israelites as he could, to carry back with him to Judæa, made a halt in the country of Ava, or Ahava, from whence he sent emissaries into the Caspian mountains, to invite such Jews as were there to be found, to come and join Ezra viii. 17. him. The history of Izates King of the Adiabenians, and his mother Helena, who became converts to Judaism some years after the death of Jesus Christ, is an argument to persuade us, that there were still at that time many Jews in that country.

AHAZ, King of Judah, the Son of Jotham, is celebrated for his impieties and vices. There are some difficulties about the age he was of when he began to reign. In the Year of the World 3262, before J. C. 738, before the vulgar Æra 742. [h] The Text expresses that he was twenty years of age: But how is this to be reconciled with what is said in the same place, that he reigned but sixteen years? from whence it must be necessarily concluded, that he lived but thirty six years. We know however that his Son Hezekiah was five and twenty years of age when he began to reign; it must be said therefore, that his Father Ahaz begat him when as yet he was eleven years old only; and accordingly, many good Commentators [i] do maintain this. They who cannot be of this opinion, study different ways whereby to disengage themselves out of this perplexity; as may be seen in the several comments upon the second Book of Kings.

Ahaz walked in the ways of the Kings of Israel and Samaria; that is to say, he gave himself up to idolatry and all manner of disorders. One of his Sons he consecrated, by making him pass through, and perish by the fire, in honour of the false God Moloch, according to the Idolatry of those nations, which God destroyed, when the Children of Israel entred into 2 Kings xxi. 1, 2, 3, &c. the land of Canaan. He offered sacrifices and incense upon the high places, upon hills and in groves. About the end of Jotham, King of Judah's reign, the Lord began to send against Judah, Rezin King Ch. xv. ult. of Syria, and Pekah King of Israel. But these two Kings made inroads into the country principally under Ahaz, and having made great havock there, they first defeated the troops of Ahaz, and then laid siege to Jerusalem. When they found 2 Kings xvi. 1, 5. 2 Chron. xxviii. 5, & seq. Isai. vii. 1. they could not make themselves masters of it, they divided their Army, and began to plunder every where, and make prisoners. Rezin and his part of the Army, marched with all their spoil to Damascus; but that of Pekah having in one Battel only killed an hundred and twenty thousand men of Ahaz's army, took besides two hundred thousand persons in the country, without distinction of Men, Women or Children. As they were carrying all these Captives to Samaria, the Prophet Oded, with the principal inhabitants of the City, came out to meet them, and prevailed with them, by their remonstrances, to set their prisoners at liberty. They not only did this, but gave them likewise something to eat, restored the booty which they had taken, and those who were not able to perform the journey on foot, were conveyed in carriages to Jericho.

In the Year of the World 3263, before J. C. 737, before the vulg. Æra 741. 2 Chron. xxviii. 17, 18. About the same time the Philistines and Edomites spread themselves like an inundation over the territories of Ahaz, committed a thousand disorders, killed abundance of people, and carried off much booty. In these sad circumstances, and before the siege of Jerusalem, the Prophet Isai. vii. 1, 2, & seq. Isaiah went to Ahaz, foretold the deliverance of his country, and the destruction of his enemies. To prove the truth of his prediction, he gave him the liberty of choosing what prodigy he pleased. But Ahaz refused, and said he would not tempt the Lord. "Hear then, said Isaiah, O "House of David, is it a small thing "for you to weary men, but must ye "weary my God also? Behold the sign "which the Lord shall give you, a Virgin shall conceive and bear a Son, and "shall call his name Immanuel. Butter "and Honey shall he eat, that he may "know to refuse the Evil, and choose "the Good." At the same time Isaiah, as a demonstration of the approaching ruin of Rezin and Pekah, gave him his Son Hash-baz, and assured him, that before this Child should be able to call his Father or his Mother by their names, the two Kings who were confederated against Judah, should be slain.

But as Ahaz did not change his life, God permitted his Enemies to return again the year following, 3265, and lay waste all the Kingdom of Judah. Then Ahaz seeing no other remedy for his affairs, sent Ambassadors to Tiglath-pileser King of the Assyrians, with commission to say from 2 Kings xvi. 7. him, I am thy Servant, and thy Son, come up

[h] See our Comment upon 2 Kings xvi. 2.

[i] Vide Hieronym. Epist. ad Vitalem, & Samuel, Bochart. Dissert. in Reg. xvi. p. 920. Edit. Leid. 1682.

up and ſave me out of the hands of the King of Syria, and the King of Iſrael, which riſe up againſt me. And having amaſſed together all the Gold and Silver which was in the Temple and the Palace, he ſent it to the King of Aſſyria. Immediately therefore Tiglath-pileſer marched to the aſſiſtance of Ahaz, attacked Rezin, killed him, took his Capital Damaſcus, deſtroyed it, removed the inhabitants of it to Cyrene, or rather, into that part of Iberia thro' which the river Cyrus runs. Ahaz went as far as Damaſcus to meet the King of Aſſyria; and having ſeen there a profane Altar, he ſent a model of it to the High-Prieſt Urijah, that he might have one made like it, and placed in the Temple of Jeruſalem. Accordingly, when Ahaz returned thither, he had the Altar removed which was in the Temple, and this fixed there in the room of it. Upon this new Altar he offered Sacrifices, and commanded the High-Prieſt Urijah never for the future to offer upon any other. He ordered alſo the baſes to be taken away, which were adorned with fine engravings, and the levers of braſs which reſted on them: He removed likewiſe the brazen Sea, which was ſupported by Oxen of the ſame metal, and commanded them to be placed below, upon the pavement of the Temple. The misfortunes which he ſaw himſelf expoſed to made him not at all
2 Chron. xxviii. 22, 23, &c. better. In the time of his greateſt affliction, he ſhewed the higheſt contempt of God. He ſacrificed to the Syrian Gods, whom he looked upon as the authors of his calamities, and undertook to make them propitious to him, by honouring them in this manner. He broke in pieces the veſſels of the Houſe of God, ſhut up the gates of the Temple, and erected Altars in all parts of Jeruſalem. He ſet up Altars likewiſe in all the cities of Judah, with a deſign to offer incenſe on them. At laſt he ſlept with his Fathers, and was buried in Jeruſalem; but not in the Sepulchers of the Kings of Judah his Predeceſſors; this honour he was deprived of, becauſe of his iniquities *. Hezekiah his Son reigned in his ſtead, in the year of the World 3278. before J. C. 722. before the vulgar Æra 726.

2. Ahaz, the Father of Jehoadah, 1 Chron. viii. 36.

1 Kings xxii. 40. I. AHAZIAH, the Son and Succeſſor of Ahab, King of Iſrael. He reigned two years, part alone, and part with his Father Ahab, who made him, as it is ſaid, his Aſſociate in the Kingdom, the year before his death [k]. Ahaziah imitated his Father's impiety, and paid his adorations to Baal and Aſtarte, the worſhip of whom had been introduced in Iſrael by Jezebel his Mother. The Scripture ſays that King Jehoſhaphat having equipp'd a Fleet at Ezion-geber, Ahaziah deſired leave for his ſervants to go with Jehoſhaphat's to Ophir. Jehoſhaphat, in all probability, at firſt might ſcruple it, ſince the firſt Book of Kings relates, that he would not conſent Ver. 50.
to it. But the Chronicles ſhew ſufficiently 2 Chron.
that theſe two Princes having together 20. 36, 37.
equipp'd a Fleet for Tarſhiſh, God, provoked at the Alliance which Jehoſhaphat had made with this impious King, permitted this Fleet to be ſo ſhattered by tempeſtuous winds, as to be diſabled and unfit to perform the intended voyage.

The Moabites, who had always been obedient to the Kings of the ten Tribes, ever ſince their ſeparation from the kingdom of Judah, revolted, after the death 2 Kings i. 1, 2. In the year of the World 3108. before J. C. 892. before the vulgar Æra 896.
of Ahab, and refuſed to pay the ordinary tribute. Ahaziah had not leiſure or power to reduce them; for about the ſame time having fallen from the terraſs of his houſe, he hurt himſelf conſiderably, and ſent his people to Ekron to conſult Beelzebub concerning his indiſpoſition. At the ſame time the Prophet, by God's appointment, met theſe meſſengers, and ſaid to them, Is it becauſe there is no God in Iſrael, that ye go thus and conſult Beelzebub the God of Ekron? Therefore thus ſaith the Lord, Thou ſhalt not come down from that bed on which thou art gone up, but ſhalt ſurely die. Having ſaid this he went away. Ahaziah's people returning to this Prince's palace, told what had happened to them. Ahaziah asked them what the figure and dreſs was of the Man who told them theſe things? They anſwered, He is an hairy Man, girt with a girdle of leather about his loins; and he ſaid, It is Elijah the Tiſhbite.

Immediately he ſent a Captain, with fifty ſoldiers under his command, to ſeize Elijah, and bring him to him: But the Captain having ſpoken in too imperious a manner to the man of God, Elijah called for fire from Heaven, which deſtroyed him and his fifty ſoldiers. Ahaziah being informed of this, ſent another, who was in like manner conſumed by fire from Heaven, together with his fifty ſoldiers. A third coming to him, fell upon his knees before him, and entreated him to preſerve his life, and wait upon the King. Hereupon the Angel of the Lord ſuggeſted inwardly to the Prophet that he might go, and ſhould fear nothing. Elijah therefore roſe and went to Ahaziah, to whom he repeated what before he had told his People, that he ſhould not recover of his diſeaſe. Accordingly he died, as [k] He reigned from 3106. to 3108. Ahab died in 3107. before J. C. 893. before the vulgar Æra 897.

* Other Princes his Predeceſſors, as Jehoram and Joaſh, as well as Manaſſeh and Ammon, two of his Succeſſors, for the ſame reaſon were treated with the ſame ignominy; and denied the privilege of being interr'd among the Kings their Predeceſſors.

as the word of the Lord had declared. Jehoram his Brother reigned in his stead, in the year of the World 3108, before J. C. 892, before the vulgar Æra 896.

2. Ahaziah, King of Judah, Son of Jehoram and Athaliah, succeeded his Father in the Kingdom of Judah, in the year of the World 3119, before J. C. 881, before the vulgar Æra 885. He was two and twenty years old when he began to reign, and he reigned one year only at Jerusalem. He walked in the ways of Ahab's house, to which he was allied, his Mother being of this Family, and did evil in the sight of the Lord. This Prince was likewise called Jehoahaz and Azariah. The text of the Chronicles imports, that he was two and forty years of age when he began to reign, wherein it differs from the text of the second book of Kings, which makes him to be two and twenty only; but this passage in the Chronicles is thought to be corrupted. Joram, King of Israel, going to attack Ramoth of Gilead, which the Kings of Syria had taken from the Kings his Predecessors, was there dangerously wounded, and carried by his own appointment to Jezreel, in order to be dressed. Ahaziah, Joram's friend and relation, accompanied him in this war, and came afterwards to visit him at Jezreel. In the mean time Jehu, the Son of Nimshi, whom Joram had left besieging the fortress of Ramoth, rebell'd against his Master, and set out with a design of extirpating the house of Ahab, according to the Lord's command. Joram and Ahaziah, who knew nothing of his intentions, went to meet him: Jehu shot Joram dead upon the spot; Ahaziah fled, but Jehu's People overtook him at the going up to Gur, which is near Ibleam, and mortally wounded him: Notwithstanding, he had strength enough to reach Megiddo, where he died. His Servants, having laid him in his chariot, carried him to Jerusalem, where he was buried with his Fathers in the City of David. After this manner is this Accident related in the second book of Kings, Chap. ix. 21, 22, &c.

[2 Kings viii. 24. 2 Chr. xxii. 2.] [2 Ch. xxi. 17. Vide & vi. in Hebr.] [2 Kings viii. 28. ix. 21, 22. & 2 Chr. xxii. 2, 3, 4, 5. In the Year of the World 3120. before J. C. 880. before the Vulg. Æra 884.] [In the Year of the World 3120. before J. C. 880. before the vulg. Æra 884.]

But in the Chronicles this story is told with some little difference. And it came to pass that when Jehu was executing judgment upon the house of Ahab, and found the Princes of Judah and the Sons of the Brethren of Ahaziah, that minister'd to Ahaziah, he slew them: And he sought Ahaziah, and they caught him, for he was hid in Samaria, and brought him to Jehu; and when they had slain him, they buried him, because, said they, he is the Son of Jehoshaphat. The better to reconcile the relation in the books of Kings with that in the Chronicles, it may be said that in the passage here produced by us, Samaria is put down not for the City, but the Kingdom of this name. Jehu being informed that Ahaziah was still in the Territories of Israel, and continued dangerously ill at Megiddo, not being able to reach the land of Judah, he gave orders for him to be brought into his presence and put to death. See the Commentators on the second book of Kings, Chap. ix. 22, 23, &c.

AHER, of the Tribe of Benjamin, was the Father of Hushim, 1 Chr. viii. 12.

AHI, the Son of Shomer, of the Tribe of Benjamin, 1 Chr. vii. 34.

1. AHIAH, Son of Shisha, and Solomon's Secretary, 1 Kings iv. 2.

2. Ahiah, Son to the High-priest Ahitub, and successor in the sovereign Pontificate. When he died, he left this dignity to his Son Abimelech, who was put to death by Saul's order. [1 Sam. 3.]

3. Ahiah, the Son of Naaman, of the Tribe of Benjamin. [1 Chr. viii. 7.]

AHIAM, one of those brave Officers who had a command in David's Army, 2 Sam. xxiii. 33.

AHIAN, the Son of Shemida, 1 Chr. vii. 19.

AHIEZER, the Son of Ammishaddai, Chief of the Tribe of Dan, who came out of Egypt at the head of seventy two thousand seven hundred men of his Tribe. He offer'd a silver bason at the Tabernacle, which weighed an hundred and thirty shekels, and a silver bowl of seventy shekels in weight, both full of fine flower, mingled with oil, for a Meal-offering; a golden spoon of ten shekels full of Incense, a young bullock, a ram and a lamb of the first year, for a Burnt-offering; a kid for a Sin-offering; two oxen, five rams, five he-goats, and five lambs of the first year, for a Peace-offering. [Num. vii. 66, 67. In the Year of the World 2514. before J. C. 1486. before the vulgar Æra 1490.]

AHIHUD, the Son of Naaman, and Brother of Ahoah, of the Tribe of Benjamin, 1 Chr. viii. 7.

AHIJAH, the Prophet of the Lord, who dwelt at Shilo. He is thought to be the person who spoke twice to Solomon from God; once while he was building the Temple, at which time he promised him his protection. And another time, after his falling into all his irregularities, when God expressed his indignation with great threatnings and reproaches. Ahijah was one of those who wrote the history or journal of this Prince's life. We read in [1] Epiphanius of his prediction to Solomon, that he would one day be perverted by Women, and God would raise up Enemies against him. And the same Prophet declared to Jeroboam, that he would by stratagem usurp the Kingdom, and that two [1 Kings vi. 11.] [Ch. xi. 6.] [2 Chr. ix. 29.]

[1] Epiphan. in lib. de vita & monte Prophet. in Ahia.

two heifers should alienate him from the Lord; meaning the two golden Calves erected by Jeroboam, one at Dan, the other at Bethel. We read in the first book of Kings that Jeroboam going one day out of Jerusalem, was met by the Prophet Ahijah of Shilo. As they two were alone together in the fields, the Prophet took a new Cloak which Jeroboam wore from off his shoulders, and cutting it in twelve pieces, said, Take ten pieces for thyself; for thus saith the Lord God of Israel, I will rend the kingdom out of the hand of Solomon, and will give ten Tribes to thee: He shall have one Tribe for my Servant David's sake, and for Jerusalem's sake the City which I have chosen out of all the Tribes of Israel, because that they have forsaken me, and have worshipped Ashtoreth the Goddess of the Zidonians, Chemosh the God of the Moabites, and Milcom the God of the Children of Ammon, and have not walked in my ways, to do that which is right in mine eyes, as did David his Father.

1 Kings 11. 29.

Howbeit, I will not take the whole kingdom out of his hands, I will suffer him to govern for the remainder of his life; but I will take the kingdom out of his Son's hands, and will give it unto thee, even ten Tribes: And unto his Son will I give one Tribe, that David my Servant may have a light always before me in Jerusalem: And I will take thee, and thou shalt reign according to all that thy Soul desireth, and shalt be King over Israel: And it shall be, if thou wilt hearken to all that I command thee, and wilt walk in my ways, and do that is right in my sight, to keep my Statutes and Commandments, as David my Servant did, that I will be with thee, and build thee a sure house, as I built for David, and will give Israel unto thee: And I will for this afflict the seed of David, but not for ever. This happened in the year of the World 3020, before J. C. 980, before the vulgar Æra 984.

This Prophecy could not be so secret but Solomon got intelligence of it; and perhaps Jeroboam was so imprudent as to boast of it, and declare too openly against the King. But however this may be, Jeroboam was obliged to fly for security into Egypt, where he continued with King Shishak till the death of Solomon, in the year 3025. Then Jeroboam was advanced to the Throne of Israel, or the ten Tribes, as we shall relate in the Article belonging to him. He soon forgot what Ahijah had recommended to him, to be faithful to the Lord. He forbad his Subjects to go and worship God at Jerusalem, and set up two golden Calves for the object of their Worship; one at Dan, the other at Bethel. At Bethel he erected a profane Altar, and himself sacrificed upon it: But a Man of God sent from Judah foretold the overthrow of his Altar, and the birth of King Josiah, who upon this Altar should sacrifice the Priests of the high places. Some take this Prophet from Judah to be Ahijah, whom we are speaking of; but Ahijah dwelt at Shilo, in the Tribe of Ephraim; and besides, survived the erection of this Altar at Bethel; whereas the Prophet here in question was killed by a lion the very day he had been speaking to Jeroboam.

Ch. xii. 28, 29, & seq. Ch. xiii. 1, 2, &c.

About the end of Jeroboam's Reign, that is to say, towards the year 3046, Abijah, the Son of Jeroboam, fell sick; Jeroboam therefore said to his Wife, Change your dress, and disguise yourself, so that no one may know you, and go to Shiloh, where the Prophet Ahijah lives, who first promised that I should reign over this People: Take with you ten loaves, and craknels, and a cruise of honey, and consult him concerning the indisposition of my Son. The Queen therefore went to Ahijah's house in Shiloh. Now the Prophet could not see, for his eyes were darken'd with old age; but the Lord said to him, Behold the Wife of Jeroboam is come hither to consult you concerning the distemper of her Son; thus and thus shall you say unto her:

Ch. xiv. 1, 2, &c.

As Jeroboam's Wife came in disguised, and concealing who she was, Abijah heard the sound of her Feet, and said, "Come "in thou Wife of Jeroboam; why feignest thou thyself to be another? for I "am sent to thee with heavy tidings. "Go tell Jeroboam, thus saith the Lord "God of Israel; for as much as I exalted thee from among the People, and "made thee Prince over my People Israel, and rent the Kingdom away from "the house of David, and gave it to "thee, and yet thou hast not been as "my servant David, who kept my Commandments, and who followed me with "all his heart, to do that only which was "right in mine eyes; but hast done evil "above all that were before thee, for "thou hast made thee other Gods, and "molten Images, to provoke me to anger, and hast cast me behind thy back: "Therefore behold, I will bring evil upon the house of Jeroboam, I will cut "off all the Males of his Family, and will "utterly extirpate them out of Israel; I "will take away the remnant of the "house of Jeroboam, as a Man taketh "away dung, till it be all gone. Him "that dieth of Jeroboam in the City shall "the Dogs eat, and him that dieth in the "field shall the Fowls of the air eat, for "the Lord hath spoken it.

"Arise thou therefore, get thee to thine "own house, and when thy feet enter into the City the Child shall die. And "all Israel shall mourn for him, and "bury him; for he only of Jeroboam's " House shall come to the grave, because " in him there is found some good thing " toward the Lord God of Israel, in the " House of Jeroboam. Moreover, the " Lord shall raise him up a King over " Israel, who shall cut off the House of " Jeroboam that day: but when? Even " now. This Prince is already appointed, " and the sentence of God against Jeroboam shall be soon executed. The Lord " shall smite Israel, as a reed is shaken in " the water, and he shall root up Israel " out of this good land, which he gave " to their Fathers, and shall scatter them " beyond the river, because they have " made their groves, provoking the Lord " to anger. And he shall give Israel up, " because of the sins of Jeroboam, who " did sin, and who made Israel to sin.

Jeroboam's wife returned therefore, and came to Tirzah, and when she set her foot upon the threshold of the door her child died. He was honourably interr'd, and lamented by all Israel, as the Lord had foretold by his servant Abijah. Abijah, in all probability, did not long survive these predictions; but the time and manner of his death we are not acquainted with.

1 Kings xv. 27.

II. Ahijah, the Son of Baasha King of Israel. Baasha killed Nadab the Son of Jeroboam, of whom we have been speaking, and usurped his kingdom, so executing the threats of the Prophet Abijah the Shilonite.

III. Ahijah, the Son of Pelon, one of those brave officers who had commands in David's army.

IV. Ahijah, keeper of the Temple-Treasury, under David, 1 Chron. xxvi. 20.

V. Ahijah, the Son of Esrom, of the Tribe of Judah, 1 Chron. ii. 25.

2 Kings xxii. 12.

AHIKAM, the Son of Shaphan, and Father of Gedaliah. He was sent by Josiah King of Judah to Huldah the Prophetess, to consult her concerning the book of the Law, which had been found in the Temple, in the year of the world 3380. before J. C. 620. before the vulgar Æra 624.

AHILUD, the Father of Joshaphat, who was David's Secretary, 2 Sam. viii. 16.

2 Sam. xv. 17. & seq. xvii. 17. In the Year of the World 2981. before J. C. 1019. before the vulgar Æra 1023.

AHIMAAZ, the Son of Zadok the High Priest. He succeeded his Father about the year 3000, under the reign of Solomon. He did David a very important piece of service during the war with Absalom: For while his Father Zadok was in Jerusalem with Hushai the friend of David, Ahimaaz and Jonathan continued without the city, near the fountain Rogel; hither a maid-servant came, to tell them the resolution which had been taken in Absalom's council; whereupon they immediately departed to give the King intelligence of it. But being discovered by a young lad who gave information of them to Absalom, he sent orders to pursue them. Ahimaaz and Jonathan fearing to be taken, retired to a Man's house of Baharim, in whose Court-yard there was a well, in which they concealed themselves. Upon the mouth of this well the woman of the house spread a covering, and on the covering ground corn. When Absalom's people came, they asked the woman where Ahimaaz was, and Jonathan? She answer'd, They took a little water, and went away in great haste. They therefore who were in pursuit of them not finding them, returned to Jerusalem. Then Ahimaaz and Jonathan getting out of the well, continued their journey, and came to David, telling him that no time was to be lost, and he was to pass over Jordan with all possible expedition.

After the battle which Joab and Abishai, David's Generals, fought with Absalom, wherein this Prince was overcome and slain, Ahimaaz desired Joab's leave to carry news hereof to David. And Joab said unto him, Thou shalt not bear tidings this day, but thou shalt bear tidings another day: but this day thou shalt bear no tidings because the King's Son is dead. Then said Joab to Cushi, Go tell the King what thou hast seen. And Cushi bowed and ran. Soon after this, Ahimaaz said again to Joab, Howsoever, let me, I pray thee, also run after Cushi. And Joab said, Wherefore wilt thou run, my Son, seeing thou hast no tidings ready? But howsoever, said he, let me run. And he said unto him, Run. And Ahimaaz ran by the way of the plain, and out-ran Cushi.

2 Sam. xviii. 18, 19, 20. In the Year of the World 2981. before J. C. 1019. before the vulgar Æra 1023.

The Centinel who kept watch upon the roof over the gate, seeing one man alone coming, gave immediate notice of it to the King; who said, If he is alone, he brings some good news. And indeed, had his army been defeated, the people would have returned in crowds.

As therefore he was coming on with great haste, the Centinel saw a second running also, whereof giving notice from his station, the King said, He too is the bearer of good news. The Centinel added, The running of the foremost is like the running of Ahimaaz the Son of Zadock. And the King said, He is a good man, and cometh with good tidings. Ahimaaz coming near, called and said unto the King, All is well. And he fell down to the earth upon his face before the King, and said, Blessed be the Lord thy God, which hath delivered up the men that lift up their hand against my Lord the King. And the King said, Is the young Man Absalom safe? Ahimaaz out of prudence was unwilling to declare his death to him, and said only, When Joab thy servant sent me thy servant to thee, I saw a great tumult, but I knew not what it was. And the King said, Turn aside, and stand here. This is what we we learn from History concerning Ahimaaz. He was succeeded in the High-1 Chron. vi. 9. Priesthood by Azariah. The war between Absalom and David, whereof we have been speaking, began in the year of the world 2981. before J. C. 1019. before the vulgar Æra 1023.

AHIMAN, a Giant of the race of Anak. He dwelt at Hebron, when they who were sent for this purpose from the Numb. xiii. 23. Camp of Israel, visited the land of Canaan. He was driven from Hebron with his brethren Sheshai and Talmai, when Caleb Josh. xv. 14. took this City, in the year of the world 2559. before J. C. 1441. before the vulgar Æra 1445.

AHIMELECH, the Son of Ahitub, and Brother of Ahiah, whom he succeeded in the High-Priesthood. He is called Abia-
Mark ii. 26. thar in S. Mark. The Tabernacle was then at Nob, where Ahimelech, with other Priests, had his habitation. David being informed by his friend Jonathan, that Saul was determined to destroy him, thought it convenient to retire. He went 1 Sam. xxi. 1. to Nob therefore, to the High-Priest Ahimelech, who was very much surprized to see him, and said to him, Why art thou alone, and no Man with thee? David answered, The King has given me orders which are very pressing, and has forbidden me to discover them to any Man; and my people are appointed to rendezvous in such a place. If therefore you have any thing to eat, tho' it be but five loaves, give them to me. The High-Priest answered, I have no common bread, but there is hallowed bread, if the young Men have kept themselves at least from Women. Of a truth, said David, Women have been kept from us about these three days; and if they are any way polluted, I will take care they shall be purified before they eat of this bread.

David added, Is there not here under thine hand spear or sword? for I have neither brought my sword nor my weapons with me, because the King's business required haste. Ahimelech answered, The sword of Goliath the Philistine, whom thou slewest in the valley of Elah, behold it is here wrapt in a cloth behind the Ephod; if thou wilt take that, take it; for there is no other save that here. And David said, There is none like that, give it me. And David arose, and went to Achish King of Gath. Now Doeg the Edomite was at Gath, when David came thither. One day therefore, as Saul was complaining to his officers that no one was affected with his misfortunes, or gave him any intelli-
1 Sam. xxii. 6, 7. &c. gence of what was doing against him, Doeg related to him what had happened when David came to Ahimelech the High-Priest. Saul immediately sent orders for him and the other Priests to come to him, and said to Ahimelech, Why have you conspired with the Son of Jesse against me? Why have you given him a sword and bread, and have consulted God for him? Ahimelech answered the King, Who is so faithful among all thy servants as David, which is the King's Son-in-law, and goeth at thy bidding, and is honourable in thine house? Did I then begin to enquire of God for him?

Saul, without having any regard to Ahimelech's reasons, said, Thou shalt surely die, Ahimelech, thou and all thy father's house. And he commanded his guards that were about him to turn their arms against the Priests of the Lord, for, says he, their hand also is with David. But the King's officers would not put forth their hand to fall upon the Priests of the Lord. Then Saul commanded Doeg to kill them; who obeyed: and on that day there died fourscore and five persons that wore the linen Ephod. He went afterwards to Nob, and put Men, Women and Children, and even all the cattle that he found, to the edge of the sword. But one of Ahimelech's Sons, by name Abiathar, escaped the slaughter, and retired to David. This happened in the year of the world 2944. before J. C. 1056. before the vulgar Æra 1060.

AHIMOTH, the Son of Elkanah, 1 Chr. vi. 25.

AHINADAB, the Son of Iddo, was Governor of the Canton of Mahanaim, beyond Jordan, under the reign of Solomon, 1 Kings iv. 14.

1. AHINOAM, the Daughter of Ahimaaz, and Wife to Saul, 1 Sam. xiv. 50.

2. AHINOAM, David's second Wife, and Mother of Amnon. She was a native of Jezreel: She was taken by the Amalekites when they plunder'd Ziklag, but was recovered out of their hands by David, with the rest of the spoil.

AHIO, with his Brother Uzzah, were charged with the conduct of the Ark when David remov'd it from the house of Abinadab, in order to place it in the Tabernacle which he had prepared for it at Jerusalem. On this occasion it was that Uzzah was smitten by the Lord for presuming to touch the Ark when it was tottering upon the Cart that brought it. See UZZAH.

AHION, the Son of Abi-gibeon and Maachah, 1 Chr. viii. 31.

AHIRA, the Son of Enan, Chief of the Tribe of Naphtali. He went out of Numb. ii. 29.
Egypt at the head of his Tribe, composed of fifty three thousand and four hundred Men, all above twenty years of age, and capable of bearing arms, without reckoning old Men, Women, and Children. He was

was the twelfth Perſon that made his offering when the Tabernacle was erected in the Deſart; and he offer'd a ſilver baſon, [Num. vii. 78.] weighing an hundred and thirty ſhekels, and a ſilver bowl of ſeventy ſhekels, both of them full of fine flower, mingled with oil, for a Meat-offering; a golden Spoon of ten ſhekels, full of Incenſe; a young bullock, a ram, and a lamb of the firſt year, for a Burnt-offering; a kid for a Sin-offering; two oxen, five rams, five he goats, and five lambs of the firſt year, for a Peace-offering. [In the Year of the World 2514, before J.C. 1486, before the vulgar Æra 1490.]

AHISAMACH, the Father of Aboliab, the famous artificer imployed by Moſes in building the Tabernacle in the Wilderneſs, in the year of the World 2514, before J. C. 1486, before the vulgar Æra 1490. [Ex. xxxi. 6.]

AHISHAHAR, the Son of Bilham, of the Tribe of Benjamin, 1 Chr. vii. 10.

AHISHAR, High-ſteward of Solomon's Houſhold, 1 Kings iv. 6.

AHITOPHEL, was a native of Gillo. The Jews [m] make him to be Grandfather to Bathſheba, the Wife of Uriah, and afterwards of David, by his Son Ammiel, the Father of Bathſheba. [1 Chr. iii. 5 collatum cum 2 Sam. xi. 4.] If this be ſo, Ahitophel muſt have been very old at the time of Abſalom's Rebellion, ſince his Grand-daughter Bathſheba had already for ſome time been married to Uriah before ſhe became Wife to David. There are ſome [n] who conjecture that the reaſon of Ahitophel's embracing Abſalom's Intereſt with ſo much warmth, was a deſire of revenging the diſhonour which David had brought upon his Grand-daughter. However this may be, as ſoon as Abſalom was acknowledged to be King by the greateſt part of the Iſraelites, he ſent for Ahitophel from Gillo, to aſſiſt him with his advice in the preſent juncture of his affairs; for at that time Ahitophel's Councils were received as the Oracles of God himſelf. [2 Sam. xv. 12. Ch. xvi. 23.] Nothing gave David more uneaſineſs than the hearing that this great Stateſman was of Abſalom's party; and when Huſhai his friend came to wait on him, and attend him in his flight, he intreated him to return rather to Jeruſalem, make a ſhew of offering his ſervices to Abſalom, and endeavour to diſappoint the good advice which ſhould be given by Ahitophel.

When Abſalom was come to Jeruſalem, he deſired Ahitophel to deliberate with his other Counſellors upon the meaſures which [illegible] proper for him to take. Ahitophel [illegible]s'd him in the firſt place to abuſe his [illegible]ther's Concubines, that ſo when all Iſrael ſhould underſtand that he had diſhonour'd his Father in this manner, they might eſpouſe his Intereſts more reſolutely: A tent therefore was prepared for this purpoſe upon the terraſs of the King's Palace, and Abſalom, in the ſight of all Iſrael, enter'd the place where David's Concubines were. At another time Ahitophel ſaid to Abſalom, If you pleaſe I will take twelve thouſand choſen Men, and purſue David this very night, and ſo falling upon him while he is weary, and not upon his guard, I ſhall eaſily defeat him, diſperſe thoſe who are about him, and when he is thus abandoned by his People, kill him; after which I will bring the army back to you, and all things will be peaceably ſettled. [Ch. xvii. 1, 2.] This advice was very agreeable to Abſalom, and all the Elders of Iſrael. However, ſays Abſalom, call Huſhai, that we may know his opinion.

Huſhai being come, and hearing what advice Ahitophel had given, ſaid, The Counſel that Ahitophel hath given is not good at this time; what for the preſent, in my opinion, may do better, is this; Let all Iſrael be gather'd unto thee, from Dan even to Beerſheba, as the ſand is by the Sea for multitude, and put thyſelf in the midſt of them, and wherever David is we ſhall fall upon him, and overwhelm him with our numbers, as the dew falleth upon the ground. This advice was agreeable to Abſalom, and all the Elders of Iſrael, and the Lord permitted that of Ahitophel, which was the beſt, to be rejected, that ſo Abſalom's ruin might be haſten'd. Now Ahitophel ſeeing his counſel neglected, ſaddled his aſs, went to his houſe at Gillo, hanged himſelf, and was buried in the ſepulchre of his Fathers. He foreſaw without doubt all that would happen to Abſalom, and was determin'd to prevent the death which he had deſerved, and which David had not failed to have inflicted on him as ſoon as he had been reſettled on his Throne. All this fell out in the year of the World 2981, before J.C. 1019, before the vulgar Æra 1023.

1. AHITUB, the Son of Phinehas, and Grandſon to the High prieſt Eli. His Father Phinehas having been ſlain in that unhappy engagement wherein the Ark was taken by the Philiſtines, he ſucceeded his Grandfather Eli, in the year of the World 2888. [1 Sam. iv. 11.] His Succeſſor was his Son Ahiah, about the year of the World 2911, before J. C. 1089, before the vulgar Æra 1093.

2. Ahitub, the Son of Amariah, and Father of the High-prieſt Zadok. It is not very certain whether this Ahitub ever exerciſed the office of High-prieſt, but we know he was Father to the High-prieſt Zadok, who enjoyed this dignity under David and Solomon. [1 Chr. vi. 8.]

AHIUD, the Son of Shelomi, of the Tribe of Aſher. He was appointed by Moſes

[m] Author libri Tradit. Hebr. in libb. Reg. & Paralip. & ita Interpp. plerique. [n] Cornel. a Lapide Tirin. &c.

Moses to be one of the Commissioners for making a partition of the land of Canaan.

AHLAB, a City in the Tribe of Asher the situation whereof is not known, Judg. i. 31.

1. AHLAI, the Son of Shesban, 1 Chr. xi. 31.

2. AHLAI, one of those gallant Men who commanded in David's Army, 1 Chr. xi. 41.

AHOBAN, or Ahban, the Son of Abishur and Abihail, 1 Chr. xi. 29.

AHOHE, or Ahoah, the third Son of Bela, and Grandson of Benjamin, 1 Chr. viii. 4. His descendants are called Ahohites.

2 Sam. xxiii. 9. 18. 1 Chr. xi. 11, 29. xxvii. 4.

AHOLIAB, the Son of Ahisamach, of the Tribe of Dan, was appointed, together with Bezaleel, to undertake the building of the Tabernacle, Exod. xxxv. 34.

Ezek. xxiii. 4.

AHOLIBAH, and Aholah, are two feigned names made use of by Ezekiel in his Prophecy to denote the two Kingdoms of Judah and Samaria. Aholah and Aholibah are represented as two Sisters of Egyptian extraction. Aholah stands for Samaria, and Aholibah for Jerusalem. The first signifies a Tent, and the second my Tent is in her. They both prostituted themselves to the Egyptians and Assyrians, in imitating their Abominations and Idolatries; for which reason the Lord abandoned them to those very People, for whom they had shewn so passionate and so impure an affection. They were carried into Captivity, and reduced to the severest servitude.

AHUMAI, the Son of Jahath, of the Tribe of Judah, 1 Chr. iv. 2.

AHUZAM, the Son of Naarah, of the Tribe of Judah, 1 Chr. iv. 5.

Genes. xxiv. 26. In the Year of the World 2200. before J. C. 1800. before the vulg. Æra 1804.

AHUZZATH, the Friend of Abimelech, King of Gerar, who came with this Prince and Phichol the General of his Army, in order to make an alliance with Isaac. Several Interpreters, following the Chaldee and St. Jerom *, take Ahuzzath in an appellative sense, for a company of Friends which attended Abimelech. The Septuagint call him Ahuzzath the Brideman.

Josh. vii. 2. Gen. xii. 8. Josh. vii. 1, 4, &c. In the Year of the World 2553. before J. C. 1447. before the vulgar Æra 1451. Josh. viii. 1.

AI, a City situated near Bethel, to the westward of it. The Septuagint call it Agai, and Josephus Aina; others Aiath. Joshua having sent a detachment of three thousand Men against Ai, God permitted them to be repulsed, for the sake of Achan's sin, who had violated the Anathema pronounced against the City of Jericho, by taking to himself something of the spoil: But after the expiation of this offence, the Lord commanded Joshua to march with the whole Army of the Israelites against Ai, and treat this City and the King thereof as he had treated Jericho, with this difference, that he gave the plunder of the Town to the People.

According to God's order, Joshua sent by night thirty thousand Men to lie in ambush behind Ai, having first well instructed those who had the command of them in what they were to do, and the next day, early in the morning, he marched against the City with all the remainder of his army. The King of Ai perceiving them, sallied hastily out of the Town with all his troops and all his People, and fell upon the Forces of the Israelites, who, upon the first onset, fled as if they had been under some great terror; but this was only a feint to draw the Enemy into the open plain.

As soon as Joshua saw them all out of the gates, he rais'd his shield upon the top of a pike, which was the signal given to the Ambuscade; whereupon they immediately enter'd the place which they found without defence, and set fire to it. The People of Ai perceiving the smoke ascending, were willing to return, but discover'd those who had set fire to the City in their rear, while Joshua and they who were with him turning about, fell upon them, and cut them in pieces, without suffering so much as one single Person to escape him. The King was taken alive, and brought to Joshua. The Israelites enter'd the place, carried fire and sword every where with them, and killed in this day's action twelve thousand of their Enemies, Men, Women, and Children. The King of Ai was put to death, and hung upon a gibbet, where he continued till Sun-set; after which he was taken down, thrown in the entrance of the City, and a great heap of Stones raised over him. The Israelites divided afterwards among themselves the whole spoil of the place, as the Lord had permitted them.

Observations on Joshua's feigned retreat, and the surprizing Ai. Josh. viii.

☞ Joshua's enterprize on Ai, excepting in some particulars of military art, is very like that of Gibeah, which is scarce any thing more than the copy of it. We see many instances of this sort in ancient and modern History: Polybius † relates one much resembling it; but the original may be said to be in Joshua, for we cannot have recourse to any Historians of more antiquity, to see if no Stratagem like it is to be met with in them. The sacred Writers are not the most ancient; there were Historians without doubt before Moses, and perhaps all the arts of War had been exhausted before this Legislator of the Jewish People: I am persuaded they were, and I believe War to be almost as ancient as the World, that is to say, from the time of its beginning to be inhabited, and Ambition's engaging Men in disputes about Meum and Tuum. If any one asks when these passions had their first rise, I answer ever since Abel's being killed by his his elder Brother Cain, becauſe he was accepted by God; this is the firſt original and Epoch of them. But let us return to the ſuprize of Ai.

* Hieronym. qu. Hebr. in Gen.

† Polyb. Hist. l. 4.

It ſeems by the Scripture account as if Joſhua was not the author of the Stratagem made uſe of by him; but we very well know that the Lord is the God of Hoſts, and every thing ought to be referr'd to him. When he directs himſelf to Joſhua, and ſays, Go up againſt Ai, lay in ambuſcade behind the Town; I have deliver'd the King and People of it into thine hands. He might notwithſtanding this leave the whole glory of the Invention and Execution to him as to a great General; otherwiſe I don't know how we can reckon Joſhua in the number of extraordinary Men, if God had always wrought Miracles in favour of his People, and had left nothing for him to perform; but he is not obliged to be continually doing Prodigies, in order to puniſh the injuſtice and wickedneſs of Men; and it is certain that he frequently makes uſe of them in the execution of his Decrees.

I ſhall not ſtay to diſcourſe on theſe words, Lay thee an ambuſh for the City behind it; Dom Calmet has made ſo fine a remark on this place, that I ſhall content myſelf with laying it here before you, "Some think it ſtrange, ſays he, "that God, who could ſo eaſily oppreſs "Ai and its inhabitants, ſhould chuſe to "employ artifice and ſtratagem, in order "to give the victory to the Hebrews; "means which appear to be below the "greatneſs of the Almighty, and which "particular People, and ſome Generals "have rejected, as unworthy of brave "Men, and ſuch as might rather tarniſh "their glory than augment the luſtre of "it. It was an expreſſion of Alexander the Great, that he could not ſteal a victory[q]. The ancient Greeks and Tibarenians gave notice to their Enemies when "and where they would engage them: "The old Romans knew not what cunning meant and ſubtle wiles in carrying "on their Wars: Non fraude neque occulte, ſed palam & armatum Populum Romanum, hoſtes ſuos ulciſci. They "fought victory with only open force and "honeſt fighting; they deſir'd their Enemies might be convinced of their valour, "and ſubmit to them without regret, as "to the ſtrongeſt of the two.

Here is a great deal of learning; and Commentator might have farther add- the old Gauls, the Switzers, and other ople, who are frank and open in this point. It would notwithſtanding very much perplex any one to prove that the old Romans made no uſe of artifice and cunning, ſince War is nothing elſe but the art of doubling with very great and well concerted method. If the Romans fell often into the ſnares which were laid for them, it was becauſe they had unskilful Generals, who made war without Genius and Art, and to excuſe their ignorance alledged, that they made war like honeſt Men, without deceit or artifice; we ſee however in Hiſtory that the Romans did generally practiſe them. If Alexander and ſo many other great Captains would not uſe all their malice[r], it was becauſe they knew that they ſhould eaſily get the better of their Enemies without it. Alexander underſtood perfectly well whom he had to do with. If he had been to attack any other People beſides the effeminate Perſians, he would have taken Parmenio's advice, to fall on the Enemy under cover of the night: For this reaſon he replied, [s]that he would begin the battle in broad day-light, and that he had rather complain of Fortune than bluſh at a victory.

They who are ſurprized that God, who could ſo eaſily oppreſs Ai and its inhabitants, by one ſingle act of his Will, did not chuſe to do ſo, rather than make uſe of artifice and cunning, may conſider whether he could not as well have overthrown the walls of Jericho in an inſtant, in the twinkling of an eye, and ſo have excuſed his People from marching round the Town ſeven times, in order to ſee the fall of it on the ſeventh day. Could he not likewiſe heve extirpated ſo many Enemies as his People had to fight with, and put them at once, without ſtriking one blow, in poſſeſſion of the promiſed Land! But why ſhould we deſire to ſearch into the ſecrets of God! If he had perform'd all this, he had not diſplayed his power ſo eminently by that great number of Miracles which he wrought in the ſight of the whole Univerſe, nor would there have been any merit on his People's ſide.

Joſhua aroſe, ſays the ſacred Author, and all the People of War, to go up againſt Ai; and Joſhua choſe out thirty thouſand mighty Men of valour, and ſent them away by night. There is a manifeſt contradiction between this verſe and the twelfth, wherein it is ſaid that Joſhua choſe five thouſand Men out, whom he ſent to lie in ambuſh between Bethel and Ai. How is this to be reconciled? Dom Calmet ſays, "That Maſius[t] allows but five "thouſand Men for the Ambuſcade, and "five and twenty for the attack of the "City, being perſuaded that an army of "ſix hundred thouſand Men could only "create confuſion upon this occaſion, with- "out any neceſſity for, or advantage in "ſuch [q] Vide Grot. l. 3. de jure belli & pacis, c. 1. art 20. & Serar in Joſhue, c 8. qu. 2. [r] Obſerve by the way that this word Malice differs but in one letter from Milice, and that the latter ſcarce ever goes without the former. [s] Quint. Curt. .4. [t] Maſius in Joſhue viii.

"such numbers." Masius seems to argue right, and to think like a Soldier. "But "the generality of Interpreters, continues "Dom Calmet, acknowledge two bodies "to be placed in ambuscade, both between "Bethel and Ai, one of five and twenty, "the other of five thousand Men.

Joshua therefore sent at first thirty thousand Men, who marched in the night-time, and to prevent discovery, passed without doubt behind the eminences of Bethel, and posted themselves towards the West between those two Cities, at the place appointed for the ambuscade. He who was at the head of them then detach'd five thousand Men, who lay close in cover'd places directly opposite, and as near as possible to the Town, in order to throw themselves into it immediately upon the first opportunity.

Dom Calmet says* that there are Interpreters who will not allow the Hebrew word Akeb to signify an Ambuscade, and that literally it denotes the Heel; if so, then by a metaphor, I say, it must signify Ambuscade, since the property of an Ambuscade is to fall upon the Enemy behind. It is an expression in daily use with us, that the Enemy is at our heels, that he is continually close up with us, at our backs, and it is generally behind that an ambuscade discovers itself.

Joshua spent the night in his camp at Gilgal, and the next day rising before it was light, he reviewed his troops, put himself at the head of them, with the Elders, and order'd the main body of the Army to march towards Ai. When they were come in fight of the Town, Joshua put his Army in order of battle upon the hill, and afterwards descended into the valley; which the King of Ai observing, he marched his whole Army with the utmost expedition out of the Town, by break of day, and led his troops in order of battle on the side of the Wilderness ᵃ, where Joshua, as if he had been under some great terror, made a shew of flying, in order to decoy his Enemy, and draw him to a greater distance from the Town.

The Men of Ai thought they were to improve such an happy opportunity, and had hopes of turning it so much the more to their advantage, in that the Hebrews were engaged in a narrow pass, where there being no possibility of drawing up in a large front, great numbers are of no consideration, and the lesser cannot be flank'd, nor consequently hemm'd in: But they had no distrust of People's lying in ambuscade behind them, or that the others would turn about and face them; while these, at the first signal, should rise, and make themselves masters of the City, which was forsaken and left destitute of Soldiers for its defence.

The Hebrew General seeing his design succeeded, and that the Men of Ai were at a sufficient distance from their City, commanded his Army to face about, and gave the signal agreed upon to inform those who lay in the Ambuscade that it was time to suprize the Town. The learned Commentator makes a remark on this place which shews his great Reading; herein he reports the different opinions of the Interpreters concerning the nature of this signal; but he does not make the matter absolutely clear to us. Some pretend, he says, that the Hebrew word Cidon signifies a Shield; the Septuagint and Aquila suppose it to mean a Javelin all of iron, which is called Gæsos; but a Javelin is too small to serve for a signal, and be seen at such a distance, nor is a Shield more easily to be distinguish'd.

For my part, I embrace very readily the opinion of the Rabbins, who, tho' they are a parcel of old Dreamers, have yet sometimes good intervals; they believe it was the staff belonging to some of their Colours, which Joshua set up to give his People the signal: From hence I conclude the whole colours were used on this occasion, and that in the Asiatick style, which is very near the Poetical, the part is to be here taken for the whole. It was therefore one of the Colours that Joshua lifted up, and was perceiv'd by those in ambuscade, who thereupon immediately rose, marched towards the City, and took and burnt it; not all at once, but in some places only, to answer the signal, and give notice to Joshua that they were masters of the Town; for it was not destroyed and reduced to ashes till after it was pillaged. The Men of Ai who pursued Joshua, looking behind them, and seeing the smoke of the City ascending up to Heaven, had not power to fly one way or other, particularly after that the Israelites, who had made a shew of flying, and marched on the side of the Wilderness, turned back upon them, and briskly attacked those who had before pursued them: For they in the Ambuscade, who composed a small army, did not remain in the Town, but sallied out of it, and fell upon the Men of Ai in their rear, while the Hebrews were beginning to do execution upon them; so that they found themselves between two Armies attacked on every side, and pressed before and behind, that not one [of] all this great number were saved; that is to say, that none of them could fly, and that they who were not killed in the battle were taken alive, together with their King, and put to death after the action.

I. AHIAH

* Comment upon Joshua viii. 13. ᵃ Ibid. ver. 14.

1. AIAH, the Mother of Rizpah. This Rizpah was Saul's Concubine. David deliver'd her Children to the Gibeonites, to be hanged before the Lord. 2 Sam. xxi. 8.

2. AIAH, is a Hebrew term, which St. Jerom translates Vulture, Bochart believes it to signify the Merlin; the Syriac renders it Raven, and the Arabic Owl. Levit. xi. 14. איה Aiah.

AJAH, the Daughter † of Zibeon, of the race of Esau, Genes. xxxvi. 24.

AJALON, a City of the Tribe of Dan. Josh. xix. 24. It was assigned over to the Levites of Kohath's Family. Ch. xxi. 24. We find it sometimes under the name of Elom or Ailom. Eusebius says, that in his time there was shewn a place called Ajalon, three miles Eastward from Bethel: but this cannot be the famous Ajalon mentioned in Joshua, where he speaks to the moon to stand still in the Valley of Ajalon; Ch. x. 12. for this did not belong to the Tribe of Dan; and Bethel was too remote from this Tribe. There must be still another Ajalon, which St. Jerom takes notice of[a]; this was two miles from Shechem, in the way to Jerusalem. He says elsewhere[b], that S. Paula going from Shechem to Bethoron, saw on her left hand Ajalon and Gibeon. In the Chronicles Ajalon is placed between Bethshemesh and Timnah. 2 Chr. xxviii. 18. Lastly, there was a City called Ajalon in the Tribe of Zebulun, Judges xii. 12.

Thus there were four Cities of this name. The first in the Tribe of Dan, between Timnah and Bethshemesh, which is that probably spoken of by Joshua, when he said to the Moon, Thou Moon stand still in the valley of Ajalon. See 2 Chr. xxviii. 18. &c.

The second Ajalon, was in the Tribe of Benjamin, three miles Eastward from Bethel. See 2 Chron. xi. 10.

The third Ajalon, was in the Tribe of Ephraim, two miles from Shechem, as you go to Jerusalem, and to the East of Bethoron.

The fourth was in the Tribe of Zebulun, the situation whereof is not exactly known.

AICHMALOTARCHA, a Greek term signifying the Prince of the Captivity , or Chief of the Captives. ( αἰχμαλωτάρχης [illegible]) Thus they are called who, as the Jews pretend, had the command or government of the people, during the captivity of Babylon †. They believe these Princes or Governours to have been taken constantly out of the Tribe of Judah, and family of David. But they would be very much puzzled to prove the real existence of their supposed Aichmalotarchs.

AIR. The Air is often meant by the word Heaven; the birds of the Heaven, for the birds of the Air. God rained fire and brimstone upon Sodom from Heaven; Gen. xix. 24. that is to say, from the Air. Let fire come down from Heaven; 1 Kings i. 10. that is, from the Air. Moses menaces the Israelites with the effects of God's wrath to destroy them with a pestilential Air. Percutiat te Dominus aere corrupto; Deut. xxviii. 22. the Hebrew שדפון LXX ἀνεμοφθορία. or perhaps with a scorching wind, which produces mortal diseases, or with a drought which blasts the crops of corn.

To beat the Air, to speak in the Air, Vide 1 Kings viii. 37. are ways of expressing things which are in use even in our own tongue, and signify to speak without judgment or understanding, 1 Cor. ix. 26. Ch. xiv. 9. to fatigue ourselves in vain. The Powers of the Air, Eph. ii. 2. are the Devils, who exercise their power principally in the Air, by exciting winds, storms and tempests.

AKIBA, a famous Rabbin, who lived about the year of J. C. 150. and was as it were the Prophet and Fore-runner of the celebrated Impostor Barchochebas. The Jews, who very much extol his merit, [c]inform us, that Akiba was descended from Sisera the General of Jabin the King of Canaan's army. Judg. iv. 7. He spent forty years in the country, employed in keeping the flocks belonging to one Calba Cuva, a rich citizen of Jerusalem. His Master's Daughter made an offer of marrying him, if he would quit the business of a Shepherd, and apply himself to study. Akiba promised he would, whereupon they were clandestinely married, and he went to the University, where he spent twelve years with so much reputation that he came from thence with twelve thousand Scholars. His Wife advised him to return thither; he continued therefore twelve years longer there; and his reputation still perpetually increasing, he brought from thence four and twenty thousand Disciples. It may be easily perceived that this prodigious number of Scholars is a Rabbinical Hyperbole.

[a] Hieronym. in locis. [b] In Epitaphiæ Paulo. [c] Basnage Hist. des Juifs, t. 2. l. 4. c. 8. p. 126, 127.

† The Author is here mistaken, or his Printer; for Ajah and Anah were both the Sons of Zibeon. The [illegible]l Hebrew says בני צבעון, and the Septuagint [illegible] 'Αιὰ καὶ 'Ανά.

* This Magistrate in Babylonia was called in the Jewish Language Rosh-Golah, i. e. the head of the Capti[illegible] The Jews of Alexandria had their Alabarchs, and the Jews of Antioch their Ethnarchs; and after this [illegible] had in most places of their dispersions their Patriarchs for the same purpose; and there are in the Imperial [illegible] Edicts concerning them, Prid. Connect. &c. Part. 2. B. 4.

† The Eastern Jews had their Princes of the Captivity as the Western Jews their Patriarchs. By the Eastern Jews are meant those who are settled at Babylon, in Chaldæa, Assyria, and Persia; and they who dwell in Judæa, Italy, Egypt, and other parts of the Roman Empire, were called Western Jews. There was no Prince of the Captivity before the end of the second Century. Huna was the first invested with this Character about the time above mentioned. The Office continued till the eleventh Century. The Princes of the Captivity had their residence at Babylon; there they were installed with Ceremony, held Courts of Justice, &c. See more of them in Basnage Histoire des Juifs, l. 3. c. 4.

Hyperbole. They go farther, and tell us that all these Scholars died between Easter and Whitsuntide, for not behaving themselves with a suitable respect to one another. They were all buried at the foot of a hill near Tiberias.

מכילתה Mechilta. ספר יצירה. Sepher Jezira.

Akiba continued teaching, and composed two works, one called Mechilta, or Mechiltin, the other Jetzira, very different from another work with the same title attributed to the Patriarch Abraham, and printed by Rittangelius. The Jews say Akiba was a Man of so much learning that he could give a reason for the minutest letter of the law; and that what God had concealed from Moses, he revealed to him. There are a thousand opinions in the Mishna whereof he is thought to be the Author, and which are esteemed as so many maxims and decisions.

He was in the height of his reputation, and Prince of the Sanhedrin, when Barcochebas, or the Son of Cochebas, appeared. They say [a] the name of this Impostor was Cozeb, or Bar-Cozebas, the Lyar, or the Son of a Lyar; and that Akiba having observed it, said with a sort of exclamation, Behold the Star which is to come out of Jacob! alluding to these words in the book of Numbers, A Star shall come out of Jacob, and a Scepter shall rise out of Israel, and shall smite the corners of Moab, &c. (Numb. xxiv. 17.) It is certain Akiba was attached to Barcochebas, and served him as an Usher or Fore-runner, in the same quality almost as S. John Baptist served our Saviour. But these two Men were governed by quite a different Spirit from that which animated our Saviour and S. John. They kindled a war in Judea, inspired the Jews with the spirit of rebellion, committed infinite disorders in Judea and Syria, killed thousands of Christians and Romans, and caused the entire destruction of their Country. See the articles ADRIAN and BARCOCHEBAS.

After the taking of Bether, a fortress wherein Barcochebas shut himself up, together with his best troops, Akiba was made a prisoner, and continued some time in fetters, expressing so great a fondness for the ceremonies of his forefathers, that he chose rather to go without drinking, and make use of the water which was given him, in washing himself, than omit this practice. The Emperor Adrian severely punished his imposture, and ordered his skin to be tore off with an iron comb. And with him, say the Rabbins [b], vanished the honour of the Law. They add that Judas the Holy, another celebrated Doctor, was born the day that Akiba died, that is to say, in the year 135. for Bether was taken on the 10th of August this year.

ALABARCHA. This term is not to be met with in the Text of Scripture; but Josephus makes use of it in several places [c] to signify the Chief of the Jews in Alexandria. Philo [d] calls this Magistrate Genarkes; and Josephus [e] in some places Ethnarches. These two last terms signify the Prince or Chief of a Nation. But concerning the signification of Alabarcha, there are some disputes. There are some [f] who believe, that this name was given in raillery to the principal Magistrate, or Head of the Jews at Alexandria, by the Gentiles of the same City, who hated and despised the Jews. Others [g] derive Alabarcha from Alaba, which signifies ink to write with; accordingly, Alabarcha would signify properly the Chief Secretary, or Collector of the customs and duties upon Cattle carried out of the Country.

Fuller [h] derives it from the Hebrew or Syriac Halaph and Arcin [i], as if we should say, the Intendant, or the Sovereign's Delegate: for in places where the Jews were numerous, they had one of the principal of their own Nation over them, or some other to whom they addressed themselves, particularly in all affairs relating to themselves, without any dependence on the President or Governour sent by the Sovereign to rule his other subjects. But this last etymology pleases me no better than the others which I have mentioned. It is certain that the dignity of Alabarch was common in Egypt, as we see in Juvenal [k]; and that the Emperors Valens, Gratian and Theodosius, speak of the Customs or Imposts called Alabarchia [l] in Egypt. It is probable, that originally the word Alabarcha signified the person who had the custom of Salt, and that afterwards it was given in the way of contempt to the Head or Governour of the Jews at Alexandria. In this sense the etymology of the word Alabarcha will come from the Greek Hals, Halos, Salt, and Archon the Chief.

ALABASTER. It is said in the Gospel, that Jesus Christ being at table in Bethany, in the House of Simon the Leper, Mary the Sister of Lazarus, and Martha, came thither, and poured an alabaster box full of precious ointment on his head. (Matt. xxvi. 6, 7.) This alabaster box was made of a sort of white marble, wherein precious liquors were generally preserved. Pliny says [m], that this kind of stone or marble was found in the neighbourhood of of Thebes in Egypt, and about Damascus in Syria. It was brought into any form or figure with great ease, this stone being neither hard nor brittle. All vessels to put liquors in had likewise in general the name of alabaster, of whatever matter they were composed. There are some Authors [a] who are of opinion that the box here mentioned was of glass; and this opinion they confirm by what S. Mark says, that the Women who poured out the perfume upon our Saviour, broke the box of Alabaster. A vessel of glass was given to Constantine the Great [o], said to be that wherein the liquor was contained which was poured upon the head of Jesus Christ. But Theodosius ordered it to be removed from the Forum of Constantinople, and put into a safer and more proper place. Some will have it that the name of Alabaster denotes the form rather than the matter of this box. Alabastrum may signify a vessel without an handle. It is certain that this term stands in general for a box to put perfumes in.

[a] Rabb. apud Scalig. [b] Misna in Sota 515. [c] Joseph. Antiq. l. 8. c. 8. & 10. & l. 20. c. 3. Ἀλαβάρχης. [d] Philo in Flacc. p. 975. d. Γενάρχης. [e] Joseph. Antiq. l. 19. c. 4. p. 674. A. B. [f] Valef. not. in Euseb. l. 2. c. 5. Ita & Turneb. l. 27. c. 25. [g] Cujac. l. 8. Obser. c. 37. [h] Fuller, l. 4. Miscell. Theologic. c. 16. Vide Martinii Lexicon. [i] חלק loco, via. ארכין or ארכא. Archon. [k] Juvenal Sat. 1. v. 129. Inter quos ausus habere Nescio quos titulos Ægyptius aut alabarches. [l] L. 9. c. de Vectig. & Commiss. Usurpationem totius licentiæ summovemus circa vectigal Alabarchiæ per Ægyptum. [m] Plin. l. 28. c. 8.

Mark xiv. 3.

ALAMETH, the ninth Son of Becher, the Son of Benjamin, 1 Chron. vii. 8.

ALCIMUS, or Jacimus, or Joachim, High Priest of the Jews, was established in this office in 3842. and died in 3844. before J. C. 156. before the vulgar Æra 160. He was of the race of the Priests, but not of a family of the first rank, nor of any, the ancestors whereof had enjoyed the High-Priesthood [p]. Besides, he had been polluted with acts of Idolatry, during the persecution of Antiochus Epiphanes, 2 Macc. xiv. 3. and obtained this supreme dignity by very irregular methods. He was confirmed in this office by King Antiochus Eupator, after the death of Menelaus. Alcimus did not perform the functions of it till after the death of Judas Maccabæus. He therefore seeing that it was not in his power to enter upon the exercise of his dignity as High-Priest, no sooner had intelligence that Demetrius the Son of Antiochus Epiphanes, had stolen privately from Rome, and was arrived in Syria, but he went to wait on him, and putting himself at the head of the apostate Jews, who were at Antioch, he threw himself at the feet of this new King, and besought him to defend them from the violences of Judas Maccabæus, whom he accused as one that oppressed those who adhered to the King's Party, and had dispersed and driven them out of their country. At the same time he intreated him to send somebody into Judæa to examine into the mischiefs and disorders committed by Judas Maccabæus, and to chastize his insolence.

1 Macc. vii. 1—20. In the Year 3842.

Demetrius immediately sent Bacchides thither at the head of an army, and confirming Alcimus in his office of High-Priest, he commanded him, to accompany Bacchides, and charged them both jointly with the care of carrying on this war. As soon therefore as they came into Judæa, they endeavoured in the first place to surprize Judas and his brethren; and believed that under the pretence of treating with them, they might be able with fair words to persuade them to an interview; and this opportunity they proposed to take of seizing on their persons. But Judas and his brethren discovered or suspected that a snare was laid for them, and so happily avoided it. Others who were not so prudent fell into it, and perished; among the rest, sixty Assideans, and many Scribes and Doctors of the Law, who not imagining that a Priest of Aaron's race was capable of so deceiving them, were satisfied with his swearing to them that no injury should be offer'd, and went to him; but as soon as he had them in his power, he gave directions that they should be all murdered. After which instance of his perfidiousness no one would ever trust him.

In the Year of the World 3843.

Bacchides having thus established Alcimus by force in Judæa, marched out of Jerusalem with his army, and incamped at Bezeth, with a design of returning into Syria. From thence he sent and apprehended several of those who had deserted his party, and certain of the people likewise whom he commanded to be killed, and thrown into a great pit. After which having once more committed the whole province to the care of Alcimus, and left troops sufficient to support him, he returned to King Demetrius. Alcimus for some time kept his ground with good success; deserters came over to him in great numbers, with whom he made terrible havock throughout the country. But Judas soon recovered a superiority over him, and restrained Alcimus and his people from continuing their incursions; who thereupon finding himself to be in no condition to resist Judas, returned to Court, with a present to the King of a gold Crown, a palm-tree and golden branches; which in all probability he had taken out of the Temple; and watching his opportunity renewed his complaints against Judas, and represented to the King, that as long as this Man lived his authority would never be well settled in Judæa. All who had the King's ear were continually insinuating the same thing; and at last so wrought upon him, that he sent a new army against Judas, under the command of Nicanor his old enemy, with particular orders to kill him, disperse his party, and establish Alcimus in the full possession of his dignity.

1 Macc. vii. 19, 20.

2 Macc. xiv. 3, 4.

1 Macc. xxv. 26, &c.

Nicanor, who was very well acquainted with

In the Year of the World 3843.

[a] Epiphan. l. de Mensur. [o] Suidas in ... [p] Joseph. Antiq. l. xx. c. 8.

with the bravery of his adverſary, did not think it convenient to attack him by the way of arms, but propoſed a treaty to him; whereupon articles were agreed on. (1 Macc. vii. 26, &c. 2 Macc. xiv. 26—29.) But Alcimus, who thought ſufficient care was not taken of his intereſts in theſe conferences, went to the King, and prejudiced him ſo ſtrongly againſt the treaty, that he refuſed to ratify it, and ſent Nicanor poſitive orders to continue the war till he had killed Judas, or taken him, and ſent him priſoner to Antioch. Nicanor therefore was obliged, againſt his inclination, to begin hoſtilities again againſt Judas and his brethren.

Nicanor attempted to ſecure the perſon of his enemy at an interview which paſſed between them at Jeruſalem; (2 Macc. vii. 27—32.) but Judas perceiving there was treachery intended, withdrew, and re-commenced the war. Nicanor was beaten at Capharſalama; and in a ſecond battle which he fought with Judas he was killed, and his army routed. (1 Macc. ix. 1—22.) Demetrius being informed of this, ſent Bacchides again, and Alcimus, into Judæa, with a powerful army, compoſed of the choice of all his troops. Judas had no more than three thouſand men; and this little body was much leſſened by the terror which had ſeized them, and the effect of it, deſertion, ſo that he had not above eight hundred remaining with him. With this ſmall force he ventured to attack the enemy, killed abundance of them, and after having performed prodigies of valour, died overwhelmed with numbers. (In the Year of the World 3843.)

By his death Alcimus and his party were delivered from a formidable enemy. The apoſtates and male-contents began to raiſe their heads, and became the ſtrongeſt. They had the advantage every where throughout the country; Alcimus began to exerciſe the ſacrilegious offices of the High-Prieſthood, which he had purchaſed with a ſum of money. But having undertaken to pull down the wall of the inner court, which had been built formerly by the Prophets[a], (1 Macc. vii. 9. ix. 54.) that probably which ſeparated the altar of burnt-offerings from the Prieſt's court, God puniſhed him for it, by ſtriking him with a palſy, whereof he died, after having enjoyed the Pontificate three or four years; in the year of the World 3844. See our Diſſertation on the High-Prieſts of the Hebrews, prefixed to our Comment on the book of Judith.

ALEMA, a City in the Country of Gilead, beyond Jordan. (1 Macc. v. 26. II. xv. 8.) Iſaiah ſpeaks of Elim, in the Country of Moab. Helmon-Deblataim, or Almon-Deblataim, is known to be in the ſame Country: and this may perhaps be the ſame with Alema, mentioned in the Maccabees.

I. ALEMETH, the Son of Jehoadah, of the Tribe of Benjamin, 1 Chr. viii. 36.

II. ALEMETH, a City in the Tribe of Benjamin. It joins to Anathoth. Both were Cities of refuge in the Tribe abovementioned. (1 Chron. vi. 60. vii. 8.)

ALEPH, is the name of the firſt letter in the Hebrew Alphabet, from which the Alpha of the Syrians and Greeks was formed. This word ſignifies Chief, Prince, or Thouſand. There are ſome Pſalms, and ſome other parts of Scripture, which begin with Aleph, and the other verſes of them are continued with the following letters of the Alphabet. There is no myſtery at all in this; but theſe pieces are called Acroſticks, becauſe all the verſes which compoſe them begin with a letter of the Alphabet in a grammatical order. Thus in the Pſalm Beati immaculati in via, the eight firſt verſes begin with Aleph, the eight following with Beth; and in like manner of others. In the CXth Pſalm *, Confitebor tibi Domine, in toto corde meo, this verſe begins with Aleph; what follows, in concilio juſtorum & congregatione, begins with Beth; and ſo on. In the Lamentations of Jeremiah, there are two Chapters, the firſt Strophe whereof only begins with Aleph, the ſecond with Beth; and ſo of others. In the third chapter there are three verſes ſucceſſively which begin with Aleph; then three others which begin with Beth; and the Hebrews are acquainted with no other ſort of acroſtick verſes beſides theſe.

The Jews at this day make uſe of their Letters as Cyphers. Aleph ſtands for one; Beth for two; Gimel for three; and ſo on. But I do not find that they had of old the ſame cuſtom. They who would know any thing more of this matter, may conſult the Hebrew Grammars. There was one printed in French not long ſince at Paris, by Colombat, for the uſe of thoſe who do not underſtand Latin. Latin Grammars for the Hebrew tongue are very common. The Reader may ſee farther what we have to ſay under the Articles, HEBREW TONGUE, GRAMMAR, VOWEL-POINTS, LETTERS, &c.

ALEXANDER THE GREAT, the Son and Succeſſor of Philip, King of Macedon, is deſcribed in the Prophecies of Daniel, under the image of a Leopard (Dan. vii. 6.) with

[a] Joſeph. Antiq. l. 12. c. 17.

* In the Latin Vulgate the CXth Pſalm begins as is here mentioned; but this in our Engliſh Tranſlation is the beginning of the CXIth Pſalm. And the ſame difference in the diviſion of the Pſalms is obſervable throughout both theſe verſions, from the IXth to the CXLVIIth Pſalm, the Engliſh being tranſlated from the Hebrew Text, wherein the IXth Pſalm is divided into two, and ſo a difference created in the number of the Pſalms, from the IXth to the CXLVIth, which in the Hebrew is united with the CXLVIIth of the Vulgate; and by this union the number of Pſalms in the Hebrew, Greek and Vulgate are made equally CL. By this remark ſome little perplexities may be avoided, which might otherwiſe ariſe from this different enumeration of the Pſalms, as often as the citations from them are examined and compared.

with four wings, to signify his great strength, and the rapidity of his conquests, and under the figure of a He-goat, running through all the World with so much swiftness as not to touch the Earth, and attacking a ram with horns, overthrowing and trampling him under foot, without any one's being able to rescue him out of his power. The He-goat is Alexander, the ram is Darius Codomannus, the last of the Persian Emperors and Successors of Cyrus. In the statue represented in a dream to Nebuchadnezzar, the belly of brass was an emblem of Alexander, the legs of iron of his Successors. He was appointed by God to destroy the Persian Empire in the East, and establish the Grecian Monarchy in its room.

[Dan. viii. 4, 5, 6, 7.] [Dan. ii. 39.]

After he had performed the last duties to his Father Philip, he was chosen by the Greeks to be General of the Troops which they were to send against the Persians. He marched into Asia at the head of four and thirty thousand Men, in the year of the World 2670, before J. C. 330, before the vulgar Æra 334. He fought with Darius's Generals, and overcame them in the fields of Adraste. He subdued almost all Asia Minor in one campaign only: He afterwards defeated Orobates, one of Darius's Generals, and last of all Darius himself and his Army, consisting of four hundred thousand foot, and an hundred thousand horse, in the narrow passes which lead from Syria to Cilicia. Darius preserved himself by flight, but abandoned his Camp, Baggage, Children, Wife, and Mother.

[In the Year of the World 3668, before J. C. 332, before the vulgar Æra 336.] [In the Year of the World 3672, before J. C. 328, before the vulgar Æra 33[illegible].]

After he had subdued all Syria, Alexander came to Tyre; and the Tyrians having denied him entrance into their City, he laid siege to it. He wrote at the same time to Jaddus, the High-priest of the Jews, that he expected to be acknowledged by him, and to receive the same submissions from him which he had hitherto paid the King of Persia[a]. But Jaddus refusing to comply, upon pretence of having sworn fidelity to Darius, Alexander resolved to march against Jerusalem as soon as he had reduced the City of Tyre. This siege lasted a long time, and cost Alexander a great deal of trouble; but at last the City was taken and sacked, and as soon as this was done he enter'd Palestine, and subjected it to his obedience. As he was marching against Jerusalem, with an intention to punish the High-priest for refusing to submit to him, Jaddus fearing his resentment, had recourse to God by Prayers and Sacrifices, and the Lord in a dream commanded him to open the gates to the Conqueror, to meet him at the head of all his People dressed in white, with crowns upon their heads, and attended by the Priests in their formalities, to put on his pontifical ornaments, and so march in order to receive Alexander, as it were in a triumphant manner.

[In the Year of the World 3672.]

Jaddus obeyed, and Alexander seeing all this company at a distance advancing towards him, was struck with awe, and coming near to the High-priest, he saluted him first, then adored God, whose name was engraved on a thin plate of Gold worn by the High-priest upon his forehead. At the same time all the People surrounded Alexander, and saluted him with great acclamations. The Kings of Syria and all the great Officers about him could not enough admire the conduct of Alexander, and could scarce comprehend that he was in his right senses. Parmenio alone ventur'd to take the liberty of asking him familiarly, why he, to whom all People did homage, and prostrated themselves before him, had thus prostrated himself before the High-priest of the Jews. To this Alexander replied, that he paid this respect to God, not to the High-priest: For, added he, [illegible] I was yet in Macedonia, I saw the God of the Jews, who appear'd to me in the same form and dress as the High-priest at present, encouraged me, and commanded me to fear nothing, but march my Army with expedition into Asia, promising me all manner of success, and under his conduct to make me Master of the Persian Empire. For this reason, as soon as I perceiv'd this habit, I remember'd the vision that I had seen, and understood that my Undertaking was favour'd by God, and that under his Protection I might expect all kind of Prosperity; so that I hope very soon to get possession of the Persian Empire, and to accomplish happily all my designs.

Having said this, he embraced Jaddus, and was conducted by the Priests into the City, which he had no sooner enter'd, but he went up to the Temple, where he offered Sacrifices to the Lord, in all things conforming himself to the directions of the Priests, and leaving to the High-priest the honours and particular functions which were annexed peculiarly to his dignity. They shewed him the Prophecies of Daniel, wherein it is said that a Grecian Prince should destroy the Persian Empire. He applied to himself what was pointed out by the Prophet, and was more and more confirmed in his opinion that God had chosen him to execute this great work.

After this he dismiss'd the Multitude, and having convened them the next day, he bad them ask what they would of him. The High-priest desired only the liberty of living under his Government according to to their own laws, and an exemption from the payment of any tribute every seventh year, becauſe in this year the Jews neither tilled their grounds nor reaped. Alexander very readily granted their requeſt; and as they beſought him to grant the ſame favour to the Jews who dwelt beyond the Euphrates in Babylonia and Media, he promiſed that they ſhould enjoy the ſame privileges as ſoon as he made a conqueſt of thoſe Provinces. After this, having ſignified to them that if any of them would liſt in his Troops he would receive them, many offered their ſervices and followed him.

[a] Joseph. Antiq. l. 11. c. ult.

This done, he left Jeruſalem, and viſited the other Cities of that Province; and as he was every where received with great teſtimonies of Friendſhip and Submiſſion, the Samaritans who dwelt at Sichem, at the foot of Mount Gerizim, and were Apoſtates from the Jewiſh Religion, obſerving with how much goodneſs Alexander treated the Jews, reſolved to ſay that they too were by Religion Jews; for this was commonly their practice: When at any time they ſaw the affairs of the Jews to be in a proſperous condition, they boaſted that they were of their nation, and deſcended from Manaſſeh and Ephraim; but when they thought it was their intereſt to ſay the contrary, they would not fail to affirm, and even ſwear that they had no relation to the Jews.

They came therefore with great eagerneſs, and many demonſtrations of joy, to meet Alexander, as far almoſt as the territories of Jeruſalem. Alexander commended their zeal, and the Sichemites humbly intreated him to viſit their Temple, and honour their City with his preſence. He promiſed that he would at his return; and as they petitioned him to grant them an exemption from all taxes upon every ſeventh year, becauſe they, as well as the Jews, neither tilled nor reaped that year, Alexander asked them if they were Jews. They ſaid that they were Hebrews, and that the Phœnicians called them Sichemites. Alexander anſwer'd that he had granted this favour only to the Jews, but that at his return he would enquire more exactly into this affair, and would do them juſtice.

This Prince having conquered Egypt, and regulated all things there, and given his orders for the continuation of his new City of Alexandria[t], departed thence about ſpring, to go with the utmoſt expedition into the Eaſt, in purſuit of Darius. In the Year of the World 3673.

In his way through Paleſtine, he was informed that the Samaritans, in a general inſurrection, had killed Andromachus, Governor of Syria and Paleſtine, who coming to Samaria to regulate ſome affairs, the inhabitants ſet fire to his houſe and burnt him. This action was infinitely diſpleaſing to Alexander, who loved Andromachus, and commanded all thoſe to be executed who were concerned in his murder; the reſt he baniſhed from Samaria, and ſettled a colony of Macedonians in their room. What remained of the lands he gave to the Jews, and exempted them from the payment of tribute[u]. They who eſcaped this calamity, retired to Sichem at the foot of Mount Gerizim[w], which thereby became the Capital of the Samaritans, as it ſtill continues to be at this day; and left the eight thouſand Men of this nation who were in his ſervice, and had accompanied him ever ſince the ſiege of Tyre, if he ſhould ſend them back into their country, might renew the ſpirit of rebellion in their Countrymen, he ſent them into Thebais, the moſt remote Province of Egypt, and there aſſigned them lands.

We ſhall not enlarge here in making a recital of Alexander's conqueſts, for thoſe are foreign to our ſubject, but ſhall take notice only, that after he had ſubdued all Aſia and the Indies with incredible good fortune and rapidity, he gave himſelf up to all manner of Intemperance. Hiſtorians relate, that having drunk to exceſs, he fell ſick and died, after he had obliged all the World to be quiet before him. Being ſenſible that his end was near, he ſent for the Grandees of his Court, and declared to them that he gave the Empire to him who was of all the moſt deſerving[x]. According to other Hiſtorians[y], he made a Will, wherein he regulated every thing relating to the Succeſſion. The Author of the firſt book of Maccabees ſays, that he divided his Kingdom among his Generals while he was yet living. It is certain that a partition was made of Alexander's Empire among the principal Officers of his Army, and that the Empire which he founded in Aſia ſubſiſted many Ages after him. He died in the year of the World 3681, before J. C. 319, before the vulgar Æra 323, at the age of three and thirty, and after a reign of twelve years, viz. ſix years as King of Macedon, and ſix as Monarch of Aſia.

1 Macc. i. 3.

Ch. i. 7.

The ſpurious Joſephus, or Joſephus Ben Gorion[z] *, relates that Alexander, as we have [t] Quint. Curt. l. 4. c. 8. Euſeb. Chronic. Cedren. [u] Joſeph. l. 2. contra Appion. [w] Ibid. [x] Juſtin. l. 12. [y] Diodor. l. 20. p. 774. Quint. Curt. l. 10. [z] Lib. 2. c. 7.

* This Author was a French Man in Scaliger's opinion, originally of Tours; but as Baſnage thinks, a native of ſome part of Bretany. He ſeems to have copied a Latin Author, who has written de Geſtis Alexandri. The Manuſcript of this Book is in the Bodleian Library, and has been printed lately by Mr. Gagnier, in his edition of Joſephus Gorionides. It is ſtuffed with Contradictions and Abſurdities. This Impoſtor is ſuppoſed to have written about the eleventh Century.

have said, having enter'd the Temple of Jerusalem, the High-priest shewed him the Courts, the Treasures, and all the beauties of that holy place, and even the Holy of Holies, which was the most sacred and innermost part of the Temple; that Alexander having admired all these things, and blessed the Lord for them, said to the High-priest, I have a mind to leave here a monument of my Devotion and Respect to the God whom you adore; I will give therefore to the artificers a great quantity of Gold, that they may make a Statue of me as large as the life, and place it between the Altar of Burnt-offerings and the holy place. But the High-priest told him that he might make a better use of the sum which he intended to devote to God, by giving it to be a support to the Priests, and for the service of the People who should worship God in his holy Place; and that as to the monument he had mentioned, he would erect a more excellent one in honour of him. What monument then is this, replied Alexander? It is this, says Jaddus; all the Children of the Priests that shall be born this year in Jerusalem and all Judæa, shall be called by the name of Alexander: These will be so many living monuments, that shall every day revive the memory of your name in the Lord's Temple.

The Jews [a] tell us, that the Egyptians prosecuted the Hebrews before Alexander, in order to procure the restitution of the gold and silver vessels which their Ancestors had formerly borrowed of the Egyptians when
Ex. iii. 22. they went out of Egypt. The cause was pleaded before Alexander, and the Egyptians set forth their right in the best manner they could; but when they heard the complaints and pretensions of the Hebrews, and understood that they required of them a consideration for their liberty, which for many years had been oppress'd unjustly, their pay for so many years labour, satisfaction for the bad usage they had received from the Egyptians, and vengeance for their Children that had been either drowned or exposed; when the Egyptians heard all this, they retired in confusion, and desisted from their demands [*]. But I mention this law-suit only as an invention of the Rabbins.

Some have been of opinion [b], that it was the High-priest Jaddus who told Alexander the Great that the Gods who were worshipped by the Heathens were mortal Men only deified: But this opinion is no more than a conjecture, for which there is no foundation. The Antients [c], from whom we learn this particularity of Alexander, taken from a letter written to his Mother, have no where told us that this Prince had it from Jaddus, but from one Leo, who was an High-priest, and had the care of the Egyptian mysteries.

The name of this Conqueror is as much celebrated in the Writings of the Eastern People as in those of the Greeks and Romans, but they vary extremely from the accounts which our Historians give of him. They generally call Alexander Escander Dulkarnim [d], Alexander with two horns, by reason of the two horns of the World, the East and the West, as the People of the East term them, which this Conqueror subdued. Daniel represents him under Dan. viii. 3, 4, 5. the idea of a Goat, having a large horn, wherewith he attacks and overthrows a Ram with two horns, of an unequal size, one whereof is much larger than the other. The Ram here mentioned is Darius King of Persia, overcome by Alexander, who having overthrown and trampled upon his Adversary, became extremely powerful, and his horn was prodigiously exalted, so that it was divided into four horns, extending towards the four parts of the World. These are the four Monarchies formed out of Alexander's Empire, viz. Syria, Egypt, Babylonia, and Greece.

The Eastern People do not agree among themselves as to Alexander's Father and Mother. The Mahometans generally relate his Original after the following manner [e]; Darab King of Persia made war with Philip King of Macedonia, and having defeated him, obliged him afterwards to retreat to a certain place, where he blocked him up so close, that he was forced to sue for peace, to give him his Daughter in marriage, and pay him an annual tribute of a thousand Beizats, or golden Eggs, each forty drams in weight. Darab having thus espoused the Princess, perceiv'd upon the wedding night that her breath was offensive, and resolved to send her back to her Father, tho' she was with child already by him. Philip received her, and the Son of whom she was deliver'd he named as if he had been his own, and called him Alexander.

Darab at his death left his Kingdom to his Son of his own name: This is the Darius Codomannus of the Greeks, and Dara in the Persian language signifies Sovereign. This Prince extended far the limits of his Territories, settled Posts throughout his Dominions for the more effectual procuring speedy intelligence of what pass'd, and reign'd for some years very happily. But as he govern'd with great pride and severity, he drew upon himself the odium of the great Men and common common people, who rebelled against him. The Grandees wrote to Alexander, inviting him to come and make a conquest of Persia, which belonged to him as Son and Heir to Darab the first. Alexander desiring to take advantage of these dispositions in the men of principal quality, began with a refusal to pay the customary tribute of a thousand Beizats, or golden Eggs; and the King of Persia demanding them by his Ambassador, Alexander replied, The bird which laid these eggs is flown into the other world.

[a] Abraham Zacuth in Sepher. Juchasim. & Gemar. Babylon. ad tit. Sanhed. c. 11. [*] Vide si placet, Tertull. l. 2. contra Marcion. c. 20. [b] See M. Simon's Dictionary, under the Title of Alexander. [c] Tertull. de Pallio, c. 3. Minutius Felix in octavio. Cyprian. de vanitate Idolatorum, c. 1. August. de Civit. Dei, l. 8. c. 5. & de consensu Evang. l. 1. c. 23. [d] Bibl. Orient. Escander, p. 317. [e] D'Herbelot. Bibl. Orient. p. 285, 286, & 317.

Upon this refusal, and the raillery accompanying it, Darius levied a powerful army, in order to reduce Alexander to obedience; who likewise on his part raised forces, and marched against Darius. The encounter between these two armies was very terrible; but after a bloody combat, the advantage remained intirely on Alexander's side. Darius retiring from the battle, no sooner came into his tent, but two of his chief officers pierced him thro' the body with their swords, and fled to Alexander's camp; who, upon notice of what had happened, ran instantly to Darius, took the head of the expiring Monarch and placed it on his knees, protesting that he was not any way concerned in his death. Darius opening his eyes, desired him to revenge his murder, gave him his daughter Roxana in marriage, and intreated him to leave the Provinces of Persia under the government of Natives of the country. Such, according to the Eastern People, was the death of Darius Codomannus.

Abulfarage, and Said the Son of Batrik, and Josephus Gorionides, are of opinion, that Nectanebus King of Egypt was Alexander's Father; that he being driven out of his own Country by Artaxerxes Ochus, disguised himself like an Astrologer, came into Macedonia, and having lain with Olympias, Philip's Wife, begat Alexander the Great. The same Abulfarage says, that Alexander defeated thirty Kings in battle, and built twelve Cities, four whereof he called by his own name. It is related also, that he commanded a bridge of admirable structure to be destroyed, which had been erected by an ancient King of Persia over the Tigris. Afterwards a bridge of boats was made in the same place, which continued there for a long time.

1 Macc. i. 6, 7. We read in the first book of Maccabees, that Alexander perceiving himself to be near his end, sent for his principal officers, who had been brought up with him ever since his youth, and divided his Kingdom among them while he was yet living. It is pretty difficult to reconcile this relation with the Greek and Latin Historians, who have mentioned the circumstances of his death, and the manner wherein he disposed of his dominions. But in this particular the Eastern Historians agree very well with the Sacred Historian; they say he died in the city of Scheherezour in Assyria[f], or as others will have it, in the Curdistan[g], after having divided his dominions among ninety of his principal Captains, the chief of whom was Ptolemy the Son of Lagus. Eskenderons, otherwise Aridæus his Son, or rather, as Greek Authors say, his Brother, had no share in this succession, being addicted intirely to the study of Philosophy under the direction of Aristotle, who had been Alexander's Preceptor.

Another Historian informs us[h], that this Prince, a little before his death, divided the Provinces of Persia among the Sons of those Princes whom he had subdued and dispossessed of their Crowns, they paying fealty and homage to him; with a farther condition, of keeping such a number of troops in his service. But after the death of Alexander, they who had been tributary or feudatary Princes only, made themselves absolute, and Sovereigns, and are distinguished in the Arabian and Persian Histories by the title of Kings of the Nations; who make a particular dynasty in the succession of the Kings of Persia.

Josephus the Son of Gorion, whose history was published in Germany by Sebastian Munster, in the sixteenth Century, and has been since much more correctly printed in Hebrew at Constantinople, has related the History of Alexander the Great, which he learnt, as he says, from the Egyptian Magi, but he has disfigured it in so strange a manner, and blended it with so many fables, and instances of the grossest ignorance, that were I to relate them I shou'd think I made a very ill use of my own leisure, and too severely tried the Reader's patience. M. Gagnier has translated it into Latin, and joined another Latin Author with it, a Manuscript whereof has been discover'd lately in the Bodleian Library at Oxford. His work is formed upon the same plan as that of Ben Gorion; but there is a dispute among the Learned which of the two is the most ancient[i]. Both are stuffed with childish stories, and both value themselves upon borrowing their history from the Egyptian Magi.

The Eastern people agree, that Alexander the Great built a large strong wall, continued from one of the Caspian mountains to another, in order to prevent the Northern people, whom they called Gog and and Magog, from penetrating into Persia, and the other Provinces which lie East and South of this wall, known among the Ancients by the name of the Caspian Gates. See CASPIAN.

[e] D' Herbelot Bibl. Orient p. 318. [f] This City is under 82 d. 20 m. of longitude, and under the 34 d. 30 m. of Northern Latitude in the third climate. [h] Tarikh Montekheb [i] See Basnage Hist. des Juifs, l. 7. p. 63, &c. l. 2. c. 7.

During his abode at Babylon, amidst the greatest pleasures and debauches, he resolved upon rebuilding and inlarging the Temple of Belus[k], which Xerxes had demolished at his return from Greece. He began with ordering the place to be cleaned, and observing that the Magi to whom he had committed the care of this work, proceeded very slowly in it, he employed ten thousand of his troops about it. They laboured at it for two months before his death; and after all, the undertaking was so great that it remained unfinished. It was designed that the Jews who were in the army should have their share in this work as well as the rest, [l] but when their turn came, they represented, that their Religion prohibiting Idolatry, it was not lawful for them to assist in building an Edifice intended for an idolatrous worship. It was resolved however to press them, and correction and other violent means were used to force them to it; but they continued inflexible. Alexander admired their constancy, discharged them, and sent them home.

II. ALEXANDER BALAS, so called from Bala his Mother, was the natural Son of Antiochus Epiphanes, and in Medals is surnamed Theopator Euergetes. Some Historians will not allow him to be even the natural Son of Antiochus Epiphanes. Florus[m] calls him an unknown person, and of an uncertain extraction. Justin[n] says, that the Enemies of Demetrius King of Syria suborned a young Man, who was of the very meanest of the people, to declare himself to be the Son and Heir of Antiochus; and that he having made war with success against the King of Syria, got possession of his Kingdom. Appian[o] says plainly, that he took upon him to be of the family of the Seleucidæ, without any title to this pretension. And Athenæus affirms[p], that he was the supposed Son of Antiochus Epiphanes. But let this be as it will, the Roman Senate and the Jews, as well as the Egyptians and Syrians, acknowledged him to be the Son and Heir of this Prince.

Heraclides of Byzantium was the person who undertook to place Alexander Balas on the throne of Syria, and to pull down Demetrius, who was his particular Enemy. He carried Alexander whom we are speaking of, to Rome, and Laodicea the Daughter of Antiochus Epiphanes. He had the address to gain many of the Senators by his presents, and to persuade them that Alexander was the natural Son of Antiochus. When he thought every thing was well enough disposed, he brought young Alexander and his pretended Sister Laodicea, into the Senate-house. They desired assistance from the Senate, that they might be enabled to recover their Father's Inheritance, and the Kingdom of Syria, which was usurped by Demetrius. Heraclides seconded their petition with a long harangue; and altho' the Men of best understanding looked upon all this as so much farce, yet those of the Senators, who had been gained by Heraclides, and were the most numerous, carried it; and it was immediately resolved, that Alexander and Laodicea might endeavour to recover the dominions of their Father; that the Senate and Roman People would support them, and furnish them with succours to this purpose. Immediately Heraclides set about the levying of troops; and having conducted Alexander and Laodicea to Ephesus, he made preparations to carry on the war in earnest against Demetrius.

In the Year of the World 3851. before J. C. 149. before the vulgar Æra 153.

Alexander Balas went into Syria, and upon his first appearance Ptolemais, which was in the custody of some Male-contents, belonging to Demetrius's troops, opened the gates to him. Then he writ to Jonathan Maccabæus, to engage him in his party. The Letter run thus, King Alexander to his Brother Jonathan sendeth greeting. We have heard of thee that thou art a Man of great power, and meet to be our friend; wherefore now this day we ordain thee to be the High-Priest of thy Nation, and to be called the King's friend, and require thee to take our part, and keep friendship with us. At the same time he sent him a purple Robe, and a Crown of Gold. Jonathan therefore embraced Alexander's party, notwithstanding all the offers and sollicitations of Demetrius King of Syria. After this Alexander thought of nothing but of going to attack Demetrius. The two Kings engaged in the year 3853. The left wing of Demetrius broke and put to flight Alexander's right wing, which was placed opposite to it; but the right wing, where Demetrius commanded in person, was obliged to retreat. Demetrius being deserted by his Men, tho' alone, made resistance, and performed prodigies of valour. At last unhappily plunging into the mire, he fell from his horse, and was pierced through with arrows, fighting valiantly to the last gasp.

1 Macc. x. 18.

In the Year of the World 3851. before J. C. 149. before the vulgar Æra 153.

1 Macc. x. 22, 23, & seq.

Ver. 48, 49.

Thus Alexander Balas got full possession of the Kingdom of Syria. When this was accomplished, he considered how to strengthen

In the Year of the World 3854. before J. C. 146. before the vulg. Æra 150.

[k] Diodor. Sicul. l. 17. Arrian. l. 7.
[l] Joseph. contra Appion. l. 2.
[m] Flor. Epitome Livii. l. 52.
[n] Justin. l. 55.
[o] Appian. Syriac. p. 31.
[p] Athen. l. 5. c. 10.

ſtrengthen himſelf by an alliance with the King of Egypt. He demanded his Daughter in marriage, and Ptolemy Philometor gave her to him. The two Kings met at Ptolemais, where the marriage was concluded. Jonathan Maccabæus was invited to it by King Alexander; he went, and appeared there with great ſplendor. He brought large preſents to Alexander, and was very well received by both Princes. The King of Syria ſhewed him all the marks of honour, cloathed him in purple, placed him in the number of his principal friends, and made him his Maſter of the Horſe.

1 Macc. x. 51, & ſeq.

Alexander had not been above two years upon the throne of Syria, when Demetrius Nicator, the eldeſt Son of Demetrius Soter, put himſelf at the head of ſome troops which he had received from Laſthenes of Crete, and paſſed into Cilicia. Alexander was then in Phœnicia, and as ſoon as he received news of it, he returned with all ſpeed to Antioch, that he might put his affairs in order before the arrival of Demetrius.

In the Year of the World 3856. before J. C. 144. before the vulg. Æra 150.

In the mean time Demetrius gave the general command of his troops to Apollonius, who came and bid defiance to Jonathan, challenging him with very inſolent language to engage him in a ſet battle. Jonathan and his Brother Simon marched againſt him, and came near Joppa; the Enemy's horſe, after having ſuffered great fatigues all the day, was at laſt put to flight by Simon's Infantry: After which the two Brothers took Azothus and Aſcalon, and returned loaden with ſpoil to Jeruſalem. King Alexander being informed of this good ſucceſs, advanced Jonathan to new honours, and ſent him the buckle of gold which was given generally to near relations only of the King. Moreover, he gave him Accaron, and the territory belonging to it, to be enjoyed by him as his own property.

1 Macc. x. 69, & ſeq.

While this was tranſacting, Ptolemy Philometor, the Father-in-law of Alexander Balas, was conſidering how he might join the Kingdom of Syria to that of Egypt, and took private meaſures to deſtroy both Demetrius Nicator and Alexander Balas, that ſo he might become maſter of the Kingdom, which they were both contending for. To this end he levied a powerful army, and under the pretence of going to the aſſiſtance of his Son-in-law, he entered Syria, and was received as a friend into all the Cities of the Country; after which having ſeized them[a], he gave out that Balas had prepared ſeveral ambuſcades for him in Ptolemais, with an intention to ſurprize him. Jonathan Maccabæus came to join him near Joppa; and tho' the inhabitants of the Country did all they could to render him odious to Ptolemy, by ſhewing him the heaps of dead bodies which Jonathan had ſlain in the preceding war, the Temple of Dagon, which he had burnt, and the City of Azotus, which he had deſtroyed, the King nevertheleſs received him with great marks of diſtinction; and Jonathan having attended him as far as the river Eleutherus, beyond Phœnicia, returned to Jeruſalem.

In the Year of the World 3858. before J. C. 142. before the vulgar Æra 146. 1 Macc. xi. 1, 2, & ſeq. — 1 Macc. xi. 4, 5, 6, 7.

Thus Ptolemy advanced as far as Antioch, without meeting any reſiſtance, ſeated himſelf in the throne of Syria, and put the two Diadems upon his head of Egypt and Syria.

Balas, who had retreated into Cilicia, gathered there a numerous army together, marched againſt Ptolemy and Demetrius Nicator, who were both confederated againſt him, gave them battle upon the river OEnæparas, was overcome, and obliged to ſave himſelf by flight, with five hundred horſe that followed him, in Arabia: where Zabdiel Prince of the Arabians had his head cut off, and ſent it to Ptolemy. This is what the Author of the firſt book of Maccabees tells us. But other Hiſtorians[c] relate, that Alexander's Generals conſidering their own intereſts and ſecurity, treated privately with Demetrius, treacherouſly killed their Maſter, and ſent his head to Ptolemy at Antioch. This happened in the year of the world 3859. before J. C. 141. before the vulg. Æra 145. Alexander Balas left a Son very young, called Antiochus Theus, whom Tryphon raiſed to the Throne of Syria, as we ſhall ſee under the title ANTIOCHUS. 1 Macc. xi. 17. — Ver. 39.

ALEXANDER JANNÆUS, the third Son of John Hircanus. John Hircanus left three Sons, or five, according to Joſephus[d]. He had a particular affection for Antigonus and Ariſtobulus, but could not endure his third Son Alexander, becauſe he had dream'd that he would reign after him; which extremely afflicted him, inaſmuch as according to the order of nature, he could not come to the Crown till after the death of his two Brothers. The event juſtified the truth of this dream. Antigonus never reigned, and Ariſtobulus but for a very ſhort time; [e]ſo that after his death, Salome, or Alexandra his Widow, ſet Alexander at liberty, whom Ariſtobulus had kept in priſon ever ſince their Father's death[f], and made him King in his room in 3899. before J. C. 101. before the vulgar Æra 105. As ſoon as Alexander was ſeated on the Throne, he put to death one of his Brothers, who had formed a deſign upon his life, and heaped great honours on on another, called Abſalom, who was contented with a private condition, and lived peaceably, and retired from all publick buſineſs.

[a] Vid. Joſeph. Antiq. l. xiii. c. 5. Diodor. l. 32. Juſtin. l. 35, &c. [c] Polyb. excerpta. Valeſ. p. 194. Diodor. l. 32. in Bibliot. Photii. [d] Joſeph. de bello, l. 1. c. 3. [e] He began to reign in 3898. which was the year Hircanus died; and he died in 3899. before J. C. 101. before the vulgar Æra 105. [f] Joſeph. Antiq. l. 13. c. 20.

Alexander was of a warlike enterprizing genius; as ſoon as he had regulated the affairs of his dominions, he marched with an army againſt Ptolemais. The inhabitants of the City gave him battle, but he repulſed them; and compell'd them to ſhut themſelves up in the place where he laid cloſe ſiege to them. The beſieged ſeeing themſelves preſſed, had recourſe to Ptolemy Lathyrus, who having been forced out of the Kingdom of Egypt by his Mother Cleopatra, continued in the Iſle of Cyprus. Lathyrus promiſed to come to their aſſiſtance, and to this end fitted out a ſtrong fleet. In the mean time, Demenetus, who had great credit in Ptolemais, perſuaded the Inhabitants that it was much more for their advantage to carry on the war againſt the Jews, and run all the hazards of it, than to receive Ptolemy, and thereby throw themſelves into certain and inevitable ſlavery. The people of the town ſubmitted to theſe reaſons, and ordered thanks to be returned to Ptolemy for the offer of his aſſiſtance.

Ptolemy Lathyrus was already at ſea, when he received this news; notwithſtanding which he advanced as far as Sicaminum, a City ſituated over-againſt Ptolemais, where he landed his army, which was compoſed of about thirty thouſand horſe and foot. They of Ptolemais perſiſted in refuſing to receive him into their City; during which time the Deputies of Gaza came to him on the part of Zoilus Tyrant of Dora, and of Strato's Tower, deſiring him to come to their aſſiſtance againſt Alexander Jannæus, King of the Jews, who laid waſte all their Country.

Ptolemy was overjoyed at this opportunity of making an honourable retreat from before Ptolemais. In the mean while, Alexander, not thinking it adviſable to hazard an engagement with Ptolemy, withdrew with his troops into their quarters, and underhand ſollicited Cleopatra, Ptolemy's Mother, to be of his party, making outward profeſſions of a deſire to live well with her Son, and offering him four hundred talents to deliver up Zoilus, with aſſurances that he would reſign to him the ſeveral pieces of land which Zoilus was poſſeſs'd of in the Country. Ptolemy was not long without perceiving that Alexander played with him; for which reaſon he began the war againſt him with more vigour than before.

In the Year of the World 3900, before J. C. 100, before the Vulg. Æra 104.

He attacked and took ſome places in Galilee. Alexander marched againſt him, and gave him battle near Aſophus, which was not far from *Jordan. But Ptolemy killed thirty thouſand of his Men, or fifty thouſand, if Timagenes, who is cited in Joſephus, is to be believed. After this victory Ptolemy met with no more reſiſtance in the Country. He made every where great havock, and ſpread the terror of his name throughout all the Province. After this, his Mother Cleopatra fearing leſt ſo much ſucceſs ſhould make him too powerful, equipp'd a large Fleet, and ſent her Son Alexander into Phœnicia, where he was very well received by the People of that Country, who forſook Ptolemy's party, but appearing before Ptolemais, he was obliged to lay ſiege to it; and Cleopatra came to his aſſiſtance, to haſten the taking of the City.

In the year of the World 3901, before J. C. 99, before the vulgar Æra 103.

Alexander Jannæus, as his affairs then ſtood, thought it impoſſible to procure any ſuccour but from Cleopatra. He went therefore to her Camp before Ptolemais, carrying great preſents with him, and was received there as an unhappy Prince, who was Ptolemy's Enemy, and had no other refuge but the Queen's protection. Some of Cleopatra's friends would have perſuaded her to ſeize upon Judæa; but Ananias, one of her Generals, who was by birth a Jew, diverted her from it, by remonſtrating to her, not only the injuſtice and unworthineſs of ſuch a proceeding, in robbing thus a Prince who was her Ally, and came to throw himſelf into her arms; but likewiſe that it would make her odious to all the Jews in the world, who would deteſt ſuch a piece of perfidiouſneſs. Cleopatra being moved with theſe reaſons, made an alliance with Alexander Jannæus, in the City of Scythopolis; and thereupon Alexander marched with his troops into Cœle-Syria, where he took the Town of Gadara, after a ſiege of ten months, and after that Amathus, which was one of the beſt fortreſſes in the Country, where Theodorus the Son of Zeno had lodged every thing moſt valuable that he had, as in a place of good ſecurity. This Theodorus falling ſuddenly upon Alexander's army, killed ten thouſand of his men, and plundered all his baggage.

In the Year of the World 3902, before J. C. 98, before the vulgar Æra 102.

In the Year of the World 3903, before J. C. 97, before the vulg. Æra 101.

This Misfortune was not ſufficient to ſhake the courage of this Prince, he beſieged Raphia and Anthedon, Towns lying upon the Mediterranean, and made himſelf Maſter of them. From thence he marched againſt Gaza, attacked it, and ravaged all the neighbouring Country. But Apollodotus, who commanded in the Town, having made a ſally in the night, fell furiouſly upon Alexander's Camp, put the Jews into diſorder, and had the advantage as long as night laſted; but as ſoon as it was day, the Jews diſcovering who they were, (for they thought at firſt that it was Ptolemy Lathyrus, who was come to the aſſiſtance assistance of Gaza) recovered spirit, and killed near a thousand of the Enemy: notwithstanding which, they did not surrender up the place, but chose rather to expose themselves to the last extremities, than submit to the Hebrews. But after a long resistance, having lost their Captain Apollodotus, the Town was taken and sacked, not however without great loss on the Jews side, for they of Gaza seeing there was no hope of quarter, sold their lives very dearly. Alexander return'd to Jerusalem a year after he began the siege of Gaza.

In the year of the World 3906, before J. C. 94, before the vulg. Æra 98.

* Joſeph. Antiq. l. 13. c. 20, 21.

In the Year of the World 3907, before J. C. 93 before the vulgar Æra 97.

When he returned to Jerusalem, he did not find all that peace which he had reason to expect there. The Jews revolted from him [r], and upon the feast of Tabernacles, while he was preparing to sacrifice as High-priest, according to custom, the People who were assembled in the Temple had the insolence to throw limons at him; for it is usual with the Jews, during this festival, to carry branches of Palm-trees and Limon-trees in their hands, as tokens of joy. To these insults they added reproaches, telling him, that as he had been a captive, he was not worthy to go up to the holy Altar, and offer solemn Sacrifices. Alexander, provoked with these affronts, put the seditious to the sword, and killed about six thousand of them. Afterwards he caused a partition made of wood to be erected about the Altar and the inner Temple, to prevent the People from coming so far as the Altar where the Priests performed their functions: And farther, to defend himself for the future against any such attempts, he took guards into his pay from Pisidia and Cilicia; for as he was no lover of the Syrians, he would have none of them in his service.

He made war afterwards against the Moabites and Ammonites, and having conquer'd them, obliged them to pay tribute to him. After that he attacked Amathus, the fortress beyond Jordan, which has been above mentioned, and razed it, Theodorus the Son of Zeno not daring in the mean time to encounter him. Upon another occasion, making war with Obeda, King of the Arabians, he fell imprudently into an ambuscade that was laid for him near Gadara, beyond Jordan; and having suffered himself to be inclosed by a troop of Camels in steep places, he had much ado to disengage himself, without any company, and got back to Jerusalem.

There he found the Jews more animated against him than ever, and was obliged to make war against them for six years, and kill above fifty thousand of them. All his endeavours to be reconciled with them were of no other use than to irritate them still more; so that having one day asked them what they would have him do in order to live well with them, and acquire their good-will, they answer'd all with one voice, that he had nothing to do but to kill himself, and at the same time sent deputies to Demetrius Eucærus, to desire succours from him against their King [s].

Eucærus coming into Judæa [t], join'd his army with the rebellious Subjects of Alexander, and encamped at Sichem. Alexander marched against him at the head of an Army consisting of six thousand two hundred foreign troops, and twenty thousand Jews, who continued faithful to him. Eucærus had in his Army three thousand horse and forty thousand foot. The two Kings did what they could mutually to weaken one another; Eucærus by debauching the foreign troops which were in Alexander's pay; and Alexander by taking off those Jews from the party of Eucærus who had joined his Army. But neither of them succeeding in his design, they were obliged to come to a pitch'd battle, in which all the advantage was on the side of Eucærus, the foreign troops belonging to Alexander being defeated so entirely, that not one of them was left; and this Prince was forced to fly for shelter to the Mountains.

This misfortune, which, in all appearance, must have ruined totally the affairs of Alexander, was what most contributed to his re-establishment. Six thousand Jews, who were touched with the unhappy condition of their King, came to join him; and Demetrius, content with the first advantage he had gained, retired into Syria, and left the rebels to make war against their King with their own forces. Alexander had the better of them in all skirmishes, and at last having shut up the briskest of them in a place called Bethom, he forced them, made them prisoners, and carried them to Jerusalem, where he order'd eight hundred of them to be crucified before him, during a great entertainment which he had made for his friends; and before these unhappy wretches expir'd, he commanded their wives and children to be murder'd in their presence. This was an unheard-of and excessive cruelty; and upon this occasion the People of his own party called him Thracides, that is to say, as cruel as a Thracian. A body of eight thousand mutineers, who still kept the field, frighted with this execution, secur'd themselves in places strong by situation, and left the King at peace in his dominions.

Antiochus,

[r] Joseph. Antiq. l. 13. c. 21. [s] Demetrius Eucærus was establish'd King of Damascus in 3912. It was not therefore till after this year that he came into Judæa. [t] Joseph. Antiq. l. 13. c. 22. [u] Antiq. l. 13. c. 23. about the year 3917 or 3918.

Antiochus, firnamed Dionyfius[b], having conquer'd the Kingdom of Damafcus, refolved to make an irruption into Judæa: Alexander Jannæus having intelligence of his defign, and being unwilling to run the hazard of a battle, gave orders for the making good intrenchments from Antipatris to Joppa, which was the only place thro' which they could penetrate into his Country; and having added a wall to thefe works, with wooden towers at proper diftances, for about an hundred and fifty furlongs in length, he put a ftop to Antiochus, and his enterprize mifcarried. This Prince, having only burnt the wooden towers, thought it convenient to return, and bend his arms againft the King of the Arabians, in which war he was killed.

After his death, the people of Damafcus made a prefent of the Crown to Aretas, who came into Judæa, attack'd Alexander, and overcame him near Adida, in the plain call'd Sephala, to the Eaft of Gaza and Anthedon. After this the two Kings made peace upon certain conditions. Aretas return'd to Damafcus, and Alexander went and befieged Dia, or Dium, in Arabia, near Pella, in the region of Decapolis[c]; and having taken it, he led his army to Effa, [d] where Zeno had lodged all that was moft valuable belonging to him. He hemm'd in the place with a triple wall, and having taken it, he marched againft Gaulan and Seleucia. Thefe he took, and at the fame time made himfelf mafter of the Valley of Antiochus, and the Fortrefs of Gamala. He accufed Demetrius of feveral crimes, who was the proprietor of all thefe parts, and having taken poffeffion of them, he returned in triumph to Judæa, after an abfence of three years, which he had employed in thefe expeditions.

In the Year of the World 3918, before J. C. 81, before the vulgar Æra 85.

In the Year of the World 3920, before J. C. 80, before the vulgar Æra 84.

In the year of the World 3921, before J. C. [illegible] before the vulgar Æra [illegible]

The Jews received him with joy, by reafon of his great fucceffes; and under his reign the dominion of the Hebrews was extended over many Cities which had been conquered by him. After this Alexander, having drank to great excefs, fell fick, and having for three whole years laboured under a quartan fever, without intermitting however his military exercifes; his ftrength was at laft quite exhaufted, and he died in the country of Garafa, while he was befieging the Caftle of Ragaba, fituated beyond the river Jordan. Ragaba is probably the fame with Argob of Bafhan, which is mentioned by Mofes.

In the Year of the World 3923, before J. C. 77, before the vulgar Æra 81.

Deut. iii. 4, 13, 14.

The Queen his Wife obferving him to be near his end, and forefeeing all fhe had to fear from a mutinous people not eafily to be governed, her Children not being as yet of age to take upon themfelves the conduct of affairs, Alexander told her under thefe perplexities, that if fhe had a mind to reign in peace, fhe fhould in the firft place conceal his death from the Soldiery, till Ragaba was taken; in the next place, that when fhe returned to Jerufalem, fhe fhould give the Pharifees fome authority in the State, and fome fhare in the Government; that fhe fhould fend for the principal of them, and fhew them his dead body; that fhe fhould tell them they might ufe it as they pleafed, and treat it with all manner of indignities, in revenge for the ill treatment they had received from him; and for the reft, that fhe would do nothing henceforward in the Government without their advice and participation.

He added, if you do thus, you may be affured, that they will make a very honourable funeral for me, and that you will reign in peace, fupported by the credit and authority which they have acquired among the people. Having faid thefe words, he expired, at the age of eight and forty, and after a reign of feven and twenty years; in the year of the World 3926, before J. C. 74, before the vulgar Æra 78. He left two Sons, Hircanus and Ariftobulus, who difputed for the Kingdom and High Priefthood, till the time of Herod the Great; and by their divifion were the caufe of the intire ruin of their family, and of Herod's elevation.

IV. Alexander, the Son of Ariftobulus and Alexandra, and Grandfon of Alexander Jannæus, whom we have been fpeaking of. After Pompey had taken Jerufalem from Ariftobulus, this Prince, with Alexander and Antigonus his Sons, and two of his Daughters, were carried in captivity to Rome. Young Alexander found means to efcape by the way, and being returned to Judæa, he raifed an army of ten thoufand foot, and fifteen hundred horfe[d], with which he performed many gallant actions, and feized the Fortreffes of Alexandrium and Machærus, where he defigned to fortify himfelf. But Gabinius, General of the Roman Troops which were in the Country, allow'd him no leifure to do this; for he drove him from the mountains, beat him near Jerufalem, killed three thoufand of his Men, and made a great many prifoners. After which Gabinius laid fiege to the Fortrefs of Alexandrium, where Alexandra, the Mother of Alexander, was in perfon. She went out of this Caftle, and accommodated matters between her Son Alexander and Gabinius, upon condition that Alexander fhould furrender the Caftles of Alexandrium, Hircanium, and Machærus, which Gabinius demolifhed in the year 3947.

In the Year of the World 3947, before J. C. 53, before the vulg. Æra 57.

Alexander

[b] Antiq. l. 13. c. 23. about the year 3917, or 3918.

[c] Plin. l. v. c. 17.

[d] Antiq. l. 14. c. 10.

Alexander observing Gabinius to be employed in Egypt, while Sisenna, whom he had left in Judea with an Authority to command them in his absence, was not in a condition to make head against the robbers, that ravaged all parts of the province: Alexander, I say, taking the advantage of this opportunity, [e] stirred up new commotions in the Land, had recourse to arms again, and found means to form an army considerable enough to scour all the country. Wheresoever he met with any Romans, he sacrificed them to his resentment. They who escaped from him, fortified themselves on Mount Gerizim, whither he went and besieged them. Here it was that Gabinius found him at his return from Egypt.

In the Year of the World 3949.

Gabinius being apprehensive of engaging with the great number of troops which were with Alexander, sent Antipater to him with offers of a general pardon, provided they laid down their arms. This proposal had the desired success, many of them forsook Alexander, and retired to their own houses. But there were still thirty thousand men remaining with him, and with these he resolved to give Gabinius battel. The two Armies met at the foot of Mount Tabor, where, after a very obstinate action, Alexander was overcome, with the loss of ten thousand men. The rest were dispersed by flight.

In the Year of the World 3952.

Alexander began again under the government of Crassus to embroil affairs; but Cassius, after the unhappy expedition against the Parthians, obliged him under certain Conditions to continue quiet, [f] and marched to the Euphrates to oppose the passage of the Parthians.

In the Year of the World 3955.

During the quarrels between Cæsar and Pompey, Alexander and Aristobulus his father took Cæsar's part, who sent Aristobulus back into Judæa with two legions, in order to support his interests there. [g] But they who were of Pompey's party found means to poison him by the way. Nevertheless Alexander his son levied troops to join with those of Aristobulus; whereof Pompey having intelligence, sent directions to Scipio, who was then in Syria, to dispatch him. Alexander was therefore apprehended and carried to Antioch, where he was arraigned in form, and condemned to lose his Head; which Sentence was accordingly executed in the year of the World 3935, before J. C. 65, before the vulgar Æra 69.

V. ALEXANDER, the Son of Jason, was sent to Rome to renew the Friendship and Alliance that there was between the Jews and Romans. He is named in the Decree of the Senate which was directed to the Jews in the ninth year of Hircanus's Pontificate, [h] in the year of the World 3935, before J. C. 65, before the vulgar Æra 69.

VI. ALEXANDER, the Son of Theodorus, was sent to Rome by Hircanus, to renew his Alliance with the Senate. [i] His name is to be met with in the Decree of the Senate addressed to the Magistrates of Ephesus, and made in the Consulship of Dolabella; wherein it is declared, That the Jews shall not be forced into their service, because they cannot bear arms upon the Sabbath-day, nor have at all times such Provisions in their armies as are permitted by their Law.

VII. ALEXANDER, the Son of Herod the Great and Mariamne. His History is scarce to be separated from that of Aristobulus his brother, and the companion of all his misfortunes. These two Princes were the handsomest men of their times. After the tragical death of their mother Mariamne, Herod sent them to Rome, to be educated near Augustus, and instructed in all exercises which were suitable to their Quality. Augustus did them the honour to allow them an apartment in his Palace, intending to compliment their father Herod with this mark of his Esteem and Consideration. [k] Some time after, Herod undertook a journey to Rome, to make his court to Augustus, [l] and bring home his two sons, Alexander and Aristobulus, who had been taught every thing sufficiently becoming persons of their Rank. The people received them in Judæa with great joy and kindness, in consideration of their extreme beauty, and the Asmonæan Race, from which, by their Mother's side, they were descended. But Salome, Herod's sister, who had been the principal cause of Mariamne's Death, apprehending, that if the Authority were ever lodged in their hands, they would make her feel the effects of their resentment, resolved by her calumnies to alienate their father from them.

In the Year of the World 3982, before J. C. 18, before the vulgar Æra 22.

In the Year of the World 3988, before J. C. 12, before the vulgar Æra 16.

This she set about with great address for fear of being discovered; and at first made no shew at all of her ill will. Herod seeing them of age, married them; Alexander with Glaphyra the daughter of Archelaus king of Cappadocia, and Aristobulus with Berenice the daughter of Salome. Pheroras the King's brother and Salome having conspired to destroy these two young Princes, observed all their discourses, and themselves oftentimes furnished them with opportunities of speaking their thoughts freely, and with some sharpness, concerning the manner wherein Herod had put to death their mother Mariamne. [m] All that they said was immediately reported to the King, in the most odious and aggravating terms. Herod, who knew not how to distrust his

In the Year of the World 3976, before J. C. 24, before the vulgar Æra 28.

[e] Joseph. Antiq. l. 14. c. 11. & de Bello Jud. l. 1. c. 7.
[f] Joseph. de Bello Jud. l. 1. c. 6.
[g] Joseph. Antiq. l. 10. c. 13.
[h] Antiq. l. 14. c. 16.
[i] Ibid. l. 14. c. 17.
[k] Ibid. l. 15. c. 13.
[l] Ibid. l. 16. c. 1.
[m] Antiq. l. 16. c. 6.

his Brother and Sister, and was well acquainted with the humour of his Sons, gave credit very easily to what was told him of their saying very frankly, that they would one day revenge their Mother's Death. To check in some degree their lofty Spirits, he sent for his eldest son Antipater to Court, whom he had by one Doris, and had brought up at a distance from Jerusalem; because the Quality of his Mother was much inferior to that of Mariamne. He thought that by making Aristobulus and Alexander both sensible, that it was in his power to advance one of their Brothers above them, he should induce them to be more circumspect and tractable: but the quite contrary happened; the presence of Antipater did but exasperate the two young Princes.

Herod having placed his confidence in Antipater, never suspected any thing he said against his two Brothers; because he understood so well how to disguise his thoughts, that he seemed always to excuse and pity them; even while he was forming Accusations against them of the most heinous nature. At last Herod was so far alienated from his two Sons, that he carried them to Rome, in order to accuse them there before Augustus, of designing to attempt his Life. The young Princes defended themselves so well, and affected the spectators in such a manner with their tears, that Augustus reconciled them with their Father, and sent them back into Judæa, in appearance perfectly united with Antipater, who returned with them, and expressed a great deal of satisfaction to see them restored to Herod's good Graces. When this Prince came back to Jerusalem, he convened all the people in the Temple, and declared publickly his intentions, that his Sons should reign after him, in the following Order; first Antipater, and after him Alexander and Aristobulus.

In the Year of the World 3993. before J. C. 7. before the vulgar Æra 11.

This Declaration more and more provoked the two Brothers; they broke out into complaints and murmurs: their discourses were immediately reported to Herod; and Pheroras, Salome and Antipater omitted nothing that might irritate him against his Sons. Pheroras came one day and told Alexander, that his sister Salome had informed him, that Herod was passionately in love with Glaphyra his wife. Alexander hereupon was not able to contain himself, but went directly to Herod, and declared to him what Pheroras had told him. Herod was strangely enraged against Pheroras, and reproached him bitterly with raising an Accusation of so black a nature against him. Pheroras threw the whole blame upon Salome, and she, who was present, defended herself with vehemence, and protested loudly that it was all false. At last the King, tired with their clamours, obliged them to go out of his presence, and highly commended the moderation of his Son, for discovering what so sensibly concerned him.

Herod had three Eunuchs, whom he very much trusted, and employed even in Affairs that were serious and of great importance. These were accused of being corrupted by Alexander with a large sum of money. The King commanded them to be put to the rack, and the extremity of the torture forced them to confess, that they had been often sollicited by Alexander and Aristobulus, to abandon Herod, as one who was now of no farther use, and who in vain endeavoured to disguise artificially his age, by having his beard and hair painted: that they would do much better to adhere to them, who in a little time must ascend the Throne, whether their Father would or no, and would be then in a condition to procure for them the first offices of State: That every thing was disposed in their favour: That their friends, and those of their party, were ready to imbark in any undertaking for the defence of that indisputable right which they had to the Crown. This was enough to make Herod very uneasy, and to render all persons about his Court suspected. All those who were known to be the particular friends of Alexander were by his order seized and put to the rack; the greatest part of whom died under the torture, without declaring any thing, because they had nothing to discover.

There was one however, who being overcome by pain, confessed that he had often heard Alexander say, when any one commended the height of his stature, or his dexterity in drawing the bow, that it would be more for his advantage not to be so tall, and to be less expert in hunting, since the King his Father looked upon these qualities with jealousy; and that when he was walking he was forced to shorten himself as he came near him, lest he should appear too tall; and that when he was hunting, he did not dare to shoot directly at the mark, lest the King should take offence if any should praise his Son's dexterity before him. During the relaxation of his torture, he added, that the two Brothers had conspired to lay snares for their Father, while he was hunting; and were resolv'd if he should die, to go in all haste to Rome, and beg the Kingdom of Augustus. Letters were produced likewise from Alexander to Aristobulus, wherein he complained that Herod had given some fields to Antipater, which produced an annual rent of two hundred talents, or about sixty eight thousand four hundred thirty seven pounds ten shillings.

Herod thought this to be sufficient reason for putting Alexander under arrest, and his principal friends to the torture.

Many

Many died amidst their torments, without saying any thing, and the whole Court was full of terror, consternation and trouble. One of those who were racked declared, that Alexander had written to his friends, desiring they would dispose the Emperor to send for him to Rome; and that he had informations of great consequence to lay before him against his Father, who had preferr'd the friendship of Mithridates King of Parthia to his alliance with the Romans. He added, that this young Prince had poison ready prepared at Ascalon to give his Father; search was made to no purpose after this poison, for none ever could be found.

Alexander however was not dejected at this storm: he not only denied nothing which had been extorted from his friends by the violence of torture, but without scruple confessed it; whether he designed thereby to confound the credulity and suspicions of his Father, or to involve the whole Court in such perplexities, out of which they should not be able to extricate themselves. He got four papers presented to the King, wherein he told him, that to torment so many persons upon his account was all in vain; that it was true, he had laid ambuscades for him, and that the principal Courtiers were his accomplices: He named in particular Pheroras, and his most intimate friends. He added, that Salome came secretly to him in the night, and, whether he would or no, would lie with him. That the whole Court wished for nothing more than the moment when they might see themselves delivered from that pain which they were continually kept in by his cruelties and perpetual apprehensions.

In the mean time, Archelaus King of Cappadocia, the Father-in-law of Alexander[n], being informed of all that passed at Herod's Court, came to Jerusalem, with intention to procure, if he could, a reconciliation between Herod and his Son-in-law. At first he pretended to be angry with Alexander, blamed very much his conduct, and commended the King's extremely. He said, that for his part he was ready to dissolve the marriage between Alexander and his Daughter Glaphyra, if he could discover that she had any share in the ill designs of her Husband. Herod seeing Archelaus so warmly to espouse his passion, began to relent, and re-assume the sentiments of a Father towards his Child. So that he first was for excusing his Son, and desiring Archelaus not to carry things to an extremity, nor to think of breaking off the marriage of his Daughter with Alexander.

In the Year of the World 3996 before J. C. 4 before the vulgar Æra 8.

Archelaus then began to justify the young Prince, and to throw the blame of all upon others, and chiefly upon Pheroras King Herod's Brother. And the King confess'd, that indeed he was the cause of all this mischief. Thus Alexander, by the prudent management of Archelaus, was restored to the good graces of his Father. The same Archelaus afterwards reconciled Pheroras with Herod, and so established peace throughout the whole Court.

But this calm was not of long duration. One Eurycles a Lacedæmonian, having insinuated himself into Herod's favour, gained also the confidence of Alexander; so that this young Prince opened his heart freely to him concerning the grounds of that discontent which he pretended to have against his Father[o]. Eurycles told every thing to the King, who began again to conceive violent suspicions against his Sons, to observe them narrowly, and hearken to every thing that was said against them. Alexander having received among his Guards two persons whom Herod had dismissed from his service, the King grew jealous of them, and ordered them to be tortured. They confessed that Alexander had sollicited them to kill the King, while he was hunting, with a pretence and shew of shooting at some wild beast: That they were told they might be safe, if they gave out that the King falling from his horse was run thro' with his own weapons. They declared likewise, that there was Gold concealed in Alexander's stables.

In the Year of the World 3998. before J. C. 2. before the vulgar Æra 6.

After this the Governour of Fort Alexandrium was taken into custody; he was accused of having promised Alexander and Aristobulus to receive them into his Fortress, and to deliver up the money belonging to the royal Treasury which was lodged there. The Governour suffered the rack with great resolution, and maintained that nothing was more false than his accusation. But his Son coming in, confessed all that they had a mind to, and produced even letters from Alexander, the purport whereof run thus: As soon as we have executed what we have designed, we shall come to you. Therefore be ready to receive us into your Castle, according to your promise. Herod having seen these letters, no longer doubted but his Sons had prepared an ambush for him. Alexander affirmed that he never wrote these letters, but that Diophantus had counterfeited his character. Herod was then at Jericho, and having produced those persons before an assembly of the People, who had been forced by the violence of torments to accuse his Sons, the people stoned them; and had done the same by Alexander and Aristobulus, if the King had not sent Pheroras and Ptolemy to prevent them.

Herod having confined the two Princes in different prisons, commanded them to set [n] Antiq. l. 16. c. 12.

[o] Joseph. Antiq. l. 16. c. 16.

set down the whole Conspiracy in writing. Alexander and Aristobulus wrote, that indeed they had desired to retire to the King of Cappadocia, but that they had in no sort conspired against their Father's life. That they should have been very glad if Tyrannus, one of their Accusers, had been examined more strictly, whom the people of Jericho, pushed on by the Emissaries of Antipater, had stoned. The King commanded Alexander to be brought in fetters, as he was, to the Princess Glaphyra his Wife, in order to know of her, if she were not an Accomplice with his Son in the evil designs which he had formed against him. The sight of her Husband in so melancholy a condition drew bitter outcries from her, which were followed with a torrent of tears: She protested that she was guilty of nothing; but that indeed, to free herself from the uneasinesses which she suffered, she had resolved to retire with her Husband to the King of Cappadocia her Father, and from thence to go to Rome. Herod wrote to Archelaus, complaining that he too was entred into the Conspiracy with his Sons, without giving him any intelligence of it; and at the same time wrote likewise to Augustus, accusing his Sons of plotting against his life, and designing to fly out of his dominions.

In the Year of the World 3998, before J. C. 2, before the vulgar Æra 6.

Augustus answered him, that if his Sons were convicted of having made any attempts upon his life, he might punish them as parricides; but if they were guilty only of shewing a desire to withdraw themselves, he should treat them with more gentleness: That therefore it was his advice to have a Council called at Berytus in Phœnicia, composed of his friends and Archelaus King of Cappadocia, in order to deliberate with them concerning what he should do about his Children. Herod therefore convened as many of his friends as he thought proper at Berytus[z]; but would not invite Archelaus thither, nor the two Princes Alexander and Aristobulus. He left them at Platane, a village of the Sidonians, not far from Berytus, that they might be near at hand, if it should be necessary for them to appear.

Herod came into the assembly, which consisted of an hundred and fifty persons, and began himself to accuse his Sons with great vehemence and passion; and after he had spoken in terms very unbecoming a Father, he said, that, not only Augustus had made him master of his Sons destiny, but that the very laws of the Jews declared that if a Son were accused by his Parents, and they put their hand upon his head, all who were present should stone him, and put him to death. He added, that tho' he might treat his Sons in this manner after the crimes whereof they stood convicted, yet he was willing to have their opinion, and expected that they would join with him in giving an example of that just severity to future generations, which ought to be exercised upon inhuman and unnatural Children. Deut. xxi. 18, 19, 20.

Saturninus, a Man of Consular Dignity, who was at the head of the Assembly, was for punishing Alexander and Aristobulus, but not with death. His three Sons who were present were of the same opinion: but Volumnius pronounced that they were worthy of death, and the majority gave their advice the same way; so that their death was resolved on by a plurality of voices. Herod therefore carried them to Tyre, and Nicholas of Damascus being just arrived there from Rome, the King asked, what his friends thought of his Sons? Nicholas answered, that the generality was of opinion they ought to be imprisoned, till he might with more leisure take his final resolution. Herod was a long time thoughtful, and at last determined to carry them to Cæsarea.

The whole City was in great expectation to see what course Herod would take in this juncture. Every one pitied the two Princes, but no one dared to speak plainly, for fear of incurring the King's displeasure. One of Herod's old Soldiers, who had a Son called Tyro *, of the same age with Alexander, having ventured to take the liberty of making some pretty sharp remonstrances to the King upon this matter, and telling him that the Officers and Soldiers, and the whole Body of the People were moved with compassion for the young Princes, and pitied their sad fate; the King losing all patience, commanded the Soldier and his Son to be seized, and all besides whom he had named; and having put the old Soldier and his Son to the torture, the old Man declared that he had made a resolution to kill the King, and to expose himself, for the love of Alexander, to all sorts of punishments. The King, after this, thought of nothing more than of executing the project which he had formed, of dispatching his Sons. He sent them to Sebasta, otherwise Samaria, and there ordered them to be strangled. Their bodies were carried to the Castle of Alexandrium, where their Ancestors of the Mother's side had generally been buried. Thus died Alexander and Aristobulus, the Sons of Herod the Great and Mariamne, in the year of the world [z] Antiq. l. 16. c. 17.

* The Father, not the Son, is called by Josephus, Teron, or, as our Author has it, Tyro. Εἰ δή αὐτῷ πάλαι στρατιώτης ὄνομα Τήρων, ἔχων υἱὸν καθ' ἡλικίαν ὄντα Ἀλεξάνδρῳ φίλον, &c. Antiq. l. xvi. c. xi.

world 3999, one year before the birth of J. C. and four before the vulgar Æra.

Josepins relates, that Glaphyra, Alexander's Wife, having been sent back by Herod to her Father Archelaus, married for her second Husband Juba King of Mauritania; and that afterwards she married Archelaus Brother to Alexander her first Husband. This last appeared one night to Glaphyra, and reproached her with the little love she had for him, since not contented with a second marriage, she had contracted a third with his Brother Archelaus. For this reason, added he, I am determined to shew you, that my affection is more constant than yours; and for a proof that I have not forgotten you, within five days I will take you once more to my self, and deliver you from the infamy in which you now live. Accordingly Glaphyra died at the end of five days[s].

VIII. ALEXANDER a Jewish Impostor of the City of Sidon, who so much resembled Alexander the Son of Herod and Mariamne, of whom we have been speaking, that all who had ever been acquainted with him were persuaded that this was really he[t]. He gave out, that his Brother Aristobulus and he had been delivered from death by the kindness of a friend, who had placed others in their room at the time when they were to have been executed. He came into the Isle of Crete, where all the Jews owned him to be the Son of Herod, and furnished him with money to provide an equipage, and make a journey to Rome. He landed at Puzzuolo, where the Jews received him with honour. Herod's friends, and they who had known Alexander most particularly, were deceived by the great resemblance which he bore to him, so that the Jews of Rome came in crowds to meet him; and he entred the City with a train that might become a King.

Augustus was the only one who was not deluded; the air of this Man, and his hands, which had been hardened by labour, discovered to him that he was an Impostor. He first of all asked him what was become of his Brother Aristobulus, and why he did not come to Rome, to share either in his good or bad fortune. He answered, that he was in the Isle of Cyprus; that he was left behind there, because they would not both expose themselves to the dangers of the sea; and that if any misfortune should befall one of them, the other might be preserved. Augustus putting on a serious air, took this young Man aside, and said to him, If you will declare the truth to me, I promise to dismiss you without taking away your life. Tell me then who you are, and who has engaged you to play the counterfeit in this manner; for you are not of an age to form an intrigue of this nature of your self. The young Man being unable to persist longer in this falshood before the Emperor, confessed the whole cheat to him; and Augustus, not to violate the promise he had made, sent him to the Gallies, because he was a corpulent and robust Fellow; and put the person to death who had persuaded him to act this part. This happened some time after the death of Herod, in the year of the world 4001, of J. C. 1. and three years before the vulgar Æra.

IX. ALEXANDER, the Son of Phasael and Salampso, Herod's Sister. Joseph. Antiq. l. 17. c. 7. p. 628. a.

X. ALEXANDER, the Son of Alexander the Son of Herod, and Glaphyra Daughter to the King of Cappadocia. Joseph. Antiq. l. 17. c. 17. p. 628. e.

XI. ALEXANDER, the Son of Tigranes, and Grandson of Alexander who was put to death by Herod. He married Jotape the Daughter of Antiochus King of Comagena. Joseph. Antiq. l. 17. c. 7.

XII. ALEXANDER, a Jew of Cyrene, was accused by Ruffians before Catulus Governour of this Province, and by him put to death[u], about the year of J. C. 73.

XIII. ALEXANDER, the Son of Simon the Cyrenian, and Brother of Rufus, who assisted our Saviour in carrying his Cross, as he was going to Mount Calvary.

XIV. ALEXANDER LYSIMACHUS, Alabarch of Alexandria, and Brother to Philo the Jew. Some believe that this was he who was in company with the Priests, when the Apostles were carried before the Senate to give an account of their doctrine and conduct. This Alexander was the Acts iv. 6. wealthiest Jew of his time. He made In the rich presents to the Temple, and was the year of Father of Tiberius Alexander, who re- J. C. 34.
nounced the Religion of the Jews, and turned Pagan[x]. Alexander Lysimachus had the management of the Empress Antonia's affairs. Caligula put him in prison; and he was not set at liberty till the reign of Claudius, Caligula's Successor[y].

XV. ALEXANDER, a Jew of Ephesus, who addressed himself to the Rabble that had mutinied against St. Paul, and endeavoured to appease them. But when he Acts xix.
appeared in the Assembly, and was known 33.
to be a Jew, the Ephesians began to cry In the year of more loudly, Great is the Diana of the E- J. C. 57.
phesians. It is not known whether this Alexander were for or against S. Paul, whether he were a Jew, or a Jew converted to Christianity.

XVI. ALEXANDER, an Artificer in Copper, spoken of by St. Paul to Timothy. 1 Tim. i.
The 19, 20.

[s] Joseph. Antiq. l. 17. c. 15. [t] Joseph. Antiq. l. 17. c. 14. [u] Joseph. de Bello, l. 7. c. 38.
[x] Joseph. Antiq. l. 20. c. 3. [y] Antiq. l. 19. c. 4.

The holy Apostle excommunicated him and Hymenæus, because they had blasphemed against the truth.

I. ALEXANDRA, otherwise Salome, (for Salome in Hebrew[w] signifies much the same thing as Alexandra in Greek; and in like manner Alexandra is in Greek the same as Salome in Hebrew. In the latter times of the Hebrew Commonwealth, almost all the Jews had two names; one Greek, the other Hebrew or Syriac.) Alexandra was first of all Wife to Aristobulus, sirnamed Philellen, or a friend to the Greeks, by whom she had no Children. She afterwards married Alexander Jannæus, Brother to Aristobulus her first Husband, and of whom we have spoken at large under the Article of ALEXANDER JANNÆUS. She lived seven and twenty years with this second Husband; and when she saw him ready to expire before the Castle of Ragaba, which he was then besieging, she represented to him the sad condition which she and her Children would be left in, because the Jews had always, and almost unanimously, opposed him[x].

Alexander answered her, that in the first place she should conceal his death from the Soldiers, till Ragaba was taken; secondly, that when she came to Jerusalem she should send for the principal Pharisees, whose power was very great among the Jews, whether they had a mind to make those odious whom they hated, or to recommend them to the esteem and friendship of the people. When therefore they are come, says he, shew them my body, and tell them that you leave it absolutely to their disposal; that they may throw it into the common Sewer, if they please, without burial, and abuse it every way that they can think on, in revenge for the little consideration I have had for them. You must add, that you resolve to do nothing without their approbation and advice, in the government of the Kingdom. If you behave yourself in this manner, you may assure your self that they will perform all funeral honours for me, in a more splendid manner than you would do your self, and that they will be so pleased with the deference you will pay them, as to let you govern in peace.

In the year of the World 3926 before J. C. 74 before the vulgar Æra 78.

Alexandra followed the advice her Husband gave her[y], and the Pharisees, who were won by these marks of respect which the Queen shewed them, began publickly to praise the King as a Prince who had governed with great justice; that he deserved all imaginable honours from the People, and to have his funeral performed in the most magnificent manner. The people were easily perswaded to be of the Pharisees opinion, and never was any Prince buried in a more pompous manner than King Alexander Jannæus. This Prince, when he died, left two Sons, Hircanus and Aristobulus, and gave the Regency of the Kingdom to the Queen Alexandra. Thus she governed peaceably and happily; because she always seemed to disapprove whatever her Husband had done against the People. As for the rest, she had no more properly than the title of Queen, the Pharisees in reality governing in her name. Some affairs of consequence notwithstanding she would undertake without their direction, and kept a good number of Soldiers in her pay, so that she was formidable to all her neighbours, and obliged them to give her Hostages.

Under her government the whole Country enjoyed peace; no enemy from abroad disturbed the tranquillity of the People. The Pharisees were the only persons that caused any disturbance, by demanding of the Queen that she would revenge the death of eight hundred Men, who had been crucified by King Alexander Jannæus, and would deliver up those who had promoted this act of inhumanity. They first of all ordered one Diogenes to be dispatched, and after him another; so that none of Alexander's friends could be secure of their lives. At last the principal Persons about Court, and they who had served in the late King's armies, came to the Palace with Aristobulus at their head, and shewing sufficiently by their air that what had passed was no way agreeable to them, they demanded of the Queen, that if there was no consideration to be had for their old services, she would at least permit them to retire, and to secure their lives from the vexations of the Pharisees.

In the Year of the World 3933 before J. C. 67 before the vulgar Æra 71.

Aristobulus, the Son of Alexandra, expressed his dissatisfaction more than all the rest, and spoke to his Mother with a great deal of vehemence. The Queen not knowing what else to resolve on, distributed these old Officers in the several Fortresses of the Country, but put none of them into the Castles of Hircanium, Alexandrium, and Macherus, whither she had removed every thing valuable that she had.

In the Year of the World 3934 before J. C. 66, before the vulgar Æra 70.

Some time after Alexandra sent her Son Aristobulus towards Damascus, with troops against Ptolemy Mennæus, who very much incommoded this City. But Aristobulus returned without having done any thing that was memorable. After this, Tigranes coming to besiege Ptolemais, Alexandra sent Ambassadors to him with great presents, desiring him not to undertake any thing against her dominions. Tigranes received the Ambassadors very well, promised to have regard to the Queen's w שלמה pacifica, felix. x Ἀλεξάνδρα may signify one who assists men, or one who protects them against the violence of other men. x Antiq. l. xiii. c. 23. y Ibid. c. 24.

Queen's requeſt, and was ſoon after obliged to return into Armenia to oppoſe Lucullus, who was ravaging it.

At laſt Queen Alexandra falling dangerouſly ill, Ariſtobulus her Son thought it not convenient to defer any longer the execution of a deſign which he had formed a great while ſince. He went out by night, attended only with one Servant, and viſited all the Caſtles where his Father's friends commanded, in order to make himſelf Maſter of them, and prevent the Phariſees, leſt they ſhould ſeize upon the Government. The next day, as ſoon as it was light, and it was known that Ariſtobulus was abſent, the Queen ſuſpected that he was gone upon ſome enterprize, and was confirmed in her opinion, when Couriers came one after another, to inform her that the Fortreſſes had for the moſt part ſurrendred one after another to Ariſtobulus.

This news threw her into great conſternation; orders were given for ſeizing the Wife and Children of Ariſtobulus, whom he had left at Jeruſalem, and they were kept in the Fortreſs which was adjoining to the Temple. In the mean time Ariſtobulus immediately got poſſeſſion of two and twenty places of ſtrength, and ſaw himſelf ſoon at the head of a great number of Troops which came in voluntarily to ſerve him. Hircanus his Brother, and the principal perſons of the Nation, came to the Queen, and deſired her to put things into ſome order; but her indiſpoſition would no longer give her leave to think of war. She died ſoon after, at the age of ſeventy three, after ſhe had been nine years Regent. In the year of the World 3935. before J. C. 65. before the vulgar Æra 69.

II. Alexandra, the Daughter of Ariſtobulus, and Wife of Philippion [a], the Son of Ptolemy Mennæus, Prince of Chalcis, a Province ſituated between Libanus and Antilibanus. Ptolemy himſelf falling in love with Alexandra, killed Philippion, and married his Widow.

III. Alexandra, Daughter of the High-Prieſt Hircanus, and Wife to Alexander the Son of Ariſtobulus, which Ariſtobulus was Brother to the High Prieſt Hircanus, and the Son of Alexander Jannæus, King of the Jews. The Alexandra of whom we are ſpeaking, was the Mother of Mariamne, Herod the Great's Wife, and of Ariſtobulus who was inveſted with the High-Prieſthood, but enjoyed it a year only, Herod having procured him to be drowned in a bath at Jericho [b].

Herod having put to death the High-Prieſt Hircanus, ſent for a Prieſt called Ananel, from Babylon, on whom he conferr'd the High-Prieſthood. Alexandra was ſo provoked at it, that ſhe wrote to Cleopatra, the Wife or Miſtreſs of Antony, whom ſhe intreated to aſk of Antony the Pontificate for her Son Ariſtobulus, Brother to Mariamne, and Grandſon to Hircanus [c]. Antony having heard much of Mariamne's extreme beauty, and of Ariſtobulus, deſired Herod by letter to ſend Ariſtobulus to him. Herod excuſed himſelf, and being over-powered by the ſollicitations of his Wife Mariamne, he gave the High-Prieſthood to Ariſtobulus his Brother-in-law; but, as we have ſaid, he knew well how to get rid of him very ſoon; in the mean while he complained mightily of Alexandra, who had addreſſed her ſelf to Antony for this favour. He commanded her to continue in the Palace, and not to intermeddle in affairs of any kind. The King had her narrowly obſerved, ſo that ſhe could neither do nor ſay any thing, but what was immediately reported to him.

In the year of the World 3968. before J. C. 32. before the vulgar Æra 36.

Alexandra inraged to ſee herſelf reduced thus to a kind of Captivity, wrote to Cleopatra, and complain'd of it [d]. Cleopatra ſent her word, that ſhe ſhould endeavour by all means to retire with her Son Ariſtobulus into Egypt; and that ſhe would very readily receive them. Alexandra therefore took care to have two Biers or Coffins provided, one for her ſelf, the other for her Son; ſhe gave orders for the carrying theſe two Coffins to a Veſſel which waited for them at ſea. But one of Alexandra's Slaves diſcovered this intrigue to Herod, who gave directions for ſeizing both her and her Son, at the very inſtant when they were conveying them away in the manner which ſhe had projected. However, he did not treat her ill on this account, apprehending the reſentment of Cleopatra, and that ſhe might in return do him ſome ill office with Mark Antony.

In the year of the World 3969. before J. C. 31. before the vulgar Æra 35.

After that Herod had procured the death of Ariſtobulus, Alexandra's Son, this Princeſs pretended to believe, that it was purely accidental, waiting in the mean while for a fair opportunity of taking her revenge [e]. She wrote an account to Cleopatra of what had paſſed, and the danger ſhe was in every day of loſing her life. Cleopatra was touched with her misfortune, and never ceaſed importuning Antony to revenge the death of this young Prince, till ſhe had prevailed with him to ſend to Herod, and order him to appear before him, and clear himſelf of the crime he was accuſed of. Herod went, but ſo wrought upon Antony by his preſents, that he wou'd no longer hearken to Cleopatra, and declared, that Herod being King of the Jews, was accountable to no man for his actions.

In the year of the World 3970. before J. C. 30. before the vulgar Æra 34.

In

[a] Antiq. l. 14. c. 15. [b] Ibid. l. 15. c. 3. [c] Ibid. c. 2. [d] Ibid. c. 3. [e] Ibid. c. 4.

In the mean time a report was ſpread, that Antony had put Herod to death; whereupon Alexandra ſollicited Joſeph, Herod's Uncle, who governed in the abſence of this Prince, that ſhe and Mariamne might be carried to the Roman Legions, that if any diſturbance ſhould happen, they might be ſecure. But this deſign was not executed, becauſe they received letters at the ſame time from Herod, which contradicted the rumour that had gone abroad. And when this Prince returned to Jeruſalem, being informed of all that had paſſed by his Siſter Salome, he ordered Alexandra to be cloſe confined, and put in fetters.

In the Year of the World 3976. before J. C. 24. before the vulg. Æra 28.

Herod having put to death Mariamne, for reaſons which will be mentioned in another place, her Mother Alexandra fearing the ſame fate[f], pretended to condemn her Daughter's conduct, and to approve of her death. When ſhe was led to the place of execution, Alexandra loaded her with abuſive language, and would have flown at her and torn her hair; which all who were ſpectators of her behaviour looked upon as inſtances of folly and baſeneſs that deſerved contempt. The grief which Herod conceived at the death of Mariamne was the cauſe of an indiſpoſition that had reduced him very low; and Alexandra thinking he was at the laſt extremities, ſollicited the Governours of the two Forts in Jeruſalem to put them both into her hands, and ſecure them for Herod's Children by Mariamne, to prevent others, if the King ſhould die, from getting them into their poſſeſſion. The Governours, who did not love Alexandra, gave immediate intelligence to Herod of what was doing; and he, without any delay, gave orders for diſpatching her, which were as ſoon executed; in the year of the World 3976. before J. C. 24. before the vulgar Æra 28.

IV. ALEXANDRA, the Daughter of Phaſael, Herod the Great's Brother. She married Timias, one of the moſt powerful Men in the Iſle of Cyprus, and died without Children[g].

ALEXANDRIA, a celebrated City in Egypt, built by Alexander the Great, in the year of the World 3673. before J. C. 327. or 331 before the vulgar Æra. It is ſituated between the Mediterranean and the Lake Mæris[h]. There was before a village called Rachotis, at the neareſt place to this port. Dinocrates the celebrated Architect drew the plan of it, and gave the dimenſions of it. The City of Alexandria is pretty often to be met with in the Latin text of thoſe books of the Old Teſtament which were written before the reign of Alexander. But this name is no where in the original Hebrew; we read there of No-Ammon *, which is probably the City of Dioſpolis in the Delta, between Buſiris to the South, and Mendeſa to the North.

Nahum iii. 8. Jer. xlv. 25. Ezek. xxx. 14, 15, 16.

The Arabians inform us that Alexandria was called Caiſſoun, before Alexander the Great rebuilt or enlarged it[i]. Dinocrates who prepared the plan of it, was the ſame Architect who rebuilt the Temple of Diana of Epheſus, which had been burnt by Eroſtratus. He had the direction of the work of this new City; but that it might be carried on with more diligence, Alexander appointed Cleomenes, one of his Captains, to be the Surveyor[k]. Cleomenes was of Naucratis in Egypt. Juſtin calls him the founder of Alexandria, as having contributed a great deal to the improvement of it[l]. Aridæus, Alexander's Brother, was charged with the care of carrying the body of this Prince from Babylon to Alexandria. He employed two years in making preparations for the removal of it, the pomp whereof is deſcribed to us by Diodorus Siculus. There had been a prophecy current, intimating that the place where Alexander ſhould be buried ſhould be proſperous and flouriſhing: The Governours therefore of the ſeveral Towns and Provinces diſputed among themſelves who ſhould have the honour and advantage of poſſeſſing his Body. There was a propoſal for the conveying it to Aigui in Macedonia, where generally the Kings of this Country were buried; but Egypt carried it. His body therefore was depoſited firſt of all at Memphis, and afterwards was removed to Alexandria. It is ſaid[m] to have been laid in a coffin of gold, and to have been embalmed in honey.

Alexandria belonged ſucceſſively to the Greeks and Romans, then to the Greeks again, till it fell under the dominion of the Arabians, while Omar III. Mahomet's Succeſſor was Caliph. The happy ſituation of this City between the Mediterranean and the Red Sea, and upon the river Nile, drew thither the Commerce of the Eaſt and Weſt, and made it in a very little time one of the moſt flouriſhing Cities in the world. When the Arabians took it, there were four thouſand Palaces ſtill ſtanding in it[n], four thouſand Bagnios, forty thouſand Jews paying tribute, four hundred ſquares, and twelve thouſand perſons who ſold herbs and fruits. This City, [f] Joſeph. Antiq. l. 15. c. 11. [g] Ibid. l. 18. c. 7. [h] Arrian. l. 3. Strabo l. 17. Pauſan. in Eliacis. [i] D'Herbelot. Bibl. Orient. p. 320. [k] Arrian. Quint. Curt. &c. [l] Juſtin l. 13. c. 4. [m] Said Sil. Batrik. [n] Bibl. Orient. p. 320.

* See a particular account of this place, and a deſcription of the Delta, under their reſpective Articles in this Dictionary.

City, which was formerly so rich and powerful, is no more than a village without any thing remarkable in it besides its ruins, and the remains of its past grandeur [n]. The Egyptians or Kopts call it generally Rachot, this being, as we have observed, the name of the old village in the room whereof it was built. See hereafter the titles NO-AMMON and THEBES.

The Christians still at this day reverence the Churches of Alexandria dedicated to St. Mark and St. Catherine; one is celebrated for the tomb of this Evangelist, whose body was carried away by the Venetians. There is a picture in it which, according to the tradition of the Kopts, who are the possessors of this Church, was painted by St. Luke. It represents the Archangel St. Michael, at a little more than half his length, with a sword in his hand. The other Church is famous for the martyrdom of St. Catherine, which she suffer'd for the sake of Jesus Christ in the reign of Maximian.

Another thing considerable there is, the remains of Cleopatra's magnificent Palace, and without the City Pompey's Pillar is very much admired, the shaft whereof is six fathoms high, all of one piece, of admirable Granite [o]. It is the finest column that is any where to be seen.

After the death of Alexander the Great, Ptolemy, firnamed Soter, who had been Captain of the guards to this Emperor, had his bones conveyed to Alexandria, and made this City the capital of his Kingdom. The Ptolemy's his successors reigned there for two hundred and ninety three years. The Commonwealth of the Jews had great correspondence with the Kings of Egypt, who succeeded Alexander, and reigned in Alexandria. Here is a list of these Princes.

Alexander the Great died in the year of the world 3681, before J.C. 319, before the vulgar Æra 323.

Ptolemy, the Son of Lagus, firnamed Soter, reigned thirty nine years, and died in 3720.

Ptolemy Philadelphus reigned thirty nine years, and died in 3758.

Ptolemy Euergetes reigned twenty five years, and died in 3783.

Ptolemy Philopator reigned seventeen years, and died in 3800.

Ptolemy Epiphanes reigned twenty four years, and died in 3824.

Ptolemy Philometor reigned thirty seven years, and died in 3861.

Ptolemy Euergetes or Physcon, reigned fifty three years, part with his Brother Philometer, part alone. He died in 3888.

Ptolemy Lathyrus reigned thirty six years six months. He died in 3913.

Cleopatra, the Daughter of Lathyrus, and Wife of Alexander I. reigned six months.

Alexander I. the Nephew of Lathyrus, was established in 3924, and died in 3943. See Usher under the year 3924.

Alexander II. the Son of Alexander I. was dispossess'd by the Alexandrians in 3939.

Ptolemy Nothus, or Auletes, the Son of Lathyrus, reigned thirteen years, and died in 3953.

Ptolemy, firnamed Dionysius or Bacchus, reigned three years eight months, and died in 3757.

Cleopatra reigned from 3957, and killed herself in 3974. The City of Alexandria * received the light of the Gospel, by the ministry of St. Mark, the Disciple of St. Peter, about the year of J. C. 59 or 60. He suffer'd martyrdom there towards the year 68, and was succeeded by Anian, whom he had converted in his first voyage to this City.

ALEXANDRIUM, a Castle built by Alexander Jannæus, King of the Jews, upon the top of a Mountain near Corea [p]. We do not know distinctly where Corea was, but we know that it was the principal City of Judæa, on the side of Samaria, in the way to Jericho, towards the frontiers of Ephraim and Benjamin [q]. Gabinius demolished the Castle of Alexandrium [r], but Herod rebuilt it [s]. The Princes of Alexander Jannæus's family were for the most part buried there. Thither Herod order'd the bodies of his Sons Alexander and Aristobulus to be carried, who had been put to death by his directions at Sebaste, otherwise called Samaria [t].

ALEXAS, the third Husband of Salome, Sister to Herod the Great. Alexas and Salome were the Persons to whom Herod the Great sent orders for executing those Jews of the first rank whom he had confin'd in the Hippodrom at Jericho, as soon as he expired; that all Judæa being afflicted at the death of so many Persons of quality, might appear at least to be then mourning for their King. But Alexas, instead of obeying such cruel orders, set them all at liberty as soon as the King's eyes were closed; whereby he procured the esteem and friendship of all the Jews [u], in the year of the World 4000, of J. C. 1, before the vulgar Æra 5.

ALIAN,

[n] Thevenot. p. 1. l. 2. c. 1, 2. [o] Granite is a stone which some pretend the Ancients had the secret of dissolving. [p] Antiq. l. xiii. c. 24. xvi. 2. xiv. 6 & 10. [q] See Joseph. l. 5. de Bello, c. 4. & Antiq. l. 14. c. 6. [r] Antiq. l. 14. c. 10. [s] Ibid. l. 14. c. 27. [t] Ibid. l. 16. c. ult. [u] Ibid. l. 17. c. 10.

* The Jews were very numerous in this City; here they had several fine Synagogues, and were permitted to have a particular Magistrate of their own nation, to decide matters in dispute among them, according to their own laws. The Alexandrian Jews had likewise a Synagogue at Jerusalem, where there was an Academy for the instruction of their youth in the Law and Hebrew language: And the History of the Acts informs us, that the Jews of this Synagogue were some of the warmest opposers of St. Stephen.

ALIAN, the eldest Son of Shobal, the Son of Seir, 1 Chr. i. 40.

ALLEGORY, is a figure in discourse which we are then said to use when we make the terms which are peculiar to one thing to signify another. It is a Metaphor continued and pursued: For example, when the Prophets represent the Jews under the Allegory of a Vine, planted, cultivated and watered by the hand of God, and which instead of producing good fruit, brings forth verjuice or sour grapes; and so of others.

Allegories * are very frequent in Scripture, as well as Metaphors, Parables, Similitudes, and Comparisons. The Jews, says St. Jerom [w], and in general the People of Syria and Palestine, were fond of this sort of figurative discourse, and made use of it in almost every thing they said. One principal business of a Commentator is, to distinguish between the allegorical and literal meaning of any passage, and to reduce the allegorical to the literal sense. The antient Jews, as the Therapeutæ [x], the author of the book of Wisdom [y], Josephus [z], and Philo [a], and in imitation of them, the generality of the old Fathers, turned even the historical passages of the Scripture into Allegories, and such places where the literal sense is most clear. These allegorical explanations may edify indeed, but they are good for little else: They cannot regularly be produced as proofs of any thing, unless where Jesus Christ or his Apostles have made use of them as such. See hereafter this title, the Sense of Scripture.

הללו־יה, Hallelu-iah. ALLELUIA, or Hallelu-iah, that is say, praise the Lord. This word is to be met with, either at the beginning or the end of some Psalms [b]. Alleluia was sung upon solemn days of rejoicing. Per vicos ejus (Jerusalem) alleluia cantabitur, says
Tob. xiii. 12. Tobit, speaking of the rebuilding of Jerusalem. St. John in the Revelations says,
Rev. xix. 1, 3, 4, 6. that he heard a great voice of much people in Heaven, who said Alleluia; and the four and twenty Elders and the four beasts fell down and worshipped God that sat on the throne, saying Alleluia.

This hymn of joy and praises was transferr'd from the Synagogue to the Church. At the Funeral of Fabiola several Psalms were sung with loud Alleluia's, says St. Jerom [c]. The Monks of Palestine were awaken'd at their midnight watchings with the singing of Alleluia's [d]. So much energy has been observ'd in this term, that it has been thought proper to preserve it, without translating it either into Greek or Latin, for fear of impairing the genius and softness of it. The Church has for many ages prohibited the use of it in times of penance, and in the ceremonies of mourning. It is not repeated in Lent, nor in the obsequies of the dead. Notwithstanding in the mass for the dead, according to the Mosarabick ritual, at the Introit they sing, Tu es portio mea, Domine, alleluia; in terra viventium, alleluia, alleluia. In the life of S. Radegonde it is said, that at her Funeral solemnities, instead of Alleluia nothing was heard but sighs, which intimates that Alleluia was sometimes used on these occasions, as we see above at the Funeral of Fabiola; but in matters of discipline and mere custom, such as this is, ceremonies never have been uniform and universal.

ALLON, of the Tribe of Simeon, the Son of Jedaiah, and the Father of Shiphi. 1 Chr. iv. 37.

ALLOPHYLI, is a Greek term, which signifies properly Strangers; but it is generally taken in the Old Testament to signify Philistines. Ἀλλόφυλοι פלשתים, Philistiim.

ALLUSH, or Alush. The Israelites being in the Wilderness of Shur, departed from Dophkah, and went to Allush: From thence Numb. xxxiii. 13. they proceeded to Rephidim. In the book of Judith Chellus or Chalus, and Kades, Judith i. 9. in Græco. are set down as two places pretty near each other. Eusebius and St. Jerom fix Allush in Idumea, towards the Country about Gabala, that is to say, about Petra, the capital of Arabia Petræa; for according to Eusebius and St. Jerom, the Gabalene is near Petra [e]. Allush is called likewise Eluza or Chaluza. In the accounts of the Empire, it is situated in the third Palestine, and by Ptolemy among the Cities of Idumæa. The Jerusalem Targum upon Genesis xxv. 18. and upon Exodus xvi. 22. translates the desart of Seir by Allush.

ALMAH. This Hebrew word signifies properly a Virgin, a young Person unacquainted with Man, one who is not married. עלמה, Halma. In this sense we meet with it in the famous passage of Isaiah; the words whereof are these, Behold a Virgin shall conceive and bear a Son. Isaiah vii. 14. The Hebrews have no term that more properly signifies a Virgin than Almah; but it must be confessed without [w] Hieronym. in Matth. xviii. [x] Philo de vita contemplativa, p. 901. [y] Wisd. xviii. 24. & alibi sæpius. [z] Joseph. Procemio in lib. Antiquit. ad finem. [a] Photius Cod. 105. [b] See St. Jerom, or the Author printed under his name, upon Psalm cv. [c] Hieronym. in obit. Fabiolæ. [d] Idem in Epitaphio Paulæ. [e] Euseb. & Hieron. in onomastico, voce Idumæa, & in Masaris, & in Allud vel Allus.

* The old Philosophers and Poets were used to explain things generally in an allegorical way: Pythagoras instructed his Disciples in this symbolical manner, believing it to be the most proper method of explaining Religion, and that it was an help to Memory. Euclid of Megara did indeed forbid the use of Allegories and Emblems, as fit only to render things obscure: And Socrates taught in a manner the most natural and simple, excepting those Ironies which he sometimes interspersed in his Discourses. But the Philosophers for the most part were excessively fond of Allegories and mystical Theology, and the Christian Writers of the most early Ages in this particular too much resemble them.

without lessening however the certainty of Isaiah's Prophecy, that sometimes by mistake any young woman whatsoever, whether a Virgin or not, is called Almah[f]. In like manner in Latin the name of Virgo is sometimes given to a young woman who has not her virginity. See our Dissertation before the Prophecy of Isaiah upon this passage of the Prophet, Ecce virgo, &c. vii. 14. St. Jerom in his Comment on it remarks, that the Prophet declined making use of the word Bethulah, which signifies a young Woman or young Person, but employed the term Alma, which denotes a Virgin who was never seen by Man. This is the proper signification of the word Alma[g], which is derived from a root that signifies to conceal. It is very well known that young Women in the East do not appear in publick, but are shut up in their houses, and their Mothers apartment, like Nuns[h]. The Chaldee Paraphrast and the Septuagint[i] translate Alma Virgin; Akiba[k] the famous Rabbin, a great enemy to Christ and Christians, who lived in the second Century, understands it thus. The Apostles and Evangelists, and the Jews of our Saviour's time, explained it in the same sense, and expected a Messiah born of a Virgin. Mahomet and all his followers acknowledge the Virginity of the blessed Mother of our Lord.

ALMON, a City belonging to the Tribe of Benjamin, Josh. xxi. 18. It is probably the same as Alemeth, whereof we have already said something. It was given to the Priests of Aaron's family, 1 Chr. vi. 60.

ALMOND-TREE, a sort of tree whereof there is often mention in the Scripture. The Hebrews call it Shaked, from a root, which signifies to watch, because the Almond tree is one of the first trees that blossoms in the Spring. The Lord intending to declare to Jeremiah that he was ready to display his wrath against his People, shewed him the branch of an Almond tree: Quid tu vides Jeremia? virgam vigilantem ego video. Instead of virgam vigilantem, the Hebrew reads, a rod of an Almond tree.

(Margin: שקד Amygdalus. — Jer. i. 11.)

Aaron's Rod, which bore blossoms and fruit in the Wilderness, was also of the wood of the an Almond tree. The Author of Ecclesiastes, expressing in an enigmatical manner, that an old Man's hair will grow white, says, that the Almond-tree shall flourish. This tree blows white and very early. It is said in Genesis, that Jacob fixed rods of the Almond-tree before the places where his flocks came to drink: But the Hebrew instead of Almond-tree signifies Hazel, Luz.

(Margin: Numb. xvii. 8. — Eccl. xii. 5. — Genes. xxx. 37. לוז Luz.)

ALMUGIM, a certain kind of wood mentioned in the first book of Kings, Ch. x. 11. which in the Vulgate[l] is translated ligna thyina, and in the Septuagint wrought wood. The Rabbins generally render it Coral, others Ebony, Brazil, or Pine. It certainly is not Coral, for Coral is not proper to make musical instruments of, nor to be used in rails, or in a staircase, which were the uses that the Scripture tells us this wood Almugim was put to. The Pine-tree is too common in Judæa and the neighbouring country to go in search for it as far as Ophir. The word Thyinum is that of the Citron-tree, known to the Ancients, and very much esteemed for its sweet odour and great beauty[m]. It came from Mauritania.

We are of opinion that by the word Almugim or Algumim, or simply Gummim, taking al for a kind of article, may be understood oily and gummy sorts of wood, and particularly the tree which produces Gum Ammoniac or Gum Arabic. It is said that the Gum Ammoniac proceeds from a tree resembling that which bears Myrrh; and that the Gum of Arabia comes from the black Acacia, which we take to be the same as the Shittim wood, whereof there is such frequent mention in Moses. If this were so, Solomon's Almugim and Moses's Shittim would be the same wood. See our Comment upon 1 Kings x. 11. and what we have to say on the article SHITTIM.

ALOES, a sort of tree which comes from the Indies, of about eight or ten foot high. At the head of it is a large bunch of leaves, which are thick and indented, broad at bottom, but growing narrower toward the point, and about four foot in length. The blossom of it is red intermixed with yellow, and double like a pink. From this blossom comes fruit, round like a large pea, white and red. The juice of these leaves is drawn out by cutting them with a knife, and so receiving it in bottles.

The Eastern Geographers all tell us, that the wood of Aloes, the smell whereof is exquisite, is to be found only in those Provinces of the Indies which are comprehended in the first climate; that the most excellent of all is that which grows in the isle of Senf, situated in the Indian sea, in the way to China[n]: Others are of opinion that the wood of Aloes which is produced in the isle of Comar, or at Cape Comorin, is the best of all; and that it was was of this a certain King of India, made a present weighing ten quintals, to Noufchirwan, and that as it was applied to the fire, it melted and burnt like wax. A great deal of this wood is brought likewise from the islands of Sumatra and Ceilan. So much for the wood of Aloes.

[f] See Prov. xxx. 19. Viam viri in adolescentula. Heb. בעלמה [g] Hieronym. in Isai. Ergo Alma non solum puella, sed cum Ἐπιτάσει, virgo abscondita & secreta quæ nunquam virorum patuerit aspectibus. [h] Vide Philon. l. contra Flac. & de speial. leg. [i] עלמה ἡ παρθένος. [k] In Gemar. [l] אלמגים Almugim, 2 Chr. xi. 7. אלגומים Algumim. LXX. Ξύλα πεύκινα, vulg. Ligna pinea 3 Reg. x. 11. Ξύλα πελεκητά. LXX. Ligna dolata. [m] Plin. l. 13. c. 16. [n] Bibl. Orient. p 913.

Some Interpreters are of opinion that (Numb. xxiv. 6.) the Hebrew Ahalim signifies the Aloes-tree. The Vulgate reads, Ut tabernacula quæ fixit Dominus, as the tents which the Lord hath spread; but the Hebrew may be translated thus; As the Ahalims which the Lord hath planted. (כאהלים נטה יהוה) The Septuagint and St. Jerom sometimes translate Ahalim Stacte or Aloe; but as the Aloes taken for a tree is not common in Arabia, or the neighbouring countries, others translate Ahalim Santal; but the Santal-tree was unknown to the Antients, and the Moderns who speak of it say it comes from the Indies. The Aloes of Syria, Rhodes, and Candia, called Aspalathus, is known to be a shrub full of thorns, the wood whereof is made use of by Perfumers, after they have taken off the bark, to give a consistency to their perfumes, which without it would be too liquid. See Prov. vii. 17. and Cant. iv. 14. for the signification of Ahalim.

2. Aloes, consider'd as a Plant or Herb, is a Plant, the leaves whereof are about two inches thick, prickly and chamfer'd; in the middle there rises a stem, wherein there is a white kernel, extremely light, and almost round. There are Aloes to be found at present in several places in France. There is a very bitter juice extracted out of this Plant, which preserves dead bodies from putrefaction. They say, but this is mere fable, that Aloes never flowers but once in a hundred years, and that as its flower opens it makes a great noise. There have been several seen blowing in the Royal Garden at Paris, and without making any sensible noise. It is very probable that this Plant is the only true Aloes, for what is said of the wood of Aloes is by many learned Men thought fabulous.

From this Plant is extracted the drug called Aloes, which is a very bitter liquor made use of in embalming, to secure bodies from putrefaction. Nicodemus bought about an hundred pounds of Myrrh and Aloes to embalm the body of Jesus Christ. (John xix. 39.) In the Proverbs the debauch'd Woman (Prov. vii. 17.) says, that she had perfum'd her bed with Myrrh, Aloes, and Cinnamon; and the (Cant. iv. 14.) Spouse in the Canticles, that Myrrh, Aloes, and all manner of perfumes, are to be found in the garden of her beloved. The Hebrew text in these places reads Ahalim, which the Rabbins interpret Santal, and which is an aromatick wood; but the generality understand by it either the Aloes we have been just now speaking of, or another Aloes of Syria, which we have said something of in the article preceding this.

The Arabians call the Aloes that are taken for a Plant Sabr[o]. They believe that of all the several species of Aloes, that which grows in the island of Socotorah is the most excellent; that Alexander the Great transplanted the inhabitants of this island into Arabia and Ethiopia, and settled Macedonians in their room, to cultivate Aloes; the People of Socotorah gather the leaves of this Plant in the month of July, and boil them in great Chaldrons to extract the juice out of them, which they put into bottles, and expose them to the Sun during the dog days.

ALPHA, is the first letter of the Greek Alphabet, as Aleph is the first of the Hebrew Alphabet. In the Greek Alphabet Alpha stands for one, or the first [*]. For this reason God in the Revelations is styled Alpha and Omega, the Beginning and (Rev. i. 8.) End.

ALPHABET HEBREW. See hereafter Hebrew Letters.

1. ALPHÆUS, the Father of St. James Minor, first Bishop of Jerusalem. (Mat. x. 3.) Alphæus was the Husband of Mary, who (Luke vi. 15.) is believed to have been Sister to the holy Virgin[p]; for which reason James is called the Lord's Brother. Many are of opinion that Cleophas mentioned by St. Luke, (Luke xxiv. 18.) and Alphæus are the same Person, Alphæus being his Greek name, and Cleophas his Hebrew or Syriac name, according to the custom of this Province, where the Men generally had two names.

2. Alphæus, the Father of Levi, or (Mark ii. 14.) St. Matthew, whom the Son of God took from his office, and made an Apostle and Evangelist. We know nothing particularly of Alphæus, the Father of St. Matthew.

ALTAR. As Sacrifices offered up to God are as ancient as the world, Altars are of no less antiquity. The Scripture in some places speaks of Altars erected by the Patriarchs, without describing the form or matter of them. The Altar which Jacob set up at Bethel was nothing but the stone which had served him for a bolster. Gideon sacrificed upon nothing better than a stone which was before his house. The first Altars which God commanded [o] Bibl. Orient. p. 727. Sabr. [p] See Bolland. ix. April. p. 811.

[*] Thus Martial, in imitation of the Greeks, who were used to distinguish the rank of People by Letters, says, Epig. l. 5. Ep. 26. Quod Alpha dixi, Codre, penulatorum Te nuper, aliqua, cum jocarer in charta: Si forte bilem movit hic tibi versus Dicas licebit beta me togatorum.

manded Moses to raise to him, must have Exod. xx. 24, 25. been of Earth or rough Stones; and the Lord declared to him, that if any use were made of Iron in them they would Ch. xxv. 1, 2, 3, &c. be impure. The Altar of Burnt-offerings which he caused sometime after to be made, was a kind of trunk of Shittim wood, hollow, and covered over with plates of Brass. See hereafter BURNT-OFFERINGS, and ALTAR OF BURNT-OFFERINGS.

The Altar which Moses injoined Joshua to build upon Mount Hebal, was to be of Deut. xxvii. 5. Josh. viii. 31. unpolished Stones; and it is very probable that those which were built afterwards by Samuel, Saul and David, were of the same structure. The Altar which Solo- 2 Chron. iv. 1, 2, 3. mon erected in the Temple, was of Brass, but filled, as is believed, with rough Stones. It was twenty cubits long, twenty wide, and ten in height. Lastly, that which was rebuilt at Jerusalem by Zerubbabel, and the other Jews who returned from Babylon, was only of rough Stones: nor was that which the Maccabees rebuilt any better. Josephus [s] says, that the Altar which in his time was in the Temple, was of rough Stones, fifteen cubits high, forty long, and as many in width.

ALTAR OF INCENSE. This was a small table of Shittim Wood, covered Exod. xxx. 1, 2, 3. with plates of Gold, of one cubit in length, another in width, and two in height. At the four corners of it were four kinds of horns, and all round a little border or crown over it. Every morning and evening the Priest in waiting for that week, and appointed by lot for this office, offered incense of a particular composition upon this Altar; and to this end entred with the smoaking Censer filled with fire from the Altar of Burnt-Offerings into the Holy, where this Altar was fixed over-against the Shew-bread Table. This was the Altar which was hidden by Jeremiah before the 2 Macc. ii. 5, 6. Captivity. The Priest having placed the Censer on it, retired out of the Holy.

III. ALTAR, or Table, for the Shew-Bread, was a small Table of Shittim Wood, Exod. xxv. 23, 24. covered with plates of Gold, having a little border round it, adorned with sculpture. It was two cubits long, one cubit wide, and one and an half in height. It was placed in the Holy. Upon this Table, every Sabbath-day, were put twelve loaves with salt and incense. See SHEW-BREAD.

IV. ALTAR OF BURNT-OFFERINGS. This was a kind of Coffer of Shit- Ch. xxvii. 1, 2, 3. tim Wood, covered with brass plates. It was five cubits square, and three in height. Moses placed it to the East, before the entrance of the Tabernacle, in the open air, that so the fire which was to be kept perpetually upon it, and the smoak arising from the Sacrifices which were burnt there, might not spoil the inside of the Tabernacle. At the four corners of this Altar there was an appearance as it were of four horns, covered with the same metal as the rest of the Altar. Within the depth or hollow of it was a grate of brass, on which the fire was made; thro' this fell the ashes in proportion as they increased upon the Altar, and were received below within a pan which was placed under it. At the four corners of this grate were four rings, and four chains, which kept it up at the four horns of the Altar above mentioned. As this Altar was portable, Moses had rings made, and fastened to the sides of it, into which were put staves of Shittim Wood, overlaid with brass, by the help whereof it was removed from place to place.

Such was the Altar of Burnt-Offerings belonging to the Tabernacle erected by Moses in the Wilderness: but in Solomon's Temple it was much larger. This was a kind of Cube, twenty cubits long, as many wide, and ten in height. It was covered with thick plates of brass, and filled with rough stones; on the East side there was an easy ascent leading up to it. When the Jews returned from the captivity of Babylon, they rebuilt the Altar of Burnt-Offerings after the model of Solomon's; but after both the Temple and Altar had been prophaned by the orders of Antiochus Epiphanes, this Altar was demolished, and the stones of it were laid up in some part of the Temple which was unpolluted, till a Prophet should be raised up by God, who should come and declare the use for which they were reserved. Herod the Great having made a new 1 Macc. xiv. 41. Temple, built an Altar of Burnt-Offerings like that which had been there before; but Josephus says, that the ascent up to it was on the South side.

The Altar of Burnt-Offerings, according to the Rabbins [t], was a large mass all built of rough and unpolish'd stones, the basis whereof was two and thirty cubits, or forty eight feet square. From thence the Altar rose one cubit or a foot and an half, then there was a diminishing of one cubit in thickness; from thence the Altar being only thirty cubits square, rose five cubits, and received a new diminution or in-benching of two cubits, and consequently was reduced to twenty eight cubits square. From thence again it rose three cubits, and grew two cubits smaller. Lastly, it rose again one cubit, and so being in all twenty four cubits, or thirty six foot square, it formed the hearth on which the Sacrifices were burnt, and the perpetual fire kept up.

The diminution of two cubits abovementioned, which was about the middle of the Altar, served as a passage for the Priests

[s] De Bello l. 6. c. 14.

[t] Misnaioth. in Middoth. Maimon. in Beth-Habb. Ahirach. c. 1, 2.

ALTAR OF INCENSE.

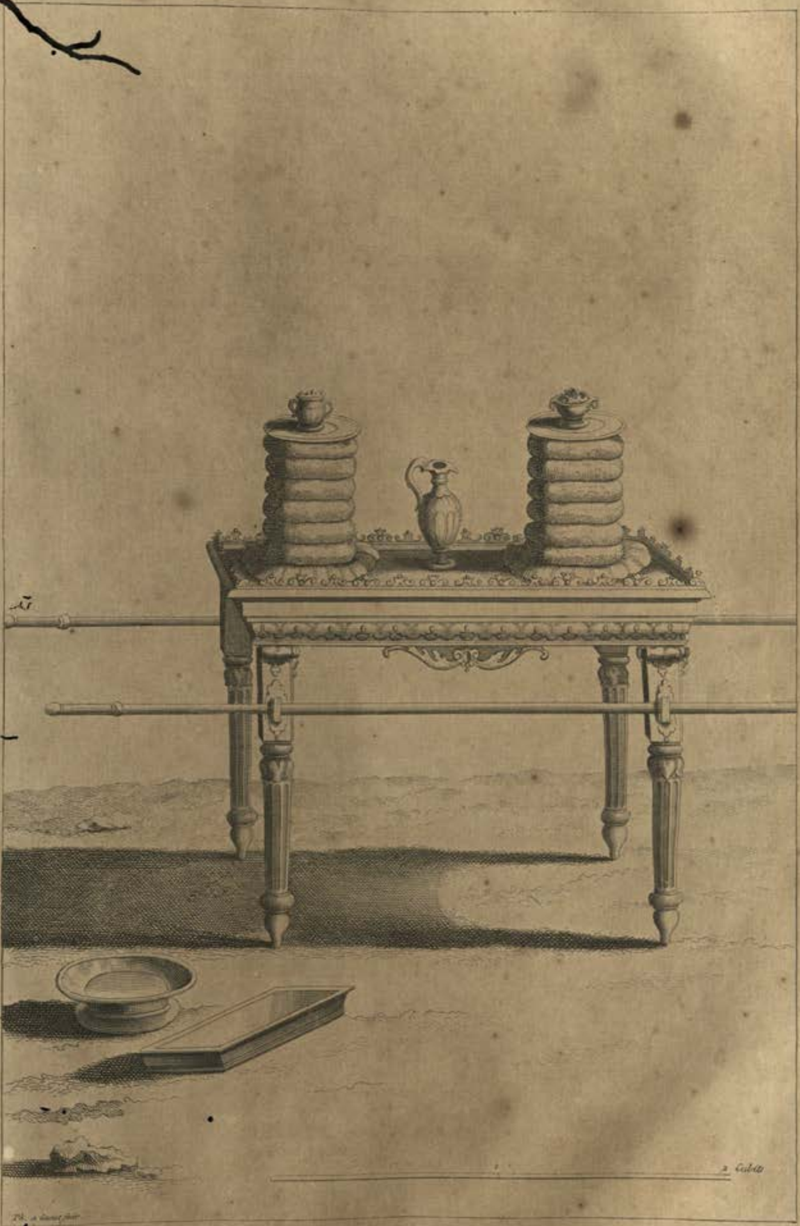

TABLE OF SHEW-BREAD.

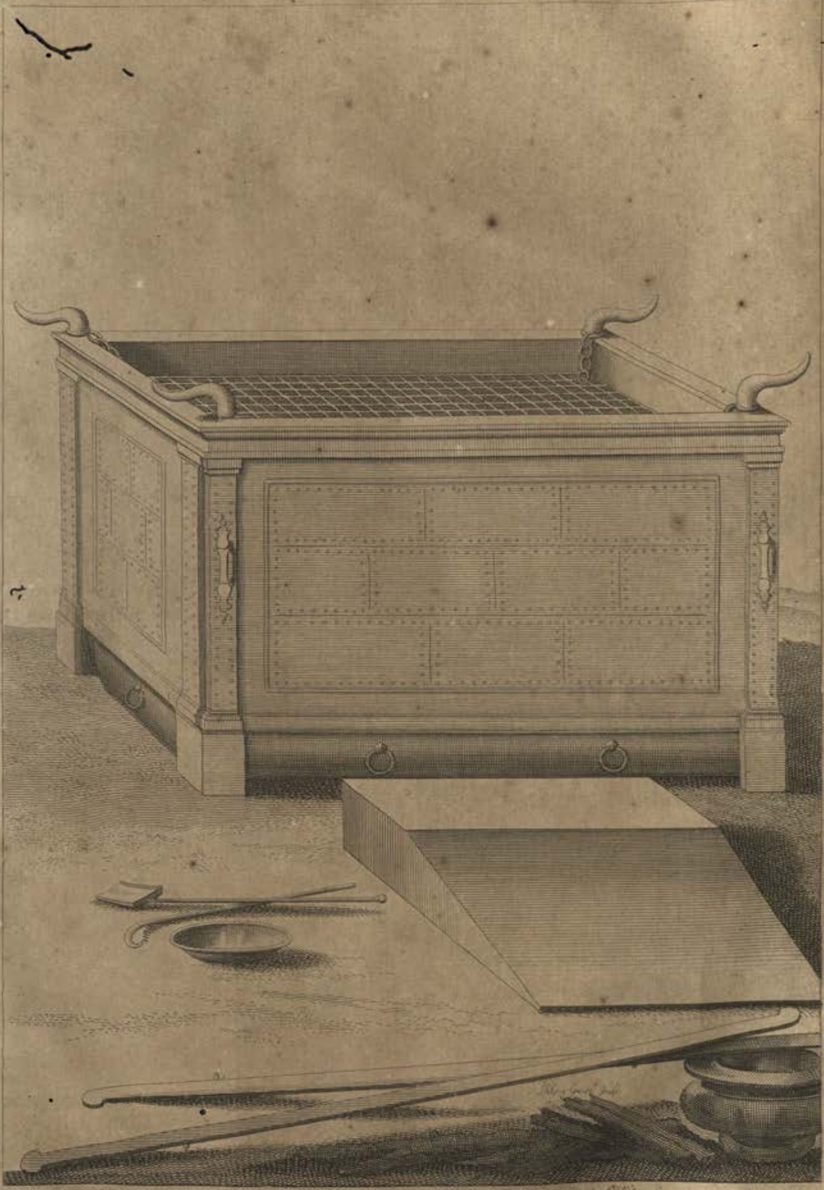
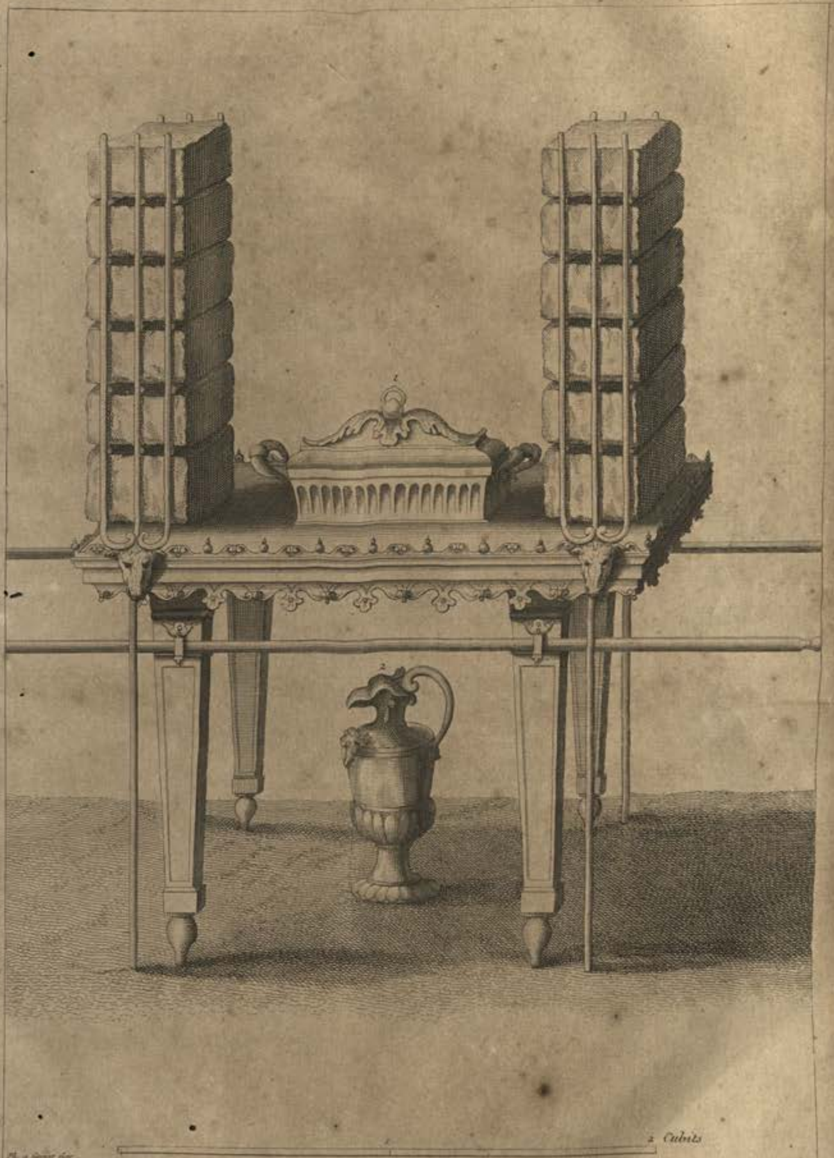


ALTER OF BURNT OFFERINGS.

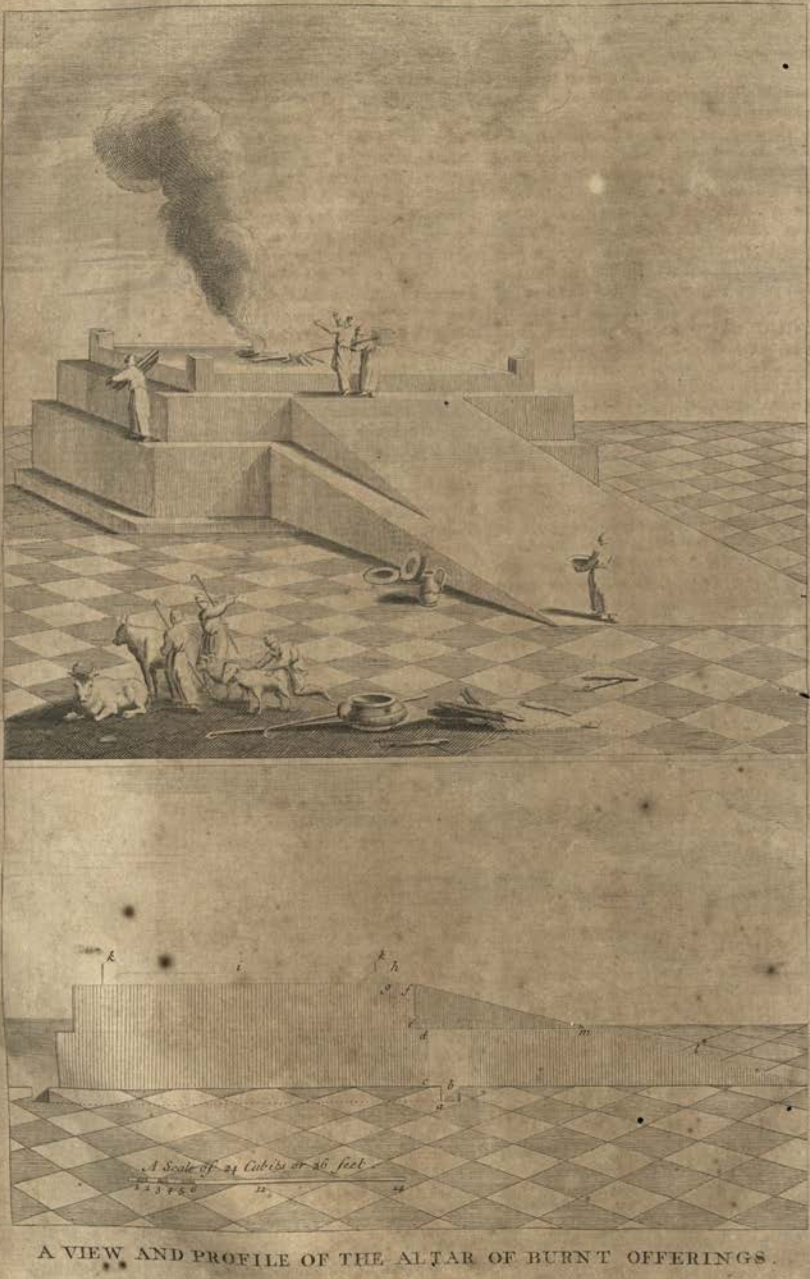
DIFFERENT ALTARS OF BURNT OFFERINGS.

A. The Altar in Solomon's Temple B. The Altar in Ezekiels Temple. C. According to F. Lamy



THE SHEW-BREAD TABLE DESCRIBED BY THE JEWS.

1 The golden pan wherein the loaves were baked.
2 A Vessel which was filled with excellent wine.



A VIEW AND PROFILE OF THE ALTAR OF BURNT OFFERINGS.

According to the Rabbins.

Priests to go and come about the Altar, to attend the fire, and place the Sacrifices on it. This Altar was composed of large plates of massy Brass, whence it is 1 Kings viii. 64. called the brazen Altar. It is believed that the Altar was all filled with rough Stones or Earth, according to what is said
Exod. xx 24, 25. in Exodus, An Altar of Earth thou shalt make unto me, and shalt sacrifice thereon thy Burnt-Offerings, and thy Peace-Offerings—— and if thou wilt make me an Altar of Stone thou shalt not build it of hewen Stone, for if thou lift up thy tool upon it, thou hast polluted it. At the four corners of the Altar, on the last diminution or inbenching, were four small pillars of a cubit square, hollow in the middle for half a cubit square, and in the form of a perfect cube. These are the horns of the Altar, so often mentioned in Scripture, they were hollow, that part of the blood of the Sacrifices might be poured in-to them.

The ascent to the Altar was by an insensible rise on the South side, and was called Kibbesh; it was two and thirty cubits in length, and sixteen in breadth, and landed upon the upper benching-in, near the hearth or top of the Altar; for to go up to the Altar by steps was by the Law
Ver. 26. forbidden. The Priests might go round about the Altar, and perform their offices very conveniently upon the two inbenchings which we have described; namely, that of the middle, which was a cubit, and that above it, which was likewise a cubit broad; for it would have been very uneasy for them to have walked bare-foot on the hearth, which was always heated by the fire that was continually burning there.

An Explanation of the Profil of the Altar of Burnt-Offerings, according to the Rabbins.

a. A Trench which went quite round the Altar, wherein was thrown the blood of the Sacrifices.

a. b. The foundation of the Altar one cubit high, and thirty two cubits square.

b. c. The first in-benching, one cubit broad.

c. d. The elevation of five cubits.

d. e. The second in-benching, a cubit broad.

e. f. The elevation of three cubits.

f. g. The third in-benching, a cubit broad on every side.

g. h. The last rising, of one cubit.

h. i. The hearth of twenty four cubits, or thirty six foot square.

k. The horns of the Altar, of one cubit, and hollow, half a cubit square.

l. The sloping ascent to the Altar, of thirty two cubits in length.

m. The passage on both sides the Kibbesh, to the second in-benching.

V. ALTAR at Athens, inscribed To the Unknown God. St. Paul being come from Thessalonica to Athens, disputed every day, either in the synagogue with the Jews, or in the market-place with the Philosophers. As he discoursed on the Resurrection of the dead, and declared Christ crucified to be both God and Man, some of the Philosophers brought him before the Judges of the Areopagus, there to give an account of his opinions. While therefore he stood before these Judges, he spoke to them in the following words: Ye Acts xvii. 22, 23.
Men of Athens, I perceive that in all things ye are too superstitious; for as I passed by and beheld your devotions, I found an Altar with this inscription, To the Unknown God; whom therefore ye ignorantly worship, him declare I unto you.

The question is, what this Altar was thus consecrated to, the Unknown God? St. Jerom[w] informs us, that it was not inscribed upon exactly as St. Paul relates, but that the words were these, To the Gods of Asia, Europe, and Africa; to the unknown and strange Gods; and that the Apostle purposely changed the plural into the singular, because it was necessary for his design to demonstrate only to the Athenians, that they adored an Unknown God.

Others[x] believe, that St. Paul proposed to speak of those Altars which were to be seen in several places of Attica, without any particular inscription, erected after a solemn expiation for the Country, made by the Philosopher Epimenides[y].

Others affirm this Altar to the Unknown God to be that mentioned by Pausanias and Philostratus[z]. These Authors tell us, that there were Altars at Athens consecrated To the Unknown Gods. There were probably several Altars, each with an Inscription, To the Unknown God; for which reason they mention them in the plural number, as Altars inscribed To the Unknown Gods. Lucian, in his dialogue intitled Philopatris, swears by the Unknown God of Athens. He adds, Being come to Athens, and finding there the Unknown God, we worshiped him, and gave thanks to him with hands lifted up to Heaven.

Peter Comestor, Author of the Historia Scholastica, relates that Dionysius the Areopagite observing while he was at Alexandria, the Eclipse which, contrary to Nature, happened at the death of our Saviour, from thence concludes, that some unknown God suffered; and not being then in a condition to learn more of the matter,

[w] Hieronym. in Ep. ad Tit. c. 1. [x] Grot. Voss. Beza in Act. xv. 11. Casaub. ad Laert. Selden. de Synod. l. 3. c. 13. Hammond. alii. [y] Diogen. Laert. l. 1. in Epimenide. [z] Philostr. Pausan. in Attic. l. 6. c. 2. Ἀγνώστων Θεῶν Βωμοὶ [illegible] ter, he erected, at his return to Athens, this Altar to the Unknown God, which gave occasion to St. Paul of making the discourse at the Areopagus, which is related to us by him.

Theophylact accounts in another manner for the occasion of this Altar. After a battle which the Athenians had lost, a spectre appeared to them, and told them, that he was the cause of the misfortune which had happened to them, out of an aversion he had to their celebrating Games in honour of all the other Gods, and none to him: After this he disappeared, without declaring his name. The Athenians, to repair their fault, immediately erected an Altar to the Unknown God.

Œcumenius reports this matter something differently. The Athenians being seized with a burning distemper, which would not allow them to endure any thing upon their bodies, addressed themselves in vain to all the Gods which were honoured in their City. As they saw that they received no relief from hence, they bethought themselves of erecting an Altar to the unknown God, out of an apprehension that some strange Deity had in his indignation smitten them. To this Unknown God they attributed the cure of their disease.

Others say, that during the war between the Persians and Greeks, the latter sent Philippides to desire succour of the Lacedæmonians. Upon Mount Parthenius the God Pan appeared to him, and complained that he was the only God to whom they did not pay their Adorations, and at the same time promised them his assistance, provided they admitted him into the number of their Gods. They did so, and erected an Altar to him; and lest there should be any other God dissatisfied with their indifference, they built an Altar to the unknown God.

Every one of these opinions has its particular difficulties. The Altar intitled, To the Gods of Asia, Europe, and Africa, to the unknown strange Gods, is not in all probability that mentioned by St. Paul. The Areopagites would never have understood it by the bare name of the unknown God.

One of the Altars set up by Epimenides, which had no inscription to any Deity, can never be that which we enquire after. The Histories related by the Author of the Historia Scholastica, Theophylact, and Œcumenius, have no warrant from Antiquity. It is therefore probable enough that the Athenians, a People extremely superstitious, apprehensive that they had forgotten some Divinity, and had not paid their worship to it, erected Altars in some part of their City inscrib'd to the unknown God; from whence St. Paul took occasion to preach Jesus Christ to them, a God with respect to them truly unknown, and already in some sort adored by them without their knowing him.

These are St. Chrysostom's thoughts upon the matter [a], founded on what we have above mentioned from Philostratus, Pausanias, and Lucian.

St. Austin never questions but the Athenians, under the name of the unknown God, adored the true one. He compares their Worship with that which Schismaticks, who are not within the pale of the Church, pay to God. The Apostle's intention therefore was, to induce them to adore that wisely and profitably in the Church which they blindly and vainly worshipp'd out of the Church, Ut eundem Deum quem præter Ecclesiam ignoranter, atque inutiliter colebant, in Ecclesia sapienter & utiliter colerent. See our Dissertation on the Altar to the unknown God prefixed to the Acts of the Apostles.

ALVAH: Thus the wood is called which God shewed Moses, that with it he might sweeten the waters of Marah. The Exod. xv.
Scripture has not preserved the name of it, 25.
but the Mahometans give it that of Alva, and maintain that Moses had a piece of it, which he received by succession from the Patriarchs, Noah having kept it in the Ark, and deliver'd it to his Posterity [b]. Moses, as they say, placed it afterwards in the Ark of the Covenant, together with the Manna and tables of the Law. The word Alva has some relation to Aloes, which is a very bitter wood; and some Interpreters are of opinion, that Moses took a very bitter sort of wood on purpose, that so the power of God might be the more remarkable in sweetening these waters. Josephus says that this Legislator used the wood which he found by chance, lying at his feet.

ALVAN, Shobal's eldest Son, and of the race of Esau. He was the second Prince of Edom, and succeeded Timna. Gen. xxxvi. 23.

AMAD, a City belonging to the Tribe of Ashar. Josh. xix. 26.

AMAL, the fourth Son of Hemel, 1 Chr. vii. 35.

AMALEK, the Son of Eliphan and Timna his Concubine, and Grandson to Esau. He succeeded Gatam in the Government of Edom, which lies Southward Genes.
of the Tribe of Judah. Amalek was the xxxvi. 12. & 16.
Father of the Amalekites, a powerful Peo- 1 Chr. i.
ple, who dwelt in Arabia Petræa, be- 36.
tween the Dead Sea and the Red Sea, or between Havilah and Shur, 1 Sam. xv. 7. sometimes in one Canton, and sometimes in another; for we cannot assign the particular place of their habitation. It does not appear appear that they had any Cities, and perhaps they had but one, which is mentioned in the first book of Samuel. They lived generally in hamlets, caves, or tents. 1 Sam. xv. 5.

[a] Chrysost. in Acta.

[b] Bibl. Orient. p. 105. col. 1. & p. 1022. col. 1.

The Israelites had scarce passed the Red Sea before the Amalekites came to attack them in the desart of Rephidim, and put those cruelly to the sword who were obliged either through fatigue or weakness to remain behind. Moses, by God's command, directed Joshua to attack this People, to record the act of inhumanity, which they had committed, in a book, in order to have it always before his eyes, and to revenge it in the most remarkable manner. Joshua therefore fell upon the Amalekites, and defeated them, while Moses was upon the Mountain, and with Aaron and Hur in his company, lifted up his hands to Heaven. This happened in the year of the World 2513, before J. C. 1487, before the vulgar Æra 1491. Ex. xvii. 8.

Observations on the Battle of Rephidim between Israel and the Amalekites.

This battle is celebrated in the Scripture: It was one of the most obstinate on both sides, and the victory uncertain and for a long time in suspence. It was fought near Mount Horeb, at the foot of a hill rising at the bottom of the Mountain, and upon the declivity of it the Hebrews were probably incamped. I find the sacred Writer to be so concise in his description of this Battle, that a comment and conjectures may be excused, which however might be more tolerable than the extravagant and confused imaginations which we meet with in the figures of the Scripture Battles, drawn by our Painters with a design rather to amuse us and communicate their own fancies, than to instruct us in the military discipline of the Jews, and furnish us with any true idea of it. It was the method of the People of Asia, and consequently of the Hebrews, to engage in Phalanxes when their forces were equal, but not like those of the Greeks, with the whole front closed and united: Their Phalanx was divided into several bodies, with little intervals between them, for their chariots and troops lightly arm'd, that is, their Slingers and Archers, to retreat to: Sometimes they ranged themselves in great square bodies at a reasonable distance from one another, when they could not equal the Enemy's front. This method of engaging in large square bodies was common to the Asiaticks and Hebrews, who perhaps had borrowed it from the Egyptians. If any one should require Authorities for this opinion, nothing is more easy than to give him satisfaction; for if this People had made no changes in the way of fighting from the time of Moses to the Battle between Crœsus and Cyrus, as is very probable, we shall find that forty thousand Egyptian Pikemen, who came to the assistance of the first of these, formed four great square bodies, by whom Cyrus was several times put to a stand, and at last they capitulated, for there was only one of them broken. This is a particular which I learn from Xenophon in his Institution of Cyrus, and the account of his retreat with ten thousand Men after the Battle of Cunaxa. But suppose this Authority were not to be admitted, the Scripture would furnish me with infinite examples, and Polybius himself, whither I refer the Reader. They who do not understand Greek may have recourse to the Comment on Polybius, where they will find this way of engaging practised in Antiochus's war against Ptolemy Philopator. They fought in great Bodies not only with their foot, but with their horse likewise, leaving some little interval between the Squadrons; and the same method may be observed to be in use among the Hebrews; for I do not at all question but that Moses imitated the Egyptians in their way of making war.

I have therefore ranged the Israelites in several Bodies according to their Tribes, with retreats or divisions which were very necessary. Amalek acted like an understanding General, who does not stay to expect the Enemy in his own country, but marches forward to meet and fight him, and to divert his intentions of making inroads into it. The Benedictine Commentator cites Philo, who says, That the King of the Amalekites apprehending lest the Israelites might ravage his territories, resolved to prevent them; and putting himself at the head of his Troops, he marched to oppose their passage, with a design, if they shewed an inclination to resist him, of attacking them with all his Forces. I should have been very well pleased if the sacred Writer had informed us in this place what the number was, and nature of Amalek's Forces. The book of Judith in few words acquaints us with it, and describes to us the Army of the Amalekits as a formidable one, composed of many horse, and a great number of chariots, the Soldiers whereof were furnished with good weapons, and abounding with confidence in their own strength *. Upon this footing we range the Amalekites in the same order with the Hebrews, the Horse on the wings, and the Chariots on the whole front of the line, and between the distance of the several Bodies. Judith iv. 13, 14.

According to the Scripture way of expressing itself, Moses stood in need of all the virtue of his miraculous Rod, and his his most successful Prayers, to get the better of so dreadful an Enemy; if God had not concerned himself in the affair, and turned to his People's side, at the earnest supplications of his Servant, the battle had been lost; the number, valour, and advantage of Amalek's arms had made the balance incline on his side.

* This Citation is taken from the Latin Vulgate; for there is no mention of it in the Greek Original, nor is it inserted in our English Translation.

Victory, which God at all times either gives or takes away at his pleasure, was entirely with the Israelites; but it had certainly fled to the Amalekites, if Aaron and Hur, who were with Moses on the Mountain, remote from danger, had not supported the extended arms and hands of this Legislator. This is a mystery which I leave to the Commentators, as their peculiar province; for the preservation or destruction of God's People lay in the hands and arms of these persons extended in the form of a Cross. To this the success of the Battle was owing, which was such that Amalek was entirely defeated and cut in pieces. Notwithstanding, no victory ever was more disputed; the Battle lasted the whole day till the approach of night; for the Scrip-
Ex. xvii. 12. ture says, That the hands of Moses were steddy till the going down of the Sun. As the success of this action was the pure work of God, he said to Moses, Write this for a memorial in a book.

Under the Judges we see the Amalekites
Judg. vi. 3. united with the Midianites and Moabites, Judg. iii. 13. in a design to oppress the Israelites; but Ehud deliver'd the Israelites from Eglon, and Gideon deliver'd them from Midian
In the Year of the World 2930, before J. C. 1070. and Amelek. Many years after the Lord said to Samuel, Go to Saul and say, Thus saith the Lord of Hosts, I remember that which Amalek did to Israel, how he laid
1 Sam. xv. 2, 3, &c. wait for him in the way when he came up from Egypt. Now go and smite Amalek, and utterly destroy all that they have, and spare them not, but slay both Man and Woman, Infant and Suckling, Ox and Sheep, Camel and Ass.

Saul marched therefore against the Amalekites, advanced as far as their Capital, cut them in pieces from Havilah towards the mouth of the Euphrates, as far as Shur towards the Red Sea, and put all the People of the Country to the sword, but spared the best of all the cattle and moveables, and so violated the command of God. This act of Disobedience was the cause of Saul's misfortunes, and of his being rejected by God, as we have shewn in the article AGAG, and shall shew farther in that of SAUL.

After this war the Amalekites scarce appear any more in History. Some years af-
In the Year of the World 2949, before J. C. 1051. ter this event, a troop of Amalekites came and pillaged Ziklag, which belonged to David, where he had left his Wife and all his substance. But he returning from an expedition which he had made in the company of King Achish into the valley of Jezreel, pursued them, overtook, dispersed them, and recover'd all the booty which they had carried off from Ziklag. 1 Sam. xxx. 1, 2, &c.

The Arabians maintain Amalek to have been the Son of Ham, and Grandson of Noah; that he was the Father of Ad, and Grandfather of Schedad. This opinion is not to be rejected: It is not easy to conceive how Amalek, the Son of Eliphaz, and Grandson of Esau, could be the Father of a People so powerful and numerous as the Amalekites were when the Israelites departed out of Egypt. Moses in the book of Genesis relates, that in Abraham's time, Gen. xiv. 7.
and long before the birth of Amalek, the Son of Eliphaz, the five confederate Kings carried the war into Amalek's Country, about Kadesh, and into that of the Amorites, who dwelt at Hazeron-tamar.

The same Moses in another place relates, Numb.
that the Diviner Balaam observing at a xxiv. 20.
distance the land of Amalek, said in his ראשית prophetick style, Amalek is the first, the גוים head, the original of the Nations, but his עמלק latter end shall be that he perish for ever. ואח-
This commendation of first of the Nations ריתו cannot certainly agree with the Amalekites עדי אבד who were so modern; for the Generation then living was but the third from Amalek[c]. Moses never reproaches the Amalekites with attacking the Israelites their Brethren; an aggravating circumstance which he would not have omitted if they had been descended from Esau, and this sense Brethren to the Israelites. Lastly, we see the Amalekites almost always joined in Scripture with the Canaanites and Philistines, and never with the Edomites; and when Saul made war with Amalek, and destroyed it, the Edomites made not the least motions towards their assistance, nor to revenge them afterwards. It is therefore probable that the Amalekites, who are so often mentioned in Scripture, were a People descended from Canaan, and devoted to the Curse, as well as the other Amorites, and very different from the descendants of Amalek, the Grandson of Esau.

What follows is the account which the Arabians give us of the Amalek destroyed by Saul. He was the Father of an ancient Tribe in Arabia, exterminated in the reign of Saul. It contained only the Arabians, who are called pure, the remains of whom were mingled with the posterity of Joktan and Adnan, and so became Mosarabes

[c] Esau,	Jacob.
Eliphaz,	Levi.
Amalek,	Kohath.
———	Amram.
———	Aaron.

bes or Mostaarabes, that is to say, Arabians blended with foreign Nations. They farther believe, that Goliath, who was overcome by David, was King of the Amalekites, and that the Giants who inhabited Palestine in Joshua's time, were of the same race; that at last part of the Amalekites retired into Africk, while Joshua was yet living, and settled upon the coasts of Barbary, along the Mediterranean Sea.

The Son of Amalek [d] was Ad, a celebrated Prince among the Arabians. He began to raise stately buildings, and a City very much to be admired, which was the place of his own residence, and of the Giants in his time. Some make him to be the Son of Uz, and Grandson of Aram, the Son of Shem. Let this be as it will, the Mahometans say that Ad was the Father of an Arabian Tribe called Adites, who were exterminated, as they tell us, for not hearkening to the Patriarch Eber, who preached the unity of God to them. Ad had two Sons, viz. Schedad and Schedid. This is what the Arabians relate of the Amalekites.

AMALEK, a mountain in the land of Ephraim, upon which the Town of Pirathon was situated, where Abdon, the Son Judg. xii. 14, 15. of Hillel, Judge of Israel, was buried; in the year of the World 2848. before J. C. 1152. before the vulgar Æra 1156.

AMAN, a City belonging to the Tribe of Judah, Josh. xv. 26.

AMANA, a Mountain mentioned in
Cant. iv. 8. Solomon's Song. Some are of opinion that this is mount Amanus in Cilicia. St. Jerom [e] and the Rabbins [f] make the land of Israel to extend Northward as far as this Mountain; and in Solomon's time the dominion of the Hebrews did extend so far. Mount Amanus separates Syria from Cilicia, and reaches from the Mediterranean to the Euphrates.

Amana, a Mountain beyond Jordan, in the Tribe of Manasseh [g]. It is three leagues from the Lake Meron; and at the bottom is three leagues in circumference, where there is a fine vineyard to be seen; but the top is always covered with snow, for which reason the Arabians have given it the name of Gebel Ghaique; that is to say, the Old Man's Mountain, because the top of it is all white. Some think this to be Mount Amana, which the Spouse speaks of in the Canticles. I do not observe that either Josephus, St. Jerom, or Eusebius had any knowledge of this Mountain at least they say nothing of it under the name of Amana.

I. AMARIAH, the eldest Son of Meraioth, and Father of the High-Priest Ahitub. Amariah was High-Priest in the time of the Judges. We are not able to fix the years of his Pontificate. His name is to be met with in the Chronicles. And 1 Chron. vi. 7, 11. if he exercised this Office, he should be placed, as I think, before Eli, who was succeeded by Ahitub, who in the Chronicles is put immediately after Amariah. Ver. 7.

II. Amariah, one of those mentioned by Ezra, who separated from the Wives Ezra x. 42. which they had taken, contrary to the Law.

III. Amariah, Grand-father to the Prophet Zephaniah, and Father of Gedaliah. Zeph. i. 1.

AMASA, the Son of Jether and Abigail, David's Sister. Absalom, during his 2 Sam. xvii. 25. rebellion against David, placed his Cozen Amasa at the head of his Troops. It was Amasa that engaged Joab, General of David's army, and was worsted; in the year of the World 2981. After the defeat of Absalom's party, David, out of hatred to Joab, who had killed Absalom, offered Amasa his pardon, and promised 2 Sam. xix. 13. & seq. him the general command of his army, in the room of Joab, whose insolence had made him insupportable. Upon the revolt of Sheba the Son of Bichri, David Ch. xx. 1, 2, &c. gave order to Amasa for assembling all Judah, and marching at the head of them, against Sheba.

Amasa thereupon took his leave, but not being able to form his army at the time prescribed, David directed Abishai to pursue Sheba with what Soldiers he had then about his own person. Joab with his people accompanied him; and these troops were scarce got so far as the great Stone which is in Gibeon, before Amasa came and joined them with his forces. Then said Joab to Amasa, Art thou in health, my Brother? and took him by the beard with the right hand to kiss him. But Amasa not observing the sword which was in Joab's hand, the latter smote him therewith in the fifth rib, and shed out his bowels to the ground, and he died. Such was the end of Amasa, David's Nephew, in the year of the world 2981. before J. C. 1019. before the vulgar Æra 1023.

II. Amasa, the Son of Hadlai, was one of those who were against permitting such Captives as were taken in the Kingdom of Judah, in the reign of Ahaz, to come into Samaria. 2 Chron. xxviii. 12.

I. AMASAI, the Son of Elkanah, 1 Chron. vi. 25.

II. Amasai, the same perhaps with him who is taken notice of in 1 Chron. vi. 35. He was a Levite, who perceived himself to be inspired by the Spirit of God to go over to David, and carry thirty gallant Men with him. They came and joined him while he was in the desart, flying from [d] Bibl. Orient. p. 51. Ad.

[e] Hieronym. Epist. ad Dardanum & ad Ezek. vii. Item ad Ezek. xx.
[f] In Gemar. Jerosol. Schevuth.
[g] Eugene Roger, Terre sainte, l. 1. c. 20.

from the persecution of Saul. David went to meet them, and said, If ye be come peaceably to help me, mine heart shall be knit unto you: but if ye be come to betray me to mine Enemies, seeing there is no wrong in mine hands, the God of our Fathers look thereon, and rebuke it. Then said Amasai, Thine are we, David, and on thy side, thou Son of Jesse: Peace be unto thee, and peace be to thine helpers. David therefore received them; and gave them the command of some Troops.

AMASIS, King of Egypt. Notwithstanding his name is not to be met with in the Text of Scripture, he is nevertheless celebrated in Sacred History. The 2 Kings xxiii. 29. Jer. xlvi. 2. Scripture speaks of Nechoh, who killed Josiah King of Judah, in the battle of Megiddo. Nechoh was succeeded by Psammis, Psammis by Apries, in Jeremiah cal-
Ver. 30. led Hophrah, and Hophrah by Amasis *, who lived in Egypt at the same time as Cyrus reign'd in Babylon. He governed four and forty years, loved and respected always by his Subjects, and favoured by Fortune, from the year of the World 3435 to 3472. He died in the time of Cambyses, before J. C. 521. before the vulgar Æra 525.

AMATH, or Emath, a City of Syria. It is the same with Emesa upon the Orontes. See Emath.

AMATHA, a Town near Gadara, where there were hot baths. [h] Gabinius established one of the five Seats of Justice חמת Calor. at Amatha. [i] The word Hamath in Hebrew signifies hot waters; whence so many Towns in Palestine called Amath, Amathus, or Emmaus.

AMATHUS, a City situated beyond Jordan. Eusebius [k] places it at the distance of one and twenty miles from Pella, towards the South. Alexander Jannæus took and destroyed it. [l] Some are of opinion, that Gabinius fixed one of the five Seats of Justice in this City. [m] Others think, that it was at Amatha on this side of Jordan. M. Reland conjectures, that Amathus and Ramoth-gilead are the same.

AMATHEANS, the descendants of Amath, one of the Sons of Canaan. We are of opinion, that they dwelt at Emath, or Amath, or Emesa in Syria, upon the river Orontes.

I. AMAZIAH, the eighth King of Ju-
2 Chron. xxiv. 27. xxv. 1, 2, 3, &c. 2 Kings xiv. dah, was Son to Joash, and succeeded him in the year of the World 3165. before J. C. 835. before the vulgar Æra 839. He was five and twenty years of age, when he began to reign, and he reigned nine and twenty years at Jerusalem. He did that which was good in the sight of the Lord, but not with a perfect heart. When he saw himself settled in his Kingdom, he put to death the murderers of his Father, but not their Children; because it is written in the Law, The Fathers shall not be put to death for the Children, neither shall the Children be put to death for the Fathers; every man shall be put to death for his own sin. Deut. xxiv. 16.

In the general muster which he made of his People, he found there were three hundred thousand men capable of bearing arms. He bought besides, an hundred thousand of the Kingdom of Israel; for which he paid the King of Israel an hundred talents; which make thirty four thousand two hundred and eighteen pounds fifteen shillings, English. His design was to employ these Troops against the Edomites, who had revolted from the Kings of Judah, in the reign of Joram, about fifty four years before. 2 Kings viii. 20.

At that time a Prophet of the Lord came to him, and said, O King, let not the army of Israel go with thee; for the Lord is not with Israel. But if thou wilt go, do it, be strong, for the battle of God shall make thee fall before the Enemy; for God hath power to help, and to cast down. And Amaziah said to the Man of God, What shall we do for the hundred talents which I have given to the army of Israel? And the Man of God answered, The Lord is able to give thee more than this. Amaziah hereupon separated the army which came to him from Ephraim, and sent the troops belonging to it back into their own Country. They returned therefore strangely irritated against Amaziah. They dispersed themselves over all the Cities of Judah, from Bethoron to Samaria, killed three thousand men, and carried off a great booty, to make themselves amends for that which they had promised themselves in the war against Edom. In the year of the World 3173, before J. C. 827, before the vulgar Æra 831. 2 Chron. xxv. 7.

Amaziah marched therefore only with his own forces, gave battle to the Edomites in the Valley of Salt [n], killed ten thousand Edomites upon the spot, and took ten thousand more, who had saved themselves, in all probability, upon a rock, when they were assaulted, and thrown headlong from the top to the bottom, so that they were dashed to pieces [o]. Now
2 Kings xiv. 7. Amaziah having thus cut off the Edomites, and taken their Gods, adored them; offered incense to them, and acknowledged them

[h] Euseb. Onomast. [i] Joseph. de bell. l. 1. c. 6. p. 722. d. [k] Eusеb. Onomastic. in Ἀμαθοῦς.
[l] Antiq. l. 13. c. 21. [m] Ibid. l. 14. c 10. & de bell. l. 1. c. 6. [n] This Valley is generally placed to the South of the Dead Sea; but we think rather that it was in Idumæa, between the City of Palmyra and that of Bosra. See M. le Brun's Voyage. [o] It is said that Amaziah took Petra, and gave it the name of Jectheel. Some think that he took Petra the Capital of Arabia Petræa; but others are of opinion that he only took the Rock, which ten thousand Edomites had retreated to.
* See Marsham Canon. Chron. Seculum 18. & Diodor. Nemoribi Pyramidum tumulis evulsus Amasis. Lucan.

them for his own Deities. This action provoked the Lord, who sent a Prophet to him, which said unto him, Why hast thou sought after the Gods of the People, which could not deliver their own People out of thine hand? Amaziah answered him, Art thou made of the King's counsel? Forbear; why shouldst thou be smitten? Then the Prophet forbore, and said, I know that God hath determined to destroy thee, because thou hast done this, and hast not hearkned unto my counsel.

2 Kings xiv. 8. 2 Chron. xxv. 14. 2 Chron. xxv. 17.

God therefore permitted Amaziah to be so blinded as to believe himself invincible. He sent to defy the King of Israel, saying, Come, let us look one another in the face. The motive of this war was, probably, to oblige Joash King of Israel to repair the ravages which his troops had made, as I before hinted, in their return to the Country of Samaria. Joash answered Amaziah, The Thistle that was at Lebanon sent to the Cedar saying, Give thy Daughter to my Son to wife: And there passed by a wild beast that was in Lebanon, and trod down the Thistle. Thou sayest, Lo, thou hast smitten the Edomites, and thine heart lifteth thee up to boast: Abide now at home, why shouldst thou meddle to thine hurt, that thou shouldst fall, even thou, and Judah with thee?

Amaziah was deaf to these reasons; because God had given him up to his own evil sense of things. He advanced as far as Beth-shemesh with his army; and Joash King of Israel gave him battle. Amaziah gave ground, his army was defeated, and he himself fell into the hands of his Enemies. Joash forced the Camp at Beth-shemesh, and carried Amaziah to Jerusalem. Then he gave orders for demolishing four hundred cubits of the City-walls, from the gate of Ephraim as far as to the corner gate. He carried all the gold and silver to Samaria, all the rich vessels which he found in the House of God, and in the treasuries belonging to the royal Palace; and the Sons of those among his own people, who had been sent as hostages to Jerusalem.

After this Amaziah reigned still fifteen or sixteen years at Jerusalem; but returned not to the Lord with all his heart; wherefore God, to punish him, permitted a Conspiracy to be formed against him at Jerusalem. He was in hopes of making his escape to Lachish; but the Conspirators sent after him, and had him there assassinated. He was brought back upon two horses, and buried with his ancestors in the City of David. He died in the year of the World 3194. before J. C. 806. before the vulgar Æra 810. Uzziah, or Azariah his Son, who was but sixteen years of age, succeeded him.

II. Amaziah, Priest to the golden Calves that were at Bethel. The Prophet Amos having said upon a certain day, that the High Places consecrated to Idols should be destroyed; and that however holy they might then be thought by Israel, they would be overthrown, and the House of Jeroboam extirpated by the sword; Amaziah Priest of Bethel sent to Jeroboam King of Israel, saying, Amos hath conspired against thee in the midst of the House of Israel: the land is not able to bear all his words. For thus Amos saith, Jeroboam shall die by the sword, and Israel shall surely be led away captive out of their own land. Also Amaziah said unto Amos, Go, thou Seer, flee thee away into the land of Judah; and there eat bread, and prophesy there. But prophesy not any more at Bethel; for it is the King's Chapel, and it is the King's Court [a]. Amos vii. 10.

Amos answered Amaziah, I am no Prophet, nor the Son of a Prophet; but I am an herdman, and a gatherer of Sycamore-fruit [b]. The Lord took me as I followed the flock, and the Lord said unto me, Go, prophesy unto my People Israel. Now therefore hear thou the word of the Lord. Thou sayest, Prophesy not against Israel; and drop not thy word against the House of Isaac. Therefore thus saith the Lord, Thy wife shall be an harlot in the City, and thy Sons and thy Daughters shall fall by the sword, and thy land shall be divided by line; and thou shalt die in a polluted land; and Israel shall surely go into captivity forth of his land.

S. Cyril of Alexandria says [c] that Amaziah, provoked at the Prophet's discourse, had his teeth broke in his head, in order to oblige him to be silent. Others say, that the same Amaziah procured several punishments to be inflicted on him; and that his Son Uzziah gave him a blow upon the temples with a stake, and knocked him down. The Prophet was carried back half dead to Tekoah, the place of his birth, where he died, and was buried with his fathers [d]. But these traditions are of no great certainty. It appears by the writings of this Prophet, that he retired into the lands belonging to Judah, and that he prophesied there for some time after what is related of Amaziah. Amos lived under Jeroboam the second, about the year of the World 3215. before J. C. 785. before the vulgar Æra 789.

AMBI-

[a] Amos prophesied under Jeroboam II. and then the Kings of Israel kept their Court at Samaria. But they had in all probability a palace at Bethel. [b] Amos vii. 14. Vellicans Sycomoros. בלם שקמים Theodot. Κνίζων συκάμινα. Plin. l. 13. c. 7. Sycomorus scalpendo tantum ferreis ungulibus, aliter non maturescit: id cum factum est, quarto die demetitur. [c] Cyrill. Præfat. exposition. in Amos. [d] Epiphan. de vita & morte Prophet. cap. 12. Isidor. de vita & morte SS c. 43. Doroth. in Synops. &c.

AMBIVIUS (Marcus) succeeded Coponius in the government of Judæa[t]. Annius Rufus was his successor, in the 13th year of J. C.

ארב AMBUSHES, Ambuscades, Insidiæ. מארב To lay in ambush. Insidiari. These words are not always taken in their proper signification, for laying ambushes for any one, attacking him in secret, laying snares for him. They sometimes signify no more than attacking a man who has no distrust of such a thing; attacking one behind, concealing ones self in some particular place in order to surprize any one. See the book of Judges, ch. ix. 25, 32, 34, 35. Abimelech, who lay lurking with his people in the heights of Sichem, so however as to rob and treat those who passed that way very ill, came and attacked the City of Sichem with his troops divided into three bodies: Tetendit insidias juxta Sichimam in quatuor locis. Literally according to the Hebrew, They prepared Ambuscades against Sichem in four Heads or Companies. And a little farther, ver. 43. Abimelech being informed that the Sichemites were marched, took his Army and divided it into three Bodies, and laid wait for them in the field. It seems certain, that in these passages Ambushes, properly so called, were not the things in question. In the first Book of Samuel, Saul complains that
1 Sam. xxii. 8, 13. David laid Ambuscades for him; Insidiator usque hodie permanens. Now nothing could be worse grounded than this accusation, if we understand the word insidiari in its proper signification; but he might say, tho' unjustly, that David was his secret enemy. And in the Chronicles it is
2 Chron. xx. 22. said that God turned the Ambushes laid by the enemies of Israel upon themselves; that is to say, their endeavours, their malice, their arms, he turned against themselves; for the enemies there mentioned came not in private, or by stratagem; they marched openly in arms against Israel.

AMELEK, the Father of Joash. This was that Joash who received orders from King Ahab to keep the Prophet Micaiah in his custody till this Prince's return from
Ch. xviii. 25. the war against the Syrians; in the year of the world 3107. before J. C. 893. before the vulgar Æra 897.

אמן Amen, AMEN, in Hebrew, signifies true, faithful, certain. It is made use of likewise to affirm any thing; and was a sort
John i. 51. & passim. of affirmation used often by our Saviour. Amen, Amen, dico vobis. Lastly, it is understood as expressing a wish, [v] Amen, So be it; or an affirmation, Amen, Yes.
1 Cor. xiv. 16. I believe it. How shall he that occupieth the room of the unlearned say Amen at thy giving of thanks, seeing he understandeth not what thou sayest. The Hebrews end the five books of Psalms, according to their way of distributing them, with the words Amen, Amen; which the Septuagint have translated Genoito, Genoito; and the Latins, Fiat, Fiat. The Greek and Latin Churches have preserved this word in their prayers, as well as Alleluia and Hosanna; because they observed more energy in them than in any terms which they could use in their own languages. At the conclusion of the publick prayers, the People answered with a loud voice, Amen. And St. Jerom[w] says, that at Rome, when the People answered Amen, the sound of their voices was like a clap of thunder, In similitudinem cœlestis tonitrui Amen reboat. The Jews assert, that the Gates of Heaven are opened to him who answers Amen with all his might.

AMERUTHA, a town of Upper Galilee, which Josephus fortified against the Romans, as he says in the account of his own life[x]. This is very probably the same as Meroth, which terminates the Upper Galilee westward[y]. It is perhaps Mearah of the Sidonians, spoken of in Joshua xiii. 4.

AMETHYST, a precious Stone, the ninth in place upon the High Priest's Rational or Breast-plate. The colour of it comes near that of new wine, and goes off with a violet. It is said to prevent people's getting drunk; that it is a defence against the effects of poison; and that it is a help to conception. The Hebrew name which the Septuagint and Vulgate translate Amethyst, is Achalma, which may signify S[illegible]. Ex. xxviii. 19. & xxxix. 12.
The Chaldee, Onkelos, and the Syriac, translate it Een-egla, or the Eye of a Calf. אחלמה Achalma.
The name of Issachar was engraven on this Stone. 70. 'Ame-thyst.

AMI, Chief of a great family, which in Ezra's time returned from Babylon, Ezra ii. 57, 58.

I. AMINADAB, of the Tribe of Judah, the Son of Aram, and Father of Naasson, and Elisheba the Wife of Aaron the High Priest.

II. AMINADAB. The Chariots of Aminadab are mentioned in the Canticles, as being extremely light. Or ever I was aware, my Soul made me like the Chariots of Aminadab[z]. He was very probably a Cant. vi. 12. celebrated Charioteer, whose horses were singularly swift.

III. AMINADAB, the Son of Koath, a Brother of Korah, 1 Chron. vi. 22.

IV. AMINADAB, or ABINADAB, the Son of [t] Antiq. l. 18. c. 3. [v] Numb. v. 22. Respondebit, Amen, Amen. Deut. xxvii. 15, 16, 17, &c. Dicet omnis populus Amen, Amen. [w] Hieronym. Præfat. in lib. 2. Epist. ad Galat. [x] Joseph. in vita sua, p. 1013. [y] Antiq. l. 3. c. 2.

[z] The Vulgate reads it thus, Anima mea conturbavit me propter quadrigas Aminadab; and our Septuagint, [illegible]; but the Vatican Edition reads it thus, [illegible]; which is a sense the Hebrew will admit of, שמתני מרכבות עמי נדיב.

of King Saul, who was killed with him in the battle of Gilboa, in the year of the World 2949. before J. C. 1051. [1 Sam. xxxi. 2. 1 Chr. viii. 33. x. 2.]

V. Aminadab, or Abinadab, a Levite, and inhabitant of Kirjath jearim, with whom the Ark was deposited, after it was brought back from the land of the Philistines [a]. [1 Sam. vii. 1.] He dwelt at Gibeah, that is to say, in the highest part of the City of Kirjath-jearim. Eleazar his Son was consecrated or appointed peculiarly to the office of keeping the Ark of the Lord. It is not certain whether Aminadab were at that time living. The Ark remained at Kirjath-jearim from the year of the World 2888 to 2959, that is to say, threescore and eleven years. Then David brought it from Kirjath-jearim to Jerusalem; [2 Sam. vi. 1, 2, 3.] but dared not bring it into his own house, by reason of the death of Uzzah; he lodged it therefore at Obededom's, where it continued some months.

AMITTAI, Father to the Prophet Jonah. Jonah i. 1. and 2 Kings xiv. 25.

AMIZABAD, the Son of Benaiah. Benaiah is known to have been one of the principal Officers in David's armies. His Son Amizadab commanded a troop under him. [1 Chr. xxvii. 6.]

AMMAN, Ammonites. See Ammon, Ammonites. The Capital of the Ammonites, called in Scripture Rabbath-Ammon, and in profane Authors Philadelphia, is likewise sometimes called Amman, and the Country of the Ammanites, Ammanitis.

I. AMMIEL, the Son of Gemal, of the Tribe of Dan, was one of the twelve deputed to go and view the Land of Canaan, Numb. xiii. 12.

II. Ammiel, a native of Lodobar, a City situated in the Tribe of Simeon. Ammiel was the Father of Machir and Bathsheba, who was first married to Uriah, then to David, by whom she had Solomon. [Ch. iii. 5. & 2 Sam. ix. 4, 5.]

III. Ammiel, the Son of Obededom the Levite, who was made Porter of the Temple under the reign of David. [Ch. xxvi. 5.]

I. AMMIHUD, the Son of Ephraim, and Father of Elishama, Numb. i. 10. and 1 Chr. vii. 26.

II. Ammihud, of the Tribe of Simeon, and Father of Shemuel, or Samuel, very different from the Prophet of that name, Numb. xxxiv. 20.

III. Ammihud, of the Tribe of Naphtali, Father of Pedahel, Numb. xxxiv. 28.

IV. Ammihud, the Father of Talmai, King of Geshur, 2 Sam. xiii. 37.

AMMISHADDAI, Father of Ahiezer, of the Tribe of Dan, Numb. i. 12. x. 25.

I. AMMON, or No-Ammon, a City of Egypt. The Chaldee and the author of the Vulgate generally translate this term Alexandria. They doubtless were not ignorant that Alexandria is much more modern than Jeremiah, Ezekiel, and Nahum, who speak of No-Ammon, which by these Interpreters is render'd Alexandria; but they might believe this last to be at or near the same place where Alexandria was afterwards built, which nevertheless does not appear by History; for there was only the town of Rachotis upon the Sea near the place where the City of Alexandria was built. [Jerem. xlix. 25. Ezek. xxx. 14, 15, 16. Nahum iii. 8.]

The marks whereby the Prophets describe No-Ammon are, that it was situate among the Rivers, that it had the waters round about it, whose rampart was the Sea, and her wall was from the Sea; which induces us to think that No-Ammon * is Diospolis, or the City of Jupiter, situated in the Delta, upon an arm of the Nile, between Busiris to the South, and Mendes to the North, at a very little distance from the Mediterranean. There were such lakes about it as might be well called Seas in the style of the Hebrews. The ruin of this City, which was foretold, and so distinctly describ'd by the Prophets, happen'd under Esar-haddon and Nebuchadnezzar, and perhaps under Sennacherib. See our Comments upon the Prophets Ezekiel xxx. 14, 15, 16. and Nahum iii. 8. But notwithstanding all we have here said to support the opinion of No-Ammon's being Diospolis, we must confess ingenuously, upon farther reflection, that this is not at all certain, and Thebes, the Capital of Upper Egypt, may be understood to have been No-Ammon. The Reader may see what we have to say in favour of this opinion in the article Thebes.

II. Ammon, or Hammon, or Jupiter Ammon, the celebrated God of the Egyptians, whom we take to be the same as Ham, who peopled Africk, and was the Father of Mizraim, the Founder of the Egyptians †. Ammon had a famous Temple in Africk, where he was adored under the figure of a Ram; for in this manner the

[a] Joseph Antiq. l. 6. c. 2.

* Sir Isaac Newton, in his short Chronicle, says, that Sesac, King of Egypt adorned Thebes, and dedicated it to his Father Ammon by the name of No-Ammon, or Ammon-No, that is, the People or City of Ammon; whence the Greeks called it Diospolis, the City of Jupiter. Sesac also erected Temples and Oracles to his Father in Thebes, Ammonia, and Ethiopia, and thereby caused his Father to be worshipped as a God in those Countries: And this, continues Sir Isaac Newton, was the original of the Worship of Jupiter Ammon, and the first mention of Oracles that I meet with in profane History, Sir Isaac Newton's Chronology, &c. p. 18.

† Sir Isaac Newton, in his Account of the Empire of Egypt, tells us, that Sesostris or Sesac, after his Father's death, built Temples to him in his Conquests; whence it came to pass that Jupiter Ammon was worshipped in Ammonia, and Ethiopia, and Arabia, and as far as India, according to the Poet, Lucan l. ix.

Quamvis Ethiopum populis, Arabumque beatis
Gentibus, atque Indis unus sit Jupiter Ammon.

Chronology, &c. p. 216.

the Egyptians represented their Gods under the form of certain animals. The Temple of Ammon was situated in a delicious spot, surrounded every where with a frightful desart. Here there was an Oracle of eminent note, which Alexander the Great consulted. This Oracle however, as well as others, fell insensibly into contempt. In Strabo's time it was not in the vogue it had been, and in Plutarch's time scarce any regard at all was had to it; and in the reign of Theodosius, according to the testimony of Prudentius, there was no more talk of it. The Scripture says nothing of this false Deity in particular, but speaks of Ham, and of the City of Ammon or No-Ammon, which was principally devoted to it. Hammon, the God of the Egyptians, was the same as the Jupiter of the Greeks *; for which reason these latter call the City which the Egyptians name No-Ammon, the habitation of Ammon, Diospolis, or the City of Jupiter.

III. AMMON, or Ben-Ammi, the Son of Lot, born of this Patriarch and his youngest Daughter, in the year of the World 2107, before J.C. 1893, before the vulgar Æra 1897. [Gen. xix. 34, 38.] We know no particulars of Ammon's life. The place of his abode was to the East of the Dead Sea and Jordan, in the Mountains of Gilead. He was the Father of the Ammonites, a famous People always at enmity with the Israelites.

AMMONITES, a People descended from Ammon, whom we have been speaking of. They are called sometimes Ammanites: They destroyed the Giants Zamzummims, and seized upon their Country. [Deut. ii. 19, 20, 21.] God forbad Moses, and by him the Israelites, to attack the Ammonites, because he did not intend to give their land unto the Hebrews. Before the People of Israel enter'd the land of Canaan, the Amorites had by Conquest got great part of the Countries belonging to the Ammonites and Moabites. This Moses retook from the Amorites, and divided between the Tribes of Gad and Reuben. In the time of Jephthah, the Ammonites declared war against the Israelites, under pretence that they detained a great part of the Country which had formerly been theirs before the Amorites possessed it. [Judg. xi. 13.] Jephthah declared, that as this was an acquisition which the Israelites had made in a just war, and what they had taken from the Amorites, who had long enjoyed it by right of conquest, he was under no obligation to restore it. The Ammonites were not satisfied with this reason, so Jephthah gave them battle, and won it.

The Ammonites and Moabites generally united whenever there was any design set afoot of attacking the Israelites. After the death of Othniel, the Ammonites and Amalekites joined with Eglon, King of Moab, to oppress the People of the Lord. [Ch. iii. 13.] Some years after, that is to say, in the year of the World 2799, the Ammonites were great oppressors of the Israelites beyond Jordan; [From the Year of the World 2661 to 2679.] but in 2817 God raised up Jephthah to deliver them from this subjection. In the beginning of Saul's reign, in the year of the World 2909, before J. C. 1191, before the vulgar Æra 1195, Naash King of the Ammonites having set down before Jabesh-Gilead reduced the inhabitants so low as to desire a capitulation. Naash answered that he would accept of their surrender upon no other conditions than their submitting to have every one his right eye pluckt out, that so they might be made a reproach to Israel; [1 Sam. xi. 1.] but Saul coming seasonably to the succour of Jabesh, delivered the City and People from the barbarity of Naash.

David had been the King of Ammon's friend; and after the death of this Prince, he sent to make his compliments of condoleance to Hanun his Son and successor, who imagining that these Ambassadors were come as spies to observe his strength, and the condition of his Kingdom, treated them in a very injurious manner. David revenged the affront offered to his Ambassadors, and subdued the Ammonites, the Moabites, and the Syrians their allies. Ammon and Moab continued under the obedience of King David and Solomon, and after the separation of the ten Tribes, were subject to the Kings of Israel till the death of Ahab, in 3107, before J.C. 893, before the vulgar Æra 897. [2 Kings i. 1.]

Jehoram, the Son of Ahab, and Successor of Ahaziah, defeated the Moabites in 3109. [Ch. iii. 4, 5, 6, & seq.] But it does not appear that his victory was so compleat as to reduce them to his obedience. At the same time the Ammonites, Moabites, and other People made an irruption upon the lands belonging to Judah, but they were forced back and routed by Jehoshaphat. [2 Chr. xx. 1, 2, & seq.] Isaiah threatens the Moabites with a misfortune which [Is. xv. xvi.] was to happen three years after his prediction, which had a view probably to the war which Salmanesar made against them about the year of the World 3277, before J.C. 723, before the vulgar Æra 727.

After the Tribes of Reuben, Gad, and the half Tribe of Manasseh were carried into captivity by Tiglath Pilasser in 3264, before J. C. 736, before the vulgar Æra 740, the Ammonites and Moabites took possession of the Cities belonging to these Tribes. Jeremiah reproaches them for it. [Jerem. xlix. 1.] The Ambassadors of the Ammonites were some of those to whom this Prophet presented the cup of the Lord's fury, and directed directed to make bonds and yokes for themselves, exhorting them to submit to Nebuchadnezzar, and threatening them, if they did not, with captivity and slavery. [Jer. xxvii. 2, 3, 4.]

* In After-ages the Egyptian and Greek names were both united, and this Deity was called Jupiter Hammon.

Ezekiel denounces their intire destruction, and tells them that God would give them up to the People of the East, who should set their palaces in their Country, so that there should be no more mention of the Ammonites among the Nations; and all this as a punishment to them for insulting the Israelites upon the calamities they suffer'd, and the destruction of their Temple by the Chaldæans. We believe that these misfortunes happen'd to them in the fifth year after the taking of Jerusalem [a], when Nebuchadnezzar made war against all the People who dwelt upon the confines of Judea, in the year of the World 3420 or 21, before J. C. 579, before the vulgar Æra 583. [Ezek. xxv. 4, 10.]

It is probable that Cyrus gave the Ammonites and Moabites the liberty of returning into their own Country, from whence they had been removed by Nebuchadnezzar; for we see them in the place of their former settlement, expos'd to those revolutions which were common to the People of Syria and Palestine, and subject sometimes to the Kings of Egypt, and sometimes to the Kings of Syria.

Antiochus the Great took Rabboth or Philadelphia, their Capital, demolished the walls, and put a garrison into it [b] in 3806. During the persecutions of Antiochus Epiphanes, the Ammonites shewed their hatred to the Jews, and exercised great cruelties against such of them as lived in their parts [c]. [1 Macc. v. 6—45.] Justin Martyr says, that in his time there were still many Ammonites remaining [d]; but Origen assures us [e], that when he was living they were known only under the general name of Arabians. Thus was the prediction of Ezekiel accomplished, who said that the Ammonites should be destroyed in such a manner as not to be remember'd among the Nations. [Ezek. xxv. 10.]

AMMONIUS, General of Alexander Balas's Troops, was accused by Ptolemy Philometor of a design to poison him; but it is believed, that this was only a pretence made use of by Philometor for dethroning his Son-in-law Alexander Balas, and taking possession of his Kingdom. He therefore attacked Balas, defeated him, took his Daughter Cleopatra from him, and gave her to Demetrius Nicanor. See Joseph. Antiq. l. 13. c. 7. p. 436, 437. He says, that Alexander refusing to deliver up Ammonius to Philometor, he concluded Balas to be his accomplice, and the principal author of those secret plots which Ammonius had formed against him. So that to revenge himself, he marched against Antioch, the inhabitants whereof were very much dissatisfied with Ammonius, by reason of the several vexations which they suffered under him. Ammonius endeavoured to escape by disguising himself in a Woman's dress; but he was apprehended and put to death, in the year of the World 3859. before J. C. 141. before the vulgar Æra 145.

I. AMNON, the eldest Son of David and Ahinoam his second Wife, having conceived a violent passion for his Sister Tamar, who was the Daughter of David and Maachah, and Absalom's Sister, grew very uneasy and consumptive; which being observed by Jonadab the Son of Shimeah, David's Brother, and a great friend to Amnon, he said, Why art thou, being the King's Son, lean from day to day? Amnon discovered his passion to him, and the impossibility there seemed to be of satisfying it. Jonadab advised him to counterfeit sickness, and said, When the King thy Father cometh to see thee, say unto him, I pray thee let my Sister Tamar come and give me meat, and dress the meat in my sight, that I may see it, and eat it at her hand. Amnon followed this advice, and the King easily granted his request. When Tamar came to the Apartment where her Brother Amnon lay, she took flour, kneaded it, and made cakes in his sight, and did bake the cakes. And she took a pan and poured them out before him. [2 Sam. xiii. 1, 2, &c. In the Year of the World 2972, before J. C. 1028, before the vulgar Æra 1032.]

But Amnon would eat nothing. He ordered every body out of his room; and calling his Sister to him in the most private part of the chamber, where his bed was, he would have offered violence to her. But Tamar said to him, Nay, my Brother, do not force me; for no such thing ought to be done in Israel; do not thou this folly. And I, whither shall I cause my shame to go? And as for thee, thou shalt be as one of the fools in Israel. Now therefore I pray thee, speak unto the King, for he will not with-hold me from thee [f].

But Amnon hearkening only to the dictates of his passion, forced her, and abused her: after which his aversion to her was more excessive than his love had been. He would have obliged her to leave the room, but she making some resistance, he called in one of his servants, ordered him to turn her out, and shut the door after her. Her Brother Absalom meeting her all in tears, making sad outcries, and having her head covered with ashes, comforted her, and advised her to be silent. David, ed, upon information of what had passed, was extremely afflicted. But as he loved Amnon, who was his eldest Son, very tenderly, he was unwilling to do any thing that might grieve him.

[a] Joseph. Antiq. [b] Polyb. l. v. [c] Joseph. Antiq. l. 12. c. xii. [d] Justin Dialog. cum Tryphone p. 272. [e] Origen in Job. [f] The Law, Levit. xviii. 11. forbids marriages between Brothers and Sisters: Tamar probably was not sufficiently inform'd of this, or the disorder she was in hindred her from reflecting on it.

Absalom kept his resentment of this affront close within his heart for two years, waiting an opportunity to revenge it. One day he invited the King his Father, and all his Brothers, to an entertainment which he made at Baal-hazor, upon the shearing of his sheep. The King thanked him: but Absalom entreated him with so much earnestness, that he permitted him to carry with him the Princes his Sons, and particularly Amnon. Absalom gave his orders to his people, charging them that when they saw Amnon disordered with wine, upon the signal given, they should strike and kill him: Fear not, said he, have not I commanded you? The Officers executed what their Master had directed them to do, and Amnon was dispatched in the midst of his good cheer, at his Brother Absalom's house, in the year of the World 2974. before J. C. 1026. before the vulgar Æra 1030.

II. AMNON, the Son of Shimon, 1 Chr. iv. 20.

AMOK, of the race of those Priests who returned from Babylon, Neh. xii. 7, 20.

I. AMON, Governor of Samaria, kept the Prophet Micaiah in custody, by King
1 Kings xxii. 26. Ahab's order.

II. AMON, fourteenth King of Judah, Son of Manasseh and Meshullemeth, the Daughter of Haruz, of Jotbah. He began to reign in the year of the World 3363. before J. C. 637. before the vulgar Æra 641, at the age of two and twenty, and reigned only two years at Jerusalem. He did evil in the sight of the Lord, as his
2 Kings xxi. 19, 20, 21. Father Manasseh did. He forsook the God of his Fathers, and worshiped Idols. His servants conspired against him, and slew him in his own house: but the People killed all the Conspirators, and established his Son Josiah in his Throne. He was buried in the Garden of Uzza. We know no other particulars of his life. His death happened in the year of the World 3365. before J. C. 635, before the vulgar Æra 639.

AMORITES, People descended from Amorrhæus, the fourth Son of Canaan. They first of all peopled the Mountains lying to the West of the Dead Sea. They had likewise establishments to the East of the same Sea, between the brooks Jabbok and Arnon, from whence they forced Josh. v. 1. Numb. xiii. 30. xxi. 29. the Ammonites and Moabites. Moses made a conquest of this Country from their Kings Sihon and Og, in the year of the World 2553. before J. C. 1447. before the vulgar Æra 1451. Judg. xi. 19, 20, &c.

Amos speaks of their gigantick stature and valour. Amos ii. 9. He compares their height with that of Cedars, and their strength with that of an Oak. The name Amorite is often taken in Scripture for all Canaanites in general. The Lands which the Amorites possessed on this side Jordan, were given to the Tribe of Judah; and those which they had enjoyed beyond this river were distributed between the Tribes of Reuben and Gad.

The Arabians derive their name Amorites from the City of Gomorrah, one of the five which were condemned to perish by fire from Heaven. But Gomorrah, or Hamorrah [g], is written otherwise than Emor the Father of the Amorites. So that there is no probability that either the Amorites or Emor their Father founded Gomorrah, and called it by their name.

I. AMOS, the fourth of the small Prophets, was, as is said, of the little Town of Tekoah, in the Tribe of Judah, four leagues Southward from Jerusalem. There is no good proof however that he was a native of this place, but only that he retired thither, when he was driven from Bethel, which was in the kingdom of the ten Tribes. It is very probable that he was born within the territories of Israel, and that his Mission was directed principally to this Kingdom.

As he was prophesying in Bethel, where the golden Calves were, in the reign of Jeroboam the second, about the year of the World 3215. before the birth of J. C. 785. before the vulgar Æra 789. Amaziah the High-Priest of Bethel accused him before King Jeroboam, saying, Amos hath Amos vii. 10, 11, &c. conspired against thee in the midst of the House of Israel; the land is not able to bear all his words; for thus Amos saith, Jeroboam shall die by the sword, and Israel shall surely be led away captive out of their own land. Amaziah said therefore unto Amos, O thou Seer, go, flee thee away into the land of Judah, and there eat bread, and prophesy there. But prophesy not again any more at Bethel, for it is the King's Chapel, and it is the King's Court.

Amos answered Amaziah, I was no Prophet, neither was I a Prophet's Son; but I was an herdman, and a gatherer of Sycamore fruit [h]. And the Lord took me as I followed the flock, and the Lord said unto me, Go, prophesy unto my people Israel. Now therefore hear thou the word of the Lord; Thou sayest, Prophesy not against Israel, and drop not thy word against the house of Isaac. Therefore thus saith the [g] Gen. x. 19. עמרה Gomorrha אמורי Amorrhæus.

[h] The Sycamore is a sort of Fig-tree common in Egypt and Palestine, the fruit whereof does not ripen till it is prick'd with iron nails. After it was thus used, it would ripen in three days. See Plin. l. 13. c. 7. Theophr. & Dioscorid. See likewise Theodoret upon Amos vii.

the Lord, Thy Wife ſhall be an Harlot in the City, and thy Sons and thy Daughters ſhall fall by the ſword, and thy land ſhall be divided by line; and thou ſhalt die in a polluted land, and Iſrael ſhall ſurely go into captivity forth of his land. After this the Prophet retired into the Kingdom of Judah, and dwelt in the town of Tekoah, where he continued to propheſy. He complains in many places of the violence offered him by endeavouring to oblige him to ſilence; and bitterly exclaims againſt the diſorders of Iſrael.

He began to propheſy the ſecond year before the earthquake, which happened in Amos i. 1. the reign of King Uzziah, and which Joſephus [i], with moſt of the antient and modern Commentators, refers to this Prince's uſurpation of the Prieſt's office, [k] when he attempted to offer incenſe to the Lord. The firſt of his Prophecies, in order of time, are thoſe of the VII Chapter. The others he pronounced in the Town of Tekoah, whither he retired. His firſt two Chapters are againſt Damaſcus, the Philiſtines, Tyrians, Edomites, Ammonites, Moabites, the Kingdom of Judah, and that of the ten Tribes. The evils which he threatens them with refer to the times of Salmanezer, Tiglath-pileſer, Sennacherib and Nebuchadnezzar, who did ſo much miſchief to theſe provinces, and at laſt led the Iſraelites into captivity.

He foretold the misfortunes which the Kingdom of Iſrael ſhould fall into after the death of Jeroboam the ſecond, who was then living. He foretold the death of King Zechariah, the invaſion of the lands belonging to Iſrael by Phul and Tiglath-pileſer, Kings of Aſſyria. He ſpeaks of the Captivity of the ten Tribes, and of their return into their own Country. He makes ſharp invectives againſt the ſins of Iſrael, againſt their effeminacy and avarice, their harſhneſs to the poor, the ſplendor of their buildings, and the delicacy of their tables. He reproves the people of Iſrael for going to Bethel, Dan, Gilgal, and Beerſheba, which were the moſt famous Pilgrimages of the Country, and for ſwearing by the Gods of theſe places.

The time and manner of his death are not known. Some old Authors relate [l], that Amaziah Prieſt of Bethel, whom we have ſpoken of, provoked by the diſcourſes of the Prophet, had his teeth broke, in order to ſilence him. Others [m] ſay, that Hoſea, or Uzziah the Son of Amaziah, ſtruck him with a ſtake upon the temples, and knocked him down, and almoſt killed him; that in this condition he was carried to Tekoah, where he died, and was buried with his Fathers. This is the account we have from theſe Authors. On the contrary, it is our opinion, that he propheſied a long time at Tekoah, after the adventure which he had with Amaziah. And the Prophet taking no notice of the ill treatment which he is ſaid to have received from Uzziah, his ſilence is an argument that he ſuffered nothing from him.

S. Jerom obſerves, that there is nothing great and ſublime in the ſtyle of Amos.
[n] He applies theſe words of St. Paul to 2 Cor. xi.
him, rude in ſpeech, tho' not in knowledge. 6.
He ſays farther, that as every one chuſes Amos i. 2.
to ſpeak of his own art, Amos generally makes uſe of compariſons taken from the country life, wherein he had been brought up. S. Auſtin [o] ſhews, that there was a certain kind of eloquence in the Sacred Writers, directed by the Spirit of Wiſdom, and ſo proportioned to the nature of the things they treated of, that even they who accuſe them of ruſticity and unpoliteneſs in their way of writing, could not chuſe a ſtyle more ſuitable, were they to have ſpoken on the ſame ſubject, to the ſame perſons, and in the ſame circumſtances.

II. Amos, the Father of the Prophet Iſaiah, was, as it is ſaid, the Son of King Joaſh, and Brother to Amaziah. The Rabbins [p] pretend, that Amos, Iſaiah's Father, was a Prophet, as well as his Son, according to the rule received among them, that when the Father of a Prophet is called in Scripture by his name, it is an indication that he has had the gift of Prophecy. S. Auſtin [q] conjectured that the Prophet Amos, the fourth among the ſmall Prophets, was the Father of Iſaiah. But the names of theſe two perſons are written differently [r]. Beſides, Amos, Iſaiah's Father, was, as well as he himſelf, of Jeruſalem, and of much ſuperior quality to the Prophet Amos, who was one that had the keeping of the larger ſort of Cattle. Some are of opinion, that the Man of God who ſpake to King Amaziah, and 2 Chron.
obliged him to ſend back the hundred xxv. 7, 8.
thouſand Men of Iſrael whom he had purchaſed to march againſt the Edomites, was Amos the Father of Iſaiah, and Brother to King Amaziah. But this opinion is ſupported by no proofs.

III. Amos, the Son of Nahum, and Luke iii.
Father 25.

[i] Joſeph. Antiq. l. ix. c. 11. p. 319, 320. [k] The Rabbins, and Procopius of Gaza, are of opinion that this happened in the twenty fifth year of Uzziah, and conſequently in the year of the world 3219. But this cannot be: for Jotham the Son of Uzziah, who was born in 3221. was of age to govern, and conſequently was between fifteen and twenty years of age when his Father undertook to offer incenſe, and was ſtruck with a leproſy. See Uſher, in the year of the World 3221. [l] Cyrill. Præfat. in Amos. [m] Epiphan. de vita Prophet. c. 12. Iſidor. de vita & morte SS. c. 43. Doroth. Synopſ. c. 2. Chronic. Paſcal. p. 147. [n] Hieronym. Prolog. expoſit. in Amos. [o] Aug. l. iv. de Doctr. Chriſt. c. 7. [p] Hieronym. ex Hebr. vide in Iſai. xxxvii. 2. xxxviii. 1. Clem. Alex. l. 1. Stromat. [q] Aug. l. xviii. de Civit. Dei c. 27.
[r] עמוץ Father to Iſaiah. אמס the Prophet Amos.

Father of Mattathias, is to be met with in the Genealogy of our Saviour according to the Flesh, as it stands recorded in St. Luke.

AMPHIPOLIS, a City lying between Macedon and Thrace, but depending upon the Kingdom of Macedon. There is mention of it in the Acts of the Apostles; (Acts xvii. 1.) St. Paul and Silas being deliver'd out of prison, left Philippi, went to Thessalonica, and pass'd through Amphipolis. This City had the name likewise of Chrysopolis or Christopolis.

AMPHORA, is often taken in an appellative Sense for a Pitcher, or vessel to hold wine or water. (Luke xxii. 10.) For example, There shall a Man meet you bearing a Pitcher of water, Amphoram aquæ portans. At other times it is taken for a a certain measure: (Dan. xiv. 3.) For instance, There were spent every day upon the Idol Bel six vessels of Wine, Vini amphoræ sex. The Amphora is not an Hebrew measure, and the original Hebrew of the place, wherein this term is to be met with, is no where extant. The Roman Amphora contained two urns, or eight and forty Sextarii, or fourscore pounds, at twelve ounces to the pound *: But the Attick or Athenian Amphora contained three urns, or an hundred and twenty pounds, at twelve ounces each, which make but ninety, at sixteen ounces to the pound.

AMPLIAS, whom St. Paul speaks of (Rom. xvi. 8.) in his Epistle to the Romans, was one whom he particularly loved. It is not certainly known who he was, nor what was done; by him but the Greeks say, that he was ordained Bishop of Odyssopolis in Mœsia by St. Andrew, was an apostolical Person, at least one of the seventy two Disciples, and had the honour of Martyrdom. They observe his Festival on the 31st of October.

I. AMRAM, the Son of Koath, of the Tribe of Levi, married Jochebed, of whom he had Aaron, Miriam, and Moses. He died in Egypt, at an hundred and thirty (Exod. vi. 20.) seven years of Age. It is not very well known in what year of the World he died.

II. AMRAM, the Son of Bani, was one of those who after the return from Babylon separated from his Wife, whom he had married contrary to the express di- (Ezra x. 34.) rection of the Law.

AMRAPHEL, the King of Shinar or Babylonia, confederated with Chedorlaomer, King of the Edomites, and two other Kings, to make war against the Kings of Pentapolis, that is to say, of Sodom, Gomorrah, and the three neighbouring Cities. The Kings who were in league with Amraphel worsted those of Pentapolis, plunder'd their City, and carried off abundance of captives, among whom was Lot, Abraham's Nephew; but Abraham (Gen. xiv. 1, 2, &c.) pursued them, retook Lot, and recover'd all the spoil, in the year of the World 2092, before J.C. 1908, before the vulgar Æra 1912.

AMULETS, or Preservatives, are certain characters, ligaments, stones or metals, engraved or adorned with Stars, to which a power was attributed of preserving People from mischief, from being bewitched, and from diseases. Some are of opinion that Laban's Teraphims, which (Ch. xxxi. 19.) were carried away by Rachel, and the ear-rings which Jacob hid under an oak, (Ch. xxxv. 4.) were Preservatives or Amulets. See hereafter TALISMANS.

AMZI, the Son of Zechariah, and Father to Pelaliah, Neh. xi. 12.

ANA. We are acquainted with a City of this name at the extremity of Arabia deserta, upon the Euphrates. Tavernier says it takes up the two banks of this river much as Paris lies upon the two banks of the Seine; but another Traveller writes to me, that it takes up but one of the banks of the Euphrates, and has but one Street, which is extremely large. There is a very fine mosque in an island which lies near to it. The land about it for half a league is well cultivated, but beyond this distance there is nothing but frightful desarts.

ANAB, a City in the Mountains of Judah, Josh. xi. 21. St. Jerom believes it to be the same with Bethanaba, eight miles Eastward from Diospolis. Eusebius places Bethoanab at four miles distance from the same City of Diospolis. Epiphanius [e] speaks of a City or Village called Anablata, in the Diocese of Jerusalem towards Bethel; but I do not think any of these places to be the Anab mentioned by Joshua, which with Hebron and Debir is set by him more to the South of Judah.

ANAGLYPHA. This term is to be found in 1 Kings vi. 32. Sculpsit in eis picturam Cherubim, & palmarum Species, & Anaglypha. This last word is Greek [f], and signifies all sorts of figures in relievo, or rather all sorts of engraving embossed, or in basso relievo. Vessels adorned with figures in relievo, Opera signi, as Virgil speaks [g]; or in asperitatem excisa, as Pliny terms them [h], are what we call Anaglypha.

But the passage in the book of Kings where this word is met with, signifies, that as there were figures of Palm-trees, Cherubims, and blown Lilies all round the wall within the Sanctuary, Solomon appointed the same to be carved in basso relievo

[e] Epiphan. Epist. ad Joan. Ierosol. [f] Ἀνάγλυφα Cælata. [g] Æneid. v. v. 267. [h] Plin. l. xxxiii. c. 11.

* The Amphora in Dr. Arbuthnot's Account of it contained seven English Gallons and one Wine pint; the Urna three Gallons, four Wine pints and a half; the Sextarius one Wine pint. See his Tables of ancient Coins, Weights, Measures, &c. c. ix.

relievo upon the doors of the Sanctuary; or, as the Hebrew reads it, he carved upon them carvings of Cherubims, and Palm-trees, and open Flowers [w].

•ANAGOGE. This is one of the four senses wherein the Scripture is interpreted, viz. the literal, allegorical, anagogical, and tropological. The anagogical sense is, when the sacred text is explained with a regard to the end which Christians should have in view, and this is eternal life. For example, the rest of the Sabbath, in the anagogical sense, signifies the repose of everlasting blessedness.

ANAH, the Son of Zibeon the Hivite, and Father of Aholibamah, Esau's Wife. While he was feeding Asses in the desart, [Genes. xxxvi. 24.] he discover'd Springs there of warm water. Thus St. Jerom translates the Hebrew text [מצא את הי-מים.] jemim; the Septuagint and other Hebrew Translators have preserved the term jamim or jemim; he found jamim or the jamims: Others [x] translate, he discover'd the manner of producing mules, by copulation between a She-ass and an Horse, or between an Ass and a Mare; but the Scripture never calls Mules jamim, nor are such creatures at all to be met with in the Scripture till after David.

Others [y] are of opinion, that Anah found, that is, attacked, surprized the People called Jamim or Jemim in the Wilderness, where he was feeding droves of Asses. The Samaritan Version reads, that Anah found the Emeans, a sort of People whom Moses takes notice of, Deut. ii. 10. The Emims dwelt therein in times past, a People great and many, and tall as the Anakims. These Emims dwelt in the neighbourhood of Seir, where Anah fed his Asses. The Hebrew term Matza, which signifies to find, is likewise taken often for to attack or surprize an enemy. This to me seems to be the true explanation.

Some have thought, but without any proof, that Anah had merited divine honours, and that he is named in the second book of Kings, where it is said that the Sepharvaim adored Henah, or Anah, and Ivah. See likewise 2 Kings xix. 12. and Isaiah xxxvii. 13.

ANAHARATH, a City belonging to [Josh. xix. 19.] the Tribe of Issachar.

ANAK, Anakim, famous Giants in Palestine. Anak, the Father of the Anakims, was the Son of Arba, who gave his [Ch. xiv. 15.] name to Kirjath-Arba, or Hebron. Anak had three Sons, Sheshai, Ahiman, and [Ch. xv. 14. Num. xiii. 23.] Talmai, who produced [*] a great many others, terrible for their fierceness and their extraordinary stature. The Hebrews said, that in comparison of these monstrous Men, they were but Grass-hoppers. Some have thought that the name of Phœnician, given to the Canaanites, and particularly to the Sidonians, came from Bene-Anac, Sons [בני ענק Bene-Anak.] of Anak. Others derive from it the Greek word Anax, which signifies King or Master. Caleb, assisted by the Tribe of Judah, took Kirjath-Arba, and destroyed [Judg. i. 20. Josh. xv. 14.] the Anakims in the year of the World 2559.

ANAMIM, second Son of Mizraim. [Genes. x. 13. ענמים.] He peopled the Mareotis, if we may credit the Paraphrast Jonathan, the Son of Uzziel, or the Pentapolis of Cyrene, according to the Paraphrast of Jerusalem. Bochart is of opinion that these Anamims are the People that dwell in the parts adjacent to the Temple of Jupiter Ammon, and in the Nasamonitis. We believe the Amanians and Garamantes to be descended from Anamim. The Hebrew Ger or Gar signifies a Passenger or Traveller. The name of Gar-amantes may be derived from Ger amanim. Their Capital is called Garamania in Solinus.

ANAMMELECH. It is said in the second book of Kings, that the inhabitants of Sepharvaim, who had been sent [2 Kings xvii. 31.] from beyond the Euphrates into the Country of Samaria, burned their Children there in honour of Anammelech and Adrammelech. We are of opinion that Adrammelech signifies the Sun, and Anammelech the Moon. Adrammelech imports a magnificent King, and Anammelech a gentle King. The Eastern People worshipped the Moon under the name of a Deity, and offer'd human Sacrifices both to Sun and Moon. [z] Some Rabbins imagine, that Anammelech was figured like a Mule, others describe him in the form of a Quail or a Pheasant; but this is very uncertain.

ANANI, the seventh Son of Eliœnai. [1 Chr. iii. 24.]

I. ANANIAS. When the Angel Raphael offer'd to bear Tobias company in his way to Rages, he told him that he was Azarias, the Son of Ananias the Great. Tobit answer'd, that he was of an illustrious extraction. [Tobit v. 12.] This is all we know of this Ananias.

II. Ananias, or Ananiah, of the Tribe of Benjamin, who, when the Jews returned from the Babylonish captivity, built part of the walls of Jerusalem. [Nehem. xi. 32.]

III. Ananias, a Jewish Merchant, who converted Izates, the Son of Monobazes, King of the Adiabenians, to Judaism [a]. Orosius [b] will have it that Ananias was a Christian, and that Izates was made a convert to Christianity by him. See above Adiabene. This conversion happened about the year of J. C. 41.

IV. Ananias

[w] מקלעות כרובים ותמרת ופטורי צצים. [x] Ita Hebræi. Vide Hieronym. quæst. Hebr. in Genes. [y] Bochart. de Anim. Sacr. p. 1. l. xi. c. 1. [z] Strabo, l. xi. & Lucian de Dea Syra. See our Dissertation upon the God Moloch, before the book of Leviticus, p. 30, 31. [a] Joseph. Antiq. l. xx. c. 1. [b] Oros. l. vii. c. 6.

IV. Ananias, Son of Nebedæus, High Priest of the Jews. He succeeded Joseph the Son of Camith[c], in the year of the World 4050, and was himself succeeded by Ishmael the Son of Fabæus, in the year of the World 4066. of J. C. 66. of the vulgar Æra 63. Quadratus Governour of Syria being come into Judæa upon the rumours which prevailed among the Samaritans and Jews, sent the High Priest Ananias to Rome[d], to give an account of his conduct to the Emperor Claudius. He justified himself so well that he was acquitted, and returned. St. Paul having been apprehended at Jerusalem, by the Tribune of the Roman Troops which guarded the Temple, declared to him that he was a Citizen of Rome, which obliged this Officer to treat him with some distinction. And as he did not know what it was whereof the Jews accused him, the next day he convened the Priests, and placed S. Paul in the midst of them, that he might have an opportunity to explain himself. S. Paul said to them, Men and Brethren, I have lived in all good conscience before God until this day. He said no more, and the High Priest Ananias commanded those who were near him to strike him on the face. The Apostle hereupon replied, God shall judge thee, thou whited Wall; for sittest thou to judge me after the Law, and commandest me to be smitten contrary to the Law? And they that stood by said, Revilest thou God's High Priest? Then said Paul, I wist not, Brethren, that he was the High Priest; for it is written, Thou shalt not speak evil of the Ruler of thy People.

Acts xxii. 23, 24. xxiii. 1, 2, 3, &c.

After this, St. Paul, knowing that the assembly was composed of Pharisees and Sadducees, cried out, Men and Brethren, I am a Pharisee, the Son of a Pharisee, of the hope and resurrection of the dead I am called in question. At these words the assembly was divided; and the Tribune fearing lest St. Paul should be pull'd in pieces by them, took him from amongst them. The next day above forty Men bound themselves under a great curse, neither to eat nor drink till they had killed Paul. They acquainted the Priests with their resolution, and intreated them to find out some opportunity to engage the Tribune once more to produce Paul before them, that they might dispatch him. But S. Paul having procured a discovery to be made of this design unto the Tribune, he ordered him to be conveyed to Cæsarea, that Felix, who was Governour of the Province, might take cognizance of his affair.

When the Priests understood that he was arrived at Cæsarea, Ananias the High Priest, and some other Jews went thither, in order to accuse him; but the affair was adjourned, and S. Paul continued two years there in prison. His prediction to Ananias, that God would smite him, was accomplished after this manner: Albinus Governour of Judæa being come into the Country, Ananias found means to gain him by his presents[e]. He was looked upon as the first Man of his Nation, by reason of his great riches, friends and fortune. But he had some violent people about him, who plundered the Country, and took by force the Tythes belonging to the Priests; and all this they did with impunity, by reason of the great credit which their Master had acquired by his wealth at Jerusalem.

Acts xxiv.

At the same time several companies of Assassins infected Judæa, and committed very great ravages. As soon as any of their companions fell into the hands of those who had the government of the Province, and were upon the point of being executed, they never failed to seize some of the domesticks or relations of the High Priest Ananias, that so this Pontiff might endeavour to procure the liberty of their Associates, in order to rescue those out of their hands who were detained by them. Thus they took one of Ananias's Sons, whose name was Eleazar, and did not release him till ten of their companions were sent back to them. Upon this licence their number encreased considerably, and the country was exposed to frequent ravages.

At last Eleazar his Son putting himself at the head of a party of Mutineers, who had made themselves Masters of the Temple[d], and forbad any to offer sacrifices for the Emperor, and the Assassins joining with him, he pulled down his Father's house, who hiding himself with his Brother, in the Aqueducts belonging to the Royal Palace, and being soon discovered by the Seditious, both of them were killed, they of the Faction taking no notice at all of Ananias's being the Father of their Leader. Thus God smote this whited Wall in the very beginning of the Jewish Wars. We are to distinguish what Josephus says of Ananias, when High Priest, from what he relates of the same Ananias when deposed from the Pontificate, lest we fall into the mistake of those who have made two persons of him.

V. Ananias, sirnamed the Sadducee[f], was one of the warmest defenders of the Rebellion which the Jews were engaged in against the Romans. He was sent by Eleazar the Leader of the Mutineers, to Metilius Captain of the Roman Troops, who was shut up in the Royal Palace of Jerusalem,

[c] Joseph. Antiq. l. xx. c. 3. [d] Ibid. l. xx. c. 5. [g] De Bello l. ii. c. 18. seu 32. p. 812, 813. c. 1.

[e] Ibid. c. 8. [f] Joseph. l. ii. de Bello c. 38.

Jerusalem, to promise from the Rebels, that they would give him and his people their lives, provided they would leave the place, and surrender up their arms. But Metilius having surrendred upon these conditions, the Factious, without any regard to their word, murdered all the Romans, except Metilius only, who promised to turn Jew.

In the year of J.C. 66. This was the Ananias sent by Eleazar to the Idumæans[h] with a request that they would come to the assistance of the Rebels at Jerusalem against Ananus, whom they had accused of a design to deliver up the City to the Romans. This happened in the year of J.C. 67.

VI. Ananias, Son of Masbbal, of the priestly race, and originally of Emmaus, was put to death by Simon, Head of a party of Malecontents. He was killed, together with fifteen other principal Jews of the City[i], during the last siege of Jerusalem by the Romans.

VII. Ananias, one of the first Christians of Jerusalem, who being converted, together with his Wife Sapphira, sold his estate, and reserved part of the purchase-money to himself; then went and carried the remainder to S. Peter, telling him that this was the whole price of his Inheritance. But the Apostle, to whom the Holy Ghost had revealed this falshood, reproached him very sharply for it, telling him that he had lied to the Holy Ghost, and not unto men. At the same time God smote Ananias, and he fell dead at the Apostle's feet. Some few hours after his Wife Sapphira came in; and S. Peter having put the same question to her which he had before proposed to her Husband, she too was guilty of the like falshood, and was suddenly struck dead in the same manner. This fell out in the year 33 or 34 of the vulgar Æra, in a little time after the Ascension. (Acts v. 1, 2, 3, & seq.)

Some have been so curious as to enquire wherein the sin of Ananias and Sapphira consisted; and whether their fault was punished with eternal damnation, or with bodily death only. As to the first question, many of the Antients have thought,[k] that when the first Believers embraced Christianity, and resolved to make sale of their estates, this resolution included at least a kind of implicit vow to reserve nothing to themselves, but to have every thing in common; and that Ananias and Sapphira having violated this vow, were guilty, in some sort, of perjury and sacrilege, by reserving to themselves a part of that which they had sold. They who are of this opinion make no doubt but that Ananias and Sapphira did herein commit a mortal sin. If to this you add their lying to the Holy Ghost, and the affront offered to God in tempting him, and questioning in some degree his power, their crime will appear still greater.

But we are not to conclude absolutely from hence that they were damned, because God might have inspired them with a lively sense of their fault, and have punished them with temporal death, to prevent their suffering those eternal torments which they had merited, if they had died obdurate and impenitent. Origen[l], S. Jerom[m], S. Austin[n], Petrus Damianus[o], and some Moderns[p], have followed that opinion which is most in favour of Ananias's salvation. But S. Chrysostom[q], S. Basil[r], and some others, are of the contrary opinion. There is no mark of their repentance visible, nor any interval between their crime and their death. It is safest in questions of this nature, which are more curious than necessary, to leave the decision of them to God.

VIII. Ananias, a Disciple of Jesus Christ, dwelling at Damascus, whom the Lord directed in a vision to go and find Paul, who had been lately converted, and was come to Damascus. (Acts ix. 10.) Ananias answered, Lord, I have heard by many of this Man, how much evil he hath done to thy Saints at Jerusalem; and how he hath authority from the Chief Priests to bind all that call upon thy Name. But the Lord said unto him, Go thy way, for he is a chosen vessel unto me, to bear my Name before the Gentiles, and Kings, and the Children of Israel. For I will shew him how great things he must suffer for my Name's sake. Ananias went therefore to the House where God had revealed to him that Paul was, and putting his hands on him said, Brother Saul, the Lord Jesus, who appeared unto thee in the way, hath sent me that thou mightest receive thy sight, and be filled with the Holy Ghost. And immediately there fell from his eyes as it had been scales, and he received sight forthwith, and arose and was baptized. We know no other circumstance of the life of Ananias besides this which we have related. The book of Apostolical Constitutions believes him to be a Layman[s]. OEcumenius[t], and some Moderns, think he was a Deacon; S. Austin[v] will have it that he was a Priest, because it is said that S. Paul was sent to him that he might at his his hands receive the Sacrament, the administration whereof was left by Jesus Christ to the Priesthood of his Church. The modern Greeks maintain, that he was one of the seventy Disciples, and made Bishop of Damascus, and that having obtained the Crown of Martyrdom, he was buried in the same City. There is a very fine Church to be seen there, in the place where he was interr'd; and the Turks, who have made a Mosque of it, do notwithstanding preserve a great respect for his Monument. The Greeks observe his Festival upon the first day of October, and the Latins on the 25th of January.

[h] Joseph. lib. iv. de Bello, c. 6. seu 15. in Gr. p. 877. [i] Joseph. de Bello, l. vi. c. 15. [k] Hieronym. Ep. 8. Basil. Serm. 1. de Inst. Monach. Chrysost. & Œcumen. in Act. v. Cyprian. l. 3. ad Quirin. Aug. Serm. Olim. 10. de diversis, nunc 148. n. 2. Gregor. Magn. l. i. Registri Ep. Olim. 31. nunc 34. Sanct. Tirin. Cornel. Grot. &c. [l] Origen. in Matt. Edit. Huet p. 383. [m] Hieronym. Ep. ad Demetria. [n] Aug. Serm. 148. & l. iii. c. 1. contra Permen. [o] Petr. Damian. lib. de contemptu sæculi, c. 3. [p] Sanct. Salmeron. Carthus. a Lapide. [q] Chrysost. in Act. v. [r] Basil Serm. 1. de Instit. Monach. [s] Const. Apost. l. viii. c. ult. [t] Œcumen. in Act. ix. ex Canone supra citato. [v] Aug. qu. l. ii. c. 40.

IX. Ananias. Thus some of the Antients call S. Anian, who was the first Bishop of Alexandria next to S. Mark.

I. ANANUS, the Son of Seth, and High Priest of the Jews, is called Annas in the Gospel. He enjoyed the High-Priesthood for eleven years; he succeeded Joazar the Son of Simon, and was succeeded by Ismael the Son of Phabi. After he was deposed, he still preserved the title of High Priest, and had a great share in the management of publick affairs. He is called High Priest in conjunction with Caiaphas, when St. John the Baptist entred upon the exercise of his Mission, tho' at that time he did not officiate in this character. He was Father-in-law to Caiaphas; and Jesus Christ was directly carried before Annas, after he had been taken into custody in the Garden of Olives. Josephus[w] remarks, that Ananus was looked upon to be one of the happiest Men of his Nation, five of his Sons having been High Priests, which great dignity he himself possessed for many years: an instance of good fortune which till then had happened to no one.

II. Ananus, Son to Ananus the High Priest, whom we have been speaking of[x], was High Priest for three months, in the 62d year of J. C. Josephus describes him to be a man extremely bold and enterprizing, of the sect of the Sadducees; who thinking it to be a favourable opportunity, after the death of Festus Governour of Judæa, and before the arrival of Albinus his Successor, assembled the Sanhedrim, and therein procured the condemnation of S. James, the brother or relation of Jesus Christ, according to the flesh, and Bishop of Jerusalem; and of some others whom they stigmatised as persons guilty of impiety; and so delivered them up to be stoned. This act of his was extremely displeasing to all good Men in Jerusalem, and they sent privately to Agrippa, who was come from Alexandria into Judæa, entreating him that he would forbid Ananus to attempt any thing of the like nature for the future. The King to punish his great confidence deprived him of the High-Priesthood, after three months possession of it, and conferr'd it on Jesus the Son of Damnaus. At the same time almost, the Governour Albinus, who was on his way from Alexandria to Jerusalem, having likewise been inform'd of Ananus's proceedings, wrote threatning letters to him, and told him, that he would curb his insolence as soon as he should come into the City.

It is very probable, [y] that this is the same Ananus who in the year 66 of Jesus Christ was nominated by the Council of the Jews to be Governour of Jerusalem. Josephus[z] commends extremely the prudence of this Governour, and mentions him as a very just man, a great lover of peace, zealous for the publick good, very vigilant, and very careful of the people's interests. Qualities very different from those which he attributes to him where he speaks of St. James's death, who was Bishop of Jerusalem[a]. But age might have allayed the fire of his youth, and restrained that excessive boldness which was then thought blameable in him.

The Zealots who were Masters of the Temple, having invited the Idumæans to come to their assistance, and defend Jerusalem against Ananus[b], whom they had a mind to render suspected, as one who corresponded with the Romans, Ananus gave orders to shut the gates against them. But the Idumæans having entred by night, during a great storm, began to search for Ananus, and having easily found him, they massacred him with a great deal of insult, and left his body exposed to beasts, and deprived of the honour of a burial. Josephus[c] says, that the death of Ananus was the first step towards the destruction of Jerusalem, and that the walls and strongest ramparts thereof were overthrown at the time when this man, in whose wise conduct all the hope of their preservation consisted, was sacrificed so unworthily. This happened in the year of J. C. 67.

III. Ananus, a native of Lydda, and Captain of the Jews; who, being accused before Quadratus, as the fomenter of that division which was arisen between the Jews and Samaritans, was sent to Rome with the High Priest Ananias, to give the Emperor Claudius an account of his conduct[d].

IV. Ananus, the Son of Jonathan, did all he could to hinder the Jews from rebelling against the Romans. He intended, with some others, to introduce Cestius into the City, but the Romans having been discover'd by the Factions, they drove them them from the walls with ſtones, and obliged Ananus and his party to retire for ſhelter to their houſes[e].

[w] Joseph. Antiq. l. xx. c. 8 p. 697. [x] Ibid. p. 698. [y] See M. de Tillemont, Note 25. upon the destruction of the Jews. [z] Joseph. l. ii. de Bello, c. 42. p. 822. [a] Idem de Bello, l. iv. c. 17. p. 881. c. 11. p. 872. c. 18. p. 883. [b] Joseph. de Bello, l. xvii, xviii. [c] Ibid. l. iv. c. 18. [d] Antiq. l. xx. c. 5.

V. ANANUS, a native of Emmaus, was one of Simon's guards who commanded the Rebels. He ſurrender'd himſelf to Titus with one Archelaus, the Son of Magadatus[f]. Titus received them with his uſual clemency; but as he ſaw that pure neceſſity had obliged them to ſurrender, he did not treat them as he had done other Jews who had had recourſe to him, but granted them their Lives only, with permiſſion to go where they would. At firſt he had reſolved to put them to death, as Villains who abandoned the defence of their Country, after they had put it in a flame.

ANARCHY. This is a Greek word[g], and ſignifies properly an Interregnum, or the condition of a City, Commonwealth, or State without a Head, King, or Sovereign: For example, it is ſaid in ſome places of the Scripture, In thoſe days there was no King in Iſrael, but every Man did that which was right in his own eyes. This is the true deſcription of an Anarchy. The firſt Anarchy that we know of in the Hebrew Commonwealth is that which enſued upon the death of Joſhua. This great Man dying without appointing his Succeſſor, and the People having choſen no Leader in his place, the Government devolved to the Elders of the Tribes, who govern'd each according to his own mind[h].

Judg. xvii. 6. xviii. 1. 31. xxi. 24.

After the death of theſe Elders the Anarchy was ſtill greater; and it is generally believed, that during this interval the ſeveral Stories happen'd which are related at the end of the book of Judges, viz. the Story of Micah and the Idol, which he ſet up in his houſe, Judg. xvii. that of the Danites, who left their Country to ſettle at Laiſh, Judg. xviii. and laſtly, the hiſtory of the Levite, whoſe Wife was diſhonoured at Gibeah, which accident produced a war between all the other Tribes againſt that of Benjamin, Judg. xix, xx, xxi. We reckon with Uſher that this Anarchy was of about two and twenty years continuance, from the death of Joſhua, in the year 2561, to the firſt ſervitude of the Hebrews under Chuſhan Riſhathaim, in the year of the World 2591. We allow about fifteen years for the Government of the Elders after the death of Joſhua, and ſeven for the Anarchy from that time to the dominion of Chuſhan Rhiſhathaim, King of Meſopotamia, Judg. iii. begun in 2591, and terminated in 2599, by the valour of Othniel.

It is worth obſerving, that no point of Chronology is more perplexed than the Anarchies which happened, particularly under the Judges. Every one computes them after his own way: We have followed Uſher, who may be conſulted as well as the Chronological Table belonging to this Dictionary. There is ſaid to have been an Interregnum of eleven or twelve years under the Kings between Jeroboam II. and Zechariah; but we think we have ſhewn the contrary in our Supplement. Some maintain that there was another Anarchy after the Reign of Pekah, but we ſee no proof of it. The captivity of Babylon is not properly an Anarchy, but a diſperſion and total captivity of the whole Jewiſh nation.

ANATH, the Father of Shamgar, Judge of Iſrael, Judg. iii. 31.

ANATHEMA, is a Greek word[i], which ſignifies ſomething ſet apart, ſeparated, devoted. It is underſtood principally to denote the cutting off and entire deſtruction of one ſeparated from the communion of the Faith, or the number of the Living, or the privileges of Society, or the devoting of any Man, Animal, City, or other thing to be extirpated, deſtroyed, given to the flames, and in ſome ſort annihilated.

The Hebrew word Cherem[k] ſignifies properly to deſtroy, exterminate, devote, anathematize. Moſes requires of the Iſraelites to devote thoſe to the Curſe, and utterly extirpate them who ſacrifice to Ex. xxii. 19.
falſe Gods. In like manner, God commands that the Cities belonging to the Canaanites which did not ſurrender to the Iſraelites, ſhould be thus devoted. Achan Deut. vii. 2. 26. xx. 17.
having diverted to his own uſe ſome of the ſpoil of Jericho which had been devoted by God, was exterminated, he, his family, his cattle, his furniture, his tent, and all that belonged to him. He was ſtoned, Joſh. vi. 17. 21. vii. 1, 2. &c.
and conſumed with fire.

The word Cherem, or Anathema, is likewiſe ſometimes taken for that which is conſecrated, vowed, or offered to the Lord, ſo that it may no longer be employed in common and profane uſes. No devoted Lev. xxvii. 28, 29.
thing that a Man ſhall devote unto the Lord, of all that he hath, of Man and Beaſt, and of the field of his poſſeſſion, ſhall be ſold or redeemed; every devoted thing is moſt holy unto the Lord: None devoted, which ſhall be devoted of Men, ſhall be redeemed, but ſhall ſurely be put to death. There are ſome who aſſert that the Perſons thus devoted were put to death; whereof Jephthah's Daughter is a memorable example, whom her Father ſacrificed to God, Judg. xi. 29, &c. See our Differtation

[e] Antiq. de Bello, l. ii. c. 24. p. 819. 9.
[f] De Bello, l. vii. p. 956. c. d. Κεφ. κγ. in Latino, c. 7.
[g] Ἀναρχία, Anarchia, ubi nullus imperat.
[h] Joſhua died in 2561. The Elders govern'd about fifteen years, to the year 2576, and there was an abſolute Anarchy for about eight years, till towards 2591, before J. C. 1409, before the vulgar Æra 1413.
[i] Ἀνάθεμα, ab ἀνατίθημι.
[k] חרם Cherem.

tation upon Jephthah's Vow before the book of Judges. Sometimes the whole nation devoted some particular persons or Cities: For example, the Israelites devoted King Arad's Country. [Num. xxi. 2, 3.] The People assembled at Mizpeh devoted all who should not march against the Tribe of Benjamin, to revenge the injury offered to the young Levite's Wife. [Judg. xxi. 5. Ch. xix.] Saul devoted those who should eat before Sun set while they were pursuing the Philistines. [1 Sam. xiv. 24.] It appears by the execution of all these consecrations, that they who were involved in them were to be put to death.

Sometimes particular persons devoted themselves if they did not perform something specified by them: For example, in the Acts of the Apostles, above forty Persons bound themselves with an oath that they would neither eat nor drink till they had killed St Paul. [Acts xxiii. 12, 13.] The Essenians[l] were engaged by the most horrible oaths to observe the statutes of their Sect; and they who, having incurr'd the guilt of any considerable fault, were driven from their Assemblies, were generally starved to death in a very miserable manner, and obliged to feed upon grass like Beasts, not daring even to receive any food which might be offered them, because they were engaged by the vows which they had made not to eat any.

Moses and St. Paul in some sort anathematized themselves, or at least wished to be accursed for their Brethren. [Ex. xxxii. 31. Rom. ix. 3.] Moses conjures God to forgive the Israelites; if not, that he would blot him out of the book of Life; and St. Paul says that he could wish to be accursed for his Brethren the Israelites, rather than see them excluded from the benefit of Christ's Covenant by their malice and obdurate temper.

Excommunication, Anathema, and cutting off, are the greatest penalty that can be inflicted on any Man in this world; whether by these terms we understand a violent and ignominious death, or a separation from the society of the Saints, an exclusion from the benefit of their Prayers, and communion with them in things sacred, or whether, lastly, Reprobation and condemnation to eternal misery are meant by them; for Interpreters are very much divided on these texts: But they agree that Moses and St. Paul gave each of them on these occasions the most sensible proofs of the greatest and most perfect charity, and in the strongest and boldest way of amplifying things, expressed their ardent desire to procure the happiness of their Brethren, and preserve them from the utmost misery.

Excommunication was also a kind of Anathema with the Hebrews, as it is among Christians. Of all the several degrees of Excommunication, Anathema was the greatest, whereby the excommunicated person was deprived not only of the opportunity of communicating in Prayers and other holy offices, but of all admittance to the Church, and conversation with Believers. Among the Hebrews, they who were excommunicated could not perform any publick duty of their employments; they could be neither Judges nor Witnesses, neither be present at Funerals, nor circumcise their own Sons, nor set down in the company of other Men nearer than within the distance of four cubits. They were not capable of receiving the publick rites of Burial; and if they died under Excommunication, a large stone was left upon their Graves, or the People threw stones upon their Sepulchres, and heaped them in great quantity upon them, as they did upon the bodies of Achan and Absalom. [Josh. vii. 26. 2 Sam. xvii. 27.] See Selden de Jure Nat. & Gent. l. iv. c. 1.

ANATHOTH, a City in the Tribe of Benjamin, about three miles distant from Jerusalem, according to Eusebius[m] and St. Jerom[n]; or twenty furlongs, according to Josephus[o]. [Josh. xxi. 18.] This was the place of the Prophet Jeremiah's birth. It was given to the Levites of Kohath's Family for their habitation, and to be a City of refuge. This City is entirely destroyed.

ANATHOTH, the eighth Son of Becher, 1 Chr. vii. 8.

ANCHIALUS. This word is particularly taken notice of by the Criticks who have wrote concerning the affairs of the Jews. We meet with it in Martial[p], Jura, verpe, per Anchialum, Swear thou, who art circumcised, by Anchialus. Who is this Anchialus? Is it the name of the true God, or some false Deity? And why is it demanded of the Jews that they should swear by Anchialus? This People, who were despised and hated by the Gentiles, among whom they lived, were conversant in business, and were concerned in trade; but their Honesty was much called in question; and as their Creed was very different from that of the Heathens, the latter were not contented with their taking the ordinary oaths, but obliged them to swear by their own Gods, as among us at present they oblige them to swear upon their sacred books, when they would be assured of the truth of what they affirm. The point therefore to be consider'd is, what Anchialus is, whether it be a Name or an Epithet of God.

It is certain that the most common oath in use among the Jews is, As the Lord liveth.

[l] Joseph. de Bello, l. ii. c. 12 p. 786 9. 787. a. [m] Euseb. in Anathoth. [n] Hieronym. in Jerem. i. & in Jerem. xxxi [o] Joseph. Antiq. l. viii. c. 10. [p] Martial. Epigr. l. xi. c. 95. Ecce negas jurasque mihi per Templa tonantis. Monendo, jura verpe, per Anchialum.

THE MEDITERRANEAN SEA OR
according to the Jews
THE WESTERN OR GREAT SEA
THE LAND OF CANAAN
THE EDOMITES
THE MOABITES
THE AMORITES
THE LAND OF GOSHEN ARABIA
THE STONY THE RED SEA
EGYPT
THEBAIS
DELTA
THE WILDERNESS OF SIN
THE WILDERNESS OF SINAI
THE WILDERNESS OF PARAN
THE WILDERNESS OF ZUR
A MAP
of the
CHILDREN of ISRAEL's TRAVELS and MARCHES in the WILDERNESS from their going out of EGYPT
to their passage over the River
JORDAN

[illegible]

$ 5 @ JLE D $ 5 * 1

& + +) $) +$ A+ $! 4" $ '
+ + A +$ + + ? A # '
! 4 @+ $) F 9 $! + # #+ 5
4 C $ $ +# # # $ + ++ $
!+ G $ #+ #$ 4 ' + ! $ #
#+ $ #$ # 6 & !+ ; & + : $ $ #+ +$
$!+ + $ 4 + % ! 9
& ?' ! K4 @+ $ $ 4 # + " 4 %
& + $ 1 + #+ ? '
; < 6 ; @ 2 ? "+ & #+1$@+ $! / - C
@ #+ ! 4 9 4$ 5 $ $ F3
4 $ $ A+ & + $ V U 4 (/
@ ! $
+ # + " $ & &
$ + & + * 9 ! + +
4 + A+ + $ #+ $!
4 # $ + # ' / +)$! 4
& #+ $ + 4 -# $)$ > $
%# 5 $! ! + *# ,+ $ +& $ & + $
$! #, + + $
$ + + + ; " / #
+ + ! 4 G + 5#
+ + $ G 4 $?" !
+ + + : $ $ # $
+ + $ +) " H) # '
? # + K # # + +
& # + $ $
* 4 ! 4 +, +$ % + $ $ $ '
& +1 +
+ 4
$ % $ # & + + + + '
%#+ + # & $ # $ + C
+ # - # $ $ $ #' + / T" 0 ?
#' + + %# ; " / ! 4" ! $ + $ +'
) H ! 4 9 + + ? + +
/ 4 + #+ + $: ! 4 $! +
$ *# % +$ * " ; $
$ # + + $ + + *# ? + #+
+$! 4 $ +
& #+ $G " $ + $
+ # ' ++ + + & +
#$ +) & + " & * 4 + &
+ # 4" 6 A + + $ Q1% -
! $ + H + $ + +) 8R
IJIK + 5 @ 8LL + &# + $; C=
8MN □ + & , E
- ; / @ ! + 4) '
* & 5 / 4 0
) 4 ? & MN)$ + + $ & !
; / < 4 2 4 + # $
% + + $! + , $ $ -
#+ # $! 9 + $
+ $ # $) $ #+ #$
% ++ ! 4 $ + + & % - - ; ! 2 $ + $
+ $ $ A + + O # $ + + G $
+ + + " # 2 4 * 9 & ,
) + *# + $ " 2 4 - & & SM =,SK
; " < < / ! /& $ + ' & / + &
*#) # $ + . # & ,
+ ? ! + ! 9 + 2 $ # #$
! $ +&1 $ $ * " ! + %
+ + 4) $ - #
A , $ ++ +$ $) $ + T
+ IL

C@ + ? 8I I KLL 1 /# , 33 " TL 1 & $ #
: , # " R

[illegible]

[illegible]

$ 5 ˢ * @ˢ JL_ˢ D $ 5 *

[illegible]

[illegible]

$ 5 * FGG D $ 5 *

[illegible]

[illegible]

$ 5 * @ JLO D $ 5 *

[illegible]

) ' ' ' 4' ' ' ' . ' ' ' ' $ $, ' ' ' ' ' ' ' ' ' #'
' " / 4' ' $ ' ' ' $ ' ' $ ' #' $ 0 ' ' ' , V' ' '
' 3 ' '' 4 0 ' ' # ' +' A' #' $ ' #' #/ ' '% ' ' ' '
& '# ' ' + #' + ' $ ' + '
' ' '" @' '' ' # ' +' A' #' A/ ' ' ' ' " ' #' A" '
V ' , ' % ' $ ' % 5H' $ ' ' , # ' ' ' + 0 ' & ' & ' %`
6" F ' #' / # ' ' ' # 0 ' ' " / ' " ' ' #' '% '
[X ' ! ' ' # ' ' ' ' % $' + 0 ' $ ' , ' 1 ' , ' ! $ " ' ' $'
- #' ' + 0 ' ' $ $ '' ' ' 1," ' ' "/ $
' ' / ' ' $' ' , # V' & ' . / % ' ! E & ' * ' #' (4' @ %`
4' 2 ?4' #' 2 4' % ' '/ ' ' #+ ' ' ' ' ' + ' "" #' , '
V' ' >(4' ' $' * ' ' - #' ' , ' ' # ' '' " " ' #' A'
! " & ' , , ' #' ! 4' " ' ' 1, / ' ' $' ' , # ' '' `
+ 0 ' $' ' $ ' '' !4$ ' #' ' /
'3 " ' ' ' '' * ?9 9 '' & ' $ 0 ' '' $' ' ' ' % ' '
' ' ' , @' +' ' A' # #' " ' ' , / #' % ' 0 ' " ' ''
$ " ' ' ' # ' '' * 4' ' $' ' 1 ' '' ' "A5 V' #' , @' / ' $ @ '
' + ' % ' 3 ' '' ' 4 0 ' ' #9' 6' / " + ' ' ' '' ' #' A'
1 ' ' ' ' $ #' , @' ' ' #' 5' '' ' ' ' / #' ' '
' ' / ' '' * 4@4' # ' , +' $ ' /6 ' $' ' ' # % ' + ' #' ''
' (#' Y/ #' ' ' $ $ #' Y/ V' '' ' ' + 0 ' $' ' 0 '
' ' / ' / ' '' ' , # V' , / ' ' ! / #' + ' , % ' % ' ' $ $ ' , % ' '
$ ' 'F' ' * ' @ % ' # ' #' ' , ' % ' ' % ' ' # , ' " '
'" ' #' % ' ' ' " / 6' ' # #' #' ' ' $' ' ' / ' ,
' ' + ' O ' % ' #' ' 1 ' ' ?' '' ' , @' '' . ' '
0 +' , ' 3 " ' ' * % ' ' / #' + ' '' # ' ' $ #' ' Y/ '
' , 0 ' % ' $ '' ' @ ' % ' ' 2 ' ' ' ' ' ! 4' '
' ' % K ' $ # ' ' "" ' ' $' ' ' ' 4 ' ' ' ? ' % ' ' # + ' '' ' +' ' ' / ' '' ' ' 4' ' ' ' ' ' '
#/ ' '' - #. ' " " ' / ' '' ' , # ' ' ' ' ' 4' ' ' ' ?4'
, / ' % ' ' ' ' / ' ' % ' ' / ' ' '' , ' ' ' ' ' ' ' ' ' / 4' / ' #' '0 / ' '' - #. ' $ ' 4'. ' ' ' ' ' 4' ' ' 4'
% ' ' ' #' % ' * 4' $ # ' / ' ' ' ! ' ' / ' 4' ''
'' ' " ' $ +' $ ' ' ' % #' ' % ' " 4' '
, + #' ' ' ' ' - #' $ ' '' ' ' / ' ' ' ' ' '
$ ' ' " ' ' ' / ' '' ' 3 " ' ! ' ' ' ' ' ' 4' '' #'
, ' + 0 +' $' ' 1#' + ' ' ' ' ' ' ' ' ' : , ! 0 '
& ' , , ' $ 'G' ' ' + ' 4' ' ' ' 4' ' '5 ' '
'' # ' ' ' ' ' ' ' @ #' ' $ ' ' ' ! 4'' #' % ' ! ' / ' ' 3 0 !0 ' % ' ' ' % #' ' ' % ' '' ' / ' ' ? ' ' ' ' ' ! 9'
#' , ' $ $ / ' ' $ ' Y/ ` '5 ' ' ' ' '' & ' / '
' ' '9' ' ' % ' ' ' ' %' ' + ' ' + ' '' # ' % ' ' % '
' % ' ' ' ' ' & ' + ' '' % ' ' ' + ' ' % ' ' 4 / + ' ''
4 ' ' # ' ' ' ' ' ' # +' " A' " @H' ' ' / , #' #' % ' '# ' & , '
' 6 ' , #. ' #' # +' ' @ #' '% #' '' $' % ' ' $ " #' ' "" '
' ' #' ' ' ! $ ' % '' +' ' & ' ' ' + ' ! 4' ' 4 A'
' # " ' '' + ' & ' @' $ ' ' ' ' % ' % ' , #' ' ' # A'
' ' ' ' " 0 ' ' + ' ' ' ' ' #' #' , ' ' + ' " '' &W, ' 0 '
+ ' ' + ' " ' ' $ / ' % ' "` (' ' ' ' ' 0 ' + ' ' " @ ' '' " / ' ' + ' '' # ' @ ' ' , ' ' (5 ' ' ' ' 4' ' 9 3 $ '
' ' ' W' ' ' ' $ ' # " V' ' ' ' ' ' ' ! ' ' ' @
' $ $ # ' ' ' ' # ' ' ' ' ' #' , ' ' / ' '' '
' $ @ ' $' " ' #' 0 # ' #' ' " +V' ' ' ' ' ? ' 9'
#' # '" ' ' $' ' , ' ' ' #/ #' ' ' ' ' ' ! ' ' ' ' 9'
#/' ' ' ' + 0 ' ' '
& 3 5 0 ' ' 'H ' ' $ ' & ' ! ' ' * ' '% '
'/ '' ' ' ' #' # ' V' ' % ' ' , / '' #' ' (' ' ' ' ' '' ' ' 'M '
' ' , / #' ' + ' '' # ' 4 0 ' ' 0 ' & ' 4 0 ' ' 49 S5
$ ' '' / " ' ' + 0 ' #' ' ' ' $ ' #' ' " / ' ' ' 3 ' % ' ! , ' Q'
$ ' ' ' / ' '' ' # ' #' / ' ' ' # $ ' 0 ' ' 4 0 ' '' ' , WH)A'
' , # ' #' ' ' $' / " ' ' + ' & ' @' # 1 ' " % ' ' 1 ' ' ' '
' + ' @ +' ' ' ' '' - '" ' 1" @ ' '' % @4' ?
% '' ' #' ' ' ' ' , / +' ' '' / ' ' , ' , ' 2 9'
' ' @ ' ' , # ' % ' ' #' ' " 4' ? ' `' 1 '' !

+ : G 6' - 6'E 6' 6L 6 1# $' 1, #' !' '& , ' ' 13 @' ' " ' WDJ
* ' 1 ' 1 3 "

$ 5 ' *   N CLQ R $ 5

[illegible]

$ 5 'F JLSD $ 5 '

' $" #' ' @ ' % ' # / ' , / ' ' #' ' $' ' ' 0 6 ' ' A'

' , /+ ' ' ' ' ' ' / #' # 0 ' ' ' ' ! 4 H

2*' JT 1 ' ' ' '% ' " ' % ' + ' ' , ' , ' #'

$' 2 ' * ' ; ' / ' ; < ' #' $ ' 8 #' / " ' $' ' ' ' ' `

5 5 5 5 1 ' ' ! 4 ' ' ' " . ' $ ' V' #' ' ' ' " " `

! 0 ' ! ' ' ' * ? ' & ' ' # +' ' + ' $, ' ' ' '

5 " ' ' +' ' ! 0 ' , @ ' ' . / 4' + ' ' " , #' ' A'

' #' + 0 ' ' ' ' , , ' % ' ' A %' ! 4'

[illegible]

: ' " ' / Y' 1 !0 ' * # ' 16/' , ' 9 ' ' #0 $' ' $ ' N' /' $

[illegible]

1 @ JLPD ; ;

[illegible]

@ JDE D F

[illegible]

Zachary from time to time paid visits to the Blessed Virgin, and as often as he visited her found abundance of fine fruit near her, which grew in the Holy Land, and at times always when it was out of season; which induced him at last to ask Mary how she came by such a variety of beautiful fruits. She answered, All you see comes from God, who provides every thing without any limitation of number or quantity for those who please him.

Some have said that S. Anna had three Husbands; Joachim, by whom she had Mary, our Saviour's Mother; and Cleophas, by whom she had Mary the Daughter of Cleophas, and Mother of James the Minor, Joseph the Just, Simon the Zealot, and Thaddæus; and last of all, Salomas her third Husband, of whom she had a third Daughter named Mary, who was married to Zebedee, and was Mother to S. James Major, and S. John the Evangelist. There are some old verses cited for the confirmation of this genealogy; but both these verses, and they who maintain this opinion, are of too little authority to make way for the reception of it among learned Men. The verses are these,

Anna tribus nupsit, Joachim, Cleophæ, Salomæque,
Ex quibus ipsa viris peperit tres Anna Marias.
Quas duxere Joseph, Alphæus, Zebedeusq;
Prima Jesum; Jacobum, Joseph, cum Simone Judam, Altera dat. Jacobum dat tertia, datque Joannem[a].

There is a great deal of probability that the Marys who are mentioned in the Gospel, and are said to have been the Holy Virgin's Sisters, were her relations only, or other Daughters of Joachim and Anna, born after the Holy Virgin. We know nothing exactly concerning the time of Joachim's and Anna's death, nor even of their tomb; tho' particular monuments are shewn to Travellers, and pains taken to persuade them that these were their sepulchers. The Latins observe the festival of S. Anna upon the 26th of July, and the Greeks that of her conception upon the 9th of December, and that of her marriage with Joseph on the 9th of September.

IV. Anna, or Anno, or Thecemine, the Wife of Jeroboam King of Israel. The name of this Princess is not to be met with in the Hebrew or Vulgate, but in the Greek only. What we know of this Queen may be seen under the Article Abijah, the Son of Jeroboam I. The Greek of the first Book of Kings says that Pharaoh King of Egypt married his Wife's eldest Sister Thecemine to Jeroboam, while he abode as a Refugee in Egypt.

ANNAS, or Ananus, High Priest of Jerusalem. See Ananus.

ANNIUS RUFUS, succeeded Ambivius in the Government of Judæa, and was himself succeeded by Valerius Gratus[b]. He governed this Province from the year of the World 4016, to 4018. He was sent by Augustus, and recalled by Tiberius.

ANNUNTIATION. Upon this festival the Christian Church celebrates the conception or incarnation of the Son of God in the womb of the Virgin Mary. The Angel Gabriel brought the first news of it to Zechary, telling him that he should have a Son, who should be the Fore-runner and Prophet of the Messiah. Six months after, the same Angel Gabriel was sent into a City of Galilee called Nazareth, to the Virgin Mary, of the Tribe of Judah, and Family of David. The Angel said to her, Hail Thou that art highly favoured of the Lord; the Lord is with Thee, blessed art Thou among Women! Mary, when she saw him, was troubled at his saying; and considered with her self, what this salutation could mean. And the Angel said unto her, Fear not, Mary; for thou hast found favour with God. Thou shalt conceive and bring forth a Son, and shalt call his name Jesus. He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest. The Lord shall give unto him the Throne of his Father David, and he shall reign over the House of Jacob for ever, and of his Kingdom there shall be no end.

Then said Mary unto the Angel, How shall this be, seeing I know not a Man? The Angel answered, The Holy Ghost shall come upon thee, and the power of the Highest shall overshadow thee; therefore also, that Holy Thing which shall be born of thee, shall be called the Son of God. And behold thy Cousin Elizabeth she hath also conceived a Son in her old age; and this is the sixth month with her, for with God nothing shall be impossible. And Mary Luke i. 5, said, Behold the Handmaid of the Lord, 25. Ver. 26.
be it unto me according to thy word. At & seq.
the same time the Angel separated from her, and by the operation of the Holy Ghost she conceived the only Son of the Father, who had been four thousand years expected, and was to be the happiness, the light and salvation of all men.

We celebrate the memory of this mystery on the 25th of March; and S. Austin[c] says, that the Church, upon the authority of some old tradition, believed that the Saviour of the world was conceived upon this day. Not only the Greek and Latin Churches have chosen the 25th of March to celebrate this mystery upon; but but the Syrians likewise, Chaldees, and Copticks[x] do the same. This opinion seems to be founded principally upon the supposition of Christ's being born upon the 25th of December. As a consequence of this opinion, it has been believed, that he was conceived upon the 25th of March, because generally there are nine months between the birth and conception of children. In the Article of NAZARETH, we shall speak of a Church built in this City, in the place where the Virgin was saluted by the Angel.

[a] Vide apud Joan. Gerson. Cancellar. t. 3. p. 59. [b] Joseph. Antiq. l. xviii. c. 3. [c] Aug. l. iv. de Trinit.

To ANSWER. Besides the common signification of this word, which is very well known, there are other interpretations of it; to answer, signifies to sing in
Ex. xv. 21. two Chorus's; for example, it is said that ותען Moses having composed a song of thanks-
מרים giving, after the passage of the Red Sea,
להם Miriam answered them, Sing ye to the Lord, &c. That is to say, Moses, with the Men on one side, and Miriam with the Women on the other, sung the same song by turns, and as it were with two
Num. xxi. 17. Chorus's. And in the Book of Numbers, Then Israel sang this song, Spring up, O well, answer unto it; sing in the way of responses, or one side of the Quire singing one verse, the other another. And in the
Ver. ibid. first Book of Samuel, Is not this David, of whom they sung one to another in dances, saying, Saul hath slain his thousands, and David his ten thousands. They sung this song to his honour in the several Chorus's. The Vulgate generally translates the Hebrew, Hanah, by concinere; but, as is well known, it signifies properly to answer.

This word is taken likewise for to accuse or defend any one in a judicial way.
Gen. xxx. 33. For example, Respondebit mihi cras justitia mea. My righteousness shall answer for me, it shall be my advocate before thee.
Deut. xxxi. 21. And in Deuteronomy, The song which thou shalt compose and teach them. Respondebit ei canticum istud pro testimonio. Isaiah says, Agitatio vultus eorum, respondebit eis. The shew of their countenance will testify against them; their impudence will be like a witness and an accuser, who replies to what the person accused endea-Hosea v. 5. vours to say in his own justification. Hosea says the same thing, Respondebit arrogantia Israel.

To answer, is likewise taken in a bad construction, as when it is said that a Son answers his Father insolently, or a Servant his Master. Who art thou that repliest against God? Who art thou to answer God Rom. ix. 20.
to excuse thy self to him, to contest with him? Et sic respondes Pontifici? Answerest thou the High Priest so? Joh. xviii. 22.

St. Paul says, that he had in himself the answer of death; like people who 1 Cor. i. 9.
have notice given them of their condemnation. He had a certain assurance of dying. Others translate the Greek, We had Τὸ ἀπόκριμα τοῦ θανάτου ἐσχήκαμεν.
a fore-thought of death within ourselves. Heinsius maintains, that the translation ought to be, We have had within ourselves a caution of death; that is to say, an assurance that we shall not die.

ANT, a very common Insect, which hath furnished the Wise Man with a symbolical expression representing a diligent and laborious life. See likewise Prov. Prov. vi. 6.
xxx. 24, 25. where the Wise Man commends the prudence of the Ant, in gathering together in the summer, what is necessary for its subsistence in the winter*.

ANTARADA, a City of Syria or Phœnicia, lying upon the Continent, opposite to, and Eastward of, the Island Arada, and of the City of the same name situated in that Island. The Scripture does not speak expresly of the City Antarada; but in several places it mentions Arada, or Arva, or the Arvadites, who are reckoned among the Canaanites, whose Country God gave up to the Hebrews. Antarada Gen. x. 18. 1 Chron. i. 16.
is at present called Tortosa. The City is still considerable, chiefly for it fine Harbour. There is an ancient Monument shewn there of about twenty cubits in length.

ANTHEDON, a City of Palestine, lying upon the Mediterranean, about twenty furlongs South from Gaza. Herod the Great called it Agrippias, in honour of Agrippa[y]. See AGRIPPIAS.

ANTICHRIST. This is the name of that Man of Sin, who is to precede the second coming of our Saviour; and who is represented in Scripture, and in the Fathers, as the Epitome of every thing that is [x] Vide Bolland. 25 Mart. [y] Joseph. Antiq. l. 13. c. 21.

* I shall be excused, if to what the wisest of men has observed of this little Insect, I add what one of the most ingenious of mankind has said much to the same purpose.

Parvula nam exemplo est, magni formica laboris
Ore trahit quodcunque potest, atque addit acervo
Quem struit haud ignara ac non incauta futuri.
Quæ simul in versum contristat Aquarius annum,
Non usquam prorepit & illis utitur ante
Quæsitis sapiens. Horat. Serm. l. 1. 1.

And Pliny gives us so agreeable a description of the prudence and good œconomy, &c. of this little creature, that it may not be improper to insert it at length. Et iis, says he, Reipublicæ ratio, memoria, cura, semina arrosa condunt, ne rursus in fruges exeant e terrâ: majora ad introitum dividunt: madefacta imbre proferunt, atque siccant: operantur & noctu pleno Lunâ: eædem interlunio cessant. Jam in opere qui labor, quæ sedulitas? Et quoniam ex diverso convehunt altera alterius ignara, certi dies ad recognitionem mutuam nundinis dantur. Quæ tunc earum concursatio, quam diligens cum obviis quædam collocutio atque percontatio! Plin. Hist. Nat. l. xi. c. 30.

is most impious, cruel and abominable. To him is attributed what the Prophets have said of Antiochus Epiphanes, of Gog and Magog, of the foolish Shepherd mentioned by Zachary, of the Son of Perdition, and the Man of Sin spoken of by S. Paul, which many have applied in an historical sense to Nero. For it may be said, that Nebuchadnezzar, Cambyses, Antiochus Epiphanes, Caius and Nero, were so many Antichrists, or Fore-runners of Antichrist[s]. And S. John in his Epistle informs us, that already in his time there were many such Antichrists. Little Chil-
John ii. 18. dren, says he, it is the last time: and as ye have heard that Antichrist shall come, even now are there many Antichrists, whereby we know that it is the last time. The Antichrists which this Apostle speaks of were no other than Hereticks and Persecutors.

But Antichrist, the true, real Antichrist, who is to come before the universal Judgment, will in himself alone include all the marks of wickedness which have been separately discern'd in different persons, who for their impiety have deserved the name of Types or Fore-runners of Antichrist. I will give you here some of those touches wherewith the Sacred Authors
Dan. vii. 19, 20. have described him. I saw, says Daniel, an horn that had eyes, and a mouth that spake very great things: the same made war with the Saints, and prevailed against them until the Antient of Days came, and judgment was given to the Saints of the Most High, and the time came that the Saints possessed the kingdom. The Prophet was told, that he who was represented by this Horn should utter blasphemies against the Most High, should trample upon the Saints, and flatter himself that he should produce a change of times and laws; but that the supreme Judge should destroy his power, and for ever exterminate him.

Ch. viii. 9, 10. In another vision, the same Prophet saw a little Horn, which was exalted in an extraordinary manner, and was so insolent as to attack the Heavens, the Stars whereof he beat down and trampled on. He made war against the King of Strength, against God himself, abolished his perpetual Sacrifice, and overthrew the place which was consecrated to him. God permitted all this to punish the sins of his people. Truth was banished out of the earth; the Enemy was in every thing successful, and did what he pleased for the space of two thousand three hundred days. All these misfortunes were followed with the Resurrection of the dead, and the eternal happiness of the Faithful: Many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake, some to everlasting life, and some to shame and everlasting contempt.

Zachary represents the adversary of the Zach. xi. 16, 17. Messiah under the Idea of a foolish Shepherd, who does not visit those that be cut off, neither seeketh the young one, nor healeth that that is broken, nor feedeth that that standeth still. He shall eat the flesh of the fat, and tear their claws in pieces. Wo to the idol Shepherd that leaveth the flock: the sword shall be upon his arm, and upon his right eye; his arm shall be clean dried up, and his right eye shall be utterly darkned. Such will Antichrist be, and such his dominion.

Our Saviour in the Gospel describes the Matt. xxiv. 4, 5, &c. times that shall precede his coming, as times of war, famine and rebellion; and says that all this is but the beginning of sorrows. Then the just shall be given up into the hands of the wicked, and put to death by them; many good men shall be offended; and the Abomination of Desolation shall be seen in the Holy Place. The calamities which will then happen, will be so extreme, that if they were not to be shortned, no one would be saved: but for the Elects sake they will be shortned. Then shall arise false Christ's and false Prophets, and shall shew great signs and wonders, insomuch that (if it were possible) they should deceive the very Elect. After all this, the Son of Man shall appear in all the brightness of his Majesty.

St. Paul, writing to the Thessalonians, 2 Thess. ii. 3, 4, 5. says, that this Man of Sin, this Son of Perdition, this Enemy of God, shall exalt himself above all that is called God, or that is worshiped; so as to sit in the Temple of God, shewing himself that he is God. He adds, Ye know what withholdeth, that he might be revealed in his time: for the mystery of iniquity doth already work—— then shall that wicked be revealed whom the Lord shall consume with the Spirit of his mouth, and shall destroy with the brightness of his coming; even him whose coming is after the working of Satan, with all power, and signs, and lying wonders; and with all the deceivableness of unrighteousness in them that perish; because they received not the love of the truth, that they might be saved.

This terrible picture of Antichrist drawn by S. Paul, seemed so like Nero, that many of the Antients[y] thought this Prince was Antichrist, or at least his Fore-runner, and that Antichrist would appear very soon after him. Others[z] were of opinion, that Nero would rise again before the consummation of Ages, to accomplish all that was said of Antichrist in the Scriptures. Lastly,

[s] Vide Hieronym. in Dan. xi. 24.
[y] Victorin. in Apocal. Ambrosiast. in 2 Thess. ii. Chrysost. in 2 Thess. alii.
[z] Hieronym. in Dan. xi.

Lastly, S. Austin assures us, that there were others who maintain'd that Nero was not dead, but was still living in some unknown and unaccessible place; that his vigour and his cruelty were the same they had been, the effects whereof were to be one day felt by God's faithful Servants*.

Rev. xi. 7. xiii. St. John in the Revelations describes Antichrist under the name of the Beast that ascendeth out of the bottomless pit, and killeth the two Witnesses (which are supposed to be Enoch and Elias) who maketh war with the Saints, killeth them, and leaveth their dead bodies exposed in the market-place of the great City, which spiritually is called Sodom and Egypt, where also our Lord was crucified. He afterwards represents him to be a Beast rising up out of the sea with ten Horns and ten Crowns upon his Horns, and upon his Heads the name of Blasphemy. The Dragon (or the Devil) gave him his strength and power. The Beast was worshiped, and a mouth given him, speaking great things, and Blasphemies, and power to make war against the Saints for two and forty months: the Beast overcame, and was worshiped for two and forty months.

Ch. xiii. 17, 18. In another place he says, that the Beast should oblige all, both small and great, rich and poor, free and bond, to receive a mark in their right hand, or in their foreheads. So that no one might buy or sell, save he that had the mark, or the name of the Beast, or the number of his name. Here is Wisdom. Let him that hath understanding count the number of the Beast: for it is the number of a Man: and his number is six hundred threescore and six.

Some believe this number of six hundred sixty six, to be that of the letters in the name of Antichrist, set down according to their numerical valuation: for the letters of the Hebrew, Greek and Latin Alphabet have a certain numerical value; for example, I in Latin stands for number one, V for five, X for ten, L for fifty, C for an hundred, D for five hundred, M for a thousand. In Greek A stands for one, I for ten, K for twenty, Λ for thirty, M for forty; and so on.

Here the curious are perplexed to know whether the name of the Beast which St. John speaks of is to be Hebrew, Syriac, Greek or Latin; and secondly, whether his name will be that of his person, or his dignity, or that which his followers shall give him; or lastly, whether it will be that which he will merit by his crimes. There are many conjectures on this matter, and almost all the Commentators have tried their abilities, without being able to say certainly that any of them have succeeded, in giving us the true mark of the Beast, or the cypher whereby he will distinguish his followers. The number 666 has been discovered in the names of Ulpius Trajanus (a), Dioclesian (b), Julian the Apostate (c), Luther (d), Evanthas (e), Latinus (f), Titan (g), Lampetis (h), Niketes (i), Kakos Hodegos (k), that is to say, bad guide; Arnoumai (l), I renounce Romiit (m) Roman, Abinu Kadescha Papa (n), our holy Father the Pope; and lastly of Elion Adonai, Jehovah, Kadosch (o), the

* Aug. l. 20. de Civit. c. 19.

(a) Ο Υ Λ Π Ι Ο Σ
70. 400. 30. 80. 10. 70. 6.

(b) D I O C L E S A U G U S T U S. DCLXVI.

(c) C. F. J U L I A N U S C E S A R. A T H E U S. DCLXVI.
Or rather, C. F. J U L I A N U S C A E S. A U G. DCLXVI.

(d) ל ו ל ת ר
200. 400. 30. 6. 30.

(e) Ε Υ Α Ν Θ Α Σ
5. 400. 1. 50. 9. 1. 200.

(f) Λ Α Τ Ε Ι Ν Ο Σ
30. 1. 300. 5. 10. 50. 70. 200.

(g) Τ Ε Ι Τ Α Ν
300. 5. 10. 300. 1. 50.

(h) Λ Α Μ Π Ε Τ Ι Σ
30. 1. 40. 80. 5. 300. 10. 200.

(i) Ο Ν Ι Κ Η Τ Η Σ
70. 50. 10. 20. 8. 300. 8. 200.

(k) Κ Α Κ Ο Σ Ο Δ Η Γ Ο Σ
20. 1. 20. 70. 200. 70. 4. 8. 3. 70. 200.

(l) Α Ρ Ν Ο Υ Μ Ε
1. 100. 50. 70. 400. 40. 5.

(m) ר ו מ י י ת
400. 10. 10. 40. 6. 200.

(n) א ב י נ ו ה ק ד ו ש א א פ י פ י
10. 80. 10. 80. 1. 1. 300. 6. 4. 100. 5. 6. 50. 10. 2. 1.

(o) ע ל י ו ן א ד נ ו י ה ו ה ק ד ש
300. 4. 100. 5. 6. 5. 10. 10. 30. 4. 1. 50. 6. 10. 30. 70.

the moſt High, the Lord, the holy God. This laſt Name could have been invented only to ſhew the vanity of all that pains which has been taken in this Enquiry, ſince the number 666 is found in Names, which are moſt ſacred and moſt oppoſite to Antichriſt. The wiſeſt and the ſafeſt way is, to be ſilent with reſpect to both this Name and Character.

I may ſay the ſame almoſt of the time when Antichriſt will appear. We know certainly that he will come before the conſummation of Ages, and will precede the ſecond coming of Jeſus Chriſt. But all thoſe who have attempted to fix the year of his Appearance, have only diſcerned their ignorance and raſhneſs. There have been Impoſtors ever ſince S. Paul's time, (2 Theſſ. ii. 1, 2.) who have terrified Believers by perſuading them that the Day of the Lord was at hand. To encourage theſe People, S. Paul wrote to the Theſſalonians, in theſe terms, We beſeech you, Brethren, by the coming of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, and by our gathering together to him, that ye be not ſoon ſhaken in Mind neither by Spirit, nor by Word, nor by Letter, as from us, as that the Day of Chriſt is at hand. Let no man deceive you by any means; for that Day ſhall not come except there come a falling away firſt, and that man of Sin be revealed, the Son of Perdition; who oppoſeth and exalteth himſelf above all that is called God. S. John in his firſt Epiſtle ſays, (1 John iv. 3.) Every Spirit that confeſſeth not that Jeſus is come in the Fleſh, is not of God; this is that Spirit of Antichriſt, whereof you have heard that it ſhould come, and even now already is it in the World. The Hereticks of that time were true ſigns of Antichriſt, but this ſtill ſhews that the Chriſtians of that time expected the coming of the Meſſiah.

The ſame Opinions and Diſpoſitions are obſervable in the generality of the Fathers of the firſt Ages. The Churches of Vienne and Lions in Gaul [a], ſeeing the violence of the perſecution, which was ſet a-foot by Marcus Aurelius, believed they then beheld the Preludes to the perſecution of Antichriſt. An old eccleſiaſtical Author, called Judas [c], who lived under the Emperor Severus, aſſerted, that Antichriſt would very ſoon appear; becauſe the Perſecution was then carrying on with great heat againſt the Church. Tertullian, who lived at the ſame time [d], and S. Cyprian [e], who flouriſhed ſoon after, never queſtioned but that the coming of Antichriſt was very near. S. Hilary [f] obſerving the progreſs of Arianiſm, believed he ſaw thoſe Signs which were to be the forerunners of Antichriſt. S. Baſil the Great [g], S. Ambroſe [h], S. Jerom [i], S. Martin [k], S. Chryſoſtom [l], and Gregory the Great [m], were of Opinion, that the end of the World was at hand, and that the coming of Antichriſt could not be far off.

After the tenth Age, which concluded the ſixth millenary, according to their opinion who reckoned the Birth of Jeſus Chriſt to have happened about the five thouſandth year of the world, people began to get the better of that apprehenſion they had been under, of the concluſion of the world, which was to be according to the tradition of the Antients, after the duration of ſix thouſand years. They began to build larger churches, and larger edifices. S. Jerome's tranſlation of the Scriptures, which allowed the world to have exiſted not above four thouſand years before Jeſus Chriſt, contributed likewiſe to perſuade men, that the laſt period of the World, and the coming of Antichriſt, were not ſo near. Notwithſtanding this did not hinder ſome from attempting once more, to fix the year of Antichriſt's appearance. The Council of Florence aſſembled in 1105 condemned Fluentius Biſhop of that City, for maintaining that Antichriſt was then already born. Abbot Joachim, who lived in the twelfth Age, pretended that Antichriſt was to appear in the ſixtieth year of his time. Arnaud de Ville-neuve ſaid, Antichriſt would come in 1326. Peter Dailly was of opinion, that according to his obſervations He muſt appear in 1789. Cardinal de Cuſa in 1730 or 1734. John Pico at Mirandola in 1994. Francis Melet in 1530, or 1540. John of Paris in 1560. Jerom Cardan in 1800. Vincent Ferrier, who lived in the fifteenth Age, wrote to Pope Benedict the XIII. that Antichriſt would appear in a very little time, and that an holy Hermit had inform'd him nine years before, that this Enemy of God was then born. The event has already confuted the generality of theſe predictions: And we may affirm without raſhneſs, that the reſt are no better grounded, nor at all more certain than the preceding ones.

There is a Tradition which ſeems to be received among the Antients, that Antichriſt ſhould be born of ſome Jewiſh Family [n], and ſhould come out of the Tribe of Dan. In which ſenſe theſe words of Jeremiah are explained [o], The ſnorting of his horſes are heard from Dan: the whole (Jerem. viii. 16.) Land

[a] Apud Euſeb. l. v. hiſt. Eccl. c. 1. [c] Judas Syrus apud Euſeb. l. vi. c. 6. hiſt. Eccl. [d] Tertull. de Fuga in perſecut. c. 2. [e] Cyprian. Ep. 56. ad Tibarit. & Ep. 53. ad Fortunat. [f] Hilar. contra Auxentium. n. 5. p. 1265. [g] Baſil. Ep. 71. [h] Ambroſ. l. x. in Luc. c. 3. [i] Hieronym. ad Ageruchiam. [k] Apud Sulpit. Sever. Dialog. 2. [l] Chryſoſt. homil. 33. in Joan. [m] Greg. Mag. lib. iv. Ep. 35. & 38. & homil. 1. in Evangel. [n] Pſeudo-Hippolyt. de conſumm. mundi. Ambroſiaſt. in 2 Theſſal. xi. Hieronym. in Dan. xi. [o] Iren. l. v. adverſ. hæreſ. c. 38. Pſeudo-Hippolyt. de conſum. mundi. Ambroſ. l. de Bened. Patriarch. c. 7. & in Pſal. xl. Aug. q. 12. in Joſu. Theodoret. q. 109. in Geneſ. Greg. Mag. l. xxxi. in Job. c. 18. Proſper de Promiſſ. parte 4, &c.

Land trembled at the sound of the neighing of his strong ones; for they are come and have drowned the Land and all that is in it. The most ancient Commentators upon the Revelations, such as Aretas, Bede, Primasius, Rupert, Haimo, and many others are of opinion, that S. John's omission of the name of Dan in his enumeration of the Tribes of Israel, proceeds from the knowledge he had, that Antichrist should be born of this Tribe. And how should he come from this Tribe, since the Jews dwell no longer in Judæa, or at least are no longer Masters of this Province? Why he will come, say the Fathers, from the other side of the Euphrates, from Babylonia, where some suppose that the ten Tribes, and in particular that of Dan, subsists still intire. This opinion is followed by almost all those, who have written since S. Jerom [p], in whose time it was very common in the Church.

Rev. vii. 5. & seq.

As to the Father of Antichrist, the world is not agreed. Some think [q] he will be ingendered of a Devil and some very corrupt Woman; others tell us, that Antichrist will be a Devil incarnate and not a Man. Unus de hominibus in quo Satanas habitaturus sit corporaliter, says S. Jerom [r]. Hilary the Deacon [s] thought, that as Jesus Christ was incarnate, and proved his Divinity by his Miracles; so the Devil will appear in Antichrist, and endeavour to persuade the world that he is God, by working false Miracles. And in like manner as Jesus Christ was born of a Virgin, says S. Hippolytus, will Antichrist boast that he has derived his Birth from a Mother, who never had any Conversation with Man: But whereas the Son of God assumed real Flesh, Antichrist, as this Author says, will take only the image or phantom of Flesh. It is best to follow the Opinion of S. Chrysostom [t], Theodoret, Theophylact, and many others, that Antichrist will be a real Man, and an Agent of the Devil in exercising all his cruelty and malice against the Faithful.

They who tell us that the Mother of Antichrist will be the most debauched and most impure of all Woman-kind, or that he will be born in Incest committed between the Father and his Daughter, or the Son and his Mother, or lastly between a Man and Woman who are both obliged to Celibacy by vows and solemn engagements, cannot maintain this Opinion without falling into a kind of Contradiction; for how will Antichrist prove his Mother's Virginity, if her original is so polluted and corrupt, and she is so infamous in the world for her debauches? How can any one assert, that he will be of Jewish extraction, if he is to be born of a Father and a Mother both solemnly engaged in the monastick Profession, which, as is very well known, is not in use among the Hebrews? It is true, some suppose that this Woman will make an outward profession of Retirement, Piety, and Virginity, and will so well conceal her ignominious course of Life, as to persuade all the world, that the Son, who will be born of her, was produced in her after a supernatural manner. But where will she find persons credulous enough to believe her upon her bare Word? The birth of any Man of a pure Virgin is not a thing that People are apt easily to credit. All the Authority of the Prophets both of the old and new Testament, and all the Miracles wrought by Jesus Christ, and related in the Gospel, were no more than necessary to convince us of Mary's Virginity, after the Conception and Birth of our Saviour.

It remains now to examine the Dominion of Antichrist. As it is supposed that he will be born in Babylonia, it is said, that he will there lay the Foundations of his Empire [u], and that the Jews will be the first, who will declare [x] for him, acknowledge his Dominion, and enjoy the principal Imployments in his Government. These he will win upon by his delusions, his caress and false miracles, and by all the appearances of goodness, piety and clemency; so that this unhappy People will take him for the Messiah; and will flatter themselves with expectations of seeing the Kingdom of Israel restored by his means to its former Splendor.

As soon as Antichrist shall appear, he will begin with attacking the Roman Empire, which will be then divided among ten powerful Kings according to these words of Daniel, which are applied to the Kingdom of Antichrist, The fourth Beast which I saw was dreadful, and terrible, and strong exceedingly; it had great iron teeth, it devoured and broke in pieces, and stamped the residue with the feet of it: It was not like any other Beasts that I have seen; it had ten horns, and as I considered these ten horns, I saw another little horn, before whom there were three of the first horns pluckt up by the roots. The Beast here with ten Horns, according to the generality of Interpreters, is the Roman Empire. The little Horn is Antichrist; the three Horns which fell before it, are three Monarchs, who will be overcome by the arms of this Enemy to God.

Dan. vii. 7, 8, 9, 24, 25.

Daniel

[p] Hieronym. in Dan. xi. Nostri interpretantur hæc omnia de Antichristo, qui nasciturus est de populo Judæorum, & de Babylone venturus. [q] Lactant. l. xvi. c. 17. Beda in Apoc. xiii. Sulpit. Dialog. 2. Hieronym. in Isai. xvii. [r] Hieronym. in Dan. vii. Vide & Bedam in Apoc. xiii. [s] Ambrosiast. in 2 Thessal. ii. [t] Chrysost. Theodoret. Theophyl. in 2 Thess. ii. [u] Aretas in Apocal. c. ix. 14. Lactant. l. vii. c. 17. Hieron. in Dan. xi. [x] Cyril. Jerosol. Catech. 15. Hieron. Theodoret. Strab in Dan. xi.

Daniel describes these three Monarchs in another Place, He shall stretch forth his Hand also upon the Countries, and the Land of Egypt shall not escape. But he shall have Power over the Treasures of gold and silver, and over all the precious things of Egypt; and the Lybians and Ethiopians shall be at his Steps. These are the three Kingdoms whereby the Fall of the Roman Empire will begin; their Subjection shall draw on the Ruin of all the rest. We do not warrant these applications, but relate only what the Ancients have said of them. (Dan. xi. 42, 43.)

After he has subdued Egypt, Ethiopia and Lybia, he will march against Jerusalem, which he will make an easy conquest of, and there establish the seat of his Empire. He will be then informed, that the Kings Gog and Magog are coming to oppose him, he will give them battle and without difficulty defeat them in the midst of Palestine. The whole Country will be enriched with their Spoils. After this Antichrist seeing himself master of the Eastern and Western Empire, will turn all his application towards the destruction of Christ's Kingdom, and the persecution of good Men. He shall exalt himself above all that is called God or that is worshipped; so that he as God sitteth in the Temple of God: In the Temple of Jerusalem which he will rebuild. Nay, there are some of the Ancients [x], who believe that he will be seated in the Churches of Christians, and there receive the adorations of great numbers of Apostates, who will renounce the Faith of Jesus Christ. Then God will give his Spirit to his two witnesses, who are thought to be Enoch and Elias, they shall prophesie a thousand two hundred and threescore days cloathed in Sackcloth. —— And when they shall have finished their testimony, the Beast that ascendeth out of the bottomless pit, shall make War against them, and shall overcome them and kill them. And their dead shall lie in the street of the great City, which spiritually is called Sodom and Egypt, where also our Lord was crucified. But after three days and an half the Spirit of Life from God entered into them, and they stood upon their feet, and great fear fell upon them which saw them: And they heard a great voice from Heaven saying unto them, Come up hither; and they ascended up to Heaven in a Cloud. The Scripture does not particularly tell us what the Duration will be of Antichrist's Kingdom; but in several places it seems to allow three years and an half for the continuance of his Persecutions. At least it assigns three years and an half for the Persecutions of those, who are looked upon as Figures of Antichrist. (See Ezek. xxxviii, xxxix. — 2 Thess. ii. 4. — Rev. xi. 2, 3, 4. — Rev. xv. 2, 3. Dan. vii. 25. & xii. 11.)

The Righteous under the persecution of Antichrist will retire to the Mount of Olives [y], when they will be soon attacked by this Enemy to God. Then they will cry unto the Lord, and he will send Jesus Christ to deliver them. He will descend from Heaven attended by his Angels, and preceded by a flame which nothing will be able to extinguish. The Angels will give up the army of the wicked into the hands of the righteous, who will make so great a slaughter of them, from the third hour of the day until the Evening, that their Blood shall flow like a torrent in the Valley. Antichrist will come as far as the top of Mount Olivet [z], and there will be put to death in his own tent, and upon his own throne, without receiving the least assistance from any one. Which is agreeable to these words of Daniel, which are applied to Antichrist, He shall plant the tabernacles of his Palace between the Seas and the glorious holy Mountain, yet he shall come to his end and none shall help him. They who would know more particularly what is said of Antichrist *, may consult Malvenda the Dominican De Antichristo, and our Dissertation on the same Subject, placed before the Epistle to the Galatians. (Dan. xi. 45.)

The Mussulmen as well as the Jews and Christians, expect another Christ. The Mussulmen call him Daggial, or Deggial, from a name which signifies properly an Impostor, or a Liar; and they hold, that their Prophet Mahomet taught one of his Disciples, whose name was Tamimi-Al-Dari, every thing relating to Antichrist; and upon the faith of this man they tell us that Antichrist must come at the end of the world, that he will make his entry into Jerusalem like Jesus Christ upon an Ass; but that Christ, who as they will have it, is not yet dead, will come at his second advent to encounter him, and that after having conquered him, he will then die indeed [a]. That the Beast described by St. John in the Revelations, will appear with Antichrist, and make war against the Saints. That Imam Mahadi, who remains concealed among the Mussulmen will then shew himself, join Jesus Christ, and with him engage Daggial, after which they will unite the Christians and Mussulmen, and of the two Religions make [x] Hieronym. Epist. ad Aglas. quæst. Œcumen. in 2 Thess. ii. [y] Lactant. l. vii. de Divino præmio, c. 17, 19. [z] Hieronym. in Dan. xi. Theodoret. Haymo. Strab. idem, &c. [a] Bibl. Orient. p. 282. & 531. mahadi.

* Perhaps the Reader may be fully satisfied with what the Author has here said upon this subject. But if he would have more of the same nature, he may consult the works referr'd to by F. Calmet; and besides may have recourse to Brightman, Mede, Cocceius, Vitringa, and other Writers on the Revelations, as also Salmasius, under the name of Simplicius against Grotius de Antichristo, and many others.

make but one. After this manner do these people pervert the truths of Christianity, and attribute those promises to themselves, which the Apostles made to the Jewish Nation, viz. that at the end of the world they shall be united with the Church, and acknowledge the Saviour whom they crucified.

Rom. xi. 25. 26. 2 Cor. iii. 16.

I. ANTIGONUS SOCCHÆUS, Sadoc's Master, who was head of the Sadducees. Antigonus taught, that a pure and disinterested worship should be paid to God. Be not like slaves, said he to his Disciples, let not the view of rewards only be the motive of your obedience; obey without interest, without the hope of receiving any fruit from your labours. Let the fear of the Lord be upon you. Sadoc his Disciple not being able to reconcile himself to such a disinterested spirituality, interpreted his Master's maxim in a quite opposite meaning. He concluded from it, that there were no rewards or punishments to be expected in another life; and that it was necessary to do good and to avoid evil in this, without any motives of hope or fear. This, say the Jews, was the original of the Sect of the Sadducees. Antigonus was a great Master and Teacher of the Jewish Law, and succeeded Simon the Just in this employment, who was High Priest from the year of the World 3702. to 3711. before J. C. 209. before the vulgar Æra 213.

II. Antigonus, the Son of John Hircanus, and Grandson to Simon Maccabæus. His Brother Aristobulus made him his Associate in the Kingdom[b]. Their union was interrupted by the envy and false accusations of their Enemies, who attempted to make Antigonus suspected by Aristobulus; who would never hearken to the ill which they reported of his Brother, till Antigonus one day returning from the war in a suit of rich armour, attended with a numerous retinue, went directly to the Temple, armed as he was, upon the day when the feast of Tabernacles, one of the principal which the Jews observed, was celebrated. Antigonus's enemies represented to Aristobulus, who was then indisposed, that his Brother affected visibly the Royal Power, and took upon him the airs of a Sovereign; and that he would come very soon with a great number of soldiers in his company, to kill him.

Aristobulus could not imagine things to be as they were reported; yet thought it was not proper intirely to neglect this intelligence. He ordered therefore his guards to be posted in an obscure subterraneous place, through which Antigonus was to pass, and directed them to seize and kill him, if he came that way armed; and if he came unarmed to let him pass. Now Aristobulus lay in the Tower which was afterwards called Antonia. He sent therefore to his Brother, desiring him to come and visit him without arms. But the Queen on the contrary, and Antigonus's enemies, inform'd him that the King having understood he had the finest arms in the world, desired he would come to see him with them. Antigonus, who had no distrust of any thing, went armed as he was to wait upon the King; but as he passed under the Tower called Strato's, he was killed by Aristobulus's Guards.

There was at that time one Judas at Jerusalem, who had the gift of Prophecy, so as to foretel always what was to come to pass, with great certainty. He being upon this day in the midst of his Disciples, and seeing Antigonus going, as we have said, to the Temple, cried out that he could not be able to survive his own shame; for whereas he had formerly foretold that Antigonus should on this day be killed in Strato's Tower, he saw him living, and in perfect health. But in a little time after, it was known that this Prince was massacred in a place called Strato's Tower, which confirmed the opinion some had entertained of his predictions being infallible. This happened in the year of the world 3899. before J. C. 101. before the vulgar Æra 105.

III. Antigonus, Son of Aristobulus, who was Brother to Hircanus and Alexandra. Pompey having taken Jerusalem[c], and seized on Aristobulus and his two Sons, Alexander and Antigonus, Alexander by the way found means to escape. But Aristobulus and Antigonus his Son, were carried away Prisoners to Rome. They made their escape, and returned into Judæa five or six years after. There they endeavoured to re-establish their affairs by the assistance of their friends; but they were defeated and taken by Gabinius[d], who sent them once more to Rome. Aristobulus continued there: but Alexander and Antigonus his Sons were sent back into Judæa, because Gabinius had signified that he had made this promise to their Mother.

In the Year of the World 3943. before J. C. 57. before the vulgar Æra 61.

In the Year of the World 3948. before J. C. 52. before the vulg. Æra 56.

In the year of the World 3955. before J. C. 45. before the vulgar Æra 49. Cæsar sent Aristobulus and his Son Antigonus back into Judæa, that he might bring over this Province to his party, and raise an insurrection there against Pompey[e]: but Aristobulus was poisoned by those of Pompey's party. His eldest Son Alexander was beheaded at Antioch by Scipio; and Antigonus seeing himself shut out of Judæa by Antipater and his Sons, had recourse to Cæsar, and laid before him the misfortunes which his Father and his Brother had undergone [b] Joseph. Antiq. l. xiii. c. 18, 19.

[c] Ibid. l. xiv. c. 11. & lib. 1. de Bello c. 6.
[d] Antiq. l. xiv. c. 11. & de Bello l. 1. c. 6.
[e] Antiq. l. xiv. c. 13. & de Bello l. 1. c. 7. & Dio l. xli.

dergone on his account[f]. But Cæsar had more regard to Antipater's reasons, and rejected the petition of Antigonus. About six years after, Antigonus being assisted with troops by his Father-in-law, Ptolemy the Son of Mennæus, made an irruption into Judæa, but was repulsed with loss by Herod the Son of Antipater, who at that time was only a private person[g].

In the Year of the World 3957.

In the Year of the World 3963.

In the Year of the World 3964.

The year following, Antigonus having promised to give the Parthians a thousand talents of Silver, and five hundred Women, upon condition that they would establish him in the Kingdom of Judæa, in the room of his Uncle Hircanus, and put Herod and his relations to death; Pacorus the King of Parthia's Son entred Judæa, and advanced as far as Jerusalem. Herod and his Brother Phasael, after a vigorous resistance, retired to the Temple, and were besieged by an army consisting of Parthians and Jews in the interest of Antigonus, who had joined them. Hircanus and Phasael having imprudently relied upon the Parthians word, were seized on; Phasael killed himself; and Hircanus had his ears cut off, to prevent his ever exercising the High-Priesthood; the law excluding all those from this Office who had any such bodily defects. Herod was obliged to retire to Idumæa, with his relations. Thus Antigonus was established King of Judæa, and High-Priest, by the Parthians, who afterwards returned into their own Country, carrying the High-Priest Hircanus with them.

Lev. xxi. 17, 18.

In the mean time Herod, being gone to Rome, left his Mother and his Wife with his Brother Joseph in the Castle of Massada, where they were besieged by Antigonus. But Herod, by the credit of Antony and Cæsar, having obtained the title of King of Judæa[h], Antigonus was declared by the Senate an enemy to the Commonwealth. Herod returned speedily into Judæa, and with the succours he received from Ventidius and Silo, marched immediately to Massada, in order to deliver his relations, who were shut up in this castle; after this was effected, he laid siege to Jerusalem. But Silo, who had been corrupted by Antigonus, refused to continue the siege any longer; the Roman army went into winter quarters, and Antigonus himself received them into some of his Cities. Some time after, Herod going to reinforce Mark Antony, who was then employed in the siege of Samosata, was honourably received by him, and when the war was ended, was sent back into Judæa. Then Antony gave orders to Sosius, Governour of Syria and Cilicia, to assist Herod with all his forces against Antigonus.

In the year 3965.

He returned therefore into Judæa, and overcame Antigonus in a set battle; and if he had not been hindred from pursuing his victory by the rigour of the season, he might have taken Jerusalem, and finished the war. The year following Sosius having joined Herod with his troops, they marched together to besiege Antigonus in Jerusalem. The City endured the siege for five whole months, after which the lower City and the outward part of the Temple were taken. Antigonus and the Jews in his interest continued Masters of the upper City, and the inward parts of the Temple. Herod attacked those quarters of the City, which still held out for Antigonus, with so much vigour that at last he took them upon the first day of the year 4677, according to the Julian period. After this Antigonus seeing no more hope of safety, descended from the Tower where he was, and threw himself at Sosius's feet, who insulted him for his mean spirit, calling him Antigona, instead of Antigonus. He ordered him to be put in chains, and guarded strictly. After he had pacified all things in Jerusalem, he departed from thence, carrying Antigonus with him to Antioch, where was Mark Antony; who designed to keep Antigonus for the ornament of his triumph, when he returned to Rome; but Herod fearing lest Antigonus might set forth too effectually his rights and pretensions to the Kingdom of Judæa, and might find protection from the Senate, so wrought upon Antony by great sums of money, as to prevail with him to put Antigonus to death. This unhappy Prince therefore had his head cut off at Antioch[l], in the year of the World 3967. before J. C. 33. before the vulgar Æra 37.

In the Year of the World 3966. before J. C. 34. before the vulgar Æra 38.

In the Year of the World 3967. before J. C. 33. before the vulgar Æra 37.

ANTI-LIBANUS. Thus the Greeks called that chain of Mountains which lay to the East of Libanus, and which properly speaking formed together with Libanus but one ridge of Mountains, which extended from North to South, and afterwards from South to North, in the shape almost of an horse-shoe[m], for the space of about fourscore leagues. The Eastern part of these Mountains was called Anti-libanus; and the Western part Libanus: the latter reached along the Mediterranean, from Sidon almost to Arada, or Symira. The Hebrew Text of Scripture never mentions Anti-libanus; but calls it always by the general name of Libanus. And the coins stampt at Laodicæa and Hierapolis have the name of the Cities of Libanus inscribed upon them, tho' they belong rather to Anti-libanus. The Septuagint, on the contrary, put Anti-libanus often in the room of Libanus. The valley which sepa-

Deut. i. 7. iii. 25. xi. 24. Josh. i. 4. ix. 1.

f Joseph. Antiq. l. xiv. c. 15. & l. i. de Bello, c. 8. g Antiq. l. xiv. c. 21. & l. i. de Bello, c. 10. h Antiq. l. xiv. c. 24, 25. i Ibid. c. 26. k Ibid. c. 27. l Ibid. c. ult. & l. xx. c. 8. & l. i. de Bell. c. 13. m See Plin. l. v. c. 20. Ptolem. & Euseb. & Hieronym. in Libano & Anti-libano. Maundrel. in Itinerario. Reland. Palæstina. l. i. c. 48. p. 318. & seq.

feparates Libanus from Anti-libanus, is very fruitful. It was formerly, on the fide of Syria, inclofed with a wall, whereof there are no footfteps to be feen at this day [n]. Strabo [o] fays that the name of Cœle-Syria, or the hollow part of Syria, belongs principally to that valley which lies between Libanus and Anti-libanus.

ANTILOGIA, or Contradiction, Oppofition. There are many feeming contradictions in the Scripture, which Interpreters and Commentators have endeavoured to reconcile. It is impoffible that the Holy Spirit, which is the Author of the Scriptures, fhould contradict himfelf, or that there fhould be any real difagreement in what he delivers; but the little knowledge which we have of things divine and fupernatural; our ignorance of the language, hiftory and cuftoms of the Jews; the lofs of many ancient monuments; the condefcenfion of God in being pleafed to exprefs himfelf often after a popular and human manner, whenever he fpeaks of his divine perfections and operations; all thefe things contribute to make the Text of Scripture obfcure, and occafion that appearance of Antilogies and Contradictions, which are indeed but appearances, and relate all to our imperfect way of conceiving things. There is nothing but Truth in the Sacred Writings, tho' it be fometimes clearer or obfcurer than at others [p]. Cum in voluminibus Sacrarum literarum . . . aliqua velut a veritate diverfum fonante fententiâ, vel movetur lector, vel follicitatur auditor, certa & inconcuffa fide teneri debet unius atque ejufdem Spiritûs, & ejus præter quem nihil eft veritatis, apertius alibi, paulo obfcurius alibi fonare myfteria, &c.

ANTIMONY. In Latin, Stibium; in Hebrew, Phuc; in Greek, Stimmi; is a mineral which comes near the nature of metals; it is found in Silver and Lead Mines. It is of a black colour, and filled with long glittering ftreaks like needles. It is mixed with feveral metals, and is generally ufed in melting them. Antimony is at this day very much employed in Phyfick; but before the twelfth age, it was of fervice only in the compofition of Paint; and it is in this fenfe, and with relation to this ufe, that we fhall fpeak of it. The Scripture defcribes it to us as a fort of Paint, with which the Women blackened their Eyebrows. Jezabel underftanding that Jehu was to enter Samaria, painted her Eyes with Antimony; or, according to the Hebrew, put her Eyes in Antimony. She rub'd them with it all over, or even dip'd them in the Paint, in order to fpeak to this Ufurper, and fhew herfelf before him.

2 Kings ix. 30. ותשם בפוך עיניה

As large black Eyes were thought the fineft, they of both fexes, who were careful of their beauty, rub'd their Eyes, the Eye-lids, and round the Eyes, with a needle dip'd in a box of Paint made of Antimony, with a defign of blackening them, of enlarging the Eye-lid, or rather wrinkling it, that the Eye might appear the larger. At this day the Women of Syria, Arabia and Babylonia [q], anoint and blacken themfelves about the Eyes; and both Men and Women put black about their Eyes in the Defart, to preferve them from the heat of the Sun, and the piercing of its rays. M. Darvieux [r] tells us, that the Arabian Women border their Eyes with a black colour made of Tutie, which the Arabians call Rehel. They draw a line of this kind of blacking without the corner of their Eyes, to make them appear larger. Ifaiah, in his enumeration of the feveral ornaments belonging to the Daughters of Sion, has not forgotten the needles which they made ufe of in painting their Eyes, and Eye-lids. Ifai. iii. 22.

Ille Supercilium madidâ fuligine tinctum
Obliquâ producit acu, pingitque trementes
Attollens oculos [s].

Jeremiah, addreffing himfelf to the Daughters of Sion, fays, Though thou cloatheft thy felf with Crimfon, though thou deckeft thee with ornaments of gold, though thou renteft thy face with painting, (Antimony) thy lovers will defpife thee. And Ezekiel, difcovering the irregularities of the Jewifh Nation, under the idea of a debauched Woman, fays, that fhe bathed, perfumed herfelf, that fhe anointed her Eyes with Antimony; that fhe adorned herfelf, fat upon a fine bed, and before a well-covered table, &c. Job fhews fufficiently how much Antimony was in efteem, by calling one of his Daughters a veffel of Antimony, or a box to put Paint in, cornu ftibii. The Author of the Book of Enoch fays, that before the Deluge the Angel Azleel taught young Women the art of painting themfelves.

Jer. iv. 30. Ezek. xxiii. 40. Job xlii. 14.

Tertullian [t] and St. Cyprian [u], have declaimed very warmly againft this cuftom of painting their Eyes and Eyebrows, which was much practifed in Africk, even by the Men, Inunge oculos tuos non ftibio diaboli, fed collyrio Chrifti, fays St. Cyprian. Pliny fpeaking of the Roman ladies, fays, that they painted their very Eyes. Tanta eft decoris affectatio, ut tingantur oculi quoque. Sardanapalus painted his Eyes and Eyebrows. Jofephus reproaches the Seditious with the fame, who affumed the name of Zealots, and made themfelves Mafters of the Temple of Jerufalem [y].

ANTI-

[n] Plin. l. v. c. 20. [o] Strabo, l. xvi. [p] Aug. de prædeft. & gratia, c. 1. [q] Tavernier Voyage de Perfe l. ii. c. 7. Gabriel. Sionit. de morib. Orient. c. ii. [r] Darvieux Voyage au Camp du Grand Emir en 1664. Printed at Paris in 1717. p. 27, 28. [s] Juvenal. Satyr. 2. [t] Tertull. de cultu fœmin. [u] Cyprian. de lapfis & de difciplina & cultu virgin. & de opere & eleemofyn. [y] Joseph. l. v. c 9. de Bell. Jud.

A VIEW OF THE CITY OF ANTIOCH UPON THE ORONTES

Vol. X

ANTIOCH. There are several Cities which are known to be of this name; but the Scripture speaks only of the greater Antioch, which was the Capital of Syria, and of another Antioch of Pisidia, whereof we shall say something in the next Article. Antioch of Syria was formerly called Riblath, if we believe S. Jerom[x].

There is no mention of Antioch, excepting in the book of Maccabees, and in the New Testament; but of Riblath, or Riblatha, there is in the book of Numbers, in the books of Kings, and in Jeremiah. Theodoret says, that in his time there was a City of Riblah near Emesa in Syria, which is very contrary to S. Jerom's opinion. However this may be, 'tis certain Antioch was not known under this name till after the reign of Seleucus Nicanor, who built it, and called it Antioch, in consideration of his Father Antiochus, in the year 301. before the vulgar Æra of J. C. The Kings of Syria, Successors to Alexander the Great, resided generally at Antioch. There the Disciples of Jesus Christ were first called Christians. This City, which was formerly so beautiful, so flourishing, and so illustrious, is scarce any thing at present but a heap of ruins. The walls are still standing; but within the City there is nothing but gardens, ruins, and some bad houses. The river Orontes runs near the City, on the outside of it. Antioch is the place where S. Peter had his first See. The Bishop of Antioch has the title of Patriarch; and at all times has had a great share in the affairs of the Eastern Church.

(Numb. xxxiv. 11. 2 Kings xxiii. 33. xxvii. 6, 20, 21. Jer. xxxix. 5. lii. 9, 10, 26, 27.)

(Acts xi. 26.)

Antioch was almost square, had many gates, and part of it on the North side was raised upon an high mountain. It was adorned with galleries and fine fountains. Ammianus Marcellinus[y] says it was celebrated throughout the world, and that no other City exceeded it, either in fertility of soil, or richness of trade. The Emperors Vespasian, Titus, and others, granted very great privileges to it; but it has likewise been exposed to great revolutions. It was almost demolished by earthquakes, which happened in the fourth and fifth Centuries. The Emperor Justinian repaired it in 529. and called it, as Evagrius says, Theopolis; that is to say, the City of God. Chosroes King of Persia took it in 548. massacred the inhabitants, and burnt it. Justinian had it rebuilt in 552, in a more beautiful and regular manner than it was before. Chosroes took it a second time in 574. in the reign of Justin, and destroyed its walls. In 588 it suffered again a dreadful earthquake, whereby above sixty thousand persons perished.

(In the years 340. 394. 396. 458. 526. and 528.)

It was once more rebuilt, and afterwards exposed to new calamities. The Saracens made themselves masters of it in 637, or 638. in the reign of Heraclius. Nicephorus Phocas retook it in 966. Cedrenus relates, that in 970. the Saracens, to the number of an hundred thousand, laid siege to it without being able to get possession of it; but that afterwards they subdued it, added new fortifications to it, and made it almost impregnable. The Christians who were of the Croisade with Godfrey of Bouillon, when he attempted the conquest of the Holy Land, besieged it in 1097. The siege was long and bloody; the Christians, by their indefatigable labours, and the help of a secret correspondence in the place, carried it on Thursday the 3d of June 1098. Lastly, this City being frequently attacked by the Saracens, was taken on the 29th of May 1268. under the Sultan of Egypt, who demolished it. It has ever since lost its reputation and magnificence, and groaned under the dominion of the Turk.

Antioch abounded with great men, and the Church there was a long time governed by illustrious Prelates; but it suffered much upon several occasions, sometimes being exposed to the violence of Hereticks, and at other times rent in pieces by deplorable Schisms.

ANTIOCH of Pisidia, a City mentioned in the Acts, ch. xiii. 14. S. Paul and S. Barnabas preached in this City; and the Jews, who were concerned to see that some of the Gentiles had received the Gospel, raised a Sedition against Paul and Barnabas, and obliged them to leave the City. It is at present called Versategli, according to some; and as others say, Tabora, or Sibi, or Antiochio.

ANTIOCHIS, the Concubine of Antiochus Epiphanes, who gave her the Cities of Tarsus and Mallo, that she might make what use she pleased of the revenues of them. This disposal of these places by the King was received by the inhabitants of them as a mark of insupportable contempt. They took arms against Antiochus Epiphanes, who was obliged to march in person, in order to reduce them to obedience. It was a custom with the Kings of Persia to give their Wives particular Cities, some for their table, some for their head-dress, some for their attire, and others for their girdles. Uxoribus attribuunt civitates hoc modo: Hæc civitas mulieri in redimiculum præbeat; hæc in collum; hæc in crines. Ita populos habent universos non solum conscios libidinis suæ, sed etiam administros, says Cicero[z].

(2 Macc. iv. 30.)

I. ANTIOCHUS. There were many Kings

[x] Hieronym. in Ezek. xlvii. & in Isai. xiii. 1. & in Amos vi. 2. [y] Amm. Marcell. l. iv, & xxii. [z] Tullius in Verrem, 5.

Kings of this name in Syria, from the time of Seleucus Nicanor, who is reckoned the first King of Syria after Alexander the Great, and was Father to Antiochus Soter. This last was firnamed Soter, or Saviour, for having hindred the invasion of the Gauls, who intended to invade Asia [c]. It happened probably upon this occasion, as is related in the second book of Maccabees; that the Galatians having marched to attack the Jews in Babylonia, whose army consisted only of eight thousand men, re-inforced with four thousand Macedonians, the eight thousand Jews fell upon the Galatians so briskly, that they killed an hundred and twenty thousand men. It was perhaps too on this occasion, that Antiochus Soter made the Jews of Asia free of all the Cities belonging to the Gentiles, and permitted them to live according to their own Laws [d]. The event of this Privilege is recorded under the year of the World 3743, before J. C. 257, before the vulgar Æra 261.

2 Macc. viii. 20.

II. Antiochus II. Sirnamed Theos, God, the Son and Successor of Antiochus Soter, third King of Syria, married Berenice the daughter of Ptolemy Philadelphus King of Egypt. Laodice his first Wife seeing herself despis'd poisoned Antiochus, Berenice, and their Son, who was designed for their Successor in the Kingdom. After this Laodice procured Seleucus Callinicus, her Son by the same Antiochus to be acknowledged King of Syria. These events were foretold by Daniel in these terms. And in the end of years the King of Egypt, or of the South, and the King of Syria, or of the North, shall make an Alliance together, and the King's Daughter of the South shall come to the King of the North to make an Agreement: but she shall not retain the Power of them, neither shall he stand, nor his arm; but she shall be given up, and they that brought her, and he that begat her, and he that strengthened her in these times. See the Commentators on this place.

Dan. ix. 6.

III. Antiochus the Great, is very much celebrated in the Greek and Roman Histories for the Wars carried on by him against the Egyptians and Romans. We shall not enlarge much on his Actions in these Wars; but shall confine ourselves to what more immediately relates to the History of the Jews. Antiochus was the Son of Seleucus Callinicus, and Brother to Seleucus Ceraunus. Antiochus succeeded his Brother Seleucus in the year of the World 3781, before J.C. 219. He made War with Ptolemy Philopator King of Egypt, but was defeated near Raphia, as is related in the third book of Maccabees, Chap. i. Thirteen years after, Ptolemy Philopator being dead, Antiochus resolved to make himself Master of Egypt; and immediately seized on Cœle-Syria, Phœnicia, and Judæa [e]. But Scopas, General of the King of Egypt's Troops, having entred Judæa, while Antiochus was taken up with the War against Attalus, re-took those places which Antiochus had usurped from the King of Egypt [f]. Soon after this, Antiochus recovered what Scopas had retaken from him [g].

In the Year of the World 3800, before J. C. 200, be. the vulgar Æra 204.

In the Year of the World 3806, before J. C. 194, before the Vulgar Æra 198.

Upon this occasion happened that which Josephus relates, concerning this Prince's journey to Jerusalem. After the Victory which Antiochus obtained over Scopas near the Springs of Jordan, he made himself Master of the strong places in Cœle-Syria, and Samaria; and the Jews submitted freely to him, received him into their City and furnished his army plentifully with provisions, and what was necessary for his Elephants. As an acknowledgment of their affection, Antiochus made a Grant to them, which is mentioned by Josephus [h] of twenty thousand pieces of Silver to purchase Beasts for their Sacrifices, of one thousand four hundred and sixty measures of Meal, and three hundred seventy five measures of Salt, to be offered with the Sacrifices, and of so much Wood as was necessary to rebuild the Porches of the Lord's House. He declared his will, that the Senators, Priests, Scribes, and singing Men of the Temple should be exempt from the Tribute paid in the way of Capitation-tax. Lastly, he gave the Jews liberty to live according to their own Laws all over his Dominions. He remitted the third part of their Tribute to indemnify them for the losses which they had sustained during the Wars; he forbad the Heathens from entring the Temple without being purified, and to bring into the city the flesh of Mules, Asses, and Horses to sell, under the penalty of paying three thousand Drachma's, as a Fine for the offence.

In the same year 3806.

In the year of the world 3812 he married his daughter Cleopatra with Ptolemy Epiphanes King of Egypt, and gave Cœle-Syria, Phœnicia, and Judæa for her Dowry [i], upon condition that the Tributes arising from these three Provinces, should be equally divided between the two Sovereigns, that is to say, between the King of Syria, and the King of Egypt. Three years after he was overcome by the Romans, and obliged to make a cession of all that he possessed beyond Mount Taurus, and to give twenty hostages, among whom was his own Son Antiochus, sirnamed afterwards Epiphanes. The Romans moreover imposed a Tribute on him, consisting of twelve-

In the Year of the World 3815, before J. C. 185.

[c] Appian. Syriac. p. 130.
[d] Joseph. Antiq. l. xii. c. 3.
[e] Antiq. lib. xii. c. 3. Polyb. l. iii.
[f] Antiq. lib. xii. c. 3. Polyb. l. xvi.
[g] Tit. Liv. l. xxxiii.
[h] Antiq. lib. xii. c. 3.
[i] Ibid.

twelve-thousand Euboic Talents [*], each of fourteen Roman pounds weight. To satisfy the charge which the Romans had put him to, Antiochus resolved to carry off the great treasures laid up in the Temple of Belus at Elymais [k]. But the people of this Country being informed of his design, surprized him, and destroyed him with all his army, in the year of the world 3817, before J. C. 183, before the vulgar Æra 187. He left two Sons, Seleucus Philopator, and Antiochus Epiphanes, who succeeded him, and both reigned one after the other.

IV. Antiochus Epiphanes, was the Son of Antiochus the Great, whom we have been speaking of, and Brother to Seleucus Philopator King of Syria. Having continued as an hostage at Rome for fourteen years, his Brother Seleucus resolved to procure his return to Syria. It is thought that he intended to make use of him in the design which he had formed, of conquering Egypt, a Country that the Kings of Syria had for a long time looked on, as an object worthy of their ambition. However this might be, Seleucus sent his own Son Demetrius as an hostage to Rome, in the room of Antiochus; but while this last was upon his journey Seleucus died, so that when he landed in Syria, the people received him as some propitious Deity, come to take upon him the Government, and oppose the Enterprizes of Ptolemy King of Egypt, who threatned to invade Syria. For this reason Antiochus had the Sirname given him of Epiphanes, that is, of one appearing as it were like a God, and manifesting himself to men.

In the Year of the World 3829, before J. C. 171, before the vulgar Æra 175.

This Prince thought betimes of possessing himself of Egypt, which was then injoyed by Ptolemy Philometor his nephew, Son to his Sister Cleopatra. He sent Apollonius one of his Officers into Egypt, under pretence of being present at Ptolemy's Coronation; but in reality to observe how the great men of the Kingdom were disposed towards him, and to get intelligence, whether they were inclined to put the Government of Egypt into his hands, during the minority of the King his Nephew. But Apollonius found them no way disposed in favour of his Master, which obliged Antiochus to make war against Philometor. He came to Jerusalem in 3831, and was received there by Jason, to whom he had sold the High-Priesthood. He designed to attack Egypt, but returned without doing any thing.

In the Year of the World 3831, before J. C. 169, before the vulgar Æra 173.

2 Macc. iv. 21. seq.

The Ambition of the Jews, who sought after the High-Priesthood, and bought it of Antiochus, was the beginning of those Calamities which overwhelmed their Nation, under the reign of Antiochus Epiphanes. Jason procured himself to be established in this Dignity in the room of his brother Onies III. Menelaus having offered more, Jason was deprived, and he confirmed in his place. These Usurpers of the High-Priesthood, to gratify the Syrians, took up all the Manners of the Greeks, their Games and Exercises, and neglected the Worship of the Lord, and the Service of the Temple. In the mean time the War broke out between Antiochus Epiphanes, and Ptolemy Philometor. Antiochus entred Egypt in 3833, and reduced it almost all intirely to his obedience [l]. The next year he returned, and while he was taken up with the Siege of Alexandria, a false report was spread of his Death; and the inhabitants of Jerusalem shewing their joy on this occasion, Antiochus as he came back from Egypt entred this City by force, treated the Jews as Rebels, and commanded his Troops to put all they met with to the sword. Fourscore thousand of them were killed in three days time, forty thousand were made captives, and as many sold [m]. He entred into the Holy of Holies in the Temple conducted by the pretended High-Priest Menelaus, took and carried off the most precious vessels of this holy place, to the value of eighteen hundred talents.

In 3835 Antiochus made a third Expedition against Egypt, werein he subdued it intirely [n]. The year following he sent Apollonius into Judæa, with an army of two and twenty thousand men, and gave him orders to kill all those who were of full age, and to sell the women and young men. Apollonius executed these Orders but too punctually. It was upon this occasion that Judas Maccabæus retired into the wilderness with his Father and his Brethren. But these misfortunes were no more than preludes to those which they were afterwards to suffer. Antiochus apprehended, that the Jews would never be constant in their obedience to him, unless he oblig'd them to change their Religion, and embrace the ceremonies and worship of the Greeks. He commanded therefore an Edict to be published, injoining them to conform themselves to the laws of other Nations, and forbidding them to offer their usual Sacrifices in the Temple, and to celebrate their Festivals and Sabbath. Many corrupt Jews complied with these Orders, but others opposed them. Mattathias and his Sons retired to the mountains: Old Eleazar and the seven Brethren,

2 Macc. v. 24, 25.

2 Macc. v. 29.

[k] Vide Diodor. in Excerptis Valef. p. 292, 298. Strabo. l. xvi. p. 744. Justin. l. xiii. &c. [l] Vide 2 Macc. v. 3, 4, 5, &c. Liber de Maccab. c. 4. [m] The construction of the Greek intimates, that eighty thousand was the Sum total of those who were punished upon this occasion. Ὀκτὼ μυριάδες κατεφθάρησαν· τέσσαρες μὲν ἐν χειρῶν νομαῖς. Οὐκ ἔττον δὲ τῶν ἐσφαγμένων ἐπράθησαν. [n] Polyb. Legation. Diodor. in Excerptis Valesii.

[*] Concerning the Euboic Talent and its Valuation, compared with the Attick and Babylonish Talents, See Dr. Prideaux's Connect. pt. II. p. 128. of the Ed. in Fol. See likewise Dr. Arbuthnot's Dissertations &c. Of the Talents.

thren, Maccabees, suffered death with great courage at Antioch. The Statue of Jupiter Olympus was placed upon the Altar of the Temple, and the abomination of desolation was seen in the House of God.

2 Macc. vii.

Mattathias being dead, Judas Maccabæus put himself at the head of those Jews, who continued faithful to the Lord. He made war against the Generals, whom King Antiochus sent into Judæa, with the success which we shall see in another place: The King being informed of Judas's valour, and of the resistance of the Jews, sent new forces against them; and observing his treasures to be exhausted, resolved to go into Persia, there to levy the Tributes due from the people, and gather large sums of money, which he was to pay the Romans. He understood that there was a very great mass of riches in the Temple of Elymais, and he determined to carry it off with him. But the inhabitants of the Country made so vigorous a resistance, that he was forced to retreat towards Babylonia. When he was come to Ecbatana, he received news of Nicanor's and Timotheus's defeat; and that Judas Maccabæus had retaken the Temple of Jerusalem, and restored the worship of the Lord, and Sacrifices.

1 Macc. iii. 27.

Ch. v. 1, 2, 3, &c. and 2 Macc. ix. 1, 2, 3.

Upon this intelligence the King, transported with indignation, commanded the person who drove his chariot to make the horses put on, and hasten his journey, threatning to make Jerusalem a grave for the Jews. But the Divine Vengeance soon overtook him; for he fell from his chariot and bruised all his limbs. He was tormented with such a pain in his bowels, as would allow him no rest. Grief and vexation at so much ill success concurring with his disease, reduced him speedily to death's door. In this condition he wrote to the Jews, in a very submissive manner, made them large promises, and engaged even to turn Jew, if God restored him to his health. He recommended his Son Antiochus to them very earnestly, who was to succeed him, and intreated them to favour him, and to continue faithful to him. He died overwhelmed with pain and grief, in the mountains of Paratacene, in the little town of Tabes, in the year of the World 3840. before J. C. 160. before the vulgar Æra 164.

V. Antiochus Eupator, Son of Antiochus Epiphanes, was but nine years old, when Epiphanes his Father died, and left him the Kingdom of Syria. Lysias, who governed the Kingdom in the name of this young Prince, led an Army against Judæa, consisting of an hundred thousand foot, twenty thousand horse, and thirty elephants. He laid siege to, and took, the fortress of Bethsura; from thence he marched against Jerusalem, notwithstanding the valour and resistance of the Maccabees. The City was ready to fall into the Enemy's hands, when Lysias received news that Philip, whom King Antiochus Epiphanes, a little before his death, had trusted with the Regency of the Kingdom, during the minority of young Eupator his Son; that Philip, I say, was come to Antioch, to take the government upon him, according to the disposition of the late King, whereupon he proposed an an accommodation to the Jews, that he might return speedily to Antioch, and oppose the undertakings of Philip. Thus having made peace, he immediately returned with the young King and his Army into Syria.

2 Macc. xiii. & 1 Macc. vi.

In the mean time Demetrius Soter, Son of Seleucus Philopator, Nephew of Antiochus Epiphanes, to whom by right of birth the Kingdom belonged, (for Antiochus Epiphanes enjoyed it by usurpation only from his Nephew;) Demetrius, I say, having made his escape from Rome, where he was an Hostage, came into Syria, where finding the people disposed for a revolt, he put himself at the head of an Army, and marched directly to Antioch, against Antiochus and Lysias. But the inhabitants did not wait till he besieged it, they opened the gates, and delivered to him Lysias, and the young King Antiochus Eupator, who were put to death by his orders, without suffering them to appear before him. Antiochus Eupator reigned but two years. He ascended the Throne of Syria in the year of the World 3840, and died in 3842. before J. C. 158. before the vulgar Æra 162.

1 Macc. vii. 2 Macc. xiii.

VI. Antiochus Theos, or the God, Son of Alexander Balas, King of Syria, was brought up by an Arabian Prince called Elmalchuel. Demetrius Nicanor King of Syria having made himself odious to his Troops, one Diodotus, otherwise called Tryphon, came to Zabdiel, and desired him to trust him with young Antiochus, promising to place him on the Throne of Syria, which was possessed by Demetrius Nicanor. Zabdiel at first was unwilling to consent, fearing lest Diodotus should destroy this young Prince, after he had made use of him to divest Nicanor of the Kingdom. But at last he trusted him with Antiochus. Tryphon carried him into Syria, and put the Crown upon his head. The Troops which Demetrius had dismissed, came and surrendred themselves to him; and having formed a powerful Army he marched against Demetrius; who was overcome, and forced to retreat to Seleucia. Tryphon seized his Elephants, and made himself Master of Antioch.

1 Macc. xi. 39, 40. &c.

In the year of the World 3859. before J. C. 141. before the vulgar Æra 145.

Antiochus Theos, to strengthen himself in his new acquisition, sent letters to Jo- nathan Maccabæus, High Prieſt and Prince of the Jews, whereby he confirmed him in poſſeſſion of the High Prieſthood, granted him four Toparchies, or four conſiderable places in Judæa, received him into the number of his friends, ſent him veſſels of gold, permitted him to uſe a gold cup, to wear purple, and a golden buckle; and gave his Brother Simon Maccabæus the general command of all the Troops upon the coaſt of the Mediterranean, from Tyre as far as the frontiers of Egypt. Jonathan, engaged by ſo many favours, declared reſolutely againſt Demetrius for Antiochus, or rather for Tryphon, who reigned under the name of this young Prince; and on many occaſions attacked Demetrius's Generals, who were ſtill poſſeſſed of ſeveral places beyond Jordan, and in Galilee.

1 Macc. xi. 63. & ſeq. xii. 24, 34.

Tryphon ſeeing young Antiochus peaceable poſſeſſor of the Kingdom of Syria, reſolved to get rid of him, and himſelf uſurp the Crown. He thought it was neceſſary in the firſt place to ſecure Jonathan Maccabæus, who was one of the moſt powerful ſupports of Antiochus's Throne. He came therefore with Troops into Judæa, invited Jonathan to Ptolemais, and there, upon frivolous pretences, made him a priſoner. Simon, Jonathan's Brother, headed the Troops of Judæa, and oppoſed the deſigns of Tryphon, who intended to make himſelf Maſter of Jeruſalem. Tryphon, diſappointed of his hopes, put Jonathan to death at Baſſa, or Baſcama, and returned into Syria, where, without delay, he executed the deſign he had conceived, of killing Antiochus. He corrupted the Phyſicians, who having publiſhed that the young Prince was tormented with the ſtone, murdered him, by cutting him without any neceſſity. Thus Tryphon was left ſole Maſter of the Kingdom of Syria, in the year of the World 3861, before J. C. 139. before the vulgar Æra 143.

In the year of the World 3861, before J. C. 139, before the vulg. Æra 143.

1 Macc. xiii. 2 Macc. xiv.

VII. Antiochus Sidetes, or Soter, or Euſebes; that is to ſay, the Pious; (for he is mentioned by the Ancients under theſe different names;) was Son of Demetrius Soter, and Brother to Demetrius Nicanor. Tryphon, the Uſurper of the Kingdom of Syria, having rendred himſelf odious to his Troops, his Soldiers deſerted him, and offered their ſervices to Cleopatra the Wife of Demetrius Nicanor, who lived in the City of Seleucia, where ſhe was ſhut up with her Children, while her Husband Demetrius was a priſoner in Perſia, where he had married Rodegune the Daughter of Arſaces King of Perſia *. Cleopatra therefore ſent to Antiochus Sidetes her Brother-in-law, and offered him the Crown of Syria, if he would take her to Wife. Antiochus conſented. This Prince was then at Cnidus, where his Father Demetrius Soter had placed him with one of his friends. He came into Syria, and wrote to Simon Maccabæus, to engage him in his party againſt Tryphon. He confirmed the privileges and favours which the Kings of Syria his predeceſſors had granted him, permitted him to coin money with his own ſtamp, declared Jeruſalem and the Temple exempt from all royal Juriſdiction, and promiſed to add many other favours to theſe, as ſoon as he ſhould become peaceable poſſeſſor of the Kingdom, which had belonged to his Anceſtors.

In the Year of the World 3864, before J. C. 136, before the vulgar Æra 140.

1 Macc. xv. 1, 2, 3, & ſeq.

Antiochus Sidetes being come therefore into Syria, in the year of the World 3865, married his Siſter-in-law Cleopatra. Tryphon's Troops reſorted to him in crouds, and ſurrendred themſelves to him; and Tryphon ſeeing himſelf abandoned, retired to Dora in Phœnicia, whither Antiochus purſued him with an Army by land, conſiſting of an hundred and twenty thouſand foot, and eight hundred horſe, and with a powerful fleet by ſea. Simon Maccabæus ſent him two thouſand choſen men, but Antiochus would not receive them, and revoked all the promiſes he had made him. He ſent Athenobius to Jeruſalem, to oblige Simon to reſtore to him Gazara and Joppa, together with the citadel of Jeruſalem; and to demand of him five hundred talents, as ſo much tribute for the places which he held out of Judæa; and five hundred talents more in the way of reparation for injuries which the King had ſuffered, and as tribute-money for his own Cities; threatning to make war upon him if he did not comply with theſe demands. Simon ſhewed Athenobius all the luſtre of his wealth and power, told him he had no place in his poſſeſſion which belonged to Antiochus; and as to Gazara and Joppa, which were Cities that had done infinite damage to his people, he was willing to give the King the ſum of an hundred talents, provided the property of them might be continued to him.

Ver. 25, & ſeq.

Athenobius returned with great indignation to Antiochus, who was extremely offended at Simon's anſwer. In the mean time Tryphon having ſtollen privately from Dora, imbarked in a veſſel and fled. Antiochus immediately purſued him, and ſent Cendebeus with Troops into the maritime parts of Paleſtine, with orders to rebuild Cedron, and to fight the Jews. John Hircanus the Son of Simon Maccabæus, who was at Gaza, gave notice to his Father of Cendebeus's coming. Simon furniſhed his Sons John Hircanus and Judas with Troops, and ſent them againſt Cendebeus, debeus, whom they routed in the plain, and purfued as far as Azotus.

* Joſeph. Antiq. l. xiii. c. 11.

Antiochus never left Tryphon till he had forced him to difpatch himfelf [r], in the year of the World 3856, after five or fix years reign. After this he thought of nothing but reducing thofe Cities to his obedience, which in the beginning of his brother's reign had fhaken off their fubjection [s]. Some years after, Simon Maccabæus, Prince and High Prieft of the Jews, having been treacheroufly killed by Ptolemy his Son-in law, in the Caftle of Docus near Jericho, the Murderer fent immediately to Antiochus Sidetes, to demand Troops of him, that he might recover for him the Country and Cities belonging to the Jews. Antiochus came thither in perfon with an Army, and laid fiege to Jerufalem [t]. John Hircanus defended it with much vigour, and the fiege lafted a long time. The King divided his Army into feven parts, that he might poffefs all the avenues to the City. The Feaft of Tabernacles being to be celebrated, the Jews defired Antiochus to allow them a truce of feven days. This was granted them; and moreover, this Prince fent them Bulls with gilded horns, and veffels of gold and filver filled with incenfe, to be offered in their Temple. He ordered likewife fuch provifions to be given to the Jewifh Soldiers, as they wanted. This courtefy of the King fo won upon the hearts of the Jews, that they fent Ambaffadors to treat with him of peace, and to defire that they might be permitted to live according to their own Laws.

In the Year of the World 3869 before J. C. 131. before the Vulg. Æra 135. 1 Macc. xvi 11. xvii. 18, &c.

Antiochus required of them to give up their arms, to demolifh the City walls, to pay tribute for Joppa, and the other Cities they poffeffed out of Judæa; and laftly, to receive a garrifon into their City. The befieged confented to thefe conditions, the laft only excepted; for they could not refolve with themfelves to fee ftrangers in their Capital. They rather chofe to give the King Hoftages, and five hundred talents of filver. The King therefore entred the City, beat down the breaft-work which was above the walls, and went back into Syria, in the year of the World 3870. before J. C. 130. before the vulgar Æra 134.

Three years after, Antiochus marched againft the Perfians [u], or Parthians, demanding the liberty of his Brother Demetrius Nicanor, or Nicator, who had been made prifoner of war long before, by Arfaces; and was detained by the King of Perfia againft his inclination, becaufe he intended to make ufe of him upon occafion, in ftirring up a war againft Antiochus. Antiochus therefore thought it proper to prevent him. He had an Army of fourfcore, or according to Orofius [v], of an hundred thoufand men. Their equipage was fo numerous and magnificent, that according to the computation of fome there were two hundred thoufand fervants, or as others will have it, three hundred thoufand, the greateft part whereof were Cooks, Paftry-cooks, and Comedians. King Antiochus entertained his Officers in his Camp with as much delicacy and profufenefs as he could have done in the midft of his Capital. His Army imitated the extravagancy of their Prince. The generality of the foldiers had nails of gold under their fhoes, made ufe of plate, and had their tents adorned with works of embroidery. As foon as he appeared upon the frontiers of Perfia, feveral Eaftern Kings came and furrendred themfelves to him, detefting the pride and avarice of the Perfians. Antiochus defeated his Enemies in three engagements, and made himfelf Mafter of Babylon. John Hircanus, High Prieft of the Jews, accompanied him in thefe expeditions [w]; and it is believed that he had from hence the name of Hircanus [x], or Hircanion, which he probably acquired by fome gallant action performed by him in this war.

As Antiochus's Army was too numerous to continue in any one place, he was obliged to divide it, in order to put it into winter-quarters. Thefe troops behaved themfelves with fo much infolence that they alienated the minds of all men. The Cities privately furrendred to the Perfians, and all refolved on one day to attack each the particular garrifon lodged in it; that fo the troops which were feparated might not be able to affift one another. Antiochus, who was at Babylon, had intelligence of this defign; and endeavoured to fuccour his people with the few foldiers whom he had about him. Phraates King of Perfia attacked him in the way, whom he fought with very great bravery. But at laft being deferted by his own forces, he was overpowered and killed by the Perfians, or Parthians, according to the generality of Hiftorians [y]; or according to others killed himfelf [z]; or as Ælian has it, threw himfelf headlong from a precipice [a]. This happened in the year of the World 3874. before J. C. 126. before the vulgar Æra 130. Demetrius Nicanor, or Nicator, whom the King of Parthia had fent into Syria to make a diverfion, reafcended the Throne after the death of Sidetes.

VIII. Anti-

[r] Strabo, l. xiv. p. 668. Vide & Jofeph. Antiq. l. xiii. c. 12. & Appian. Syriac. p. 132. [s] Juftin, l. xxxvi. c. 1. [t] Jofeph. Antiq. l. xvi. c. 13. [u] Juftin l. xxxviii. c. 9, & 10. Livius l. lix. Appian Syriac. p. 132. [v] Orofius, l. v. c. 10. [w] Nicolaus Damafc. apud Jofeph. l. xiii. Antiq. c. 16. [x] Eufeb. in Chronic. Sever. Sulpit. l. ii. hift. [y] Jul. Obfequens lib. de prodigiis. Juftin l. xxxviii, & xxxix. Jofeph. l. xiii. c. 16. Eufeb. in Chronic. Orof. l. v. c. 10. [z] Appian. Syriac. p. 132. [a] Ælian. l. x. c. 34. de animalib.

VIII. Antiochus Gryphus, or Philometor, the Son of Demetrius Nicanor and Cleopatra, revenged the Death of his Father upon Alexander Zebina, who had usurped the Kingdom of Syria. He attacked, defeated him, and compell'd him to shut himself up in Antioch; from whence he was forced very soon by the multitude of People which flocked together, upon notice that he intended to carry off a golden Statue of Jupiter, which was very massy. At Sea he was overtaken with a violent Storm, deserted by his own People, taken by Pyrates, and carried to Antiochus Gryphus, by whose direction he was put to death [e]. Josephus [f] says, that Zebina was killed in the Battle which he fought against Gryphus; and Porphyry relates [g], that he poisoned himself, not being able to survive the loss of his Army. Cleopatra, Gryphus's Mother, envying the happy success of her Son, upon a certain day as he came from performing some Exercise, presented him with a cup of poisoned Liquor, which Gryphus, who had been informed of this Design, refused to drink, and forced Cleopatra to make a proof of it upon herself; and upon her doing so, she died instantly [h]. After this Gryphus enjoyed the Kingdom peaceably for eight years.

From the year of the World 3881 to 3890.

At the expiration of this time, as he was preparing to make War against the Jews [i], he understood that Antiochus of Cyzicus, his Brother by the Mother's side, the Son of Cleopatra and Antiochus Sidetes, was disposing things in order to march against him. Gryphus prevented him, attacked, defeated, and obliged him, to fly. After this he went and laid siege to Antioch, where Cleopatra, Wife to Antiochus of Cyzicus had shut herself up. The City being taken, Cleopatra retired for Sanctuary to a Temple, thinking to secure herself thereby from the violence and outrage of the Conqueror. But Tryphena her Sister, the Wife of Gryphus, whether her Husband would or no, sent Soldiers into the Temple, who killed Cleopatra at the feet of the Goddess, whom she held within her arms [k].

The year following the two Brothers Antiochus Gryphus, and Antiochus of Cyzicus, coming to an Engagement, Gryphus lost the Battle, and Tryphena his Wife falling into the hands of Antiochus of Cyzicus, was by him put to death, to revenge the Murder of Cleopatra, which had been executed by Tryphena's Order. By this Victory Antiochus of Cyzicus became Master of the Kingdom of Syria; and Gryphus his Brother retired to Aspendus, where he continued till the next year, when he returned into Syria, and divided the Kingdom with his Brother. Gryphus remained Master of Syria, and Antiochus of Cyzicus possessed Cœle-Syria [l]. While the two Brothers made War against one another, and mutually weakened each other, John Hircanus fortified himself in Judæa, and every day made new Progresses [m]. Antiochus Gryphus, after he had lived five and forty years, and reigned eleven years alone, and fifteen with his Brother Antiochus of Cyzicus, was put to death by Heraclion's means [n], who drew him into an Ambuscade in the year of the World 3907. Gryphus left five Sons, 1. Seleucus who succeeded him; 2 and 3. Antiochus and Philip, who were Twins; 4. Demetrius Eucærus; 5. Antiochus sirnamed Dionysius.

IX. Antiochus of Cyzicus, Brother by the Mother to Antiochus Gryphus, and the Son of Cleopatra and Antiochus Sidetes his Uncle, was brought up at Cyzicus by his Mother Cleopatra, who was apprehensive, lest Demetrius Nicanor, her first Husband, should kill him. Hence he is called the Cyzicenian, or Antiochus of Cyzicus. Cyzicus is a City in Asia Minor upon the Propontis. Antiochus Gryphus having undertaken to poison Antiochus of Cyzicus his Brother, the latter levied troops, and prevented the effects of Gryphus's ill Will to him [o]. We have seen in the preceding Article, how Gryphus after he had won the first Battle, was defeated in a second, and how the two Brothers were reconciled, so that Syria continued in the possession of Gryphus, and the Cyzicenian had Cœle-Syria. This last seeing himself in a state of Tranquillity, gave himself up to Debauchery of all kinds, to the Pleasures of Eating and Drinking, Hunting, Shews, Buffoonries, and the making of Machines and Clockworks, which by the help of certain threads and wheels performed very surprizing Movements [p].

In the mean while John Hircanus, Prince and High Priest of the Jews, besieged Samaria; and the City being reduced by Famine to Extremities, the Samaritans invited Antiochus of Cyzicus to their Assistance. This Prince came speedily to their Succour, but was overcome by Antigonus and Aristobulus the Sons of John Hircanus, who commanded the Siege, and pursued him as far as Scythopolis. After which they returned to the Siege of Samaria, and blocked up the City so close, that the inhabitants were once more obliged to have recourse to Antiochus of Cyzicus [q]. This Prince having received six thousand Men from Ptolemy Lathyrus, the Son of Cleopatra

In the Year of the World 3895. before J. C. 105. before the vulg. Æra 109.

[e] Justin. l. xxxix. c. 2. [f] Joseph. lib. xiii. c. 13. [g] Porphyr. in Græcis. Euseb. Scaliger. p. 227.
[h] Justin. l. xxxix. Appian. Syriac. p. 132. [i] Joseph. Antiq. l. xiii. c. 17. [k] Justin l. xxxix. c. 3.
[l] Vide Justin. l. xxxix. Appian. Syriac. p. 132. Porphyr. in Græc. Euseb. p. 227. [m] Joseph. Antiq. l. xiii. c. 17.
[n] Joseph Wissem. & Euseb. Græc. p. 227. [o] Justin. l. xxxix. c. 3. [p] Diodor. Sicul. in Excerpt. Valesii p. 385.
[q] Joseph. Antiq. l. xiii. c. 18.

patra Queen of Egypt, laid waste the lands belonging to the Jews, imagining that he should hereby oblige Hircanus to raise the Siege of Samaria. But his Troops were at last dispersed, and Samaria taken by Storm, and razed by Hircanus [t]. Antiochus was conquered and put to death by Seleucus the Son of Antiochus Gryphus [u], in the year of the World 3910, before J. C. 90, before the vulgar Æra 94. Justin says, that Antiochus of Cyzicus died in Battle; Josephus, that he was taken and executed by Seleucus; Porphyry in Eusebius, that he killed himself, being upon the point of falling into his Enemy's hands. He reigned eighteen years. He left a Son named Antiochus, and firnamed the Pious. But as there is no mention made of him in Scripture, and the Story of him has no relation to the History of the Jews, we shall say no more of him in this place.

In the Year of the World 3893, before J. C. 105, before the vulg. Æra 109.

X. ANTIOCHUS, a Jew of Antioch, Son to the chief Jew of this City, accused his Father and the rest of the Jews in a full Assembly of the people, with a design of setting fire to the City. The people of Antioch hearing this Accusation, fell upon the Jews, who were then present, and killed a great Number of them; but Antiochus, who endeavoured not so much to procure their Destruction, as to oblige them to forsake their Religion, told the inhabitants of Antioch, that the way to distinguish those who were entred into this Conspiracy, from others that were innocent, was, to compel them to sacrifice after the manner of the Gentiles; and that all they who should refuse to comply, were guilty of the Crime they were accused of. Many perished upon this occasion, choosing to die rather than to sacrifice to Idols. Others apostatized and saved their lives by Sacrilege [x]. This happened about thirty five years after the Passion of Jesus Christ.

I. ANTIPAS-HEROD [y], or Herod Antipas, Son of Herod the Great, and one of his Wives call'd Cleopatra, a Native of Jerusalem. Herod the Great in his first Will declared him Successor to his Kingdom; but afterwards he changed his mind, and named Archelaus King of Judæa, giving to Antipas the Title only of Tetrarch of Galilee and Peræa. Archelaus the Son of Herod going to Rome, in order to persuade Augustus to confirm his Father's Will, Antipas went thither likewise, and the Emperor gave Archelaus one Moiety of what had been assigned him by Herod's will, with the quality of Ethnarch, promising to grant him the Title of King, as soon as he had shewn himself deserving of it by his Virtue. His Revenues amounted to six hundred Talents. As to Antipas, Augustus gave him Galilee and Peræa, which produced to him a Revenue of two hundred Talents. Lastly, he gave Philip, Herod's other Son, the Batanæa, Trachonitis, and Auranitis, and some other places, the income whereof came to an hundred Talents [z].

Antipas returning to Judæa, took a great deal of pains in adorning and fortifying the principal places of his Dominions. He gave the name of Julias to Bethzaida in honour of Julia, the Wife of Augustus; and Cinnereth he called Tiberias in honour of Tiberius. He married the Daughter of Aretas King of Arabia, whom he divorced about the year of J. C. 33, to marry his Sister-in-law Herodias, Wife to his Brother Philip, who was still living [a]. S. John Baptist exclaiming con- Matt. xiv.
tinually against this Incest, was taken 3, 4.
into custody by order of Antipas, and Mark i.
14.
imprisoned in the Castle of Macherus. vi. 17, 18.
Josephus says, Antipas caused S. John to Luke iii. [illegible] be laid hold of, because he drew too great 19, 20.
a concourse of People after him, and that he was afraid lest he should make use of the Authority, which he had acquired over the minds and affections of the People, to induce them to revolt against him. But Josephus has taken the pretence for the true Cause. The Evangelists, who were better informed than he, since they were Eye-witnesses of what passed, and were acquainted in a particular manner with S. John and his Disciples, assure us, that the true Reason of imprisoning S. John was the Aversion which Herod and Herodias had conceived against him, on the score of that Liberty he used in censuring their scandalous Marriage.

The Virtue and Holiness of St. John were such, that even Herod feared and respected him, and did many things out of the regard he had for him. But his Passion for Herodias had prevailed with him to kill him, had he not been restrained by his apprehensions of the People, who esteemed John-Baptist as a Prophet. One Matt. xiv.
day while the King was celebrating the 3, 6, &c.
Festival of his Birth with the principal Persons of his Court, the Daughter of Herodias danced before him, and pleased him so well, that he promised with an Oath to give her whatever she should ask of him. She went to her Mother to learn of her what it might be proper for her to desire upon this occasion, and Herodias's Advice to her was, to ask nothing but the Head of John the Baptist. At her return therefore to the Hall, she addressed herself to the King and said, Give me now immediately [t] Joseph. ibidem. [u] Joseph. Antiq. l. xiii. c. 21. p. 460. Porphyr. apud Euseb. Græc. p. 227. Justin. l. xl. Prolog. [x] Vide Joseph. de Bello l. vii. c. 21. in Lat. p. 975. seu [illegible] 9. in Græc. [y] The Name of Antipas is the same with that of Antipater, which signifies equal to the Father, or comparable to the Father. In my [illegible] the Hebrew Name answerable to Antipater is Abihu אביהו, he is my Father, he shall be instead of a Father to me. [z] See Joseph. Antiq. l. xvii. c. 13. [a] Joseph. Antiq. l. xviii. c. 2.

mediately the Head of John the Baptist in this Charger. The King was afflicted at this Request; but in consideration of the Oath which he had sworn, and the Persons who were at table with him, he commanded it to be given to her; and at the same time sent to have John beheaded in prison; the Head was brought in a Basin, and given to this young Woman, who carried it directly to her Mother. Aretas King of Arabia, to revenge the Affront, which Herod had offered to his Daughter, declared war against him; and got the better of him in a very obstinate Fight. Josephus[a] assures us, that the Jews attributed the Defeat of Antipas's Army to the Death of John the Baptist, who had been executed by his Orders. Some years after, Herodias growing jealous of her Brother Agrippa's Prosperity, who of a private person was become King of Judæa, persuaded her Husband Herod Antipas to go to Rome, and desire the same Dignity of the Emperor Caius. She intended to accompany him in this Voyage, hoping that her Presence would contribute to procure the Emperor's Favour. But Agrippa growing jealous too after another manner, wrote to the Emperor, and accused his Brother-in-law Antipas. Agrippa's messenger arrived at Baiæ, where the Emperor was at the very time when Herod received his first audience. Caius, upon the delivery of Agrippa's letters, read them with great earnestness; in these Agrippa accused Herod Antipas of having been a party in Sejanus's conspiracy against Tiberius, and that he still carried on a correspondence with Artabanus King of Parthia against the Romans. As a proof of this accusation he said that Antipas had in his arsenals arms for seventy thousand Men. Caius being angry, demanded hastily of Antipas, if it were true that he had such a quantity of arms, and the King not daring to deny it, was banished instantly to Lions in Gaul. As for Herodias, he ordered the money which belonged to her to be returned, and promised to forgive her in consideration of her Brother Agrippa. But she chose rather to follow her Husband, and share in his bad fortune[b].

In the Year of the World 4042, of J. C. 42, of the vulgar Æra 39.

This is the Antipas who at the time of our Saviour's passion being at Jerusalem, ridiculed Jesus Christ, whom Pilate had sent back to him, dressed him in a white robe, and directed him to be conducted back to Pilate, as a mock King, whose ambition gave him no umbrage. The year of Antipas's death is not known, but it is certain he died in exile, as well as Herodias. Josephus in another place[c] says, that Antipas was sent in banishment to Spain, and that he died there. Perhaps Caius, who came into Gaul that very year wherein Antipas was exiled thither, might then order him from Lions to some confinement in Spain[d].

Luke xxiii. 11.

II. ANTIPAS, a faithful Witness, or Martyr, mentioned in the Revelations. It is said, that he was one of our Saviour's first Disciples, and that he suffered martyrdom at Pergamus, whereof he was Bishop. The Church has appointed his festival upon the eleventh of April. His Acts relate, that he was burnt in a brazen Bull. Rev. ii. 13.

I. ANTIPATER, the Son of Jason, was sent by Simon Maccabæus, upon a deputation to the Lacedæmonians, to renew the alliance with them, 1 Macc. xiv. 17—22.

II. ANTIPATER, an Idumæan, Father to Herod the Great. This Antipater was the Son of another Antipas, or Antipater, who had been established Governour of Idumæa by Alexander Jannæus King of the Jews[e]. He was, both for the antiquity of his family, and his riches, the principal person of Idumæa[f]. Eusebius[g], and Julius Africanus, call the Father of Antipater Herod, and make him an Heathen, and a Citizen of Ascalon. They say that a company of robbers having pillaged a Temple near Ascalon, took young Antipater, the Father of Herod the Great, who was the Minister of this Temple, and that his Father Antipater not being able to redeem him, this crew of thieves carried him into Idumæa, where he settled; and that being attached to Hircanus and his party, against Aristobulus, he made his fortune in the manner we are going to relate. But we had better depend upon the judgment of Josephus, and the recital he has left us, who could not be a stranger to the history of Antipater. As to his religion, there can be no question but he was a Jew, and circumcised; for the Idumæans had long before received circumcision, and the religion of the Jews, under Hircanus[h], when he made a conquest of their Country.

Antipater, whom we are here speaking of, was strongly attached to the party of Hircanus, King and High Priest of the Jews, against Aristobulus, who disputed with him for the sovereign Authority. Aristobulus, who had much more wit and valour than Hircanus, having levied an Army, and worsted his Brother's Troops, a treaty of accommodation was set on foot between them; whereby Aristobulus was to

[a] Joseph. Antiq. l. xviii. c. 7. [b] Antiq. l. xviii. c. 9. [c] Joseph. de Bello, l. ii. c. 16. [d] Tillemont, Ruine des Juifs, art. xvii. p. 44. [e] Joseph. Antiq. l. xiv. c. 2. [f] Idem de Bello, l. i. c. 5. [g] Euseb. Hist. Eccl. l. i. c. 6. [h] Joseph. Antiq. l. iii. c. 17.

to have the Title of King and High Prieſt, and Hircanus to continue quietly at home, and enjoy his fortune with tranquillity [h]. Antipater fearing the power and enterprizing humour of Ariſtobulus, and beſides having been for a long time ſecretly his enemy, was always animating the moſt powerful of the Jews againſt him, and ſolliciting Hircanus to recover thoſe privileges which Ariſtobulus had unjuſtly robb'd him of. He repreſented to him, that his life was not ſafe at Jeruſalem, and offer'd to provide a ſecure retreat for him in Arabia, with Aretas Antipater's good friend [i].

When he was arrived there, Antipater preſs'd Aretas to re-eſtabliſh him in his dominions, and Hircanus promiſed, that if he did, he would reſtore twelve Cities to him, which his Father Alexander Jannæus had taken from the Arabians. Aretas hereupon marched againſt Ariſtobulus, and overcame him. Ariſtobulus, forſaken by the greateſt part of his Troops, retired to Jeruſalem and the Temple, where he was for ſome time beſieged by Aretas. In the mean while Pompey having ſent Scaurus into Syria, and coming thither himſelf ſoon after in perſon, Hircanus and Ariſtobulus both went to Damaſcus, to juſtify their conduct to him. Antipater on all occaſions ſtrongly ſupported the party of Hircanus; and Pompey, without declaring openly either for one ſide or the other, diſmiſſed them, telling them that he ſhould be going very ſoon into their Country, and that there he would put an end to their diſpute. He came accordingly, took Jeruſalem, and carried Ariſtobulus and his Children priſoners to Rome. But Alexander the Son of Ariſtobulus having eſcaped out of the hands of thoſe who had the charge of him, returned into Judæa, and had raiſed new troubles there, if Antipater, with the Roman Soldiers that were in the Province, had not oppoſed him [k].

During the war which Julius Cæſar carried on in Egypt [l], Antipater did him very great ſervices, by accompanying Mithridates of Pergamus, who brought him ſuccours from Syria. He engaged the Jews of Egypt to declare for him, and to give him all the aſſiſtance they were able; and in the battle, which was fought in the Delta [m], Antipater commanded the left wing, and came ſo ſeaſonably to the aid of Mithridates, who had the command of the right wing, that without him the battle had been loſt. Cæſar was ſo obliged to Antipater for the important ſervice which he had done him upon this occaſion, that he gave Hircanus the office of High Prieſt, offered Antipater what government he pleaſed, and gave him the adminiſtration of Judæa. He permitted likewiſe Hircanus, at the requeſt of Antipater, to rebuild the walls of Jeruſalem, and appointed a reſcript to be drawn up for this purpoſe in terms which were very much to the honour of Hircanus and the Jewiſh Nation.

As ſoon as Antipater returned to Jeruſalem, he took care to have the City walls rebuilt [n], which had been demoliſhed by Pompey's orders, and procured the government of Jeruſalem, and the Country round about, for his eldeſt Son Phaſael; and the government of Galilee for his other Son Herod, who was not then above fifteen years of age. After the death of Julius

[In the Year of the World 3967, before J. C. 43, before the vulg. Æra 47.]

Cæſar, Caſſius, one of his murderers, came into Judæa, and exacted great ſums of money of the Provinces. Antipater, like an expert Politician, ſo managed matters that his Sons Herod and Phaſael were ſome of the moſt diligent to ſupply what was required of them: he contributed an hundred talents out of his own purſe, to compleat the ſum which was demanded; whereby he very much gained the affections of the Romans [o]. But Malichus, who was employed in levying this Tax, conceived ſo much jealouſy againſt Antipater, that he reſolved to put him to death. Antipater diſtruſted him, and got ſome Troops together to enable him to defend himſelf. Malichus affirmed with many oaths, that he had formed no ill deſign againſt Antipater, and pretended to be reconciled with him, by the mediation of Marcus Governour of Syria.

[In the Year of [illegible] 3961, before J. C. 39, before the vulgar Æra 43.]

But this was all done only the better to conceal the ſnares which he was laying for him. He corrupted Hircanus's Cup-bearer, and engaged him to give Antipater a cup of poiſon, while they were together at this Prince's table. As ſoon as Antipater was dead, Malichus took poſſeſſion of the Government of Jeruſalem, and denied ſtrongly that he was any way concerned in procuring his death. Herod and Phaſael made as if they believed him; but in a little time after he was killed by their directions near Tyre, to revenge the murder of their Father [p].

[In the Year of the World 3961 before J. C. 39 before the vulgar Æra 43.]

III. Antipater, Son of Herod the Great, and Grandſon of the Antipater we have been ſpeaking of, was born of Doris, Herod's firſt Wife. His Father made him marry the Daughter of Antigonus, who had been beheaded at Antioch by Antony's order. As Antipater's Mother was not a Woman of quality, and he was born while Herod was no more than a private Gentleman, this Prince kept him and his Mother for ſome time at a diſtance from the Court; and never determined to recall him, till it appeared that Alexander and [h] Joſeph. Antiq. l. xiv. c. 1. [i] Ibid. c. 2. [k] Ibid. c. 10. [l] Ibid. c. 14. [m] Ibid. c. 15.

[n] Ibid. c. 16, 17. [o] Ibid. c. 18, 19. [p] Ibid. c. 20.

and Aristobulus, his two Sons by Mariamne, who was of the Assmonæan race, talked in such a manner as raised some distrust in him of their submission to his will; and till they had been rendred suspected to him by ill reports, which were carried to him, of their conduct and conversation [q].

Then he began to treat Antipater with a great deal of distinction, and encouraged him to hope that he might declare him his Successor to the Kingdom. When he visited Agrippa, who was returning to Rome, he carried Antipater with him, recommended him to Agrippa, and desired him to present him to Augustus, and procure for him the honour of this Emperor's good graces. As soon as Antipater saw the preference thus given to him before his Brothers, he thought of nothing so much as their destruction, that so he might have no competitors who might dispute the Crown with him. He accused them, tho' he was absent; and Herod, who already, upon other accounts, was not very well disposed towards them, carried them to Rome, in order to accuse them before Augustus. But the Emperor reconciled them with their Father, and Herod brought them back from Rome, and Antipater with them. At his return, he called the people together in the Temple, and then declared to them that his Sons should reign after him in their order, first Antipater, then the two Brothers Alexander and Aristobulus [r].

In the Year of the World 3993. before J. C. 7. before the vulgar Æra 11.

Antipater's ambition soon filled Herod's palace with apprehensions and troubles, by the calumnies which he raised against his Brothers. Herod, who had placed all his confidence in him, heard his accusations without any distrust, because Antipater feigned often to take their part, and defend them in the King's presence, against those who said any thing to their disadvantage [s]. At last he accomplished their destruction, and they were strangled at Sebaste, by Herod's order [t], in the year of the World 3999. a year before the birth of our Saviour. When this was done, the Wretch had only one thing more to do, which was to procure his Father's death, that he might be the sooner in possession of the Kingdom. He formed a conspiracy therefore against him, with his Uncle Pheroras, Herod's Brother [u]. Some concerned in the plot were discovered and punished. The King forbad Antipater to have any correspondence with Pheroras; and Antipater, to remove any suspicion which might be entertained against his own person, prevailed with his friends at Rome to demand him, who accordingly wrote to Herod that he must immediately send his Son to the Emperor.

Antipater therefore departed from Jerusalem with great presents, and Herod's will, wherein he was declared first Successor to his Father, in case of his mortality; and next to him was named Herod born of Mariamne, Daughter to the High Priest Simon. During Antipater's absence, Herod discover'd in an unquestionable manner, that he had conspired against his life, and had procured poison to dispatch him. Bathyllus, Antipater's slave, whom he had made free, coming from Rome, confessed that he had brought poison to Doris and Pheroras, which the King was to take, in order effectually to destroy him; if the first dose which they were to give him, and as he supposed, they had given him, did not operate, as they expected. Herod no longer doubting his Son's wickedness, wrote to him, without revealing any thing he knew to him, desiring he would return with all speed possible, lest something should happen in his absence, that might give him disturbance. Antipater returned into Judæa, without learning from any one what had passed, tho' there had been seven months between the discovery of the treason, and his return to Palestine [w].

When he arrived at Cæsarea, he was surprized to find that no one came to meet him, or shewed any forwardness to do him honour. At Jerusalem, as soon as he came thither, his friends were not permitted to enter into the palace with him; and when he would have embraced the King, he thrust him from him, reproached him with the death of his Brothers Alexander and Aristobulus, and with the parricide which he had intended to commit on his person. The next day, he was ordered to appear before Varus Governour of Syria, Herod himself being his accuser. The poison which he had prepared for his Father was produced, and a criminal under sentence of death was compelled to take it, who died instantly. Antipater having nothing to say in his own justification, was loaded with irons, and put in prison. Herod at the same time wrote to Augustus, to acquaint him with his Son's proceedings. In the mean time the King fell sick, and was carried by his own appointment to Jericho, there to be looked after. Not long after, the Ambassadors whom he sent to Rome returned, and reported that Augustus left him at liberty to do what he thought proper with Antipater; to send him into banishment, or put him to death, as he should judge to be most fitting.

In the Year of the World 4001. before J. C. 1. before the vulgar Æra 3.

This news was agreeable to Herod: but his indisposition increasing daily, he called for an apple and a knife, as it were with a design to pare it, and as he was preparing to to stab himself with the knife, Achiab his Grandson, who was present, held him by the arm, and made a great outcry; whereupon it was concluded that the King was dead. This rumour reached Antipater's prison, who begg'd his keeper to set him at liberty, making him large promises both for the present and the time to come. Herod being informed of this, raised himself upon his elbow, and sent one of his Guards that instant, to dispatch him[a]. Such was the end of Antipater Herod's eldest Son, in the year of the world 4001, of J. C. 1, before the vulgar Æra 3. He was buried without ceremony in the Castle of Hircanium. Herod died in few days after.

[q] Joseph. Antiq. l. xvi. c. 6. & de Bello, l. I. c. 17. [r] Antiq. l. xvi. c. 11. [s] Ibid. [t] De Bello, l. I. c. 17. [u] Antiq. l. xvii. c. 3. [w] Ibid. c. 6. & l. I. de Bell. c. 21.

ANTIPATRIS, called anciently Caphar-Saba[b]. Adricomius has confounded it with Dora, and James de Vitry with Assur or Arsus, a maritime town of Palestine[c]. Antipatris did not border upon the Sea; for it lay in the way from Jerusalem to Cæsarea. Josephus[d] says, it was about one hundred and fifty furlongs, or about seventeen miles from Joppa. The old Itinerary of Jerusalem places it at ten miles distance from Lydda, and six and twenty from Cæsarea. Herod the Great changed its old name, and gave it that of Antipatris, in honour of his Father Antipater, whom we have spoken of above. Antipatris was situated in a very fruitful and agreeable plain[e], watered with many fine springs and rivulets, and pretty near the mountains in the way from Jerusalem to Cæsarea.

Acts xxiii. 31.

ANTONIA, a Tower or Fortress of Jerusalem, situated towards the west and north-angle of the Temple, and built by Herod the Great in honour of his Friend Mark Antony, upon an eminence cut steep on all sides, and inclosed with a wall three hundred cubits high. It contained many apartments, bagnio's and halls, so that it might well pass for a very fine Palace. It was in form of a square Tower, with four Towers at the four corners to defend it. It was so high that one might look from thence into the Temple; and there was a bridge or vault, whereby a Communication was kept up between this Tower or Palace and the Temple[f]: So that as the Temple was in some sort the Citadel of the Town, the Tower of Antonia was the Citadel of the Temple. There is frequent mention made in Josephus of the Tower of Antonia, particularly in his History of the Jewish War. The Romans generally kept a Garrison in it, and from thence it was, that the Tribune ran with his Soldiers to rescue S. Paul out of the hands of the Jews, who had seized him in the Temple, and designed to put him to death. Acts xxi. 31, 32.

ANTONINUS PIUS, Emperor of Rome, adopted by Adrian, was originally of Nimes. The Jews relate many very apocryphal things of him[g]. They say he received Circumcision, that he always favoured their Nation, while he persecuted the Christians. He became a Disciple of Judas the Holy, and made himself eminent in the study of the Mosaick Law. He circumcised himself, that he might be qualified to eat the Paschal-Lamb. He dissembled his Religion, and while he worshipped Idols, privately professed himself a Jew. They tell us he was so learned in traditions, that he was employed with his Master in the composition of his Mishna. Antoninus went every day to Judas's house through a subterraneous passage from his Palace, in order to study with him, and set two Centinels, one at his palace-gate, the other at the Rabbin's, that no one might perceive his going backward and forward so frequently, and lest his guards should reveal this secret, at his return he killed them.

One day he found the Rabbin Chanina at Judas the Holy's house, and was inclined to kill him, to prevent his discovering the correspondence which the Emperor carried on with this Jew. Chanina hereupon said to him, I am not a man but an angel. Go then, replied Antoninus, and raise him from the dead whom I have killed at the entrance of the subterraneous passage: Chanina went, and raised him. The Emperor in conversation with his Rabbin maintained, that the Soul and Body after death might each excuse themselves, and impute the guilt of their Sin to one another, the Soul affirming, that it was the Body which had sinn'd, for from the time of its separation it continued free; and the Body on the contrary, that it had done nothing since Death had made this division. But the Rabbin undeceived him, by producing the parable of a certain Master, who trusted a blind man and one who had no legs with the keeping of his fruit, the blind man took him who was lame upon his shoulders, and the fruit was eaten; their Master discovered their cunning, and punished both of them.

Judas asserted that the Soul was united with the Body in the very instant it was formed. Antoninus on the contrary maintained, that it was united with it much sooner, because a piece of flesh could not be three days without being salted. Judas submitted, and agreed that this union was effected at the moment of Conception. The

[a] Joseph. Antiq. l. xvii. c. 9. [b] Antiq. l. xiii. c. 13. & lib. xvi. c. 9. [c] Jacob. de Vitriaco hist. Jerosol. c. 23. Vide Reland. [d] Joseph. Antiq. l. xiii. c. 23. [e] De Bello, l. i. c. 16. [f] Joseph. Antiq. l. xviii. c. 14. p. 544. & de Bello, l. vi. c. 12. p. 919. [g] Basnage hist. des Juifs, l. ii. l. iv. c. 9. p. 149. Edit. Paris. ex Gantz. Zemach. David. & Gedalia Schial. Schelet Kabbala.

The Emperor one day asked Judas why the Sun was lower every evening at its ſitting. The reaſon, anſwered Judas, is, becauſe it pays its adorations to the Lord; but it defers doing ſo till the evening for the conveniency of labourers and travellers.

The Jews ſay, Antoninus had a Son whoſe name was Abaſuerus, whom he deſigned for the Empire; but he died young. All that has been here produced by us is nothing but fable. Capitolinus informs us, that the Jews rebel'd in the reign of Antoninus; that this Prince made war with them, and defeated them, nevertheleſs he left them the liberty of being circumciſed, which he denied the Samaritans; whom he forbad likewiſe to bring any over to them as Proſelytes, and to make themſelves Eunuchs.

ANTONY, Mark Antony, of the illuſtrious family of the Antonys at Rome. His name is very much celebrated in the Roman and Greek Hiſtories. But, in this work we are concerned no farther to take notice of him, than as he had a ſhare in the affairs relating to the Jews. After the battle of Philippi, wherein Brutus and Caſſius were defeated, Mark-Antony came into Aſia, and when he arrived in Bithynia, he found Envoys there from all the nations in Aſia, and among the reſt, Deputies from the Jews, who were come with accuſations againſt Herod and Phaſael; who, as they ſaid, aſſumed the whole authority of the Government, and left Hircanus the name only of a King[e]. But Herod ſo wrought upon Antony by his preſents, that he would not ſo much as give his accuſers audience, and confirmed the two Brothers Herod and Phaſael in the government, which they poſſeſſed in Judæa.

In the Year of the World 3963, before J. C. 37, before the vulg. Æra 41.

Some time after, Hircanus ſent an Embaſſy to him, to deſire that he would pleaſe to iſſue out his orders for reſtoring thoſe Jews to liberty, who had been unjuſtly carried into captivity by Caſſius, and diſperſed in the Provinces of Aſia. Antony granted his requeſt, and wrote to Hircanus, to the Tyrians, and Sidonians, to the inhabitants of Antioch and Aradus, that they ſhould ſet all thoſe at liberty, who had been ſold by Caſſius. Towards the end of the ſame year, when Antony was at Daphne, near Antioch in Syria, an hundred of the principal among the Jews came with freſh accuſations againſt Herod and Phaſael[f]. But Antony asking Hircanus, who governed firſt the Province, Herod and his Brother, or his Accuſers? Hircanus replied Herod and Phaſael; whereupon Antony confirmed them in their Government, and eſtabliſhed them Tetrarchs over all Judæa. He wrote even letters in their favour, and ordered fifteen of the warmeſt of their accuſers to be put in chains.

The ſame year when M. Antony was come to Epheſus. Joſeph. Antiq. l. 14. c. 22.

At laſt, when Antony came to Tyre, the Jews ſent a deputation to him of a thouſand, the moſt conſiderable among them, to carry their complaints againſt the two Brothers; but Antony, who had already been ingaged by Herod, commanded the Magiſtrates of Tyre to puniſh the male-contents, and ſupport the Tetrarchs whom he had appointed. Herod adviſed theſe Deputies to retire, but they not regarding him, the Jews and other inhabitants of the City fell upon them, as they were upon the Sea ſhore, killed ſome and wounded others, and ſome ſaved themſelves. The Jews made a great noiſe about the treatment which their Envoys had received, whereupon Antony ordered thoſe whom he kept in fetters to be killed. So Herod and Phaſael continued quiet in their Governments.

The next year the Parthians having entred Syria, and Antigonus the Son of Ariſtobulus having promiſed them a thouſand talents, and five hundred women[g], if they re-eſtabliſhed him in the Throne of his Anceſtors; they came into Judæa, took Hircanus and Phaſael, and obliged Herod to fly to Rome, where he found Mark-Antony and Auguſtus very ready to grant him their protection, as much out of averſion to Antigonus, whom they looked on as one of a very turbulent ſpirit, and an enemy to the Romans, as for the ſake of thoſe ſervices, which Antony and Auguſtus had formerly received from Antipater Herod's Father. Thus they procured Herod to be declared King of the Jews by the Senate, and Antigonus an enemy to the Roman Commonwealth. Antony and Auguſtus conducted Herod between them to the Capitol; and when they had offered the uſual Sacrifices, and there depoſited the act of his election by the Senate, they entertained him magnificently.

In the Year of the World 3964, before J. C. 36, before the vulgar Æra 40.

Herod returned into Judæa with letters of recommendation from Antony, addreſſed to the Roman Officers, enjoining them to be aſſiſting to him in getting poſſeſſion of his Kingdom; and when by the help of his own party, and the Roman troops he had made himſelf maſter of Jeruſalem and Antigonus, he prevailed with Antony to have Antigonus's head ſtruck off[h], by that means to deliver him from the greateſt enemy he could have. After this Antony made war againſt the Parthians, but performed nothing memorable; and his return was more like a real flight, than an honourable honourable retreat. Having given himself up intirely to his passion for Cleopatra, he dismissed Octavia, and plunged himself into all manner of excesses. At last being defeated by Augustus at Actium, he returned to Egypt, where after having tried several means of accommodating matters, he was forced to kill himself, in the year of the world 3974, before J. C. 27, and before the vulgar Æra 31. Concerning the particulars of his Life the Reader may consult Plutarch, Dion and Usher, ad ann. 3965. pag. 483, &c.

In the Year of the World 3967, before J. C. 33, before the vulgar Æra 37.

[e] Joſeph. Antiq. l. xiv. c. 22. & l. xx. c. 8. & de Bello, l. i. c. 13. [f] Antiq. l. xiv. c. 23. [g] Antiq. l. xiv. c. 25. [h] Antiq. l. xiv. c. ult.

ANUA, a Village fifteen miles from Neapolis, otherwise called Sichem or Naplouse, in the way towards Jerusalem [i].

ANUB, the Son of Coz, of the Tribe of Judah. 1 Chron. iv. 8.

ANUS of the Philistines. The Ark of the Lord having been taken by the Philistines, and laid up at Ashdod, the hand of God was heavy upon their City, and other Principalities of the Philistines, and afflicted them with a painful disease in the Anus, or in the most secret part of that place, whence the excrements issue. The Interpreters are not agreed concerning the signification of the original word which is translated Anus, nor as to the nature of the disease with which God visited the Philistines; some are of opinion, that God sent them the inward or hidden Piles: The Hebrew properly signifies, that which is obscure and hidden. Others suppose the Dysentery to be meant here; others again, a Fistula or Condyloma, which is a descent of the fundament out of its place. The Psalmist describes pretty clearly a Fistula in these words, He smote his enemies in the hinder parts, he put them to a perpetual shame. The Septuagint and Vulgate add to the ninth verse in the Hebrew, that the Philistines made them seats of skins to sit with more ease, by reason of their indisposition. Herodotus seems to have had some knowledge of this History; but he did not understand it rightly, and has attributed the cause of it to something else [k]. He says, the Scythians having plundered the temple of Askalon, a celebrated City of the Philistines, the Goddess (Derceto or Venus) who was adored there, afflicted them with an unhappy disease, thought to have been the Hæmorrhoids, which was communicated to their posterity. The Philistines perhaps related the story after this manner, but it passed all along for certain truth, that this disease was ancient, and sent by God among them, and that it descended to their Children.

1 Sam. v. 6. ויך אתם בעפלים. 70. Ἐν ταῖς ἕδραις αὐτῶν. Vulg. In secretiori parte natium.

Psalm lxxviii. 66.

The Philistines to secure themselves from this uneasiness, and the ravages committed by rats which laid waste their Country, were advised by their Priests and Soothsayers to send back the Ark into the territories of Israel, but not without some presents, to make five figures of a golden Anus, and as many in the same metal of rats, to place them in or near the Ark, and give glory to God by acknowledging, that this plague was the pure effect of his justice. This advice was followed, and the Ark was returned. Josephus [l] and some Interpreters after him believed, that the five Cities of the Philistines made each a statue, which they consecrated to God, as a monument of their deliverance. The Heathens have often imitated this conduct of the Philistines, in offering figures to the Gods representing those parts of the body, which have been diseased. Christians in imitation of them still at this day, in several places, consecrate in honour of the Saints Images made of wax or metal, describing those parts of the body, wherein they believe they have experienced their power, in the cure wrought for them [m].

1 Sam. vi. 1, 2, 3, &c.

APADNO. Daniel speaking of Antichrist, according to the generality of the Commentators, or of Antiochus Epiphanes according to the literal meaning, says (as the Vulgate reads it) He shall plant his tabernacles at Apadno between the Seas, in the glorious holy mountain, that he shall ascend to the very top of it, and none shall help him. The question is to know where Apadno is situated. Some understand by it the Mount of Olives, where the faithful shall be assembled, where Antichrist shall march to attack them, and pitch his tent between the two Seas, the Dead Sea and the Mediterranean. Others take Apadno in an appellative sense * for his Palace, He shall plant the tabernacles of his palace between the Seas and the glorious holy Mountain. Porphyry [n] says, that Apadno was the name of a place in the mountains of Elimæa or Persia, where Antiochus Epiphanes pitched his tents, between the Euphrates and the Tigris, when he undertook to pillage the Temple of Belus or Diana of Elimais; but his design having been discovered he was obliged to retreat. Symmachus translates it [o], He will set up the tents of his cavalry, between the Mountains. Fuller [p], He shall plant the tabernacles of his tunick between the two Seas. Among the Romans there was a Cuirass or Tunick of a purple colour, put sometimes at the top of the General's tent as a signal for battle [q].

Dan. xi. 45.

We

[i] Eufeb. in locis. [k] Herodot. l. i. c. 105. Ἐνέσκηψε ὁ θεὸς θήλεαν νοῦσον. [l] Joseph. l. vi. Antiq. c. 1. Ὥστε ἀλγοῦντας ἐπὶ ἕδρας πάσχειν. [m] Vide Theodoret. l. viii. de Græc. affection. curand. [n] Porphyr. apud Hieronym. in Dan. xi. * ויטע אהלי אפדנו בין ימים [o] Sym. Στήσει τὰς σκηνὰς τῆς ἱππικῆς αὐτοῦ. [p] Fuller Miscellan. l. v. אפדנו ab אפד Amicire; Epood, amictus. [q] Plutarch. in Fabio, p. 162. in Bruto, p. 1002. Isidor. orig. l. xix. c. 22. Vide Lips. de Milit. Rom. l. iv. c. 12.

* And thus it is construed by the Translators of our English Bible. Buxtorf interprets this word in the same manner; and says, Sic in Targum ויגיר ית אפדניה על יהון Et extendit augustale suum super eos. Buxt.

We tranflate the Hebrew after this manner, He fhall pitch his tents in Apadno of two Seas, or in Padan of two Rivers, Mefopotamia fituated between the Euphrates and the Tigris, two large rivers, and juftly compared with the fea, particularly for their inundations. Antiochus Epiphanes being upon an expedition againft Artaxias King of Armenia, who had rebelled againft him [r], led his Army, and pitched his Tents in Mefopotamia, between
Gen. xxiv. 10. Deut. xxxiii. 4. Judg. iii. 8. Gen. xxv. 20. xxviii. 2. the two rivers Tigris and Euphrates. He fhall place himfelf upon the glorious Mountain; in the Hebrew, upon the Mountain of Zobi. He fhall go up to the very top of it, and fhall die there, without any one's giving him the leaft affiftance. Antiochus Epiphanes returning from Perfia to Babylon, fell from his chariot, and bruifed all his limbs. He died miferably, in the Mountains of Tabes, as the Hiftorians inform us [s].

Theodoret [t] believes, that Apadno was a place in the neighbourhood of Jerufalem. St. Jerom [u] fays, in a more particular manner, that Apadno was near Nicopolis, otherwife called Emmaus, where the Mountains of Judæa have their beginning. M. Reland [x] has fhewn, that Emmaus, which was called Nicopolis, was very different from the Emmaus mentioned by St. Luke,
Luk. xxiv. 13. which was fixty furlongs from Jerufalem. Procopius [y], fpeaking of certain places which were rebuilt by Juftinian, about Amida in Mefopotamia, mentions in particular Apadna and Byrthus. Which confirms our opinion, viz. that by Apadno of the two Seas, we are to underftand Mefopotamia, called in Hebrew, Padan-Aram, or Aram Naharaim; the Plain of Aram, or Aram of the two Rivers.

APAMEA, a City of Syria, lying upon the Orontes. It was built, as is believed, by Seleucus I. King of Syria; or by his Son Antiochus Soter, in honour of Queen Apamea, the Wife of Seleucus, and Mother of Antiochus. It is probably the fame with Shepham, a City of Syria, whereof there is mention fometimes in the Scrip-Numb. xxxiv. 10, 11. ture.

APAMEA, a City of Phrygia, upon the river Marfyas. Some have been of opinion, that Noah's Ark refted near Apamea. This City took the firname of Ark; and its medals were ftruck with the figure of an Ark. In a piece coined in honour of Adrian, there is the image of a Man, who reprefents the river Marfyas, with thefe words, [z] A Medal of the Apameans, the Ark and River Marfyas. And in the Sybilline verfes, the Author whereof is pretty ancient [a], we read that Mount Ararat, where the Ark fettled, is upon the confines of Phrygia, at the fources of the river Marfyas. But this opinion is not to be defended; Mount Ararat was in Armenia, not in Phrygia.

APE, Simia; in Hebrew Koph. Interpreters agree concerning the fignification of this word. The Scripture [a] fays, that Solomon's fleet, among other things, brought back Ivory and Apes. The Greek Writers fpeak of a fort of Ape which was to be feen in Ethiopia, and upon the Red Sea, called Kephos, or Keipos, or Kebos [b], a name which comes pretty near the Hebrew, Kuph or Koph. The Kepus had hands and feet like a Man's, the face of a Lion, and the body of a Panther. It was about the fize of a Roe-buck. The Egyptians of Babylon in Egypt adored a kind of Ape, which Strabo [c] calls Keipos [d].

An Ape, of all animals, comes neareft to the figure of a Man. There are feveral forts of them; fome with, and others without a tail. Some have a head, or long fnout, like a Dog's; others have a rounder head, and a flatter nofe. The toes of their feet are as long as their fingers; they have generally red hair, inclining to be greenifh. There are fome in Indoftan all white; others are red upon their backs, but their breaft, belly, and infide of their thighs and arms, are white or grey. Thefe Creatures have a thoufand ftratagems to defend and fave themfelves. They live commonly upon the tops of trees, leaping from one branch to another with admirable dexterity. On both fides their jaws they have pockets where they lock up every thing which they wou'd keep. The females never have more than one young one, which they carry upon their backs, as a Mother does her Child. When they wou'd give it fuck, they take it in their paws, and prefent the breaft to it, like a Woman.

The Egyptians are not the only people who have adored Apes. They are ftill worfhiped in many places of the Indies. Maffeus [e] defcribes a magnificent Temple dedicated to the Ape, with a portico defigned for receiving the Victims which are facrificed to it; and fupported by feven hundred columns not inferior, as he fays, to thofe of the Pantheon at Rome. When the [r] Appian. Syriac. p. 117, 131. Porphyr. apud Hieronym. in Dan. xi. [s] Polyb. in Excerptis Valefii, p. 144. [t] Theodoret in Dan. xi. [u] Hieronym. in Dan. xi. [x] Reland. Palæftin. l. ii. c. 6. & l. iii. p. 758. [y] Procop. l. ii. c. 4. de ædificiis Juftiniani. [z] ΑΠΑΜΕΩΝ ΚΙΒΩΤΟϹ ΜΑΡϹΙΑϹ.

[a] Ἔστι δέ τι Φρυγίης ἐπὶ ἠπείροιο μελαίνης
Ἠλίβατον τανύμηκες ὄρος, Ἀραρὰτ δὲ καλεῖται.
Μαρσύου ἔνθα φλέβες μεγάλου ποταμοῖο πεφύκασι.

[a] 1 Kings x. 22. 2 Chron. ix. 21. קופים, Kophim. Bochart. de animal. Sacr. Par. I. l. ii. c. 31. [b] Κῆπος, κῆβος, κεῖπος, κῆφος. [c] Strabo, l. xvii. [d] See Bochart, de Animal. Sacr. P. I. l. ii. c. 23. [e] Maffei Hift. Ind. l. i.

the Portugueze, in 1554, pillaged the Isle of Ceylan, there was a magnificent Temple upon the top of Pike Adams, or Mount Adam, wherein they found nothing but a little box full of gold and jewels, with an Ape's tooth. The Kings of the Country were desirous of redeeming this tooth, which they worshiped, and offered seven hundred thousand Ducats for the purchase of it. But the Bishop hindred them from accepting the offer, had the tooth burnt, and the ashes thrown into the sea[f]. The Inhabitants of Goa did not dare to kill an Ape, no more than a Serpent. They believed them to be Spirits created by God with an intention to afflict Mankind, and punish them for their sins.

APELLES, is one whom St. Paul speaks of in Chap. xvi. ver. 10. of the Epistle to the Romans, and calls approved in Christ, or an honest man, probum in Christo. The Greeks believe that Apelles was one of the seventy two Disciples, and made Bishop of Heraclea. They observe his festival on the 31st of October. In the Roman Martyrology we find him registred on the 22d of April, and on the 10th of September with Luke or Lucius.

APHACA, or Aphek, a City of Syria in Mount Libanus, between Heliopolis and Biblos. See Aphek.

APHARSACHITES, or Apharsathchites, people sent by the Kings of Assyria to inhabit the Country of Samaria, in the room of those Israelites who had Ezra v. 6. been removed beyond the Euphrates. They, with other Samaritans, opposed the Ezra iv. 9. rebuilding of the walls of Jerusalem. We are of opinion, that the Apharsachites are the Prosochytes.

APHEK. There are more Cities than one of this name in Scripture.

I. Aphek in the Tribe of Judah. There it was that the Philistines encamped when the Ark was brought from Shiloh, which was taken in battle by the Philistines. It is probably the same as Aphekah mentioned in Josh. xv. 53. [1 Sam. iv. 1, 2, 3, &c. seq.]

II. Aphek, in the Valley of Jezreel. It was there that the Philistines incamped, while Saul and his Army were near Jezreel, upon the Mountains of Gilboa. [1 Sam. xxix. 1, &c.]

III. Aphek, a City belonging to the Tribe of Asher, near the Country of the Sidonians. We are of opinion that it is the same with that which follows, and we are now going to speak of. [Josh. xix. 30. Judg. i. 31.]

IV. Aphek, a City of Syria, one of the principal in Ben-hadad's Kingdom, near unto which the battle was fought between Ahab and Ben-hadad, wherein the Syrians were worsted; and as they retreated with precipitation into the City, the wall fell upon them, and crushed in pieces seven and twenty thousand. It is probably in this very City of Aphek, or Aphaca, situated in Libanus, upon the River Adonis[g], where the famous Temple of Venus the Aphacite was to be seen. This City lay between Heliopolis and Biblos, and is that probably which Paul Lucas speaks of[h], as swallowed up in a Lake of Mount Libanus, which is about nine or ten miles in circumference, wherein he says there are several houses all intire under water. See our Comment upon Josh. xix. 30. and upon 1 Kings xx. 26. [1 Kings xx. 26. & seq.]

APHEREMA, one of the three Toparchies added to Judæa by the Kings of Syria. We think it to be the same as Ephræm, or Ephraim, mentioned in St. John. [1 Macc. xi. 34. John xi. 54.]

APHES-DAMMIM, Ephes-dammim, Dommim, or Phes-dommim, a place belonging to the Tribe of Judah, between Shochoh and Azekah, where the Philistines encamped when Goliath insulted the battalions of Israel. [1 Sam. xvii. 1, 2.]

APHRAIM, Eusebius places a Town of this name at six miles distance from Legio, towards the North.

APHSES, Head of the eighteenth sacerdotal family out of the twenty four which David chose for the service of the Temple. [1 Chron. xxiv. 15.]

APHUTÆI, Israelites who returned from the Captivity, and settled in their old Country. There is some probability that the name of Aphutæi comes from Jiphtah, a City mentioned in Josh. xv. 43. [ii. 53.]

APIS. The Egyptians worshiped an Ox or a Bull; this all the Ancients testify. They had an Ox consecrated to the Sun, which they fed at Heliopolis, and called Mnevis. They had another named Apis, dedicated to the Moon, and fed at Memphis. The God Osiris was adored under the figure of this Animal[i]. The following marks were those whereby it was distinguished. The whole body was black, except a white square spot upon the forehead: It had the figure of an Eagle on its back, as some say; or as others, the figure of a Crescent: The hairs of the tail were double, and it had the form of a Beetle under its tongue.

When a Calf was found with these marks, it was carried with great tokens of joy to the Temple of Osiris, where it was fed, kept and worshiped in the room of this God as long as it lived. After its death it was buried with great solemnity and mourning. This done, they looked out for another with the same marks. Sometimes they were many years before they found one; but when they had, there was a great Festival kept all over the Country.

[f] Lynchot. F. Syrard. [g] Sozomen. l. xi. c. 55. & Theophan. in Chronico p. 18. [h] Paul Lucas, Voyage du Levant, T. 1. ch. 20. p. 265. [i] Herod. l. iii. c. 38. Plin. l. viii. c. 46. Strabo l. xvii.

country. There is no queſtion but that the Golden Calf which Aaron made for the Iſraelites in the wilderneſs, and the Calves ſet up by Jeroboam to be worſhipped in his Kingdom of the ten Tribes, were an imitation of the ſuperſtitious adoration which the Egyptians paid to their bull Apis.

Some learned men [k] have thought, that the Egyptians paid divine honours to the Patriarch Joſeph under the figure of a Calf, or under the name of Apis. They ſay Apis was King of Memphis, who provided food for his ſubjects during the time of a great famine; that the name Apis ſignifies an ox; that this animal is the ſymbol of agriculture. Some imagine, that the King of Memphis is the ſame with Joſeph, who, as we know, preſerved Egypt during the ſeven years of barrenneſs. The Patriarch Jacob ſpeaking of the violence exerciſed by Simeon and Levi againſt
Geneſ. xlix. 6. ex Hebr. Joſeph, ſays, that in their fury they killed a man, and in their indignation houghed an ox, עקרו which ſeveral interpreters explain of Joſeph.
.שור Beſides King Pharaoh called Joſeph, Abis,
70. Ἐποίησε μεσωτατον ταῦρον. my Father, which comes pretty near the word Apis. But theſe reaſons are not cer-
Gen. xlv. 8. Fecit me quaſi patrem Pharaonis. tainly convincing enough to confirm this opinion. There is no probability that the Egyptians ſhould worſhip Joſeph, who was of a religion different from theirs, and who had always ſhewn an averſion to their ſuperſtitions. Beſides the Egyptian Divines gave different reaſons for the worſhip of Apis from thoſe given for the ſuppoſed worſhip of Joſeph.

I. APOCALYPSIS, this word ſignifies in general revelation; and in particular the Apocalypſe or Revelation which S. John had in the Iſle of Patmos, whither Between the years of J. C. 95 and 97. he had been baniſhed by Domitian. Caius, Prieſt of the Church of Rome, who lived about the end of the ſecond Age, ſeems to aſſure us, that the Apocalypſe or book of Revelations was written by the Arch-heretick Cerinthus [l]. Dionyſius Biſhop of Alexandria ſays, that ſome indeed thought Cerinthus to be the author of it; that for his part, he believed it to be written by an holy man, whoſe name was John, but he would not take upon him to affirm, that it was really the work of the Apoſtle and Evangeliſt of this name. It paſſes however in the Church for a point very clear, that the book of Revelations was compoſed by S. John the Son of Zebedee, and Brother of S. James; and notwithſtanding the doubts of Caius and Dionyſius of Alexandria, the ancients have unanimouſly ackowledged him to be the Author of it.

The Apocalypſe has not at all times been owned to be canonical. S. Jerom, Amphilochius, and Sulpitius Severus remark, that in their time there were many Churches in Greece, which did not receive this book. It is not in the catalogue prepared by the Council of Laodicea, nor in that of S. Cyril of Jeruſalem; but Juſtin, Irenæus, Origen, Cyprian, Clemens of Alexandria, Tertullian, and after them all the Fathers of the fourth, fifth and following Ages, quote the Revelations as a book then acknowledged to be canonical. The Hereticks called Alogi by Epiphanius, the Marcionites, and the Diſciples of Cerdo, Luther, and many other modern Hereticks, have likewiſe rejected the Revelations of S. John; but even this proves that it was received by the Catholick Churches, and Proteſtants themſelves have forſaken Luther in this particular; and Beza has ſtrongly maintained againſt his objections, that the Apocalypſe is authentick and canonical.

The Book of Revelations contains two and twenty Chapters; the three firſt are an inſtruction to the Biſhops of the ſeven Churches in Aſia Minor, which are Epheſus, Smyrna, Pergamus, Thyatira, Sardis, Philadelphia, and Laodicea. The fifteen following Chapters contain the perſecutions, which the Church has ſuffered from the Jews, Hereticks, and Roman Emperors, principally from Diocleſian, Maximian, Herculius, Galerius Maximian, Severus, Maxentius, Maximinus, and Licinius; and laſt of all from Julian the Apoſtate. After this we have a view of that Vengeance which God has exerciſed againſt the perſons of perſecutors, againſt the Roman Empire, and City of Rome, deſcribed under the name of Babylon the great proſtitute, ſeated upon ſeven Hills. Laſtly, the xix, xx, xxi, xxii Chapters include the deſcription of the triumph of the Church, and its victories over its enemies, of the marriage of the Lamb, and the happineſs of the Church triumphant. They who would ſee more at large what relates to the Apocalypſe, may conſult the Diſſertations, which the Abbot Du Pin has joined with the Analyſis of this book; and the Preface which we have inſerted before our Comment on the Revelations.

II. Apocalypsis, or Revelations of S. Peter, an apocryphal Book mentioned by Euſebius [m], and S. Jerom [n], and cited by Clemens of Alexandria in his Hypotypoſes [o]. There is none of it remaining that we know of. Sozomen [p] ſays, that in his time there was an Apocalypſe of S. Paul read upon Good-Fridays in the Church, when when all the people fasted religiously, in memory of our Saviour's Passion.

[k] Gerard. Voſſ. l. ix. de Idolatr. Vide apud illum Julium Firmin. & Rufin. &c. [l] Apud Euſeb. l. iii. c. 28. Hiſt. Eccl. [m] Euſeb. l. iii. c. 3. Hiſt. Eccl. [n] Hieronym. in Catalog. Scriptur. Eccl. [o] Apud Euſeb. l. vi. c. 14. Hiſt. Eccleſ. [p] Sozomen. l. vii. c. 19.

III. Apocalypsis or Revelation of S. Paul, an apocryphal Book, which was in use among the Gnosticks and Cainites [q]. This Book contain'd, as these Hereticks pretended, those ineffable things, which the Apostle had seen during his extasy, and which, as he tells the Corinthians, he was not permitted to divulge. Sozomen says [r], that several monks in his time set a great value on this work, and affirmed, that it had been discovered by a divine revelation, in the reign of Theodosius, at Tarsus, in S. Paul's house, where it had been hidden in a marble trunk under ground. But Sozomen enquiring into this fact, of an old Priest belonging to the Church of Tarsus, the Priest answered, that he had never heard any thing about it, and believed this story to have been the invention of some Hereticks. 1 Cor. xii. 4.

IV. Apocalypsis or Revelation of S. John, different from the true Apocalypse, whereof we have been speaking above. Lambecius says, that there is a Manuscript of it in the Emperor's Library. Cod. 119. Biblioth. fol. 108.... 15.

V. Apocalypsis or Revelation of Cerinthus. This Arch-heretick composed certain Revelations, which he pretended to have had [s], wherein he spoke of an earthly kingdom, and particular sensual pleasures which the Saints should enjoy for a thousand years at Jerusalem. It has been already observed in another place, that some of the ancients believed Cerinthus to be the author even of S. John's Revelations perhaps for no other reason, but because of the ill use which this Heretick made of the Apostle's words, the better to authorize his visions.

VI. Apocalypsis or Revelation of S. Thomas. This is known only by Pope Gelasius's Decree, which ranks it among the Apocryphal books.

VII. Apocalypsis or Revelation of Adam. The Gnosticks, as Epiphanius informs us [t], had an Apocalypse, of which they supposed Adam to be the Author. They who were concerned in writing this work, took occasion doubtless of forging it from what is said in Genesis of the Lord's causing a deep sleep to fall on Adam, or as the Septuagint have it, an extasy. Gen. xi. 21. Heb. תרדמה, 70. Ἔκστασιν.

VIII. Apocalypsis or Revelation of Abraham. The Sethian Hereticks had in like manner forged a spurious Apocalypse of Abraham's, which as Epiphanius says [u], was a work abounding with filth and nastiness.

IX. Apocalypsis or Revelation of Moses. Georgius Syncellus [x] speaking of this Apocalypse, says, that the following passage of S. Paul to the Galatians is taken from it, c. vi. 15. Neither Circumcision availeth any thing, nor Uncircumcision, but a new creature. Cedrenus says some Authors will have this Apocalypse to be the same thing as Genesis the less, another apocryphal Book, which the ancients were well acquainted with.

X. Apocalypsis or Revelation of Elias. S. Jerom tells us [y], that the following passage of S. Paul to the Corinthians, Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither hath it entred into the heart of man, to conceive what God hath prepared for those that love him, that these words, I say, are borrowed from the Revelation of Elias. Origen in his citation of them tells us [z], that they are no where to be found but in the secret books of Elias. 1 Cor. xi. 9.

APOCRYPHAL, signifies properly hidden, according to the sense of the Greek root from which it is derived [a]. Those books are called apocryphal 1°. The author whereof is not known, whether he has put no name at all to his work, or a false one [b]. 2°. Those which are not in the Sacred Canon of the Scriptures, and are not publickly read in the congregation of the faithful, but which may be read in private for our own edification. 3°. Those books, which are not esteemed to be authentick, and of divine authority, tho' they may be thought to be composed by some sacred Author and Apostle; for example the Epistle of St. Barnabas. 4°. Lastly we call those dangerous books apocryphal, which were composed by some Hereticks of old to authorize their erroneous opinions.

There are apocryphal Books therefore of several degrees. Some are absolutely false, dangerous, and impious, composed by Hereticks to defend error or superstition, such as the spurious Gospels of S. Thomas, the Gospels of the Valentinians, Simonians, Gnosticks, Marcion, &c. Others are simply apocryphal, and contain nothing contrary to faith and good manners, and may be read privately with edification; such as the third and fourth Books of Esdras, and the third and fourth of Maccabees, the Epistle of S. Barnabas, and the Book of Hermas. Others after they had been long contested by some, have at last been received into the Canon with the consent of the Church [c]; such as Judith, Tobit, the two first Books of Maccabees, Wisdom, Ecclesiasticus, Baruch, the Greek additions to Daniel and Esther, the Story of Susanna, of of Bel and the Dragon, which S. Jerom[a] places among apocryphal Writings, and says, that the Church reads them but without receiving them into the Canon: Ecclesia quidem legit, sed intra Canonicas Scripturas non recipit. Lastly there are some parts of Scripture, which are still at this day contested, and received by some as canonical, but are held by others to be apocryphal; for example the titles of the Psalms, the short preface of Jeremiah, that of Ecclesiasticus, and according to some, the additions to Esther and Daniel.

[q] Epiphan. Hæref. 18. c. 38. G. Eycat part. 2. animal. p. 120. Aug. tract. 98. in Joan. [r] Sozomen. l. vii. Hist. Ecclef. c. 19. [s] Theodoret. l. ii. hæretic. Fab. c. 3. [t] Epiphan. Hæref. 31. c. 8. Gnostic. [u] Epiphan. Hæref. 39. c. 5. [x] Georg. Syncell. p. 27. [y] Hieron. Ep. 101. ad Pammach. [z] Origen. Hom. ult. in Matt. xxvii. 9. [a] Ἀπόκρυφος absconditus, ab Ἀποκρύπτω abscondo. [b] Hieron. Ep. ad Lætam. Aug. l. xv. de Civit. c. 23. [c] Concil. Lateran. & Tridentin.

The Protestants * do not only reckon those Books to be apocryphal which are esteemed such in the Church of Rome; as the Prayer of Manasseh King of Judah, the third and fourth Books of Maccabees, the third and fourth Books of Esdras, S. Barnabas's Epistle, the Book of Hermas, the addition at the end of Job, and the hundred and fifty first Psalm; but they reckon likewise the Book of Wisdom, Ecclesiasticus, the two first Books of Maccabees, Tobit, Judith, Baruch, and the additions to Daniel and Esther, which are not in the Hebrew, to be all apocryphal. And for the New Testament, they are divided in their opinions, whether the Epistle to the Hebrews, the Epistle of S. James, the second Epistle of S. Peter, the second and third Epistles of S. John, the Epistle of S. Jude, and the Revelations are to be acknowledged as canonical or not.

They who have any curiosity to see a larger and more exact Catalogue of those spurious and apocryphal Writings of the Old and New Testament, I mean of books composed by old Authors under the venerable names of Patriarchs or Prophets, may consult the two Volumes of Fabricius printed on this subject; the first upon the Old Testament, with this title, Codex Pseudepigraphus veteris Testamenti, and the second, intitled, Codex apocryphus novi Testamenti.

APOLLO, one of the false Gods worshipped by the Heathens, to whom they attributed Oracles, and the art of Divination. See hereafter the word Python and Spirit of Python, or Divination, Acts xvi. 16. See likewise Deut. xviii. 11. and 1 Sam. xxviii. 7. and 2 Kings xxi. 6.

I. APOLLONIA, a City of Macedonia, through which, and Amphipolis S. Paul passed in his way to Thessalonica. Acts xvii. 1.

II. Apollonia, a City of Palestine, situated pretty near the Sea, between Joppa and Cæsarea, almost at an equal distance. Josephus, Pliny, and Ptolemy speak of it. The Peutingerian tables place it at an equal distance between Joppa and Cæsarea. Some very improperly confound it with Antipatris. Josephus, Antiq. l. xiii. c. 23. speaks of Antipatris and Apollonia as of two different places. There is no mention of it in the Scripture.

APOLLONIUS, an Officer belonging to Antiochus Epiphanes, whom Grotius believes to have been Governor of Mysia. He is called Misarches in the Greek, which may be understood either in the interpretation I have given it, or as signifying the Chief of a crew of villains and wicked fellows. Antiochus Epiphanes having resolved to draw great sums from Jerusalem, sent Apollonius to execute this design. He came thither at the head of an Army of two and twenty thousand men. He pretended that he would continue there without giving any disturbance, and waited without saying any thing till the Sabbath-day came; then he fell upon the people, and put great numbers of them to the sword. The City was burnt and pillaged, and ten thousand persons taken and carried away captives, in order to be sold to the King's advantage. Two years after, Judas Maccabæus having gathered together an Army of six thousand Jews, who had continued faithful to the Lord, Apollonius, who at that time was in Samaria, marched against him, and gave him battle. But Judas got the victory, defeated Apollonius, killed him, dispersed his Army, carried off a very rich booty, and took Apollonius's sword which he made use of in times of action.

[Margin: 1 Macc. v. 24.]

[Margin: In the Year of the World 3836, before J. C. 164, before the vulgar Æra 167. See 1 Macc. i. 30, 31. and 2 Macc. v. 24, 25, &c.]

[Margin: In the Year of the World 3838, before J. C. 162, before the vulgar Æra 165. 1 Macc. iii. 10, 11, 12.]

II. Apollonius Daus, Governor of Cœle-Syria, and General of Demetrius Nicanor's Armies, the Son of Demetrius Soter; having abandoned the party of Alexander Balas, and gone over to Demetrius Nicanor, he put himself at the head of a powerful Army, in order to compel the Jews to declare for Demetrius. He incamped at Jamnia, and wrote to Jonathan Maccabæus Prince of the Jews, challenging him to descend into the plain, and reproaching him for continuing among rocks and mountains for no other reason, but because he was sensible that he was not strong enough to encounter him in the open field[c]. Jonathan stung with these reproaches, took his Brother Simon with him, and ten thousand chosen troops, and set down before Joppa. The Garrison, which was composed of Apollonius's troops, shut the [Margin: In the Year of the World 3856, before J. C. 144, before the vulgar Æra 148.]

[a] Hieron. Præfat. in lib. Salomon.

[c] Joseph. Antiq. l. xiii. c. 8. & 1 Macc. x. 69. & seq.

* The Protestants acknowledge such Books of Scripture only to be canonical, as were so esteemed to be in the first Ages of the Church; such as are cited by the earliest Writers among Christians as of divine authority, and after the most diligent examination and enquiry were received, and so adjudged to be by the Council of Laodicea. The several Epistles here mentioned by the Author and the Book of Revelations, whatever the sentiments of some particular persons are or may have been of them, are allowed by all the Reformed Churches to be parts of the Canon of the New Testament. See Reinoldus de Libris apocryphis, and Burmanni Synopsis. Centur. Magdeburg. and others.

the gates againſt him. But the Citizens ſeeing Jonathan was preparing to force them, opened the gates, and received him into the City.

Apollonius being informed that Jonathan had made himſelf maſter of Joppa, advanced as far Azotus with three thouſand horſe, and eight thouſand foot; having beſides left a thouſand horſe in ambuſcade near a brook to fall upon the Jews in their rear. But Jonathan having got intelligence of the deſign, ranged his troops in ſuch a manner, that they could face the enemy on every ſide, and forbad them to ſtir out of their ranks; commanding them to ſtand firm, and receive the firſt onſet of the enemy. Apollonius's horſe were tiring themſelves all day with throwing darts and arrows againſt Jonathan's troops, who received them on their bucklers, and were very little incommoded by them: towards the evening Jonathan gave orders to charge the Enemy; the horſe fled, and the infantry was entirely defeated. Some of thoſe who eſcaped threw themſelves into the Temple of Dagon, near Azotus; thither Jonathan purſued them, and burnt them, with the Temple. He took likewiſe the City of Azotus, pillaged and ſet fire to it. In this Action Apollonius loſt eight thouſand men. Upon this victory Alexander Balas beſtowed new favours, and new praiſes, upon Jonathan. He ſent him a golden buckle, ſuch as the King's relations wear, and gave him the property of Accaron.

Obſervations on Jonathan's victory over Apollonius. 1 Macc. x.

Jonathan's behaviour in this Action, and the excellent diſpoſition of his troops, ſhewed abundance of intrepidity and skill, and is a demonſtration that a body of foot drawn up very deep, with cloſe ranks and files, is always of advantage, (let the ſituation of the Country where they are obliged to engage be what it will,) either againſt horſe, which ſeems ſo formidable in plains; or againſt foot, if the Enemy does not attack in the like order. Jonathan being convinced of this truth, and of Apollonius's ignorance, who was General of King Demetrius's Army, the number and forces whereof he deſpiſed, made it evident to him in this Action, that he would ſuſtain the effort of the horſe, which Apollonius repreſented to be ſo terrible, telling Jonathan, with ſome ſurprize at his daring reſolution, in determining to keep the field, Wherefore now thou ſhalt not be able to abide the horſemen, and ſo great a power in the plain, where is neither ſtone nor flint, nor place to flee unto. (1 Macc. x. 73.) We may read the commendations which this General gives himſelf, in the Author above-cited, which have a great air of rodomontade. The brave Iſraelite ſoon undeceived him, and made it appear clearly to him that a ſmall number is more to be valued than one more conſiderable, when a man of ability takes upon him the conduct of them.

Jonathan took the field with a body of ten thouſand men, and was joined by his Brother Simon with the troops, in all probability, which were under his command. Simon his Brother met him for to help him. Which words are not to be underſtood with relation to his own perſon only, but to the union of his troops with thoſe headed by his Brother. Apollonius upon receiving this piece of news, marched as if he were going to Azotus, and on a ſudden led his Army into the plain, becauſe his horſe were numerous, in which he principally confided. Jonathan, who had none, followed him to Azotus, and there the two Armies engaged. Ver. 74.

Apollonius, who knew the intrepidity of the Jewiſh General, laid a thouſand men in ambuſh for him, and poſted them behind Jonathan in his march: He had intelligence of what was done, but took no great notice of it, ſo that on a ſudden he ſaw himſelf in the midſt of the enemy attacked in front and rear, and on all ſides. Circuierunt caſtra ejus: theſe words would be very perplexing to me in what I have to ſay farther, if the Benedictine Commentator did not inform me, that caſtra ſignifies the Army; for it is ſufficiently manifeſt from what the Author of the Book of Maccabees ſays, that the Jews did not incamp ſince the combat began as ſoon as the two Armies came in ſight of each other: this is demonſtration. Dom. Calmet in his Comment cites Joſephus, who explains the text of this place after another manner; and in my judgment with reaſon; it is likewiſe upon the credit of this Hiſtorian, whoſe truth and reputation are generally acknowledged, that I regulate the diſpoſition of the two Armies. Joſephus's words therefore are theſe[f], Jonathan diſcovering the enemy behind him was not at all diſturbed at it, but having drawn up his troops in a ſquare battalion, (literally ſpeaking like a Tile, according to the form of the Macedonian Phalanx) he commanded them to face the enemy every way. From hence it would appear, that he formed an oblong Square of a very great depth, that is to ſay, a Phalanx-doubled. Apollonius fearing leſt his Phalanx might recoil againſt this impenetrable maſs of infantry, endeavoured to break through it with his cavalry by attacking it on all ſides, in order afterwards to cut them in pieces with his Foot, if the horſe could once diſorder them. But he was miſtaken, for he met with equal force and valour in this enormous maſs of combatants, notwithſtanding the ſhowers of arrows

[f] Joſeph. Antiq. l. xiii. c. 8.

rows which were let fly againſt them; and this particular leaves me no room to queſtion that the archers were diſpoſed on every ſide. Theſe words, like a tile, evidently ſhew, that the Jews made uſe of their bucklers like Antony's foot in his retreat, when he was upon his expedition againſt the Parthians; that is to ſay, they formed as it were a wood of this defenſive kind of arms: this literally ſpeaking is without conteſt the Teſtudo; and the word tile ſufficiently proves that it was an oblong ſquare.

There is here one conſiderable difficulty from which it will be hard to diſengage ourſelves. The Author of this book ſays not a word relating to the place where Simon was with his troops. He was therefore detached from his Brother: where was he then? Was not the whole Jewiſh Army ſurrounded? Simon notwithſtanding brings on his troops, and attacks the foot, or phalanx of the Enemy, becauſe the horſe were already fatigued; and having broken them, put them to flight. Let us clear this point a little, for it was not poſſible he ſhould be ſeparated from his Brother: the truth of the matter is this; the foot being as much tired as the horſe who ſurrounded them, loſt all patience, moved, and quitting their firſt poſt marched up to the phalanx, and falling with all their weight upon it, broke and routed it. And as Simon drew up in the rear of his Brother's Infantry, he found he was oppoſite to the Enemy's phalanx, which he therefore charged, while Jonathan faced the Cavalry and Archers. I think I am right in my argument, and that my conjecture is more than probable; which is all that I propoſe to aim at. If the Author of this Book had reported this affair not altogether ſo obſcurely, we ſhould have diſcourſed more pertinently concerning it.

APOLLOPHANES, was killed with his Brothers Chæreas and Timotheus in the fortreſs of Gazara, by twenty of Judas Maccabæus's Soldiers, 2 Macc. x. 37.

APOLLOS, a Jew of Alexandria, who came to Epheſus during the abſence of St. Paul, who was gone to Jeruſalem. He was an eloquent man, and mighty in the Scriptures. He was inſtructed in the way of the Lord; and as he ſpoke with zeal and fervour, he taught diligently the things of the Lord, knowing only the baptiſm of John. So that he was only a Catechumen, and did not as yet diſtinctly know the myſteries of our Religion: But he knew that Jeſus Chriſt was the Meſſiah, and declared himſelf openly to be his Diſciple. When therefore he was come to Epheſus, he began to ſpeak boldly in the Synagogue, and to ſhew that Jeſus was the Chriſt. Aquila and Priſcilla having heard him, took him home with them, inſtructed him more fully in the ways of God, and baptized him, probably, in the name of Jeſus Chriſt.

In the year of J.C. 54.

Acts xviii. 24.

Some time after he had a mind to go into Achaia, and the brethren having exhorted him to undertake this journey, they wrote to the Diſciples, deſiring them to receive him. He arrived at Corinth, and was there very uſeful in convincing the Jews out of the Scriptures, and demonſtrating to them that Jeſus was the Chriſt. Thus he watered what St. Paul had planted in this City. But the great fondneſs which his Diſciples had for his perſon had like to have produced a Schiſm; ſome ſaying, I am of Paul; others, I am of Apollos; I am of Cephas. But this diviſion, which St. Paul ſpeaks of in his firſt Epiſtle to the Corinthians, did not prevent St. Paul and Apollos from being cloſely united by the bands of charity. Apollos hearing that the Apoſtle was at Epheſus, went to meet him, and was there when St. Paul wrote the firſt Epiſtle to the Corinthians, wherein he teſtifies that he had earneſtly entreated Apollos to return to Corinth, but hitherto had not been able to prevail with him; that nevertheleſs he gave him room to hope that he would go when he had an opportunity.

1 Cor. iii. 7.

St. Jerom ſays[a], that Apollos was ſo diſſatisfied with the diviſion which had happened upon his account at Corinth, that he retired into Crete, with Zena a Doctor of the Law; and that this diſturbance having been appeaſed by the Letter which St. Paul wrote to the Corinthians, Apollos returned to this City, and was Biſhop there. The Greeks, in their Calendars, make him Biſhop of Duras; and in their Menæa they ſet him down as ſecond Biſhop of Colophon in Aſia. Ferrarius ſays, he was Biſhop of Iconium in Phrygia; others that he was Biſhop of Cæſarea.

APOLLYON, [b] a Greek word, which ſignifies the Deſtroyer, and anſwers to the Hebrew Abaddon; which ſignifies the ſame thing. St. John in the Revelations ſays, that an Angel having opened the bottomleſs pit, a thick ſmoke iſſued out of it, and with this ſmoke locuſts like horſes prepared for battle, and commanded by the Angel of the bottomleſs pit, called in Hebrew, Abaddon; in Greek, Apollyon; and in Latin, Exterminans. Rev. ix. 11.

APORIOR, this verb is not common; it ſignifies to be in doubt, uncertainty, or perplexity: we meet with it in the Vulgate, Eccl. xviii. 6. Cum quieverit aporiabitur; when a man ſhall meditate quietly upon the wonders wrought by God, he will be exceedingly amazed. And in Iſai. lix. 6. Aporiatus eſt, quia non eſt qui occurret; he was grieved that that no one interposed to stop him. And in S. Paul, 1 Cor. iv. 8. Aporiamur, sed non destituimur; we are perplexed, but are not discouraged. In Eccles. xxvii. 5. we likewise meet with aporia, which is derived from the same root, Sic aporia hominis in cogitatu illius; by often ruminating and reflecting, we at last find our selves more embarrassed and uncertain.

[a] Hieronym. ad Tit. iii.

[b] Ἀπολλύων, Diſperdens. Heb. אבדון.

APOSTATE. They principally are called by this name, who forsake true Religion to imbrace idolatry, Mahometism, Heresy, Schism, or any other Religion whatsoever, besides that which is approved of God, as Judaism was before the coming of Jesus Christ, and Christianity now is, since the death of our Saviour. They likewise are called Apostates, who forsake any holy profession, whereunto they have ingaged themselves by solemn vows, in order to return to a secular way of life. In Scripture the name of Apostate is not always taken in this sense. For example, Job xxxiv. 18. in Job, God says to the King, Thou art an Apostate, as the Vulgate translates it; the Hebrew imports only, Who says to the King Belial, Thou art one of no worth, a wicked man. And in Proverbs vi. 12. The man who is an Apostate is good for nothing. The Hebrew has it, the man of Belial, the wicked man. And in Ezekiel ii. 3. Gentes apostatrices, that is, Nations that have rebell'd against the Lord. And when it is said, that wine and women will make wise men apostatize, the meaning is, that these two things are the most dangerous rocks, that man is exposed to, and ingage him most in sin and irregularity.

APOSTLE. This word comes from the Greek, Apostolus, which signifies an Envoy. The Hebrews had their Apostles, who were sent by their Patriarch to collect every year a certain kind of tribute, which the Jews paid him, and was called Aurum coronarium [i]. Some assert, that before Jesus Christ, they had another sort of Apostle [k], whose imployment it was to collect the half Shekel, which was to be paid by every Israelite to the Tabernacle or Temple of the Lord. The Deputies whose business it was to levy the half Shekel before the destruction of the Temple, might be called Apostles. But I cannot observe distinctly that this name was given them, as it was to other officers, belonging to the High-Priests and Heads of the people, who were sent to carry their orders to the cities and provinces, when any affairs relating to Religion were to be transacted.

For example, S. Paul was deputed to the Synagogues of Damascus, with directions to seize on and imprison all those who professed the Religion of Christ Jesus. The Apostle alludes to this custom, according to the remark of S. Jerom [l], when in the beginning of his epistle to the Galatians, he says, that he is an Apostle not of man, neither by man, but by Jesus Christ: as if he had said, that he was not an Apostle, after the manner of such as were seen among the Jews, who derived their mission from the chief Priests only, or principal men of the nation, but that he was the Apostle of Jesus Christ himself.

Eusebius and the same St. Jerom [m] speak likewise of Apostles who were sent by the Jews to defame Jesus Christ and his Disciples. Justin the martyr in his Dialogue against Trypho, says, they sent those whom they called Apostles, who dispersed circular letters filled with calumnies against the Christians. Epiphanius speaking of these Apostles [n], observes, that this was a very honourable and profitable imployment among the Jews.

As to the Apostles of Jesus Christ, they were the first and most distinguished of his Disciples; he invested them with an authority superior to that of any others, filled them with his Spirit, trusted them particularly with his mysteries, and chose them out of all those, who followed him, to raise the edifice of his Church upon them. Jesus Christ after his Resurrection sent them into all the parts of the world with commission to preach and baptize in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, and with power to work miracles and cures of all kinds. The names of the twelve Apostles chosen by Jesus Christ are these, 1. Peter, 2. Andrew, 3. John the Evangelist, 4. Philip, 5. James Major, 6. Bartholomew, 7. Thomas, 8. Matthew, 9. Simon, 10. Thaddæus, or Jude, 11. James Minor, 12. Judas Iscariot. This last having betrayed his Master, and in despair hanged himself, S. Mathias was chosen in his place. Lastly, S. Paul having been converted in a miraculous manner by Jesus Christ himself, was reckoned among the Apostles of the first rank. We shall give some account of the life of every Apostle in particular under the titles belonging to them.

APPAIM, the Son of Nadab, 1 Chr. xi. 30.

APPHUS, the Sirname given to Jonathan Maccabeus, 1 Macc. xi. 5. This word Apphus may signify one who faints away [o], or one who abounds, or one who scatters and disperses, according to the different ways of writing it.

APPIA, the Wife of Philemon, S. Paul's friend. It is believed, that she suffered martyrdom with her husband Philemon; and their festival is observed upon the 22d of November.

APPLE

[i] L. xiv. Codic. Theod. de Judæis. [k] Vide Gothofredi Notas in Cod. Theod. l. xiv. [l] Hieronym. in Epist. ad Galat. v. 1. [m] Euseb. in Isai. xviii. Hieronym. ibidem. [n] Epiphan. Hæres. 30. [o] אפיס deficiens. פוש abundare. פוץ spargere.

A PARTICULAR DESCRIPTION of the COUNTRIES mention'd by the APOSTLES & pass'd through by them as they PREACH'D the GOSPEL.

$ . . @ JSL D $ . .

3 3 (' ' ((/ & % # - # $ $ # # % % T 0
! ($ $ @ " # ' / A " / @ ''
+ # % 6 , ' '' / # $ 8
% ' + ' : (V # $ $ '' '' '' / % / +
" " # " " A # ' % , / 1 '' /
4 / 6 , * # ($! , + ' / % # (# #
% $ # * " (! $ (! '' , ' " " , +
(# $ # # (+ '' % / & 1 % #
'' 6 $ " # / # , # 1 , 0 + # $ - # 0 % '' 0 # , + / ` # " # /
'' / # ` , ; @ % # + " "
+ 6 , # * 7 " # / @ ' /
" (! $ (! (# $ #) # (0 ' / # 2 K , /
* " (! # ! * ($ # # / $ 0 , /
& # + * / + L * ! ' / R % , ''
) * ! $ ($ (($! \ / / " , 0 '' Y /
& # # ' 0 , , $ # ' / ' ' $
$ (! $ # ' % $ / " $ F # " " %
$ 0 $ # , $ (! $ * 4 # # # , / # $
% $, / " 4 * V % 0 , ' 0 A
& '' $ 5 ' / # + & 0 5 % ' A
[+ # + A % 0 , Q Q " / # " " " A
' / $ '' % / " $ ' c # # '' " # 1 " # 1 '
$ (! $ # " (! / % % '' , 0 % V , /
" , , '' + ' 0 0 A # % % # '' " ' " `
% + % $ / # / 1 0 , +
0 # , + 0 + 0 ' % Y / + '' $ # +
_< + ''% ' $ @ / ' " ! " A / " + V # , + % '' ,
. ! * * ! $, / $ + ' 0 $ 6 % , #
6 , ! # $ # * ! $ # ' 1 , " " + " +
% # '' ! " # # * ! $ 1 ++ 0 # % " @ @ % 0 % # % ' # ' 9 # '' % / 1 ' / , +
" ! # * ! / ' @ + " V '' , /
* ! , # 8 " $ (9 % $ $ / #
* ! , > (* G # ! # * ! " " + $ # , @
$ # . (/ . 4 G # / + " / U
X $ & 3 $ '' $ " - # W " / '' + 0 # $ / `
0 / $ # 8" " 0 ($ * (, " ' A / $ # 5 " #
($ / 5 # , + " % 0 $ $ 2 '
, , , '' % / 1 " @ @ % '' $ A
+ / # ' / # 0 # & 6 7 . - '' 1 , / , %
, 6) ' + ' " " " '' , ' / # / &
/ $ '' # A % / , # , A , + % +
+ '' # 0 # $ " # '' " # + % / # 0 5
" # < > ($ " . (, + # 0 '' # / + % =
* (" (* (. / & " / " 1 " @ ''
6 6 & " / W # / ' '' " % 1 , /
1 1 , '' / % # # # + " $ + V , /
4 + # / % # / '' $ F / '' % " , , $ `
, 0 # 3 4 - $ # # # '' + # '
* " /) # ' W $
+ # / # 1% 1 / + / , 5 ' 5 5 , / #
'' # + % # # % % % / # " " #
1 0 0 # ' E $, 0 # , # '' 1 # / #
% B * * B % 3 0 , % % 0 , # %
W> ? 4 ? 4 4 # 5 N 2 !
/ & * / 5 N 4 9 / *
4 # 0 , 9 : " 2 4 5 %
@ " " '' + # 1 , @ / 4
& + # " B 5 " , 5 - 9
+ & '' % , / ? / 4 '' 2
, , '' % # ' 0 , @ 5 @ '' $ $ $ W
& 5 " @ 2 A U

W < ' C 3 8 / < / 3 % 3 B & # ? / # $ & $ F 8 & C 8 W C) S ? / B $)
+ 9 A " # $ $ $ 5 5 L : / 8 # ! D R ! # & E >
8 $ V / &) . F > . F $ & +

$. N 'SY R $: C

6 (!/ 5 $%5 # 3 7K%

% ' , + " / ' # ' "

4 6 3 3 (. 4 ' I > $ #'# 0 # Z #' 7 +

'0 (# # ' ("# B

% ' , ' 0 ' ' / # , 0A B '7 + /

0 ' $ @ % ' $. & '3 # $ # +/ '% 'O 9

, + / ' 1" @ @ % ' ? # " $ ' # $ ' 'O '8 ' W

% ' ' 2 '% ? + / " ' '50 ' J=

$ $ # ! * T ! H 0 # ' $ &

! 4" & " #/ ' 7 + ' , V % , + + n

, / 0 ! # # $ % + $ # + 'O '2\)

' + # ' + # + ? V , / '% '1, $ " A L JD 5

' " / ' ' 0 $ & ' / " '% % @ % # @ '

@ + ' % , # " # # A

'% @ # @ $ # #/ $ #/A

$ @ % ' / V % # # W

! K4 ! 4 % + % '2 # ' + . " 0 ? '# ' #A 8N.

' ! 0 9 # + # $ " + $

/ ' / + Y/ $ + + 0 2 9 D

' $ $ % $ + / $ ' ! 4

' ' M Y/ % " % / $ V

+ " & # 7 + , / " # + '

0 + # # 0 " '. # $ # $ $ V

0 $ % , / ! 4 # " " # +

/ , + $ / M # , % L

' / / " / $ 4 # # , `

+/ / ! , # # # # O ? # + "%

% # $ 6 0 + + # @

3 1 7 + # 2 9 T ? " $' 0 % %

9 # + ! C , ' # $ 6

9 A$ 4 % "2 4 # - #A # ,

LE 1 & % & % $ # % 3

+ ' 5 N 7 + " QD59 + ` ?

' 0 # % # ' + ? V

$ % @ # / " "A " " ' 9 / # , #/ `

" 3 % # Q / 0 + # 1, /# - # % / # #

Y/ "".# # #/ % # + % / # # $

4 $ % $ # , F # % % #

! " # & 4 % A ! / # 8 " ! %

' 0 # $ @ $ 5 ' , % % # " 0 # @ +# $ G ! % 6

/ # , .# + $ " # + % 0 , $ # # ! , '

/ # @ % % # + Y/ % 2 40 ! K

+ # # + 0 " & 7 + @ % % " , @XX

$ + " $ % $ % +% # ? ?

, , / / # " / # $ 4 ? B

" " @ $ # ! C ?

4 % " + + $! ? ?

/ / % 4'

% I +d + $ $ / ` 1 b 1(0 (! $ /# " # # # $, / $ * % 0 # , 2] + `

" $ # $ 7 + V " ` % $" $

" /# # $ # ! 4 # # " " + >(% , # ' W

" / $ ' # A$ @ % %'2 , " A5 5 5

$ # + ! % + 0 $ ' #+ # $ #/

, # ' # $ # @ $ + , $A ' $ $

$ " , ! 4 # $ % , + + # 0 / " A

+ # @ I : , / " " # '% $ " , #" / , A

% # 5 5 $ # , $ ' 5W 0 ! $

/ ! 4 4 # # + # $ G (% # Y/ # >(

/ % # ! 4 # + ! / # , # % 0 ($ (!

0 , $

6 : , # * : , $ 1 # < N ! [P 6 /

/#

W / # 9# % -4 =% - # $? E

Q 4$ 4 ? 0 A

+ 4 / 4 K

4 44 V 4 / 4 4 4 44 4 % ? 4

/ 4 4 / 4 - . 4 (4

. ? I 4 . ! . 4 ? %9

$ # @ JS=D $: C

. + +/ " , , !U ' ' , / '
S5 , / ' !U % 0 #. + # " / # ' + + @ "#
. 4% 0 ' $3 + $9 $ + ! , / #
J< - $ + $ # $ $ # $
% $, " % / # @ $! #
!U # $" A % $" # #
$ 4 % $ $ / $ + A
$ / , / A 6 9 # . 4 .#
! $" % "/ / # / #0 / # , 0
. & ## $0 A 0 !U 4
+ 0 , 4 U / 9
!" % 0 " 0 4U U / 4 4
$!0 & A% V / # " % . 9
(% " " 4 4 % # +
% / $% + $ 8 $$ # !U 4 0 1 / A
$ / $ (% $, @ e/ / # ! # !U U
4 + % (% A 4 U 9
" 2 % # A 4 / /
W& $ / $ $ # % + A
, $ $ $ $ / $ + +
@ % & / " + 0 / .
?4 !U # % + * " #
" # " $ +' 0 / / ! $ A
/ $ / " . + !U 4 # 0 #
& 8 0 !U \ 0 !" (# 0 # $ + % A
% # / " + Y $ / , # -
$ $ U 9
11 I : (, # & U
% + # & $ / # @ % % ! 9
? % $ # / A U % + . %
0 % @ , $" ! 9 % , $, #
K 5* . $ 4 $ @ # / , , /
$ # % , / A % , ,
# # T "" / % / + / # / +
% $" $, 0 1 $ # "/
5 % "/ @ % % , , $ " ,
% 0 # $! $" % ? 4 , # 3 "
0 / %] # $ A 3 / & 1, $, ,
, . # # " # / IX " $ 0
% , # / % 0 # + 0 & A
$ / # 7 # 9/ # + / +
+ 0 / $ # . 4 ? 4 $
$ " # / " , !U K TOM " @ + V #
% " % " # " $ " ? 4 # !U
9 # , 0 + % # # &
% + Y/ ! " 6# # $ / 8 $ (" F\4 A $ / / !U , , 6 8 * "=J # $$
/ $! $ $ / A 4 # % 4K4 3 + $
/ # $, # b 1 (A0 # & : 5 A
. # 0 # $, ! + # ,
"" # $ / # 1 $ # , n / , K + %
+ / V # 0 + Y/ # , # # ,
/ @ % #+ / # @ # + # 5 $
& $ / C / .# / $ $
?V ## + + / " = $! ! <
+ $ " # * ! " @ W
0 / # 4 W $ % $ # #/ $ +
% " / # $ " # ! &
% # / # / " 0 ! % # A
/ 0 / # " $ 0 # % 2 $ A
$ " / + " ! 4 W $ +
! / # , 0 # # ## # " "
" ! 4 $ " , , * 4 % # ! 9
4

1 "" , # " # , -+ +$ W + # % : 1# $ #3 $$
5 $ #4 $ W &, ## 1 ! N6 ! W / , , "
* 5 6 1 , ,

<0 D5 E <

, 4 ' $ 5 ' ' #W # 9 , # #
* 3 # / 4
/ 3 4 A , Y / $ " /
S15# ! 4) & 3 " 3 - 6 " b /
% % , / , @ % % $ 0 % % 7 +W
4 - 4K) C b / " ! 0" & W$
) 9 4 . / , / # % # "
' 5W % # ' # , / # ' / 1"
Y / @ 5* % / + & " / " Y /
5 , 0 * 9 " % / " " % 9 * , $ % # 0 / # $ ' 0 / " % # $
! 4' & ' # " "
. & , @ # & " # 7 +
! . 1 0 LT . . / , / 0
, + + & , / # ' 0 / # # 1 " # $
. . 0 = + & 7 + ! / # _
, + + % % + Y / + # # W$
& , , . . K TO 0 & 0 # % , / $ # A / D
1 $ # , @ 0 # " / #
95 ! J ! / A ' # / # # ' " # / $ #
. / $! & , # % %
4 1 1 # ' + / ' # + / # = 0 # `
? [(/ , # # $ ' 0
R ! ># , / / 0 + #%
$ / , % E 0 , # 7 + &
4 # $ / # % " / + 0 /
1 $ " # $
. % / ' " ") 4 & , ! %
& % " ") # #% , ! $
% # % # + # 0 (# 3 $ % # # # $
/ ! # # * 4
& / $ + , $ + % $ * 4 `
, # " / / # % # # ! 7 + @ %
! % + " " + 0 0 # $! E
(I " " + # + = # ! ? 4 $
& $ 0 @ $ J ! ! * 4$ & / 4 ! 4) 9
' $ / 4 * 4 * 4 ! # #C , F
4 3 % # $ ' 0 + # % !
/ $ # V 4 / % !
% + + / # + " / # "
, # . # % # 4 # &
2 $ # % 4 O T 4 # O 9 -Q ! X
" ! 44 4 , # / #
! 2 / % # ! %
(#9 " " " # , ! 4 * 4 #
& / / 4
% ! ?? % M 4 ! 2 # ! E
4 , " 0 % " & # , # #A
" / V # 1 , $ " " / % % $ " / `
95 / 4 * % * 4 @ % , $! 4
& " " " @ % +
/ # + $! 4 / % 9
1 Y / @ , , # ,
, ! 4 $ ' 0 + % `
% & ! " / / $ % ?
1 / %) 49 R 0 #
, 2 ! & " " " ! G % $
>(. % 9 " / # / " ! # ! 4 # #A
5 A & / % # $. ? !
6 (% % + 0 * 4 # K %
! 0 ! # # $ %5# # 0 ' +/ + $ # ` / 1 % , / # # , # 3 ! . % $
, (- / " 5 / , 0 # 0 # $ $.
, # , 4 # . ? $ % # "
" ! # # $A 3 0 2 # !
&
$ X W , _

$ ʼ$ @ʼ JSSʼ D $ ʼ$

Wf ʼ & ʼ ' #ʼ ! %ʼ % ʼ '/ # #6ʼ ʼ3 0 ʼ 'ʼ2 ʼ #ʼ2 ʼ
' ʼ ' ʼ ' ʼ ʼ ʼ# ' # ʼ 'ʼ3. K ʼ ʼ ʼ% ʼ ʼ ʼ ʼ 'ʼ ʼ / ` yʼ ʼ "ʼ 'ʼ! ʼ #ʼ ʼ% ʼ $ ʼ ʼ ! ʼ ʼ4 ' ʼ ʼ #ʼ Tʼ
#ʼ ' #ʼ $ +ʼ ʼ ʼ "/ ʼ ʼ #ʼ ʼ, $ ʼ ʼ $ ' ʼ , #ʼ 'ʼ ʼ
ʼ #ʼ % ʼ ʼ8 ʼ 'ʼ ʼ $!.#ʼ , ʼ , ʼ 'ʼ ʼ ʼ 'ʼ * ʼ #ʼ 0Aʼ
! 4 ʼ ʼ * ! 4ʼ ʼ * ʼ ʼ % ʼ ʼ ' / H #ʼ ʼ ʼ ! ʼ
! % ʼ ʼ3. ʼ0 ʼ# '' ʼ ' $ʼ ʼ ' ʼ+ ʼ ʼ " ' ʼ , ʼ ʼ $ ʼ 'ʼ
ʼ$ # ʼ * ʼ ʼ * % ʼ ʼ ʼ Gʼ % ʼ ' + ' ʼ ʼ
, ʼ #ʼ , ʼ ʼ % 4 ʼ , /' ʼ ʼ #ʼ ʼ " ʼ 'ʼ ʼ / ʼ ʼ ' ʼ `
ʼ ! 4ʼ , # #ʼ % ʼ ʼ ʼ #ʼ / ʼ ʼ ʼ /
% ʼ ʼ / ʼ 'ʼ ! ' 'ʼ ʼ ! # #ʼ $ / ʼ ' ʼ
& ʼ " / ʼ #ʼ ʼ !ʼ % ʼ % # ʼ % ʼ #ʼ 4'
0 # #ʼ , ʼ ʼ ʼ % ʼ ʼ ʼ ʼ 'ʼ . ? ʼ ʼ ʼ 'ʼ ʼ 0 +ʼ ' #ʼ
0# 6 ʼ #ʼ 1 , $ ʼ 'ʼ ' ʼ & , ʼ ʼ 1 ʼ ʼ #ʼ ʼ7 +# $ʼ ʼ% `
'' ʼ ʼ , +ʼ ʼ ʼ ʼ ʼ ' ʼ #ʼ 'ʼ ʼ % ʼ , $ ' " ʼ ' ' ʼ ʼ
! G' Vʼ % ʼ ʼ% ʼ ! $ #ʼ ʼ ʼ. ʼ / # #ʼ $ ʼ % ʼ `
, ʼ ʼ ' ʼ , ʼ ʼ " / ʼ % ʼ 'ʼ # / #ʼ ʼ ! ʼ + / + ʼ % ʼ , `
- #ʼ ʼ % ʼ / $ #ʼ , ʼ ' ʼ % ʼ % #ʼ ʼ $ ʼ ' $ʼ $ ʼ ʼ# #ʼ ʼ @ ʼ
% ʼ % ʼ0 ʼ $ $ ʼ ʼ ʼ / $ ʼ ʼ % ʼ / ʼ & ʼ #ʼ
ʼ ʼ ʼ 3. - % ʼ ʼ ' $ #ʼ 7 +ʼ 'ʼ ! ʼ 0ʼ % ʼ Vʼ #ʼ
% 0 ʼ & , ʼ # +ʼ ʼ ʼ / $, ʼ ʼ ' / ʼ ! ʼ ʼ % ʼ ' $ #ʼ
- ʼ22*ʼ 'ʼ ʼ % 0 ʼ ʼ 'ʼ3. ʼ / T'ʼ & ʼ % 4ʼ #ʼ ' $ʼ $ʼ 7Qʼ 7 ʼ % 4ʼ # Aʼ
& ʼ ! ʼ * 1 * 1Ff] :ʼ ʼ $ ʼ ʼ# ' # ʼ + `
># !4 ʼ * ʼ ʼ 2 ʼ . 2 ʼ #ʼ ʼ2 ʼ , 0 ʼ % ʼ / ' #ʼ ʼ , `
& ʼ #ʼ) 'ʼ / ʼ . ' ʼ ' ʼ ʼ + ʼ 'ʼ * '
" 5 ʼ ʼ0 ʼ ' / ʼ ʼ ʼ Y/ ʼ & ʼ ! 4ʼ ʼ+ ʼ ʼ ʼ / +ʼ ʼ #ʼ " ' 0 ʼ 'ʼ ʼ+ 5 + ʼ % ʼ + / 5ʼ #ʼ + / ʼ " " Vʼ
ʼ ʼ ʼ ʼ ʼ , ʼ + ʼ ʼ 0 ʼ ! ' 0 ʼ 0 ʼ 'ʼ Y/ ʼ #ʼ3 ʼ9ʼ
$ + ʼ ʼ ʼ , + #ʼ ʼ ' "ʼ ʼ (ʼ , / ʼ ʼ ʼ ʼ ' " ' / ʼ0 # 0 ʼ
'ʼ 9'# # ʼ #ʼ ʼ+ + ʼ #ʼ ' +/ ʼ #ʼ $ @ ʼ ʼ ' / " ʼ 'ʼ
0 ʼ 'ʼ # ʼ ' ʼ ʼ + , , + ʼ % ʼ ʼ @ʼ % , ʼ , `
' # ʼ ʼ# ' # ʼ 'ʼ) A ʼ % ʼ / ' ʼ ! ʼ ʼ 8 ʼ 'ʼ3. ʼ
" " #ʼ ʼ + ' ʼ " ʼ 'ʼ ʼ ʼ + 0 ʼ ʼ ʼ + ʼ - !!0
$ / ' ʼ , ʼ @ %6 #+ #ʼ ' % ' ʼ ʼ ʼ & ʼ #ʼ ! 4ʼ % ʼ ʼ # FʼQ 5ʼ
ʼ 'ʼ # ʼ #ʼ& (#ʼ 'ʼ ʼ #ʼ ʼ % ' " #ʼ ʼ ʼ 5 ʼ 4ʼ ! ʼ
* ʼJ _ʼ $ (ʼ #ʼ ' ʼ 'ʼ # _ ʼ #% ʼ ʼ ʼ 0 4Gʼ KK * 0 4ʼ 2 4ʼ #ʼ ʼ
Qʼ ' $ ʼ / ʼ #ʼ ! " #ʼ " ʼ 'ʼ ʼ $ # ʼ ! % ʼ / ' ʼ $ʼ 'ʼ ʼ ' 5 ʼ
#ʼ , ' / " ' ʼ & ʼ , @ʼ ʼ % ʼ % ʼ
& ʼ , ʼ 'ʼ ʼ ʼ # 0 # #ʼ ʼ , 9 bFʼ 'ʼ ʼ % "ʼ ʼ ' ʼ ʼ , ʼ
ʼ ' ʼ % ʼ #% ʼ ʼ ʼ #ʼ ' ʼ ' ʼ ʼ ʼ3 ʼ 'ʼ ʼ& $ " ʼ 'ʼ * ʼ
% ʼ 0 ʼ ʼ ʼ " ʼ ' # Fʼ ʼ ʼ Qʼ ' ʼ ʼ % ʼ Y/ #ʼ `
0 ʼ ʼ , # ʼ / ʼ / # ʼ ʼ ʼ % ʼ % ʼ 4 ʼ / T9ʼ , 4ʼ #ʼ
#ʼ ʼ# ' ʼ " 5ʼ ʼ ʼ #ʼ I 4ʼ ʼ ' (ʼ , 4 ʼ ʼ># 9ʼ
ʼ ʼ ʼ ʼ ʼ $ / ʼ ' ʼ % ʼ ʼ #ʼ - Vʼ #ʼ 4ʼ ! 9ʼ
#ʼ $ ʼ / , ʼ ʼ ʼ !ʼ % ʼ - ʼ ʼ ! 'ʼ % ʼ ʼ / ʼ ʼ
0 ʼ ʼ % ʼ ʼ ʼ ' ʼ # #ʼ ʼ , / ʼ . ʼ #ʼ , E
0 # #ʼ ʼ= !ʼ #ʼ ()$(ʼ4 ʼ 4$ʼ % ʼ ! 0 ʼ ʼ - ʼ , +ʼ
' $ ʼ " # #ʼ * ʼ #ʼ ʼ #ʼ ' $ #ʼ 5ʼ , 0 #ʼ ʼ ' / , # / ʼ $ ʼ
$ +ʼ $ʼ ʼ$ʼ ʼ# ʼ 'ʼ + ` ʼ ʼ$ + ʼ + ʼ $ʼ ʼ% "ʼ $ʼ
ʼVʼ ʼ ʼ ʼ ' ʼdd ʼ 0 ʼ ` ʼ ʼ #ʼ4
0 #ʼ ʼ# ' 9 ʼ 'ʼ ʼ ʼ 'ʼ - #ʼ & ʼ$ # $ʼ % ʼ ʼ# ' #A
% ʼ % ʼ " #ʼ , ʼ * ʼ & ' ʼ #ʼ ' $ʼ 3. ʼ Y/ ʼ / ʼ % ʼ ' $ ʼ ʼ #ʼ ! ʼ ʼ ()$(ʼ9ʼ ʼ $ ʼ J!ʼ ʼ #ʼ 4 ʼ # #ʼ ʼ ʼ
ʼ ʼ ' ʼ 0 ʼ9ʼ ' ʼ ʼ ʼ " " ʼ ʼ " " ʼ 'ʼ ! K ʼ ' ʼ ! $" ʼ
% ʼ Y/ #ʼ ʼ + ' ʼ " ʼ 'ʼ $ ʼ ? ʼ % $ʼ ʼ 0 @ #ʼ ' ʼ 9ʼ
#ʼ + ʼ #ʼ $ ʼ + ʼ3 0 ʼ Aʼ ʼ ʼ% $ʼ ʼ #ʼ / ' ʼ ' ʼ
0 ʼ ʼ (* ʼ #ʼ % ʼ ' / # #ʼ ʼ ʼ ' / ʼ " ' 0 ʼ ' $ʼ , #ʼ # ʼ ʼ ʼ
+ ʼ ʼ ' &% ' ʼ #ʼQ3 Aʼ 9 / Vʼ / #ʼ " T ʼ 'ʼ% $ʼ ʼ# Aʼ
4 ʼ 'ʼ * ʼ #ʼ * ʼH % / ʼ ' #ʼ ʼ ' ʼ J?ʼ ' ʼ & ʼ @ Aʼ
@ +ʼ ʼA 'ʼ ' 0 ʼ 3 0 ʼ " ' ' ʼ % ' ʼ % " #ʼ ʼ ʼ ! ʼ % ʼ ʼ
#ʼ , ʼ $ ʼ $ʼ ʼ !/ ʼ# $ 0 ʼ 'ʼ ! ʼ ʼ / ʼ $ ʼ 'ʼ
ʼ ʼ % ʼ 0 ʼ # ʼ , ' 0 5ʼ - #Vʼ ! T ʼ M0 - T ʼ# 0 #ʼ 0 ! T T ʼ
ʼ# 0 # #ʼ ʼ ʼ" " ʼ" ʼ / T'ʼ % ʼ ' ʼ ' ʼ + ʼ - #ʼ * ʼ
45 ʼ % ʼ % ʼ 4% ʼ ! ʼ ʼ ʼ # 0 #ʼ ' $ʼ * ʼ # ' , / ʼ 'ʼ ' Aʼ
0 /

ʼ ʼ ʼ ʼ ʼ ʼ ʼ ʼ ʼ ʼ ʼ ʼ ! ʼ " ʼ #
Kʼ A 6ʼ)6)6TC&ʼ 6H6 $ % ʼ 1 ! "ʼ

$ $ @ STD $ $

[illegible]

A PROSPECT OF MOUNT ARARAT FROM THE SIDE WHERE ARE THE THREECHURCHES

according to M. de Tournefort.

$ $ G + ,) R

/ ' % , 9 % # # ' / # / 0 ' "
T * % $ # ' % # +
' , / ' % # +/ / ' # /
3 0 '% * " A $ $ / " 0 D
' ! % . 4 $
% $?4 $ $ # $ & 4 @ %
% 4 & 3 " ! 4 '5 $ $! #
' ' ! 4 #% 5 % / " #/
/ & 3 % 0 $ 0 " /
4 / V # - # , /+ $ & " " X GG2GR !
' $ # # 4 / / " % @ # !
/ % + "A ?9 + / 9 , A " # @ % 1 $ / ' , 0 / # # , @
* 4 % % 9 + % # / " 1 , +
% # " " * ! 9 , # # 9 / A
4 & " " % $ # # + + A
% + 4 F / ,A 0 & &1 9 $
#/ # $ # , + # $ " $ 2 / $
, / % " 0 # $ A / " / ! K
0 $ / " ! 4 G0' * JX , /
& , # "" @ ".# 1 % `
% 4 % + I ,9 # @ $ / #
7 + V / " / # % $ @ + V # $
. # % # $ ## " A
7 +# $ 3 , / # A 0 # % 1 % / $
J) 4 ! 0 M ## \
11 2 # 8 A & ? / / & ? / %5 , /
! " 0 _E * +/ # $ / ! 9
:D ? 9 9 $ % #V
2# . # A & # % $
- T @V % # & ?9 9
222*1 _T I # 0 # $ & ? % + '
3 8 # / # ± $ `
9 ! - " & % # $ @. + / ! E XT _ __ $ @ % + $ " - 5 /
" , - ! ?%4 / !
% % $ (? # 9 *
" , / + A % * + % +
+ @ / # + + A $ 2 # V ,
$ * 8 $ $ $
+ " , % $ /
& $ / / @ 9 # #
4 % @ # 0 / , % A@ % $ + A
/+ 1 $ # , / 0 , @
% / + # " , $ A " % $ @
$ & %4 @ , !
/ " / . (
% 4 * + / (4 ## ! ! 4
% / " + " # - # # - 99- &
$ % , # # # / / , ,
$ 1, $, @ " @ % - # $ # 0 "
% , 1 V # $ & @4 @ & ! 4 $ `
$ 9" # $ % $ # , # * %
/ % # , + + $ / , $, / , A
* / 2 % % / " / 0 # % 1 %
/ " " / # $ % 0 $, / $ @ $
% + @ V " $ % V 0 4 & %
/ ! , , , A @ # / % 0
1, + + # % +/ $! # + /
% " " / 0 / ! 9 $ 0 "" " 5
% 0 +/ $ / A 3 " # 0 "

5 : ' " Y ! .[Q 3 0 HMF 8% 2P T8 $&$>U H< 'HH %D
f / " D " DED & 6 * + # 3 J J 6 1# $ D
" LPT 6, W " DED - # 5 / . ' JLJ N
* (1

[illegible]

% 1# 4 % @ % #+ # , ! ! C H ' + ' 0 '
7 + ' * 4" / / - #V ' %
&&1 % , % ' # , $ " $ #
% @ # # ' # , % * 9 1 # * 4
4 * " ;; ' , 4 # ! 4 $ W
% ' ! % # $ " # * % W565;
" , , ' ' / # ! & * * %
3 4 $! K T4 ' " A & , ! / 6 : I ! '
' ' # , t ! ?9 % 0 ' # # " #
' % # % + 0 & , ! '
. # " " # # 2 ! 9
& , , 0 # # ! 4 1 % #
% # , . & , ! 1 ' / # , % b / ' / " 4 9V % ! # 2 4 . ? 4 " `
! ' ' / , / ' 0 % 4 , % ! # " 9
' / $ ' / / 3 ! '
! 3 # . % , / # % # " ? , 9
V @ , / ' ' / ! ,
$ ' , # Y / " ? # , '
% .# 0 M K/ % " 9 &1 & $
" / ` ; " T " !
/ , $ # ' ' , , & ` : / " A% # / , 9
. ' " " # J
1 (@ % $ A& 1 3 (1 ' #
5 $ K2 . 9 ' ' @ % % ' m
4 1" @ " # ! # ' ! ? 4 5 #
% 4 , 4 è / $ " $ U / 9
% ' $! . $ " # % A 0 ! & % 0 ! & $ `
0 # ' / % 0 " 1 , $ $ # ' / # $ $ / $ # @ %
' $) , / / # ` % / ' $ $ / $ %
% # # # # + # $ ' ' / % " , , ' $ " '
/ , + ' ' / $ " ' 0 $ $
- 0 / , + + 0 # 0 ! ? & / % + " 4 ' # & # @
" # ! 7 + % / $ "
11 2 1 ' / # + % $ " ' # , $
95 $ ' $ " , , " $ # 0 A
% # 4 # . 9 (1 & % ". 9
' , / , ! 4 -
++ $ 2 1 , # . / # -
, + + + , =Y ' $ $, ' ! I
4' ># K & , " , `
+7 2 1 " ' " @ 9 % . % ? 4 " , ,
J + % % # * / + + " % / "
% / 4 % 4 U ' 1 / 4 .
/ / , $ % % 0 ` 1 (1 - + E
$, $ % $ # % +5 ' ' $
' 0 + # ' # , ! 0 4 - ! E
' + ' # . 4 % % ' # 9 / # / 3
0 _= 0 0 55 / % 0 + # % # " ' # E
$ " ! 4 % . , 9 % ! 0 A A % $
" , ' $.) ' $ # ' ' 9!K/
$ $! " # + H " " # # $
@ + " ! , % 9 % # , @ " $ + "
" / 5 @ 4 / + % ! 0 # $ # !A >
' " % , # $ # / ' " / +3
" % . # ! 0 E # $ $ # # " \
/ ' " . V # / # A % ' % 7 + ' ' # , +
' # * / + # # ! / ' / % ! 0E
0 ' , # , 0 O % / ' # ' / " %
' % , / $ 9 # , 4 @H

$ N #H R $

, + $ / # $ R /
$ $ @ " % A & $ " $, # * A
! 4 + + # $ # + " # #
% / W ! 4 $ K4
/ , % $ # , + % % , % # # 7 + "
" # , V # A ! 4 %
4 % / # 9 % $ # " % % # A
9 # $ 7 + . + # + " / 7 + # $ % $ " # +
4 , 0 # $ G G ! 4 , K4 % , W% %
1 " / # A , # " 4 " " # 7 + 1 # , " . #
/ # # $ % % % $ # , $ %
! 0 ! ! % # dd K I C / # # + % #
4
$ $ 0 + , & % ! 4 # ! 9
/ # # + 4 " / # ,
% 8 A A % * A > " 5 $ " A # %
% # 0 + % # + E # # 9 ! 4
0 # + # " + / A A $! 4 4 V ! 4 + & , 0 ` # $ # # $ % /
, $ 5 I % % # # + K4
! 0 # ! 4 # ` / # 0
$ # dd / I / 38 ! 4 # # + +
" . $ " ! $ $ $. 94 4
! " " " # / & # 1 , $ $, & "
1 7 % % / " ! 4 % / # " $
W 0 # + % % # `
11 2 T 5 - / / " + " 3 A
* 0 ` * % / , + / , 9 7 +
+ " / # ! 0 ! 9 $, / - 0 /
4 # ! # ! " / + # % ! 4 + 0 $ / `
! 4 / % % $ # # # 1 @ % % ! E
C # # # 7 + / , / # 4 # + V , @ / "
$! 4 # + 0 ! 4 & $, % / # + $
" & / # + 1 , $ #
! 4 # # % ! 4 + 0 $ 7 +
, # % % # # 7 + , / % $
/ " # 0 ! 4 & % 8 #
% + / " % A 9 # " $ # $ % @ A
r $, # / /) ` % " " # , + # # /
/ ± # # " $ # , # 0 # ! 4 / "
/ $ # , / . # " 0 # . T 4
8 ! 4 # , / # + 3 # / # "
8 $ + $ # / # # + $
$. # $ / # # + 0 # + "
0 # # + / $ V T + 0 # . % , $ /
+ 0 : " # # $ 0 0 /
" " % & $ " $ " [% 9 ^EE_
+ / # $ / / # " $ # $ 4 # . 4 / # $, ! 9
$ " + # $ # # # 4 & $ " $ $ # 0 / + A
% / # @ / " $ " + $ " # ! 4
" 7 + $ " # A " # % / # # + $ /
$ # $ % ! 4 $ $ # #
*% # & " " % # + / $ / A + / . - ^EEJ L / / $ # $ # # 0 " / # 9 ! 4 $ $ $
, Hi # % # # 0 # ! A " # " # + 0 `
0 / 9 5 / O # " / # # % / #
+ # + % % ! # / " " 3 0 " 9
" & $ " - 0 $ " 6 # 1 , / # " A *
Y / # ! 4 0 / M T 4 $ # $ # # $ # #
+ 3 # # # # $ $, ! 4 , # $ 9
" 7 + % " # I K^ % , / #
+ / + ! 4 " / " A ! # " V % A " / # @ # 0 % @ %

1

6 $ Y 1 ! 0 < N JS A 4 JS " S<E Y ! 0 JE
W 1 , # . Y ! 0 / N # < ^ Y J ! 0 / N #
#

[illegible]

A VIEW OF THE AREOPAGUS AT ATHENS

$ N JTD R $

[illegible]

LPLP

[illegible]

LPDLA

[illegible]

< / N JT= R $

% ' # . % ! 4 % $
/ # # 4 / + 1 % 1" @ + % # / "
% % , /+ O 5 6 %. # # 4 $, % # %
4 0 $" % # # , " 4
/" I 4 $ $ # # $ % # LTD S & "
/ , + / % + , + %A $ ' 0 /
% % / # ' $ % $ 40 % , / LT<J *
"
2 * VV
3 2 % + " 2 14 1
5)% # ' $ $ [# 5 4 % % + # / " + , , % f PW
DEDJ ' # # " # - " % $ /
Q'H 5 M % " / # , . 4 14 & ' ! 9C , #
0/ :+ % % / # C
LT 4K4 , # & " 0 # % 1 (* & % ! 9
- 0 @ + 1 / # # 4 * 1" @ " / 6 $
+ " 0 +' (' $ $ @ + % $
" / , + $ # ! -4 " * # `
' + # Y/ 0 # # , 0 ! %
, $ % # % , 0 ! '
, @ $ % F # ' , "" 2 @ @ % ' .
!% " # % : # # , / + "
_L ' $ 2 3. !! ! J S # T ?
& 6 # ! % ;N +' (
& , ++)(% $ - # 0 + (V
, @ % G " 111 2 4 W '
9/ / # $ ' $ " /A $ 1# % "" # ,
(/ * K % % % !
& S _ 1 /+ , `
+ , / # $$ # B # # . f 1 " , $
0 / & $ ` " . . !!
+ , " " LT
$, $ 0 ' $ / 1 & D "
- & " 0 ' $ % $. !
& % # + / # ' # +A $ # - " . " (/@
@ % # + / , % # . " # Q6
$ " / % % + 0 '" @ # "
" + # ' , % . # . / #
1 - + , # $ / & $ "
'A ,)$ # # % ! $ # ' + ' / , $ + / " 0 # ''
' / ' / # / 1 ' $ " CT % K / `
+ % ! ! % # . 9
# . # $ % # 0 + # "
% # ' + % / @ + $ $ / " W W \A (
$ 0 + # $ % % # % % % @ % W6
& 1, $ $ % @ + . ' %
% # , 0 % / " " A
4 / , # WH5 % + % # . % $, '
D JD # 11 2 A 1 " ` 0 # % ' % $ J ' 6 Q
1 7 + + % % 0 , / ' $ ' $ #0 A K
199 @ + ($ (! # % # $ / " WA
$ % " $ # 'A G / # % #
$ - 5 % ' % # 1 ' " , ` # % % % #
, $ $ ` 3 ' $ " # /+
! - 5 # 4 & # % % V
& Y' # / , / . # , " `
+ " / / # + ' % #
1 2 A 1 # "@ 5 /+ , #
" 4 # " ' # # / % #
W7 + # ' '' # ' # # $ % # # "O
2* _L # 7 + $ / O " O
1 & 7 5  " 6 19%@ % G1 $ " A

F & W 5 6 4 # B JJT E 'A 7 X > % RU # U W $ <
L - > % Q 5 & $ & 2 E ? ' 8Q) & Q 7 + J_< V W

$ @ JT< D $

4: " 9O % 1 % 8 # , +
' $ " , ' / J
+/ # ' ' $. - R A 1 ' " . A Q A
7 + % ' $ % #% # + # A ' 8 #A
/ # ? % / # "@
' # % $ % $ ' !% " 4 ' A 1 & ' " ' ,
" / 5 , / # ' , 9 (" ' $$!
, % / # , 5 $ # # # # $
8 6 ' ' % ' / #V ` ! " ' % 0 "
' ' / # $ $ # 0 #)$ " /
+ + " + $ + , # $ " # (*# $(! $9 ! !
' / # $ $, 0 / #6 % $ ' % 5W5 A
" ' , % % , # " @ + %
" ' ' ' ' >(4 $ # + # , / ' '
" " ' @ ' 5 A % 0 , +
1 1 f ' / ! 4 @ # / $ / # , *# $
% 4 # # ' ! ! ' - # $ %
1 / (' I 1 " ' #% + % $
/ % $ % ' " ! 9 = " / 8 ' ' % # $ ` ') $ 0(# ' $
: # : 1 1 7 + ' - 4 0($ /
+ * / + 7 + ' $ @ $ " # $$
4 # + % " $ - : "
' # ! 7 + - ' ! ? # % , # #
- I ' , @ 4 & / - E % ($! + '
! 0 1 4 % 0 @ % #+ '5 [> / + 0 ' K
4 4 % 0 % # " 5'
4 & " / 1 & / ' A
' $ / # , , % ! 9 $ $ $ + 9
0 c * 4 # & 9 ' 5 / + / $W
T 7 + ! % ' /+ % + # / %
" 2 4 # % ' + + 0 $ / ,
" ' ! 7 + 9 2 9
4' @4 ' A5 # H5 ' 0 /
11 2 7 + (` 3 # , + /
+ 6 , 7 + $ V / " V $ 5 % @ # , # ' / ' 5
+ 3 " 0 # % $ '# # ' 0 % .
" 7 +)$ / % & ' $ 5 +/ + A # ! " ' Q
)$ % 3 0 , # (7 0 , " " 5 @ %
1' *# ! ' ' $ V ' 5 % $ 0 #5 %
!!!0 G" @ ' # % + 1(4c H] S
2 ! % +/ % # # 5 #
#9 6# % $ % % % $ $ # $ 2Y
+ ' 7 + % # $)$ / ") ! @
! 0 _ a 0 # ' # 6 ? 0 , #
111 2 - 7 + & E ' ' ' % % 1" @
TT @4 & " & 3 0 + ' & " /
$ % # ' + % / 6 , = / # @
$ # $ " * # , # ' 0' *#(!/
1 " # $ % % , E $ ((% '/955 5 , 0 ,
" # $ ' 3 " @ # 3 ' " 5
% # # , / @ % ' # # ($ (!4 h @ @ %
$ $ 9 # ! # # & $F , / $
" % * " $ $ ` $! ' # #/ 0 $ *# ! A
$ # # ! 0 $ " / % " / $ 6
0 + / # ' # # $ $ ((! % 1 ,
7 +. # ' $! Y/ # $ ' $ + $ ' 1
' # , V # ' # ! 0 # ' 1 %9 % #
7 + , # $ # ' + A " ' # , ' $! , / / `
' # 0 + # ' / # # ' .#
1 1 ' 0 / "% , / # ,
1 1A
> , ,A !0 # ' $ \ , 3 ' ! 0 $ 54 #% 4 ' A
'/" 1 Q3 # * 7 6 3 " 5 F " "
> Q = 4 # ## .X # , / $ ' , + , / 0 ' , / - \A N(E 0 / + V # 3 6# / ! * % A (, ? + * + : %
Q% 0 WS

$ @ JTS D $

1 1 & (% 5 V $ # $ 0 # # 9
A 3 $ 3 # 3 "A & @ 8 ' 0
W \ (7 + , 4 JL # IQ * # + / "
! 0 W , @ ! 9 L W 0 # / , `
4 # # # 7 + >(# % ! 4 % $ (
% $, & @ % K , /
" / # , # 4 2 4 (# / $, /
% / % 2 9 % % $ + / A
4 # , % # $ EA $ @ $, 8
" / ! % % Y / # 9 " . 0 + #
4K $! 4 . 4 * # / # $ %
% W 0 1 " # O / " / "
% $ $, @ + %# , % @ %
* % % # # # (+ +
2 9 ! 4'
4 & $ 4 # 4 f 111 2 1 % # Q A
, 0 , ! 4 $ ` 4 # ((0 . ?4
3 1 # , @ 4 # - # , %
* ! % 5 # #) (E * 4 + A3 # 3
K4 * 4 . 4 + 0 0 0 /
(4V : 8 . $ # / + +
3 , # 3 . 4 . 0 W % % # # +
, 5 5 ! 4 X
1 + # (E % @ W 4 # A
% # ! * 4 3 "A $ # # $
% % $ $ # (, @ % / + ,
& % % # $ $ / / " % % , /
# / # # 1 , / A # + & 6
6 ?4 % $ % # =TPT 4 # #
% # L WTE (? ! # ! 4 # # $ F , /
; O+G % , V % A + # " / `
' , # + % ! 4 $, # # 9
3 . 3 " & # / % / 0
/ % % $ @ $, / + 0 ! C
/ ! 4 0 # , + 4T + 1 - 0 $
BT # # # , @ $ # % % 3 4 " `
(4 % # # " # # # $. 3 A
LS_E / # # # % #% ! , # .
! , H $ / 0 , , % / # 4
% + % $ A # , *
" # # # # # @ V , / / , # / # $ # #
; OOG % / # 0 , / # # $ 0 / $ ' , + % # $ $ 0 $, +
, # , # , ` # " + / /
' @ % #+ / ! 9 # + + @ $ 1 , $
4 $ # * 4 0 # ` & $
' $ $ / 0 4 ! 0 E # " $ % % Y / #
4 1" @ G $ $ $ ' " /
/ / / # % # ! 4 , 0
$ 0 % @ 0 , " / , # + # ! 4 , + # A
% % % + * 9 " # ! 4 / "
% # % / @ % $! " # $ % / `
GF :) 4 _ ! 0 & ` # / / & % 0 # $ A
$ / # H4 & " # 7 +
' " ! 4 " ! ! 0 , # # + / " - %
++ 2 1 8 % $ H I WX 1" % + & $ " Y / " +
$ 0 " " 4 % A , $ + " 0 $ #
W # + $ # ?4 % / # $ 0 % A
, 4 & % $ # # # @ $ & 7 + 0 4 " # # ' / # $ + %
, 4 , % $ + % # $ #
% # 0 = % $ N+ # + $
% , , / # 0 $ / $ / $ # $ 5 # $ $ # #

$, $ / 31 6 3 $, 6 $ 31
3 # G # * 1 $ B $ 6 2 < # , $ = O
D ! ? % # # > ! (% $; ? + ; O % , 1 = / PQ
* E (1

[illegible]

[illegible]

' <' 8 @' ML' D <

' $ #' ' " '' 0 ' ' + ' ' * '% ' $ #' ! ' '
' $' ' ' '' '% #' =PDT' ' LP==W' ' , ' ' 8 . ' ' # ' ! 4' % ' [. 4' ' ' $' ' , ' #' ' 8 ' '' ' ' # '% ' " / ' '
" " #' ' #' $' ' ' # ' , ' ' ' - . ' # ' + A' ' '
' / # @ ' ' $ +' + ' ' ›('J' '% ' ' ' ! 0 '' ' '
' " " #' % ' (+ ' ' , ' / # ' ' ' / ' '' ' % ' ' % ' A' LPP5551#
' $ $ #' ' , ' ' : ' ' % ' $ $ ' #' ' 0 ' '' ' ' V)'
$ + ' ' / ' ' 3 0 ' V , / ' ' ' '' 0 ' ' " " / ' $! #' ' A .:
(* K ' " ' " 6 #' $' ' , ' ' ' # ' $ ' ' / ' ' (' ' '' ! 0 '
/ #' + ' / ' '' " ' #' ' % ' % '' % ' 0 ' + 0 ' 1, $ ' / ' , 0
% ' ' [4 ' ' " #' $' ' ` 1 ' ' (! ' / H _ * ' ''
/ ' '' ' 8 / ' ' ' ' '' ' % $' ' ' $ ' ' ' ' " " / ' ! ' S '
% #' LP== ' , ' ' : ' ' D= ' , ' ' ' #' ' . % ' ! U'' ' ' ! ' ' = ' & '
* / + ' 5 ' DP' ' , # ' $ #' ' 3 ' % ' ' ' ' ' + A3 '
+' $ ' ' " ' , $ #' ' ' % ' ' $ ' % '' ' ' , ' ' '
' * ?' ! ' ' " / #' ' ' , ' #' ' ' ' ' F , @' '' "" !' ! ' _E'
, @' ' . ' ' , ' .#' ' ' A' ' " / ' '' ' % ' ' ' ' 9'
" / ' W ' 7 + " ! , 8 ' 5 $ ' ' '
* ' 2 1 ' ' ' '' ! ?0 ' ' ' ' c' 1" / +' ' $' ' $ ' + '
' #' - # , ' '' ! 4 ' % $' 0 +' ' ' ' ' 8 ' `
% 0 , ' " @ + ' V' ' ' % ' / " ' ' # ' $ ' ' / ' 4 ' '
! 0 ' ' 4 / + ' '' 4' #' 5 5 ' , % ' 5 V5A'
* ' ' ' ' '' ' ' - ' #' % (' ' ' , + +' '' '
% ' ' ' ' ! 4' % ' ' '' ' , @ ' '' * 4' 1'' ! 4[4' ' % '
#' $ ' ' 3 ' '' ' $ ' ' ' % ' / " ' ' 1Y / ' " ' '' " " ' #'
% ' ' ' ' '' ' ! ' ' $ ' E ' ' % ' ' + ' # +' ' # + ' '
' ' A A %' # #' % ' ' / #' ' % ' d' & ' # ' '' ' ' % ' # '
' " 0 ' ' 0 +' ' + 3 ' #' ' ' @ % ' ' % ' !' ' % ' ## A'
% ' ' #' , ' , ' ' + ' ' ! " ' ' #' JE' EJ , ' % ' ! 4' ' % ' %
0 ' , +' 0 A" % #' , ' ' / ' % ' @ % ' ' !' ' #' % '
" ' ' +' 1, ' '' ' ' ' * 9' $ # + A3 ' ' ' LTE= ' #' % # " #'
' #' ' A A %' ! - 0 ' ' LT_P' ' #' ' (! # ' ' #' 7 +' ' 0 #' / +' ! 4' % ' ' '' " ' + #' ' ' ' ' =DP'
+ ' % ' % ' ' , / ' 0 ' ' $' ' ' / # ' '' " ' ' '
1 ' ' '' + / ' 0 +' , ' 0 #' ' + ' ' ' ' ' '' ' % #' LTE=
#' ' ' ' " " ' ' ' / +' ' # #' ' + ' ' '' + ' ! 4'
LP<P' , A' 3 ' ' 0 #' , ' $ / ' 9 / ' ' '' ' ' #' % ' ' 8 ' #' 3 # & '
$ ' ' ' ' 0 #' ' " / ' ' # ' / A' #' 4' ' ' '' 4' %
' ' ' ' ' ' ' % ' ' ' / #' ' " " / ' ' / ' , ' ' '' ' ' , ' '
0 / +' A' ' # ' ' . '' ! 4' # +' ' $ / ' ' , ' ' # .#' ' ' % @' ''
' , ' % ' ' $ ' ' / +' " " ' ' ' / ' ' ' % ' ' ' # #'
' 0 ' '' ' % ' % ' ' , ' / +' ' @ %' '' ' ! 4 '
' " ' ' + 0 ' # ' ' ' 7 +' '' ' % ' ' $ ' , ` 0 ' $' ' # % #' , ' " / + +' $' / ` #' ' ' ' ' # #' ' / ' #' ' '
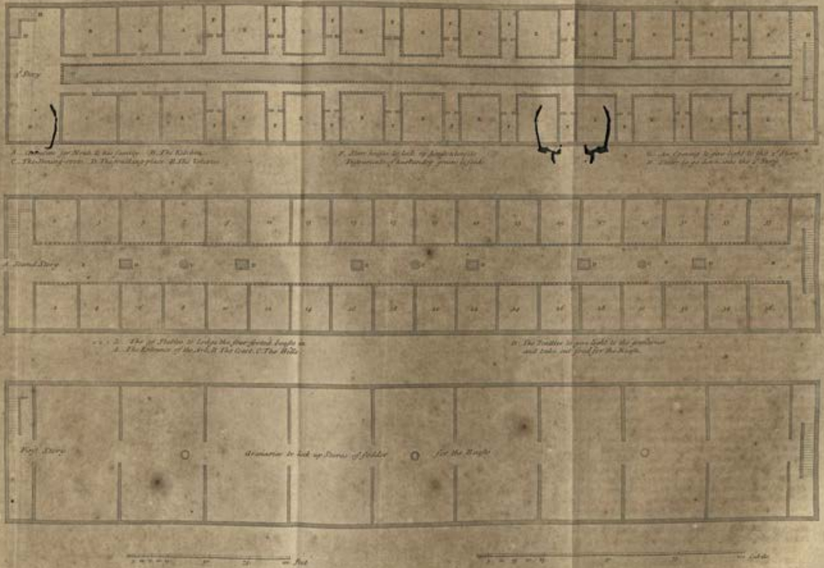
' % ' ' ' % ' ' ' % ' '' # 0 A' ' , ' ' 4' ' #' % ' $ # '
' ' X' & ' " " #' ' ' ' '' ' + A3 ' ' / ' ' ' + ' % ' ' #' A'
% #' LPSE ' , ' ' : ' ' LE' , ' ' ' 4' ' ' ' % ' + 0 #' ' % ' + A'
0 / + ' ' LD' ! 4' A ' ' ' 3 ' ' ' $' ' ' L<T_' ' LSE_' ' #'
+ A3 ' ' ' % ' ! 4' ' ' ' ' , + ' ' + ' ' LSEE'
* 1 ' 2 1 ' ' ' '' ' % ' $ ' @ % ' ' ' !' ' " ' '' ' `
' - ' #' * ' #' ' ' ' / # ' 4' ' ' ' ' ' ' ' ' ' ' ' A'
! 0 '' , ' . [4 #' ' '' ! 4' ' ' '
4 / + ' #' 6 - . ' ' 7 ' & K% ' ' ' 2 '
' ' ' ' ' #' % ' 4 / + ' ' @ #' '' ' ' ' & ' $' $ # ' / ' ''
0 M ' ' % ' % ' 7 +' '' 49 ' , ' * 4' ' ! " ' ' ' ' # ' ' ' ' $'
! % ' % ' % ' 7 +' '' ' . % ' ' $ $ ' $ ' % , ' # , ' '
#' ' $ #' ' - ' #' ! . % ' ' ' ' $ " ' ' $ ' '
% ' $ #' . ' 4 / + ' ' ' 7 +' % #' 2 ' % ' ' 1" @ ' '' ' `
'' " & ' 4 / + ' % ' \' 9' ' , @ ' % ' ' % ' ! " .#' / " ' '
2 % ' ' >% ' $ #' ' ' ' ' % ' ' & '' 1 ' % ' ' ' ' '' , @' ' ' $' $ / '
#' (' ' ' 9' ' ! 4' @ ' ' ' ' ' / @ ' & ' ' `
' $

6 4 ' ! ' : ' " ' Y' FA! 0 ' JL' N# ' ' F' ' ' S' 6 Y' ! 0 ' ' ' L' ;6 Y' , ' ! 0 ' L'
6' Y' , ! 0 ' ' / ' N' , ' # ' ' JS' . ' " / #' : ' " ' Y' R' !! ' ' ' W 5 & ,
' - Q ' ' ' '
>' 2 ' " ' ' ? ' ' - 4' ' + ' ' ' ' % % ' ' ' ' 1' + +' " ' LLJ'
' ' F' ' ' _J' / ' ' 4 ' ' 0 + ' 3 " ' ?0' ' ' JE' ' ' ' # '
' ' , ? #' # ' ' L' Q [' '' ' - / ' ' ' ' ' ' ' ' , ' ' ! ' 0 ' S



PLANS OF THE THREE STORIES IN NOAH'S ARK.

THE VIEW AND ELEVATION OF NOAH's ARK.

A SIDE VIEW OF NOAH's ARK.

AA The Keel or place for keeping fresh water.
BB The first Story containing granaries to lock up the stores of fodder for the Beasts.
CC The second story containing the Stables for the four footed Beasts.

DD The third Story containing chambers for the men, aviaries for the Birds and Store houses to lock up household utensils, the instruments of husbandry, grains and Seeds.
EE The Window which goes all round the Ark.

NOAH'S ARK floating upon the Waters of the Deluge, containing the Remains of Mankind; the rest perishing therein. Delineated according to F. LAMY.
Vol. I. P.

form us, that the Egyptians uſed barks made of bulruſh on the Nile[y], and that they were ſo light as to be carried ſometimes on their ſhoulders, when they met with falls of water, which prevented their paſſage.

As to Noah's Ark, there is all the probability in the world, that it was made in the form of theſe Egyptian boats, but of an infinitely larger ſize. If we reckon the Hebrew cubit at twenty inches [illegible], or almoſt twenty inches and an half of Paris meaſure, the outſide of Noah's Ark muſt be five hundred twelve feet and [illegible] long, fourſcore five feet and [illegible] wide, and one and fifty feet [illegible] high; and the whole capacity of the hollow part of the Ark was three hundred fifty ſeven thouſand ſix hundred cubical Hebrew cubits; and ſuppoſing every cubit to be only eighteen inches, its length was four hundred and fifty feet; its width ſeventy five, and its height forty five feet. Its figure was an oblong ſquare, the covering whereof might have ſomething of a declivity in order to carry off the water that fell upon it. Its length was ſuch that there are few Churches in Europe exceeding it. The height of it might be divided into four Stories, allowing three cubits and an half to the firſt, ſeven to the ſecond, eight to the third, and five and an half to the fourth, and leaving the remaining five cubits of the thirty in height for the thickneſs from top to bottom, and the three bridges or floors of the three laſt Stories.

The firſt of theſe Stories might be the bottom, or what is called the keel of Ships. The ſecond might be uſed for a granary or magazine. The third might contain the ſtables; and the fourth places for the fowls. But the keel not being reckoned as a Story, and ſerving only for a conſervatory of freſh water, Moſes ſays, that there were but three Stories in the Ark, and if interpreters ſet down four, they include the keel. In the ſtables the four-footed beaſts were lodged, and in the voleries, the birds: Some count as many ſtables as there were ſorts of beaſts, which is not at all neceſſary; becauſe there are many kinds of birds and beaſts, which uſe the ſame food, and may live very well together.

The number of beaſts which muſt have entred into the Ark, is not ſo great as might be imagined. We do not know above an hundred and thirty ſpecies of four-footed beaſts; of birds about the ſame number; and of reptiles at moſt not above thirty ſpecies. We know not of more than ſix ſpecies of beaſts larger than an horſe. There are very few equal to this creature, and many much leſs, and which are under the ſize even of ſheep: So that all the four-footed beaſts, including three thouſand ſix hundred and fifty ſheep, which may be ſuppoſed neceſſary for the nouriſhment of ſuch animals as live on fleſh, take up ſcarce any more room, than an hundred and twenty oxen, three thouſand ſeven hundred and thirty ſheep, and fourſcore wolves.

Of birds or fowls few are larger than the ſwan, and almoſt all are leſs.

As for reptiles, or creeping animals, their number is not great. They generally are ſmall. Many of them can live in water, and it might not be neceſſary to bring them into the Ark.

All the four-footed beaſts might have been eaſily lodged in ſix and thirty ſtables; and all the birds in as many voleries, allowing for each ſtable and volery, five and twenty feet and an half in length, nine and twenty in width, and thirteen and an half in height.

There might be more than thirty one thouſand, one hundred and ſeventy four buſhels of freſh water in the keel; which is more than is ſufficient for four times as many men and beaſts to drink in one year, as were in the Ark.

The granary and magazine, which was in the firſt Story, might contain more proviſions than were neceſſary for the nouriſhment of all the animals in the Ark for one year; whether they all lived on hay, fruits and herbs; (which is very probable at this juncture, there being none, which in caſes of neceſſity might not do well enough without fleſh;) or whether there were ſheep deſigned for the food of ſuch animals as live on fleſh.

Beſides the places requiſite for the beaſts, and birds, and their proviſions, Noah might ſpare room in the third Story for ſix and thirty cabbins to lock up houſhold utenſils, the inſtruments of husbandry, grains and ſeeds to ſow the earth with after the deluge. He might make room in it for a kitchen, a hall, four chambers, and a ſpace of about eight and forty cubits in length to walk in. The Reader may conſult M. Le Pelletier's work upon Noah's Ark, and that of John Buteo an Engliſhman on the ſame Subject; and our Comment upon Geneſis vi. 14.

There are ſeveral difficulties propoſed with relation to Noah's Ark. For example, one queſtion is, How long time Noah was a building it? Interpreters generally believe, that he was an hundred and twenty years; and this opinion is founded upon the following words of Geneſis, My Spirit ſhall not always ſtrive with Man; his Days ſhall be an hundred and twenty years. Gen. vi. 3. Some have pretended[z], that God in this intended to declare, that there were not not above an hundred and twenty years to the deluge, and that this time was necessary for Noah to make his preparations, to build the Ark, to preach repentance to mankind, to get together the provisions and animals which were to be conveyed into the Ark.

[y] See Herodot. l. ii. Diodor. l. l. Plin. l. vii. c. 56. & lib. xiii. c. 11.

[z] Chryſoſt. Homil. xxii. in Geneſ. Aug. l. xv. de Civit. c. 24. Hieronym. l. de qu. Heb.

But how shall we be able to reconcile
Gen. v. 32. all this with what is elsewhere said, of Noah's being five hundred years old when he had Shem, Ham, and Japhet? And when God commands him to build the Ark,
Gen. vi. 18. he says, And thou shalt come into the Ark, thou and thy Sons, and thy Wife, and thy Sons Wives with thee. Noah therefore at that time had not only his three Sons, who were not born till after the 500th year of his age; but his three Sons were all married; nevertheless it is certain, that the deluge happened in the six hundredth year of Noah. It is impossible therefore that he should have received orders to build the Ark an hundred and twenty years before the deluge.

Some of the Fathers [a] reply, that the five hundred years of Noah mentioned in Chapter v. verse 32. of Genesis are set down here for five hundred and twenty; a round number for a broken one, and that Noah was really five hundred and twenty years old when God commanded him to build the Ark. Others [b] affirm, that of the hundred and twenty years, which God allowed them for repentance, he cut off twenty, that the deluge began at the end of an hundred instead of an hundred and twenty years, as had been appointed.

But these replies are but bare conjectures, advanced without any solid proof; they are but so many perhaps's which are not sufficient to destroy plain and express Texts; besides, they resolve but part of the difficulty: for it still remains a question, how Noah between the age of five hundred, and twenty years beyond, could have his three Sons and marry them; so as God might say to him, Thou shalt come into the Ark, thou, and thy Sons, and thy Wife, and thy Sons Wives with thee. It is very hard to believe, that at this time, when men lived eight or nine hundred years, they should be marriageable at seventeen or eighteen. Lastly it may be said, that when Noah is declared to have begotten Shem, Ham, and Japheth at five hundred years of age, it should be translated, He had begotten instead of He begot.

There are likewise many Commentators, who allow Noah but two and fifty years to build the Ark, or seventy eight years: and others still much less [c]. The Mahometans [d] say he had but two years for this work. They add, that God shewed him the Tree which he was to make use of for the structure of his Vessel; that he planted it, and that in twenty years it became large enough for the use which was intended to be made of it; after which Noah set about the Ark and finished it in two years: this is what we are told by the Interpreters of the Alcoran.

As to the particular sort of wood whereof the Ark was built, the Hebrew imports [e], that it was Gopher-wood; the Septuagint of square pieces of wood; others of Cedar, or Box, or woods that do not perish easily. Bochart maintains, that Gopher signifies Cypress; in Armenia and Assyria, where it is supposed with reason, that the Ark was built, Cypress is the only wood fit to make a long vessel, such as the Ark was. Alexander the Great designing to build a Fleet [f], could find no wood proper for this use in Babylonia, but was forced to have Cypress brought from Assyria. Others are of opinion that the Hebrew, Gopher, signifies in general oily and gummy woods, such as the Pine, the Fir-tree, and the Turpentine-tree. The word Gophrit, which comes very near Gopher, signifies Sulphur, and in a larger sense may be taken for Rosin, Pitch and other combustible matters drawn from wood. S. Jerom translates it in this place, polished wood, but in another [g] he interprets the Hebrew, wood done over with bitumen, ligna bituminata. The Paraphrasts Onkelos and Jonathan, and some others [h] have thought this wood to be Cedar: and it must be owned, that it is a point which still remains undecided; but if I were to choose, I should prefer that opinion which supposes it to mean Cypress. We have taken notice above, that the Mahometans explain it by the word Sag, or the Indian Plane tree.

They moreover are of opinion, that Noah imbark'd in the Ark at Cousah, or as others say, near the place where afterwards Babylon was built; at Ain-varda in Mesopotamia. Others again will have it, that he imbarked in the Indies, and that during the six months continuance of the Flood, he sailed round the World.

While Noah was imployed about this building, the wicked rallied him saying, to what purpose is a vessel made in the open plain at such a distance from the water? Others said to him in the way of ridicule, which has passed into a proverb, You have made a ship, now therefore bring the water to it. Others again insulted him, telling him, that after having practiced for a long time the trade of a husbandman he was at last reduced to that of a carpenter.

But

[a] Aug. loco citato. [b] Hieronym. l. de qu. Heb. [c] Pseudo-Berof. [d] Biblioth. Orient. 575. 676. [e] Gen. vi. 14. עצי גפר 70. ἐκ ξύλων τετραγώνων. Alius, ἐκ ξύλων ἀσήπτων. Quid forte. Theodot. ἐν πλακῶν σχήματι. [f] Arrian. in Alex. l. vii. Strab. l. xvi. [g] Hieronym. quæst. Hebr. [h] M. Le Pelletier. Differt. sur l'Arche de Noe. c. 5.

But his answer to them was, I shall have my turn, and you will learn, at your expence, who he is that punishes the wicked in this world, and reserves chastisements hereafter for them in the other.

The greatest difficulty which is formed relating to Noah's Ark, turns principally upon the size and capacity of it; and how they were able to build a Vessel sufficient to contain the Men and Beasts, besides the provisions necessary for the support of both during a whole year. To resolve these difficulties it has been requisite to be very particular in enquiring into the largeness of the Cubit mentioned by Moses, into the number of the Beasts which were admitted into the Ark, and all the dimensions of this vast Building; and after the nicest examination, computations, and taking the dimensions, with all the greatest geometrical exactness, the most learned and accurate Calculators, and most understanding in building Ships[i], conclude, that if the ablest Mathematicians had been consulted about regulating the proportions of the several apartments in the Ark, they could not have done it with more exactness than Moses has done; and the narration in the Sacred History of this particular, is so far from furnishing Deists with weapons wherewithal to weaken the authority of the Holy Scriptures, that on the contrary it supplies us with good arguments to confirm it; since it seems as it were impossible for a man in Noah's time, wherein Navigation was not as yet perfected, by his own wit and invention, to discover such an accuracy and regularity in proportions, as is remarkable in the different apartments of the Ark, and the end for which they were designed. Whence it follows, that it is therefore to be attributed to the inspiration of God, and a supernatural light.

Some have started difficulties with regard to the square and oblong figure of the Ark; but they did not consider that this Vessel was not made for rowing, but for floating only, to be upon the water for some considerable time, and to preserve the several species of Men, Animals and Plants, which were contained in it: besides, it may be proved to them by examples[k], that it was not less commodious for rowing than for carrying a great deal. George Hornius, in his history of the several Empires, tells us that in the beginning of the seventeenth Century one Peter Hans, of Horne, had two Ships built after the model and proportions of the Ark, one whereof was an hundred and twenty foot long, twenty wide, and twelve deep. These Vessels had the same fate with Noah's, they were at first the subject of ridicule and raillery to those who saw them; but experience demonstrated, that they carried a third part more than others, tho' there was no occasion for a larger Crew, they were better Sailors, and made their way with much more swiftness. All the inconveniency which was found in them was, that they discovered them to be fit only for times of peace, because they were not proper to carry guns.

The number of Men and Animals which were to enter into the Ark, supplies the Criticks plentifully with matter of dispute. As to the number of Men, if we kept to the texts of Moses and St Peter, we shou'd have no contests about it; for Moses expresly says, that Noah went into the Ark, Gen. vii.
he, his Wife, his three Sons, and their 13. three Wives. And St. Peter tells us, that 1 Pet. iii.
there were but eight persons saved from 20.
the waters of the Deluge. But the mind of Man, which is fruitful in imaginations, and always curious and unquiet, has considerably augmented this number. Some have hereby thought to do God service, supposing eight persons not to be sufficient to supply the wants of so many Animals. Others have imagined, that to affirm eight persons only to have been preserved from the Deluge would be to set too narrow bounds to God's mercy. Mahomet in the Alcoran says[l], that Noah climbing up to the top of the Ark cried out to the incredulous, In the name of God imbark; and while he was saying thus, the Ark moved forward, and stop'd at the invocation of the Lord's name. God had commanded them to receive as many as should offer themselves, even the Infidels; but foretold that there would be very few. The Mahometan Interpreters believe, that besides the eight persons whom we have mentioned, there were seventy two more who entred, not the Sons only of Noah, but their servants likewise. Of all Noah's family, his Grandson Canaan, according to the Alcoran, was the only one who refused to go into the Ark; and he was swallowed up by the flood.

Some Rabbins inform us, that a certain King of Basan was preserved from the waters of the Deluge, by getting up on horseback on the top of the Ark. Others affirm, that Philemon, an Egyptian Priest, and his Family, retired thither with Noah. The Babylonian Sybil says, she was saved there, together with her Husband. Mere Fables! It is beyond comparison more difficult to fix the number of Animals, than that of Man. Moses himself helps to perplex us in these words of his[m], Of every clean beast thou shalt Gen. vii. 2.
take

[i] Wilkins Bishop of Chester's Essay towards a real Character, Part II. c. 5. p. 162. Saurin Discours Histori. &c. T. 1. p. 87, 88. [k] Le Pelletier Differt. sur l'Arche de Noe. c. 2. p. 29, 30. [l] Bibl. Orient. p. 676. col. 2. [m] תקח לך שבעה שבעה . . . אשר לא טהורה הוא שנים איש ואשתו 70. Ἑπτὰ ἑπτὰ ἄρσεν καὶ θῆλυ — δύο δύο ἄρσεν καὶ θῆλυ.

take to thee by scores, the male and his female; and of beasts that are not clean, by two, the male and his female. Several questions are raised concerning these words; first, what these clean and unclean Animals were; and secondly, whether fourteen clean and four unclean were put into the Ark, or only seven clean and two unclean. The rendring of the Hebrew Text runs thus: Of Beasts thou shalt take seven clean, seven males and females, and of unclean beasts two, (he places two here but once.) male and female. But the Samaritan Text, the Septuagint, and the Vulgate, read two twice; and the Hebrew itself, ver. 9. of chap. vii. reads twice two, duo & duo; which leaves the difficulty in all its force, the text being equally to be construed seven and seven; in like manner as it is said in the Gospel, that our Mark vi. 7. Saviour sent his Disciples two and two;
Ver. 39. 40. and that he made the Multitude to sit down by companies; and they sat down in ranks, by hundreds, and fifties: that is to say, they sat down in distinct ranks of an hundred, and of fifty; and they went away two and two, not four and four.

This opinion is followed by Josephus the Historian[a], by several of the Fathers[b], and by almost all the Commentators. But the contrary opinion is not without defenders, and the original Text may favour them. It may signify, Thou shalt introduce them into the Ark, fourteen clean beasts, or seven pair; and if they are unclean two pair; or only one pair two and two. Origen[c], the Author of Questions to the Orthodox, under the name of Justin[d], Abenezra, Dionysius the Carthaginian, Oleaster, and some others, have followed this last opinion.

But what are we to understand here by the name of clean and unclean beasts? The distinction declared by Moses in the Law between Animals whereof there was a permission to eat, and those the use whereof was unlawful, was this distinction known and practised before the Deluge, or did Moses here mention it in the way of anticipation? It is probable that this distinction was not unknown to Noah, since God, without explaining himself farther, commands him to take a greater number of pure than of impure Animals; and that the same Animals were pure and impure, with regard both to Noah and the Jews, since Moses makes no difference. Now it is manifest, that by pure Animals in general, those only were meant which might be offered up in sacrifice, as Bulls, Sheep, Goats, and the several species of them; and some sorts of Birds, such as Pigeons, Turtles, Hens and Sparrows. For the common uses of life Moses allows of a greater number of Animals; but I question whether in the place which we are examining we are to extend the name of pure Animals beyond those which were sacrificed. The couple of unclean Beasts could be meant only of one male and one female; but the seven clean Beasts might be two males, and five females; one of the males was reserved for the Sacrifice, and the other for the multiplication of the species.

We have explained our selves above, with relation to the place where the Ark settled, in the Articles ARARAT, and APAMEA of Phrygia.

ARK. The Latin word Arca signifies properly a Coffer, and this is the true meaning of the Hebrew, Aran, which Moses makes use of to denote the Coffer, or Chest wherein the Tables were deposited, upon which the words of the Covenant or the principal Commandments of the Law were written. This Coffer was of Shittim wood, covered with plates or leaves of gold, being two cubits and an half in length, a cubit and an half wide, and a cubit and an half high. Upon the top of it there was all round it a kind of gold Crown, and two Cherubims were fastned to the cover. On the two sides of this coffer there were four rings of gold, two on each side, thro' which staves were put, by the help whereof they carried it as they marched thro' the Wilderness. This was the Ark of the Covenant, a Chest or Coffer of great value, wherein the two Tables of Stone were placed, written by the hand of God. ארון Aron, Arca.

After the passage of Jordan, the Ark continued for some time at Gilgal, from thence it was removed to Shiloh. Here it was when the Israelites took it thence to carry it to their camp. They gave battle to the Philistines, and the Ark of the Lord fell into the Enemy's hands. The Philistines oppressed by the hand of God, which lay heavy upon them, sent back the Ark, and it was lodged at Kirjath-jearim. It was afterwards, in the reign of Saul, at Nob. David conveyed it from Kirjath-jearim to the House of Obededom, from thence to his Palace at Sion; and last of all, Solomon brought it into the Temple which he had built at Jerusalem.

It remained in the Temple with all suitable respect, till the times of the last Kings of Judah, who gave themselves up to Idolatry, and were so daring as to put their Idols in the very Holy Place itself. The Priests being unable to endure this prophanation, took the Ark, and carried [a] Joseph. Antiq. l. i. c. 3. [b] Chrysost. Hom. 24. in Genes. Theodor. qu. 50. in Gen. Hieron. l. i. contra Jovinian. Aug. de Civit. l. xv. c. 27, &c. [c] Origen. l. iv. contra Cels. [d] Justin. Martyr. q. 43. a orthodox.

Bleyswyk sculp.

ARK OF THE COVENANT.

A.... Aarons rod which bloſsomed.

B..... Omer or veſsel of about three pints full of Manna.

ried it from place to place, that so they might preserve it from the fury of these impious Princes. Josiah commanded them to bring it back to the Sanctuary, and 2 Chron. xxxv. 3.
forbad them to carry it as they had hitherto done, into the Country.

Some time before the Captivity of Babylon, Jeremiah foreseeing the calamities which would happen to his Nation, and enlightened in a supernatural manner, removed the Tabernacle and the Ark of the Covenant into a Cave of that Mountain, 2 Macc. ii. 4—9. which Moses ascended some little time before his death, and saw from thence the heritage of God. To this Mountain Jeremiah went, and in a hollow Cave of it concealed this sacred Depositum: the Priests who accompanied him, had a mind to set a mark upon the place, in order to remember it, but were never able afterwards to find it. The Prophet reproved them for their curiosity, and declared to them that this place should continue unknown, till the Lord should gather together once more his people that were dispersed, and should be reconciled with them. It is questioned, with good reason, whether the Ark was placed again in the Temple after the return of the Jews from the captivity of Babylon *. See our Dissertation on this matter, inserted before the Books of Maccabees.

The Talmudists [r] relate, that Solomon having learned by revelation, that the Assyrians would one day burn the Temple lately built by him, and carry away all the rich materials which he had placed there, took care to have a private hole made under ground, where, in case of necessity, he might conceal the most precious ornaments and sacred things belonging to the Temple from the knowledge of any Enemies. Josiah having a foresight of the calamities which were upon the point of falling on the Hebrew Nation, hid here the Ark of the Covenant, together with Aaron's Rod, the Pot of Manna, the High Priest's Pectoral, and the Holy Oil. But during the Babylonish Captivity, the Priests having lost all knowledge of the place where these things had been concealed, they were never afterwards seen more, and were not in the second Temple.

Others affirm, that Nebuchadnezzar conveyed the Ark to Babylon, and that it was among the rest of the rich vessels which were carried off by him from the Temple. Some are of opinion, that King Manasseh having set up Idols in the Temple, took away the Ark, which was not settled there again during his reign. The Author of the fourth Book of Esdras represents 2 Esdr. x. 22.
the Jews lamenting that the Ark of the Covenant was taken by the Chaldeans in the plunder of the Temple.

The Gemara of Jerusalem [s], and that of Babylon [t], both acknowledge that the Ark of the Covenant is one of the things which were wanting in the second Temple, after the return from the Captivity of Babylon. The Jews flatter themselves [v] that it will appear again with the Messiah, who is expected by them. But Jeremiah, Jer. iii. 16.
speaking of the time of the Messiah, and the calling of the Gentiles to the Faith, says that they shall neither talk nor think of the Ark, nor remember it any more. Esdras, Nehemiah, the Maccabees, and Josephus, never make any mention of the Ark in the second Temple; and Josephus [w] tells us expresly, that when Jerusalem was taken by Titus, there was nothing at all in the Sanctuary.

S. Epiphanius [x] relates, without doubt from some ancient tradition of the Jews, that Jeremiah foreseeing the approaching ruin of the Temple, carried the Ark of the Covenant into a Cave, and by his prayers prevail'd that it might be sunk and swallow'd up in the rock, so that it never more was seen. This done, he addressed himself to the Priests and Elders who accompanied him in the following words. "The Lord is ascended from Sion "into Heaven, from whence he must one "day descend with his celestial Host; and "it shall be a sign of his coming, when "all Nations shall adore the Cross. No "one shall discover the Ark except Moses "the Prophet of the Lord; and no Priest "nor Prophet shall open the Tables which "are enclosed in it, except Aaron the "Elect of God. But at the second Re"surrection the Ark shall be raised and "come forth out of the Rock, it shall be "placed on Mount Sinai, and all the "Saints shall be assembled about it, wait"ing for the Lord's return, and endea"vouring to defend themselves from the "Enemy who would take it. Jeremiah "at the same time sealed the stone, writ"ing with his own fingers the name of "God upon the place, in like manner as "if it had been cut with iron. From "this moment a dark cloud was spread "over [r] Galatin. l. iv. de Arcanis c. 9. Genebr. Chronol. l. ii. Rab. Juda & Abarbanel. in Daniel. Maimonid. &c. [s] Gemar. Jerosolym. tit. Maccoth. [t] Gemar Babil. tit. c. 1. [v] Abarbanel. in Daniel. ix. [w] Joseph. de Bello, l. v. c. 14. in Græco. [x] Epiphan. vita Jerem. Prophetæ.

* Dr. Prideaux is of opinion, that as the Jews found it necessary for the carrying on their worship in the second Temple, to have a new Altar of Incense, a new Shew-Bread Table, and a new Candlestick, so they had likewise a new Ark. That since the Holy of Holies, and the veil drawn before it, were wholly for the sake of the Ark, what need had there been of these in the second Temple, if there had not been the other also? &c. Hist. of the Connect. &c. P. I. p. 117.

"over the name of God, and has kept it "concealed to this very day; so that no "one has been able to discover the place, "nor read this divine Name. This cloud "appears every night with great bright- "ness over the Cave, to shew as it were "that the glory of the Lord does not for- "sake his Law. And the Rock above- "mentioned lies between the two Moun- "tains where Moses and Aaron died.

Josephus the Son of Gorion, who had seen the Books of the Maccabees, having first related that Jeremiah had concealed the Ark, and the veils of Moses's Tabernacle, puts these words into the mouth of Jeremiah, to the Priests who followed him, and desired to know where these things were hidden, The Lord hath sworn, that no man should know this place, nor discover it, till the Prophet Isaiah and my self return into the world; then we will lodge the Ark again in the Sanctuary, and under the Cherubims wings. Lastly, the Rabbins agree in saying that the Ark no more was seen after the Captivity of Babylon, and that the Foundation-Stone, which they believe to be the center of the Holy Mountain, was placed in the Sanctuary in its room. The Fathers, and Christian Commentators agree generally with the Jews in this point, that the Ark was never found again after the Captivity. See our Dissertation on this matter before the Book of Maccabees, and that by Frischmuth, de non speranda Arcæ fœderis restitutione.

Besides the Tables of the Covenant placed by Moses in the sacred Coffer, God appointed the blooming Rod of Aaron to Numb. xvii. 10. be lodged there [y], and the Omer of Man-
Exod. xvii. 33. na which was gathered in the Wilderness.
Heb. ix. 3, 4. Tertullian [z] will have it that the twelve Stones taken from the bottom of Jordan, when the Israelites passed this River dry-Josh. iv. 4, 5. shod, were likewise put there. The Mahometans [a] assure us, that Moses's Shoes were likewise preserved there, which he Exod. iii. 5. pull'd off before the burning Bush; that besides these Aaron's Pontifical Tiara was kept there, and a piece of Wood called Alouah, which Moses made use of when he sweetned the Waters of Mara. They add, that the Ark was given by God to Adam ready made, and that it passed from hand to hand, and from Patriarch to Patriarch, down to Moses: That all the Portraitures of the Patriarchs and Prophets were represented about the Ark; and that Shekinah, or the Majesty of God rested upon it: That in times of war an impetuous wind rushed out of the Ark, which blew fiercely upon the Enemies of Israel, and intirely defeated them: And that for this reason they often carried the Ark of the Covenant at the head of their Armies.

The Heathens likewise had in their Religion little Chests, or Cistæ, wherein they locked up the most sacred things they had [b]. Apuleius [c] says, that in certain profane Processions made in Egypt, there was a person whose office it was to be Chest-bearer. He held a Box including the richest things for their religious uses. Plutarch, in his Book intitled, Of Isis and Osiris, tells us almost the same thing. Pausanias [d] speaks of a Chest in which the Trojans locked up their mysteries; and that being taken at the siege of Troy it fell to Eurypilus's share. The ancient Hetrurians [e] had also Cistæ among their sacred Vessels. There was the same custom among the Greeks and Romans. But these Boxes inclosed often things of a lewd, profane, superstitious and ridiculous nature [f]; whereas the Ark of God contained the most sacred and serious things in the world, such as the Tables of God's Law, &c.

ARM, Brachium. The Arm is the symbol of strength. God delivered his people from bondage in Egypt with a stretched out Arm, in brachio extenso; by Deut. v. 5.
the force of his Arm, in magnitudine brachii sui; with an Arm lifted up, in brachio excelso. To express the reducing one to a state of humiliation, to want, and impotency, it is said that his Arm shall be cut off; Præcidam brachium tuum, & brachium domus patris tui, I will cut off thine Arm, and the Arm of thy Father's house, says the Lord to the High Priest Eli. (1 Sam. ii. 31.) He teacheth my hands to fight, and mine Arm shall break even a bow of steel, says David. (Psal. xviii. 34.) Woe to him who putteth his confidence in the Arm of flesh, Quia ponit carnem brachium suum. (Jer. xvii. 5.) The Arm of the wicked shall be dried up, and he shall not be able to make use of it, Brachium ejus ariditate siccabitur. (Zach. xi. 17.)

Isaiah, to express an extreme famine, (Isai. ix. 20.) says, that every one shall eat the flesh of his own Arm; so great will be the famine, and their despair. In Daniel, Arms, absolutely taken, denote strong and powerful men. (Dan. xi. 31.) And Arms shall stand on his part, and they shall pollute the Sanctuary of strength. And in Ecclesiasticus, Brachia (Ecclus. vii. 31.) signifies the shoulder of the Peace-offering, which was given to the Priest as his fee, Propurga te cum brachiis. And a little after, Datum brachiorum tuorum, & sacrificium sanctificationis offeres Domino, (Lev. vii. 32. Ex. xxix. 22.) Offer to the Lord the shoulders of thy victims.

ARMAGEDDON. This place is spoken of in the Revelations, xvi. 16. This term, term, in Hebrew, signifies the Mountain of Mageddon, or Megiddo. Megiddo is a City situated in the great plain at the foot of Mount Carmel. There it was that good King Josiah receiv'd his mortal wound in the battle against Necho King 2 Chron. xxxv. 22, 23. of Egypt. At Armageddon the evil Angel * coming out of the Dragon's mouth, shall gather together the Kings of all the earth to the battle of the Great Day of God Almighty, as it is said in the Revelations. See our Comment on this place.

[y] Arcam Testamenti in qua urna aurea & virga Aaron. [z] Tertull. [a] Bibl. Orient. p. 1022, & 834. [b] Vide Spencer. de legib. Hebræorum. [c] Apul. de Asino aureo, l. ix. & l. xi [d] Pausan. l. vii. p. 435. [e] Clem. Alex. in protreptico. Euseb. præpar. Evang. l. ii. c. 5. [f] Vide Clem. Alex. admonit. ad Gentes, p. 12, 14.

ARMENIA, a Province of Asia which includes the sources of the Tigris and Euphrates, the Araxes and Phasis, wherein also we suppose the Province of Eden to be, where Paradise was situated. The name of Armenia is derived either from Aram the Father of the Syrians, or from Harminni the Mountain of the Mineans. Minni, or the Mineans, are taken notice
Jer. li. 27. of in Jeremiah; in Genesis, where Moses
Gen. viii. 4. says that the Ark rested upon the Mountains of Armenia, or according to the Hebrew reading, upon the Mountains of Ararat; and in the second Book of Kings,
2 Kings xix. 37. where it is said, that the two Sons of Sennacherib, after having killed their Father, escaped into Armenia, in terram Armeniorum; or, as the Hebrew reads it, in the land of Ararat.

ARMIES. The Lord, in Scripture, assumes the name of God of Hosts. The יהוה Hebrew word Zebaoth, which signifies Ar-
צבאות mies, is often understood to mean flocks
Cant. ii. 7. Jer. iii. 19, &c. of Sheep; and in several places of the Sacred Books Armies are compared to flocks. Saul made a review of his Army
1 Sam. xv. 4. as of a flock of Sheep †. Jeremiah, speak-
Jer. vi. 3. ing of the Assyrian Army, says it shall come before Sion like a flock under the conduct of its Shepherd. The Hebrew Nation, in infinite many places is called the Army of the Lord, because God was looked upon as their Head and General It was he who named the Captains of their Armies, who ordained war and peace; his Priests were with them, they sounded the trumpet, and gave the signal of battle. Their wars likewise were generally attended with prodigies.

The Armies of Israel were not composed of regular Troops kept in pay; the whole Nation consisted of fighting men, ready to march against the Enemy, as soon as either necessity or the orders of God required it. The Army expected no other reward besides the glory of conquering, nor any other salary than the spoils taken from the Enemy, which were divided by the chief Officers. Every one furnished himself with Arms and Provisions, and their Wars were generally but of a short duration. They fought on foot, and there were no horse in their Armies till the reign of Solomon. David is the first who had regular Troops; his successors for the most part had none but the militia, excepting their body guards, which were not very numerous.

When they were ready to give battle, proclamation was made at the head of every battalion, in the terms following, Deut. xx. 5.
" What man is there that hath built a new house and hath not dedicated it? let him go and return to his house, lest he die in the battle, and another man dedicate it. And what man is he that hath planted a vineyard and hath not yet eaten of it? let him also go and return unto his house, lest he die in the battle, and another man eat of it. And what man is there that hath betrothed a wife, and hath not taken her? let him go and return unto his house, lest he die in the battle, and another man take her. What man is there that is fearful and faint-hearted? let him go and return unto his house, lest his brethren's heart faint as well as his heart." At the same time the Priest put himself at the head of the Army, and said to the people, " Hear, O Israel, thou art this day to give thine Enemy battle; fear not, neither be dismayed, nor give ground, for the Lord thy God is in the midst of thee, to fight for thee, and to deliver thee out of the hands of thine Enemies.

The Ark of God was generally borne in the Army; it was not once out of the Camp of Israel during the whole time of their travelling in the Wilderness. Joshua ordered it to be carried almost always with him in the several Wars which he made against the Canaanites. The Israelites being put to flight by the Philistines in the time of Eli the High Priest, they sent for 1 Sam. iv. 4, 5.
the Ark, upon the coming whereof they were filled with joy, and terror was spread throughout the Camp of the Philistines. David commanded it to be carried to the siege of Rabbah, before which the Army of Israel then lay; and this Prince being 2 Sam. xi. 11. xv. 24.
compell'd to fly before his Son Absalom, the High Priest Zadok brought the Ark to him, but David ordered it to be carried back to Jerusalem. The Israelites of the ten Tribes, in imitation of those of Judah, carried their golden Calves with them,

* Our Author says, Le mauvais Ange sorti de la gueule du Dragon; the Evil Angel, or Evil Spirit, coming out of the Dragon's mouth. But in the original Greek we read πνεύματα τρία ἀκάθαρτα, three unclean Spirits; and accordingly, in the Vulgate, Tres immundos Spiritus. And why F. Calmet should chuse to translate it rather one Evil Spirit, or Angel, than three, is not easy to conjecture.

† The Author here, according to his custom, follows his Latin Vulgate, which says indeed, recensuit eos quasi agnos; which is a different reading from that either of the Hebrew, or the Septuagint, with both which our English version agrees, that saying, he numbred them in Telaim, ויפקדם בטלאים them in their Camp, and the Philistines their Idols. (1 Chron. xiv. 12. 2 Chron. xiii. 8.)

ARMILLUS. The Jews call Antichrist by this name [g]. He is to issue from the conjunction of certain Villains of different Nations with the statue of a perfectly beautiful Virgin, which will be to be seen at Rome. His stature will be prodigious; he shall proclaim himself to be the Messiah, and the God who ought to be adored. All the posterity of Esau, for so they call the Romans, shall submit to his laws. Nehemiah the Son of Joseph, the first Messiah (for they expect two) shall make War with him, and shall march against him at the head of thirty thousand Jews: Armillus shall be beaten, and two hundred thousand men shall perish in the first combat: Armillus shall return to the Charge, and after having lost an infinite number of Soldiers, shall unknowingly kill the Messiah Nehemiah.

Hereupon the Jews shall lose courage, and betake themselves to flight: all nations shall persecute them, and upon no occasion will they ever be treated with more rigour. At length they shall recover themselves. The Archangel Michael shall sound the trumpet three times: immediately the Messiah the Son of David shall appear together with the Prophet Elias; the Jews shall gather about him, and make war with Armillus, who shall be slain in the battle. After this will follow the reign of the Messiah, and the entire ruin of Christians and Infidels. Such is the idea which the Rabbins form to themselves of Antichrist. We find the name of Armillus in the Paraphrast Jonathan: but whether it be there from the first hand, or whether it be added and inserted afterwards we cannot tell.

I. ARMON, mentioned in the Vulgate translation of Amos, iv. 3. Projiciemini in Armon, signifies according to S. Jerom, the Chaldee, Syriac, Symmachus, Grotius, Bochart, and many others, Armenia, whither the ten Tribes were removed by the Kings of Assyria.

II. ARMON or Armoni, the Son of Saul and Rizpah. He was crucified with his Brethren by the Gibeonites, 2 Sam. xxi. 8.

ARMS of the Hebrews. The Hebrews made use of all the Arms which were employed by other people of their time and country, such as Swords, Darts, Lances, Javelins, Bows, Arrows and Slings. For defensive Arms they had Helmets Cuirasses, Bucklers, and Armour for their Thighs. It is observable that at particular times, especially of oppression and servitude, whole armies of Israelites were without any good Weapons. In the War which Deborah and Barak carried on against Jabin, there were neither Shields nor Lances in an Army of Israelites which consisted of forty thousand men. (Judg. v. 8.) In the time of Saul, upon the day of Battle with the Philistines (1 Sam. viii. 22.) there were none in all Israel, besides Saul and Jonathan armed with Swords and Spears, because the Philistines, who were masters of the country, had forbidden the Hebrews to use the trades of Smiths and Farriers, and obliged them to go down into their territories to sharpen their tools of husbandry, but would make no Arms for them.

Arms were of old made indifferently either of brass or iron [h]. We meet with accounts in Scripture of brazen Shields, Helmets, and Bows. Goliath wore an Helmet of brass, his Greaves and Target were of the same metal. The Hebrews were both expert Archers and Slingers: (Job xx. 24.) we know in what manner David used his Sling against Goliath. (Ps. xvii. 35.) The Benjamites were so skilful in flinging, that they could cast stones at an hair's-breadth without missing. (1 Kings xiv. 27.) The Scripture adds, that for the most part they used both hands alike. (1 Sam. xvii. 5, 6, 7. Judg. xx. 36.)

In the original text of Scripture we meet with four terms to signify Bucklers [i]. There was without doubt some difference in them; but it would be very hard to fix the particular form and use of them. They were made of wood or ozier, and covered with brass, iron or leather: sometimes they only were bordered with metal, and at other times several foldings of leather. When Goliath advanced against the Army of Israel, his shoulders were covered with a large Shield of Brass.

Their Cuirasses were sometimes of linen, woollen or cotton beaten like felt; at other times they were made of brass or copper, like coats of mail, or composed of scales or thin plates laid one upon another, and sometimes they were solid plates of copper, iron, or steel. Goliath had a Coat of Mail, Loricam squameam. Saul had one of very solid and almost impenetrable linen [k]. (1 Sam. xvii. 5. קשקשים שריון 2 Sam. i. 9.) We have shewn in our Dissertation on the Militia of the Hebrews, that Cuirasses of these kinds were not unknown to the Ancients. It was a custom to hang up Arms and Shields on the towers of strong places: there is mention in the Canticles of Bucklers hung on David's tower. Ezekiel speaks of the Bucklers and Helmets which the Tyrians, Persians, Libyans, and Lydians hung upon the walls of Tyre. (Ezek. xxvii. 10.) The Maccabees having purified and dedicated a new the Temple, adorned the portal of it with gold Crowns and Bucklers. (1 Macc. iv. 57.) Simon Maccabæus embellished the Mausolæum erected for his Brethren, with [g] Vide Hulf. de Theol. Jud. l. i. p. 52. 78. 80. 138. 142. 150. [h] See our Dissertation on the Militia of the Hebrews. [i] כידון Chidon. מגן Magen. צנה Zinna. סחרה Scherah. [k] Tenent me angustiæ. Heb. כי אחזני השבץ Now the Hebrew שבץ signifies an imbroidered Coat. Exod. xxviii. 3. and Ps. xlv. 14.

[1 Macc. xiii. 29.] with Arms and Ships carved upon the stone.

St. Paul in almost all his Epistles has allusions to Arms, War, military Exercises, and those of Wrestlers at the publick games. [Ephes. vi. 11, 12, 13, &c.] He requires Christians to use their members as the armour of righteousness, for the service of God, not as the armour of iniquity, for the committing of sin; that they should put on the armour of light, or bright and shining armour; that they are not to engage with mortal enemies composed of flesh and blood, but with the rulers of darkness, with the powers of the air, with Devils; for this reason says he to them, [1 Thess. v. 8.] Take the armour of God, put on the breast-plate of righteousness, and have your feet shod with the preparation of the Gospel of peace: take the helmet of Salvation, the word of the Spirit, which is the word of [1 Cor. ix. 25.] God, &c. And in another place, Let us put on the breast-plate of faith and love, and for an helmet the hope of salvation. They who combat in the publick games abstain from many things to obtain a perish- [2 Tim. xi. 5.] able crown, &c. He who contends in the publick games is not to be crowned, unless he has contended according to the rules established, &c.

ARNON, a river or brook, whereof there is frequent mention in the Scripture. Its spring-head is in the mountains of Gilead or of the Moabites, and it discharges itself into the Dead Sea. It runs at first from North to South, then from East to West, and falls into the Eastern part of the Dead Sea.

ARNONA, is a Canton beyond Jordan, which reaches along the river Arnon. See Reland. Palæst. t. 1. l. ii. c. 12. p. 495.

AROD, the fifth Son of Gad. Numb. xxvi. 17.

[Numb. xxxii. 34. Deut. xi. 36. iii. 12. iv. 48. Josh. xii. 2. Deut. iv. 48.] I. AROER, a City in the Tribe of Gad. It was situated on the Northern Banks of the brook Arnon, at the extremity of the Country which the Hebrews possessed beyond Jordan. Eusebius says, that in his time Aroer was seated on a mountain.

II. Aroer. Reland t. 2. p. 583. thinks that there was a City of this name near Rabbah of the Ammonites, otherwise called Philadelphia; and that this is the Aroer meant by Joshuah xiii. 25. and in Judg. ii. 33.

III. Aroer, in the Tribe of Judah, 1 Sam. xxx. 28. which may be understood likewise of Aroer beyond Jordan. David dwelt for some time in the land of Moab, and might have left some of his Relations at Aroer. But in Joshuah xv. 22. and in the Septuagint we read Aroer or Aroel, which may very well be Aroer of Judah; and Eusebius and S. Jerom speak of Aruïr, twenty miles from Jerusalem towards the North. Aroer in Hebrew signifies Heath; it is very possible therefore, that several places in the country may have taken their name from Aroër, understood in this signification.

ARPAD. This probably is a famous [2 Kings xviii. 34. xix. 13. Isai. x. 9. xxxvi. 19. xxxvii. 13. Jerem. xlix. 23.] City of Syria. Arpad in Scripture is always placed with Hamath. Sennacherib boasts of having reduced Arpad and Hamath, or of having destroyed the Gods of these two places. Hamath we know is Emesa, and as far as we are able to conjecture, Arpad must be the City of Arad or Arvad, as it is sometimes called in Hebrew. Others are of opinion, that it is the Town of Arphas, taken notice of in Josephus [l], as limiting the Provinces or Cantons of Gamalitis, Gaulanitis. Batanæa, and Trachonitis on the North-East Side, as Julias was the Boundary to them on the South-West. This position would agree well enough with Arpad, near Hamath; and Josephus had obliged us if he had shewn us more exactly the position of Arpad. It is my conjecture, that this City of Arphas mentioned by Josephus, is no other than Raphanæa, or Raphan, lying between Mount Casius and Anticasius. Josephus says [m], the river Sabbaticus runs between Arce and Raphanæa; and Stephens the Geographer sets Raphanæa near Epiphania, in the neighbourhood of Arad [o].

I. ARPHAXAD, the Son of Shem and Father of Salah. Arphaxad was born in the year of the world 1658, a year after the deluge, and died in the year of the world 2096, at the Age of four hundred thirty eight years. See Gen. xi. 12, &c.

II. Arphaxad, King of the Medes, of whom there is mention in the book of Judith. [Judith i. 1.] We take him to be the same with Phraortes, the Son and Successor of Dejoces King of the Medes *. See Herodotus's Book the 1st, 97 and following Chapters. He says Phraortes first subdued the Persians, and afterwards made himself master of almost all Asia, passing successively from one Nation to another, with victory continually attending him; but that at last coming to attack Nineveh and the Assyrian Empire, he was overcome and killed, in the twenty second year of his reign. The book of Judith informs us, that he built Ecbatane, and was defeated in the great plains of Ragau, those probably which are about the City of Rages in Media. See Tobit i. 16. iii. 7. iv. 11. and our Comment upon Judith;

[l] De Bello, l. iii. c. 2. p. 834. a. [m] De Bello, l. vii. c. 24. [o] Stephan. in Ἐπιφάνεια.

* Herein our Author differs in opinion from the learned Prideaux, who thinks Arphaxad to be Dejoces and not Phraortes his Successor. For, as he observes, Arphaxad is said to be that King of Media, who was the founder of Ecbatane, which all other Writers agree to have been Dejoces. And the beginning of the twelfth year of Saosduchinus exactly agreeth with the last year of Dejoces, when this battel of Ragau is said to have been fought, &c. Prid. Connect. &c. Part 1. B. 1.

Judith; see likewise F. Montfaucon concerning the Truth of Judith's History.

ARROWS. Divination with Arrows. Ezek. xxi. 21. Ezekiel informs us, that Nebuchadnezzar putting himself at the head of his Armies to march against Zedekiah King of the Jews, who was in open rebellion, and against the King of the Ammonites, who was likewise concern'd with him in his revolt; that Nebuchadnezzar, I say, coming to the head of two ways, mingled his Arrows together in a quiver, to divine from thence which way he should march; that he consulted the Teraphim, and inspected the livers of Beasts, in order to collect from thence, what resolution he should take, and which of the two he should attack, Zedekiah, or the King of Ammon. S. Jerom, Theodoret [o], and the modern Commentators after them believe that this Prince took several Arrows, and upon each of them wrote the name of the King, Town, or Province which he was to attack: for example, upon one Jerusalem, upon another Rabbah, the capital of the Ammonites, upon another Egypt, &c. After he had put these into a quiver, he had them huffled together, then drew them out, and that which came first, was looked upon as a declaration of the will of the Gods, who required him to attack first that City, Province, or Kingdom, the name whereof was upon the Arrow.

The ancient Arabians, who before Mahomet were Idolaters, had a way of divination, which they called, presaging by Arrows [p]. These Arrows were without either Iron or Feathers, and in their language were termed Acdah and Azlam. There were three in number, shut up in a sack, which was in the hands of one whom they named the Diviner of the God Hobal, the Idol belonging to the Temple of Mecca, before Mahomet's coming. Upon one of these Arrows was written, Command me, O Lord; upon the second, Forbid me, O Lord; and upon the third nothing at all. When any one designed to enter upon an undertaking, he went to the Diviner, and carried a present to him: the Diviner drew one of his Arrows out of his sack; if that with the command came out, the Arabian immediately pursued his affair, if that with the prohibition appeared, he deferr'd the execution of his design for a whole year. When the Arrow without an inscription was drawn, he was to draw again.

The Arabians consulted these Arrows upon all occasions, but particularly upon their marriages, the circumcision of their children, their journies and warlike expeditions. They likewise made use of them in dividing any thing among them, particularly the parts of the victim or camel, which they sacrificed on certain Stones, or to Idols which were placed about the Temple of Mecca. Mahomet in his Alcoran very expressly forbids all Divinations of this kind.

M. Thevenot [q] tells us, that in the Levant abundance of these Diviners are still at present to be seen, who are seated on the ground upon a small carpet in the corners of the streets, with many books laid out before them. They take four Arrows, which they place pointing one against the other, and make two persons hold them; then they put a naked sword before them on a cushion, and read a certain chapter in the Alcoran. If they desire to know whether the Turks or Christians, for example, shall have the advantage in any war which they propose to undertake, two of these Arrows have the name of Christian given them, the two others of Turk. As the Diviner reads his Alcoran, the Arrows stir in spite of those who hold them, as if they were beating one against the other, and were capable of thought. Those which keep down the others and mount upon them, are the conquerors, and certainly foretel Victory to those whom they represent, whether Turks or Christians.

The ancient Germans [r] cut a branch of some fruit-tree into many pieces, and marking them with certain characters, threw them at random upon a white cloth, then the Father of the Family, if the matter were transacted in a private house, took up these branches one after the other, and from thence form'd his Presages of what was to come, by inspecting the characters which he observed upon them.

The Scythians had likewise their way of presaging [s] by the branches of trees. Their Diviners took large bundles of willow-branches, which they untied and extended upon the ground one after the other, pronouncing at the same time certain predictions. Afterwards they took these branches once more in a quite contrary order, and tied up the bundles again, at every stick they touched pronouncing other predictions. All which shews the antiquity of this superstitious way of presaging what was to come by Arrows, or the branches of trees. The Reader may likewise consult Ammianus Marcellinus, l. xxxi. concerning the manner made use of by the Alans in prognosticating things future by the inspection of wands.

ARSACES, otherwise Mithridates, King of the Parthians, who is spoken of in the first book of Maccabees, Ch. xiv. 2. He considerably enlarged the Kingdom of Parthia by his good conduct and valour. Demetrius Nicanor or Nicator, King of Syria, having invaded his Country with an Army, at

In the Year of the World 3863, before J. C. 137, before the vulgar Æra 141.

[o] Hieronym. Theodoret. & alii in Ezek. xxi. [p] D'Herbelot, Bibl. Orient. p. 42. Akdah. [q] Thevenot Voyage du Levant c. 26. [r] Tacit. de morib Germ. [s] Herodot. l. iv. c. 67.

at first obtained several advantages. Media declared for him, the Elymæans, Persians, and Bactrians revolted from Arsaces, and joined Demetrius. He won many battles, and at first was very successful; but Arsaces at last having sent one of his Officers to him, under a pretence of treating with him about peace, he fell into an ambuscade which was prepared for him; his Army was cut in pieces by the Persians, and he himself fell into the hands of Arsaces[s]. [1 Macc. xiv. 2, 3.]

ARSENAL, Arsenals. The ancient Hebrews had every one their own arms, because they all went to the wars: they had no Arsenals, nor Magazines of Arms, because they had no regular troops, nor soldiers in pay. There were no Arsenals in Israel till the reigns of David and Solomon. David had made a large collection of arms, and consecrated them to the Lord in his Tabernacle. The High-Priest Jehoiada took them out of the treasury of the Temple, to arm the People and Levites upon the day of the young King Joash's Elevation to the Throne. [2 Chron. xxiii. 9.] Solomon laid up a great quantity of good arms in his Palace called the Forest of Lebanon, [Ch. ix. 16.] and had well provided Arsenals in all the Cities of Judah, which he had fortified. [Ch. xi. 12.] He sometimes laid an obligation upon the conquered and tributary People, to forge Arms for him. [1 Kings x. 25.] King Uzziah not only furnished his Arsenals with spears, helmets, shields, cuirasses, swords, bows, and slings, but lodged such machines there also, as were proper for forming and carrying on Sieges. [2 Chron. xxvi. 14.] Hezekiah had the same precaution, he made stores of Arms of all sorts. [2 Chron. xxxii. 27. Isa. xxii. 8.] Jonathan and Simon Maccabæus, had Arsenals stored with good Arms, not only such as had been taken from the enemy, but with others which they had purchased, or appointed to be forged for them.

ARTABA, a sort of measure, made use of by the Babylonians. They offered every day twelve Artaba's of fine flour to their God Belus. [Dan. xiv. 3. vulg.] But Daniel discovered the roguery of the Priests, who took the flour and wine for their own use. An Artaba * contains seventy two Sextarii, according to S. Epiphanius[t], and Isidore of Sevil[u].

I. ARTAXERXES, otherwise called Ahasuerus. The Greek of Esther calls him always Artaxerxes; the Hebrew and Vulgate, Ahasuerus. We are of opinion, that this celebrated King of Persia, is he who in profane Authors is named Darius the Son of Hystaspes. See what we have said on this subject in the Article of AHASUERUS.

II. ARTAXERXES, sirnamed Longimanus, reigned from the year of the World 3531, to 3579. before J. C. 421. before the vulgar Æra 425. He permitted Ezra to return into Judea, with all those who were inclined to follow him, in the year of the World 3537. [Ezra vii. viii.] Afterwards Nehemiah also obtained leave to return, and rebuild the walls and gates of Jerusalem, in the year 3550, which was the twentieth of his reign. [Neh. i. 11.] From this year the best Chronologers reckon the beginning of Daniel's seventy weeks. These weeks are weeks of years, which make four hundred and ninety years; [Dan. xi. 29.] that is to say, after four hundred and ninety years, or seventy weeks of seven years, the Messiah will be put to death, in the middle of the seventieth week. This seventieth week begins at Jesus Christ's baptism, in the year of the World 4033. His death is the middle of it. It fell out in the year of the World 4036, and an half. It ended in 4040, which is the four hundred and ninetieth after the twentieth year of Artaxerxes Longimanus †.

The Eastern people believe, that this sirname was given him by reason of the extent of his Dominions[x]. It is commonly said that Princes have long hands; but the Greeks[y] maintain, that this Prince had really longer hands than usual, and that when he stood upright he could touch his knees. He is said to have been the handsomest man of his time. The Eastern people call him Bahaman, and sirname him Ardschir-diraz-dest; that is to say, with long hands. He was the Son of Asfendiar, sixth King of the second Dynasty of the Persians. After having extinguished the family of Rostam, which was formidable to him on the score of those great men whereof it was composed, he carried his Arms into the Western Provinces; that is to say, into Mesopotamia and Syria, which were part of his Empire. He took the government of Babylon from Belshazzar, Son of Nebuchadnezzar, by reason of the ravages committed by his Father in Syria and Palestine, and put Kiresch, known among us by the name of Cyrus, in his place.

Some

[s] Joseph. Antiq. l. xiii. c. 9. Justin. l. xxxvi. & 41. [t] Epiphan. de ponderib. & Mens. [u] Isidor. l. xvi. Origin. [x] Bibl. Orient. p. 170. [y] Plutarch. in Cimone. Strabo l. xv.

* Artaba, teste Herodoto medimnum Atticum capit & tres Chœnices. Grot. in locum; which according to Dr. Arbuthnot's Tables, make one bushel, a gallon, and one pint; allowing, with him, four pecks and six pints to the Medimnus, and one pint to the Choinix.

† Dr. Prideaux, who discourses very copiously and with great learning on this Prophecy, maintains, that the decree mentioned in it for the restoring and rebuilding of Jerusalem, cannot be understood of that granted to Nehemiah, in the twentieth year of Artaxerxes; but of that granted to Ezra, by the same Artaxerxes, in the seventh year of his reign, and of none other. From thence to the death of Christ are exactly four hundred and ninety years, to a month: for in the month Nisan was the decree granted to Ezra, and in the middle of the same month Nisan Christ suffered, just four hundred and ninety years after. Prid. Connect. Part I. B. V.

Some Persian Historians assert, that the Mother of Bahaman, or Artaxerxes, was a Jewess, of the Tribe of Benjamin and Saul's family; and that the most beloved of his Wives was of the Tribe of Judah, and race of Solomon by Rehoboam King of Judah; wherefore it is no wonder that he should recommend it to Cyrus, who was himself born of a Jewish Mother, to favour the people of this Nation in every thing he could; which Cyrus failed not to perform, by sending them back into their own Country, and permitting them to rebuild the Temple of Jerusalem. This is what these Historians relate, the truth whereof we shall not undertake to warrant.

Some have believed this to be the Prince who divorced Vashti, and married Esther. We shall examine this opinion hereafter in the Article DARIUS, the Son of Hystaspes.

Since we have given a summary of Artaxerxes's life, after the Persian Historians, we shall do the same from the accounts of him given by the Greeks. Xerxes King of Persia, who is so well known in all our Histories, was killed by Artabanus Captain of his guards, who having formed the design of placing himself upon the Throne, resolved to murder the three Sons of Xerxes. The first of them was Darius, who in course was to succeed him; the second Hystaspes, and the third Artaxerxes Longimanus.

Artabanus therefore made Artaxerxes believe, that the King his Father had been put to death by his eldest Brother Darius, and that this young Prince, after he had killed his Father, designed to murder him also, so that it concerned him to be upon his guard, and provide for his own security. Artaxerxes, not distrusting the sincerity of Artabanus, concluded, that to revenge the death of his Father, and prevent his own, it was necessary to dispatch his Brother Darius, and without deliberating longer on the matter, he went into his apartment, with Artabanus in his company, and killed him. Hystaspes, the second Son of Xerxes, to whom the Crown of right belonged, was in Bactria, and consequently at a great distance. Artabanus, without troubling himself at all about this, took Artaxerxes and placed him on the Throne, flattering himself with the hopes of ascending it himself very soon, and forcing Artaxerxes out of it. But this Prince having discovered the Conspiracy, prevented it, and put Artabanus to death[a].

But notwithstanding this, he was not altogether settled on the Throne; the friends and relations of Artabanus form'd a powerful Party against him, levied Troops, and gave him battle, which they lost. He afterwards marched against his Brother Hystaspes Governor of Bactria. He made war against him for two years successively, and in the second defeated him in a bloody engagement. By this victory he became peaceable possessor of the Empire, put new Governours in most of the Provinces, and used great application in reforming the disorders and abuses of the preceding Government, whereby he gained the esteem and friendship of his people.

About three years after, the Egyptians grown weary of the Persian Yoke, rebell'd against Artaxerxes[b], and chose Inarus Prince of the Lybians for their King. They invited the Athenians to assist them, who at that time had a Fleet of an hundred Sail in the Island Cyprus. Upon the news of this revolt Artaxerxes levied an Army of three hundred thousand men with a resolution to march against Egypt; but his friends having advised him not to hazard his Person, he trusted the care of this expedition to Achemenides one of his Brothers, or, as others will have it, his Uncle[c]. Upon his arrival in Egypt he was defeated by the Egyptians, supported by the Athenians, who were come to their assistance. There were an hundred thousand Persians computed to be killed in this battle, and they who escaped retired to Memphis: thither the conquerors pursued them, and immediately made themselves Masters of two parts of the City. But the Persians fortifying themselves in the third, called the white Wall, maintained a siege there of three years, with great bravery; after which time Artaxerxes sent two of his Generals, Megabysus and Artabazus to their assistance, who delivered them, defeated Inarus's Army, and subjected Egypt once more to the dominion of the Persians.

In the mean time the Athenians, who had kept up the rebellion of the Egyptians, acted offensively against the Persians, and did them very considerable damage on many occasions, which obliged Artaxerxes at last to make peace with them upon these conditions[d]: 1. That all the Greek Cities of Asia should have liberty, and the choice of the several Laws and Government under which they were inclined to live. 2. That no Persian Vessel of war should enter the seas from the Euxine, as far as the coasts of Pamphylia. 3. That no Persian Commander should come nearer with his Troops than within three days march of these seas. 4. That the Athenians should no more attack any of the lands belonging to the King's dominions.

Artaxerxes

[a] Vide Ctesiam. Diodor. Sicul. l. xi. Justin l. iii. c. 1. [b] Thucid. l. I. Ctesias Persic. [c] Herodot. l. iii. & l. vii. & Diodor. l. xi. [d] Diodor. Sicul. l. xi. Plutarch. in Cimone.

Artaxerxes, after having for five years resisted the prayers and importunities of his Mother, who desired Inarus of him, and those Athenians that had been taken with him in Egypt, that she might sacrifice them to the Manes of her Son Achemenides, at last gave them up to her. This inhumanity so exasperated Megabysus, who after the victory obtained over them had given them his word not to sacrifice them, that he left the Court, and retired to Syria, whereof he was Governour, and there levied an Army, in order to take his revenge. The King sent Osiris against him, with an Army of two hundred thousand men: but Osiris was beaten, wounded, and taken by Megabysus. The next year he sent another Army against him, under the command of Menostanes, one of his Generals. But he too was overcome, and put to flight, by Megabysus. At length Artaxerxes pardoned Megabysus; after which he returned to Court. Artaxerxes reigned one and forty years, and died in the year of the world 3572. before J. C. 428.

III. ARTAXERXES. Ezra gives this name to the Magus, called by Justin, Oropastes; by Herodotus, Smerdis; by Æschylus, Mardus; by Ctesias, Sphendadates. This Magus, after the death of Cambyses, usurped the Empire of the Persians, pretending to be Smerdis the Son of Cyrus, whom Cambyses had put to death. This is the Artaxerxes who wrote a letter to his Governours beyond the Euphrates, signifying to them, that having received the advice which they had given relating to the Jews, he had ordered the records to be consulted, and had found that Jerusalem was formerly a powerful City, which had revolted from the Kings of old; that therefore he required them to acquaint the Jews with his commands, to desist from their undertaking to rebuild Jerusalem, till they should receive further orders: Which was punctually executed. Thus from the year of the World 3483, the Jews did not dare to work upon the repairs which they had begun, of the City walls,
Neh. i. till 3550, when Nehemiah obtained permission to rebuild them, from Artaxerxes Longimanus.

Tit. iii. 12. ARTEMAS, St. Paul's Disciple, was sent by the Apostle into Crete, in the room of Titus, while he continued with St. Paul at Nicopolis, where he passed the winter. We know nothing particularly, either of the life or death of Artemas: but the employment to which he was appointed by the Apostle is a proof of his great merit.

ARTICLES OF FAITH, among the Jews. There are generally reckoned thirteen; they are set down by us under the title Faith.

These thirteen Articles were prepared by Maimonides, in the close of the eleventh Century of the Christian Æra. They were generally received, and all the Jews are obliged to live and die in this belief[a].

ARUBOTH, or Araboth. This is thought to be a City or Country belonging to the Tribe of Judah: but the true situation of it is not known to us. Aruboth may signify desarts or uncultivated plains. 1 King. iv. 10.

ARUIR. Eusebius and St. Jerom speak of a City so called, at twenty miles distance from Jerusalem, Northward.

ARUMAH, otherwise Rumah, a City near Shechem, Judg. ix. 41. where Abimelech encamped.

ARUS, a Village near Samaria, where Varus encamped. Joseph. Antiq. xvii. 12. & De Bello, l. i. c. 2. St. Jerom speaks of Atharus, four miles North of Samaria.

ARZA, Governour of Tirzah, formerly the Capital of the Kingdom belonging to the ten Tribes of Israel. In the house of Arza it was that Zimri killed Elah King of Israel, in the year of the World 3075. before J. C. 925. before the vulgar Æra 929. Ch. xvi. 9.

ASA, the Son and Successor of Abijam King of Judah. He began to reign in the year of the world 3049. before J. C. 951. before the vulgar Æra 955. He reigned one and forty years at Jerusalem. His Mother's name was Maachah, the Daughter of Abishalom. Asa did that which was right in the sight of the Lord, as David his Father had done. He expell'd those out of his territories, who out of a sacrilegious superstition prostituted themselves in honour of their false Gods; and purged Jerusalem of all the infamous practices attending the worship of Idols, which were tolerated by the Kings his Predecessors. He deprived his Mother of the sovereign authority, and took from her the marks of Royalty, because she had erected an Idol in a Grove consecrated to Astarte. He took this Idol and burnt it in the Valley of Hinnom, thro' which the brook Kidron run. The Scripture nevertheless reproaches him with not destroying the high places, which the superstition of the people had dedicated to the Lord. Asa thought it was necessary to tolerate them, in order to avoid a greater evil, which was Idolatry. He carried the gold and silver vessels into the house of the Lord, which his Father Abijam had vowed that he would consecrate to God. Ch. xv. 8. & seq. 2 Chron. xiv. 1, 2.

Asa fortified several Cities in his Dominions, and repaired those which stood in need of reparation, encouraging his people to labour in this work, while the Kingdom was at peace, and the Lord honoured them with Ver. 1, 2, 3, 4, &c.

[a] Leo of Modena's Ceremonies of the Jews, Part V. c. 13. Basnage Hist. des Juifs, t. 4. l. 6. c. 1.

with his protection. After this he levied an Army of three hundred thousand men in Judah, armed with shields and pikes; and two hundred and fourscore thousand men besides in Benjamin, who were armed with shields and arrows, all men of courage and great valour. About this time Zerah, King of Ethiopia, or rather King of Chush, that is to say, of that part of Arabia which joins to Egypt, marched against Asa with a million of foot, and three hundred chariots of war, and advanced as far as Mareshah. Asa met him, and incamped in the plain of Zephathah, or rather Zephalah near Mareshah. Asa prayed unto the Lord, and God inspired Zerah's Army with a pannick Terror, it began to fly, and Asa pursued it as far as Geran. There was an infinite number slain, because the Lord fought for his people.

Probably in the fifteenth year of Asa's reign. See 2 Chr. xv. 10. And in the year of the world 3064.

They returned therefore to Jerusalem loaded with Booty; and the Prophet Azariah the Son of Oded, filled with the Spirit of the Lord, came to meet them, and said to them, Hear ye me, Asa, and all Judah and Benjamin. The Lord is with you, while ye be with him; and if ye seek him, he will be found of you; and if ye forsake him, he will forsake you. Israel shall be long without the true God, without Priest, without Teachers and without Law. (He intended probably to speak of the Captivity of the ten Tribes.) But when they turn unto the Lord, he will be found of them. As for you, arm yourselves with courage; for your works shall not continue unrewarded.

2 Chr. xv. 1. —

Asa having heard these words, perceived himself to be animated with new courage. He destroyed the Idols of Judah, Benjamin, and the conquered Cities in mount Ephraim. He repaired the Altar of Burnt-offerings, and gathered all Judah and Benjamin together, and with them many Israelites of the Tribes of Simeon, Ephraim, and Manasseh, and upon the third month in the fifteenth year of his reign celebrated a solemn Festival. Of the cattle taken from Zerah, they sacrificed seven hundred Oxen and seven thousand Sheep; they renewed the Covenant with the Lord, and ingaged to seek him with all their heart and with all their soul; they swore to the Covenant, the cymbals and trumpets sounding, and declared, that whosoever would not seek the Lord, should be put to death. God gave them peace, and the Kingdom of Judah, according to the Chronicles, was quiet till the thirty third year of Asa. But it is probable, that we should read the twenty fifth instead of the thirty fifth, since Baasha, who made war upon Asa, lived no longer than the twenty sixth year of Asa. 1 Kings xvi. 8.

In the thirty sixth, or rather twenty sixth year of Asa's reign [*], Baasha King of Israel began to fortify Ramah upon the frontiers of the two Kingdoms of Judah and Israel, to hinder the Israelites of the ten Tribes from going freely into the Kingdom of Judah, and to the Temple of the Lord. Whereupon Asa sent to Benhadad King of Damascus all the gold and silver which he had in his Palace, and all there was in the treasuries of the Temple, to prevail with him by this means to depart from his Alliance with Baasha, and make an inroad into his Territories, that so he might be obliged to abandon the design which he had undertaken to accomplish at Ramah. Benhadad accepted Asa's Presents, and invaded Baasha's Country, where he took several Cities belonging to the Tribe of Naphtali. Wherefore Baasha was forced to quit Ramah; to defend his Dominions nearer home; and Asa having ordered all his people to march to Ramah, carried off all the materials prepared by Baasha to build and fortify this place, and imployed them in building Geba and Mizpah.

At this time the Prophet Hanani came to Asa, and said, Because thou hast relied on the King of Syria, and not on the Lord thy God; therefore is the host of the King of Syria escaped out of thy hand. Were not the Ethiopians and the Lubims a huge host, yet because thou didst rely on the Lord, he delivered them into thine hands. Herein thou hast done foolishly; therefore from henceforth thou shalt have wars. Asa being offended at these reproaches, put the Prophet in chains, and at the same time gave orders for the executing several persons in Judah. Towards the latter part of his life he was incommoded with the gout in his feet, and the humour rising upwards, killed him. The Scripture reproaches him with having recourse rather to Physicians than the Lord. He was buried in the Sepulcher, which he had provided for himself in the City of David, and after his death great quantities of perfumes and spices were placed upon the bed, with which his body was burned; then his bones and ashes were collected and put into his Grave. He died in the year of the world 3090, before J. C. 910, and 913 before the vulgar Æra.

2 Chron. xvi. 7.

II. Asa. Josephus [c] calls the place where Judas Maccabæus was killed Asa, but the first book of Maccabees Azoth. The Situation of it is not known; for this cannot be the famous City of Azoth.

ASAHEL,

[c] Joseph. Antiq. l. xii, c. 19.

[*] There are great difficulties concerning this Year. The Chronicles say the 36th year of Asa's reign. But the beginning of this 36th year is reckoned from the Separation of the two Kingdoms of Judah and Israel; or rather we should read the 25th or 26th year of Asa, instead of the 35th and 36th.

ASAHEL, Son of Zeniah, and Brother to Joab, was killed by Abner in the battle of Gibeon, while he perſiſted obſtinately in the purſuit of this General. To revenge his death, Joab his Brother ſome years after treacherouſly killed Abner, who was come to wait on David at Hebron, in order to procure him to be acknowledged by all Iſrael.

2 Sam. ii. 18, 19. &c.

2 Sam. iii. 26, 27.

ASAIAH, was ſent by King Joſiah to conſult Huldah the Propheteſs, concerning the Book of the Law which had been found in the Temple.

In the Year of the World 2956. before J. C. 1044. before the vulg. Æra 1048.

ASAMON, a Mountain of Galilee near Sephoris [f].

I. ASAPH, Father of Joah, who was Secretary to King Hezekiah.

2 Chron. xxxiv. 20, 31.

II. Asaph, the Son of Barachias, of the Tribe of Levi. He was the Father of Zaccur, Joſeph, Nethaniah, and Arſarelah. Aſaph was a celebrated Muſician in David's time. In the diſtribution of the Levites which this Prince made for the ſervice of ſinging in the Temple, he appointed thoſe of Kohath's Family to be placed in the middle about the Altar of burnt Sacrifices; thoſe of Merari's Family had the left, and thoſe of Gerſon's the right. Aſaph, who was of this laſt Family, preſided over that band, whoſe ſtation was appointed to the right; and his Deſcendants kept the ſame place, and had the ſame rank in the Temple. We find ſeveral Pſalms * with Aſaph's name in the title, as the xlix, and others from the lxxii to the lxxxii, whether Aſaph compoſed them, or David addreſs'd them to him to be ſet; or laſtly, which we think moſt probable, whether ſome of Aſaph's Deſcendants wrote them, and fixed the name to them of this eminent Maſter of the Temple Muſick: for it appears, that theſe Pſalms do not ſuit Aſaph's times, and were written ſome during the Captivity, as the xlix, the lxxiii, lxxviii, lxxix; others in Jehoſhaphat's time, as the lxxxi, and lxxxii. The lxxvii we fix to Aſa's time. See our Preface concerning the xlix Pſalm.

In the Year of the World 2951. before J. C. 1049 before the vulgar Æra 1053.

2 Kings xviii. 18.

1 Chr. vi. 39.

1 Chron. xxv. 2.

ASARELAH, the fourth Son of Aſaph whom we have been ſpeaking of. See 1 Chr. xxv. 2.

ASCENSION of our Lord, a Feſtival which the Church celebrates forty Days after the Reſurrection of Jeſus Chriſt, in memory of what happened, when our Saviour, having converſed with his Apoſtles for forty days after his Reſurrection, and ſufficiently inſtructed them, led them from Jeruſalem as far as Bethany, and the Mount of Olives, at half a league's diſtance from Jeruſalem. Then lifting up his hands to bleſs them, he was raiſed up to Heaven in their ſight; and ſet down at the right hand of his Father, there to continue till he ſhall deſcend at the laſt day, to judge the quick and the dead, and render to every man according to his works. It is believed by ſome [g], that our Saviour did eat with his Diſciples in a cave of Mount Olivet, before he ſeparated from them. Several of the Ancients aſſure us [h], that when He aſcended up to Heaven, he left impreſſions of his feet upon the ground, which have remained there ever ſince, tho' the faithful every day are carrying away ſome of the Earth of this place, and preſerve it with great devotion.

Luke xxiv. 50. and Acts i. 4. &c.

Some have added to this Miracle and tell us [i], that the Empreſs Helena having built the magnificent Church of the Aſcenſion, in the midſt whereof the impreſſions of our Saviour's feet are to be ſeen, this place, tho' it was often attempted, never could be paved; whatever was put there to adorn it, immediately removing from it; ſo that they were forced to leave it as it was, and in the condition wherein we ſee it at this day. It is affirmed likewiſe [k], that no one could ever cloſe the roof, which anſwered to this place, and that all that ſpace thro' which Chriſt aſcended up to Heaven was left open. S. Auſtin [l] believed, that Jeſus Chriſt ſanctified the hour of noon-day by aſcending up to Heaven; and the Apoſtolical Conſtitutions appoint the Feſtival of the Aſcenſion to be obſerved on Thurſday [m]. This ſolemnity is ſo ancient in the Church, that the beginning of it is not known; which is ſome reaſon to believe, that it came traditionally from the Apoſtles.

ASCOPERA. The Latin Tranſlator of the Text of Judith has made uſe of this term in his Verſion. It ſignifies properly a Bottle, or a leathern Bag pitched in order to contain liquors.

Judith x. 5. Græc. Ἀσκοπυτίνην.

ASENETH, the Daughter of Potiphar, and Wife of the Patriarch Joſeph. She was the Mother of Ephraim and Manaſſeh. It is a queſtion whether Aſeneth be the Daughter of the ſame Potiphar, who bought Joſeph, and afterwards being impoſed upon by his Wife's ſlanders, threw him into a dungeon. The Hebrews, who are cited in Origen, relate [n], that Aſeneth diſcovered to her Father Potiphar what paſſed between Joſeph and her Mother, and convinced him, that there was no ground ground for the suspicions which he had conceived against his Servant. S. Jerom[o], Abbot Rupert, Tostatus, and some others are persuaded likewise, that Aseneth is the Daughter of Potiphar, Joseph's first Master.

[f] Joſeph. l. ii. de Bello, c. 23. [g] Euſeb. l. iii. c. 41, 43. vit. Conſtant. pag. 503, 504, 505. Vide & Chryſoſt. in Acta homil. 1. p. 8. [h] Sulpit. Sever. l. ii. c. 48. hiſt. Paulin. Ep. 11. Optat. l. vi. Aug. in Joan. homil. 47. [i] Euſeb. vit. Conſtant. l. iii. c. 43. [k] Hieronym. ſeu quis alius in locis Act. Beda locis SS. c. 7. [l] Auguſtin. apud Proſper. Sentent. 209. p. 441. [m] Conſtit. l. v. c. 19. [n] Origen. in Caten. MSS. in nov. Edit. Hexapl.

* The ſeveral Pſalms here referr'd to are numbered according to their order in the Latin Vulgate. The reaſon of this difference between the Vulgate and the Hebrew Text has been before intimated.

But the generality of the Fathers and Expositors are of a contrary opinion; for, first, the name of Potiphar, Joseph's Father-in-law, is written with some little difference from his who bought him, when he was first brought into Egypt; secondly, Scripture not having said that this is the same Potiphar, there is reason to believe it may be another. This circumstance was too remarkable not to be insisted on. Thirdly, St. Austin[p] observes, that the dignity of Priest of Heliopolis, ascribed by Scripture to Potiphar, Joseph's Father-in-law, does not seem consistent with the quality of Master Cook, or Captain of Pharaoh's guards, which is given in Scripture to Potiphar Joseph's Master. Fourthly, and lastly, the City of Heliopolis, in Hebrew called On, is too remote from that of Tanis, where the King of Egypt kept his Court, to think that the same Potiphar who attended that Court in this employment, could reside at On, which was above fifteen leagues from it. These reasons have determined the generality of Commentators to believe, that Aseneth the Wife of Joseph was not Daughter to that Potiphar whom Joseph, upon his coming into Egypt, was sold to. These arguments are not without reply, as will appear in the Article of POTIPHAR.

פוטי פרע
פטי פר

If any one has a curiosity for fables, he may read a long recital in the Rabbins, of the manner how Aseneth became Joseph's Wife. Vincent of Beauvais gives the following account of her marriage. Joseph visiting Egypt in the first of the seven years of barrenness[q], came into the neighbourhood of Heliopolis, where Potiphar, Pharaoh's Counsellor, dwelt, who had a Daughter, named Aseneth, of very uncommon beauty. She lived in a Tower joining to her Father's House, in which Tower there were ten chambers, or apartments; in the first Aseneth kept her Gods, to whom she sacrificed every day; the second contained her ornaments, rich clothes and jewels; the third was filled with all the valuable things of the earth; the seven other apartments were inhabited by Virgins, who were in the service of Aseneth, all of an extraordinary beauty, and had never spoken to any man.

There were three windows in Aseneth's chamber, one to the East, another to the South, and another to the North. In it was a golden bed, with purple curtains embroidered with gold; and about the Tower there was a Court encompassed with very high walls of free stone, wherein were four iron gates guarded by eighteen young men well armed. On the right hand there was a fountain and a bason to receive the water wherewith the trees in the garden were all watered.

Aseneth was tall like Sarah, graceful like Rebekah, and beautiful like Rachel. Joseph coming into this part of the Country, sent word to Potiphar that he would lodge at his house; Potiphar was overjoyed at it, and told his Daughter that Joseph the mighty man of God was to lodge in his house, and that it was his design to marry her to him. She replied, that she would have nothing to do with a Slave; and for a Husband she would have none but a King's Son. At the same time intelligence was brought of Joseph's arrival. Aseneth went up immediately to her apartment, and seeing Joseph come sitting in Pharaoh's Chariot, which was all of gold, drawn by four horses whiter than snow; Joseph himself dressed in a purple mantle wrought with gold, with a Crown of gold upon his head, adorned with twelve precious stones, holding a branch of olive and a gold scepter in his hand; immediately, I say, upon her perceiving him, she was discomposed at the sight of so much beauty, and said, This is the Sun coming in his Chariot to us; I did not know that Joseph was the Son of God; for what Woman could ingender such a beauty?

Joseph being conducted into the house, his hands were washed, and he desired to know who that woman was, whom he had observed through the window there? for he was apprehensive lest she should do as many other women had done, who had sent him presents, and made court to him. Potiphar told him she was his Daughter, that she had never spoke to any man, nor could endure any; that if he desired it, she should come and pay her respects to him. Joseph answered, If she is a Virgin, let her come, and I will love her as my own Sister. The young Lady's Mother went up and brought her; and Potiphar said to her, Salute your Brother, who has the same aversion to all Women as you have to all Men; embrace him. Joseph hereupon stretched out his hand, and put it upon her bosom, telling her that he would not suffer any one who worshiped Idols to touch him.

Aseneth was so moved at this, that she shed tears: Joseph blessed her; she renounced her Idols, and fell sick with grief. Joseph being upon the point of departing, Potipherah was desirous to detain him; but he refused to stay, and promised promised to return in eight days. During all this time Aseneth continued dressed in black, threw her Idols out of the windows, and took no nourishment. On the eighth day, upon the first dawn of light, an Angel from Heaven came to comfort her, required her to eat, to put on her richest clothes, and told her that her name was written in the book of life; that she should no longer be called Aseneth, but Great Refuge. At the same time she served him with bread and wine; and he asking for a honey comb; she told him she was very sorry she had none. Go, says he to her, into your buttery, and you will find some: which accordingly she did; the Angel took and eat a little piece of it, and gave Aseneth the rest. The Bees came and made honey in this Virgin's hand, then at the Angel's command fled to Heaven.

[o] Hieronym. Qu. Hebr. Vide & Auth. Testamenti XII Patriarch.
[q] Vincentii Belvacens. speculi t. 4. l. 1. c. 118.
[p] August. quæst. 136. in Genes.

Aseneth desired the Angel to give his blessing likewise to seven Virgins, who had lived with her from her infancy, and had been brought up in the same apartment. The Angel blessed them all, and disappeared. In a moment after she was told that Joseph was returned: she went therefore in haste to meet him, and related to him how the Angel had declared to her, that she should be his Wife. The next day Joseph desired Pharaoh's permission to marry her, which was granted him.

I omit several circumstances of less importance, here is enough to enable us to judge of the merit of the piece, and inspire us with all the contempt of it which it deserves.

The Eastern people have likewise composed mystical books, containing the amours of Joseph and Zoleikah, Daughter to Pharaoh King of Egypt, and Wife to Potiphar, Joseph's Master. They explain these stories much after the same manner as we do the Canticles of Solomon, that is to say, in a moral and exalted sense, of the love of the soul towards God. See hereafter JOSEPH.

ASHAN, a City in the Tribe of Judah, Josh. xv. 42. Eusebius says that in his time Beth-Ashan was to be seen at sixteen miles distance from Jerusalem, towards the West. It is perhaps the same which afterwards was yielded to the Tribe of Simeon, Josh. xix. 7.

ASHBEL, the second Son of Benjamin, 1 Chron. viii. 1. Numb. xxvi. 38.

ASHDOD. See AZOTH.

אשדות ASHDOTH. This word signifies plains, places that were fruitful and well watered. There is a City of this name in the Tribe of Reuben, which is called Ashdoth-pisgah; because it was seated in the plains at the foot of Mount Pisgah.

I. ASHER, the Son of Jacob and Zilpah, his Wife Leah's Servant. We know nothing particularly of his life or death; Gen. xxx. 13.
for we make no account of what is said in the Testament of the twelve Patriarchs, where we find a long discourse concerning Asher, and a prediction of the captivity of his Tribe, its deliverance by Jesus Christ, and of the burial of this Patriarch at Hebron. Asher had four Sons and one Daughter. The inheritance belonging to his Children lay in a very fruitful Country, with Phœnicia to the West of it, Ch. xlix. 20. Deut. xxxiii. 24.
Mount Libanus to the North, Mount Carmel and the Tribe of Issachar to the South, and the Tribes of Zebulun and Naphtali to the East. The Tribe of Asher never possessed the whole extent of ground which was assigned to it; its allotment was to reach to Libanus, part of Syria, and Phœnicia, but either its weakness, its negligence, or its Sins, or all these reasons put together, were the cause that it could never get possession of its whole portion.

II. ASHER, a City situated between Scythopolis and Shechem, and consequently very remote from the Tribe of Asher.

III. ASHER. Eusebius says there was a large Town of this name between Azoth and Askelon.

ASHES. To repent in Sackcloth and Ashes; to afflict ourselves for our sins, or for some misfortune, and to sit upon some coarse Stuff, or in Ashes, are all Expressions very common in Scripture. I am but Dust and Ashes, said Abraham to the Lord. Gen. xviii. 27.
God threatens his people with showering down Dust and Ashes upon their lands, instead of Rain, so to make them barren, instead of blessing them with fertility; to dry them up more and more, instead of moistening them. Deut. xxviii. 24.
Tamar, after the injury received from her Brother Amnon, covered her head with Ashes. 2 Sam. xiii. 19.
The Psalmist in great sorrow says, that he had eaten Ashes as it were bread; this is an Hyperbole. Ps. cii. 9.
He sat on Ashes, he threw Ashes on his head; his food, his bread was spoiled with the Ashes wherewith he was covered. Jeremiah, in his Lamentations, introduces Jerusalem saying that the Lord had fed her with Ashes. Lam. iii. 16.
And Job declares, that Man who is but Dust and Ashes, shall turn again to Dust. Job xxxiv. 15.

There was a sort of lye and lustral water, made with the Ashes of an Heifer, sacrificed upon the great day of expiation, the Ashes whereof were distributed to the people; and this water was used in purifications, as often as any one touched a dead body, or was present at funerals. Numb. xix. 17.

The ancient Persians had a sort of punishment which consisted in executing certain great Criminals in Ashes. Thus the wicked Menelaus was dispatched, who was the cause of all the troubles with 2 Macc. xiii. 5, 6. with which Judæa had been diſquieted [r]. He was thrown headlong from a Tower fifty cubits high, which was fill'd with Aſhes to a particular height. The motion which the Criminal uſed to diſengage himſelf from this place, plunged him ſtill deeper into it; and this agitation was farther encreaſed by a wheel, which ſtirr'd the Aſhes continually about him, till at laſt he was ſtifled. See the article Puniſhments.

ASHIMAH, a famous Deity which the men of Hamath, who were carried to Samaria, invented and adored. 2 Kings xvii. 30. Some of the Rabbins ſay, that Aſhimah had the ſhape of an Ape [s], others that it was repreſented like a Lamb, a Goat, or a Satyr; all, differing in their opinions, and nothing at all certain in any one of them [t]: They who made an Ape of this Divinity ſeem to have had ſome regard to the ſound of the word Sima, which has ſome relation to the Greek, Simia [*], but the Hebrews have another word to ſignify an Ape. Moreover both the Ape [u] and Goat [x] were Deities worſhipped in Egypt and other places in the Eaſt.

Some of the Rabbins [y] have imagined, that the famous Mordecai, Eſther's Foſter-father was Author of the Samaritan Pentateuch, and that he gave it to the Perſians of Ahaſuerus's Kingdom; that the Perſians having received this work into their Library, blotted out the name of God Elohim, which was to be read in the beginning of Geneſis, and in the room of it ſubſtituted the name of Aſhimah their falſe Deity, the worſhip whereof was introduced into Samaria by thoſe who were ſent by the Kings of Aſſyria. This accuſation is certainly falſe: we have authentick copies of the Samaritan Pentateuch, both manuſcript and printed in our hands, where the name of Elohim is to be read in the ſame manner as in the Hebrew copies of the Jews.

A certain Critick [z] prepoſſeſs'd with an opinion, that the ancient Perſians worſhipped fire, and imagining Aſhimah to ſignify this Element, which the Samaritans likewiſe adored in their Country, inſtead of Aſhimah [a] choſe to read Aſhita, which he explains of the Fire of Heaven, or Eſchiomah the daily Fire. But if they will diſcover the word Fire in Aſhimah, it is more natural to ſay, Eſch-ſchamaï, the Fire of Heaven.

Theſe people came from Hamath or Emeſa, a City of Syria upon the Orontes, where we read, that the Sun was adored under the name of Elah-Gabalah; whence the Emperor Heliogabalus took his. This God Elagabal was repreſented below by a large round Stone, which riſing inſenſibly in a point, terminated in a conick or pyramidal Figure [b]. The worſhip of this falſe God became celebrated at Rome from the time of Heliogabalus's reign, who cauſed a magnificent Temple to be erected for him. Round about this Temple were ſeveral Altars, upon which hecatombs of bulls, and great quantities of ſheep were ſacrificed every morning; abundance of excellent wine and ſpices was poured out upon the Altars. Quires of muſicians and people who played upon inſtruments were placed round the Altar; Phœnician women danced in a circle playing upon cymbals and dulcimers, before the Senate and Roman Knights. Such was the worſhip which Heliogabalus appointed to be paid his God which he had brought from Emeſa.

To come now to the name of Aſhimah, it may be very well underſtood of Fire from Heaven or the Sun, as we have before ſaid, or it may be derived from the Perſian Aſuman. This is the name of an Angel or Genius [c], who according to the Superſtition of the ancient Magi of Perſia, preſides over every thing which happens on the 27th day of every Solar Month in the Perſian year, which therefore for this reaſon is called by the name of this Genius. The Magi believe Aſuman to be the Angel of Death, which ſeparates the ſouls of men from their bodies. The Perſians call likewiſe Heaven Aſuman and Suman, which comes pretty near the Hebrew, Schamaim.

ASHKENAZ, the eldeſt Son of Gomer. It is our conjecture, that he is the Father of the Aſcantes, people who dwelt about Tanaïs, and the Palus Mæotis [d]. Gen. x. 3.

ASHNAH, a City in the Tribe of Judah. Joſh. xv. 33.

ASHPENAZ, Intendant or Governour of King Nebuchadnezzar's Eunuchs. He it was who changed the name of Daniel into that of Belteſhazzar, that of Hananiah into Shadrach, and that of Azariah into Abednego. Daniel having formed a i. 6. reſolution to eat nothing dreſſed after the Gentile Manner, intreated Aſhpenaz to permit him and his companions to be ſerved with pulſe only, and ſuch proviſion as was allowed by the law of Moſes. But Aſhpenaz did not dare to ſuffer it, leſt the King ſhould perceive it by the meager air of their Countenances. Notwithſtanding Melzar, whom Aſhpenaz had appointed to [r] See Valerius Maximus, l. ix. c. 2. [s] Rabbi Salomon. & Kimchi. [t] See Selden de Diis Syr. Syntagm. 2. c. 9. & additiones Andr. Beyer. Ibidem. [u] Juvenal. Satyr. 10. Effigies ſacri nitet aurea cercopithæci. [x] Vide Levit. xvii. 7. Diodur. Sicul. l. i. [y] Abarbanel. Vide Scalig. de emendat. tempor. l. vii. c. 663. [z] Baſnage antiquitez Judaiq. t. 1. p. 190. [a] Aſhimar אשימא Aſchita אשיתא Aſchioma אשיומא Eſch-Schamai אש שמי [b] Herodian. [c] Bibl. Orient. p. 141. col. 2. Aſuman. [d] Plin. l. vi. c. 1.

[*] Whether Simia be Greek or Latin is not ſo certain; The Greeks, we are ſure, as well as Hebrews, had another word for Ape.

to be their Governour, privately gave them leave; and by the permission of God, this diet was so far from impairing their good complexions, that it rather encreased the strength and fulness of their persons.

ASHUATH, the third Son of Jephlet, and Grandson of Heber. 1 Chr. vii. 33.

ASHUR, the Son of Shem, who gave his name to Assyria. It is believed that originally he dwelt in the land of Shinar, and about Babylonia; but that he was compell'd by the Usurper Nimrod to go from thence, and settle higher towards the Springs of Tigris, in the Province of Assyria, so called from him, where he built the famous City of Nineveh, and those of Rehoboth, Calah and Resen. This is the sense which is generally put upon these
Gen. x. 11, 12. words of Moses. Out of that land (Shinar) went forth Ashur and builded Nineveh, and the City of Rehoboth, and Calah, and Resen between Nineveh and Calah.

But others explain the Text of Moses in a different manner[e]. They understand it of Nimrod, who left his own Country, and attacked Assyria, which he made himself master of, and built there Nineveh, Rehoboth, Calah, and Resen; where he established the Seat of his Empire, and became the most powerful and probably the first Monarch of the East. The Prophet Micah calls Assyria the land of Nim-
Micah v. 6. rod; And they shall waste the land of Assyria with the sword, and the land of Nimrod in the entrances thereof.

Suidas[f], John Malala[g], and Cedrenus[h] relate, that Thuras reigned at Nineveh after Ninus. He was at war with Caucasus, of the race of Japhet, conquered and killed him. After the death of Thuras, the Assyrians called the planet Mars by his name, and adored him under that of Baal, which in their language signifies the God of War. Daniel speaks of this God Baal, who was worshipped at Babylon. So much we learn from Suidas. It is generally believed, that Thuras and Ashur were the same person, and that the Baal of the Assyrians and Babylonians was their first King, and the Founder of their Monarchy. But instead of making Thuras the Son and Successor of Ninus, it should on the contrary be said, that Ninus was the Son and Successor of Thuras or Ashur, otherwise called Baal, or Belus. For Historians[i] all agree, in making Ninus the Son of Belus. But there are some who confound Ninus with Ashur. Others make him the Son of Nimrod: and in a matter of such antiquity we can hope to receive very little light from profane Authors. But there should be care taken to distinguish between the old Belus, who is probably the same with Evechoüs King of Chaldæa, and Belus the Assyrian, the Father of Ninus. Evechoüs reigned at Babylon four hundred and forty years before Belus the Assyrian.

The Empire of the Assyrians is thought to have been the most ancient in the East. The Foundation of it is ascribed to Ashur, or Nimrod, or Belus, or Ninus. The original of it is not very clear. Herodotus[k], who is generally followed in this matter, says, that Ninus the Son of Belus founded the Assyrian Empire, which subsisted five hundred and twenty years in upper Asia. Usher fixes the beginning of this Empire to the year of the world 2737, of the Julian Period 3447, before J. C. 1263, before the vulgar Æra 1267. Ninus was succeeded by his Wife Semiramis, who reigned two and forty years. After her Ninus her Son reigned nine and thirty years. He is said to have had a series of six and thirty Kings for his Successors[l], whose names are set down, together with the dates and duration of their reign, to Sardanapalus. But as these historians are very much to be suspected, and they give us no particular information of any thing, we think it needless to produce them in this place.

The Scripture speaks of the Foundation of the Assyrian Empire by Nimrod, Gen. x. 8, long before Ninus; that is to say, about 9, 10, 11.
the time when the tower of Babel was built, in the year of the world 1757, before J. C. 2243, before the vulgar Æra 2247, and before the taking of Babylon by Alexander the Great, nineteen hundred and three years. From this time the Babylonians began to make their observations of the Heavens, and they who were sent by Callisthenes to Aristotle, had a retrospect of nineteen hundred and three years. Who Nimrod's Successors were we cannot tell; only we read, that in Abraham's time, and about Gen. xiv.
the year of the world 2092 Chedorlaomar King of Elam having entred into a confederacy with Amraphel King of Shinar, Arioch King of Ellasar, and Tidal King of the Nations, came and attacked the Kings of Sodom and Gomorrah, and the neighbouring Cities, which had rebell'd against him. And long after, under the Judges, Judg. iii. 8.
about the year of the World 2591, the Lord delivered the Israelites into the hands of Chushan-rishathaim, King of Mesopotamia, who oppressed them for eight years. Julius Africanus says that Evechoüs reigned in Chaldæa two hundred twenty four years before the Arabians; that is to say, in the year of the World 2242, in the time of Isaac. The Arabians conquered the Chaldæan Empire in 2466, and kept it for about two hundred and sixteen years, to the year of the World 2682. Belus the Assyrian

[e] See Bochart. Phaleg. l. iv. c. 12. [f] Suidas in Thuras. [g] Joan. Malala p. 20. [h] Cedren. p. 15.
[i] Herodot. l. i. c. 95. [k] Ibid. [l] See Julius Africanus, & Eusebius.

Assyrian succeeded the Arabians fifty five years before the foundation of the Assyrian Empire by Ninus.

Dionysius Halicarnassæus observes very well[m], that the Assyrian Empire was in the beginning of very small extent; and what we have said shews this sufficiently, since we see Kings of Shinar, Elam, Chaldea, and Ellasar, at the time when the Assyrian Empire founded by Nimrod must have subsisted, and before Ninus the Son of Belus founded, or rather aggrandized the only Empire of Assyria which was known by profane Authors; for they had no notice of that which was established by Nimrod.

In the reigns of David and Solomon the Assyrian Monarchs possessed nothing on this side the Euphrates. David subdued all Syria, without their concerning themselves at all about it. When he attacked the Ammonites they sent for succour to the 2 Sam. x. 16. Country on the other side of the Euphrates; but David defeated the Troops sent to their assistance, and obliged even the people on the other side of this river
Ver. 16, 19. to pay tribute to him. The first King of Assyria mentioned in the Scripture, is he who reigned at Nineveh, when Jonah went thither to preach repentance, about the year of the World 3180. This Prophet does not inform us what the name was of that Prince who then reigned at Nineveh, but he describes this City to be prodigiously large. The Books of Kings
2 Kings xv. 19. 1 Chron. v. 26. and Chronicles relate, that Pul King of Assyria invaded the Territories of Israel, under the reign of Menahem. It is the conjecture of some, that Pul was the Father of Sardanapalus. This last began to reign, according to Usher, in the year of the Julian Period 3947. of the World 3237. which was the fifth year of Menahem; and Pul's invasion of his Country happened in the beginning of Menahem's reign.

The measure of Nineveh's sins being compleated, God raised up enemies against Sardanapalus, who obliged him to kill himself. Arbaces Governour of Media, with disdain observing the effeminacy of Sardanapalus's life, which he passed in the most retired parts of his Court, confederated with Belesus Governour of Babylon, and resolved to shake off the Assyrian yoke, and set the Medes and Chaldeans at liberty. After several combats Sardanapalus was constrained to shut himself up in Nineveh; and in the third year of the siege, the Tigris having overthrown the City walls for twenty furlongs in length, Sardanapalus burnt himself in his Palace, with his Wealth, his Eunuchs, and his Concubines. Thus the City being taken, Belesus and Arbaces assumed the Title of King, set the Medes and Chaldæans at liberty, and dismembered the ancient Empire of the Assyrians, which had endured from the time of Nimrod, about two thousand five hundred years; and from Ninus the Son of Belus, about five hundred and twenty years[n]. This ancient Empire of Assyria maintained itself still with some splendor at Nineveh, under young Ninus and his Successors. We believe this Ninus to be the same with Tiglath-pileser, mentioned in the Book of Kings. This Prince came to the assistance of Ahaz King of Judah, and overcame the Kings of Israel and Damascus. Salmaneser succeeded Tiglath-pileser, in the year of the Julian Period 3986. of the World 3236. before J. C. 764. Sennacherib the Successor of Salmaneser, is celebrated in sacred and profane writings. He was killed by two of his Sons[o], and succeeded by another of them called Eser-haddon; who after he had reigned some time at Nineveh, made himself Master of Babylon, and re-united the Empires of Chaldæa and Assyria. He left the Empire to Saosduchinus, who reigned twenty years. This is he who is supposed to be named Nebuchodonosor in Judith. Saosduchinus was succeeded by Saracus or Chynaladanus, who reigned two and twenty years.

(Margin: In the Year of the World 3257. before J. C. 743. before the Vulg. Æra 747. — 2 Kings xv. 29. xvi. 7, 10. 1 Chron. v. 6. 2 Chron. xxviii. 20. — In the Year of the World 3294. before J. C. 706. before the vulg. Æra 709. — In the year of the World 3323. Vide Usher ad hunc annum.)

Nabopolassar, otherwise Nebuchadnezzar, Governour of Babylon, and Astyages, otherwise Ahasuerus, Son to the King of Media, laying siege to Nineveh, took the City, and divided the Monarchy of the Assyrians between them. Nabopolassar had Nineveh and Babylon for his share; and Astyages continued Master of Media and the neighbouring Provinces. Nabopolassar was Father of the Great Nebuchadnezzar, who took Jerusalem. Evilmerodach succeeded him, and Belshasar succeeded Evilmerodach; after Belshasar Darius the Mede took possession of the Empire. Hitherto we have the authority of Scripture, which clearly points out Nebuchadnezzar, Evilmerodach, Belshasar, and Darius the Mede.

(Margin: In the Year of the World 3335. before J. C. 665. before the vulgar Æra 669. — In the Year of the World 3356. before J. C. J. C. 644. before the vulg. Æra 647. — In the Year of the World 3356. before J. C. 644. before the vulg. Æra 647.)

But profane Authors relate the series of Evilmerodach's Successors in a different manner. Megasthenes says[p] that Evilmerodach was put to death by Neriglissor his Brother-in-law, who reigned four years. He was succeeded by Labassoarascbus, who was killed by some persons that had formed a Conspiracy against him, and agreed to give the Crown to one of their own number, whose name was Nabonidas, or Nabannidoch, or Labinith. From this last, Cyrus conquered Babylon. Berosus[q] says the same almost as Megasthenes. According to his account, Nerigliffor reigned four (Margin: In the Year of the World 3443. before J. C. 577. before the vulg. Æra 580. — In the Year of the World 3444. according to Usher, before J. C. 556. before the vulg. Æra 560.)

[m] Dionys. Halicarn. l. i. antiq. Rom. [n] Herodot. l. i. c. 95. [o] Berof. apud Joseph. Antiq. l. x. c. 1.
[p] Megasthen. apud Euseb. Præpar. l. ix. c. 41. [q] Berof. apud Joseph. l. i. contra Appion.

four years, Laborosardoch nine months, Nabonidas seventeen years. After which Cyrus made himself Master of the Chaldean Empire, and reunited the Empires of Assyria, Chaldea, and Persia.

ASIA, one of the largest parts of the World [*]. The ancient Hebrews were strangers to the division of the Earth into three or four parts; and we never find the name of Asia in any books written in Hebrew. They seem to think, that the Continent consisted only of Asia Major and Africa. The rest of the world, and even Asia Minor, were comprized under the
Gen. x. 5. name of the Isles of the Gentiles. We are unacquainted with the true etymology of the word Asia. We find it in no part of Scripture, excepting in the Books of Maccabees, and in some places of the New Testament. Asia is looked upon as that part of the world which of all others has been most particularly favoured. There the first Man was created, there the Patriarchs lived, the Law was given, and the greatest and most celebrated Monarchies were formed; from thence the first founders of Cities and Nations in other quarters of the world brought their Colonies. Lastly, in Asia Jesus Christ appeared; there it was that he wrought the Salvation of Mankind, that he died and rose again; and from thence it is that the light of the Gospel was diffused over all the world. Laws, Arts, Sciences and Religions, almost all had their original in Asia.

ASIARCHÆ, Asiæ Principes, as they are called in the Latin Version of the Acts of the Apostles [r]. They were so many Heathen High Priests of Asia, chosen in the way of distinction, to procure the celebration of publick and solemn Games at their own expence [s]. Those of Ephesus, out of friendship to St. Paul, and the particular consideration which they had for him, restrained him from appearing, as he intended, in the Theater, during the sedition raised there by Demetrius the Goldsmith.

ASIEL, the Father of Seraiah, 1 Chr. iv. 35.

To ASK, Interrogare, in the style of the New Testament. The Greek Erotao, to ask, is often synonymous to to pray, or to desire any thing, Rogo or Peto; for example, [t] They besought him, saying, Grant her what she desires; that is to say, they begg'd of him to grant her request. And in St. Mark vii. 26. The Woman of Canaan besought him that he would cast forth the Devil out of her Daughter. The Author of the Vulgate has often translated the Greek Erotao, by to Beseech [v], because the sequel of the discourse determined him to this sense; but it is certain, that the true signification of it is to ask, and to this the Translator has kept in some places; for example, Luke xxii. 68. And if I also ask you, you will not answer me, let her go. And in St. John xvi. 30. Now are we sure that thou knowest all things, and needest not that any man should ask thee.

ASKELON, a City in the land of the Philistines, situated between Azoth and Gaza, upon the coast of the Mediterranean. It was five hundred and twenty furlongs distant from Jerusalem [x]. The Tribe of Judah, after the death of Joshua, took the City of Askelon, which was one of the Judges i. 18.
five Governments belonging to the Philistines. The Ancients speak with great approbation of the Shalot, which takes its name from Askelon [y]. There is some mention also of the Wine of Askelon, and the Cypress Tree, a shrub that was very much esteemed, and was very common in that place. Origen [z] takes notice of Wells that were to be seen at Askelon, which were said to have been dug by Abraham and Isaac. Askelon is often mentioned in the sacred Writings. This place subsists still at this day, but is very inconsiderable. There was a pond near Askelon filled with fish, consecrated to the Goddess Derceto, which the people of the Country never ventured to eat of, no more than of the Pigeons which were consecrated to the same Deity [a].

ASMODEUS, a certain Evil Spirit that beset Sarah the Daughter of Raguel, and killed her seven first Husbands, which she had before Tobias. This Evil Spirit Tob. vi.
was afterwards expell'd with the help of 14. iii. 8.
smoke arising from the gall of a fish, and bound by the Angel Raphael, in the Desarts of Upper Egypt. Several very cu- Ch. viii. 2.
rious questions are proposed concerning 3.
this Evil Spirit Asmodeus. Some think the name to be derived from the Hebrew Esh-madai, the fire of Media, because he אש־מדי inspired the people of this Country with the flames of impure love, which he looked upon himself to have under his direction. Others, with much more probability, derive it from the Hebrew Schamad, השמדי to exterminate; so that nothing more is meant

[r] Acts xix. 31. Τινὲς δὲ καὶ τῶν Ἀσιαρχῶν. Quidam de Asiæ Principibus. [s] Vide Grot. & Hammond. ad Sect. xix. [t] Matt. xv. 23. ἠρώτων αὐτὸν λέγοντες. [v] Vide Matt. xv. 23. xvi 13. Marc. iv. 10. Luc. iv. 38. v. 3. vii. 3, 36. & passim. [x] Joseph. de Bell. l. iii. c. 1. [y] Athen. l. ii. c. 27. Plin. l. xix. c. 6. Strabo, l. xvi. alii. [z] Liber 3. contra Celsum. Vide & Euseb. Onomast. ad vocem [illegible]. [a] Diodor. l. i. Bibl. Vide & Lucian. de Dea Syria, & Philon. apud Euseb. Præpar. Evang. l. viii. &c.

[*] The word Asia, when put alone, unless otherwise determined by the Context, signifieth one of the four quarters of the world. That part of it which lies between Mount Taurus on the East, and the Hellespont on the West, is called the lesser Asia; and that part of the lesser Asia which fell to the Romans by Attalus's Will, was the proper Asia. See Prideaux's Connection, &c. Part II. p. 236.

meant by Asmodeus, than the destroying or exterminating Angel.

The Rabbins say that Asmodeus was born in an incestuous manner of Tubalcain and Noema his Sister; and that this Evil Spirit having fallen in love with Sarah the Daughter of Raguel, killed all those who attempted to come near her, and by the brutality of their passion delivered themselves in some sort into his power; for which reason the Angel speaks to this Tobit vi. 17. purpose to Tobias: They who marry forget God, and think only of satisfying their brutal passion, like horses and mules that have no understanding; upon these this Evil Spirit exercises his power. But for you, says he, when you shall come to her, rise up both of you, and pray to God which is merciful, &c.[*]

But how, say some, could the smoke made by the gall of a Fish drive away Asmodeus; and how could the Angel Raphael chain him in the utmost parts of Egypt? They who allow Angels and Evil Spirits to have subtle bodies, and think them capable of sensual pleasures, of smelling and hearing, that they love concerts of musick, and sweet odours, resolve these difficulties without hesitation. They will tell us that the strong scent proceeding from the gall of the fish might make Asmodeus leave the chamber where Sarah was, and that afterwards the Angel Raphael might have followed him, and conducted him invisibly, and with a degree of swiftness proportioned to the subtility of his body, into some Cave of Upper Egypt, where he might have shut him up.

But as our faith teaches us other principles, and we hold Angels and Dæmons to be substances purely spiritual, we are of opinion that the effect of the smoke arising from the fish's gall which Tobias burnt, rested entirely upon the senses of Tobias and Sarah; that it deadened the sense of pleasure in them, and all lustful inclinations; and that the chaining up Asmodeus is to be explained in an allegorical and figurative meaning, as signifying God's order declared to him by Raphael, which obliged him to come no more near Sarah, nor produce hereafter any signs of his presence, excepting in the utmost parts of Egypt. The Reader may consult our Dissertation concerning the Evil Spirit Asmodeus, which he will find before the Book of Tobit.

The Rabbins[a] relate that the Dæmon Asmodeus drove Solomon out of his Kingdom, and took his place; but that Solomon upon his return dethroned him, and loaded him with fetters. They tell us farther, that this Prince forced Asmodeus to serve him in his design of building the Temple of Jerusalem; that by some secret which he learned of this Dæmon, he built it without using iron, or making any noise, according to this expression of the Scripture, There was neither hammer, 1 Kings vi.
nor ax, nor any tool of iron heard in the 7.
house, while it was in building. He made use of, as they tell us, the stone Schamir, which cut in sunder stone, as our Glaziers cut their glass with diamond. The Arabian Mahometans believe[b], that Solomon chain'd the Dæmon Laora-Elmand on the Mountain Barend.

ASMONÆANS; a name given to the Maccabees, the descendants of Mattathias. Authors are not agreed concerning the original of this term. Some are of opinion that it was derived from the Town of Assamon[c], situated in the Tribe of Ju- Josh. xv.
dah; from whence their family originally 17.
might come. Noldius has conjectured, that they took this name from Mount Asamon, spoken of by Josephus[d], which he places in the midst of Galilee, near Sephoris. Kimchi maintains[e], that this was a title of honour given to Mattathias, and passed from him to his descendants. Chaschmanim signifies in Hebrew, Princes. Josephus[f] advances something which seems to be more probable, and his opinion is more generally followed. He informs us, that Mattathias was the Son of John, the Grandson of Simon, and great Grandson of Asmonæus. Besides, he seems to make Mattathias come immediately from Asmonæus[g]; whereas others make him the Son of John, and Grandson of Hesenai. The family of the Asmonæans † became very illustrious in the latter times of the Hebrew Commonwealth; it was the support both of the Religion and Liberty of the Jews; and was possess'd of the supreme Authority from Mattathias to the reign of Herod the Great; for the space of about an hundred and eight and twenty years. See Maccabees, and the catalogue of [a] Gemar. Cod. Gitthim. [b] Golius in Abulfarag. p. 18. [c] Drus. Præfat. in 1 Macc. [d] Joseph. de Bello, l. ii. c. 13. [e] Kimchi ad Psalm. lxviii. 32. מצרים חשמנים מני יאתיו [f] Antiq. l. xii. c. 8. [g] De Bello, l. i. c. 1.

[*] The Author has here paraphrased the Vulgate, which is it self a paraphrase of the Greek, [illegible] The Latin Translator enlarges here with more than common liberty. Hi namque qui conjugium ita suscipiunt, ut Deum a se, & sua mente excludant. Which is all addition to the original Text.

† It is no where said whether the Asmonæans were of the race of Jozadack, in whose family the office of High Priest continued in a lineal descent till Alcimus was promoted to this dignity. This is certain of the Asmonæans, that they were of the course of Joarib, which was the first class of the Sons of Aaron; and therefore upon the failure of the former Pontifical Family (which had then happened by the flight of Onias the Son of Onias into Egypt) they had the best right then to succeed. And with this right Jonathan took the Office, when nominated to it by the King then reigning in Syria, and also elected thereto by the general suffrage of all the people of the land. Prid. Connect. &c. Part II. Book IV.

of the Asmonæan Princes, under the Article Kings of the Jews.

ASNAPPAR, King of Assyria, who sent the Cuthæans into the Country belonging to the ten Tribes, Ezra iv. 10. Many think this Prince to be Salmanesar, but others, with more probability, take him for Esar-haddon.

ASOCHIS, a City of Galilee, which Ptolemy Lathyrus made himself Master of, by attacking it suddenly on the Sabbath-day, and there took ten thousand Captives. Whether it be the same with Azech, so often mentioned in the Books of the Old Testament, is a question. Josephus says that Asochis, or Azochis, was near Sephoris.

ASP, a kind of Serpent, the poison whereof is so dangerous and quick in its operation, that it kills almost in the very instant that it bites, without a possibility of applying any remedy *. It is said to be very small. The Scripture often speaks of it; the most remarkable place wherein it is mentioned, is where it is said to stop its ears that it may not hear the voice of the charmer. It is affirmed with great confidence, that this animal stops its ears to prevent its hearing any one who would charm it †; and the Psalmist alludes to this, when he says, that the fury of the wicked is like that of the Serpent and deaf Adder ‡ (or Asp) which stoppeth its ears that it may not hear the voice of the charmer ‖. Psal. lviii. 5.

We have discoursed at large on the charms of Serpents, in a Dissertation written expresly on this subject, and placed at the beginning of the first Volume on the Psalms, where we have set down the several ways of explaining the above-cited passage. Some[h] are of opinion that there is a sort of Asp that really is deaf, which of all others is the most dangerous; and that the Psalmist here speaks of this. Others will have it[i], that the Asp proving old becomes deaf of one ear, and stops the other with earth, to prevent its hearing the voice of the charmer. Lastly, others again pretend that the Asp, as well as other Serpents, hears exquisitely well; but[k] that when any one would charm it, it stops its ears after an artificial manner, by applying one very close to the earth, and stopping the other with the end of its tail. The Reader may consult Bochart, and our Dissertation.

ASPHALTUS. This word signifies a kind of Bitumen. Hence the name is derived of Lacus Asphaltites, given to the lake of Sodom ‡, because of the great quantity of Bitumen in it; so that no fish can live in its waters[l], and a man cannot without difficulty sink in them, by reason of the weight and density of them. Sometimes there are pieces of Bitumen to be seen upon the surface of the waters, as large as a Bull without its head, at other times much smaller[m], which they fish up, and make great use of in the preparation of medicines; particularly in imbalming dead bodies. As the Hebrews call Nitre and Bitumen Salt, the Dead Sea is likewise called by them the Salt Sea. Galen[n] says, that it is not only salt to the taste, but bitter too, and so impregnated with salt that they who sink deep in it come out all covered with brine; and if any one throws salt into it, it will scarce be made to melt. Lastly, it is called the Dead Sea, because no animal can live in it[o]; and if by chance the impetuosity of the water brings any fish into it, they die instantly, and swim upon the surface of the lake . According to Josephus's account, the lake of Sodom is five hundred [g] Vide Bochart. de animal. Sacr. Part II. l. iii. c. 6. [i] Kimchi. [k] Rabb. Salomon. & Kabuenachi. [h] Aug Cassiodor. Beda Isidor. alii. [l] Joseph. l. i. de Bello, c. 4. [m] Galen. de Simp. medicam. Facult. l. iv. c. 19. [n] Joseph. l. v. de Bello, c. 4. seu c. 5. in Lat. p. 892 D. [o] Galen. l. iv. de Simpl. medic. Facult. c. 19. [p] Hieronym. in Ezechiel xlvii.

* It is a Serpent peculiar to the Countries of Egypt and Libya. Those that are bitten by it die within three hours; and the manner of their dying being by sleep and lethargy, without any pain, Cleopatra chose it, as the easiest way of dispatching her self.

† Virgil's Marrubian Priest excelled in this Art,

——Marrubia venit de Gente sacerdos,
Vipereo generi & graviter Spirantibus Hydris,
Spargere qui somnos Cantuque manuque solebat. Virg. Æneid. VII. 750.

‡ Our English Translators render the Original, פתן Adder; which the Septuagint and Latin Vulgate more properly translate Ἀσπὶς, and Aspis.

‖ The Ancients seem to have some opinion of the power of Spells upon Serpents; and the Poets speak often of these Charms or Incantations.

Frigidus in pratis cantando rumpitur anguis. Virg.
Vipereas rumpo verbis & carmine fauces. Ovid.
Inque pruinoso coluber distenditur arvo,
Viperei coëunt abrupto corpore nodi,
Humanoque cadit Serpens afflata veneno. Lucan.

Philostratus, in his life of Apollonius, describes particularly how the Indians charm Serpents, l. iii. c. 2. Κhus-[illegible] &c. They take a scarlet Coat embroidered with golden letters, and spread it before the Serpent's hole, and those golden letters have a fascinating power over him, and therewith his Eyes, though as hard as stones, are yet overcome and laid to sleep. See Hammond on Psal. lviii. 4.

‡ At present the Inhabitants adjacent call it the lake of Lot. Maundrel's Journey to Jerusalem.

 Maundrel says he had reason to suspect the truth of this, having observed amongst the Pebbles on the shore two or three shells of Fish resembling Oyster-shells. They were cast up by the waves, at two hours distance from the mouth of Jordan. Which he mentions lest it should be suspected that they might be brought into the Sea that way. Maundrel's Journey to Jerusalem, p. 84.

hundred and fourfcore furlongs in length, from the mouth of the river Jordan to Zohar; that is to fay, about two and twenty leagues, at three miles to a league; and an hundred and fifty furlongs wide; that is to fay, about five leagues of the fame meafure.

The lake Afphaltites receives all the water of Jordan, of the brooks Arnon and Jabbok, and other waters which defcend from all the neighbouring Mountains, and notwithftanding it has no vifible iffue, it does not overflow. It is believed that it difcharges itfelf by fome fubterraneous channels into the Red Sea, or into the Mediterranean. In the Article Sodom there will be notice taken of the remains that are ftill at prefent obfervable about this lake, which prove the prodigy related in the Scripture. The land of Sodom wafte and fmoaking (fays the Author Wifd. x. 7. of the Book of Wifdom) with plants bearing fruit that never come to ripenefs, and a ftanding pillar of falt is a monument of an unbelieving foul.

Demetrius Son of Antigonus King of Macedonia, being fent by King Antigonus his Father againft the Nabatheans, marched with his Army to the lake Afphaltites, there he obferved, that a confiderable revenue might be raifed from the Bitumen; and at his return fpoke of it to the King his Father[p]. Antigonus was very well pleafed with a difcovery which might bring him in confiderable fums, and immediately fent Jerom the Cardian to examine into the matter, and execute the defign which had been formed, of fettling a fort of manufacture there; but he had fcarce got the boats ready which were neceffary for this fifhing, and begun to fill his magazines and ware-houfes, but the Arabians, to the number of fix thoufand, fell upon him, burnt his boats, killed a great part of his workmen, and obliged him to retire. Thus the project mifcarried.

The Afphaltus, or Bitumen of Judæa, or the Dead Sea, is thought to be the beft of any that is known; it rifes at particular feafons from the bottom of the lake, and appears upon the water fometimes as large as an Ox, at other times like a Boat or Veffel. The Arabians thereabout fifh for it diligently, or gather it upon the fhore, as often as the wind drives it thither. It ferves for feveral ufes in medicines; formerly it was employed in embalming bodies, particularly in Egypt. The true Afphaltus or Bitumen of Judæa is fhining, of a purple colour, very weighty, and of a ftrong fmell. There is no more Bitumen brought from Judæa, but that which we fee in Apothecaries fhops is a compofition of oil, brimftone and pitch.

ASPHAR. This probably is the fame as the lacus Afphaltites, whereof we have been fpeaking. In the firft Book of Maccabees ix. 33. it is faid that Jonathan and Simon his Brother retired into the Defart of Thecoe, near the lake Afphar. Now we know of no other lake in the neighbourhood of Thecoe, befides that which is called Afphaltites.

I. ASRIEL, the Son of Gilead, Head of the Family of the Afrielites, Numb. xxvi. 31.

II. ASRIEL, the Son of Manaffeh, Jofh. xvii. 2. 1 Chron. vii. 14.

ASS, an Animal fit for domeftick ufes, there is frequent mention of it in the Scripture. People of the beft quality in Paleftine generally rode on Affes. Deborah in her Song defcribes thofe of the greateft power in Ifrael by thefe words, Ye that ride on white Affes. Jair of Gilead had thirty Sons, who rode upon as many Affes, and commanded in thirty Cities. Judg. v. 10. Ch. x. 4. Abdon, one of the Judges of Ifrael, had forty Sons, and thirty Grandfons, who rode on feventy Affes. Ch. xii. 14.

The Afs was declared an unclean creature by the Law, and no one was permitted to tafte the flefh of it, becaufe it did not chew the cud. Levit. xi. 26. To draw with an Ox and an Afs together was prohibited. Deut. xxii. 10. The hiftory of Balaam's Afs which fpoke to him is very well known. Numb. xxii. 2 Pet. ii. 6. In fome places of the Gofpel there is mention of a milftone, or mola afinaria, to exprefs a large milftone, fuch as was turned by Affes, bigger and heavier than thofe turned by flaves. Matth. xviii. 6. Mark ix. 41.

The Jews were accufed by fome Pagans with worfhiping the head of an Afs. Appion the Grammarian feems to be the firft Author of this flander[q]. He affirmed, that the Jews kept the head of an Afs in the Sanctuary of the Temple; and that it was difcovered there, when Antiochus Epiphanes took the Temple of Jerufalem, and entred into the moft private part of this Sacred Place. He added, that one Zabidus, upon a certain day having fecretly got into their Temple, carried off the Afs's head, and conveyed it to Dora. Suidas[r] fays that Damocritus, or Democritus, the Hiftorian averr'd that the Jews adored the head of an Afs made of gold, and facrificed a man to it every three, or as he fays elfewhere[s], every feven years, after having cut him in pieces.

Plutarch[t] and Tacitus[u] were impofed upon by this calumny. They believed that the Hebrews adored an Afs, out of gratitude for the difcovery of a Fountain, which was made to them by one of thefe creatures in the Wildernefs, at a time when they they were parched with thirſt, and extremely tired; Effigiem animalis, quo monſtrante, errorem, ſitimque depulerant, penetrali ſacravere, ſays Tacitus.

[p] Diodor. Sicul. l. 19. [q] Appion. apud Jofeph. l. ii. contra Appion. [r] Suidas in Damocrito. [s] Idem in Juda. [t] Plutarch. Sympofia. l. iv. c. 5. [u] Tacit. hift. l. v.

The Heathens would impute the ſame impertinency to Chriſtians: Audio Chriſtianos, ſays Cæcilius [w], turpiſſimæ pecudis aſini caput conſecratum inepta neſcio quam perſuaſione venerari. Tertullian [x] tells us the ſame thing, Nam & quidam ſomniaſtis caput aſininum eſſe Deum noſtrum *. He ſays moreover, that ſome who were enemies to the Chriſtians expoſed a picture to publick view, wherein there was a perſon repreſented holding a Book in his hand, dreſſed in a long robe, with Aſſes ears, and one foot like an Aſs, with this inſcription, The God of the Chriſtians has an Aſs's hoof. St. Epiphanius [y] ſpeaking of the Gnoſticks, ſays they taught that the God Sabaoth had the figure of an Aſs; and that others deſcribed him in the ſhape of a Hog. Thoſe learned men who have endeavoured to ſearch into the original of this ſlander, are very much divided in their opinions. The reaſon which Plutarch and Tacitus bring for it would be the moſt plauſible, if there were any truth in the fact whereupon they ground it. But we ſee nothing in the hiſtory of the Jews that can any way favour this circumſtance, of the Aſſes which are ſuppoſed to have ſhewn Moſes a ſpring of water. Tanaquil Fevre has attempted to prove that this accuſation proceeded from the Temple in Egypt called Onion, as if this name came from Onos, an Aſs. Which is indeed a very happy conjecture; for it is very credible that the report of the Jews worſhiping an Aſs, might come originally from Egypt; and it is well known that the Alexandrians had a great averſion to the Jews, and were very much inclined to raillery and defamation. But they might have been informed, that the Temple Onion at Heliopolis took its name from Onias the High Prieſt of the Jews [z], who built it in the reign of Ptolomy Philometor and Cleopatra; in the year of the World 3854. before J. C. 146. before the vulgar Æra 150.

Others [a] have aſſerted, that the miſtake which the Heathens fell into in this particular, proceeded from an ambiguous and wrong way of reading. The Greeks ſaid that the Hebrews adored Heaven, Ouranon; inſtead of Ouranon, they might in the way of abbreviation write Ounon; from whence the Enemies of the Jews concluded that they worſhiped an Aſs, Onon. Or perhaps reading in Latin Authors that they worſhiped Heaven, Cœlum [b],

Nil præter nubes & Cœli numen adorant, inſtead of Cœlum, they read Cillum †, an Aſs [c], and ſo gave out that the Jews adored this Animal. Bochart [d] is of opinion, that their error aroſe from an expreſſion in the Scripture, The mouth of the Lord hath ſpoken it; in the Hebrew, Pi-Jehovah, or pi-ieo. Now in the Egyptian language Pieo ſignifies an Aſs; the Egyptians hearing the Jews often pronouncing the word Pieo, believed that they called upon their God, and thence inferr'd, that they adored an Aſs. Theſe explications are very ingenious, but there is no ſolidity at all in them. It is very probable that no one will be ever able to give a good reaſon for any thing ſo ridiculous as this accuſation. M. Le Moine ſeems to have hit it off beſt, who ſays, that in all probability the Urn of gold wherein the Manna was incloſed, and which was preſerved in the Sanctuary, was taken for the head of an Aſs; and that the Omer of Manna might have been confounded with the Hebrew, Chamor, which ſignifies an Aſs.

Iſai. i. 20. xl. 5. lviii. 14.

עמר Omer. חמר or חמור Aſinus.

BALAAM's ASS. The Reader, in the Article BALAAM, may ſee the account of what paſſed between him and his Aſs which ſpoke to him. Here I ſhall inſiſt only on an examination of this fact, and enquire whether it really and literally happened as Moſes relates, or whether it be an allegory only, or the mere imagination or viſion of Balaam. S. Auſtin [e], with the greateſt number of the Commentators, ſuppoſes the fact to be certain, and he underſtands it exactly according to the letter. He finds nothing in the whole account of it more ſurprizing than the ſtupidity of Balaam, who heard his Aſs ſpeak to him, and talked to it again, as with a reaſonable perſon. Our Saint is of opinion, that this Diviner was accuſtomed to prodigies like this, talibus monſtris aſſuetus; or that he was ſtrangely blinded by his avarice, not to be ſtop'd by an event of ſo extraordinary a nature. He adds, that God had not given the Aſs a reaſonable ſoul, but permitted it to pronounce certain words, in order to reprove the Prophet's covetouſneſs.

St.

[w] Cæcil. apud Minut. [x] Tertull. Apolog. c. 16. [y] Epiphan. de hæreſ. de Gnoſtic. [z] Vid. Joſeph. l. xiii. c. 6. & l. xiv. c. 14. & de Bello, l. i. c. 7. & l. vii. c. 37. [a] Author libri cui titulus, Laus Aſini. [b] Juvenal Satyr. 14. [c] Pollux Onomaſt. l. vii. c. 13. [d] Boch. de Animal. Sacr. l. ii. c. 18. [e] Aug. qu. 48. & 50. in Geneſ.

* Chriſtians, for this reaſon, were called Aſinarii. But there is nothing in their Religion, or in the Hiſtory of the Primitive Church, which could make way for ſuch a calumny. As the Chriſtians of the firſt Ages were accuſed very groundleſly of worſhiping an Aſs, the ſame may be ſaid too of the Jews, and that the ſtory of the Samaritans adoring a Pigeon on Mount Gerizim is a fiction, for which there is as little foundation.

† Judæus licet & porcinum numen adoret, & Cilli ſummas advocet auriculas. Petron. Where the common reading is Cœli, but corrected Cilli. Κίλλος, &c.

St. Gregory of Nyssa[f] seems to think, that the Ass did not utter any words distinctly, but that having brayed as usual, the Diviner, whose practice it had been to draw presages from the cries of Beasts, and singing of Birds, comprehended easily the Ass's meaning by its noise. Moses designing to ridicule this superstitious art of the Augurs and Soothsayers, relates the matter as if the Ass really spoke in words articulate.

Maimonides asserts this whole dialogue to be only a kind of fiction and allegory, whereby Moses relates what passed only in Balaam's imagination, as a piece of real history.

Others[g] have believed that the difficulty which occurs naturally to every man's mind, upon enquiring how Balaam came to answer his Beast without any sign of amazement, as if it had been not only capable of reasoning, but had even the use of speech; this difficulty, I say, they think sufficiently accounted for, by saying that Balaam believing the transmigration of souls, which supposes a continual revolution of souls passing from one body into another, from that of a Man into that of a Beast reciprocally, as fate or choice determine; that this Prophet, I say, was not surprized at the Ass's complaint to him, and might without astonishment answer and converse with it.

According to their system who hold that Beasts have the use of Reason to a certain degree, the difficulty of this place does not consist in observing Balaam's Ass to complain and reason, but only in hearing it speak. It is not uncommon to see Parrots, Ravens, Magpies, Jackdaws and Green-finches learn to talk, because their organs are susceptible of the habit of speech. But we cannot conceive how an Ass can do any thing like this. Notwithstanding the Ancients have made no scruple of advancing things as incredible; for example, that the Serpent spoke to Eve; that an Ass spoke to Bacchus; that Achilles's Horses, Phrixus's Lamb, and Porus's Elephant uttered words, and spoke to their Masters. It is necessary either that the Ancients who relate these things understood them in an allegorical and figurative manner, or that they had not the same idea which we have of the impossibility of 2 Pet. ii. 16. these events. The Apostle St. Peter speaks of this fact as literal and certain; and so all interpreters explain it. We must own therefore, that it is a miraculous fact, related by an inspired Writer, whose authority we are not allowed to call in question in the least particular. But we study such ways of explaining it as are most conformable to reason, and most proper to solve the difficulties of it, without attacking the truth of the history. Now it is very possible for God to make an Ass speak articulately: it is indeed something miraculous, and above the ordinary faculty of this Animal; but not against the laws of Nature.

ASS, wild, an Animal formerly very common in Palestine, and frequently spoken of in Scripture. It lives in the most remote desarts, and is very jealous of its liberty. It can hardly endure thirst; Job xi. 12. xxxix. 5. and draws a great number of females of its own species after it. Josephus relates[h], Jer. xiv. 6. Ps. ciii. 11.
that Herod the Great sometimes killed at one hunting only forty wild Asses *. Some of the Moderns have supposed the wild Ass to be a very beautiful Animal[i], about the size of a midling Mule, pretty tall, fat, with fine smooth hair; and that it has nothing of the Ass but the ears; that the hair of it is variously coloured in a very singular manner, with grey, black, and reddish fillets, all of the same size and proportion, which turn in a circle towards the flanks, and in curls towards the other parts. One of them has been sold for fourteen or fifteen thousand gold crowns. Ludolfus has given us a print of one, in the Comment on his Ethiopic History, p. 150. He says the Africans call this Animal Zecora; and the inhabitants of Congo, Zebra; and that the name of the wild Ass is given it very improperly.

The Eastern people say that the wild Ass is one of the swiftest Animals that is. The flesh of it is good to eat. I have seen the skin of one of these Asses stuff'd at M. Paul Lucas's, which shews that they are about the size of a midling Mule, with several lists of a brown colour, grey, black, and inclining to red. It is my conjecture that these are the Asses which the Scripture calls white Asses[k], which the Princes of Israel rode upon. It is certain that this Ass is not wild but tame.

The name Zecora, by which the Africans call it, is much the same with that of Zechora, by which Deborah mentions the She-Asses made use of generally by the Great Men of Israel for riding, whereof we have been just now speaking. She seems to intimate that these Animals were of service in war; and there are some still [f] Greg. Nyss. in vitâ Moysis. [g] Cleric. in Num. xxii. 28. [h] Joseph. de Bello, l. i. c. 16. [i] Almeida, Bernier, Litteræ PP. Societ. a Goa 1624. Telles. Vid. & Philostorg. l. iii. c. 11. [k] Jud. v. 10. צחורות אתונות 70. Ἐπὶ ὄνου θηλείας μεσημβρίας, alias μεσημβρινῆς καὶ λαμπρῶν.

* The Foal of a wild Ass was thought by the lovers of good cheer to be delicious eating. Pullis eorum seu præstantibus sapore, Africa gloriatur, quos Lalisiones appellant. Plin. l. 8. c. 94. Martial places it in his catalogue of fine dishes. Ep. l. xiii. p. 97.

Cum tener est onager, solaque lalisio matre
Pascitur; hoc infans, sed breve nomen habet.

ftill to be feen in the Eaft, which are employed in fuch ufes.

The Beaft upon which the Mahometans affirm their falfe Prophet Mahomet to have been mounted, in his fuppofed journey to Heaven, was, as they fay, of a middle fize between an Afs and a Mule; the name of it was Borak, which fignifies bright, fhining. I make no queftion but this was one of the Affes we are here fpeaking of, from whence Bourique in French is derived. The other Etymologies which are given of this word are all ftrained, and far-fetched. Boruk in Arabick, and Zecora in Hebrew, fignify the fame thing.

ASSARON, or Omer *, is a meafure of capacity in ufe among the Hebrews. It was the tenth part of an Ephah, as its name, Affaron, denotes; for it fignifies Exod. xvi. 16. tenth. It contained five pints. The Affaron was the meafure of Manna which God appointed for every Ifraelite.

ASSEMON, Affemona, the fame as Afemon, Azmon, Hafhmonah, or Jefhi-
1 Sam. xxiii. 25. Jofh. xv. 4. mon, a City in the Wildernefs of Maon, lying Southward of the Tribe of Judah. It is likewife an incampment of the If-
Numb. xxxiii. 29. Ch. xxxiv. 4, 5. raelites in the Defart. Azmon was the neareft City to Egypt on the South fide.

ASSIDEANS, a name which we meet with in Maccabees, as 1 Macc. ii. 42. vii. 13. There are difputes concerning the original of this term. Some think it comes from חסידים the Hebrew, Chafidim, merciful, pious,
Eccl. xliv. 10. holy. The Author of Ecclefiafticus, in the encomium which he makes of the greateft Men of his Nation, calls them merciful Men; which is equivalent to the name of Affideans, taken in the fenfe which we have been fpeaking of. Others maintain[1], that the Affideans are the fame as the Effenians, whofe way of living has been fo much commended by Jofephus, Philo, and even Pliny, and by many others after them. This opinion feems to be 4 Macc. vi. confirmed by the fourth Book of Maccabees, which calls the Effenians Afdanim. Others have thought the Affideans were afterwards divided, and produced the Sadducees and Pharifees. The name of Sadducees fignifies juft; and that of Pharifees, feparated; to fhew that they were diftinguifhed from other Jews by their juftice and good life.

Scaliger fuppofed the Affideans † to be a confraternity of Jews, whofe principal devotion confifted in keeping up the edifices belonging to the Temple; they were not content with paying the common tribute of half a fhekel a head, which was appointed for the upholding of the Temple, but voluntarily impofed other Taxes upon themfelves. They fwore by the Temple; every day except the eleventh of the month Tizri, they offered a Lamb in facrifice, which was called the Sin-offering of the Affideans. And from this fect the Pharifees fprung, who produced the Effenians. Scripture reprefents the Affideans 1 Macc. ii. 42.
as a numerous fect diftinguifhed for its valour, as well as zeal for the Law; A company of Affideans, who were mighty men of Ifrael, even all fuch as were voluntarily devoted unto the Law.

I. ASSIR, the Son of Jeconiah King of Judah, 1 Chron. iii. 17. Affir was the Brother of Salathiel, who is mentioned in the genealogy which St. Matthew gives us of our Saviour [m].

II. Assir, the Son of Korah, of the Tribe of Levi, 1 Chron. vi. 22. Exod. vi. 24.

ASSOS, a maritime City which fome Geographers defcribe as belonging to Myfia, and others to Troas. St. Luke, and other of St. Paul's companions in his voyage, went by Sea from Troas to Affos; but St. Paul went by land thither, and meeting them at Affos, they all went Acts xx.
together to Mytilene, in the year of J. C. 56. 13, 14.

I. ASSUMPTION, a term particularly made ufe of in the language of the Church, to fignify the death of the Holy Virgin; and, according to fome Ancients, and many Moderns, her refurrection, which happened three days after her death, and her elevation up into Heaven. But it muft be confeffed, that all the particulars which have been publifhed concerning the death of the Bleffed Virgin; and what fome Authors fince the fifth Age have written of it appears to be extremely dubious, after what has been written on this fubject in thefe latter Ages. The Reader may fee in particular, M. de Tillemont, Tom. 1. Notes 13, 14, 15. on the Holy Virgin. We fhall not enter into any nice examination of this Hiftory, which relates rather to Church Hiftory, than a Dictionary of the Bible, fince there is nothing faid in Scripture either of the Death or Affumption of the Virgin.

II. ASSUMPTION

[1] Ferrar. in 1 Macc. vii. 13. Grot. Tirin. Mari. Gorionid. alii.

[m] Matt. i. 12. collat. cum 1 Par. III. 17.

* Afferon and [illegible], fignify the fame as Gomer. Jofephus, lib. viii. calls it [illegible]. In the Hebrew, inftead of Gomer, Affarith is often ufed; it fignifies the tenth part, viz. of the Ephah. Jofephus, l. iii. fays that in the time of Claudius, an Affaron or Omer of meal was fold for four Drachmæ; that is, at the rate of eight fhillings a peck; but it was in the time of dearth. Arbuthnot's Tables of ancient Coins, Weights and Meafures, &c. p. 101.

† The members of the Jewifh Church, after the captivity, were divided into the Zadikim, or righteous, who obferved only the written Law of Mofes; and the Chafidim, or pious, who fuperadded the Conftitutions and Traditions of the Elders. Thefe Chafidim were the Affideans, or Chaffideans, here mentioned, the Hebrew Chath anfwering our Ch, and is expreffed fometimes in Greek by an Afpirat, in Latin fometimes by an h, and fometimes is entirely omitted, as in Affideans. Prid. Connect. &c. Part II. Book III.

II. Assumption of Moses [n] an apocryphal Book intitled in Hebrew, Petirath Mosé [o], and in Greek, Analepsis Moysi [p]. This Book contains the history of the Death of Moses, and the conveyance of his Soul to Paradise. It is believed that the particular of Michael's ingaging with the Devil about the Body of Moses, which is mentioned in the Epistle of S. Jude, is taken from this work. We have treated at large of it in a Dissertation on the death and burial of Moses, inserted in the last volume of our Comment.

III. Assumption of the Virgin, an apocryphal Book, which S. John the Evangelist is said to be the Author of [q].

I. ASTAROTH, or Astaroth-Carnaim, or simply Carnaim, or Carnea, a City beyond Jordan, six miles or two leagues from Adraa, or Edrai, between this City and that of Abila. There were two places of the same name of Astaroth in the Batanæa, nine miles distant from each other, between Abila and Adraa [r]. There was besides a City called Carnaim, as Eusebius says [s], in the neighbourhood of Jerusalem.

The name of Astaroth-Carnaim is supposed to come from the Goddess Astarte, who was adored there, and was painted with horns, or a crescent on her forehead [*]; for Carnaim signifies Horns: and the Goddess Astarte was the most celebrated Deity of all that the Phœnicians worshipped. We have discoursed at length of her in our Dissertation concerning the Phœnician Gods, placed before the small Prophets, in pages lxi, lxii, lxiii. wherein we have shewn that Astarte was the Goddess of the Woods, the Moon, the Queen of Heaven, the celestial Goddess, or celestial Venus, or the Goddess of Syria, or Venus the Syrian, Wife of Adonis †. Lastly S. Austin assures us, that Juno is called Astarte by the Carthaginians [t]. This too in all probability was the same as Isis the Goddess of the Egyptians, who as well as Astarte [u] is represented with the head of an ox, or with horns upon her head [w]. The Author
2 Macc. xii. 26. of the second book of Maccabees says, that there was a Temple of the Goddess Atargatis in Carnion. Now Atargatis was the same as Derceto adored at Askelon, and represented under the form of a Woman with the lower parts of a Fish [x], and known by the Hebrews under the name of the God Dagon, or the God Fish.

II. Astaroth, the Mother of Melchisedeck, according to the Eastern people; others call her Asteria, or Selathiel. See Fabric. Apocryph. Vet. Test. p. 328.

ASTARTE, or Astaroth, a Phœnician Goddess. The Scripture often speaks of her in the plural number, by the name of Astaroth, which signifies properly flocks of Sheep or Goats. Sometimes she is called likewise Aserah, the Grove; or Aseroth, or Aserim, Woods [y], because she was adored in Woods, was the Goddess of them, and Groves were properly her Temple. Asera, or Groves, were consecrated to her, wherein such acts of lasciviousness were commonly committed, as made the worship of her infamous §. Sometimes she was called the Queen of Heaven; and sometimes the worship of her is described by that of the Host of Heaven. The sacred Authors join her almost always with the God Baal, and call her by the name of Gods, having no particular one for expressing a Goddess.

עשתרות Deut. xii. 13. Jer. vii. 18. xliv. 17, 18. 1 Kings xi. 5. xiii. 33. אלהי צבאים

It is believed that the Moon was adored under this name. Her Temples were generally with those of the Sun, and while bloody Sacrifices were offered to Baal, or to the Sun, and sometimes human Victims, Bread, Liquors and Perfumes were presented to Astarte, or the Queen of Heaven; tables were prepared for her on the platforms of houses, near gates, in porches and cross-ways, and on the first days of every month a supper was served up to her. This is what the Greeks called Hecate's supper. Is. lxv. 11. Jer. vii. 18. xliv. 17.

St. Jerom in several places translates the Hebrew name Asera, or Astarte, by that of Priapus, as it were to denote the many acts of lasciviousness which were committed in the Groves consecrated to Astarte. The Eastern people, in many places, worshiped 1 Kings xv. 13. 2 Chron. xv. 16.

[n] Origen. Peri-archon l. 3. Athanas. in Synopsi. [o] פטירת משה Petirath Mosé. [p] Ἀνάληψις Μώσεως. [q] Vide Sixt. Senens. l. ii. Baron. an. 44. §. 48. [r] Euseb. in Astaroth. [s] Idem in Carnaim. [t] Aug. qu. 16. in Judic. [u] Vide Sanchoniat. apud Euseb. Præp. l. i. c. ult. [w] Herodot. l. ii. c. 41. [*] See our Dissertation upon the Phœnician Deities, before the Book of Judges. [y] Asera אשרה Aseroth אשרות Aserim אשרים

[x] Lucian de Deâ Syr. [illegible] Her Image was the statue of a Woman with the head of an Ox.

Syderum Regina bicornis. Hor.

† See more on this subject in Selden, de Dîs Syr. Synt. 2. c. 2. and Grotius on Judges ii. 13. as also in Huet. Demonstr. Evang. Prop. iv. c. 10. Sect. 3. Astarte is thought by some to be the Ἡ Βααλ mentioned in the Septuagint, Tob. l. 5. [illegible] *They sacrificed to She-*Baal the Cow; the Sun and Moon being represented anciently under that figure.

§ This infamous practice is still continued in the East, according to the accounts of modern Travellers. Tavernier tells us, (P. 2. l. 2. 5.) that there is a Pagod near Cambay, where the Women prostitute themselves to their Idol. And Mark Polo takes notice of the like custom in the Province of Camul, that it was forbidden by Mangon Khan, whose order for three years was obeyed, but that his people observing then that their fields were not so fruitful as usual, sent Deputies to him, representing, Che da poi che mancavano di far questi piaceri & elemosyne verso forastieri le loro case andauano dimal in peggio. See Anciennes Relations des Indes & de la Chine, p. 171.

shiped the Moon under the name of a God; they represented her with a beard, and in armour [a]. The statue which was worshiped in the Temple of Heliopolis in Syria, was that of a Woman cloathed like a Man [b]. Solomon, who had married many Wives that were foreigners, introduced the worship of Astarte in Israel; but it was Jezebel principally, Daughter to the King of Tyre, and Wife to Ahab, who brought the worship of this Deity into vogue in Palestine.

St. Austin assures us, that the Africans, who were descended from the Phœnicians, maintained Astarte to be the same as Juno [c], Juno sine dubitatione ab illis (Pœnis) Astarte vocatur. Herodian [d] nevertheless says, that the Carthaginians call the heavenly Goddess Astroarche, and affirm her to be the same as the Moon. The Phœnician Divines [e] asserted confidently, that their Astarte was the Syrian Venus, born at Tyre, and Wife to Adonis; very different from her who was born in the Isle of Cyprus. Lastly, Lucian, who has written particularly concerning the Goddess of Syria, which is the same as Astarte, says expresly that she is the Moon, and no other; and it is indubitable that this Luminary was worshiped under different names in almost all parts of the East. Cælestem Afri, Mitram Persæ, plerique Venerem colunt, pro diversitate nominis, non numinis diversitate [f].

The manner of representing Astarte upon Medals, is not always the same [g]. Sometimes she is in a long, and at other times again in a short Habit; sometimes holding a long Stick with a Cross upon the top of it; in other Medals she is to be seen with a Crown of rays; and elsewhere she is crowned with Battlements, or by Victory. In a Medal struck at Cæsarea in Palestine, she is in a short Dress, crowned with Battlements, with a Man's Head in her right hand, and a Staff in her left. This is believed to be the Man's Head mentioned by Lucian, and which every year is brought from Egypt to Biblos, a City of Phœnicia, whereof we have spoken heretofore, in the Article Adonis. Sanchoniathon [h] says she was represented with a Cow's Head, the Horns describing the royalty and rays of the Moon.

I. ASTYAGES, otherwise Cyaxares, King of the Medes, and Successor to Phraortes, reigned forty years, and died in the year of the World 3409. before J. C. 591. before the vulgar Æra 595. He had a Son called Astyages, otherwise Darius the Mede; and two Daughters, Mandane and Amyit. Astyages or Darius the Mede, otherwise called Ahasuerus, made war against Saracus King of Nineveh, and reigned afterwards at Babylon, as we shall relate in the following Article. Amyit married Nebuchadnezzar the Son of Nabopolassar King of Chaldæa, and was the Mother of Evilmerodach. Mandane married Cambyses the Persian, and was the Mother of Cyrus.

II. Astyages, otherwise called Ahasuerus, Tobiæ ult. v. ult. in the Greek, and Dan. ix. 1. or Artaxerxes, Dan. vi. 1. in the Greek, or Darius the Mede, Dan. v. 31. and Cyaxares by his Father's name, in Xenophon, or Apandas in Ctesias. This Astyages was appointed by his Father Cyaxares Governour of Media [i], and sent with Nabopolassar King of Babylon against Saracus, otherwise called Chyniladanus, King of Assyria. These two Princes besieged Saracus in Nineveh; took the City, and dismembred the Assyrian Empire. Astyages was with Cyrus at the conquest of Babylon [k], and succeeded Belshassar King of the Chaldæans, as is expresly mentioned in Dan. v. 30, 31. in the year of the World 3447. After his death, Cyrus succeeded him, in the year of the World 3456. See Dan. xiii. 65.

ASYLUM [l]. This word signifies a Sanctuary, whither unhappy people might retire to secure themselves from the violence of their Enemies, and whence no one could force them against their wills. It is supposed that Hercules's Grandsons were the first Authors of these places of refuge [m]: for they apprehending the resentment of those whom Hercules in his life time had used ill, set up an Asylum, that is to say, a Temple of Mercy, at Athens. Cadmus erected another at Thebes, and Romulus another at Rome, upon Mount Palatine. That of Daphne near Antioch, is very famous; hither, as we read in the Maccabees, Onias III. High Priest of the Jews, retired, and thought himself to be here in a place of safety; whereupon Andronicus, being corrupted by Menelaus, fraudulently persuaded him to go out of it, and immediately killed him. — z Macc. iv. 34. In the Year of the World 3834. before J. C. 168. before the vulgar Æra 172.

The Altar of Burnt-Sacrifices, and the Temple of the Lord, were likewise inviolable Sanctuaries. Thither Joab retired to secure himself, but Solomon observing that he would not quit the Altar, which — 1 Kings ii. 28, 29, 34.

[a] Vide Macrob. Saturnal. l. iii. c. 8. [b] Plin. l. v. c. 23. [c] Aug. qu. 16. in Judic. [d] Herodian. l. v. Οὐρανίαν καλοῦσι φοίνικες Ἀστροάρχην ὀνομάζοντες, σελήνην εἶναι θέλοντες. [e] Cicero l. iii. de natura Deorum. [f] Ambros. Ep. 31. [g] See our Dissertation on the Phœnician Deities, and D. Bern. de Montfaucon's Antiquity explained. [h] Sanchon. apud Euseb. præpar. l. i. c. ult. [i] Alex. Polyhistor. apud Cedren. [k] See Isai. xiii, xiv, xxi, xlv, xlvi, xlvii. Jerem. l, li. Megasth. apud Euseb. Præp. l. v. c. 41. [l] Asylum, Græcè Ἄσυλον, ab α & συλάω prædo; quod spoliare nefas. Quidam deducunt ab Aschel. אשל Lucus. [m] Servius ad Æneid. viii. v. 342.

which he embraced closely, ordered him to be killed upon the place. Moses commands, that any one who had committed any voluntary murder, and should fly for protection to the Altar, should be drag'd from thence. Sanctuaries are not made for the benefit of wicked men, as is acknowledged even by profane Authors[n], but in favour of the good and innocent, who are attacked unjustly. When Villains retired to the Sanctuary of the Temple, they were either starved to death there, or were forced from thence by fires kindled every where about them. We shall speak of the Cities of Refuge in another place. These were appointed in the land of Israel by God himself, in favour of those who by accident had committed an involuntary murder. See REFUGE, CITY OF REFUGE.

Exod. xxi. 14.

ASYNCRITUS, mentioned by St. Paul, Rom. xvi. 14. The Greeks make him Bishop of Hircania, and set down his Festival upon the 8th of April. The Roman Martyrology fixes it on the same day. We have no certain accounts of this Saint.

ATABYRIUS MONS. Mount Tabor. See TABOR. Upon this Mountain there was a City called Athabyrium, or Ithabyrium, mentioned by Polybius, l. i. p. 413. There are some Medals, on which we see Jupiter sirnamed Atabyrius. But as there are several Cities of this name, it is not known exactly in which he was principally honoured.

Gen. l. 11. גרן עטר ATAD, Atad's Threshing-Floor. This is the place where the Sons of Jacob, and the Egyptians who accompanied them, mourned for this Patriarch; and which was afterwards called Abel-mizraim, the mourning of the Egyptians. Some there are who place it beyond Jordan; but others think it was on this side the River. St. Jerom[o] fixes it between the Jordan and Jericho, two miles from the river, and three from Jericho, in the place where afterwards Beth-agla was built. Procopius of Gaza does the same[p]. They who place it Eastward beyond Jordan, seem to have been led into this mistake by St. Jerom's words, who says that Abel-mizraim, or the Mourning of the Egyptians, or the Threshing-floor of Atad, is beyond Jordan; but these words, beyond Jordan, he understood with respect to those who came from Egypt, with regard to whom the Threshing-floor of Atad was beyond this river, supposing they took the same way which the Israelites did afterwards, in their journey to the land of Canaan; which is not at all certain.

ATARAH, the Wife of Jerahmeel, and Mother of Onam, 1 Chron. ii. 26.

ATAROTH. There are several Cities of this name. There is one in the Tribe of Gad, beyond Jordan, Numb. xxxii. 34. the same probably with Atroth-Shophan, which was given to the Tribe of Gad, xxxii. 35. and another upon the frontiers of Ephraim, between Janohah and Jericho, Josh. xvi. 7. It is probably the same with Ataroth-Addar, mentioned in Josh. xvi. 5. xviii. 13.

ATER. His Children, to the number of fourscore and eighteen, returned from Babylon. Ezra ii. 16.

ATHACH, a City in the Tribe of Judah, 1 Sam. xxx. 30.

I. ATHALIAH, the Daughter of Ahab King of Samariah, and Wife to Joram King of Judah. She being informed that Jehu had put to death her Son Ahaziah, and two and forty Princes of his blood, born of different Women, she resolved to massacre all the Princes of the Royal Family, that she might be able to ascend the Throne of Judah without any obstacle. But Jehosheba the Daughter of King Joram, and Sister to King Ahaziah, took Joash the Son of Ahaziah, with his Nurse, and privately conveyed him away, while Athaliah's Officers, by her orders, were murdering the King's Children. This young Prince for six years was supported privately, together with his Nurse, in the Temple; and in the seventh year the High Priest Jehoiada determined to place him upon the Throne of his Ancestors, and procure the destruction of Athaliah. He called together the Priests and Levites who guarded the Temple, discovered his design to them, shewed them the young King, and, without losing time, having first posted them at proper places, he declared young Joash King, with great acclamations of the multitude.

2 Kings xi. 1, 2, &c.

In the Year of the World 3120. before J. C. 880. before the vulg. Æra 884.

Athaliah having heard the noise, entred the Temple of the Lord amidst the croud, and upon seeing the young King seated on his Throne, she tore her cloathes, and cried out, Treason! Treason! At the same time Jehoiada commanded the Levites who were in arms to take her and carry her without the inclosure of the Temple, and if any one followed her, to put him to the sword. The Officers therefore laid hands on her, and dragg'd her thro' the way of the Horse-gate, near the Palace, and in this place she was slain, in the year of the World 3126. before J. C. 874. before the vulgar Æra 878. She reigned six years.

II. ATHALIAH, of the Tribe of Benjamin, 1 Chron. viii. 26.

ATHAR, a City in the Tribe of Simeon, Josh. xix. 7. St. Jerom speaks of a place called Atharus, four miles North from [n] Demosthen. Ep. 3. de Lycurgi liberis.

[o] Hieronym. in locis Hebr. in Area Atad.
[p] Procop. Gaz. ad Gen. l.

from Sebaſta, or Samaria; but this is too remote from the Tribe of Simeon. It is my opinion, that Athar is the ſame as Ether, or Jether, which was at firſt given to the Tribe of Judah, and afterwards yielded to that of Simeon. Ethar and Aſan are joined together, Joſh. xv. 42. as are Athar and Aſan, Joſh. xix. 7. Now Ether, or Jether, or Jethira, was in the times of Euſebius and St. Jerom [q], a large Town, eighteen miles from Eleutheropolis, in the Southern part of Judah, towards Malatis.

ATHENOBIUS, Son of Demetrius, was ſent by Antiochus Sidetes King of Syria, to Simon Maccabæus, to command him to ſurrender the Cities of Joppa, Gazara, and the Fortreſs of Jeruſalem, which were in his poſſeſſion; to pay him tribute for the Cities which he held out of Judæa, and to indemnify him for the great waſte which he had made upon the lands belonging to the Dominions of the King of Syria. He demanded five hundred talents of Silver, to repair theſe damages; and five hundred more for tribute which he pretended was due. Simon anſwered Athenobius, that he had robb'd the King of none of his Patrimony; and that for the places which the King required to have reſtored to him, they had been taken by the Jews, with an intention to ſecure themſelves from the continual miſchiefs which they did them: that notwithſtanding, he was ready to give the King an hundred talents for theſe places. Athenobius hereupon returned with great indignation to the ſiege of Dora, where Antiochus was, and reported Simon's anſwer. Antiochus ſent Cendebeus againſt him, who did nothing very remarkable. He was defeated and put to flight by the two Sons of Simon the High Prieſt, 1 Macc. xvi. 1, 2, & ſeq.

1 Macc. xv. 28.

ATHENS, a celebrated City of Greece, formerly a very powerful Commonwealth, which diſtinguiſhed itſelf very much in war; but acquired ſtill more glory, by the learning, eloquence and politeneſs, whereof its inhabitants made profeſſion. It would be to little purpoſe to give here an hiſtorical account of Athens. We ſhall only obſerve, that St. Paul coming thither in the year of J. C. 52. found it deeply plunged in idolatry, taken up in hearing news, and ſpreading it, extremely curious to know every thing, and very much divided in opinions concerning true Religion, and ſupreme Happineſs. St. Paul having taken an opportunity there to preach Jesus Christ, was carried before the Judges of the Areopagus, where he gave an illuſtrious teſtimony to Truth, and the Unity of God. There he converted Dionyſius the Areopagite, and Damaris, who according to ſome of the Ancients [r], was this Senator's Wife. Dionyſius was ordained firſt Biſhop of Athens, and it is believed that he ended his life there by an honourable Martyrdom.

Acts xvii. 15, 16, & seq.

ATHLAI, the Son of Belai, divorced his Wife becauſe ſhe was not an Iſraelite, Ezra x. 28.

ATHLETA. There is frequent mention of Wreſtlers, in the Books of Scripture, compoſed after the eſtabliſhment of the Grecian Monarchy in the Eaſt. Before this time neither Wreſtlers, nor any Sports with which they exerciſed themſelves were known there. Wreſtlers were men who uſed this exerciſe either for their diverſion, or for the ſake of health; or laſtly, that they might appear in the publick Games with reputation, and obtain the Crowns and Prizes which were propoſed at ſuch times as theſe diverſions were held. There were many ſorts of Games, but there were reckoned ſix principally, which were Wreſtling, Running, Leaping, Quoits, Boxing, and Boxing and Kicking both together. The life of Wreſtlers was very laborious; they abſtained from all manner of delicacy and ſoftneſs, and particularly from the uſe of Marriage [s]. To this way of living St. Paul alludes, when he ſays that every man when he ſtriveth for the maſtery is temperate in all things. And he farther alludes frequently to their exerciſes and rewards, 1 Cor. ix. 24. Know ye not that they which run in a race, run all, but one receiveth the Prize? Every man that ſtriveth for the maſtery is temperate in all things. Now they do it to obtain a corruptible Crown. See likewiſe Philip. iii. 14. The Athletæ who made profeſſion of learning and exerciſing what was commonly practiſed in the publick Games, whether Running, Wreſtling, Quoiting, Darting, or Leaping, lived in a very ſevere manner; entered young upon their exerciſes, endured cold and heat, lived in almoſt continual labour, abſtained from pleaſures, wine and cool drinks, eat by rule and meaſure, and denied themſelves ſeveral ſorts of food, which were thought apt to weaken them [t].

1 Cor. ix. 25.

Qui ſtudet optatam curſu contingere metam,
Multa tulit fecitque puer, ſudavit & alſit,
Abſtinuit venere & Baccho, &c.

The reward of theſe Athletæ was a Crown of Oak, Pine, Laurel or Olive; but there were other prerogatives beſides this, which conſiſted in exemption from publick Offices, in certain Honours, as in being led about in Triumph, and having Statues

[q] Euſeb & Hieronym. in Jether & Ether. See the Comment on 1 Sam. xxx. 27. Joſh. xv. 42, 43, 47. xix. 7.
[r] Chryſoſt. de Sacerdot. l. iv. c. 7. & Aſter. homil. 5. p. 162.
[s] Plato l. viii. de legib. Plin. l. 34. c. 18
[t] Horat de Arte Poet. ver. 412.

Statues erected for them in Cities. But originally the honour of the Victory was the only Prize of the Conquerors; and it is observed, that the first Athletæ lived in a manner much more frugal and laborious than they who came after them; which may serve to reconcile those who speak of Athletæ as people put out to fatten, homines altiles, as Tertullian says, with those who commend their abstinence and temperance.

ATHON, a frontier City of Arabia, taken by Alexander Jannæus, from Aretas King of Arbia[a].

ATLAS. Some make Atlas to be the Son of Japhet, or Japetus, and Clymene[b]. They say that this Hero having offended Jupiter, was condemned to bear the Heavens upon his Head and Shoulders, in a very remote Country, over-against the Hesperides. St. Jerom seems to point at the punishment of Atlas, when he says in Job ix. 13. Job, God whose anger no one can resist, and under whose weight they bend who bear the world; sub quo curvantur qui portant orbem. The Septuagint, The Fish or Sea-monsters which are under Heaven, bend under the weight of his Majesty. Ovid[c], who likewise makes him to be the Son of Japetus, says that he had a garden filled with excellent trees, one whereof bore golden Apples. Themis had foretold him, that a certain Son of Jupiter should carry off his Apples. He trusted the keeping of them to a great Dragon, and inclosed his garden with a strong wall. Perseus came to desire shelter of him; which he refusing, Perseus, to punish him, shewed him Medusa's head, and metamorphosed him into a Mountain. This gave occasion for the report of Atlas's bearing up Heaven, because Mount Atlas is so high that Heaven seems to rest upon the top of it. Eupolemus cited in Eusebius[d], thought Atlas was the same as Enoch, whom the Ancients relate to be the inventor of Arts, and of the Science of the Heavens.

ATTALUS, King of Pergamus. There were many Kings of this name in Pergamus. He who is mentioned in the first 1 Macc. xv. 22. Book of Maccabees, and to whom the Romans wrote in favour of the Jews, is Attalus, sirnamed Philadelphus, who governed the Kingdom in the room of his Nephew Attalus III. Philometor, Son of Eumenes King of Pergamus. This last Attalus was he who left the People of Rome heirs to all his riches[e]; which, as they pretended, was to be understood as including his Kingdom too[*]. The arrival of the Jewish Ambassadors at Rome, to renew their alliance, in consequence whereof the Roman Senate wrote to Attalus, is fixed to the year of the World 3865. and Attalus Philadelphus began to govern in 3845. He governed for one and twenty years, and in 3866. put the Kingdom into the hands of his Nephew Philometor, to whom of right it belonged. Attalus Philometor died without Children, in the year of the World 3871. before J. C. 129. before the vulgar Æra 133.

ATTALIA, a City of Pamphylia, whither St. Paul and Barnabas went to Acts xiv.
preach the Gospel, in the year of J. C. 45. 25.

AUGUR. The name of Augur is taken principally for those who concern themselves in foretelling what is to come, by the flight, the crowing, singing, or the feeding of Birds. I do not observe any presages made after this manner in the Scripture; but there are others in great number. The name of Augurs has been understood in a comprehensive sense, to signify all those who foretell what is to come by the view of Birds, the Heavens and Elements, of Animals, Lightning, the Entrails of Victims, Water, Wands, &c. and in this enlarged sense we sometimes find auguror & augurium † in Scripture; signifying all sorts of Magick or Divination. God had commanded his people, upon pain of death, to forbear consulting of Magicians; and had expresly forbidden Lev. xx. 6.
them to suffer any Magicians or Diviners Deut. xviii. 10, in the land belonging to the Hebrews. 11.

We read in Genesis, that Joseph or- Gen. xliv.
dered the Cup which he made use of in 5. Heb. נחש.
divining, to be concealed in Benjamin's 70. Αὐτὸς οἰωνισμῷ sack. Josephus ipse est in quo bibit Do- οἰωνίζεται minus meus, & in quo augurari solet. No ἐν αὐτῷ.
one pretends to say, that Joseph made use of the art of divining in a superstitious manner; he was too wise and religious to practise any thing so vain, and so contrary to Religion, as Divinations, of what nature soever they might be; but his people might speak to Joseph's Brethren according to the opinion of the Egyptians, who held Joseph to be a great Soothsayer[f]. Or the word Augurari in this place may be

[a] Joseph. Antiq. l. xiv. c. 2. [b] Hesiod. ver. 509, 515. [c] Ovid. Metam. l. iv. ver. 630, &c. [d] Euseb. Præpar. l. 9. [e] Livius l. lix. [f] D. Tho. 22. qu. 95. art. 7.

* Videas etiam Epistolam Mithridatis Regis Ponti ad Arsacem, Regem Parthiæ inter fragmenta Salustii, l. 4. in quâ epistolâ vocat hoc testamentum simulatum & impium testamentum. Aristonicus the next Heir, Son of Eumenes; and Brother of Attalus by another Mother, claim'd the Crown of Pergamus as his inheritance, took possession of it, defeated Licinius Crassus the Consul, cut off him and his Army, and was not reduced till after four years continuance of this war. See Prid. Connect. &c. Part II. Book V.

† The Hebrew words thus translated in the Latin Vulgate are, אוב and אבות, which differ pretty much in signification from Augur and Augurium. The Πνεῦμα Πύθωνος, in Acts xvi. 16. seems to come nearer the meaning particularly of אוב, which by Buxtorf is rendred Pytho and Utres. Hinc, says he, Pythonis significatio juxta Aben Ezram, quod ex tumido ventre, quasi Utre oracula deponent inde ἐγγαστρίμυθος dictus fuit. But we know of no sort of Divination among the Hebrews, like that expressed properly by the word Augurium.

be understood to mean foretelling what is to come: thus the Cup here mentioned is that which Joseph used in offering libations to God, when he had a mind to consult him about any thing future [a]. The Eastern people have always been very superstitious; they brought the generality of Divinations into vogue. Some of them have pretended to understand the language of Birds; upon which the art of Augury is founded. Notwithstanding the Romans made use of it in their most serious undertakings, the most sensible of them in their hearts laughed at it *.

AUGUSTUS, Emperor of Rome, and Successor to Julius Cæsar. The battle of Actium, which he fought with Mark Antony, and which made him master of the Empire, happened fifteen years before the Birth of Jesus Christ, in the year of the world 3985. Augustus lived seventeen years after it. He died in the 14th year of the common Æra, and seventeen years after the Birth of our Saviour. This was the Emperor who appointed the Enrol-
Luke ii. 1. ment mentioned by S. Luke, which obliged Joseph and the Virgin to go to Bethlehem, the place where Jesus Christ was born.

Augustus procured the Crown of Judæa for Herod from the Roman Senate. After the defeat of Mark Antony, Herod adhered to Augustus, and was always very faithful to him. Augustus loaded him with honours and riches; and when this Monarch undertook to subject Arabia to the Roman Empire, Herod gave Ælius Gallus, who had the charge of this expedition, five hundred of his guards. Augustus was pleased to undertake the care of Alexander's and Aristobulus's education, Herod's Sons, and gave them apartments in his palace. When he came into Syria, Zenodorus and the Gadarens waited on him with their complaints against Herod, accusing him of violence, rapine, and tyranny. But Herod by his presence cleared himself of these accusations, and obliged his accusers to lay violent hands upon themselves to prevent their falling into his; and Augustus was so far from having any regard to what was charged upon him, that he heaped new honours on him, and augmented his Kingdom with the addition of Zenodorus's Tetrarchy [b]. He was so kind as to examine into the quarrels between Herod and his Sons, and reconciled them.

Syllæus Minister to Obodas King of the Nabatheans having accused Herod of making an irruption into Arabia with a powerful Army, and destroying abundance of people there [c], Augustus wrote to Herod about it in an angry manner, but he justified his conduct so well, that the Emperor restored him to his good graces, and continued them to him ever after. But this did not prevent his disapproving very much the rigours exercised by Herod towards his Sons, he having put to death Alexander and Aristobulus, and last of all Antipater; whereupon the Emperor observed, that it were better a great deal to be Herod's Hog than his Child [d].

Augustus after the death of Lepidus assumed the office of High Priest among the Romans [e]. This dignity gave him an inspection over Ceremonies, and matters relating to Religion. One of his first concerns was, to order an examination of the Sybils Books, which were then very common, and occasioned great disorders among the People, and in the Government, every taking the liberty of interpreting them, and giving such a turn to them as was agreeable to his fancy and inclinations. Augustus directed search to be made after them, and, as it is said, burnt near two thousand Copies of them. He preserved none but such as bore the name of some particular Sybils, and were esteemed to be their genuine works; and even these he submitted to a severe examination. Those which he preserved as authentick, were put into two little gold boxes under the pedestal of Apollo's statue, whose Temple was built within the inclosure of the palace. See hereafter the article Sybils.

AVIM, a City in the Tribe of Benjamin. Josh. xviii. 23.

AVIMS, People descended from Hevæus the Son of Canaan. This people dwelt at first in the country which was afterwards possessed by the Caphtorims or Philistines. The Scripture says expressly, Deut. ii. 23.
that the Caphtorims drove out the Avims, who dwelt in Hasserim even unto Azzah. Josh. xiii. 4.
There were also Avims or Hivites at Schechem or Gibeon, and consequently in the center of the promised land; for the Josh. xi. 19.
inhabitants of Schechem and the Gibeonites were Hivites. Lastly there were Genes. xxxiv. 29.
some of them beyond Jordan, at the foot of mount Hermon. Bochart thinks that Josh. xi. 3.
Cadmus, who conducted a colony of Phænicians into Greece, was a Hivite. His name Cadmus comes from the Hebrew, Kedem, the East, because he came from the

[a] Grot. in Gen. xliv. [b] Joseph. Antiq. l. xv. c. 13. [c] Idem Antiq. l. xvi. c. 14, 15.
[d] Macrob. Saturn. l. ii. c. 4. [e] Sueton. in Octav. Dio Cassius l. liv.

* And not only ridiculed it tacitly within themselves, but more explicitely and expresly. Cicero in his Book de Senectute takes notice of Fabius Maximus's Contempt of this Art, Augurque cum esset, says he, dicere ausus est; optimis auspiciis ea geri, quæ pro Reipublicæ salute gererentur: quæ contra Rempublicam fierent, contra auspicia fieri. Ennius ranks Augurs among other publick Cheats and Impostors who are named by him. Non enim sunt ii aut arte Divini, aut scientiâ, sed superstitiosi Vates, impudentesque Arioli, &c. And Accius, Nihil credo Auguribus, qui aures verbis divitant alienas, suas ut auro locupletent domos.

the Eastern part of the land of Canaan. The name of his Wife Hermione was taken from mount Hermon, at the foot whereof the Hivites dwelt. The metamorphosis of Cadmus's companions into serpents, is founded upon the signification of the name of Hivites, which in the Phœnician language signifies Serpents.

Genes. xxxiv. 35. AVITH, the capital City of Hadad King of Edom.

AULON. This is the name which in Eusebius's and S. Jerom's time [f] was given to that vast Valley which reaches along the river Jordan, from Libanus to the wilderness of Paran. This name seems to be derived from the Greek Aulos, which is taken for a Valley. The great plain and valley which lies between Libanus and Antilibanus is likewise called Aulon [g].

AUSITIDA. This is Job's country. See Uz, the land of Uz.

AUSTER, the South. Negeb, the South, in Scripture denotes Arabia Petræa, or the Southern part of Edom or Judah. Sometimes the Hebrews express
Deut. xxxiii. 23. it by the right hand. Eusebius and S. Jerom frequently make use of the word Daroma, to signify the South. This term is to be met with in many places of the Hebrew in the same sense. ים, דרום. Eccl. vi. 6.

AZA. The cities of Gaza and Azoth are sometimes so called [h]. Josephus farther takes notice of a mountain of this name, near unto which Judas Maccabæus fought against Bacchides, in the last encounter which he had with him, wherein he died [i]. In the first book of Maccabees ix. 15. this same place is called Mount Azotus. Ezech. xl. 24, &c.

AZALIAH, the Father of Shaphan. 2 Kings xxii. 3.

1 Chr. vi. 9. I. AZARIAH, High-Priest of the Jews. He succeeded Ahimaaz, and was himself succeeded by Johanan. Perhaps he and Amariah, who lived under Jehoshaphat King of Judah, about the year 3092 are one and the same person. 2 Chron. xix. 11.

1 Chr. vi. 10. II. AZARIAH, the Son of Johanan High-Priest of the Jews. He is perhaps the same as Zechariah the Son of Jehoiada, killed in 3164. 2 Chron. xxiv. 20, 22.

III. AZARIAH, High-Priest also of the Jews, in the reign of Uzziah King of Judah. This Prince having undertaken to offer incense to the Lord, Azariah opposed him with vigour; and the hand of God fell heavily on King Uzziah, and smote him with a leprosy. They carried him immediately out of the Temple, and he dwelt without the City, separated from the conversation of mankind to the day of his death. 2 Chron. xxvi. 17.

2 Chron. xxxi. 10. IV. AZARIAH, High-Priest of the Jews in the reign of Hezekiah. He was the Father of Hilkiah. See the Catalogue of the High-Priests.

V. AZARIAH, lived under the last Kings of Judah. He was the Father of Seraiah the last High-Priest of the Jews before the Captivity. 1 Chron. vi. 14.

VI. AZARIAH, Son to the High-Priest Zadok. We do not read, that he succeeded his Father. 1 Kings iv. 2.

VII. AZARIAH, the Son of Nathan, Captain of Solomon's Guards. 1 Kings iv. 5.

VIII. AZARIAH, or Uzziah, King of Judah, Son of Amaziah, began to reign at the age of sixteen years, and reigned two and fifty years at Jerusalem. His Mother's name was Jecholiah. He did that which was right in the sight of the Lord; nevertheless he did not destroy the high places, and the people, against the express prohibition of God, continued to sacrifice there. This Prince is called Uzziah in the Chronicles. He having taken upon him to offer incense in the Temple, which office was reserved peculiarly to the Priests, was struck with a leprosy, and continued without the City separated from other men to his death. 2 Kings xv. 1, 2, 3, &c. 2 Chron. xxvi. 16, 17, &seq. In the Year of the World 3221, before J. C. 779, before the vulgar Æra 783.

Josephus says [k], that upon this occasion a great earthquake was felt, and that the Temple opening at the top, a ray of light darted upon the King's forehead, and he appeared instantly to have a leprosy. The earthquake was so violent as to divide in half the mountain which lies to the West of Jerusalem, and the earth having moved along for the space of four furlongs, or five hundred paces, without ever stopping till it met with the mountain, which lies Eastward of the City, closed up the high way, and covered the King's gardens. This is what Josephus adds to the History related in the Chronicles. We know indeed that there was a very great earthquake in the reign of Uzziah. Amos and Zachary make mention of it, the Kings and Chronicles speak expressly of it; but it is not certain that it happened at the very time, when Uzziah took upon him to offer incense. Amos i. 1. Zech. xiv. 5.

The beginnings of Uzziah's reign were very happy. He obtained great advantages over the Philistines, Ammonites, and Arabians. He made additions to the fortifications of Jerusalem, and always kept an Army on foot of three hundred and seven thousand, and five hundred men; and he had great Magazines very well furnished with all sorts of arms, as well for attacking as defending. As he was a great lover of agriculture, he had a great number of husbandmen in the plains, vine-dressers in the mountains, and shepherds in the valleys. He died in the year of the world 3246, before J. C. 754, before the vulgar 2 Chron. xxvi. 4, 5, 6, &c.

[f] Euseb. & Hieronym. Onomastic. in Αὐλών.
[g] Vide Reland. Palæst. t. i. p. 364, 365, & 372.
[h] Stephan. in Gaza & Azotos.
[i] Joseph. Antiq. lib. xii. c. 19.
[k] Joseph. Antiq. l. ix. c. 11.

vulgar Æra 758. He was not buried in the royal Sepulchers, because he was a leper; but in the field where these monuments were.

IX. Azariah, the Son of John, and Father of Heber. 1 Chr. xi. 29.

X. Azariah, the Son of Uriel, otherwise called Zephaniah. 1 Chr. vi. 36.

2 Chron. xv. 1, &c. XI. Azariah, a Prophet, the Son of Oded, went by God's appointment to meet Asa King of Judah, as he returned after his succes against Zerah King of Ethiopia. Azariah addressed himself to Asa and his people, saying, The Lord hath assisted you, because you adhered to him. If ye seek him, ye will find him; but if ye forsake him, he will abandon you. Israel for a long time shall be without the true God, without Priests, Teachers, or Law. If they return to the Lord in their affliction, they will find him. At this time terror shall overspread all the inhabitants of the Earth, nation shall rise up against nation, and city against city. But for your part, take courage; let not your hands be weakened, and your perseverance shall be rewarded. These words inspired Asa with new zeal, and he began to destroy all the remaining idols in his Dominions. This is all we know of this Prophet. The particular we have related happened in the year of the world 3126, before J. C. 974, before the vulgar Æra 978.

XII. Azariah, the Son of Obed, one of those to whom the High-Priest Jehoida discovered, that the young Prince Joash was living; whom likewise he sent thro'-out all the land to gather the Levites together, in order to place this young Prince upon the Throne of his Ancestors. In the 2 Chron. xxiii. 1, 2, &c. year of the world 3126, before J. C. 974, before the vulgar Æra 978.

XIII. Azariah. This is the name of 2 Chron. xxi. 1, 2. two of Jehoshaphat's Sons, who was King of Judah.

XIV. Azariah, the Son of Hoshaiah,
Jerem. xliii. 2. accused the Prophet Jeremiah of deceiving the people, because he advised the Jews that remained behind after the Captivity against going into Egypt. Azariah supported by Johanan the Son of Kariah and some others, carried away Jeremiah and Baruch into Egypt with the rest of the people.

XV. Azariah, otherwise called Abednego, one of the three Israelites cast into the fiery furnace by Nebuchadnezzar, for refusing to adore the Statue which he had
Dan. iii. 19. erected. In the year of the world 3444, before J.C. 556, before the vulgar Æra 560.

I. AZARIAS. The Angel Raphael took this name, when he ingaged to conduct Tobias to Rages. Tob. vi. 6.

II. Azarias. He was left by Judas 1 Macc. v. 60.
Maccabæus with another Captain, whose name was Joseph, to guard Jerusalem; when they both heard how successful Judas had been, they had a mind to distinguish themselves by ingaging with the Enemy. They marched therefore with this design, but were defeated by Gorgias near Jamnia, and lost two thousand men, in the year of the world 3841, before J. C. 159, before the vulgar Æra 163.

AZAR, the Son of Shemah of the Tribe of Reuben. 1 Chr. v. 8.

AZAZEL, or Hazazel[l]; in Greek Apopompaios; in Latin, Emissarius. This is what we commonly call the Scape-goat, and shall speak of it under this title. Up- Levit. xvi. 5, 7, 8, &c. on the day of solemn expiation, the Elders of the people presented two Goats for the sins of all Israel. It was determined by lot which of the two should be sacrificed, and which set at liberty. This last was the Azazel, or Scape-goat, and let-go. Thus the Septuagint, Aquila, Symmachus, Theodoret, Cyril of Alexandria, and many other Interpreters explain it. They think that this Goat thus set at liberty, and loaded with the imprecations of the High-Priest and the sins of all the people, was like those animals, which the Heathens consecrated to some of their Deities, and left at liberty[m]. Az-azel in Hebrew may signify the Goat that goes away or escapes.

Others think that Azazel is the name of a Mountain; which some of the Rabbins[n] assert to be ninety furlongs, or eleven thousand nine hundred and five and twenty paces, distant from Jerusalem. Bochart will have it, that this word signifies Departure or Removal. Spencer says, it signifies some Demon, and that when the Scripture tells us of sending a Goat to Hazazel, it means that it was given to the Devil. Mark, the Head of the Marcosian Hereticks[o], called the Devil, whose name he made use of in forming his juggling tricks, Azazel. The same Spencer cites the Cabalists, and Julian the Apostate, as favouring his opinion[p]. M. Le Clerc translates Azazel, præcipitium. He believes that the Scape-goat was sent to some steep and inaccessible place, where it perished. He grounds his translation upon the 21st verse, where it is said, that the Goat Azazel was sent into the Wilderness, and in the 22d verse into some inaccessible place, in terram præruptam. He derives Azazel from two Arabick words Aza to be hard, and Azala to be in pain. But we

[l] עזאזל Haz-azel. 70. Ἀποπομπαῖος. Hieronym. Emissarius. Theodoret. qu. 22. in Levit. Ἀποπομπαῖον [illegible] ὡς ἀποπεμπόμενον εἰς τὴν ἔρημον. Sym. Ἀπερχόμενον. Abeuntem. Aq. Ἀπολελυμένον. Dimissum, solutum.
[m] Vide Spencer. Dissert. de Hirco Emissario. Bochart. de Animal. sacr. p. 1. l. ii. c. 55. Marsham sæculo 1. & p. 204, 207.
[n] Jonath. R. Saad. Gaon. Kimchi. R. Salomon. Abenezra, &c.
[o] Epiphan. hæres. 34.
[p] Julian. apud S. Cyril. l. ix. contra Julian.

we had better keep to the version of the old Greek Interpreters, who derived Azazel from the Hebrew Haz or Hez, a Goat, and Azal, he went away. See Spencer's Dissertation on the Scape-goat. Bochart, De animal. sacr. part. i. l. ii. c. 54. & seq. Marsham, Canon. Chronol. Egypt. Saecul. ix.

You have here the Ceremonies, which, as the Hebrews tell us[q], were observed in the several particulars relating to the Scape-goat. Two Goats were led into the inner-court of the Temple, and presented to the High-Priest on the North side of the Altar of Burnt-offerings: these two Goats were placed one on the right, the other on the left hand of the High-Priest. After this an urn was brought and placed between two, and two lots cast into it of wood, silver, or gold: but under the second Temple they were always of gold. Upon one of these lots was engraven, for the Lord, and upon the other for Azazel. After the urn had been well shook, the High-Priest put both his hands at once into it, and in each drew out a lot: that in his right hand decided the fate of the Goat placed on his right, that in his left of the Goat on his left hand. The Jews tell us, that during the whole Pontificate of Simon the Just, the lot which he drew with his right hand was always that on which was written for the Lord, which was understood as a happy Omen; whereas after his death this varied, and sometimes the lot on the right hand, sometimes that in the left was for the Lord.

After this the High-Priest fastned a long fillet, or narrow piece of scarlet to the head of Azazel, or the Scape goat; which piece under the Pontificate of Simon the Just appear'd always to be white, which was a particular favour of Heaven, and a sign that God granted the People the remission of their sins; whereas under other High-Priests it appeared sometimes white and sometimes of its natural colour, scarlet. To this the following words of Isaiah are applied, Tho' their sins were as scarlet, yet shall they be white as snow, &c. Isai. i. 18.

After the sacrifice of the Goat which was for the Lord, the Scape-goat was brought to the High-Priest, who put both his hands upon the head of this animal, and confessed all his own sins, and those of the people; then it was conducted into the wilderness by some person chosen for this office, and left upon the brinks of a precipice at twelve miles distance from Jerusalem; thus it was supposed to carry away with it all the sins of the people of Israel. Under the Pontificate of the same Simon the Just above mentioned, before the Scape-goat or Azazel had got half way down the precipice from whence he was cast, he was broken in pieces; whereas after the death of this High-Priest he fled alive into the desart, and was there met with by the Saracens, who took and eat him. See hereafter Solemn Expiation.

AZAZIAH, a Levite zealous for the law of the Lord. 2 Chr. xxxi. 13.

AZBUK, the Father of Nehemiah. He lived at Jerusalem in the time of Nehemiah. Nehem. iii. 16.

AZEKAH, a City in the Tribe of Judah. Josh. xv 35. The Philistines, in whose Army was Goliath, were incamped at Shocoh and Azekah. 1 Sam. xvii. 1. Eusebius and S. Jerom say, that in their time there was still a City of this name in being between Jerusalem and Eleutheropolis.

AZEL, the Son of Elasah, of Kish's Family. 1 Chr. viii. 37.

AZEM or Ezem, a City in the Tribe of Simeon. Josh. xix. 3. the same perhaps as Esmona or Asmona.

AZIMA or Hazimah. See above Ashimah.

I. AZMAVETH, or Azmoth, or Beth-azmoth, a City probably in the Tribe of Judah, adjacent to Jerusalem and Anathoth. Nehem. xii. 29. Nehem. vii. 28.

II. Azmaveth, the Son of Beroni, one of the thirty gallant men belonging to David's Army. 2 Sam. xxiii. 31.

III. Azmaveth, the Son of Adiel. 1 Chr. xi. 32. xxvii. 25.

IV. Azmaveth, the Son of Jehoadah, of the Tribe of Benjamin, and Saul's Family. 1 Chr. viii. 30.

AZMON, or Asmon, or Asmona. See Assemon.

AZNOTH-TABOR. Josh. xix. 34. or simply Azanoth, or Aznoth. Eusebius places it in the plain not far from Diocaesarea.

AZOR, the Son of Eliakim. His name is to be found in the Genealogy of Jesus Christ as Man. Matth. i. 13.

AZOTH, or according to the Hebrew reading Ashdod[r], was assigned by Joshuah to the Tribe of Judah, but was possessed a long time by the Philistines. This was a maritime City, and had a Port upon the Mediterranean. It was situated between Askelon and Akron; or between Jamnia and Askelon, as it is said in Judith iii. 2. in Graeco; or between Gaza and Jamnia, as Josephus says, Antiq. xiii. 23. All this may be easily reconciled by saying, that it lay between these Cities, but not immediately, nor in the same sense. See the Map. Azoth or Azotus was one of the five Governments belonging to the Philistines. Herodotus says[s], that Psammetichus Josh. xv. 47.

[q] Misna in Joma. Maimonid. Jom Haccipurim.
[s] Herodot. lib. ii. c. 157.

[r] אשדוד Ashdod. Gr. Ἄζωτος.

chus King of Egypt, lay nine and twenty years before Azoth, and that of all the Cities we know of, none ever maintained so long a siege. The Text of the Maccabees informs us, that Judas Maccabæus was killed on Mount Azotus.

1 Macc. ix. 18. I. AZRIEL of the Tribe of Manasseh, one of the brave Officers in David's service. 1 Chr. v. 24. He was made Intendant of the Tribe of Dan. 1 Chron. xxvii. 22.

II. AZRIEL, the Father of Seraiah. Jerem. xxxvi. 26.

III. AZRIEL, the Father of Jerimoth. 1 Chr. xxvii. 19.

I. AZRIKAM, the Son of Neariah, David's relation. 1 Chr. iii. 23.

II. AZRIKAM, the Son of Azel, Saul's relation. 1 Chr. viii. 38.

III. AZRIKAM, of the Tribe of Ephraim, massacred by Zichri. 2 Chron. xxviii. 7.

IV. AZRIKAM, the Son of Hachabiah, a Levite. 1 Chr. ix. 14.

I. AZUBAH, the Wife of Caleb. 1 Chr. ii. 18.

II. AZUBAH, the Wife of Asa King of Judah, and Mother to King Jehoshaphat. 1 Kings xxii. 42.

I. AZUR, Father to the false Prophet Hananiah. Jerem. xxviii. 1.

II. AZUR, the Father of Jaazeniah, Prince of the people. Ezech. xi. 1.

AZURA was, as the Eastern people tell us, the Daughter of Adam [t].

AZYMUS. This word comes from the Greek Azymos [u] which signifies unleavened. The Hebrews in one of their principal Festivals, which was the Passover, used unleavened Bread for seven days, Deut. xvi. 8. and this custom they observed in memory of what their Ancestors did, who when Exod. xii. 8, &c. they went out of Egypt were obliged to carry meal with them, and make bread in haste; the Egyptians so much pressing them to be gone, that they had no leisure to make up their Bread, and leaven their meal. They began to cleanse their houses Exod. xii. 39. of every thing leavened upon the 13th of the month Nisan, every place was carefully examined, lest any thing leavened should be left in corners and cupboards: so that on the 14th of Nisan about noon, there was to be none in the house. The Jews at this day very religiously observe this practice *, and S. Paul in some places alludes to it, saying, a little leaven leaveneth the whole lump: that is to say, if there 1 Cor. v. 6. and Galat. v. 9. were ever so little leaven in any quantity of Bread or Paste, during the time the Passover lasted, it was thereby corrupted, and for that season rendred unclean. It was to be thrown away and burnt. They were no more permitted to use it. He says elsewhere, that the Christian Passover 1 Cor. v. 7, 8. consists, not in abstaining from leavened Bread, but in living with purity, sincerity, and innocency; and our Saviour in Matt. xvi. 11. the Gospel warns his Apostles to take care of the leaven of the Pharisees, Sadducees, and Herodians, meaning their doctrine.

The Practice of the Jews at this day with relation to the use of unleavened Bread, is this [x]. They are forbid to eat, or have in their houses, or any place belonging to them either leavened Bread or any thing else that is leavened. That they may the better observe this rule, they search into all the corners of their houses with the most scrupulous exactness for all Bread or Paste or any thing like them that is leavened. After they have thus well cleansed their houses, they whiten them, and furnish them with kitchen and table-utensils all new, and with others which are to be used only on that day. If they are moveables, which have served for something else, and are made of metal, they have them polished and put into the fire to take away all the impurity which they may have contracted by touching any thing leavened. All this is done on the thirteenth day of Nisan, on the Vigil of the Feast of the Passover, which begins with the 15th of the same month, on the 14th day in the evening; for the Hebrews reckon their day from one evening to another.

On the 14th of Nisan at eleven a clock, they burn the common Bread, to shew, that the prohibition of eating leavened Bread is then commenced; and this action is attended with words, whereby the Master of the house declares, that he has no longer any thing leavened in his keeping; that at least he believes so, and has done all he could, that it might be so. Immediately after this, they set about making unleavened Bread, and they make as much as they shall have occasion for during the whole Octave of the Passover. They take care that the meal, which they use has been neither heated nor moistened; and lest their Bread should rise, they put it speedily into the oven, and when they take it out, they keep it in a very clean place. Thus their Bread is made in flat, heavy Cakes, of different figures. They sometimes provide finer for their sick, or for their friends, tho' they are Christians. They knead them together with milk, sugar and eggs: but always take [t] Joel in limine Chronograph. [u] Ἄζυμον, Azymus infermentatus. Heb. מצא Matza [x] Leo of Modena, his Ceremonies of the Jews. part 3. c. 3.

* There are many cases of Conscience relating to this matter which are studied by the Talmudists. Some of their principal decisions may be seen in the Mishnah, Ordo Festorum, T. 2. p. 138. Maimon. de Solemnit. Paschatis, c. 1. Fascic. 7. p. 839.

take particular care to have no leaven in them.

As to the question, whether Jesus Christ at his last Supper instituted the Eucharist with unleavened or leavened Bread, it depends chiefly upon knowing whether he observed the Passover like other Jews, or whether he anticipated it, or lastly whether he did more or not than barely sup with his Apostles. This is an enquiry which belongs not to this Dictionary. The Reader may consult those who have written expresly on this Subject, and our Dissertation upon the last Passover observed by our Lord, prefixed to our Comment on S. Matthew.

AZZAN, the Father of Paltiel, Numb. xxxiv. 26.

B.

BAAL or Bel, the God of the Phœnicians or Canaanites. Baal and Astaroth are commonly joined together; and as it is believed that Astaroth denotes the Moon, we may with good reason say that Baal is put for the Sun. The name of Baal is used in a generical sense, for the great God of the Phœnicians, Chaldæans, Moabites, &c. Baal in Hebrew signifies Master, Lord, Husband. It is joined often with the name of some other false God; as Baal-peor, Baal-zebub or Beelzebub, Baal-gad, Baal-zephon, Baal-berith.

Jerem. xxxii. 35. xix. 5. 2 Kings xvii. 16. 2 Kings xxiii. 4, 5, 12. 1 Kings xviii. 22. 2 Kings x. 19. 1 Kings xiv. 24. xv. 12. and xii. 47. 2 Kings xxiii. 7. Hosea iv. 14.

Baal is the most ancient God of the Canaanites. The Hebrews too often imitated the Idolatry of the Canaanites, in adoring Baal. They offered human Sacrifices to him, they erected Altars for him in groves, upon high places, and upon the terrasses of houses. Baal had Priests and Prophets consecrated to his Service. All sorts of infamous and immodest actions were committed in the Festivals of Baal and Astarte.

Some learned Men have asserted, that the Baal of the Phœnicians was no other than Saturn; and there was indeed a great conformity between the human Sacrifices offered to Saturn, and what the Scriptures tell us of the Sacrifices of Baal. Others are of opinion, that Baal was the Phœnician or Tyrian Hercules, a God of great antiquity in Phœnicia. But we have endeavoured to shew in our Dissertation on the Phœnician Deities, that Baal was the Sun, and that upon this supposition, all the marks we find in Scripture of this God may be easily explained.

This great Luminary was adored over all the East, and is the most ancient Deity, the worship whereof is acknowledged among the Heathens[y]. The Greeks paid divine honours to Men, and spread their false Religion among the Romans, and almost throughout the whole Earth; but the Eastern people adored the Stars and Elements. The very Egyptians, who were afterwards so lavish of their worship to men, animals, and things insensible, in the beginning had no other Deities but the Heavens, the Stars, and Elements. Their Religion, which to us appears, and in reality is, so monstrous and ridiculous, becomes so principally by their endeavouring to blend the Theology of the Greeks with theirs: and at last the Egyptians, Greeks and Latins, who were made ashamed of such an extravagant Religion, and of their vicious and mortal Gods, bethought themselves of returning to the simplicity of the Ancients, who worshipped the Air, Sun, Moon, Earth and Elements, and under these names meant nothing more than Nature the Mother of all things.

But it is impossible to excuse the absurdities of the Heathen Religion, whatever colours may be given it, or with what pretences soever it may be covered. The worship of a Star or Element is no more reasonable than that of any other Creature; and if the Heathens instead of making vicious and corrupt men and women the objects of their adorations, had chosen persons venerable for their innocency and virtue, they would have been condemned only for having worshipped the creature, and not reproached with having deified sin and lewdness.

They who held that the Stars were pure intelligences, or believed them to be animated and directed by Angels, were less inexcusable. Supposing this, they saw nothing in nature more perfect than the Sun, Stars and Planets: they were blameable only in that they did not rise from the Creature to the Creator, and did not pay to God the Honour which was due to him. Rom. i. 21.

The Hebrews sometimes described the Sun by the name of Baal Shemesh, Baal the Sun. Manasseh adored Baal, planted groves, and worshipped all the Host of Heaven: and Josiah desirous to repair the evil wrought by Manasseh, put to death the idolatrous Priests that burnt incense unto Baal, to the Sun, and to the Moon, and to the Planets, and to all the Host of Heaven. He commanded all the vessels that were made for Baal, and for the Grove, and for all the Host of Heaven, to be brought forth out of the Temple. Lastly, he took away the horses that the Kings of

2 Chron. xxxiii. 3, 5. 2 Kings xxiii. 5, 11.

לבעל שמש ולירח ולמזלות

[y] Plato in Cratylo.

of Judah had given to the Sun, and burnt the chariots of the Sun with fire. Here the Worship of the Sun is particularly described, and the Sun itself represented by the name of Baal.

The Temples and Altars of the Sun, or Baal, were generally upon eminences: As the Temple of the God of Israel was situated on a mountain. Manasseh placed in the two courts of it Altars to all the host of Heaven, and in particular the Idol of Astarte or the Moon. [2 Kings xxi. 5, 7.] Jeremiah threatens those of Judah who had sacrificed to Baal upon the house-top. [Jerem. xxxii. 29.] Josiah destroyed the Altars which Ahaz had erected on the terrass of his palace. [2 Kings xxiii. 12.]

Human Victims were offered to Baal, as they were likewise to the Sun. Mithrah, who was the same as the Sun, was honoured with the like Sacrifices [a]. Apollo sometimes required Victims of the same nature [a]. Moloch the God of the Ammonites is celebrated throughout the Scripture, for the Children which were made to pass through the fire in honour of him. Jeremiah reproaches the Inhabitants of Judah and Jerusalem with building the high places of Baal to burn their Sons with fire for burnt-offerings unto Baal.

We shall not examine in this place whether these Victims were really burnt, or made to pass only through the fire. The Reader may consult if he please the Article Moloch, and our Dissertation concerning this false Deity.

The Scripture has a particular term for describing the Temples consecrated to the Sun or Baal: it calls them Chamanim [b]: [Levit. xxvii. 30. Isai. xvii. 8. xxvii. 9. and 2 Chr. xxxiv. 4.] these were places enclosed with walls wherein there was kept up a perpetual fire. They were very frequent in the East, particularly among the Persians; and the Greeks called them Pyreia, or Pyratheia, from a word derived from the Greek, Pyr, Fire, or Pyra, a Funeral-pile. There was, as Strabo says, an Altar in them, abundance of ashes, and a fire which was never suffered to go out [c]. Maundrel in his journey from Aleppo to Jerusalem observed likewise some footsteps of these enclosures in Syria. In most of them there were no Statues; in others there were some, but there was nothing uniform in the figure of them.

Several Criticks have thought, the Belus of the Chaldæans and Babylonians to be no other than Nimrod their first King: whereas others have taken him for Belus the Assyrian, Father of Ninus [d]; and others again for one of Semiramis's Sons [e]. Lastly, many have supposed Belus to be the same with Jupiter. But we adhere to what we have said, that Baal was worshipped for the Sun among the Phœnicians and Canaanites; and that he was often taken in general for the great God of the Eastern people. And as to the Chaldæans and Babylonians, it is very credible that Belus was one of their first Kings, but whether Ashur, or Nimrod, or Thuras, or Belus the Father of Ninus, or Belus the Son of Semiramis, no one knows.

BAAL. There were many Cities in Palestine joined with the name of Baal: whether the God Baal were adored in them, or whether these places were looked upon as the capital Cities of their respective Provinces.

BAALAH, otherwise called Kirjath-jearim or Kirjath-Baal, or plain Baal, or Baalim of Judah, or Sede-jearim, and Campi Silvæ in Psalm cxxxiv. 6. are one and the same City, situated in the Tribe of Judah not far from Gibeah and Gibeon. [Josh. xv. 9. 1 Chron. xiii. 6.] The Ark was removed to Kirjath-jearim, when the Philistines sent it back from their Country. There it remained in the house of Amminadab, till David gave orders for the carrying it to Jerusalem. [1 Sam. vi. 21.]

I. BAALATH, in the Tribe of Simeon. It is that probably, which is mentioned in the enumeration of the Cities of Judah; and was yielded afterwards to the Tribe of Simeon. [Josh. xix. 32. and 1 Chr. iv. 28. Josh. xv. 29.] It is placed between Azem or Asemon, and Chasar-Sual; and so advanced very far towards Arabia Petræa.

II. BAALATH, a City in the Tribe of Dan. Josephus speaks of Baleth not far from Gazara. Joseph. Antiq. l. viii. c. 2. [Josh. xix. 44. and 1 Kings ix. 18.]

III. BAALATH, a City which was built by Solomon. 2 Chron. viii. 6.

BAALATH-BEER, a City lying to the South of the Tribe of Simeon. [Josh. xix. 8.]

BAAL-BERITH, that is to say, Lord of the Covenant, the God of the Schechemites. After the death of Gideon, the Israelites forsook the Lord, and prostituted themselves to the Idolatry of Baal, and made Baal-Berith their God. [Judg. viii. 33. ix. 4.] There was a Temple at Schechem consecrated to Baal-Berith, where they laid up that Money, which they gave afterwards to Abimelech the Son of Gideon. Diodorus of Sicily [f] speaks of a Goddess of the Cretans, named Britomartis, which is probably the same as Baal-Berith. Britomartis comes from Marath-Berith, Mistress of the Covenant.

Philo Biblius [g] says, that Elion and Beruth, are two Phœnician Deities, who had a Son and a Daughter called Heaven and Earth. The beauty of these two Children was the reason of denominating from them the Heaven and Earth which we we see. If we might depend at all upon the recital of this Author, there would be no occasion to seek elsewhere for the Original of Baal-Berith. But both Porphyry and Sanchoniathon are at present in so little credit with Men of Learning, that none will venture any more to quote them; at least there can be no relying upon their Testimony.

[a] Vide Euseb. l. iv. præparat. [a] Dionys. Halicarnass. apud Euseb. [b] חמנים Chamanim.
[c] Strabo. l. xv. [d] Vide Marsham. Can. Chronolog. Secul. 1. [e] Vide Syncell. p. 97. Cedren. p. 16, &c. [f] Diod. l. v. p. 236. [g] Phil. Bibl. apud. Euseb. Præpar. l. i.

Bochart [h] is of opinion, that Berith might be very probably the same as Beroe the Daughter of Venus and Adonis, desired in marriage by Neptune, and given to Wife to Bacchus [i], that she gave her name to the City of Berith in Phœnicia, and became afterwards the Goddess of it. This is Bochart's conjecture; for there is no proof of the Goddess Berith's having been adored in this City.

The most simple and natural manner of explaining the name of Baal-Berith, is to take it in general, for the God who presides over Alliances and Oaths. In this sense the true God may be termed the God of the Covenant; and if the Scripture had not added the name of Baal to that of Berith, it might be understood of the true God. But the most barbarous nations, as well as the most superstitious, the most religious and the most knowing, have always taken God to witness their Oaths and Covenants. The Greeks had their Jupiter the witness and arbitrator of Oaths, Zeus Horkios, and the Latins their Deus Fidius or Jupiter Pistius, him they looked upon as the God of Honesty and Plain-dealing, who presided at all treaties and alliances: they swore sometimes even by Jupiter the Stone, per Jovem lapidem, because the Victim appointed for the ratification of the alliance, was struck with a Stone, or because Jupiter was besought to throw him headlong down some precipice, who should fail in the performance of his promise, in like manner as the Stone which the High-Priest held in his hands was cast from the top of the Capitol.

Josh. xi. 17. xii. 7. BAAL GAD, a City situated at the foot of mount Hermon, which lies to the South of Libanus and Damascus, and to the North of mount Libanus. It seems to be said in Joshua, that mount Hermon is on this side Jordan; but we know very certainly from other passages, that mount Hermon, and consequently Baal-Gad, was beyond Jordan, Josh. xii. 1, and 5. Gad was a false God, and probably represented the Sun or Good Fortune. Baal-Gad derived its name from this Deity, which was there adored. Genes. xxx. 11.

BAAL-HANAN, the Son of Achbor, succeeded Shaül in the Kingdom of Edom, and was the seventh King of it. Genes. xxxvi. 38. 1 Chr. i. 49.

BAAL-HAZOR, a City in the Tribe of Ephraim, where Absalom kept his flocks. 2 Sam. xiii. 23.

BAAL HERMON, is generally placed Northward of the Tribe of Issachar, and the great Plain. See 1 Chr. v. 23.

I. BAALIM of Judah. This is Baalah or Kirjath-jearim. See above.

II. BAALIM. This is the plural number of Baal, and signifies false Gods in general.

BAALIS, King of the Ammonites, who sent Ishmael the Son of Nethaniah to kill Gedaliah, who had been set over the Remnant of the Jews, who were not sent captives to Babylon. Jerem. xl. 14.

BAAL-MEON, a City in the Tribe of Reuben. Numb. xxxii. 38. 1 Chron. v. 8.

It is sometimes called Beth-Baal-Meon. The Moabites took it from the Reubenites, and they were masters of it in the time of Ezekiel. Eusebius and S. Jerom place Beel-Meon or Beel-Maus nine miles from Esbus or Esebon, at the foot of mount Baaru or mount Abarim. Ezek. xxv. 9.

BAAL-PEOR, or the God Peor. We have produced several conjectures concerning this false God, in a Dissertation wrote particularly for this purpose, and inserted before the Book of Numbers, p. 20. Herein we have endeavoured to demonstrate, that Adonis or Orus adored by the Egyptians, and the generality of the Eastern people, and this God, are the same. The Scripture tells us, that when the Israelites were incamped in the wilderness of Sin, they were prevailed with to worship Baal-Peor *, that they partook of his Sacrifices, and committed whoredom with the Daughters of Moab; and the Psalmist relating the same event, says, that the Hebrews were initiated into the Mysteries of Baal-Peor, and ate the Offerings of the dead. Peor is the same as Or or Orus, if we cut off the article Pe, which is of no signification. Orus is the same as Adonis or Osiris. The Feasts of Adonis were celebrated after the manner of Funerals; and the people who observed them, at that time committed a thousand dissolute actions, particularly when they were told that Adonis, whom they had mourned for as dead, was alive. Numb. xxv. 1. Ps. cvi. 28.

Origen [k] believed Peor, or Baal-Peor, the God of the Moabites, to be the same with Priapus, or the Idol of Turpitude which was adored principally by the Women, and that Moses fearing to pollute the ears of the Hebrews, did not think proper [h] Bochart. Chanaan. l. ii. c. 17. [i] Nonnus Dionys. Art. 41, 42. [k] Origen. in Num. c. xxv. Homil. 20. Beelphegor, quod est, Idolum turpitudinis.

* It is the opinion of an ingenious Author, that Baal-Peor was the Sun, the same with Moloch of the Ammonites, and Chemosh of the Moabites; and that he was denominated Baal-Peor from the particular place of his Worship, as Jupiter Capitolinus.

proper to diftinguifh in a clearer manner what kind of Turpitude he meant. S. Jerom[l] fays, that this Idol was reprefented in an obfcene manner, as it was the cuftom to defcribe Priapus. It is his opinion, that effeminate men and women, who proftituted themfelves in honour of Idols, whereof there is fuch frequent mention in the Scripture, were confecrated to Baal-Peor or Priapus. He feems to think, that this infamous Deity had that in its mouth, with which the Figures of Priapus are ufually reprefented[m].

Maimonides afferts, that Baal-Peor was adored by difcovering that before him, which modefty obliges people to conceal with greateft care; and Solomon Jarchi, that Excrements were offered to him. There is no queftion to be made of Baal-Peor's being the God of Impurity: we know with what impudence the Daughters of Moab engaged the Ifraelites in lafcivioufnefs; and the Prophet Hofea fpeaking (Numb. xxv.) of this crime, fays, They went unto Baal-Peor, and feparated themfelves unto that fhame, and their abominations were according as they loved. Hofea ix. 10.

Others[n] have afferted, that Baal-Peor was Saturn, a Deity adored in Arabia. The adventure related of this Deity, and his caftration by his own Son, may have made way for the obfcenities practifed in the worfhip of Baal-Peor, whereof we have taken notice. Further, there may be fome marks of refemblance difcovered between Saturn and Lot, the Father of the Moabites, who were worfhippers of Baal-Peor.

Some have believed, that in Baal-Peor they difcovered the God worfhipped by the Heathens, under the name of Crepitus[o]; the word Peor is derived from a Root, which fignifies to be loofe. Others were of opinion, that the Moabites adored their God under the name of Baal-Reem, the God of Thunder, but that the Hebrews in derifion called him Baal-Peor, the God Fart. Voffius[p] thinks the Moabites worfhipped the Sun and Priapus under the name of Baal-Peor. Selden[q] will have it, that Baal-Peor is the God Pluto. He founds his conjecture upon what is faid in (Pf. cvi. 28.) the Pfalms: They joined themfelves unto Baal-Peor, and ate the offerings of the Dead. The Sacrifices here intimated are thofe, fays Selden, which were offered to appeafe the manes of the Dead. Apollinarius in his Paraphrafe upon this Pfalm fays, that the Hebrews polluted themfelves in the Sacrifices of Baal-Peor, by eating hecatombs offered to the Dead. Some affirm[r], that Saturn ranked his Son Moth, whom he had by Rhea among the Gods, and that he was adored by the Phœnicians fometimes under the name of Death, and fometimes by that of Pluto.

But thefe feveral opinions feem all to be lefs probable than that which we have propofed and fupported in our Differtation on Baal-Peor; viz. that this falfe Deity was no other than Adonis, or Ofiris. To what we have faid elfewhere on this matter it may be added, that Adonis, as fome believe, was the Father of Priapus; that funeral entertainments were made in honour of him, which may be very well underftood by the name of Sacrifices: The Priefts roar and cry before their Gods as men do at the Feaft when one is dead, in cæna mortui. (Baruch vi. 32.) The Pfalmift expreffes himfelf in the plural number: Comederunt facrificia mortuorum; for the Sacrifices of Baal-Peor were not like thofe of other Deities: they were repafts like thofe in ufe at the funerals of dead perfons, with this difference, that the latter were often accompanied with real and fincere forrow; whereas on the contrary in thofe of Adonis, the tears were all feigned, and the debauchery then indulged real. The Reader may fee our Differtation, and, if he pleafes, Selden, De Diis Syris, and the Commentators upon Numb. xxv.

BAAL-PERAZIM, the place wherein David put to flight the Philiftines. It (2 Sam. v. 20.) could not be very far from Jerufalem, fince it lay in the Valley of Rephaim.

BAAL-SHALISHA. S. Jerom and (2 Kings iv. 42.) Eufebius place it at fifteen miles diftance from Diofpolis Northward.

BAAL-TAMAR. The place, where the Children of Ifrael ingaged thofe of the Tribe of Benjamin. Eufebius fays Baal-Tamar was near Gibeah. (Judg. xx. 33.)

BAALTIS, the fame as Aftarte or the Moon, next to Baal, the God moft honoured by the Phœnicians.

BAAL-ZEPHON. (בעל צפון) The Hebrews having left Egypt, after three days march came to Baal-Zephon, where they paffed through the Sea: Baal-Zephon therefore (Exod. xiv. 2, 9.) was near Clyfma or Colfum; for there the Ancients tell us, that the Hebrews paffed the Red Sea. See our Differtation on their paffage, prefixed to the Book of Exodus, p. xl. and the Supplement, p. 54. It is thought thought that Sephon or Zephon was an Egyptian Deity, from whom the City of Baal-Zephon took its name; but what he was we do not exactly know. Zephon in Hebrew signifies the North, or the Concealed. Adonis with respect to the Egyptians was the God of the North; for he was killed in mount Libanus, and was principally adored at Biblos in Phœnicia. He was likewise the concealed God; and the Egyptians call'd him Tammuz [r], which signifies hidden; because of the celebration of his mysteries. He was kept shut up like one dead in a coffin, and afterwards, as it is pretended, revived; or because he is said to have passed six months on Earth with Venus, and six in Hell with Proserpine [t]. The Rabbins say, Baal-Zephon was an idol or figure covered with Stars, placed here by Pharaoh in order to stop the Hebrews, and hinder them from going out of his Country.

[l] Hieronym. in Ofee iv. Colentibus maxime fœminis Beelphegor, ob obfcœni magnitudinem, quem nos Priapum poffumus appellare. [m] Idem in Ofee ix. Denique interpretantur Beelphegor idolum tentiginis, habens in ore, id eft, fummitate pellem, ut turpitudinem membri virilis oftenderet. [n] Theodoret in Pf. cv. Apollinar. Caten. in Pf. Suidas, Mafius, in Jofue. Hottinger. Hift. Orient. c. 7, &c. [o] Minutius in Octaviano, Nec Serapidem magis Ægyptii quam ftrepitus per pudenda corporis expreffos contremifcunt. Origen. contra Celfum, p. 255. Hieronym. in Ifai. xiii. Ut taceam de formidolofo, & horribili cœpe, & crepitu ventris inflati, quæ Pelufica Religio eft. [p] Gerard. & Voff. de Origine & Progreffu Idolatr. l. ii. c. 7. [q] Selden. de Diis Syris Syntagm. 1. c. 5. [r] Sanchon. apud Eufeb. Præpar. l. i. c. 8.

Ezek. viii. 14.

Some describe him in the shape of a Dog, as the Egyptians their God Anubis with a Dog's Head; perhaps that he might have a vigilant eye over this place, and give notice by his barking of the Enemies arrival, and that he might guard the coast of the Red Sea on that side [v]. It is said he was placed there principally to stop all slaves that fled from their masters. The Jerusalem Targum assures us, that all the Statues of the Egyptian Gods having been destroyed by the exterminating Angel, Baal-Zephon was the only one that made resistance. Whereupon the Egyptians conceived a great idea of his power, and redoubled their devotion to him. Moses observing that the people flocked in crowds thither, petitioned Pharaoh that he too might make a journey thither with the Israelites. Pharaoh permitted them to go; but as they were employed upon the shore of the Red Sea in gathering up the precious stones which the river Phison had carried into the Gihon, and from thence were conveyed into the Red Sea, whereby they had been thrown upon the dry land, Pharaoh surprized them like people destitute of counsel and out of their senses; he offered his Sacrifices to Baal-Zephon, waiting till the next day to attack the Israelites, whom he believed his God had delivered into his hands. But in the mean time they passed the Red Sea, and escaped from him, and his pretended God Baal-Zephon was not capable of rescuing him from death. These are Rabbinical Fables that deserve no credit.

M. Basnage [w] is of opinion, that Baal-Zephon signifies the Sun; Zephon in Hebrew signifies one who contemplates, as much as to say the observing Deity, the Sun, the great Eye of nature, which knows, sees, and enlightens all things. The Poet Ezekiel cited in Eusebius [x], believes Baal-Zephon to have been a City, and the construction in the Text Moses, is very favourable to this opinion. See hereafter Colsum.

BAANA, the Son of Ahilud, Governour of Taanach, Megiddo, and Bethshean. 1 Kings iv. 12.

BAANAH and Rechab, Officers belonging to Ishbosheth the Son of Saul, who having secretly entred this Prince's house, while he was sleeping at noon day, cut off his head, and carried it to David; who instead of rewarding them for so base an action, gave orders for the cutting off their hands and feet, and hanging them over the pool of Hebron. 2 Sam. iv. 2. & seq.

BAARA, the Wife of Shaaraïm, who was divorced by him. 1 Chr. viii. 8.

BAARAS, or Baaris, or Baru. Eusebius [y] and S. Jerom make mention of a place called Baru or Baris near Cariatha. Now Cariatha according to their account, is ten miles West of Medaba. And elsewhere [z] they tell us, that Beelmaüs, or Beelmeon, is two miles from Esbus near Baaru. Lastly, Josephus [a] says, that to the North of Machærus there is a Valley called Baaras, where a wonderful Root of the same name was found, which was of the colour of fire, and towards the evening cast forth rays like those of the Sun. He relates many particulars concerning this Plant, which seem very extraordinary, and which many look upon as fabulous. Nevertheless F. Eugenius Rogers speaks of them, as one who was an Eye-witness of them, and fully convinced of what Josephus says.

BAASEIAH, the Son of Malchiah, a Levite. 1 Chr. vi. 40.

BAASHA, the Son of Ahijah, Commander in chief of the Armies belonging to Nadab, the Son of Jeroboam King of Israel. He killed his master treacherously at the Siege of Gibbethon, a City of the Philistines, and usurped the Kingdom which he possessed for four and twenty years. He rooted out the whole race of Jeroboam, as God had commanded him; but by his bad conduct and idolatry, he incurr'd God's indignation. Wherefore the Lord sent the Prophet Jehu, the Son of Hanani to him, to tell him, that he had exalted him out of the dust, and made him Prince over his people Israel, after which he had walked in the way of Jeroboam, and made his people Israel to sin. That therefore he would take away the posterity of Baasha, and the posterity of his house

In the Year of the World 3051, before J. C. 994, before the vulgar Æra 953.

1 Kings xvi. 1. & seq.

[r] Vide Hieronym. in eum locum. [t] Vide Theocriti Scholiasten. [v] Basnage Antiquit. des Juifs. t. ii. p. 669, 670. [w] Loco citato, p. 671. [x] Ezechiel Poeta apud Euseb. demonstr. l. ix. c. 29. p. 444. [y] Euseb. in Kariathaim. Hieronym. ibidem. [z] Idem in Beelmeon. [a] Joseph. de Bello, l. vii. c. 25.

ELEVATION OF THE TOWER OF BABEL

house, and would make his house like the house of Jeroboam the Son of Nebat; that him, who died of Baasha, should the dogs eat, and him that died of his in the fields, should the fowls of the air eat. Baasha, instead of making good use of these admonitions, and becoming seriously converted, was transported with rage against the Prophet, and killed him. Baasha died, and was buried at Tirzah, which was then the Capital of the Kingdom of the ten Tribes. Elah his Son reigned in his stead. We read a circumstance of Baasha's reign in the Chronicles, which is not to be met with in the Books of Kings; and this is the attempt which Baasha made, to fortify Ramah against Asa King of Judah, who, in order to disengage him from this undertaking, prevailed with Benhadad King of Damascus to make an irruption upon the lands belonging to Baasha; which succeeded according to his expectation.

In the Year of the World 3074, before J. C. 926, before the vulgar Æra 930. 1 Kings xvi. 7, 8. 2 Chron. xvi. 1. & seq.

BABAS, of the Asmonæan Family. Herod put to death the Sons of Babas, who opposed his entrance into Jerusalem, in the time of Antigonus [b].

BABEL, or Babylon. This term signifies Confusion; and the City and Province of Babylon were called by this name; because when the tower of Babel was building, God confounded the languages of those men, who were employed about this edifice, so that they could no longer understand one another. Several conjectures have been started concerning the manner of producing this confusion of languages at Babel, which have no relation to our subject. The Reader may consult the Commentators, what M. Simon has written on this matter, in his critical History of the Old Testament, l. i. c. 14, & 15. and what is said by the Author of Les Sentimens de quelques Theologiens de Hollande, Lettre 19. The construction of the Tower of Babel, and the confusion of Languages are fixed to about the year of the World 1775, an hundred and twenty years after the Deluge.

Gen. xi. 7.

It is thought [c] that Nimrod the Son of Cush was the principal Author of this attempt to build the Tower of Babel. He designed, says Josephus, to raise a Tower so high, as might secure him from a new deluge, and put him in a condition to revenge the death of his Ancestors, caused by a general inundation over the World. It is scarce possible to think, that he could conceive so foolish an imagination. The Scripture says no more, than that the undertakers coming from the East into the land of Shinar, said to one another, Let us make a City and a Tower, the top whereof may reach to Heaven, and let us make our names celebrated before we are dispersed over all the earth. Now God observing that they had begun this work, and were resolved not to quit it, till they had finished it, descended from Heaven, and confounded their language; so that they were compell'd to scatter themselves throughout the Earth, and abandon their undertaking.

Gen. xi. 4.

We do not know how high this Tower had been raised, and all that we find in Authors concerning it deserves no credit. Many have thought, that the Tower of Belus mentioned by Herodotus [d], and which was still in his time to be seen in Babylon, was the Tower of Babel; or at least was built upon the old foundations. This last opinion seems the more probable, by reason that this Tower was compleated, and raised to its full height. It was composed, says Herodotus, of eight Towers placed one upon another, decreasing gradually in their size from the first to the last. Above the eighth was the Temple of Belus. This Author does not tell us what the height was of the whole edifice; but only that the first of the eight Towers, which served as a basis to the other seven, was a furlong, or an hundred and fifty paces high, and wide, or square; for his text is not very clear [e]. Some Writers are of opinion, that this was the height of the whole edifice; and in this sense Strabo understood him [f]. Others maintain, that each of the eight Towers was a furlong in height, and that the whole fabrick was eight furlongs, or a thousand paces high; which seems impossible. Nevertheless S. Jerom [g] says, upon the report of others, that it was four thousand paces in height; and others affirm that it was still higher.

Belus King of Babylon, by whose directions the building of the Tower, which Herodotus speaks of, is said to have been undertaken, lived long after Moses, whether by Belus we suppose the Father of Ninus to be meant, or Belus the Son of Semiramis. Belus, the Father of Ninus is set down by Usher under the judicature of Shamgar, about the year of the world 2682, of the Julian Period 3392, long after Moses.

Modern Travellers vary in the description they give us of the remains of the Tower of Babel. Fabricius says, it might have been about a mile in circumference. Guion says the same. Benjamin, who is much more ancient, informs us, that the foundations were two thousand paces in length. The Sieur de la Boulaye le Gour, a Gentleman of Anjou, who says he made a long stay at Babylon or Bagdat, declares, that about three leagues from this City, there is a Tower called Megara, situated betwen the Tigris and Euphrates in an open field. This Tower is all solid within, and is more like a Mountain than a Tower.

[b] Joseph. Antiq. l. xv. c. 11. p. 532.
[c] Antiq. l. i. c. 5.
[d] Herodot. l. i. c. 381.
[e] Στάδιον καὶ τὸ μῆκος, καὶ τὸ εὖρος. Nov. Edit.
[f] Strabo. l. xvi. initio.
[g] Hieronym. in Isai. lib. v. p. 114.

Tower. The compafs of it is about five hundred paces; and as the rains and winds have very much ruined it, it cannot be more than about an hundred and thirty eight foot high. It is built of bricks four inches thick; and between every feven courfes of bricks, there is a courfe of ftraw three inches thick mixed with pitch or bitumen; from the top to the bottom there are reckoned about fifty courfes. The Reader may fee, if he pleafes, what we have faid in our Comment upon Genefis, Ch. x. v. 4. It is highly probable, that all which is related of this Tower, except what we find concerning it in Scripture, is fabulous; and that the remains of fome Towers, which are fhewn in Babylonia, are far from being thofe of the Tower of Babel, but are only ruins of old Babylon, built by Nebuchadnezzar.

I. BABYLON. The City of Babylon, the Capital of Chaldæa, was built by Nimrod in the place where the Tower of Babel was begun. It was the Capital of Nimrod's Empire; fo that its Antiquity is not to be queftioned. Profane Authors[h], who know nothing of the Hiftory of the Jews, make the Son of Belus to be the Founder of it, who lived two thoufand years before Semiramis. Others afcribe the Foundation of it to Belus[i] the Affyrian, Father of Ninus; others to Semiramis. Marfham[k] poftpones the beginning of it to the time of Nabonaffar. But the opinion moft generally followed, and beft grounded, is this, that Nimrod founded it, Belus inlarged it, and that Semiramis added fo many great works, and adorned it fo many feveral ways, that fhe might be called not improperly the Foundrefs of it; at leaft with as much reafon as Conftantin is faid to be the Founder of Conftantinople. Genef. x. 10.

The Scripture fpeaks of Babylon in very many places, particularly after the reign of Hezekiah, who upon his recovery from his indifpofition was vifited by the Ambaffadors of Berodach-baladan King of Babylon. Ifaiah, who lived at the fame time, fpeaks often of the calamities which the Babylonians fhould bring upon Paleftine, of the captivity of the Hebrews, of their return from Babylon, of the fall of this great City, and the taking it by the Perfians and Medes. The Prophets, who lived after Ifaiah's time, as Jeremiah, Ezekiel, and Daniel, who were living in the reign of Nebuchadnezzar, and faw the extreme misfortunes of Jerufalem, and the defolation of the Kingdom of Judah, are ftill more taken up with the grandeur of Babylon, and its cruelty, and the evils with which God at laft would overwhelm it. 2 Kings xx. 12.

The facred Authors fpeak of it as one of the greateft and moft powerful Cities in the world. Is not this great Babylon that I have built for the houfe of the Kingdom, by the might of my Power, and for the honour of my Majefty? faid Nebuchadnezzar. Berofus and Abydenus[l] afcribe to this Prince the Walls of Babylon, and thofe prodigious Gardens, raifed upon arches, which fome attribute to Semiramis. Hiftorians are not agreed concerning the extent and height of the Walls of Babylon. Clitarchus, who is cited by Diodorus of Sicily, fays, the circuit of the Walls was three hundred and fixty eight furlongs; Quintus Curtius, fixty thoufand paces; Herodotus, three hundred and fourfcore furlongs; Ctefias in Diodorus Siculus, three hundred and fixty furlongs[m]; Strabo, three hundred fourfcore and five; Quintus Curtius and Strabo make them to be fixty five foot high, and thirty two wide; Pliny and Solinus, two hundred foot high and fifty broad. Quintus Curtius fays that thefe Walls were built in a year; that the workmen finifhed a furlong in a day, that is to fay, an hundred and five and twenty paces. But Berofus and Abydenus inform us, that this whole wonderful work was compleatedin fifteen days. Dan. iv. 30.

Altho' the Babylonifh Monarchy is perhaps the moft ancient in the world, fuppofing as we have faid, that Nimrod began his reign at Babylon; neverthelefs we do not fee either in Scripture, or in profane Writers, that this Empire was of any great confequence in the world. In Abraham's time we obferve, that there was a King of Shinar. Babylon was in the land of Shinar; but it may be made a queftion, whether the King of Shinar was King of Babylon; and fuppofing he was, the figure which he made in Chedorlaomar's Army, where he was only as an auxiliary, does not give us any great idea of him. Gen. xiv. 1, 2, &c.

Julius Africanus fays, that Evechoüs, who is probably the fame as Jupiter Belus, began to reign over the Chaldæans two hundred and twenty four years before the Arabians, that is to fay, in the year 2952 of the Julian Period, of the World 2242, in the time of the Patriarch Ifaac, 1762 before our vulgar Æra. The Arabians having declared war againft Chinizitus King of Babylon, deprived him of his Crown, and Mardocentius reigned there in his ftead, in the year of the Julian Period 3176, of the world 2466, before the vulgar Æra 1538, and before Belus the Affyrian two hundred and fixteen years, about the fortieth year of Mofes.

Belus

[h] Hecennius apud Stephen. in Babylon. [i] Doroth. Sidonius Poeta. Item Abiden. apud Eufeb. Præp. l. ix. c. 41. [k] Marfham. Can. Chron. Secul. xiii. [l] Vide Jofeph. l. x. Antiq. c. 11. & lib. i. contra Appion. & Eufeb. l. ix. Præpar. c. ult. [m] The 360 furlongs make 44600 paces, that is to fay, near fifteen leagues, at three miles to the league.

Belus the Assyrian began to reign in Babylon in the year of the Julian Period 3392, of the World 2682, before the vulgar Æra 1322, in the time of Shamgar Judge of Israel. Belus was succeeded by Ninus, Semiramis, Ninyas, and others whose names we find in the common catalogues. Of all these Princes there is no notice taken in Scripture, at least under the title of Kings of Babylon. Ninus, according to Herodotus, founded the Assyrian Empire [o]; and this Empire subsisted in upper Asia for five hundred and twenty years. During this interval the City and Province of Babylon were under a Governour appointed by the King of Assyria. Of all the great number of Assyrian Monarchs, who reigned at Nineveh, the Scripture speaks only of Pul,• who was probably the Father of Sardanapalus the last of the Assyrian Kings, who were the Successors of Ninus.

In the year of the Julian Period 3447, of the World 2737, before the vulgar Æra 1267.

Under the reign of this last, in the year of the Julian Period 3966, of the World 3257, Arbaces Governour of the Medes, and Belesus, or Baladan [p], or Nabonassar Governour of Babylon, having revolted against Sardanapalus, besieged him in Nineveh, and there obliged him to burn himself, with all that was most dear and valuable to him; after which they divided the Monarchy between them. Arbaces set the Medes at liberty, and Belesus founded the Kingdom of Babylon. Young Ninus, called in Scripture Tiglath-pileser, reigned at Nineveh, and continued the Succession of the Assyrian Kings, but the extent of the Kingdom was very much lessened. He was succeeded by Salmaneser, Sennacherib, and Esar-haddon, whose names are celebrated upon too many sad occasions, in the sacred Writings, for the calamities which they brought upon the Hebrews.

2 Kings xv. 29. xvi. 7. 10 and 1 Chr. v. 6. and 2 Chron. xxviii. 20.

Belesus or Baladan was Father or Grandfather to Berodach-Baladan, who sent to visit Hezekiah after the miracle of the Sun's retrogradation; which happened at the time of his cure. The names and actions of his Successors weare not inform'd of; but we know that Esar-haddon King of Assyria conquered the Kingdom of Babylon [q], and that he and his Successors Saosduchinus and Chynaladanus, otherwise called Seracus, possessed it, till Nabopolassar Governour of Babylon, and Astyages the Son of Cyaxares King of Media, took arms against Chynaladanus [r], killed him, divided his dominions, and intirely destroyed the Assyrian Empire, in the year of the World 3378, of the Julian Period 4088, before the vulgar Æra 626.

2 Kings xx. 12.

Nabopolassar was the Father to the Great Nebuchadnezzar, the destroyer of Jerusalem, and the most magnificent King of Babylon, that we know of. We have observed, that by some Authors those great works are said to be his, the honour whereof by others is given to Semiramis. Evilmerodach succeeded Nebuchadnezzar, and Belshazzar Evilmerodach [s]: But Daniel says expressly, that Darius the Mede succeeded Belshazzar, and Cyrus Darius the Mede, otherwise called Astyages.

Dan. v. 31. xiii. 35.

The Successors of Cyrus are very well known; Cambyses, the seven Magi, Darius the Son of Hystaspes, Xerxes, Artaxerxes Longimanus, Xerxes II. Secundianus, or Sogdianus, Ochus, or Darius Nothus, Artaxerxes Mnemon, Ochus, Arses, Darius Codomannus, who was overcome by Alexander the Great, in the year of the Julian Period 4383, of the World 3673, before the vulgar Æra 331.

We fix the death of Belshazzar to the year of the World 3448, and the first year of Cyrus's reign at Babylon, to the year of the world 3457.

The Greek Fathers [t], adhering to the Text of the Septuagint in Isai. x. 9. were of opinion, that the Tower of Babel was built at Chalane; they read it thus [u], Have I not taken the country which is above Babylon and Chalane, where the Tower was built? whereas the import of the Hebrew is Calenne, or Calno, is it not as Carchemish? is not Hamath as Arpad? is not Samaria as Damascus? have I not reduced all these Cities under my obedience? So that no advantage can be taken from this passage in the Septuagint, towards fixing the place where the Tower of Babel was erected: it is scarce questionable but that it either was within or very near old Babylon.

The Persians [w] attribute the Foundation of Babylon and Nineveh to Thahamurath, one of their most ancient Monarchs: This Prince allowed his subjects an intire liberty of Conscience, so that under his reign idolatry spread itself in several branches, and got footing over all the East; which some understand of the time preceding the Deluge, answerable to what Moses says, that in the life of Enos, men began to profane the name of God, by giving it to idols [x]. In effect, the Eastern people will many of them have it, that Mahalaleel the Son of Canaan founded this City before the deluge; but the generality maintain, that Nimrod was the principal Author of erecting the Tower of Babel: and give this turn to the thing after their particular manner, which has always something miraculous miraculous in it [y]. Nimrod, say they, having observed that Abraham came unhurt out of the fire, into which he had been cast by his orders, told his Courtiers, that he had a great mind to climb up to Heaven, in order to behold there the mighty God whom Abraham preached to them. They remonstrated in vain, that this undertaking was impossible; for notwithstanding, he commanded a Tower to be built as high as they could carry it. They had been employed three years about it, when Nimrod, ascending to the top of this edifice, was surprized to see, that Heaven still appeared at as great a distance from them as before. His surprize was still farther encreased, when news was brought him the next day, that his Tower was fallen.

[o] Herodot. l. i. c. 95. [p] Isai. xxxix. collatum cum 2 Reg. xx. 12. [q] Vide Usher. ad ann. 3323. & If. xxiii. 13. [r] Alex. Polyhistor. apud Syncell. Usher. ad an. Mund. 3328. [s] Beros. apud Joseph. l. i. contra Appion. p. 1045. [t] Cyril. Alex. Basil. Gregor. Nazian. [u] If. x. 9. Οὐκ ἔλαβον τὴν χώραν τὴν ἐπάνω Βαβυλῶνος καὶ Χαλάνη, ὃ ὁ πύργος ᾠκοδομήθη. [w] Bibl. Orient. p. 1016. & 159. Babel.

[x] Gen. iv. 26. according to the Hebrew, אז הוחל לקרא בשם יהוה Vide Hieronym. in qu. Hebr. in Genes.

He commanded another to be built higher and more solid than the first; but the same fate attended it as that which had been before raised. At last he resolved he would be carried up to Heaven by four monstrous Birds, called Kerkez. These Birds for some time flew about with him in the air, and at length threw him upon the earth against a mountain which was shaken with his fall. Strange Fables!

A German Traveller, whose name was Renwolf, passed through the place in 1574, where formerly old Babylon stood; he speaks of the ruins of this famous City as follows [z]. "The Village of Elugo now "lyes where heretofore Babylon of Chaldæa was situated. The harbour is a "quarter of a league's distance from it; "people go ashore in order to proceed "by land to the celebrated City of Bagdad, which is a day and a half's journey from thence Eastward on the Tigris. "The Soil is so dry and barren, that they "cannot till it, and so naked, that I "could never have believed, that this "powerful City, once the most stately "and renowned in all the world, and situated in the fruitful country of Shinar, "could have ever stood there, if I had not "discerned by the situation, and many "antiquities of great beauty, tho' intirely "neglected, which are to be seen round "about, that it certainly had been there; "and first by the old Bridge over the Euphrates, whereof some piles and arches "of brick are still remaining, so strong "that they are a great wonder. . . The "whole front of the village Elugo is the "hill upon which the Castle stood, and "the ruins of its fortifications are still visible, tho' demolished and uninhabited. "Behind, and some little way beyond, "was the Tower of Babylon. . . . It is "still to be seen, and is half a league in "diameter; but so ruinous, so low, and "so full of venomous creatures, which "lodge in holes made by them in the rubbish, that no one durst approach nearer "to it than within half a league, except "during two months in the Winter, when "these animals never stir out of their "holes. There is one sort particularly, "which the inhabitants in the language of "the country, which is Persian, call Eglo, the poison whereof is very searching: they are larger than our lizards.

The Reader may compare Isaiah's description, of the condition to which Babylon was reduced after its fall, with what is said by this Traveller. And Isai. xiii. 19, 22.
Babylon the glory of the Kingdoms, the beauty of the Chaldees excellency shall be as when God overthrew Sodom and Gomorrah; it shall not be inhabited, neither shall the Arabian pitch tent there, neither shall the shepherds make their fold there. But wild beasts of the desart shall lye there, and their house shall be full of doleful creatures, and the owls shall dwell there, and satyrs shall dance there. And the wild beasts of the island shall cry in their desolate houses, and dragons in their pleasant palaces.

The following is an account of Babylon in its greatest splendor, whether it were the work of Semiramis or of Nebuchadnezzar; for the ancients are not agreed among themselves as to this article: we shall borrow this description principally from Herodotus [a], who had been upon the spot, and is the oldest Author, that has treated of this matter. The City was square an hundred and twenty furlongs every way, that is to say, fifteen miles or five leagues square, and the whole circuit of it 480 furlongs or twenty leagues. The walls of it were built with large bricks cemented with bitumen, a thick glutinous liquor, which issues out of the earth in the country hereabouts; it binds stronger than mortar; and becomes harder than the brick itself for which it is made use of as a cement. These walls were 87 feet thick, 350 high, and 480 furlongs in circumference. They who allow them to have been no more than fifty cubits high, speak of them according to the condition they were in after Darius the Son of Hystaspes, who commanded the walls to be demolished to the height we are mentioning, as a punishment for the rebellion of the Babylonians.

The City was encompassed with a vast ditch filled with water, and brick-work carried up on both sides. The earth which was dug out was imployed in making the bricks wherewith the walls of the City were built, so that one may judge of the depth and largeness of the ditch by the extream height and thickness of the walls. There were an hundred gates belonging to the City, five and twenty on each of the four four sides. All these gates with the posts and upper parts of them were of massy brass. Between every two of these gates at particular distances were three Towers, and three between each angle of this great square; the Towers were raised ten feet higher than the walls, which is to be understood of those places only where they were necessary; for the City being encompassed in several places with marshes which were always full of water, and defended the approach to it [b], there was no need of Towers on these sides; so that their number did not consist of above two hundred and fifty, whereas if they had been carried on throughout, there must have been many more of them.

[y] Bibl. Orient. p. 668. Nimrod.

[z] Ranwolf's Voyage. c. 8.

[a] Herodot. l. i.

There was a Street answering to every gate, so that there were fifty Streets in all, which led from one gate to another, cut one another at right angles, and were each fifteen miles or five good leagues in length, and 151 feet wide. There were four other Streets which were adorned with houses only on one side, having the ramparts on the other. They made the whole compass of the City along the walls, and were each two hundred feet wide. As the Streets of Babylon went cross one another, they formed six hundred seventy six squares, each whereof had four furlongs and an half on every side, which made two miles and a quarter in circuit. These squares were surrounded without by houses three or four stories high [c], the front whereof was adorned with all sorts of embellishments; the inner space was taken up with courts and gardens.

The Euphrates cut the City into two equal parts from North to South. A Bridge of admirable structure of about a furlong or 125 paces in length, and thirty wide, continued a communication from one part of the City to the other; at the two extremities of the Bridge were two palaces, the old on the East side of the river, and the new on the opposite Western side [d]. The first contained four of the squares we have been just speaking of, the other took up nine. Diodorus makes the first to be thirty furlongs in circumference, and the second sixty. The Temple of Belus which was near the old Palace, filled another of these squares. The City intire was situated in a vast plain, the soil whereof was extremely fat and fruitful. To people this vast City, Nebuchadnezzar transplanted thither an infinite number of Captives out of the several nations subdued by him. The sacred Books relate many particulars concerning the Captivity of the Jews at Babylon. We have inserted here the Plan of this famous City, in the draught whereof we have followed F. Kircher.

We have already mentioned the Temple of Belus, which many confound with the Tower of Babel. We shall in another place speak of the Statue which Nebuchadnezzar appointed to be erected in the plain of Dura in the Province of Babylon. It remains that we should say something of those famous hanging Gardens, which passed for one of the wonders of the world. They contained a space of four hundred feet square [e]; within this space these celebrated Gardens were raised, composed of several large terrasses, placed like amphitheaters, and the highest platform belonging to them equalled the walls of Babylon in height, that is to say, was three hundred and fifty feet high. They went up from one terrass to another, by stairs ten feet wide: this whole mass was supported by large vaults built upon one another, and strengthned with a wall two and twenty feet thick, incompassing it every way: upon the top of these vaults were laid large flat stones sixteen feet long and four wide.

Over these was placed a layer of rushes done over with a great quantity of bitumen, upon which were two rows of bricks bound fast together with mortar. All this was covered with plates of lead; and upon these the Earth of the Garden was disposed. All these precautions were taken to prevent the water and moisture from making way, and running through the vaults. There was so large a quantity of earth heap'd together, that the greatest trees might take root in it. Here was every thing to be seen that could please the sight and curiosity; very beautiful and large trees, flowers, plants, and shrubs. Upon the highest of the terrasses there was an Aquæduct supplied with water from the river by a pump probably, and from thence the whole Garden was watered. It is affirmed, that Nebuchadnezzar undertook this wonderful and famous Edifice out of complaisance to his Wife Amytis, the Daughter of Astyages, who being a native of Media, retained strong inclinations for mountains and forests.

The Scripture no where takes notice of these celebrated Gardens, but speaks of Willows planted upon the banks of the rivers of Babylon, or Babylonia, upon which the Priests or Levites Ministers of the Temple hung their instruments of Musick during the Captivity. We hanged our harps upon the willows in the midst thereof. Psalm cxxxvii. 2.
And Isaiah designing to make mention in a prophetick style of the Captivity, to which the Moabites were to be reduced by Nebuchadnezzar says, They shall be carried away to the valley of Willows. Isai. xv. 7.
And the same Prophet, describing in another place the calamities which Babylon was to Isai. xxi. 1.
suffer

[a] Diodor. Sicul. l. ii. [b] Herodot. l. i. [c] Beros. apud Joseph. Antiq. l. x. c. 11. Herodot. l. i. Diodor. Sicul. l. ii. [d] Diodor. Sicul. l. ii. [e] Strabo, l. xvi. c. 2. Curt. l. v. c. 1.

suffer from Cyrus, calls this City the Desart of the Sea. And Jeremiah, I will
Jer. li. 36, 42. dry up the Sea of Babylon, and make her springs dry. And again, The Sea is come up upon her: she is covered with the multitude of the waves thereof. And Megasthenes assures us [f], that Babylon was built in a place which before abounded so with
If. xiii. 2, &c. water, that it was called the Sea. Isaiah prophesies against Babylon in the terms following, Lift up a banner upon the high mountain, upon Media, a mountainous country, exalt the voice unto them, shake the hand, that they may go into the gates of the nobles, their rendezvous in order to march against Babylon. I have commanded my sanctified ones, I have also called my mighty ones: the noise of a multitude in the mountains like as of a great people, a tumultuous noise of the Kingdoms of nations gathered together. Haste ye, for the day of the Lord is at hand: the hearts of the Babylonians shall melt, they shall be afraid, they shall be amazed at one another, their faces shall be as flames. I will take vengeance for the crimes which the Babylonians have committed against the rest of the world, I will put an end to their pride, and humble their insolence. A man shall be more precious (and more rare) than gold. . . . . Babylon shall be as the chased roe, and as a sheep that no man taketh up. Whoever shall be found within her walls, shall be put to death, and they who shall offer themselves for its defence shall be put to the sword. Their children shall be dashed to pieces before their eyes, their houses shall be spoiled and their wives ravished. I will stir up the Medes against them, which shall not regard silver, and as for gold they shall not delight in it. . . . . Babylon the glory of Kingdoms, the beauty of the Chaldees excellency, shall be as when God overthrew Sodom and Gomorrah. It shall never be inhabited, neither shall it be See likewise Isai. xiv. xxi. xlv. xlvi. xlvii. xlviii. Jerem. l. li. Ezek xxi. 30, 31, 32. Hab. ii, &c. dwelt in from generation to generation.

The predictions of the Prophets against Babylon were by degrees accomplished. Berosus [g] relates, that Cyrus having made himself master of this City, demolished the outward walls of it; because the City seemed to be too strong, and he was apprehensive that it would revolt. Darius the Son of Hystaspes [h] having taken Babylon, destroyed the gates and walls of it, hereby intending to chastise the pride of this City. Alexander the Great had formed a design for rebuilding it; but his sudden death prevented the execution of it, and his Successors neglected it [i]. Seleucus Nicator, one of Alexander's Successors, having built Seleucia upon the Tigris, the neighbourhood of this place, which Seleucus proposed to make a great City, insensibly robb'd Babylon of its inhabitants [k]. Strabo assures us [l], that in his time, that is to say, under the Empire of Augustus, Babylon was almost intirely deserted. He applies to it the expression of an old Poet concerning Megalopolis, that it was no longer any thing more than a great Desart. Diodorus of Sicily [m], who lived in the same Age, assures us, that there was but a small part of the City inhabited.

Pausanias, who lived in the second Age of the Church, says [n], that there was nothing but waste walls standing. Theodoret remarks, that in his time it was inhabited only by some Jews. Eusebius writing upon the xiii Chapter of Isaiah, says, that it was then entirely deserted, as they declared, who came from that part of the world. Lastly, S. Jerom upon the same Ch. xiii. of Isaiah, relates upon the testimony of a Monk, who was an Elamite, and dwelt at Jerusalem, that the Kings of Persia made a great park of Babylon, and kept abundance of wild creatures in it for the diversion of hunting. Benjamin of Tudela, a Jew, who lived in the twelfth Age, says, he found Babylon all in ruins, and that the remains of Nebuchadnezzar's palace were still remarkable there, but that no one could go near it, by reason of the Serpents which were there in great numbers. At present all marks of this proud City are so intirely lost, that there is no telling with any certainty, where it stood formerly. So that they who confound the City of Bagdat with old Babylon are grossly mistaken.

There have been great boasts made of the antiquity of the Astronomical Observations made by the Babylonians. They reckon four hundred seventy three thousand years from the Observations of their first Astrologers, to the arrival of Alexander the Great [o]. Cicero [p] makes a round number of four hundred and seventy thousand years. Pliny [q], as he is corrected by Perizonius and F. Hardouin, reports, that Epigenes allowed their Observations to have been for seven hundred and twenty thousand years, and that Berosus and Critodemus, who lessen the antiquity of them more than any others, yet confessed, that these Observations had been made four hundred and fourscore thousand years: This number of years is excessive, and extends not only much farther than the flood, but even than the beginning of the world according to the account of it by Moses. If the Babylonians had been in reality so ancient, we should have had some remains sure [f] Megasth. apud Euseb. Præp. l. ix. c. 41.

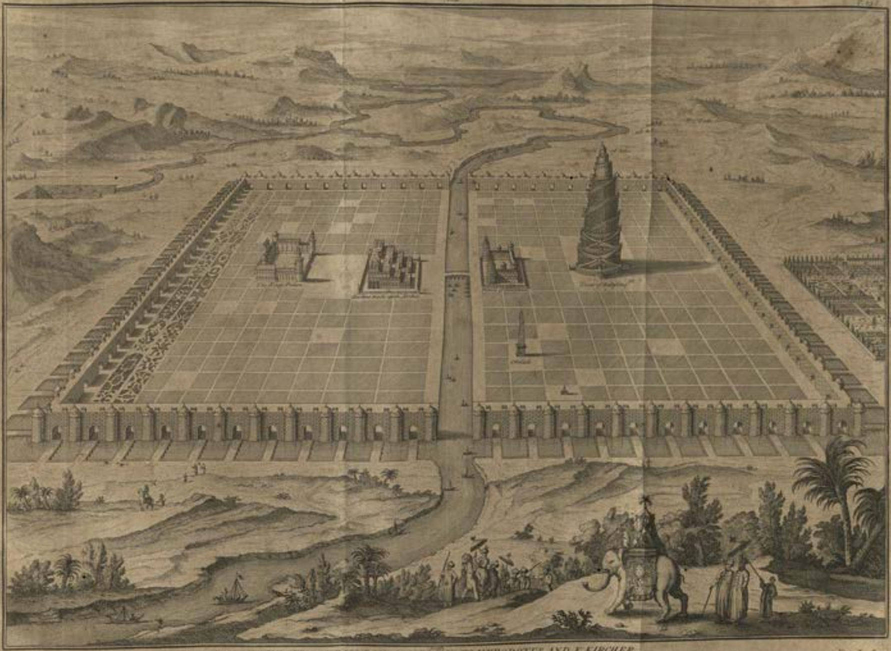
[g] Beros. apud Joseph. l. i. contra Appion. p. 1045.
[h] Herodot. l. iii. c. ult.
[i] Strabo. l. xvi.
[k] Plin. l. vi. c. 27.
[l] Strabo. l. xvi.
[m] Diodor. l. ii. c. 9.
[n] Pausan. Arcad. c. 33.
[o] Diodor. l. ii.
[p] Cicero de Divinat. l. i. fol. 307. & l. ii. fol. 320.
[q] Plin. l. vii. c. 56.



A PLAN OF THE CITY OF BABYLON ACCORDING TO HERODOTUS AND F. KIRCHER.

Vol. I. p.

@ _LP D "

[illegible]

12 34 5 6 7 8 ' 9 :' ; : < ' 3 $

3 ' " IQ

[illegible]

<' $ @' ' D <' $

7 7 7 A' ' / ' $ " #' ' ' % ' ' " 0 ' ' " # +' ' A'
' , / # +' ' & $ " ' '' . " ' '' +' ' + '%
' " ! ' 1' 9 ' ' @ #' 1% #' ' ' #' / #' / ' '
: # ' ! ! ' (' % ' ' O ' ' ' '' '% ' #' ' #' ' ' # ' ,
4" ' O " 1 ' '' #' ' , ' ' #' $' , ' , % ' ' '% ' +
#' , '' ' ' ' ' '% % #' / " ' #' ' + ' + ' " " +' ' $'
, / ' ' ' ' ' ' % ' / ' '' ' ' %' " + ' A, % ' % '% ' % '
' " #' #' '% % #' ' / " ' I ' ' #' 1 , $ ' 0 # ' ' ' ' / ' A'
[2 'U " SE' ' 'K (" # ' + ' ' ' % ' #' , / ' #' , K4 + '
' " I ' ' " U " ' ' ' % ' ' / #' ' " / '
(' ' 3 " ' ' 4 0 ' " #' ' @ ' ' , ' ' ' + ' " " #
' ' " K ' / " ' ' 4" ' $' ' #' $ ' ' , ' %' ' " '
* 4' ' $ ' / ' ' , ?' 7 +' " ' ' ' % ' ' " ' , ' ' ' $' ' / '
/ $, ' * 4' 0 +' ' ' ' + ' $ / / # ' ' ' ' + ' #' ' ' ' ' & '
" ' 3 4' ' % ' ' #' ' ' ' ' ' ' ' # % ' / # ' ' 4 0 ' % / #' ' ' / " ' ' / ' 9' #' " 0` #' % / #' ' $ 0 ' ' ' " 6 ' #'
+' ' ' % ' ' ' +' / + ' ' ' ' % ' , ' % ' , ' 0 ' , +' " $' % ' ' $ ' ' , 0 #' ' #' ' ' $ ' ' (#' " #' ' $ / ' " ' , ' ' 4 0 ' ' ' ' + ' # ` ' #' 1 ' ' #' / ' , ' '
0 ' #' / ' ' $ ' # +' ' ' 0 ' 0 ' 1' # 'H ' ' ' / ' 1 $ ' $ '
' ' / " ' ' / ' $ +' ' ' ' ' $ 'H , ' '% #' ' A'
' ' ' ' ' # " / ' ' / ' / ' ' ' # ' 0 #' ' #' $ @ #'
, ' ' ' " , ' % ' #% ' ' $ ' F 1' % / #' " #' ' '% #' ' @ ' ' C
(' / " ' ' 4' # ' +' $' & ' ' ' ' % #' $' ' 1' ' ' '
' $ ' #' / ' ' ' 3 4" / " ` / " ' % ' / ' ' ' ## ' 0 ' ' ' 1'
' ' # " / ' " * ' #' * ' # ` % ' H' ' 1' 0 ' % ' ' # ' , ' / '
" #' +' % ' $' % % ' 'H ' ' #' 0 ' & ' ' (#'
' " ' ' 4 0 ' #' # #' % ' ' " #' ' ' " , ' #' ' " `
' % ' $ $ ' ' #' ' : ' ' $ ' ' 0 #' ' + ' ' ' % ' % ' ' # % ' % ' % ' / ' ' ' + ' #' '% #' ' ' #' 9 #' ' , % #' # % '
1' % ' '% ' / ' ' $ % ' ' ' (#' ' #' #' ' ' ' ' ' ' ' ' ' #'
' ' 1" ' ' / ' $ ' 1 ' ' + ' ' ' + ' #' ' ' ' ' ' / ' ' $ A'
(#' " " #' ' $ ' #' #' ' $ ' ' ' ' ' ' $ 'H , #' 1'
' '% ' 'H , ' " #' & ' % ' / ' ' % ' #' 9' , / ' ' '
' 0 ' ' $' , ?' 7 +' " * ' % ' ' " 0 ' ' , ' ' $ ' / ' '
% ' Y / ' #' " $ ' ' + ' #' / ' ' ' ' ' #' / #' / ' " ' % ' ' / '
' " " ' % ' 0 ' ' ' ' " %' #' 1' 5 ' ' , ' '% #
' ' #' ' %' / " ' ' ' ' 1' 0 ' ' #' / ' ' (#' ' ' ' " @ %'
" ' 4 $ ' ' / ' ' # ' ' ' ' ' % ' + ' '
& ' (#' ' #' ' $ ' 0 ' ' ' %' $ ' %' ' ' " ' # ' " ' ' ' 1'
/ ' + ' #' / ' ' ' " " ' ' ' ' ' % ' + ' $ ' , @' + ' #' ' + '
, ' ' #' ' , ' +' ' ' $ +' ' ' #' / ' $ ' - ' % ' ' $ V' , / ' `
0 #' ' % ' ' ' 3 ' " * ' ' ' % #' ' 1' ' ' " @' / ' '
#' * $' / ' ' / ' / ' ' / ' 1" @' ' / #'
1 , ' ' (#' ' ' , ## ' $ ' ' + ' % ' 9 / ' ' ' % ' , ?' 4' # " / 9
/ ' & ' # " / ' ' ' / #' #' ' 3 ' / " ' ' " ' ' $ +'
% ' ' % ' ' , ?V' % ' ' ' ' % ' ' $ ' $ ' #' ' #' 1' ' ' " A'
' + ' / $, ' ' ' , ' #' " 1 , ' ' # ' ' / ' ' $ ' % ' # #' / '
+ ' Y / ' ' ' ' ' ' & ' ' $ ' ' ' ' / ' $ $ # 'H %' 1' $' $ '
#' ' ' #' $' ' + ' " A' ' #' , ' 1' ' ' ' +V' ' % #'
$ ' +' $' ' ' / ' $ + , ' ' $' ' - #' " / ' ' $ ' $ / ' ' $ / '
, ?' #' ' + 0 ' $' % ' ' " ' # 1' 1" @' ' #/ #' $' ' ' '
/ ' ' '% #' ' 1' ' , ?' % / #' + 0 ' " ' ' * ') 9 T ' '
$ ' ' / ' ' ' / ' " + #' #' ' 0 ' 1' ' %' 1 " #' ! ' % " ' $ # '
' + ' , #' ' #' " ' (#' " ' ' ' , ' #' ' ! ' $ %+'
$ ' - #' ' # ' ' ' ' $ ' 1' # ' ' / ' #' $' ' ' + ' " ' 9 #'
' ' ' / ' ' ' + ' ' ' , ' #' ' $' ' 1 % " $' '
1' $ ' @ %' ' % ' " ' (# ! $ ' " ' 3 4' $ "
& ' + ' ' % +' ' (#' " " #' & ' , ' ' , ?' / #' $ ' / $, '
' $ ' #' ' #' ' 1' ' ' $ ' $ ' ' ' ' ' 0 K) 1 ' #' " " ' $ ' 0 '
' ' ' / " ' #' + '% ' $' = , / ' ' ' ! ' #' ' 0 ' $ ' % ' % ' # ' A'
% #' ' 1' : ' ' ' / ' ' ' ' # + ' #' ' , / @' #' ' $' 4
/ ' # ' F , ' ' ' ' @' ' ' #' ' ' ' 2 ' , ' '
' #' % ' % ' ' 0 ' / 5 #' ' ' , ?' #' , ' ' / A ' ' +'
% ' ' %' ' 0 ' # " ' ' " 9 ' ' % ' 1' + ' " ' #' ' ' " ' (#' % '
% ' + ' % ' $ ' #' ' + ' ' #' " " ' $ ' #' % ' ' ' $ $ #

[illegible]

f' ! -?' % ' ' ' ' ' ' ' ' , / ' #' ' * 4' 5'1' ' '% @' #'
f' ' ' #' ' ' , ' ' ' " ' ' ' ' @ ' $ ' ' ' # A' ' ' ! $"
Q' 0 ' #' ' @ #' ' ') 4 ' ' ' ' % # ' ' . ' # ' $ ' " 'A'
#' ' #' +' ' ' #% +A" ' + ' ' ' @' +' ' ' '
' #' /' " / ' ' ' ' ' ' ' @' ' (#' $ ' ' ' 8 ' % ' ' 0 ' ' ') ' 1 ' , ' % ' #' " ' ' ' % ' $ ' % ' $ ' '
/ ' G R ' ' ' ' % ' " 0 ' 'TR' , ' %
f' ' C % ' 1 ' 0 ' % ' - #' # ' 4 " ' #' 4 ' # ' ' , ' #'
f' ' H 3 " ' ' ' $ ' ' $' ' ' ' ' $' $' #' ' / " ' ' ' +' ' 11 ' ' 'K ' 1 ' G ' ' * KF % ' ' $ / / ' ' ' %' 7 + ' #' '
f' ' , ' 0 $ ' ' # ' ' 00 '
f' ' ' $ ' 0 ' " ' 2 ' * 4' T 0 'TG0 ' ' ' %
' ' ' , ' " #' ' $' , ?' , ' ' ' ' ' ' ' ' ' '
#' / #' ' ' % ' / ' / ' ! ? 4' ' - ' ' 2 K' ' '
, # , ' ' ' ' ' #' ' * ' ' #' #' #' ! @ ' @ ' % ' '
/ $, ' , - ?' #' ' * 4' ' ' ' ' #' ' ' ' ' , ' $ ' ' - #'
% / #' / ' $ ' 0 ' ' $' ' A' , ' 0 / ' % ' ' ' #' + ' '
6 $ " ' % ' ' 0 4' $ + ' $ @ ' $ ' #' , #' ' ' - #' ' ' '
+ ' ' $ ' #' , ' 0 ' 1, $ ' #A' @ #' ' ' & ' - ' ' ' /
' 0 + ' 0 ' $ ' ' ' / #' + + ' ' ' #' ' ' + ' / $, ' ' '
$' ' # ' #' % # $V' ' ' ' $ ' #' ' " # + ' % '
' % / #' , ' ' @ ' , ' ' - #' #' - #' % / + ' ' ' ' 0 / ' ' 'R'0Y, '
% / #' , $ ' ' " ' ' ' $ ' # ' +' $' ' $ ' ' / ' ' ' " A'
& ' , # / ' ' % ' " / / #F' & ' / +' " ' & ' , / + ' $' + ' " ' '
% $ ' ' ' * ' 0 #' ' 4' ' #' ' #' $' 0 ' ' ' ' # A'
' 8 ' ' ' , 9 ('Z ' ' ' #' 0 ' ' " " ' ' ' ' ' 0 + / ' '
" ' / # #' $' ' $, ' # ' ' / . #' ' $ " ' % ' $V' #' #'
' # / #' $' ' $ " / ' - #' $A' ' ' ' ' / , $ #' ' , / ' ' ' ' " ' +'
$ # #' ' ' ' 0 + ' ' $ ' ' 1, ' ' ' ' ' % $' ' 5A'
#' % ' + ' ' ' * 4 ' @ #' 4' #' % ' / " ' , ' ' " ' '
' 0 ' ' ' ' 3 ' #' ' + ' / $, ' ' ' ' +' ' ' ' '
' ' ' " ' ' % / ' # ' # ' ' ' + ' ' " / ' ' / ' ' + ' - # '
' ' ! ' V' #' , ' $ ' % ' 0 0 #' % ' % ' ' ' # #' % ' ' " # + ' ,
/ $, ' ' $ ' / ' & ' ' % ' % ' ' % / + ' / " ' ' $ $ ' ' ' $ @ '
gK' ' " / ' +' , ' $' ' + ' ' ' ' , ' $ ' % # %'
/ ' ' " 4' . ' ' $ ' ' ' + ' ' $' $ ' #' + 0 ' $' / " ' '
" / ' ' ' (' ' #' 3 , ' & ' % ' ' ' ' ' ' ' ' * ' ! A
, 0 ' ' ' ' ' ' ' % ' ' ' " ' ' ' ' $ ' , ' $ " #' ' ' # +'
(@4' / ' ' ' $ # ' ' + + A / ' ' + / ' % ' #' ' %A'
' " ' ' $' ' / ' #' #' A' +' ' ' % ' ' ' ' ' ' ' ' 0 +'
') ' % ' ' " " #' ' $ ' , ' " / ' / #' ' , 0 ' , KH' ' '
#' + + #' ' , #' ' 9 ' 1 ' ' $ # ' ' Y / ' ' % ' , '
% ' $' ' ' , ' " # +' ' % ' ' / ' 3 " ' ' ' (#' ' '
' ' $ " + , ' , ' ' ' $ ' $ ' ' ' 4 0 ' ' + ' ' 8 A' 6
' ' ' $ + @' / ' * 4' # ' " " #' / A ' 4' ' ' ' #' '
' ' # 0 / ' #' $ # ' $ ' ' $ ' & 4 ' 0 0 ' 7' " ' ' " ' " A'
' ' ' ' ' , ' " # ' #' ' ' # 0 # #' ' ' ' ' '
' #' ' ! ' $ ' ' ' 4' ' " % ' ' $ ' #' ' ' #' ' A'
' / #' $' % ' ' . @4' ' #F' + @' #' / ' +' = , / ' ' ' 4 0 ' , '
#' ' . ' @ ' ' ' ' ' " ' % ' ' ' / ' ' I ' #' ' ' / '
' ' ' b / ' ' ' @ ' # # ' $ ' ' , / ' ' , ' ' 2 9'
' #' $' ' ' ' ' $ ' " ' ' #' ' @ \ ' ' , ' ' ' / '
$ @ ' $' ' 8 ' ' ' . 4' #' * 9' ' (#' ' , / ' ' ' (#' " #' $ '
4' % ' $ ' + ' & ' ' ' % ' ' % / #' ' ' #' " / ' ' '
'Y / #' #% $ ' & ' " #' + ' ' ' $ / ' % ' ' #' '
' ' % ' ' / ' ' ' ' " ' + ' ' ' ' " / ' ' ' ' ! 9' / $, ' % ' ' ' ' ' #' 0 ' ' ' ' % ' ' % @ #

>' * # ' 0 $' '& ' ' - / ' # $' N' 0 ' * ' & ' " ' + $, ' N ' ' ' " ' 8 8' 4 Y / ' & , ' " " ' * ' & ' " + ' TES' N' Y' 5 + ' F' ' ' #' / $' / ' " ' $ " '
' $ ' 5' ' ' ' ' ' ' JTE') ' 5 + $ ' JL ' / '
W & # ' Y / ' ' LP' ND_A' / $ ' # ' : ! #' , ' 0' A' 0 ' ' # ' " /
>' ' Y4 ' @4' ' ' ' / ' ' # ' 2 ' , %' ' K ' 4'
' ' (' I ' 1 ' 4 ' " 6 + 76 QQ' 16b ' >X 8) - - - - U' ' 0U I ' *
&' , / ' ' 1 ' 2 4' ' 4' ' 4' 4 ' - @' $ V'
! # ' ' ' ' , ? ' ' 4' ' ' 1' - R4 ' ' : ' " / ' 4' : I ' , $ / ' '
7 $' ' % ' i ' / 0G' ' $' 3 , ' $ ' 4' ' -9
?' 6' ' ' % % 2 9/' 4 'K ' : ' " ' / Y' ' ' SA
* (' (& ' '

Wretch, a Magician, an Idolater, a false Prophet, who spoke truth against the grain, and contrary to his usual custom. S. Ambrose [g] compares him to Caiaphas, who prophesied without knowing what he said. The generality of Commentators think likewise [h], that Balaam was a Magician and Idolater.

But S. Jerom seems to have adopted the opinion of the Hebrews [i], which he relates, and was to this purpose, viz. that Balaam knew the true God, that he erected Altars to him, and was a true Prophet, tho' very corrupt in his manners. Moses says expresly, that he consulted the Lord, and Balaam calls the Lord his God, Numb. xxii. 18. I cannot go beyond the word of the Lord my God. S. Austin did not venture to decide this question [k], he says, Balaam will be one of those who at the day of Judgment shall say to God, Lord, have I not prophesied in thy name? which intimates that he believed him to be a true Prophet, tho' a very bad man, and among the reprobate. Tostatus and other Commentators are of the same opinion.

[Numb. xxii. 8, 9, 12, 18, 19, 20.]

BALADAN, King of Babylon, by profane Authors called Belesis, or Belesus, Nabonassar, or Nanybrus [l]. Baladan at first was no more than Governour of Babylon. He entred into a confederacy with Arbaces, Governour of Media, and rebell'd against Sardanapalus King of Assyria. These two Generals marched against Sardanapalus with an Army of four hundred thousand men. The conspirators lost the three first battles. But the Bactrians coming over to their party, and deserting the King's, Baladan and Arbaces attacked the Enemy in the night, and made themselves masters of his Camp. After this misfortune, Sardanapalus retreated to Nineveh, and left the command of his Army to his Brother-in-law Salæmen. The conspirators attacked Salæmen and defeated him in two great Battles; after which they laid siege to Nineveh. Sardanapalus sustained the siege for three years; but the third year the Tigris overflowing its banks, beat down twenty furlongs or two thousand five hundred paces of the walls. Whereupon the Conspirators entred, and Sardanapalus burnt himself with all that he had most valuable, upon a funeral pile erected for this purpose in his palace. Arbaces was acknowledged King of Media, and Baladan King of Babylon. Berodach-Baladan, who sent Ambassadors to Hezekiah, was the Son of Baladan.

[If. xxxix. 1. 2 Kings xx. 12.]

[In the Year of the World 3254. of the Julian Period 3964. before the vulgar Æra 750.]

[2 Kings xx. 12.]

BALAK, the Son of Zippor, King of the Moabites. He seeing the multitude of Israelites which were incamped upon the confines of his Country, and apprehending they would attack him as they had the Amorites, sent deputies to Balaam the Diviner, desiring him to come and curse or devote this people. Balaam came, as is related in the Article belonging to him, but instead of cursing the Israelites he heaped blessings on them. Balak inraged at this, dismissed Balaam, without rewarding him so well as he intended. But Balaam having advised him to ingage the Israelites to sin, by inviting them to the Feasts of Peor, Balak followed his counsel, which was equally pernicious to him, who gave it, to those who followed it, and to those against whom it was given. The Israelites who were thus betrayed into this crime, were killed by that part of their Brethren, who continued faithful to the Lord. Balaam was involved in the slaughter which was made of the Midianites; and lastly the Midianites, who had been most zealous in corrupting the Hebrews, were cut in pieces, and their country plundered. We know nothing concerning the Death of Balak, God not permitting them to attack the Moabites, by reason of their Father Lot, Abraham's Nephew.

[Numb. xxii. xxiii. xxiv. xxv.] [— xxv. & seq.] [— xxxi. 1, 2, &c.] [Ibid.] [Deut. ii. 1.]

BALSAM-TREE, or Balsam. The word Balsamon may be derived from Baal-shemen [m], that is, royal Oil, or the most precious of perfumed Oils. It is a word no where to be met with in the Hebrew books of the Old Testament; but in the Song of Solomon we find the Vineyards of En-geddi, which are believed to be gardens of the Balsam-tree. In Ezekiel we read the word Pannag, which the Vulgate has translated Balsamum; and is understood in the same sense by the Chaldee and many other Interpreters.

[Cant. i. 14.] [Ezek. xxvii. 17. פנג Pannag.]

The Balsam-tree is a Shrub which scarce grows taller than the Granada-tree. Dapper says, it is much in the form of Agnus castus, and about as high as the Privet. It has few leaves, shoots out abundance of branches set with little rounding leaves, always green; the wood of it is gummy, and of a reddish colour. Its branches are long, slender, and have but few leaves on them; the blossoms of it are small, white, and very fragrant; the fruit of it is a kernel covered with a dry brown skin; it generally has a small almond in it, but sometimes the seed of it falling out of season, this kernel is filled with a yellow liquor like honey, bitter to the taste, and pungent to the tongue. The Balsam-tree is cultivated much after the manner of the vine. Its plant does not become large, nor is it suffered any more than the vine to grow

[g] Ambrof. Ep. 50. & Class. nov. Edit. [h] Lyr. Cajet. Burg. Jans. Oleast. Tir. &c. [i] Hieronym. quæst. Hebr. in Genes. [k] August. l. ii. de divers. quæst. ad Simplic. art 9. quæst. 48. in Num. [l] Vide Usher. Annal. ad an. per Jul. 3966, 3967. [m] בעל שמן

<' $'   @' _D= D   <' $

[illegible]

: $ % @ 1 : $ %

$ " " ' / ' $ ' ' A . 4 , / #% (/ ' # " $
$ / + 0 + A " # ' ' F 9 # " `
$ # , # / " " % ' + $ # " / '
. 4 G $ $ ' 0 " " "
+ 0 4 b '% 4 (% & 3 ' # / 4 , A # !9
% 5 % ' ' / " ! '
' + ' $ ` % ' $ ' 0 % %
+ " / % # , " ' $ (0 50)
& (/ ! ! " _E , " / + + % & D 9
4 ' 3 % 9 % $ & ' C 0 # ' # ' $ /
, ' # 6 $, $ # % $ % % / + H
0 % " * 9 / & # % , " / ' # %
W 4 ' , ' * , + & / # # , # # 0 / . 5
/ " 0 / , " ' / $ # " " / W :
& (, # # Y / # " / '
% % + 0 & , " 9 / ' " / ' % / ' $ F
6 G " 4 ' / # + " " # " " # $ ' 0 A ! $ 9
" % 0 ! / / # % # $ ' W6W6 A
8 A $ J . 78 # ' $ " # / % #
$ / # % # ' G G % , " M $ $ @ % %
$ J ' $ " / $ ' ' $ ' ' # % " ' $, " ' /
' ' / ' / # # $ `
K ' . + + ' $ / ' , # # % `
1 1 % / ` " ' V ' ! $ " % HA X #
' $, / , ' ! / ` 4 # 3 ' # % WW6W Q
% # ' B / JE & , % ' " @ # % ,
1 0(' ' - % C / " # $! " 0 !
K / K4 ' 8 $ * % ' % ' # , $ ' ;)5
111 , A + A3 ' # $ / / #
!! L< # / @4 $ # + # %
3 & 1 & $ $ ' $, # * # $ % ' " %6 (0 0
? , 4 , 5 # 0 # " / ' # ' / $ " / # , = A
' $ * , & % # " , " ` / + $ + # # , # # #
M & 9 K4 # $ ' $ + 1" @ $ % / $,
/ " ' 3 / ' $ $ 1 / ' % WW6
% # $ ' 0 0 # " / + # , , + "
% , # % F 1 , $ $ " ' / # ' " A
% ' # # A % + 0 % 9
$, , # # & " # # , / 0 / '
$ ' ' / " ' / $ + $ % ' 6# ' + 0 + , / $ # / '
$ ' $, % ! $ ` " " ' 0 + " A
% / # ' # ' . 4 # A @ 5
@0 ' $ $ @ $ / ' $ ' ' , " 5 % A
' + # / # 1 , $ + " A % Y / # $, `
1 , % " / # & % ' # # # # # ! #@ % '
@ % % + ! , ' , ' ' , / + # ' / " `
' $ (% ' # $ + $ $ '
' / / # / , # ' $ & " $. % $ /
6& ! 6 @ # 1 ' $ " ' # , . 4 ' , /
VE ? 6 / 6" 0 + , " / # , # " ' # ' . 4 3
4 ' G 4
0 # 3 , : %
+ , / $ # # , " ` % /
M # $ " # + " $ 4 0 E
% @ # + % , & K ' . " `
3 ' % $ # % $ F 0 $. # % ' . 4 ! / #
, $ ' & % % ` ' " $ ' . . 4
, ' $ % % # ' 0
+ / # ' / / 0 / ! ' + 0 # / + 0 / # # + '
! " * & 4 % A W % # + . # #
" " 1 / # , , + # 9 4 ' " / " A
, $ 4 ' " ' $ " % % A
& % (% # ' / # , / '
$ ' '
6 / + F ' 4 ' JE # # ' # ' "
T 6 ' , & $ 1 $! ! & " WA
6 6PK6

@ _DS D

$ ' ' " * . . # % 1 , $ # ' , +
' , $ " - ' , A F ' / # # / " %
$ " / ' % $ " # 4 + / , $
' % % # $ # , + " # 3 A 0 4 # # % ' $ + ' % # # / " . 4 # # , ' % + % # " & $ / @ % % 4 . /
" $ " . " " 4 4 " \ /
/ $, % ! 4 # # M / K4 ? . Z
$ % % " ! 0 9 # $. 3 9
4 % A / /
X ' " / 0 / # % 4 0 ? 4'
($! 4 ' $ 8 ! " 8 ,
% ' $ 4 % # V , ' & , /
0 # " # % # & $ " V W , A
' $ # % - ' , / # " - = " "
% % 0 # , " ' $. 4 $ # ' " - ' / " " " ' ' $ " + / 9
" $ 0 / ' 0 " # #
' # + " ' " - " % # ## " #
6 / % # # % # $
& 4 T * O M 3 T 3 I 9
%
" + / / 4 TE T " \ 1
/ / % # 8 , $
. - " $ % 0 $ / ' " "
, , / 0 V # * V , / % # ? #
' ' $ @ % , / 4 ' " * *
95 5 # ' + / # $ # @ ' / % 9
, 0 # , " M # $ " 4 # 4 / # ' #
8 # # # $ # $ 8
- ' # + % # $ ' "
' / , 9 5 , / ' $, / # ' V , / # / %
% # ' + " / 4 % " " , # ""
& % # @ % % # % U
" / ' / ' ' + 8 ! $ " , + + , " M # " 0
LT @ W ? 3 ? ' $ 4 A , " M #
T , 3 % # 0 # " $ / "
T # % 9 / # # % $. 8 W
, T
3 ! A , 4
" ' % % ' # ' $ ' ' " % # 4 !
& ' $ % % # 4 ' ' $ ""
' , / # % , % A ' ' , " M #
% # / " , % # " % $ " ' $ $ @ / " I
+ % ' + ' , 0 % $ # $ # $
% $ ' # $ ' / # $ @ " %
11 , " & % # " % , " M # #
9 . , + ' " " O M # $ " I
, " M # % , / 8 4 " ' /
4 T ' " / " ' ' $ % A # + #
+ 0 & / # . 4
/ " " / ! $ % 4 ' " / "
$, " $, 8 # ' A # ' 0 +
" # 8 W , 0 # / $ ' # $
' / , ' # 3 # / " " ' $ %
% / # " ' / + 8 % 0 ' # " " # # " $, % / # " / ' $ ' $ " / 8 # " " $ +
$ + ' $ W% $, 4 F #
! " # & " " " # , / ' ' '
%
6 + L 3 " ! ! 00 # _D (/ $ (# 0 _J 3 " 0 ' '
N $, ' 3 0 WLKN i " 0 / & "
f / " $ " $ W ! . " / # / +
6 $ N 3 ' # 9A9 = < S 5 W & / $ #
f $ % 0= 2 3 / : 0 ' F 20 (
% ' ' 1 JS ; / # D 3 " / D W (/ # '
5 " ' < D D_
* 1 /

< $. DPKJE : $ %

[illegible]

Ambrose in the passage which is here perplexing to us, followed, as was usual with him, S. Basil. Now S. Basil[m] has maintained, that in order to the validity of Baptism, the invocation of the three Persons in the Trinity is absolutely necessary; for altho', says he, the Apostle often makes no mention either of the Father, or of the Holy Spirit, but of the Son only, yet should we not infer from thence that he excludes them: for the invocation of the name of Jesus Christ is a kind of profession of Faith that we believe the Holy Trinity entire, the Father who gave the Unction, the Son who received it, and the Holy Spirit who is himself this Unction. In like manner, adds he, notwithstanding the Scripture in other passages seems to mention only the Holy Spirit, we should not from thence conclude that such Baptism, wherein the Holy Spirit only is invoked, is perfect; for the tradition which we have received should continue inviolable. To separate the Holy Spirit from the Father and the Son, is a dangerous attempt in him who baptizes, and unprofitable to him who is baptized.

But let us come to the passage of S. Ambrose, and see if he really says what is imputed to him. He asserts, the Baptism of John to have been of no force, because there was no acknowledgment in it, either of Jesus Christ, or the Holy Spirit; and that Baptism is then only full and compleat, when the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost are confessed in it: Plenum autem est si Patrem, & Filium, Spiritumque Sanctum fatearis. He who denies but one Person, destroys the whole Mystery, but he who in words expresses but one of them, without however denying either Father, Son, or Holy Ghost, does not fail to receive the Sacrament of Baptism fully and compleatly. It is visible in all this that S. Ambrose does not speak of the Minister who baptizes, but of his Faith who is baptized. He supposes the Minister of Baptism to have done his duty, but believes that he who denies one of the Persons in the Trinity, at the time of his receiving Baptism, receives not the Grace belonging to it, and that the Sacrament with respect to him is neither full nor perfect; and on the contrary, that tho' he should expresly mention one only of the Persons, yet if he believes them all as he should do, the Sacrament with regard to him is intire and compleat. He receives the whole effect of it, quia qui unum dixerit Trinitatem signavit. All this relates to him only who has received Baptism.

Finally, the opinion which maintains that Baptism ought necessarily to be confer'd in the name of the whole Trinity, and with the express invocation of the three Persons, and that where one only of the three Persons is called upon it is invalid, the opinion, I say, asserting this is followed by the most learned Divines[n] who have written on this matter.

IV. Baptism for the Dead. S. Paul in his first Epistle to the Corinthians, endeavours to prove the Resurrection of the Dead; and having given several reasons for it, says, If the dead rise not at all, what shall they do who are baptized for the dead? The question is, what is here meant by this Baptism for the Dead? The first thought which occurs to the mind on this occasion is that they whom S. Paul wrote to procured themselves to be baptized for their friends and relations who died without having received Baptism, hoping that the Baptism so received for them would be serviceable to them in another Life, in proportion as, after the same manner, the prayers and alms which are offered for the Dead are of use in obliterating such venial Sins, as might not be atoned for by them; and procuring for them a more speedy enjoyment of bliss. 1 Cor. xv. 29.

No one pretends to say, that the Apostle here approves this practice, or authorizes these opinions. It is sufficient that there were people who thought and acted according to these principles, this will justify the Apostle's producing here an argument which we call ad hominem; he does not say, that the Corinthians caused themselves to be baptized for the Dead, but what shall they do who are baptized for the Dead? How will they support this practice? upon what will they found it, if the dead do not rise again, and if the Souls of the departed do not subsist after their decease?

We have nothing more to do than to shew, that there were persons at this time who called themselves Christians, and obliged themselves to be baptized for the Dead, for the service of the Dead, for their relief and advantage. Now we know, that when the first Epistle to the Corinthians was written, that is to say, three and twenty years after the Resurrection of our Saviour, several Hereticks, such as the Simonians, Gnosticks, and Nicolaitans, were in being, who denied the real Resurrection of the Dead, and acknowledged no other, besides that which was received in Baptism, by the sanctifying grace of this Sacrament.

We know farther, that the Marcionites, who appeared some time after, embraced the same principles, denied the Resurrection of the Dead, and what is more particular, received Baptism for the Dead. This we m Basil. de Spiritu Sancto, l. x. xi. xii.

n Bellarm. de Sacram. Bap. l. I. c. 3. Estius in 4. Sentent. distinct. 3. § 5. Natal. Alex. Sæcul. 3. Dissert. 15. Notæ in novam edit. S. Ambros. in l. I. de Spiritu Sancto. c. 4. Harduin. de Bapt. in nomine Christi. Mabillon Notæ in Ep. 103. D. Bernardi.

[illegible]

" , , ' ' ' ' #' 0 ' ' ' ' ' ' ' $ ' " ' ' / '
' '#'' / . '$ ' ' ' ' '+ ' +/`
11' , ' ' ' ''O '' $ ' '' + ' '' ' '# '
J' '' '_E % ' ' # %' #' ' , ?' % ' '
1 A' , ' '8 ' ''! ' ' 1'' $' ' , ' '& ! ' '
' / '' ' ''0 'LP # '% '$ #' ' ' #'
1* ' . ' ' ' ' ''! ' ' 9' ' , ?' #' ' ' '
/ '' J '' !'JN' ' ' ' $ ' ' '" , , ' '
7 ' ' ''! ' 0 +' , ' , T ' ' , T ' ' " ' '' '
' ' , '- #' '# 0 ' ' 4' / ' ' '" ' '' '' ' , T '
'' ' ' '', # + ' / # '% ' ' 1 ' & '% #' ' ' , '
#' , ' #' , '. '7 +' '' ' 9' $ '% ' , / ' ' ' ' ' '
9 #+' 4L' ' ' #' ' , ' ' (#6 ' A' '' '' #' @ '% ' ' ' #'
*''' '=W'# '% '% ''+ ' #' ' $' , n 5A' ' ' '2 ' 0 '' '' 3 ' 0 '3 ' '
' '3 " ' - ' ' '1 ' #' ' ' 4' . ' ' ' ' '' '
' $ ' '$ / '2 ' @ ' /A' & '% #' T'% ' ' # #' , E
' #' $ ' '' '& , ' ''O ' #' 'W ' ' '' ' '' ' '+ ' '
& ' #' ' ' 0 ') '1' % ' ' + ' % ' @ % ' ' ' '
, +'% ' '+ ' ''. @4' $ ' +/ + ' ' ' %' '' - #' , 9'
1'% '# 0 ' $' ' / ' # ' , ?' %' # +' ' ' '% ' '
% #' '' /'% '+ '% ' $ '1'% ' ?4' #' '' $' % ' '% '% '
+ ' '' ' 1'% ' '+ ' 1' 6 '' '+ ' ' ?4' '% ' '+ 0 #' , ' h0'
' #' 2F ' , / ' ' / ' '' ' * ` @ ' ' ?4' 9' / ' '>(%' '
'% ' ' , ' / V ' ' ' (#' ' 4 ' 4' ! % ' % ' E
' '% ' ' ' #' '' ' $ ' 4' #' 0 ' ' 4'% ' ' '
'$ ' ' . '% '@ #' % 9' ' '' , 4' '2 ' ' ' ! $" '
' ' ' '' % ' #' '+ '' ' $" #' '$ @ #' / # ' ' $ '
' ' ' / '' '' ' !" # ' ># E '' ?4' #' , 4' ' '" '
' ' ' $ $ # '# " #' #' ' ' ' ?4' ' ' ' , 4 K '
$ #'% ' , ?' % # ') ' ' ' ' ' ' ' ' ' '' ' ? '
" ' '' & V #' 0 +' + ' ` ' ' , ' '' ' ' ' '' * '
+ ' ' / #' $ ' ' #0 #' , 4' '2 ' ' ' " ' ' ' ' ' '
% #' '$ / '2 ' 4' / ' ' $ ' , ' #'% 9' 5
% ' 0 +' ' '' ' + 0 ' # ' ' ' '' '% ' $ '' '' ' $ '
' ' ' $ ' '$ '% ' ' / # #' '+ ' 'F #' ' '' '' " ' ' ' '
' '' ' #' $" #' ' ' 4' '' ' ' '' '% '' ' ' 'J '
0 ') '' & '' #'# ' ' , 9' ' + ' +/ + ' ' ' '' $, ' , ' W6W6'
? ' & ' ' '# ' '% ' ' (#' / # ' #' , ' '' ' '% $' ' '# A'
'# 0 #' % ' ' #' ' / ' +' % ' '" '' ' $' '% ' , '
' ' ' $ ' $ ' , ?' # ' # #' ' $' ' , '9 #' " ' '' ' / A'
$ / '2 ' #' ' (#' 0 +' '" #' # ' #' ' ' '% ' '" @' ' $' '
/+ '% @ ' $ ' , ?' ' A' ' $' % ' , ' , 4' , '
'# ' #' ' #' , #' ' $" ' ' ' ' / #' ' ' 0 ' ' + ' % '
* ' ' % '# ' # #' , ' '' # ' '" @' / ' +/ + '% '% '
'' ' ' ' '$ + ' , '00 ' ' ! ' ?4' 4' ' 4 '
' '' + ' #' $ +' ' '& ' '' 3 " '# ' ' + ' ' ' " '
' ') '% '@ #' , '. ' ' +' ' + ' '' '% #' , E
'' '' ' ' , '$ '" /` $' ' $ '# 0 ' ' ' $' , '% '
' #' ' '" ' , ?' ' ' ! ' + ' '# '' ' ' / "A'
1, $ ' ' $ ' ' ' $ ' '. '& ' " '' ' ' $ '' $' ' ' #0 , '
% '' % #' $' ' , # ' ''% '# #' , ' $' '' $' , '% '
/ " ' '" ' & / '% '3 '# 0 ` + ' ' ' '' ' + '% '
#' ' $' ' 0 / # ' ''. '7 +' '' 0 ' ' ' '% #' $ ' + '
T '' , ?' #' # ' / " ' ' $' '' / #'% ' + ' ' +' #'
' $" 6 #' ' $ ' '' @ + 0 +' ' ' ' ' ?4' $ +' ' '% ' '' 9 9+' ' (#' #' ' #' / #' '" '' ' ' ' +/ + ' '' + ' #'
' ' ' ' $' ' ' '' ' #' , ' ' $' % ' '' $ #' , E
8Q;<' 'OQ7<' , ' : ' J_DJ ' , ' ' 4' ', T '' & ' / ' '' 9'
'0 / + ' ' J_D= ' > ' ' ' " '% ' ' '
$ ' 0 ' , ' '' " ' ' , E % / ' ' $ ' '' '" ' $" '
?'% ' ' ' ''# '$ ' ' , 4'' ' ' ' $ ' + ' 0 '
'% ' '8 V ' + ' ' ' $ #' '" ' '' ! ? ' % ' ' A'
' % ' ' / , #' #' ' , ?' #' 9 / #' / " ' ' * '% ' 9'

;' $, ''1 , # '#/ ' 'T ;' , '4 0# /+ 'N' ' ' 99' " / Q ' W' K9
&
* ('1 2 ' 2' 2

gypt to the Eaſt, the Bildulgerid and mount Atlas to the South, the Ocean to the Weſt, and the Mediterranean to the North, Barbary. It is thought to be ſo called, becauſe part of this country was not ſubject to the Roman Empire; now the Romans, as has been obſerved, named thoſe Barbarians who were not within their Dominions.

BAR-CHOCHEBA, or Chochebas, or Chochibas a famous Impoſtor. It is ſaid that he aſſumed the name of Cochebar or Bar-Cochebar, that is to ſay, Son of the Star, by reaſon of theſe words of Balaam, which he applied to himſelf, pretending to be the Meſſiah [e], There ſhall come a Star out of Jacob, and a Scepter ſhall riſe out of Iſrael. Others are of opinion that he derived his name from the town of Cochaba, ſituated beyond Jordan, in the neighbourhood of Aſtaroth-Carnaim, and beyond Adrae or Edrai [f]. Scaliger obſerves upon the authority of the Rabbins, that his true name was Gazeb or Caſeb, Liar; or Bar-Coſebah, the Son of Lies [g]; but being aſhamed of this name he changed it into that of Bar-Cochebar, Son of the Star. He ingaged the Jews in a revolt under the reign of Adrian. The famous Jew Akiba * ſupported him, and maintained that he was the Meſſiah. Spartian [h] ſays, that the motive which induced the Jews to rebel at this time, was an order, forbidding them to be circumciſed. It is ſaid that Bar-Chochebar, to impoſe upon the Jews, put kindled ſtraw into his mouth, and made a ſhew of vomiting flame [i]. He fortified himſelf in abundance of places, and maſſacred an infinite number of men. His rage was principally ſet againſt the Chriſtians [k], of whom he deſtroyed great multitudes.

The Emperor Adrian ſent Julius Severus againſt him and his party, who attacked them ſeparately, and took them in ſeveral places; at laſt he ſhut them up in Bether †. The Siege of this place was long and the defence which the Jews made, very obſtinate. At laſt the town was taken, and ſoon after the War was finiſhed. Bar-chochebar periſhed in it [l], and the multitude of the Jews, who were put to death and ſold during this War and after it, is almoſt innumerable [m]. Abundance of them was ſold at the fair of Terebinthus; and they who were not put off at this market, were expoſed to ſale at Gaza; and ſuch of them as they could not get rid of at Gaza, they carried into Egypt, where they periſhed by ſhipwreck, or famine, or by the hands of the Heathens. After this Adrian publiſhed an Edict, forbidding the Jews on pain of death to go to Jeruſalem [n], and Guards were placed purpoſely at the gates to prevent their entring §. The rebellion of the Jews under Bar-chochebas happened in the 17 and 18th years of Adrian, in the year of J. C. 178, 179.

The Jews ſay, there were two Impoſtors in their nation of this name [o], the Grand-father and Grand-ſon. That Cocheba or Coziba I. was elected King by the Jews two and fifty years after the deſtruction of the firſt Temple, and died at Bether, a City in the neighbourhood of Jeruſalem, and the Capital of his Empire. His Son ſucceeded him, after whom reigned his Grand-ſon Romulus, called Coziba, This laſt was he whom the Jews acknowledged for the Meſſiah. The Emperor Adrian being inform'd of Coziba's revolt, and the inſurrection of the Jews, came with an Army into Judæa, took Bether, and deſtroyed a great number of the Jews in the year 73 from the deſtruction of the Temple. Others ſay Coziba was killed by his own people in the City of Bether, becauſe he had not that particular character of the Meſſiah, which conſiſted in diſcerning by the ſmell if any man were criminal. It is to no purpoſe to confute facts ſo ill concerted, and ſo viſibly fabulous.

Bar-chochebar gathered a numerous Army, and committed very great diſorders in Judæa. His rage was bent chiefly againſt the Chriſtians, many of whom it is ſaid, were deſtroyed by his direction: others of them in great numbers he forced into

[e] Numb. xxiv. 17. דרך כוכב מיעקוב

[f] Vide Epiphan. l. i. adverſ. hæreſ. p. 126. & 142.

[g] בר כיבה

[h] Spartian. in Adriano. c. 14.

[i] Hieronym, Apolog. & adverſ. Rufin.

[k] Juſtin. Martyr. Apolog. ad Anton. pium.

[l] The Jews ſay he fell into the hands of the Romans; who tore off his skin with iron pincers, and that he died thus miſerably.

[m] Hieronym. in Jerem. xxxi. & in Zach. xi. Vide & Chronic. Alex. p. 596.

[n] Hieronym. in Iſai. vi. Euſeb. l. iv. c. 6. Hiſt. Eccleſ.

[o] Baſnage Hiſt. des Juifs. t. ii. p. 123, 124.

* See an account of this eminent Doctor in Rabbi Ganz's Tzemach David, p. 90. The Jews ſay, he had 25000 Diſciples; that God revealed ſuch things to him as he had concealed from Moſes; that a whole Volume was not ſufficient to contain his remarkable actions and expreſſions. לאיכיל ספר להגיר רבריו Zachutus in Juchaſin, p. 62.

† The Jews call it the Houſe of Spies בית־תר Bethar, becauſe after the deſtruction of Jeruſalem Centinels were placed there to obſerve thoſe who went to Jeruſalem.

§ The wretched condition of the Jews after the deſolation of their Country is repreſented by Juvenal, who had opportunities of obſerving it, both in Italy and Egypt: He tells us to what miſerable circumſtances they were reduced.

Cophino Fænoque relicto,
Arcanam Judæa tremens mendicat in aurem,
Interpres Legum Solymarum, at magna Sacerdos
Arboris ac ſummi fida Internucia Cœli.
Implet & illa manum, ſed parcius Ære minuto, Qualiacunque voles Judæi ſomnia vendunt.——Juven. Sat. 6. verſ. 544. & ſeq.

into Apoſtacy, obliging them, as the Talmudiſts mention, to be circumciſed again, and return to Judaiſm, which they had before forſaken. Tinnius Rufus was the firſt who oppoſed him, afterwards the Emperor ſent Julius Severus againſt him, who took the City of Bether, and put him to death. The Jews ſay, that Adrian, to whom his head was brought, had the curioſity to ſee his body; but when they were going to take it up, a Serpent was found about his neck, which terrified the bearers; and this Prince hereupon acknowledged that God alone could kill ſuch a man.

Akiba's Scholars, who had defended the City, were tied together with their Books, and thrown into the fire. We are told farther, that the maſſacre was ſo great, that more Jews periſhed in this War than came out of Egypt. The Skulls of three hundred Children were found upon one ſtone only: the ſtreams of blood were ſo large, that they carried away ſtones of four pound weight to the Sea, which was four miles diſtant from it. Laſtly, the inhabitants of theſe places did not dung their lands for ſeven years after, they being ſufficiently manured with dead bodies. In the Faſt celebrated on the 18th of the month Ab, which anſwers to our July and Auguſt, they call Adrian a ſecond Nebuchadnezzar, and pray to God to remember this cruel Prince, who deſtroyed 480 Synagogues. This is part of what the Jews tell us relating to Bar-chochebas.

Acts xiii. 6. BAR-JESUS, or according to ſome copies, Bar-jeu, was a Jewiſh Magician living in the iſle of Crete. S. Luke calls him Elymas, which in Arabick ſignifies, a Sorcerer. He was with the Pro-conſul Sergius Paulus, who was a wiſe and prudent man. The Pro-conſul ſending for Paul and Barnabas, deſired to hear the word of God. But Bar-Jeſus reſiſted them, and endeavoured to hinder the Pro-conſul from imbracing Chriſtianity. Whereupon Paul filled with the Holy Ghoſt, and looking ſtedfaſtly on this man, ſaid, O full of all ſubtilty and all miſchief, thou child of the Devil, thou enemy of all righteouſneſs, wilt thou not ceaſe to pervert the ways of the Lord? And now, behold, the hand of the Lord is upon thee, and thou ſhalt be blind not ſeeing the Sun for a ſeaſon. Immediately he was ſtruck blind, and he went about ſeeking ſome to lead him by the hand. The Pro-conſul, who was an Eye-witneſs of this miracle, was converted by it. Origen [p], and S. Chryſoſtom [q], think that Elymas or Bar-Jeſus was converted likewiſe, and that S. Paul reſtored his ſight.

BAR-JONA, or Son of Jonah, or Son of a dove: This is the ſirname which our Saviour ſometimes gives S. Peter. There are perſons, who think that Bar-Jona is put for Bar-Johanna, the Son of John [r]. Matt. xvi. 17.

BARIS. This was the name of the Palace begun by John Hircanus upon the mountain of the Temple, which was afterwards made uſe of for the abode of the Aſmonæan Princes [ſ]. Herod the Great perfected it, and made a Citadel of it, which he called Antonia, in honour of his friend and protector Mark Antony. This building was ſquare, ſituated upon a ſteep rock, fifty cubits high from the ſide of the valley which looked towards the City of Jeruſalem; but it was upon a level with the Temple. The whole edifice was two furlongs about, that is to ſay, ſixty three paces and ſomething more in every front. In this palace the pontifical ornaments of the High-Prieſt were kept, and lockt up after they had been worn upon great feſtival days.

The Septuagint uſe the name Baris to denote a palace, a great houſe cloſed on all ſides, in the form of a Tower [t]. This word is derived from the Chaldee, Berah, which we often meet with in the ſame ſenſe, in the Hebrew books written after the Captivity of Babylon, ſuch as Daniel, Eſdras, Nehemiah, Eſther. S. Jerom ſays, it is a term peculiar to Paleſtine, for ſignifying what we have juſt now mentioned. The plural number of Baris is Bareis, which is ſomething ambiguous, becauſe it may come from Barus which ſignifies heavy. Hence ſome of the Latins, in their interpretation of the xliv. Pſalm, ver. 10. where we read à domibus eburneis, read à gravibus eburneis, which has no ſenſe, and has produced another fault; for others attempting to correct theſe words have read à gradibus eburneis, from ſteps of ivory, which have no relation to the paſſage in the Pſalm. Thus in Pſalm xlvii. 14. where we read diſtribuite domos ejus, others deceived by the ſame ambiguity of the term Bareis, have read Graves ejus; and others deſiring to outdo the reſt, and ſpin the matter finer, diſtribuite gradus ejus.

BARLEY. In Paleſtine Barley was ſown in Autumn and reaped in Spring, that is to ſay, at the Feaſt of the Paſſover. The Rabbins ſometimes call Barley the food of Beaſts, becauſe in reality they fed their cattle with it; in Homer and others of the Ancients we find Barley always given to horſes, and at the trial of women under the accuſation of adultery, the offering was of Barley-meal, by reaſon of the beſtial and infamous crime which they ſtood charged with, 1 Kings iv. 28.

[p] Origen. in Exod. edit. Huet. p. 22, 23.
[q] Chryſoſt. in Acta homil. 28. Iſidor. Grot. alii.
[r] Hieronym. in Matth. xvi.
[ſ] Joſeph. Antiq. l. xviii. c. 6. & de Bello, l. vi. c. 15.
[t] Hyeron. in Jerem. xvi. in Oſee ix. in Pſ. xliv. ad principium. Uſque hodie domus ex omni parte concluſæ, & in modum ædificatæ turrium Βάρεις appellantur.

with, and upon this Barley-meal they neither poured oil nor put frankincense because [Numb. v. 15.] it was a Sacrifice of Jealousy, as Moses says. Herodotus tells us, that the Egyptians eat neither Wheat nor Barley, nor any thing made with them. They had a particular sort of Corn, which was their sustenance.

The Hebrews frequently used Barley-bread, as we see by several passages of [2 Sam. xvii. 28.] Scripture. For example, David's friends brought to him in his flight, wheat, barley, flour, pease, beans, and pulse. Solomon sent wheat, barley, wine and oil to the servants whom King Hiram had supplied him with, in order to carry on the [2 Chr. ii. 15.] works at Libanus. And in the Gospel Jesus Christ and his Apostles had no other [John vi. 9.] provision besides five Barley-loaves. Elijah had a present made him of twenty Barley-loaves, and Corn in the husk, which a cer- [2 King iv. 42.] tain man brought to him as first-fruits.

Moses remarks, that when the hail fell in Egypt, the flax and the barley were bruised and destroyed, because the flax was at its full growth, and the barley began to [Gen. ix. 31.] form its green ears; but the wheat and more backward grain were not damaged, because they were as yet only in the blade, and the hail bruised the young shoots which produce the Ears. All this happened some days before the departure of the Israelites out of Egypt, or before the Passover. In Egypt the Barley-harvest does not begin till towards the end of April[t].

Barley is sometimes used to signify some mean thing of low price. Ezekiel com- [Ezek. xiii. 19.] plains of the false Prophets who seduced the people of the Lord, and made vain promises to them for a handful of Barley, [Hosea iii. 2.] and a morsel of Bread. The Prophet Hosea says, that he bought his Wife for fifteen pieces of Silver, and an Omer and an half of Barley.

BARNABAS, a Disciple of Jesus Christ [u], and S. Paul's companion in his apostolical labours. He was a native of the Isle of Cyprus, and of the Tribe of Levi. His name signifies the Son of Consolation or Prophecy. He had farther the name of Joseph or Joses; and some Greek Copies instead of Barnabas call him Barsabas, who drew lots with S. Matthias to fill the place, which Judas had in the [Acts i. 23.] Apostolical College. It is believed that he renounced all his temporal fortune, sold what he had, and laid the price of it at the Apostles feet. It is said likewise, that he was brought up with S. Paul at the feet of Gamaliel. When the Apostle came to Jerusalem three years after his Conversion, [— ix. 26, 27.] S. Barnabas introduced him to the o- [About the year 37 of the vulgar Æra] ther Apostles, and made him acquainted with them.

Five years after, the church of Jerusalem [About the year of J. C. 42.] understanding the progress, which the Gospel made at Antioch, sent S. Barnabas [Acts ix. 22, 24.] thither, who beheld with great joy the wonders, which the Grace of God had wrought there. He exhorted the faithful to persevere in the service of the Lord, and some time after went to Tarsus, to enquire after S. Paul, and bring him to Antioch. In this City they dwelt together for two years, where they converted great numbers, and there the Disciples began first to be called Christians. These two Saints left Antioch in the year of J. C. 44 to convey the Alms which were sent by the believers of this Church to that of Jerusalem. After their return they brought with them John Mark, Barnabas's Cousin.

While they were in this City, the Ho- [— xiii. 1, 2, 3, &c.] ly Ghost ordained, that they should be separated and consecrated to him, in order to be imployed in those offices, for which he had appointed them. After prayer therefore and fasting they received imposition of hands, and departed from Antioch to go to Seleucia. From thence they passed into the Isle of Cyprus, and being at Salamis, they there preached the Gospel, and converted Paulus Sergius the Pro-consul. There S. Paul struck Bar-Jesus the Sorcerer with blindness, as we have before observed in the Article relating to him. From Salamis they went to Paphos, where they imbarked for Pamphilia. In the mean while John Mark, Barnabas's Cousin separated from them, and returned to Jerusalem.

They preached at Perga in Pamphylia [— xiii. 50, 51, 52.] without much success, by reason of the obstinacy and malice of the Jews. They left this place, shaking off the dust of their feet against them, and came to Iconium, where they made many converts. But the Jews, on whom no impression [— xiv.] could be made, stirr'd up a sedition against them, and obliged them to retire to Derbe and Lystra in Lycaonia. Here S. Paul having cured one Æneas, who had been lame from his birth, the people of Lystra took them to be Gods, and would have offered Sacrifices to them, calling Barnabas Jupiter, and Paul Mercury. The two Apostles hereupon tearing their cloaths, and running into the midst of the crowd, with a great deal of difficulty hindered them from sacrificing.

In some little time after, several Jews came to Lystra from Antioch in Pisidia and Iconium, and having informed those of Lystra who Paul and Barnabas were, and representing them as disturbers of the publick peace, they dragg'd Paul out of the City and stoned him, and having left him there for dead, the Disciples took him

[t] Plin. l. xviii. c. 18. Leo. Afer. Cassian. collat. xv. c. 4, &c.

[u] Clem. Alex. Strom. l. 2. Euseb. Hist. Eccl. l. i. c. 12. Epiphan. hæres. 20. c. 4.

him up, and carried back into the City. The next day he departed with Barnabas, and went to Derbe. At length having visited once more all the Cities through which they had passed, and where they had preached the Gospel, they returned to Antioch in Syria, from whence they set out.

In the year of J. C. 51. S. Barnabas was sent with S. Paul from Antioch to Acts xv. Jerusalem, upon the occasion of some disputes, which had arisen concerning the observation of the legal Ceremonies, to which the Jews had an inclination to subject the Gentile Converts. Paul and Barnabas were present in the Council of Jerusalem, where they were acknowledged for Apostles of the Gentiles, and the poor of Judea were recommended to their care. They returned immediately to Antioch, where S. Peter arriving soon after, and being prevailed with to authorize in some sort the observation of the Mosaick Ceremonies by his example, Barnabas too was ingaged to use the like dissimulation. But S. Paul reproved S. Peter with great freedom, insomuch that he and Barnabas were made sensible of their mistake, and others who in this particular had followed them.

S. Paul having afterwards determined to visit these Churches which he had founded in the Isle of Cyprus, and in Asia Minor, Barnabas desired John, whose sirname was Mark, to bear them company in this journey, as he had done in the former. But S. Paul would by no means consent to this, because Mark had deserted them the first time; whereupon the two Apostles separated. Paul took his way towards Asia, and Barnabas with Mark went to Cyprus. This is all that we know certainly concerning Barnabas; for we can scarce rely upon the supposed Acts which go under the name of Mark, nor upon his life written by a Monk of Alexandria. It is said, that he was stoned to death at Salamis by the Jews of Cyprus; and so much is true, that his body was discovered in this Island in the reign of the Emperor Zeno [x]. His grave being opened, his body was found in it; and upon his breast the Gospel of S. Matthew, written in Greek with his own hand. This discovery was made about the year of J. C. 488. The Greeks and Latins observe his Festival upon the 11th of June.

We have an Epistle [*] under the name of Barnabas which has been cited by several of the Ancients [y], and by some of them has been ranked among the canonical Scriptures. And it is certainly very inconvenient to own it for S. Barnabas's without believing likewise that it is Canonical. But as the Church never has received it as an inspired Book, we have good reason to question whether it be the genuine work of this Apostle. It is certainly very ancient, and was written in the times of the Apostles. The principal design of it is to prove, that the Law is abolished by the Gospel, that the legal Ceremonies are useless, and that the Incarnation and Death of Jesus Christ were necessary. Some impostors have composed a spurious Gospel under the name of Barnabas, which was condemned by Pope Gelasius.

The modern Greeks [z] tell us of one Aristobulus, Brother, as they call him, to S. Barnabas, of whom they relate many wonders. They pretend that S. Paul speaks of him to the Romans. Salute them which are of Aristobulus's houshold. But Rom. xvi. 10.
we have nothing very certain concerning this Aristobulus, who was not known to the Ancients as the Brother of Barnabas.

Some have reputed S. Barnabas to be the Author of a spurious Gospel, mentioned by Pope Gelasius in his Decree against apocryphal Books. This work is lost, and we know of no manuscript or printed copy of it: but the Turks have maliciously composed a counterfeit Gospel, under the name of S. Barnabas [a], wherein they have crowded in abundance of things injurious to Jesus Christ, and honourable to their false Prophet. The manuscript of this work is in Prince Eugene's Library. It was composed in Arabick, as M. de la Crose thinks, in the reign of the Emperor Frederick II. who wore the Imperial Crown from the year 1211 to 1245, and was afterwards translated into Italian about the middle of the fifteenth Century: it is to be met with only in this last language, and was never printed; nay some believe, that Prince Eugene's is the only Manuscript of it in being.

Barnabas, who says he was particularly commissioned to write it, sets himself out there for an Apostle, who lived in great familiarity with Jesus Christ, and the Blessed Virgin, better instructed than S. Paul in the merit of Circumcision, and the use which should be made of such meats as were allowed or prohibited the Faithful: there we find, that the infernal torments of the Mahometans will not be eternal; Jesus Christ is called no more than plainly a Prophet, is said not to have been crucified crucified, but that having been transported to the third Heaven, Judas suffered in his stead; that the very Virgin Mary and the Apostles believed Jesus to have been nailed upon the Cross, so much he resembled Judas; that Jesus had obtain'd permission to come and comfort his Mother and his Apostles; that God to punish him for the liberty which men had taken, in giving him the name of God has suffered him, and still will suffer him to the end of the world to be the Sport of mankind, who continue persuaded that it was he who died upon the Cross. Such is the Work whereof the Mahometans will have this holy Disciple to be the Author, a person doubtless very different from him who was proscribed by Gelasius.

[x] Theod. Lector. l. ii. p. 557. [y] Vide Hieronym. de Viris illustr. Euseb. l. iii. c. 25. Clem. Alex. Origen. [z] Doroth. in Synops. Menæ p. 392. [a] See M. de la Monnoye's Notes upon the Menagiana, l. iv. Ed. Amsterd. 1716. p. 321. & Fabricius Apocryph. N. T. tom. 2. p. 373. &c.

[*] This Epistle which goes under the name of Barnabas, is stuffed with allegorical and mystical interpretations of Scripture. The expression of God to our first Parents, Increase and multiply, the Author understands as spoken of the Christian Church and Progress of the Gospel. He has much of that Cabbalistical Spirit which appeared with great perfection in many of the Fathers.

BAR-PANTHER, or the Son of Panther. S. John Damascenus says, that Levi, who was descended from David, by his Son Nathan, had two Sons, Melchi and Panther. Panther begat Bar-Panther, and from Bar-Panther * came Joachim the Virgin's Father. The Jews in the scandalous lives which they have published of our Saviour, give it out that he was begotten in the act of Adultery, committed between Panther and his Mother Mary. The name of Panther is to be met with in Origen [b], and the Talmud [c], which shews the antiquity of those calumnies and fables, which the Jews invented concerning Jesus Christ. As to the genealogical System of Johannes Damascenus, it is not to be maintained, it being directly contrary to the Gospel, which, between Levi and the Holy Virgin places Eli only, who probably is the same as Joachim.

BARS. This word signifies properly the Bars of Gates, belonging both to private houses and the cities; is is sometimes taken for all sorts of obstacles and defences. God says, for example, that he has placed Doors and Bars to the Sea, to Job xxxviii. prevent its spreading over the Earth. In another place he says, that he will break
Ezek. xxx the Bars of Egypt, its Fortresses, its Barriers. He promises Cyrus that he will go before him, and will in his presence break in pieces the Gates of brass, and the Bars
If. xlv. 2 of iron; that is to say, he will make him master of the strong Cities. And Amos i. 5. I will break the Bars of Damascus, Jonah xi. 7. describing the condition he was in, while he was swallowed up by the large Fish, says, The Earth with her Bars were about him, Vestes terræ concluserunt me, that is to say, that he was enclosed on every side in the deep, as in a prison made fast with strong Bars.

I. BARSABAS. Joseph Barsabas, sirnamed the Just was one of the first Disciples of Jesus Christ [a], and probably Acts i. 21, one of the seventy. After the Ascen- 22, &c.
sion of our Saviour, while the Apostles were together, expecting the descent of the Holy Ghost according to their Master's promise, S. Peter proposed to the Assembly to fill the place of Judas the traitor, by choosing one of those Disciples who had been all along eye-witnesses of our Saviour's actions from the time, when he first began to preach. Two persons were therefore offered Barsabas, sirnamed Justus, and Matthias; and lots being drawn, it was determined for Matthias. Papias [d] informs us that Barsabas having drunk poison, the Grace of Jesus Christ prevented the ill effects of it. We know nothing particularly of his life. The Martyrologists fix his Festival to the 20th of July, and tell us, that after he had suffered much for the Gospel, he died in Judæa, and made a very glorious end.

II. BARSABAS. Judas, one of the principal Disciples, mentioned in the Acts of Acts xv.
the Apostles, was sirnamed Barsabas; Ju- 22, & seq.
das sirnamed Barsabas and Silas, chief men among the Brethren. He and some others were sent by the Apostles with Paul and Barnabas to Antioch, and carried a Letter with them from the Apostles, signifying what the Council of Jerusalem had decreed. When they came to Antioch, they convened the faithful and presented this Letter to them: It was read, and the whole Assembly received great joy and comfort from it. Judas and Silas staid here for some time, instructing and confirming the Brethren, after which Judas and Barsabas returned to Jerusalem. This is all we know of Barsabas.

BARTHOLOMEW, or Bartholomaios, that is to say, the Son of Ptolemy was of Galilee, as well as the other Apo- Acts i. 13, stles. But where particularly he was born xi. 7.
we cannot tell. The Gospel says very little of his person, nor have we any certain history of his life or death. It is generally believed, that he preached the Gospel in the Indies [f], and we are assured, that he carried thither the Gospel of S. Matthew written in Hebrew, and that S. Patenus found it there an hundred years after [g]. We are told likewise, that he preached in Arabia Felix, and Persia, which does not at all contradict their accounts, who assert that he preached in the Indies; for he might have passed through this Country, in order to penetrate farther into India; perhaps these nations may have been understood

[b] Origen. contra Celsum, l. i. p. 25. [c] Talmud. Tract. Sanhedrin. [a] Vide Euseb. l. i. c. 12. ex Clem. Alex. Beda in Acta. Epiphan. de Christo, c. 4. [d] Apud Euseb. l. iii. c. 39. [f] Euseb. l. v. c. 10. [g] Euseb. l. v. c. 11. p. 175. Hieronym. de Viris illustrib. c. 36.

* Whatever we may think of Celsus, Epiphanius is certainly inexcusable, who assures us, that Joseph was the Son of Jacob sirnamed Panther. Rabanus Maurus speaks of Panther and Bar-Panther. And the learned Grotius makes use of this Tradition in explaining his account of the Virgin Mary's Genealogy. See Grot. in Luc. c. iii. v. 23.

derstood as included in the name of the Indies.

We know not with any certainty either the time, place or manner of his death. The modern Greeks and Latins agree in saying, that he died in the City of Albana or Albanopolis, which probably is Albana in Albania, upon the Caspian Sea, and confines of Armenia. This Country has sometimes been described under the name of the Indies. It is believed that S. Bartholomew was flea'd alive by Astyages, Brother to Polemon King of Armenia, out of hatred to the Christian Religion, which the Apostle had prevailed with Polemon to embrace. But these facts are very uncertain.

Many are of opinion [b], that Nathanaël and Bartholomew are the same person. This conjecture is founded 1° upon this, that no notice is any where taken of Bartholomew's Vocation, unless his and that of Nathanaël be the same. 2° The Evangelists who speak of Bartholomew, say nothing of Nathanaël, and S. John who speaks of Nathanaël, says nothing of Bartholomew. 3° The name of Bartholomew is not a proper name; it signifies the Son of Ptolemy, besides which he might bear the name of Nathanaël. 4° S. John seems to rank Nathanaël with the Apostles, when he says, that Peter and Thomas the two Sons of Zebedee, Nathanaël, and two other Disciples, being gone a fishing, Jesus shewed himself to them. See our Comment on S. Matthew. Ch. x. p. 218.

There is a spurious Gospel whereof S. Bartholomew is said to have been the Author, which Pope Gelasius placed among the apocryphal Writings. S. Bernard and Abbot Rupert [c] were of opinion, that he was the bridegroom at the marriage of Cana.

BAR-TIMÆUS, or the Son of Timæus, a blind man of Jericho, who sat near the publick road, when our Saviour passed that way, on his journey to Jerusalem. S. Mark says, that Jesus coming out of Jericho with his Disciples, attended by a great crowd of people, a blind man called Bar-Timæus sat by the way side, begging: And when he heard that it was Jesus of Nazareth, he began to cry out and say, Jesus, thou Son of David, have mercy on me. Then Jesus stood still and commanded him to be called. Bar-Timæus immediately came. Jesus said unto him, What wilt thou that I shall do unto thee? the blind man answered, Lord, that I may receive my sight. Jesus said unto him, Go thy way, thy Faith hath made thee whole, and immediately he received his sight, and followed him. [Mark x. 46—52.]

But S. Matthew relating the same story says, that two blind men sitting by the way side, and understanding that Jesus was passing by that way, began to cry out, Have mercy on us, O Lord, thou Son of David. Whereupon Jesus called them, and asked them what they would have: they answered, That our Eyes may be opened. Jesus moved with compassion touched their Eyes, and they recovered instantly their sight, and followed him. S. Mark thought fit to set down Bar-Timæus only, because he was more known, or expressed more faith and zeal, that he spoke to Jesus Christ, and distinguished himself most on this occasion. The cure of another blind man mentioned in S. Luke xviii. 35 — 43. is different from this. That in S. Luke happened, when Jesus was entring into Jericho, the other the next day, as he was going out. [Matt. xx. 30.]

BARUCH, the Son of Neriah, and Grandson to Maaseiah, was of an illustrious birth and of the tribe of Judah. Seraiah his Brother had a considerable employment in the Court of King Zedekiah. Baruch kept close to the person of Jeremiah the Prophet, and was his most faithful Disciple. He served him as long as he lived as his Secretary, and never left him till his death. [Jerem. li. 61.] In the reign of Jehoiakim King of Judah, while Jeremiah was in prison, this Prophet received orders from the Lord to set down in writing all the Prophecies which he had published till that time. [Jerem. xxxvi. 1, 2, 3, &c.] He sent for Baruch therefore, and dictated them by heart to him. Some time after, he sent him with directions to read them to the people, who were then assembled in the Temple. [In the Year of the World 3898, before J. C. 601, before the vulgar Æra 605.]

But Michaiah the Son of Gemariah having heard them read, thought himself obliged to give notice of them to the King's Counsellors, who were then together in the Palace. They commanded Baruch to be sent for, and obliged him to repeat to them what he had read publickly in the Temple. He did, and they, when they had heard him, expressed great surprize, and told him, that they could by no means avoid informing the King of these things which he had read to them. [In the Year of the World 3899, before J. C. 601, before the vulgar Æra 605.] They then asked him, how he had written all these particulars. Baruch said, Jeremiah had dictated them by rote to him, with the same ease as any one would peruse them in a book. The King's Counsellors hereupon said, Go, hide thee, thou and Jeremiah, and let no man know where ye be. They took the book which had been written by Baruch, and deposited it in the chambers of Elishamah the Scribe.

After this, they waited on the King, and told him what had passed. The King sent Jehudi to bring the book; and having brought brought it to Jehoiakim, this Prince commanded it to be read in his presence, and in the presence of those great men who stood about him: when Jehudi had read four or five pages of it, the King took the book, cut it with the Secretary's pen-knife, and threw it into the fire, which was burning before him. At the same time he ordered some of his people to seize on Baruch and Jeremiah; but as God would have it they were not to be found.

[b] Rupert. in Joan. i. Jansen. Cornel. à Lapide. Hamm. in Joan. Tostat. in Matth. x. [c] Rupert. in Joan. i. Bern. Ser. de S. Joan.

God afterwards commanded Jeremiah once more to set down his prophecies in writing. Baruch wrote them as he repeated them to him, and the Prophet added several others which were not inserted in the former book. Baruch's constant adherence to Jeremiah drew upon him several persecutions, and a great deal of bad treatment. One day he seemed to be mightily discouraged, and complained bitterly of the evils which he suffered; but God encouraged him by the mouth of Jeremiah, and from that time he continued more firm and undisturbed. In the fourth year of Zedekiah, Baruch went to Babylon with his Brother Seraiah, and carried a long Letter from Jeremiah, wherein the Prophet foretold the misfortunes which should befal Babylon, and promised the Captives, that they should one day be set at liberty. Baruch executed the Prophet's orders, read Jeremiah's Letter to King Jehoiachim and other Captives, after which he threw it into the Euphrates, as the Prophet had commanded him.

Jerem. xlv. 2, 3.

In the year of the World 3409 before J. C. 591. before the vulgar Æra 595.

Jer. l. li.

The Captives upon hearing Jeremiah's Letter read, were touched with compunction, and gave Baruch some money, to offer therewith Sacrifices to the Lord in his Temple at Jerusalem. They wrote likewise a long Letter to their Brethren of Jerusalem, in all probability by Baruch's hand, which is to be found in the first five chapters of the book which bears his name. After his return to Jerusalem he continued still his constant attendance on Jeremiah; and when Jerusalem was besieged by Nebuchadnezzar, Jeremiah being put into prison, Baruch was confined there too; and after the surrender, Nabuzaradan shewed him great favour, set him at liberty, and permitted him to go where he pleased with Jeremiah [k].

The remains of the People who had been left behind in the country, under the conduct of Gedaliah, having taken a resolution to go into Egypt, as Jeremiah opposed this journey, the people laid the blame on Baruch, and pretended, that he had ingaged the Prophet to declare against it, and had diverted him from this design. At last Jeremiah and Baruch being obliged to follow the people into Egypt, Jeremiah died there, and Baruch retired to Babylon, where the Rabbins say he died, in the twelfth year of the Captivity. This is all that we know with certainty concerning Baruch.

Jerem. xliii. 1, 2, 4, &c.

As to the Book of Baruch, which is generally placed with that of Jeremiah, at the end of this Prophet's writings, we have it not in Hebrew, but in Greek only. The Jews, among whom it is a standing rule to receive no books into thir Canon, but what are written in their language, excluded that of Baruch. S. Jerom speaks of this work in a manner, which shews, that he had not the same esteem for this as for other canonical Books of Scripture. He says [l], he did not think proper to make a Comment on the Book of Baruch, which in the edition of the Septuagint is join'd with Jeremiah: because it was not read among the Hebrews, and contains an Epistle which falsly bears the name of Jeremiah. He says in another place [m], that he did not translate it, as he had done Jeremiah, because it was not in Hebrew, and the Jews did not receive it in their Canon. We do not find Baruch in the ancient catalogues of the Scriptures cited in the Fathers and Councils. The Protestant, and even some Catholick Writers [n], do not reckon it among the canonical Books.

But the answer made to these objections is, that the example of the Jews, who do not receive Baruch into their Canon, is not a reason for our rejecting this Book. There are other Books which by them are not admitted as canonical, which notwithstanding are received by us [*] as such. The ancient catalogues of the Church do not particularly mention it, because they comprehended it under the name of Jeremiah. The Councils of Florence and Trent have inserted it by name into the Canon, and the old Fathers, such as Irenæus, Cyprian, Clemens of Alexandria, Eusebius, Ambrose, Julius Firmicus, Austin, Basil, Chrysostom, Epiphanius, and others who came after, have cited this Book, as a part of holy Scripture; but very frequently they quote it under the name of Jeremiah, as the Church does at this day, whenever it makes use of the writings of Baruch in its office. The Reader may see our Preface upon Baruch, where we treat on these questions more at large.

BARUTH, otherwise Berytus. See Berytus.

BARZA-

[k] Joseph. Antiq. l. x. c. 11. [l] Hieronym. Præf. in Exposit. Jerem. [m] Idem Præfat. in Versionem Jerem. [n] Driedo Descript. & Dogmat. Eccles. l. i. cap ult. Lyran. Dionys. Carthus.

[*] This is true with respect to the Romanists; and so the Author's argument may have some force with them, but can be of no weight with Protestants, who acknowledge those Books only of the Old Testament to be of divine inspiration, which were in the Jewish Canon. S. Jerom calls the Epistle annexed to Baruch [illegible] a false or feigned writing. See Prid. Conn. Part I. pag. 58.

BARZAPHERNES, Commander in chief of the several Armies belonging to Pacorus King of Parthia. Barzaphernes being sent into Palestine, to the assistance of Antigonus King of the Jews against Hircanus, and Herod; he took Hircanus prisoner, re-established Antigonus at Jerusalem, and obliged Herod to fly. As may be seen more at large in the Articles of Antigonus, and Hircanus, and in Josephus, Antiq. l. xiv. c. 25.

[In the year of the World 3964, before J. C. 36, before the vulg. Æra 40.]

I. BARZILLAI, a native of Rogelim in the land of Gilead. He was an old friend to David, and assisted him in his misfortunes, when he was forced from Jerusalem by Absalom. He came to meet this Prince at Mahanaim beyond Jordan, and offered him all manner of refreshments. After the defeat of Absalom, when David returned to Jerusalem, Barzillai attended him as far as Jordan; and David inviting him to Court, to pass the rest of his days there in repose, Barzillai answered him, How long have I to live that I should go up with the King to Jerusalem? I am this day fourscore years old; and can I discern between good and evil? my senses are no longer in a condition to distinguish sweet from bitter, nor to take pleasure in eating or drinking, in the sound of instruments, or the voices of musicians. Wherefore then should thy servant be a burden unto my Lord the King? Thy servant will go a little way over Jordan with the King, then I will beg permission to return, that I may die in mine own City, and be buried, by the grave of my Father and my Mother. But behold my Son, thy servant Chimham, he will have the honour to accompany my Lord the King, who may do to him what shall seem good unto him. The King answered, Let Chimham come, and I will grant whatever you shall ask of me. After therefore that the King and all the people had passed over Jordan, David embraced Barzillai, wished him all sorts of blessings; and Barzillai returned into his own country. This fell out in the year of the world 2981, before J. C. 1019, before the vulgar Æra 1022.

[2 Sam. xvii. 27, 28.] [2 Sam. xix. 33, 34, &c.]

II. BARZILLAI, a native of Meholath, in the Tribe of Simeon. This Barzillai was the Father of Adriel; who married Michol, formerly the Wife of David. 2 Sam. xxi. 8.

III. BARZILLAI, of the race of the Priests; he married one of the Daughters of Barzillai the Gileadite, Nehem. vii. 63.

BASARA, a City of Galilee, twenty furlongs from Gaba, in the neighbourhood of Ptolemais [a].

BASCA, a town where Jonathan Maccabæus was killed [b]. The Author of the first book of the Maccabees calls it Bascama.

BASCAMA, the same probably as Bezek or Boskath in the Tribe of Judah. See Basca. Bezek was not far from Bethsan, where they who went into the land of Gilead passed the Jordan. Tryphon having killed Jonathan at Bascama, immediately returned into Syria. Read 1 Macc. xiii. 22, 23, 24. in the Greek.

[1 Macc. xiii. 23.] [Judg. i. 4, 5, 6.] [Josh. xv. 39.]

BASHAN, the land of Bashan, otherwise called Batanæa in the Peræa, that is to say, beyond Jordan, Northward of the Tribes of Gad and Reuben, and in the country belonging to the half Tribe of Manasseh. This country is bounded Eastward by the mountains of Gilead, and the land of Ammon and East Edom; Northward by mount Hermon, Southward by the brook Jabok, and Westward by the river Jordan. Og King of the Ammorites possessed the Kingdom of Bashan when Moses made the conquest of it. In this country is the Canton of Argob, mentioned in Deut. iii. 4, 14. and 1 Kings iv. 13. Bashan was thought to be one of the most fruitful countries in the world; its rich pastures, its oaks and fine cattle are principally commended [c].

BASHMATH, the Daughter of Elon the Hittite. Esau married her against the consent of his Father and Mother Isaac and Rebeccah. She was Mother to Reuel.

[Genes. xxvi. 34.] [Genes. xxxvi. 10.]

BASILISK, in Latin, Basiliscus, or Regulus, a very dangerous sort of Serpent, which kills, as they say, by its breath or sight only. It was called Regulus, which answers to the name of Basiliscus or little King, because it wears a kind of crown upon its head, and is the most dangerous of all Serpents. Galen [d] says, that it is of a colour inclining to yellow; that it has three little eminences upon its head, speckled with whitish spots, which have the appearance of a sort of Crown. Ælian [e] says, that its poison is so penetrating as to kill the largest Serpents with its vapour only. If it bites but the end of any man's stick it kills him. It drives away all other Serpents with the noise of its hissing. Pliny [f] says, it kills those who look upon it. In some apothecaries shops there are little dead Serpents shewn, which are said to be Basilisks. It is a kind of small bird almost like a cock, but without feathers, its head is lofty, its wings are almost like a bat's, its eyes large, and its neck very short.

But the most eminent Physicians and modern Philosophers look upon all that is said of the Basilisk as fabulous and mere invention; invention; they say that no one ever saw any real Basilisks, that those which are shewn and sold at Venice, and in other places, are nothing but little thornbacks artificially put into a form like that of a young cock, by stretching out their fins, and contriving them with a little head and hollow eyes. And this we have in reality observed in a supposed Basilisk, at an apothecary's shop in Paris, and in another at the Jesuits of Pont-a-Mousson. See our Comment on Psalm xc. 13. The Hebrew term Pethen[a], which is translated Basilisk, signifies an Asp, as the best Interpreters agree.

[a] Joseph. lib. de Vita sua. [b] Antiq. lib. xiii. c. 1. [c] Reland. Palæst. l. i. p. 200, 201, 202.
[d] Galen. de Theriaca ad Pison. [e] Ælian. lib. ii. c. 5. & c. 7. [f] Plin. lib. viii. c. 22.

Josh. xv. 28. BASIOTHIA, or Bizjothjah, a City in the Tribe of Judah. This term is not made use of by the Septuagint; instead of it they read Josh. xv. 28. their towns and their farms.

BASMATH, the Daughter of Solomon, married Ahimaaz of the Tribe of Naphtali. 1 Kings iv. 15.

BASON, or Laver of the Tabernacle. Exod. xxxviii. 8. Moses observes, that it was made of the brass looking-glasses belonging to those devout women, who watched, and stood centinels at the door of the Tabernacle. Athenæus[h] informs us, that among the Persians there were women who watched all night, and kept guard at the King's palace door. They slept in the day time, and passed the night in singing and playing upon instruments with the help of that light which they received from lamps. This ancient custom of the women keeping guard at the palace gate of the Eastern Kings, is still continued at this day[i]. It was probably after this manner, tho' more modestly, that the Israelitish women passed the night at the door of the Tabernacle, as it were at the door of their Lord, and Monarch.

As to looking-glasses, they were made formerly of all sorts of metals, of silver, copper, pewter, and a mixture of copper and pewter. In the East almost all looking-glasses are still at this day made of metal: It was very easy therefore for Moses to melt them, that he might form out of them the Bason for the Tabernacle. A great number was necessary to compose so large a vessel; but according to the meaning of the original, these women came in troops like a kind of Army to the door of the Tabernacle; so that there might be sufficiently for this use, and an overplus besides.

BASSUS, Lucilius Bassus succeeded Cerialis Vitatianus in the government of Judæa. As the revolted Jews continued in their rebellion even after the taking of Jerusalem, Bassus pursued them wherever they retreated. He took the castles of Herodium and Machærus, and extinguished the remains of the rebellion. He died in his government, and was succeeded by Flavius Silva. See Josephus's seventh Book of the Jewish Wars, chap. 30.

BASTONADE, a punishment in use among the Greeks and Romans, some instances whereof we find too among the Hebrews. It is said, that the holy old 2 Macc. vi. 19.
man Eleazar was led to the torture, and being upon the point of expiring with the blows which he received, he said with groans, It is manifest unto the Lord, that I now endure sore pains in body, by being beaten. This punishment was called Tympanum, because the patient was beat with sticks like a drum. S. Paul says, that Heb. xi. 35.
some of the Saints suffered the torture of the Tympanum hoping for a better Resurrection.

This penalty is in use at this day in the East. The criminal is laid upon his belly; his feet are raised and tied to a stake, which is held fast by soldiers: in this posture he is beaten with a cudgel on the soles of the feet, the chin and back, and sometimes receives five hundred blows; the common stint is an hundred. They who receive a thousand seldom survive this punishment.

BAT, an unclean Bird, that is a composition of a bird and a mouse, having the body of a mouse and the wings of a bird; not with feathers, but with a sort of skin, which is extended, and makes wings, such as this creature uses in flying. It produces its little ones alive, and suckles them after the manner of the four-footed animals; and does not like birds, lay its eggs only. The Hebrew term Hatalaph, which expositors commonly interpret, Bat, signifies a Swallow, according to the Rabbins. There is a sort of Bat in the East, that is larger than ordinary, and is salted and eaten.

The Bat never grows tame, feeds upon flies, insects, and fat things, such as candles, oil, and grease. It appears only by night, nor then unless when the weather is fine, and the season warm. These creatures in Africk and Ethiopia have tails as long as those of mice, which extend beyond their wings. There are some that have four ears, others only two. They build no nests, but bring forth their young in some hole or cleft in the tops and coverings of houses. There are some black, some white, fallow and ash-coloured. The old one suckles its young as they are fastned to its teats; and when she is obliged to leave them, in order to go and seek for food, she takes them from her teats and hangs them up against the wall, from which they do not get loose. There are Bats in China, as some say, as large as pullets, and are as delicate eating. Those of Brasil, Madagascar

[a] פתן Pethen. 70. Βασιλίσκος, vel ἀσπὶς, vel δράκων.
[i] Chardin. Voyage de Perse. l. ii. p 229.

[h] Athen. l. xii. Dipnosoph. c. 2.

THE LAVER OR BRASEN BASON.

which was in the Court of the Tabernacle gascar and the Maldives are as large as ravens, and have a head like a fox's: they cling to trees by little clasps which grow at the joints of their wings, and suck the blood of men while they are sleeping in the night, fastening upon the first member which they find uncovered.

BATANÆA. This is the country of Bashan beyond Jordan. See above Bashan.

BATH *, or Bathus, or Epha, a sort of Hebrew measure, containing the tenth part of an Omer, or seven gallons and four pints, as a measure for things liquid, and three pecks and three pints, as a measure for things dry. Some have imagined without any reason, that there was a sacred measure of this name, different from the common one: the first, they tell us, contained a Bath and an half of the other; which they endeavour to prove, by what is said in the first book of Kings, of Solomon's molten Sea, that it contained two thousand Baths, compared with what is said in the second book of Chronicles iv. 5. that it held three thousand Baths. But this difference is easily reconciled by saying that the brazen Sea itself contained two thousand Baths only, as is mentioned in the third book of Kings, but that the foot of this vessel was hollow and contained a thousand more; in all three thousand Baths, as the book of Chronicles has it.

BATH-KOL, or Daughter of the Voice. This is the name, whereby the Jewish Writers [a] distinguish the revelation of his will, which God made to his chosen people, after that all verbal Prophecy had ceased in Israel; that is to say, after the times of the Prophets Haggai, Zechariah, and Malachi. The generality of their traditions, and the customs of their nation, are founded on this Bath-Kol. They pretend that God revealed them to their Elders, not by any articulate Prophecy, but by some secret inspiration, or by some tradition, which they call the Daughter of the Voice †.

The Rabbins acknowledge three ways of prophesying usual in their nation. First, by the means of Urim and Thummim, the voice of which Prophecy was heard from the extremity of the Sanctuary, or from the High-Priest's Pectoral; the second sort was the Spirit of Prophecy inspiring the Prophets as well before the Law, as after Moses; the third was the Daughter of the Voice, or Bath-Kol.

The first continued, as they say, from the building of the Tabernacle to the Temple. The second from the beginning of the world to the death of Malachi, the last of the Prophets, under the second Temple, tho' the use of it was most frequent under the first Temple. The third began after Malachi, and has subsisted to this day in their nation.

They pretend, that the Daughter of the Voice is a voice from Heaven, heard in an articulate manner, much after the same way as the voice which called young Samuel, when God revealed to him what was to befal the High-Priest Eli, and his Family: God then called him three times with an articulate voice. Samuel replied in the same manner as he would have answered a man, not knowing as yet how to distinguish the voice of God; or the Daughter of the Voice resembles that which was uttered from the Sanctuary, when the Lord spoke to Moses, or answered the High-Priest, who consulted him by the Urim and Thummim. These two sorts of voices were, as we may say, the Mother of that other voice which succeeded them, and was called Bath-Kol, Daughter-Voice, or Daughter of the Voice, because it was as it were the Daughter of this first Voice; it was a much less perfect way of inspiration; but notwithstanding as certain as the first. 1 Sam. iii. 4, 5, &c.

But it would be a great mistake to imagine, that the revelation of Bath-Kol was performed always by an articulate voice from Heaven, and heard distinctly by those to whom God communicated his will in this manner. We cannot certainly affirm, that even the old Prophets heard articulate voices when the word of God came to them: Factum est verbum Domini ad Isaiam, &c. It is sufficient to believe, that it was some inward speech, some inspiration, motion, or light which wrought upon them, and discovered to them in a clear and lively manner, what it was the good pleasure of God they should declare to mankind. Thus in proportion, when God manifested his will by the Daughter of the Voice, he did so either with an articulate voice distinctly heard, or by some lively impression in the mind or imagination, or lastly by a voice heard by chance, which was understood as an Oracle proceeding from Heaven.

An Example of this I shall here lay before you taken from the Talmud. Two Rabbins

[a] Talmud. Sotia. c. 9. p. 48. בת קול

* The Septuagint render it sometimes by the word Βάδ; sometimes by μετρητὰς, 2 Chr. c. iv. sometimes by κεράμιον, Is. c. v. The ancient Latin version translates it lagena. It was the tenth part of the Chomer in liquid things, as the Ephah was in dry. Ezek. xlv. 11. The Ephah and the Bath shall be of one measure, that the Bath may contain the tenth part of an Homer; and the Ephah the tenth part of an Homer. Arbuth. Tables &c. p. 99.

† The Bath-Kol, as Dr. Prideaux shews, was a phantastical way of Divination, invented by the Jews, like the Sortes Virgilianæ among the Heathens. For as with them the words first dipt at in the book of that Poet was the Oracle whereby they prognosticated those future events which they desired to be informed of; so with the Jews, when they appealed to Bath-Kol, the next words which they should hear from any one's mouth were the same. See more on this subject in Prid. Connect. &c. Part. II. Book 5.

Rabbins desirous of visiting their friend Rabbi Samuel Doctor of Babylon, said to one another, Let us follow the direction of Bath-Kol; as they were passing by a school, they heard a young lad reading this passage of the first book of Samuel c. xxv. v. 1. And Samuel died. From hence they concluded, that Samuel was dead: the event justified what they had prognosticated, for they found that at that time Rabbi Samuel of Babylon had departed. We might cite many other examples of the same sort scattered up and down the writings of the Jews. These casual and odd Oracles were esteemed as voices of God's appointment, much after the same manner as in the Church, people for many Ages drew presages of what was to befal them from the first words they read in any book which they opened at random.

BATH-SAMA. Joseph. lib. vi. Antiq. c. 1. The same in all probability as Beth-Shemesh.

BATH-SHEBA. The Daughter of Eliam or Ammiel, and Wife to Uriah the Hittite. She dwelt at Jerusalem, in a house very near David's palace. This Prince rising one day from his bed, after he had been sleeping at noon-day, as is customary in warm countries, went upon the terrass of his Palace, and in the court or garden belonging to a neighbouring house saw Bathsheba bathing herself[1]. As she was a woman of an uncommon beauty, David sent to inquire who she was. He was told that her name was Bathsheba, and that she was the Wife of Uriah the Hittite. Immediately he had her brought to him, and abused her. She returned to her own house, purified herself, and some time after sent David word, that she was with child. Hereupon David sent to Joab, General of his Army then imployed in the siege of Rabbah, the capital City of the Ammonites, to dispatch Uriah to him. Joab obeyed; and upon the arrival of Uriah, David asked him news of what passed in the Army, and afterwards bid him go home wash his feet, and rest himself. At the same time he sent him provision from his own table, that he might eat and drink at home with his Wife. David proposed by this means to conceal his Adultery, because the child which Bathsheba was to be delivered of, might pass for Uriah's, if he returned, and spent a night with her. But Uriah instead of going home, spent the night with the King's guards at the Palace gate. David being inform'd of it, asked why after returning from his journey he did not go home; to which Uriah answered, The ark and all the people abide in tents, and my Lord Joab and the servants of my Lord are incamped in the open fields, shall I then go into mine house to eat and to drink, and to lye with my Wife? As thou livest and as thy soul liveth, I will not do this thing. The next day the King invited him to his own table, and there made him drunk. But Uriah instead of going home, lay in his bed with others of the King's guards; for he was in David's service, and as is believed, one of his guards. David perceiving that he was not able this way to secure Bathsheba's Honour, resolved to get rid of Uriah, and marry her. He sent orders therefore to Joab, to expose Uriah in places of the greatest danger, that so he might be killed. Uriah was himself the bearer of these orders; which were too punctually executed.

2 Sam. xi. 2, 3, & seq.

In the Year of the World 2969, before J. C. 1031, before the vulg. Æra 1034.

Bathsheba hearing of her Husband's death, mourned after the customary manner; and when the season for this ceremony was over, David brought her to his own house and married her. Soon after this she was delivered of a Son. Now this action was extremely displeasing to the Lord, who therefore sent the Prophet Nathan unto David, to reproach him with his sin. Nathan upon this occasion proposed the Parable to him of a rich man, who had abundance of sheep and oxen, but instead of taking any out of his own flocks to entertain his friend, who was come out of the country, he went to a poor man's, who had only one ewe-lamb, took it and dressed it for his friend the traveller. David at first did not discern that this picture was drawn for himself; but said to Nathan, As the Lord liveth, he who hath done this action shall surely die: the lamb he shall restore fourfold. Then said Nathan to him, Thou art the man; and continuing to reproach him with his ingratitude and infidelity to God, who had bestowed so many blessings on him; he threatned him in a terrible manner, and said, The sword shall never depart from thine house; I will take thy wives before thine eyes, and give them to thy neighbour: and he shall lye with thy wives. Thou hast done this action secretly, but I will do this thing before all Israel, and before the Sun.

2 Sam. xii. 1, 2, 3, &c.

David said to Nathan, I have sinned against the Lord. Nathan answered, The Lord has transferr'd the punishment of thy sin; thou shalt not die, but the Child which is born unto thee shall surely die. Accordingly the Child was struck by God, and its health very soon despaired of. David intreated the Lord for him, fasted, retired, and continued lying on the earth; the principal persons of his family came and pressed him earnestly to rise, and receive some nourishment, but he refused, and persisted in this state of humiliation and repentance. On the seventh day the Child

[1] The Vulgate says that David saw her bathing on the terrass of his house; but this is not in the Hebrew Text.

Child died: and David's servants did not dare to tell him of it. But he observing their perplexity, and knowing he was dead, rose from the earth, bathed himself, anointed himself with oil *, changed his dress, entred into the house of the Lord, worshipped him, returned to his house, and took nourishment. His Officers thought this behaviour very singular, and were surprized at it; but when they asked him the reason of it, he told them, that he had fasted and wept while the Child was yet living; because he had then room to hope that God would restore him to his health; now he is dead, says he, wherefore should I fast and mourn? can I bring him back again? I shall go to him, but he shall not return to me.

After this David comforted Bathsheba, and she conceived a Son, who was named
In the year of the World 2971, before J. C. 1029, before the vulgar Æra 1033. Solomon. Nathan came and told David, that the Lord loved this Child, and called him Jedidiah, that is to say, the well-beloved of the Lord. God afterwards declared, that he should succeed David in the Throne, that he should build a Temple to him, that he should be blessed with Psalm cxxxi. 11. 2 Sam. vii. 12, 13, &c. a great measure of wisdom, riches, and understanding. Towards the end of David's life and reign, Adonijah having formed a party, presumed upon the privilege of his Age, and pretended that he ought to reign preferably to Solomon, who was much younger than himself. Nathan gave notice of his design to Bathsheba, and advised her to speak of it to the King, promising her, that he would come himself and second what she should say.

1 Kings i. 15. Bathsheba went therefore to David; she found him in his chamber, and bowed with great respect before him. He asked her what it was she desired of him. My Lord, said she, you promised my Son Solomon your servant with an oath, that he should reign after you, and be seated in your Throne, nevertheless Adonijah has proclaimed himself King, without your knowledge or approbation. He hath slain many sheep and oxen, and hath made a great entertainment, to which he has invited all the King's Children together with Abiathar the High Priest, and Joab the General of your Armies; but Solomon he did not invite. In the mean time the eyes of all Israel are upon you, expecting you to declare your Successor. For when it shall come to pass, that my Lord the King shall sleep with his Fathers, I and my Son Solomon shall be treated as criminals.

She was still speaking to the King when notice was given him that the Prophet Nathan was there, and waited for admission. When he was called in, he made his reverences in a very profound manner to the King, and said, My Lord, O King, have you appointed Adonijah for Successor in the Throne? for he has this day made a great entertainment for the King's Sons, the High Priest Abiathar, and Generals of the Army, and the cry is, Long live King Adonijah. But he did not invite Zadok the High Priest, nor Benaiah the Son of Jehoiada, nor Solomon, nor myself, who am thy servant. The King directed immediately that Bathsheba should be called in again; and when she entred, he said to her, As the Lord liveth, who hath delivered me from so many dangers, I will this day execute the promise which I have sworn to perform, saying, Solomon thy Son assuredly shall reign after me. Bathsheba threw herself prostrate on the earth before him, and said, Let my Lord King David live for ever. The King said farther, Call me Zadok, Nathan and Benaiah; when they came, he commanded them to put Solomon on his own mule, and conduct him to Gihon; that there the High Priest Zadok and the Prophet Nathan should crown him; that they should sound the trumpets and say, Long live King Solomon; then return and seat him on his Throne: for, says he, he shall be King in my stead, and I have appointed him to be Ruler over Israel and over Judah. All this was executed, as we shall shew elsewhere; and after the death of David, Solomon reigned peaceably over all his Dominions.

Now when Adonijah saw Solomon thus seated on the Throne of David, he came 1 Kings ii. 13, & seq.
to Bathsheba and said, You know that the Kingdom of right belonged to me, and that all Israel had chosen me for their King: but the Lord hath otherwise disposed of it, and the Kingdom has been given to Solomon. Now therefore I have only one small favour to ask, which is, that Solomon would give me Abishag the Shunamite, that I may marry her. Bathsheba promised to propose it to the King, and accordingly went to him. Solomon seeing her, rose from his Throne, met her, saluted her with profound respect, sat down on his Throne, and commanded another to be placed on his right hand for his Mother. Bathsheba then told him, that she had an inconsiderable favour to ask of him, which she desired him not to refuse her. Solomon encouraged her to proceed, and said it would by no means be just for him

* It was customary with them to anoint themselves with precious oil after bathing; So Judith x. 2. So Naomi to Ruth, Wash thyself therefore and anoint thyself. So Homer Odyss. 6. of Nausicaa and her Maids,

Αἱ δὲ λοεσσάμεναι, καὶ χρισάμεναι λίπ' ἐλαίῳ
Δεῖπνον ἔπειθ' εἵλοντο παρ' ὄχθῃσιν ποταμοῖο.

him to send her back dissatisfied. Whereupon she said, Give Adonijah thy Brother the Shunamite Abishag for his Wife. Solomon penetrating the design of Adonijah, replied to his Mother, Why dost thou ask Abishag the Shunamite for Adonijah? ask for him the Kingdom also. Thou knowest, that Abiathar the High Priest, and Joab the Son of Zerviah General of the Troops are for him, and that he is my elder Brother. I swear therefore by my life and by my throne, that Adonijah shall be put to death this day. Accordingly he sent Benaiah the Son of Jehoiada, who fell upon Adonijah and killed him. From this time, we have no more mention of Bathsheba.

In the Year of the World 3990, before J. C. 1010, before the vulgar Æra 1014.

The first book of Chronicles, and the second book of Samuel take notice of other Sons, which Bathsheba had by David, such as Shammuah, Shobab and Nathan, besides Solomon, of whom we have been speaking. Some Interpreters are of opinion, that these three Sons Shammuah, Shobab, and Nathan, were the Sons of Uriah the Hittite; but the generality maintain, that they were the Sons of David. The Text in the second book of Samuel is very clear for this opinion; and S. Luke gives us the genealogy of Nathan the Son of David, as one of the Messiah's ancestors. The passage in the Proverbs, where Solomon says, that he was the beloved Son of his Father, and the only Son of his Mother, proves no more than the very tender affection which David and Bathsheba had for him, by reason of the promises of God, and the favours he vouchsafed to him.

1 Chr. iii. 5. 2 Sam. v. 14. Prov. iv. 3.

The xxxi^st Chapter of the Proverbs is commonly believed to be Bathsheba's instruction to her Son Solomon, to consecrate the memory whereof this Prince determined to place it in the collection of his Proverbs, or Maxims of Morality. There are some who go so far as to say, that Bathsheba was inspired, as she intimates in these words, The Prophecy that his Mother taught him. And if it be acknowledged, that this Chapter as it stands in the book of Proverbs, was written by Bathsheba, it must be necessarily owned to be inspired. But it is very possible, that Solomon to do honour to his Mother, might have reduced the instructions which he received from her into this form, and published them as if she herself had either dictated or written them.

BATHYRA, a City built by Herod in the Batanæa to secure the Jews, who came from Babylon against the inhabitants of the Trachonitis, who attacked them often in the way[m].

BATH-ZACHARIAS, a place situated in the neighbourhood of Bethsura. Epiphanius in his book of the Lives of the Prophets says, that the Prophet Habbakuk was born within the territories of Bath-zacharias. S. Luke tells us, that the holy Virgin went to salute Elizabeth, and entred the house of Zacharias, which may be understood of Bath-zacharias, or Beth-zachar, this, signifying the house of Zacharias, which is in the mountains of Judah, and neighbourhood of Hebron. But it is more natural to say, that S. Luke did not set down the name of the City, where Zechary dwelt, but only that the Virgin entred into the place where he lodged.

1 Macc. vi. 32, 33. Luke i. 39, 40.

Bath-zacharias is celebrated for the battle fought between Antiochus Eupator and Judas Maccabæus. Antiochus seeing himself braved by Judas, and understanding that he was retired to the narrow pass of Bath-zacharias, commanded his Army to march against him. It was composed of an hundred thousand foot, twenty thousand horse, and two and thirty elephants prepared for battle. But because the ground was not large enough, he was obliged to give orders, that his numerous Army should march in three lines. Every elephant carried a tower full of archers, and was attended by five hundred horse and a thousand foot; the rest of the troops were directed to gain the two sides of the mountain. In this condition Antiochus's Army advanced to the charge, the soldiers shouted so lowd, that the inhabitants of the neighbouring country were frightned, and the Sun shining on their gold and brass shields, they dazzled the eyes of all the world. But Judas Maccabæus, whose heart was incapable of fear, received them with great vigour, so that six hundred men at the first shock fell dead upon the spot. His Brother Eleazar sirnamed Savaran, seeing an elephant more magnificently harnassed than the rest, thought the King was upon it; wherefore exposing his life for the deliverance of his people, he moved forward, and made his way through a crowd of enemies, killed many of them, and slipping under the elephant's belly pierced him with his sword, and the animal falling immediately, Eleazar was crushed with his weight, and so ended his life gloriously. Judas hereupon, seeing it impossible for him to resist any longer so numerous and strong an Army, retreated to Jerusalem, with a resolution to sustain the siege of it.

1 Macc. vi. 30.

I do not at all call in question the great actions performed by the Maccabees *, in the several wars which they maintained against the most formidable powers of Asia. If the Scripture

* Observations on the Combat between Judas Maccabæus, and the Army of Antiochus Eupator, in the narrow Pass of Bath-zacharias.

m Antiq. l. xvii. c. 2.

Scripture had said nothing of them, I should have believed Josephus in his History of the Jews, an Author who deserves credit; but that these wars should have escaped the observation of Polybius, a contemporary Author, and that no notice should be taken by him of the very names of these great men, who acquitted themselves with so much glory in them, is what must surprize every one beyond expression, since the Greek and Latin Historians, who wrote after him concerning the events which happened in Asia, have made no mention of them. These wars must certainly not have been so considerable as is pretended, so that the fame of them could not come to the knowledge of people who lived remote from Judæa. As much convinced as I am, of the great atchievements accomplished by these Heroes of the Jewish people, and of the victories obtained by them, I am persuaded, that there is a little aggravation used with respect to the number of their enemies against the nothing, as I may say, which made head against them; for so I call a body of troops consisting of between eight and ten thousand men, and very often fewer, against Armies of sixty thousand fighting men. Here we have one of an hundred thousand foot and twenty thousand horse against another in all probability of between eight and ten thousand men; for the Scripture says nothing particularly of Judas's forces: I am confident that he had scarce a greater number, and am not at all surprized, that this great Captain should dare to attack the enemy's Army, and should get a considerable advantage over it. I know sufficiently what bold and intrepid valour is capable of, when under good conduct, and how many small Armies have been victorious against the greatest, tho' oftentimes made up of the bravest and most disciplined troops. Ancient and modern History abound with examples of this sort, and some there are beyond even those of the Maccabees. As to the surprizing of Armies, I refer the Reader to Polybius's History for his conviction in this point.

As to the number of these prodigious Armies brought in opposition to the Maccabees, I know not what to say of them. If they had been such as the Author represents them, their defeat would have produced so much noise in the world, that there can be no doubt but Polybius, a contemporary Author, would have spoken of them. When we reflect on them, so great a disproportion cannot but surprize us. As to the elephants loaded with towers, machines of war, and thirty fighting men, I am of Bochart's opinion, who looks upon this to be exaggerated; and believes that these Armies were not such as the Author represents them; but in comparison with the forces of these celebrated Jewish Captains, they were very great, and the elephants very large and powerful, without having so great a burthen upon them.

The Scripture explains very clearly to us the disposition of Antiochus's Army, and the situation of the places, where the action passed. It says not a word of that under the command of Judas Maccabæus, whose conduct and courage appear to me very astonishing. He made his onsets doubtless in separate bodies drawn up very deep, which was an admirable and prudent way of engaging, and the method of the Jews: as they were always or almost continually inferior to their enemies, the necessity of defending themselves against the formidable power of their neighbours, who endeavoured to subdue them, animated as they were with zeal for the true God, whose cause they maintained; all this joined together inspired them with that vigorous way of combating, so proper for small Armies. These eminent Captains, weak as they were, considering the small number of their troops, had no other refuge but in the skilful use of military discipline, in surprize, most frequently under the cover of darkness, and in the advantages of places, where they waited for their enemy, without fear of being hemm'd in, and hereby obliged them to engage in a front equal to theirs; and oftentimes they attacked them in the plains, so proper was their way of drawing up for every thing, and so ready were their soldiers to do and to attempt every thing.

The action here in question was neither general nor decisive; it happened in the narrow part of a valley; Antiochus's Army took up the entrance, and Judas drew up in the closest part of the Defile: Josephus says plainly, that the port of Bathzacharias was a very narrow Pass; but as almost all valleys, which open into a plain, grow wider and wider, as rivers towards their mouths, Antiochus first of all posted himself at the opening of the valley; and as it grew straighter in proportion as he advanced, he saw himself under a necessity of sending some troops to the top of the Mountains, perhaps with a design of inclosing the Jews, and cutting off their retreat, and to march with several Phalanxes doubled. This is a conjecture which I venture to make, and not so inconsiderately but that to me it seems very probable; it is the more so, in that I am persuaded the combat which begun at the first line with the cavalry intermixed among the elephants, brought the second into the disorder. Nothing can be more exact and clear than the description of the order of battle on Antiochus's side, and his march into the valley. The first line, where where he had placed the elephants, was alone capable of infusing terror, it was dispos'd in admirable order, and in each Army there was another to support it, so that to me it seems to have been stronger than their prodigious Phalanx. The enemies, says the Scripture, divided the beasts among the Armies, that is to say, by Brigades, and for every elephant they appointed a thousand men armed with coats of mail, and with helmets of brass on their heads; and besides this, for every beast were ordained five hundred horsemen of the best, that is to say on the side, as I suppose them to be placed. I imagine a second line to be formed of a thousand men, who supported the first: both thus dispos'd were of as much service as the Phalanx, or more properly speaking, the preservation of it depended on them; for if Judas had broke through that of the elephants, it had overset, or very much disordered the second rank; and if these had been routed, the Phalanx had not been able to resist: as that was compos'd of one mass alone without intervals, the run-aways must have put it into confusion, and borne it down without a possibility of procuring the least remedy. The ancient Greeks and Asiaticks drew up in Phalanx, and when the ground would not allow them to extend themselves with their whole front, they doubled it, that is to say, they dispos'd themselves into two Phalanx's which was very dangerous; for by this absurd method a small body of troops engaging with an equal front, might beat an Army infinitely superiour, because it was sufficient to overthrow the first, it being certain, that the defeat of one would draw after it that of all the rest. This is what happened to Hannibal at the battle of Zama, where his glory and reputation lost ground miserably. He had drawn up his people in three lines like Phalanx's, one behind the other, at a certain distance; and tho' he had an Army of fifty thousand men us'd to action, he was nevertheless defeated by Scipio, whose whole forces consisted in twenty two thousand men ranged in columns: and thus this small Army broke through these three Phalanx's. To beat the first was sufficient in order to be assured of routing the other two without Hannibal's having it in his power to redress the evil; at least he did not think it possible to repair so great a blunder.

1 Macc. vi. 35.

To return to the order of battle in Antiochus's Army, I have said, that as to the two first lines I thought it excellent: as to the Phalanx I have spoke my sentiments of it; he drew it up according to the common custom, which was as ancient perhaps as War; but this usage of so long prescription, and which still continues, does not prove the goodness of it, as I have demonstrated in the sixth book of my Comment upon Polybius. As to the Cavalry, it was placed upon the wings to support the Infantry. Altho' this Army of Antiochus was formidable, yet this perhaps had never put a stop to Judas after his first advantage: he knew very well by experience, that to beat the first line was sufficient for him to have had afterwards a good account of the rest, without the loss of many men: nevertheless he retreated. The reason whereof has been above mentioned; which was, he was afraid of being intercepted by the troops, which marched by the way of the high lands; and as there is no mountain without some back passage, he thought it proper to disengage himself out of this danger, that he might not be stop'd in his retreat. As to Eleazar's devoting himself, who crept under an elephant's belly which was adorned more magnificently than the rest, and stab'd him with his sword, believing the King to be upon him, and so was crushed to death with his fall, this was a very handsome action, and worthy of a truly brave man; but people's devoting themselves in this manner is so common in History, that we are too much accustomed to it to look upon it as a prodigy of Valour.

BAVAR, the Son of Henadad was one of those, who when the Jews returned from the Captivity, contributed towards the building of Jerusalem. Neh. iii. 18.

BEALIAH, one of the thirty brave Officers in David's Army. 1 Chr. xii. 5.

BEAN. It is said in the first book of Maccabees, Ch. v. 4, 6. that the Children of Bean were a shame and an offence unto the people of Israel, they having laid ambushes for them in their way. We do not know whether Bean is the name of a Man or a City. Some think it is the name of a City called Bean, beyond Jordan. Numb. xxxii. 3. Others, that Bean is put for Batanea; others again, that it is the name of a Man.

BEAR, in Latin, Ursus, in Greek, Arctos, and in Hebrew, Dob. Bears were very common in Palestine. David says, that he had often fought with Bears and Lions. 1 Sam. xvii. 34, 36.
The Prophet Elisha having cursed some of the children of Bethel, for crying out in an insulting manner, Go up, thou Baldpate, go up, thou Bald-pate, two Bears issued out from a neighbouring forest, and devoured two and forty of them. 2 Kings ii. 23, 24.
The sacred Writers to aggravate the transports of a man in passion say, He is chaf'd in his mind as a bear robbed of his whelps. 2 Sam. xvii. 8. Prov. xvii. 12.
The Hebrew word Dob is given them by reason of the shagged hair with which every part of their body is loaded. Their claws are very hooked, and they make use of them in ascending to the tops of Hosea xiii. 8.

trees:

trees: they feed upon fruits, honey, bees, and flesh. There are white Bears to be seen in the Northern countries. Many of them are to be found in Poland, Muscovy, Lithuania, and the great forests of Germany. Some have believed, that Bears bring their young into the world shapeless, and that their dams lick them into form. There are particular Writers who derive Ursus from the verb ordiri to begin, as if it were said orsus begun, rough-drawn; but this is a popular error. Aristotle and *Pliny say, that Bears when they are first littered are scarce bigger than a mouse, and that they grow as long as they live; that they have neither eyes nor hair, and that their claws only appear. The dams go no longer than thirty days, and generally produce five young ones. Pariunt trigesimo die, ut plurimum quinos. Hi sunt candida informisque caro, paulo muribus major, sine oculis, sine pilo, ungues tantum prominent. Hanc lambendo paulatim figurant.

They lye hid all the winter and asleep. The male continues in this condition forty days, and the female four months. They sleep so soundly for the first fourteen days, that blows will not wake them. During these forty days they are said to have no nourishment but from licking their feet. It is certain that in all this time they eat nothing, and that at the end of it the males are very fat. The flesh of Bears was much esteemed by the Ancients. Even at this day the paw of a Bear well salted and smoaked is served up at the tables of Princes. This animal, as rough and stupid as it seems to be, is capable of discipline, it leaps, dances, and plays a thousand little tricks at the sound of a trumpet. Some affirm, that it is even susceptible of love for women.

Isai. xi. 7. Isaiah describing the happiness of the Messiah's reign, says, that then the Ox and the Bear will be seen feeding together, and their young living peaceably in the same stable; by the Bear the Gentiles, by the Ox the Jews were signified, these two people will be united in the Church, and compose but one flock. Daniel in his description of the four great Monarchies, represents that of the Chaldeans under the idea of a Lioness; that of the Persians under the notion of a Bear; that of the Greeks under the figure of a Leopard, and that of the successors of Alexander the Great, under the idea of a terrible Animal. The Bear described by the Prophet had three rows of teeth in his jaw; by this Cyrus was principally represented.

Dan. vii. 5.

Rev xiii. 2. S. John in the Revelations describes to us the persecutors of the Church, under the idea of a Beast with seven heads, having ten horns with ten diadems upon them, and the names of blasphemy. His body resembled that of a Leopard; his feet were like those of a Bear, and his mouth like that of a Lion. Some believe that by this Beast with seven heads the seven Roman Emperors were meant who persecuted the Church from the time of S. John the Evangelist, namely, Dioclesian, Maximian, Galerius, Maximinus, Severus, Maxentius and Licinius; in these there met together the cruelty, strength, voracity and malice of the Leopard, the Bear, and Lion.

The Author of Ecclesiasticus says, That the anger of a woman changeth her countenance; she puts on a melancholy, fierce look like a Bear; her complexion turns livid like a sackcloth. xxv. 17. A Bear when angry is terrible. This animal has of itself an hideous look, but when it is enraged it makes people tremble.

Isaiah compares the despair of the wicked to the roarings of a Bear. Rugiemus Is. lix. 11. quasi ursi omnes: The cries of Bears grown furious are sufficient to frighten the most intrepid.

BEARD. The Hebrews all wear a Beard upon their chin, but not upon the upper lip or cheeks. Moses forbids them Levit. xix. 27. to cut off intirely the angle, or extremity of their Beard, that is to say, to manage it after the manner of the Egyptians, who left only a little tuft of Beard at the extremity of their chins; whereas the Jews still at this day suffer a little fillet of hair to grow from the lower end of their ears to their chins, where, as well as upon their lower lips, their Beards are in a pretty long bunch. While they mourned they intirely shaved the hair of their Heads and Beards, and neglected to trim their Beards, Is. xv. 2. Jerem. xli. 5. and xlviii. 37. Baruch vi. 30. 2 Sam. xix. 24. that is to say, to cut off what grew upon their upper lips and cheeks. In times of grief and affliction they pluckt off the hair of their Heads and Beards, as was the practice of other Nations under great calamities. Ezra ix. 3.

The King of the Ammonites designing to insult David's Ambassadors, cut off half their Beard and half their Cloaths, 2 Sam. x. 4, 5. and 1 Chr. xix. 5. that is to say, he cut off all their Beard on one side of their faces, and David did not permit them to appear at Court, till their Beards were intirely grown again.

When a leper was cured of his leprosy, Lev. xiv. 9. he washed himself in a bath, and shaved off all the hair of his body, after which he returned into the camp or city, and seven days after he washed himself and his cloaths again, shaved off all his hair, and offered the Sacrifices appointed for his purification.

The

* Plin. lib. viii. c. 36.

[Numb. viii. 7.] The Levites, on the day of their consecration, were purified by bathing and washing their bodies and cloaths, after which they shaved off all the hair of their bodies, and then offered the Sacrifices appointed for their consecration. See hereafter To Shave.

Altho' the Hebrews took great care of their Beards, to make them grow in a certain manner, at times when they were not in mourning, and on the contrary did not trim them when they were in mourning; yet I do not observe that they had any veneration for their Beard. " On the " contrary, the Arabians [b] have so much " respect for theirs, that they look upon " them as sacred ornaments given by God, " to distinguish them from women." They never shave them, but suffer them to grow from their youth. Nothing can be more infamous than for a man to be thus shaved; they make the preservation of their Beards a capital point of Religion, because Mahomet never cut off his. It is likewise a mark of authority and liberty among them, as well as among the Turks. The Persians who clip them, and shave above the jaw, are reputed Hereticks. The razor is never drawn over the Grand Seignior's face: they who serve in the Seraglio, have their Beard shaved, as a sign of their Servitude. They do not suffer it to grow till the Sultan has set them at liberty, which is bestowed as a reward upon them, and is always accompanied with some employment.

Young people, who are not married, may cut their Beards; but when they are married, or have a child, they forbear doing so, to shew that they are become wiser, have renounced the vanities of youth, and think no longer of any thing but their honour and salvation. When they comb their Beards, they hold a handkerchief upon their knees, and gather very carefully the hairs that fall, and when they have got together a certain quantity, they fold them up in paper, and carry them to the place where they bury the dead.

Among them it is more infamous for any one to have his Beard cut off, than among us to be publickly whipt or branded with a hot iron. There are abundance of people in this country, who would prefer death to this kind of punishment. —— The wives kiss their husbands Beards, and children their fathers, as often as they come to salute them: the men kiss one another's Beards reciprocally on both sides, when they salute one another in the streets, or come off from any journey. —— They say, that the Beard is the perfection of the human face, which would be more disfigured by having this cut off than the nose.

They admire and envy those who have fine Beards. Pray do but behold, they cry, that Beard; the very sight of it would persuade any one, that he whom it belongs to is an honest man. If any one with a fine Beard is guilty of an unbecoming action; what a disadvantage is this, they say, to such a Beard, how is such a Beard to be pitied. If they would correct any one's mistakes, they will tell him often, for shame of your Beard, does not the confusion that follows such an action light upon your Beard? If they entreat any one, or make use of oaths in affirming or denying any thing, they say, I conjure you by your Beard, by the life of your Beard to grant me this: or by your Beard this is or is not so. They say farther in the way of acknowledgment, May God preserve your blessed Beard; may God pour out his blessings on your Beard. And in comparisons, This is more valuable than one's Beard.

One of the principal Ceremonies observed in serious visits, is to throw sweet-scented water on one's Beard, and to perfume it afterwards with aloes-wood, which sticks to this moisture, and gives it an agreeable smell, &c. This is something like what is said in Psalm cxxxiii. v. 2. of the precious ointment which was poured on Aaron's head, and ran down upon his Beard and the skirts of his garments.

BEAST, an animal destitute of reason, appointed for the service of Man, and the ornament of the Universe. God in the beginning created the fishes of the Sea, and the fowls of the Air on the fifth day of the world: he afterwards created the [Gen. i. 20, 21, 23.] Beasts of the Earth and Man upon the sixth day: lastly, he brought the fowls of [— i. 24, 26, 31.] the Air, and the animals of the Earth to Adam, that he might call them by their particular names, and thereby begin the [— ii. 19.] exercise of that Dominion which God had granted him over all Creatures. The Lord [— i. 28.] blessed man, the fowls, fishes, and beasts of the Earth; commanded them to multiply, and gave them all the fruits and herbs of the Earth for their food. It was [— i. 29.] not till after the deluge that he granted [— ix. 3.] the use of flesh-meat to mankind; and even then he forbad the eating blood, threatning to punish the effusion of it with a penalty answerable, and to chastise even Beasts which should shed human blood. [— ix. 5.]

Accordingly in the Law of Moses, every Beast which should have killed a man, [Exod. xxi. 28, 29.] or have been made use of in a certain abominable crime, is punished with death. [Lev. xx. 15, 16.] Cities guilty of apostacy are devoted to the fire, with their inhabitants and cattle. When Noah went out of the Ark, together [Deut. xiii. 15.] with his children and the animals which he had preserved there with him, God

[b] Mœurs des Arabes par M. Darieux. p. 173. c. 7.

God faid that he had made a covenant with Noah, with his family, and defcendants, and with all the feveral creatures which came out thence with him, and that he engaged himfelf never to fend fuch a [Gen. ix. 9.] deluge again upon the earth. God enjoining [Ifa. xx. 10.] reft upon the Sabbath, declares it to be his pleafure, that cattle as well as flaves fhould enjoy the benefit of this repofe. God fmote in Egypt the firft-born of men and beafts; and as a memorial of his having fpared the Hebrews, he commands the firft-born of men and beafts to [Exod. xxii. xxiii.] be confecrated to him.

Eve converfed with the Serpent with- [Gen. iii. 1.] out being at all furprized to hear him fpeak and reafon. Balaam in like manner difcourfes with his Afs, and replies to her as he would have anfwered a reafona- [Numb. xxii. 28.] ble man. After the fall of Adam and Eve, God fpoke to the Serpent, curfed, [Gen. iii. 14.] punifhed him, and foretold his mifery, with as much form and circumftance as he did the fame to Adam and Eve. Mofes obferves, that the Serpent was more fubtle than any beaft of the field, and our Saviour enjoins us to have the prudence of the Serpent, and the fimplicity of the [Matth. x. 16.] Dove; the wife man refers the idle to the [Prov. vi. 6.] Ant, and defcribes thefe creatures as compofing a little commonwealth, in which abundance of activity and providence was [Prov. xxx. 25.] vifible. In the Prophets God threatens to extirpate utterly both the people and the cattle of fuch countries as incurr'd [Jerem. l. 51.] his indignation. Jonah having preached [Ezek. xiv.] at Nineveh, that God was ready to dif- [Zeph. i. 1.] play his wrath againft the City; the Ni- [Jonah iii. 5, 6.] nevites were converted, covered themfelves with fackcloth from the greateft to the meaneft, the King himfelf defcended from his Throne, and forbad both man and beaft to eat or drink. Why are beafts thus required to faft, if they are not capable of reafon, of merit or demerit? And when God moved with the humiliation of the Ninevites had forgiven their fin, and Jonah complained of his indulgence, he was [Jonah iv. 11.] told, Why fhould I not pardon this City wherein there are fo many who do not know how to diftinguifh their right hand from their left, and fo great a number of beafts! As if this multitude of animals was a motive to the forgiving Nineveh.

The Egyptians, among whom the Hebrews dwelt for fo long a time, adored Beafts, and confequently believed them not only to be reafonable, but likewife to be fuperior to man. Thefe alfo were probably the principles of the Ifraelites, fince they paid their worfhip to the golden Calf in the wildernefs, and after Jeroboam's Schifm, continued to adore the like Deities.

The Doctrine of Tranfmigration fo common throughout all the Eaft, and even among the Hebrews, a Doctrine the remains whereof were vifible among the Ifraelites of our Saviour's time[c], and even in the Apoftles before they had received the Holy Ghoft; this opinion fuppofes manifeftly, that Beafts are reafonable, becaufe the fame fouls which animated the wifeft and moft underftanding men, pafs fucceffively into the bodies of Beafts.

> [d] Omnia mutantur: nihil interit: errat & illinc
> Huc venit, hinc, illuc, & quoslibet occupat artus,
> Spiritus, èque feris humana in corpora tranfit,
> Inque feras nofter, nec tempore deperit ullo.

Thefe opinions are neither new nor uncommon among the Jews: they are however to be obferved with fome variety in Philo[e] and in the moft celebrated Rabbins[f].

Many affirm that Birds have a fort of language intelligible to themfelves. Porphyry relates, that Tirefias and Apollonius Tianæus underftood this language, and there are ftill at this day people in Arabia[g], who value themfelves upon this knowledge. They tell us, that they have been acquainted with it ever fince the time of Solomon and the Queen of Sheba, who had a Bird called Huddud, which is the Hoop, made ufe of by them in fending amorous meffages to one another. Some Arabian Authors[h] have believed, that there were Elephants of the Mahometan Religion, and which adored God. Pliny[i] and others after him have afferted in their writings, that Elephants were capable of Religion, that they worfhipped the Sun and Moon.

The Philofophers of Antiquity, fuch as Empedocles, Pythagoras, Galen, Cleanthes, Eudoxus, Porphyry, Ælian, Pliny, and many more, did generally believe that Beafts reafoned. Diogenes Laertius[k] tells us, that Eudoxus a Pythagorean Philofopher tranflated out of Egyptian into Greek a Dialogue between Dogs. Laftly, all the world almoft, Philofophers and others, in Europe particularly believed Beafts to be rational, before Defcartes invented his Syftem of Machines. It is true indeed, that before him a Spanifh Phyfician, whofe name was Gofnefius Pereira, had advanced, that Beafts were mere Machines: he was thirty years in compofing his Book, and publifhed it in 1554; but fo little notice was taken of it, that no one condefcended to confute it. Father Pardies a Jefuite wrote a book concerning the knowledge of Beafts, to fhew that they are not deftitute of thought or underftanding.

Thomas

[c] See hereafter the Article Tranfmigration.
[d] Ovid. Metam. l. xv.
[e] Philo de Somniis.
[f] Bafnag. Hift. des Juifs. t. IV. l. vi. c. 30.
[g] D'Herbolet. Bibl. Orient. p. 443. col. 1.
[h] Idem p. 349. col. 2.
[i] Plin. l. viii. c. 1.
[k] Diogen. Laert.

Thomas Willis has likewife written a treatife concerning the Souls of Beafts: there is another on the fame fubject by M. Le Grand, and a Book intitled, Of the Souls of Beafts, printed at Lions in 1676, compofed by Antony D'Illy Prieft of Amboun.

Solomon in the book of Ecclefiaftes, whether he propofes his own thoughts or thofe of the Philofophers and Free-thinkers of his time, expreffes himfelf in a manner to perfuade people that Beafts have under-
Eccles. iii. 18, 19, 21. ftanding and a reafonable foul: I faid in my heart concerning the eftate of the Sons of Men, that God might manifeft them, and that they might fee that they themfelves are Beafts; for as the one dieth, fo dieth the other, yea they have all one breath, fo that a man hath no pre-eminence above a Beaft. --- Who knoweth the fpirit of man that goeth upward, and the fpirit of the beaft that goeth downward to the earth? The Scripture fpeaks of the death of Animals
Ps. civ. 29. and Men much in the fame manner: Thou takeft away their breath and they die, and return to their duft. And Job, If he ga-
Job xxxiv. 14. ther unto himfelf his fpirit and his breath, all flefh fhall perifh together.

But we are not to carry the confequences of thefe paffages too far, nor fhould we infer from them that Beafts are in every refpect equal to Man, that they reafon like him, that they are capable of Religion, of knowing God, of attaining to a ftate of Beatitude, and of acting by fupernatural views. The knowledge, reafoning, defires and defigns of Beafts are limited to the knowledge and difcernment of what may contribute to their temporal happinefs, the prefervation of their bodies, and the multiplication of their fpecies. Their Souls may indeed judge and diftinguifh between hot and cold, what is advantageous and dangerous to their health; but will never enable them to difcern between moral good and evil, between what is juft and unjuft, lawful and unlawful; they will be, if any one will have it fo, immortal and eternal, becaufe if they think, they muft neceffarily be fpiritual; but this is a privilege which is common to them with bodies, and matter, the effence whereof is indefectible, nor can their nature perifh. Matter may change in figure or fituation, be at reft or in motion; but it cannot be annihilated, nor ceafe to be, unlefs God ceafes to preferve it; and in this fenfe the Angels themfelves, and the Souls of Men have no more privilege than Matter.

But what becomes of the Souls of Beafts when feparated from Matter? To this we can make no reply, becaufe we have no principle which can difcover it to us; neither revelation, nor experience, nor reafoning by effects and caufes can furnifh us with the leaft light in this particular. We know that God created all things for his Glory, that the Souls of Beafts are incapable of being elevated to fuch a degree, as to have a knowledge and love of their Creator; he therefore muft be glorified by them fome other way which is not known to us. Why then fhould we defire to fathom the fecrets of his Wifdom, and judge of things which lye beyond our reach?

We know the great objection which is borrowed from S. Auftin[1] againft the Souls of Beafts; under a juft God, no one can be unhappy that does not deferve it: Neque enim fub Deo jufto mifer effe quifquam, nifi mereatur, poteft. Now if Beafts have fenfe and reafon they are unhappy, they therefore have deferv'd to be fo; nor can they by any thing have merited to be fo but by fin. Now fuppofing they have finn'd, they are therefore capable of Religion, of the Love and Knowledge of God; which is contrary to all that has been faid above. Let it be granted that they are miferable, for this cannot be denied, fince men kill and eat them, fubject them to the hardeft and moft extream labours, beat, ufe them ill, and perfecute them, without any other reafon than their will, their good pleafure, or diverfion. If Beafts had a Soul capable of fenfe and reafon, would God have given finful Man fo intire and abfolute a dominion over them?

To this we may reply, that God being abfolute Lord over his creature, may difpofe of it as he pleafes without being obliged to give an account to any one of his conduct. Has not the potter full power to do every thing which he thinks proper with his clay, to make either a veffel of honour, or one defigned for ignominious Rom. ix. 21.
ufes? God created Beafts for Man, to Wifd. xv. 7, 8.
Man he has given an abfolute empire over them; thefe are truths very well known: he has permitted Man to eat, and confequently to kill them: Man ufes this power, this liberty; fo far things are right. What then can Beafts, whom we fuppofe reafonable, complain of? Will they tell God, that they are innocent, and he fubjects them to wicked, brutal, and foolifh Men, who manifeftly abufe the power and dominion which he hath given them over them? Shall the finful and unhappy Child, the Son of wrath and indignation, born for mifery and labour, fhall he fay unto his Father, What begetteft thou? or to the Woman, What haft thou brought forth? Shall the clay fay to him that fafhioneth it, What makeft thou? or thy work, He hath no hands? Is. xlv. 9, 10.

Do we not fee in the inftance of Job, that God fometimes punifhes the juft, tho' innocent, He multiplieth my wounds without Job ix. 17.
a caufe;

[1] Aug. Op. Imp. contra Julian. l. i. art. xxxix.

a cause; and in another place God says to Job ii. 3. the Devil; Thou movedst me against him to destroy him without a cause. And in John ix. the Gospel, the Disciples seeing one born blind, asked our Saviour, Whether he had merited this misfortune by his own sins, or by those of his parents? He answered, By neither one nor the other; but God had so ordained, that his works might be manifested in him. We know that the Blessed Virgin and S. John the Baptist lived in a state of innocency, and brought none of the blemishes of original sin with them into the world; yet the Holy Spirit informs us, that the sword of grief pierced Luke ii. 35. the very soul of Mary: and that S. John after having suffered much in prison, died Matth. xiv. by the sword of the wicked. The innocent and just therefore are not always exempt from pain and suffering; and to return to Beasts, God exercises his sovereign power over them, he makes use of that right which he possesses as a Father and Creator, and does injustice to no one. It was in his choice either to create Beasts or leave them in the state of non-entity. In the midst of their unhappiness they are infinitely obliged to him, since after all they derive from him being, life, action, and all the good that they enjoy.

BEAUTY. The Hebrew word Naveh, which signifies Beauty, is likewise taken frequently for a Dwelling. The Lord hath loved the Beauty of Jacob, his Temple, his Place of abode which he hath chosen Ps. xlvi. 5. in Jacob. Elegit nobis hæreditatem suam, speciem Jacob quam dilexit. This other passage of Psalm xlix. 2. Sion species decoris ejus may be expounded after the same manner. And again Psalm lxvii. 13. Speciei domus dividere spolia. In the Hebrew, the habitation of the house, they who continued at home divided the spoil with those, who went to war. The Temple of the Lord and his Tabernacle, which are the places of his abode among men, are likewise called his habitation. God delivered the Beauty of the Israelites, the Ark of the Lord, into the hands of the —lxxviii. 61. Philistines. Jeremiah xxxi. 23. calls the Temple Pulchritudo Justitiæ, Mons sanctus. And in another place, he compares it to a Lion, and calls it, Pulchritudinem Jerem. xlix. 19. robustam by reason of its strength. Job says, that he cursed the Beauty of the wicked. Job v. 3. in the Hebrew, his Habitation. Concerning the Beauty of Jesus Christ, see the Article Jesus Christ.

BDELLIUM, is a Gum which comes from a tree, that is very common in Arabia, and many other places of the East. Pliny says [m], that the best Bdellium comes from the Bactrian; that the tree, which produces it, is black, as large as an olive-tree with leaves like those of an oak, and fruit like that of the caper-tree. Bdellium should be transparent, and yellow as wax, bitter to the taste, and oily; it smells like the unguis odoratus, when it is burnt. There is Bdellium to be found likewise in the Indies, in Media and Babylonia. In Hebrew it is called Bdolack. Moses says, there is some of it in the country through which the river Pison runs, Genes. ii. 11. and that the Manna of the Israelites was of the colour of Bdellium, that is, inclining to yellow.

BEBAI, the children of Bebai returned from Babylon to the number of six hundred twenty three. Ezra ii. 11.

BEBETHEN, a City eight miles Eastward from Ptolemais [n].

BECAH or Bekah, half a Shekel [*]. Every Israelite paid an hundred Bekahs a head every year for the support of the Temple. See Matth. xvii. 23. and here- Exod. xxx. 13. after under the title Didrachma.

I. BECHER, the Son of Ephraim; chief of the Family of the Bachrites. Numb. xxvi. 35.

II. BECHER, the Son of Benjamin, and Father of Zemira, &c. Genes. xlvi. 21. and 1 Chr. vii. 6, 8.

BECHORATH, the Son of Aphia, and Great-Grandfather of Kish the Father of Saul. 1 Sam. ix. 1.

BECTILET. See Judith ii. 21. in the Greek. It is said that Holofernes departing from Nineveh, after three days march arrived with his Army at Bectilet, and incamped near the mountain, which is to the left of Cilicia. We take Bectilet to be the country of Bagdania, to the left or North of Mount Argeé, in the Vulgate called Mount Ange.

BEDAD, the Father of Hadad the E- Genes. xxxv. 35. domite. The Septuagint in Genesis and in the Chronicles call it Barad. 1 Chr. i. 46.

BEDAN. It is said in the first book of Samuel, xii. 11. that the Lord sent several Deliverers for the preservation of Israel, such as Jerubbaal, Bedan, Jephthah, and Samuel. Jerubbaal and Gideon we know are the same, but we no where find the name of Bedan among the Judges of Israel. The Septuagint instead of Bedan read Barak. Others [o] assert, that Bedan is the same as Jair of the Tribe of Manasseh, who judg'd Israel for three and twenty years. There was one Bedan Judg. x. 3. Great-grandson to Machir. Jair was des- 1 Chr. ii. 21, 22. cended from a Daughter of Machir. The Chaldee, the Rabbins, and after them the generality of the Commentators [p], have affirmed

[m] Plin. l. xii. c. 9. [n] Euseb. Onomast. voce Bαιθ. [o] Jun. Piscat. in 1 Reg. xii. 11.
[p] Lyr. Est. Menoch. Tir. Cornel. Sanct. &c.
[*] A Bekah in Dr. Arbuthnot's table of reductions is 13*d* ¾. In Dr. Prideaux's computation 1 s. 6. The half Shekel was called Bekah from the verb Baka, which signifies divided in two parts.

affirmed, that Bedan was Samson, who was of the Tribe of Dan. But I should prefer rather their opinion, who make Bedan and Jair to be the same person. The names of Samson and Barak were added in many Latin Copies [q], before the corrections of them by the Roman Censors were published.

BEDEIAH, was one of those who after the return from Babylon separated from their Wives which they had married contrary to the Law.

BEELIADA, the Son of David. 1 Chr. xiv. 7.

BEEL-MEUS. Nine miles from Esbron. Eusebius says, that there are warm waters at Baal-meus. It is the same as Baal-meon.

BEEL-TEEM, or Rehum Beel-teem. Rehum was his name, Beel-teem was that of his dignity, which some believe to have been that of Counsellor, or Secretary, or Chief-Treasurer. He was at the head of those Officers of the King of Persia, who commanded in Samaria and Palestine. He wrote to Artaxerxes, otherwise called Smerdis or Oropastes the Successor of Cambyses, to oppose the rebuilding of the Temple of Jerusalem. His Letter had the effect he desired; for Artaxerxes hereupon sent orders to discontinue the works. Ezra iv. 9. & seq.

בעל זבוב. BEEL-ZEBUB, or Belzebub. The God Fly, a Deity adored by those of Ekron. There are disputes concerning the form and quality of this ridiculous God. We have treated at large on this matter in our Dissertation concerning the Gods of the Philistines, printed before our Comment on the first book of Kings, p. 27. Beelzebub, or as he is often called in Greek and Latin, Beel-zebul or Beel-zebut, had a celebrated Temple and Oracle at Ekron. Ahaziah King of Israel, having fallen from the terrass of his house into the dining-room, and received thereby some dangerous hurts, sent to consult Beel-zebub to know if he should be cured of his wounds. In the New Testament Beelzebub is often called the Prince of the Devils. 2 Kings i. 2, 3, &c. Matt. xii. 24. Luke xi. 15. Mark iii. 22.

Some Commentators will have it, that the name of Beel-zebub is not the true name of this Deity, but Bel-samin the God of Heaven, whom the Hebrews in derision called Beel-zebub, the God Fly, or Beel-zebul the God of Ordure. Others are of opinion, that this Deity of the Ekronites was called the God of Flies, because he defended people from the Flies, in like manner as the Eleans adored Jupiter the Driver away of Flies [r], under which quality the Romans too worshipped him [*]. Lastly, others [s] believe that the fly or beetle, and the figure of this Insect was adored. Pliny [t] assures us, that the Egyptians, who lay so near to the Philistines in whose country Ekron was, paid divine honours to the Beetle. It is observed that there are Beetles in the picture of Isis, on which Pignorius has made a Comment. The Author of the book of Wisdom, having said that God sent flies and wasps to drive the Canaanites and Ammonites by degrees out of their country, adds, that God made those very things, to which they paid divine honours, the instruments of their punishment; they therefore adored Flies and Wasps. There are said to be medals and old seals, on which Flies and Beetles are represented. Why the Jews in Jesus Christ's time should call Beel-zebub the Prince of the Devils we do not very well know. Wisd. xii. 8.

Some Authors are of opinion, that the name of Acher [u] the God invoked at Cyrene against Flies, comes from Accaron, the City where Beel-zebub was worshipped. Others think, that the true name which the Philistines gave their Deity was Beelzeback, God of Sacrifice, or Beel-zebaoth, God of Hosts, or Beelzebul, God of the Habitation or of Heaven; and that the Jews, who delighted in disfiguring the names of false Gods, and were scrupulous of calling them by their proper appellations, gave them in derision that of God Fly, or God of Ordure. The name of Beelzebuth is not very different from that of Beelzebaoth, God of Hosts. Ps. xvi. 4. Exod. xxiii. 13.

The worship of this false God must have been in reputation in our Saviour's time, since the Jews accused him with driving out Devils in the name of Belzebub Prince of the Devils, that is to say, of Satan, Lucifer, or Chief of the rebellious Angels, whom the Jews of our Saviour's time called Belzebut or Belzebub. This appears clearly by our Lord's answer and way of arguing; If Satan cast out Satan, he is divided against himself, how then can this kingdom stand? Matth. xii. 24. Ibid. vers. 26, 27.

It is a question which is the true reading of S. Matthew's Text, xii. 24. whether Belzebub, as we find in the Vulgate; or Belzebul, as the old Greek Copies, and the Oriental Translations from the Greek read it; or Belzebuth, as the French pronounce it. It is certain that in the Hebrew books of the Old Testament we always read Belzebub [x], that is to say, the God Fly, or the God of the Fly. The [y] Septuagint translate 2 Kings i. 12.

[q] Ita Sixt. V. Editi. Jerobaal, & Baldan, & Samson, & Barak, & Jephte.
[r] Clem. Alex. in Protreptico, & Pausan. in Eliac.
[u] Plin. l. x. c. 28. Cyrenaici Achorem Deum, &c.
[s] Plin. l. x. c. 29. Solin. c. 1.
[t] Plin. l. xxx. c. 11. Plutarch. Sympos. l. iv. c. 5
[x] בעל זבוב [y] 70 Βάαλ μυῖαν θεὸν Ἀκκαρών.
[*] Not as the Eleans and others by the name of Jupiter but of Hercules Apomyius, tho' we no where read that killing Flies was one of his labours.

translate it Baal the Fly, and consequently they read Belzebub. Some think that the originals of the New Testament had the same reading, and that the Copiers through ignorance or derision substituted Belzebul in the room of it, which signifies the God of Ordure; but of this there is no proof. As for Belzebuth, some would justify it by saying that it is the Plural of Sebub, and that at first the name was Beelsebuboth, God of Flies, and in the way of abbreviation Beelsebuth; but there is no other passage to be produced, wherein we find Beelsebuboth instead of Beelsebub. See Bochart. de Animal. Sacr. P. 2. l. iv. c. 9. & Selden, De Diis Syriis. Syntag. 1. c. 6.

BEER, or Beera. This word signifies a Well in Hebrew [x]. There is a City of this name four leagues from Jerusalem, in the way to Schechem or Naplouse [y]. It is very probable, that Jotham the Son of Gideon retired to this place, to prevent his falling into the hands of his Brother Abimelech. [Judg. ix. 21.]

BEER-ELIM, or Puteus-Elim in Isaiah xv. 8. that is to say, the Well of the Princes, is probably the same with that mentioned in the book of Numbers, under the name of the Princes Well, Beersarim. [Numb. xxi. 17.]

I. BEEROTH, a City belonging to the Gibeonites, which was yielded afterwards to the Tribe of Benjamin. [Josh. ix. 17. 2 Sam. iv. 2.] Eusebius says, that Beeroth was situated at seven miles distance from Jerusalem, in the way towards Nicopolis. S. Jerom instead of Nicopolis, reads Neapolis, or Naplouse. M. Reland prefers Eusebius's reading. The Reader may examine his proofs [z].

II. Beeroth of the Children of Jaakan. It is spoken of in Deuteronomy x. 6. and Eusebius says, that this station of the Israelites was shewn ten miles from the City of Petra [a]. Moses in Numb. xxxiii. 31, 32. reads only Bene-Jaakan, instead of Beeroth bene-Jaakan. Deut, x 6.

BEERAH, Head of the Tribe of Reuben. He was carried away into captivity by Tiglath-pileser. 1 Chr. v. 6.

I. BEERI, Father of the Prophet Hosea. Hos. i.

II. Beeri, Father of Judith the Wife of Esau. Genes. xxvi. 34.

BEER-SHEBA, the Well of an Oath, or the Well of Seven; because here Abraham made an alliance with Abimelech King of Gerar, and gave him seven ewe-lambs, to serve as a monument of that Covenant which they had sworn to. [Genes. xx. 31. Genes. xxi. 30, 31.] Beer-sheba was at first given by Joshuah to the Tribe of Judah, and afterwards a cession of it was made to that of Simeon. [Josh. xv. 28. — xix. 2.] It was situated twenty miles from Hebron towards the South, and there was a Roman Garrison there in Eusebius's and S. Jerom's time [b]. The limits of the Holy Land are often expressed in Scripture by these terms, From Dan even unto Beer-sheba. [1 Sam. xvii. 11. &c.] Dan was at the Northern, and Beer-sheba at the Southern extremity of the Land.

BEES, a sort of Flies producing honey. See hereafter Honey. Bees were declared to be unclean by the Law. Levit. xi. 23.

BEESTERA. This is the same as Bostra or Bozra, capital of the Eastern part of Edom. See Bozra.

BEGABAR, a City beyond Jordan; the Prophet Nahum's Country [c]. It is probably the same as Beth-avara.

BEGGING, to beg, mendicare, mendicus. Moses exhorting the Israelites to Alms-giving, says, [Deut. xv. 4. 7.] To the end that there be no poor among you; for the Lord shall greatly bless thee in the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee for an inheritance to possess it. And a little lower; If there be among you a poor man of one of thy Brethren, within any of thy gates, in thy land, which the Lord thy God giveth thee, thou shalt not harden thine heart, nor shut thine hand from thy poor Brother. The Hebrew Text of this place does not speak of begging. Besides we very well know, that there were at all times poor persons and beggars among the Jews as well as among other people. God himself in the same Chapter says, The poor shall never cease out of the land. [— xv. 11.] And we see by the Gospel, that there were several beggars in Jerusalem, and other places in the land [d]. Lazarus was poor, and forced to beg; and so was the man born blind, who was cured by Jesus Christ, and some other blind men at Jericho. [Mark x. 46. Luke xviii. 35. John ix. 8. Luke xvi. 20.] The true sense therefore of the passage in Moses is, that God will so plentifully bless the lands of the Hebrews in the sixth year, that tho' there be no harvest in the sabbatical year, nevertheless there will be no poor among them, provided they faithfully observe his precepts; or it was his design to recommend charity and alms-giving to them in such a manner that there should be no poor among them. Be so charitable and liberal of your alms, that there may be no indigent person seen in Israel. The Jews still at this day observe great discipline, in order to prevent as much as possible, there being any poor among them [e]. They give alms, and make collections in publick and private for the poor; and it is [x] באר Beer, a Well. [y] Maundrel's Journey from Aleppo to Jerusalem. [z] Reland. Palæst. lib. iii. p. 618, 619. [a] Euseb. Onomast. in voce Beeroth. [b] Euseb. & Hieron. in locis. [c] Epiphan. de Vita & Morte Prophetarum. [d] Talmud. apud Seldenum de Jure Naturæ lib. iv. cap. 6. p. 728. [e] Leo. Mod. p. 1. c. 14. & Selden. de Jur. Nat. & Gent. l. vi. c. 6.

* In the more considerable Towns where they are settled, they have several Confraternities, one whereof has the care of collecting Alms for the Poor; another for the Redemption of Captives; and a third for endowing young Maidens. The Talmudists have a maxim, that they were never to send away a poor Man without giving him something, if it were but a grain of corn.

is very rare to see any beggars of their Nation, in places, where they are numerous and powerful[e].

Some have been of opinion that Jesus Christ and his Apostles were reduced to such a degree of poverty, as to beg. The Author of a Sermon upon Sunday in the Octave of the Epiphany, printed under the name of S. Bernard, but written in reality by Alfred Abbot of Rieval, of the Cistercian Order in England, who lived in the twelfth Age[f], says expresly, that Jesus Christ begg'd from door to door during his three days stay at Jerusalem, when he remained there without the knowledge of his parents, being at that time twelve years of age. Quasi unus e turba pauperum stipem per ostia mendicabat. S. Thomas[g] in his Answer to William of S. Amour, who had attacked the Preaching Friars, on the score of their begging, and maintained, that neither our Saviour nor his Apostles ever begg'd, endeavours to prove, that Jesus Christ in reality did beg; for example at Jericho, when he said
Luke xix. 5. to Zachæus, Make haste and come down; for to day I must abide at thy house. But it must be confessed, that this passage does no way prove, that our Saviour begg'd on this occasion, and Alfred's opinion is of no consequence, because it is founded only upon a conjecture, and a very uncertain fact. But we know indubitably, that our Saviour had some persons, who follow-— viii. 3. ed him, and supplied his wants, they ministred unto him of their substance. He had a common purse, into which was put whatsoever was voluntarily offered to him.
John xii. 6. Judas had the bag, and bare what was put therein. Lastly, Jesus Christ before his preaching, was of a trade, and worked at it with his Father Joseph, Is not this the Mark vi. 3. Carpenter? The Disciples also had trades, which they exercised even during their preaching. See what S. Paul says, Acts xx. 34. These hands have ministred to my necessities, and to them that were with me. See also 1 Cor. iv. 12. Ephes. iv. 28. Acts xviii. 2, 3, &c. See hereafter the Article Poor.

BEGHAI, and his Sons returned from Babylon with Zerubbabel. Ezra ii. 2, 14. See Bignai.

BEHEMOTH. Job speaks of an A-Job xl. 10. בהמות nimal, which he calls Behemoth, the particular properties whereof are described at large by him. Bochart has taken a great deal of pains to make it appear, that it is the Hippopotamus, or River-horse. Sanctius thinks it to be an Ox. The Fathers suppose the Devil to be meant by it; but we agree with the generality of Interpreters in their opinion, that it is the Elephant. Behemoth in Hebrew signifies Beasts in general, particularly the larger kind of animals, which are fit for service. The Rabbins tell us, that Behemoth is the largest four-footed creature that God has created; that in the beginning he made two, male and female; the female he killed and salted, to reserve it as an entertainment for the Elect, whenever the Messiah shall come: the male is still living, but when this time comes, God will kill it, and give it to the Israelites, who shall then rise from the dead. They are so fully convinced of these extravagancies, that they often swear by the share they are to have of Behemoth.

BEIZA or Beizath. This word in Hebrew signifies an Egg[h], and a certain measure in use among the Jews. They say that an Egg contains the sixth part of a Log, and consequently three cubick inches and this fraction [illegible]. The Beiza is likewise a sort of gold coin common among the Persians: it weighs forty drachma's, and from this word, not from the City Byzantium the Besam was formed. A Besam is worth two Dinars, and every Dinar twenty or five and twenty Drachma's[i]. The Persians say Philip of Macedon owed Darius King of Persia a thousand Beizaths, or gold Eggs, for Tribute-money; and that Alexander the Great succeeding Philip, refused to pay them, saying, the bird which laid these Eggs was flown into the other world.

BEKAH, see Becah.

BEL or Belus, the first King of Babylon, who after his death received divine honours in this City, and throughout all Chaldæa. We do not know exactly whether it were Nimrod, or Belus the Father of Ninus, or some other of their Kings, whom they worshipped under the name of Belus; or whether it were the Sun, or Saturn, or Jupiter. See above the Article Baal. Jeremiah speaking of the De- Jerem. l. 2.
struction of Babylon by the Medes and Persians, Babylon is taken, Bel is confounded, Merodach is broken in pieces, her Idols are confounded, her images are broken in pieces. The same Prophet in another place says, And I will punish Bel in Babylon, Id. l. 44.
and I will bring forth out of his mouth that which he hath swallowed up, and the nations shall not flow together any more unto him; yea the wall of Babylon shall fall. This was seen to be executed under Cyrus, Darius the Son of Hystaspes, and the Princes who succeeded them. See Babylon.

The Babylonians worshipped Bel as a living God; they attributed to him the gift of healing diseases, and believed he eat eat and drank like a living person. Baruch (Baruch vi. 40.) says, that one dumb was presented to him, that he might restore him to the use of speech, as tho' he were able to understand. (Dan. xiv. 2.) And Daniel relates in what manner he discovered the cheat of Bel's Priests, who came every night through private doors, to eat what was offered to this false Deity.

[f] Vide in Edit. Oper. S. Bern. t. 2. 578. Edit. Mabill. & in Bibl. PP. t. 23. p. 154. [g] D. Thom. l. 17. Opusc. l. xix. c. 7. [h] ביצה Ovum. [i] Bibl. Orient. p. 286. B.

Herodotus [k] describes the Temple of Belus at Babylon, as one of the most wonderful works in the World. It was a prodigious Tower, the basis whereof was a square, every side of which was a Furlong or an hundred twenty five Paces, and consequently an hundred Paces in circuit; it consisted of eight Towers built one upon another. Strabo [l] in his description of it, calls it a Pyramid, because it decreased as it rose higher, and says it was a Furlong or an hundred twenty five Paces in height. People went up it by stairs which were carried round about the outside of it. The eight Towers were as it were so many stages, wherein several large Chambers were contrived, supported by Pillars. Upon the very top of the Tower was the Temple of Belus, wherein were many Statues of massy Gold; one among the rest forty foot high. This Temple [m] with its riches was in being till the time of Xerxes; who returning from his unfortunate expedition into Egypt, demolished the Temple, and carried off the immense wealth, which was inclosed in it; consisting not only in golden Statues, but in furniture and instruments appointed for the worship of them. See above Babel, Tower of Babel.

I. Bela, the same as Bala, or Zobar. See Zobar.

II. Bela, the Son of Beor, King of Dinhabah, in the Eastern part of Edom. (Genes. xxxvi. 32.)

III. Bela, the Son of Benjamin, a chief of the family of the Belites. Numb. xxvi. 38.

BELEUS or Belus, a little river of Galilee, which falls into the Mediterranean, at the distance of two Furlongs from Ptolemais [n]. Pliny says [o], it springs up in a lake, and does not run above the space of four miles. Its waters are not good to drink, and the bottom of it is marshy; but the water of the Sea flowing with the tide into its channel, washes away the sand, and of this they make Glass. The bank, from whence the sand is taken for this use, is not in extent above five hundred Paces, and tho', for so many Ages, so much has continually been carried away, yet it remains inexhaustible, and furnishes perpetually a fresh stock. Josephus and Tacitus [p] speak of it as well as Pliny; but the Authors who treat of the Holy Wars, take no other notice of the sands of Belus, than of something which in their time was out of use, and known only by the writings of the Ancients.

BELGA, Chief of the fifteenth Band of Priests established by David. (1 Chron. xxiv. 14.)

BELGAI, of the sacerdotal family, was one of those who signed the covenant with the Lord, when the Jews returned from Babylon. (Nehem. x. 8.)

BELIAL. This term is plainly Hebrew [q]; it signifies a wicked worthless Man, one who is resolved, to endure no subjection, a Rebel, a disobedient Fellow. Thus the Inhabitants of Gibrah, who abused the Levite's Wife, have the name of Belial given them. (Judg. xix. 22.) Hophni and Phineas, the High-Priest Eli's Sons, are likewise called Sons of Belial, (1 Sam. xi. 12.) upon the score of the several crimes they had committed, and the unbecoming manner with which they behaved themselves in the Temple of the Lord.

Sometimes the name of Belial is taken to denote the Devil. For example, St. Paul says, What concord hath Christ with Belial? (2 Cor. vi. 15.) From whence we may conclude, that in his time the Jews, under the name of Belial, commonly understood the Devil to be meant, in the places where this term is to be met with in the Old Testament.

BELL. Moses ordain'd, that the lower part of the blew Robe, which the High-Priest wore when he perform'd religious Ceremonies, should be adorned with Pomegranates and gold Bells intermixed equally, and at equal distances. The Pomegranates were of Wool, in colour blew, purple and crimson, and the Bells were of Gold. Moses adds, And it shall be upon Aaron to minister; and his sound shall be heard when he goeth in unto the holy place before the Lord, and when he cometh out, that he dye not. (Exod. xxviii. 33, 34.) Some of the Hebrews believe these little Bells to be round like ours; others that they were such as were then commonly in use.

The Kings of Persia are said to have had the hem of their Robes adorned like that of the Jewish High-Priest, with Pomegranates and gold Bells [r]. The Arabian Ladies who are about the King's Person [s], who serve and divert him, have little gold Bells fastened to their legs, their neck, and elbows, and when they dance, the motion of these Bells makes a very agreeable harmony. The Arabian Princesses [t] wear large hollow gold Rings, which are filled with little flints, that sound like little bells when they walk: Or they are large circles with little rings hung all round, and produce the same effect. These rings are open in in one place in the form of a crefcent, through which they get in the fmall of their legs. Befides thefe they have abundance of flat bobs fixed to the end of their hair, which is matted and hangs long behind; thefe make a noife as often as they ftir, and give notice that the Miftrefs of the houfe is going by, that fo the Servants in the family may behave themfelves refpectfully, and Strangers may retire, to avoid feeing the Perfon who is paffing.

[k] Herod. l. i. c. 181. [l] Strabo lib. xvi. [m] Diodor. Sicul. l. ii. [n] Joseph. l. ii. de Bello, c. 9. [o] Plin. l. xxxvi. c. 26. [p] Tacit. hist. l. v. [q] בליעל Belial absque jugo. [r] Tergum Scheni, in Esther vi. 10. [s] Traite des Caravannes par M. Bugeron, p. 83. [t] M. Darieux Coutumes des Arabes, c. 17. p. 265.

It was therefore in all probability with a defign of giving notice, that the High-Prieft was paffing by, that he too wore little Bells at the hem of his robe; or it was as it were a kind of publick notice that he was going into the Sanctuary. In the King of Perfia's Court no one entered the apartments without fome warning, not by knocking or even fpeaking, but by the found of fomething. Thus the High Prieft out of refpect did not knock as he went into the Sanctuary, but by the found of the little Bells faftened to the bottom of his robe, he in fome fort defired permiffion to enter, that the found of the Bells might be heard, and he not punifhed with death, fays Mofes. Judith xiv 8, 9.

As to the number of Bells worn by the High-Prieft, Authors are not agreed. Some fay there were twelve, others fifty, others fixty fix, fome again feventy two, and others fourfcore: but there is nothing certain in any of thefe fuppofitions; it depending on the fize which they were made of; for if they were fmall Bells, there might be a good many of them ufed in embellifhing the bottom of the High-Prieft's tunick.

There is frequent mention in the Scripture of Bells, which were fometimes made ufe of in the Temple. The figure of them is not known to us. The Hebrew [v] terms them Mizeloth, or Mizlothaim. They were of copper, the found of them was fharp, and heard at a great diftance. The Prophet Zachary fpeaks of Bells hung to the bridles of War-horfes, that thereby they might be accuftomed to noife. In that day, fays the Prophet, fhall there be upon the bridles of the horfes Holinefs unto the Lord. A horfe which had not been trained, nor ufed to wear Bells by the Greeks, was called one that had never heard the noife of Bells. The mules that were employed in the funeral pomp of Alexander the Great had at each jaw a gold Bell [w]. 1 Chron. xv. 19. Zach. xiv. 20.

BELLY, is often taken for Gluttony, The Cretians are always liars, evil beafts, flow bellies; and elfewhere, There are many whofe God is their Belly. And to the Romans, People of this fort ferve not the Lord Jefus but their own bellies. Tit. i. 12. Philip. iii. 19. Rom. xvi. 18.

Belly is ufed likewife for the heart, the bottom of the Soul. The words of a talebearer go down into the innermoft parts of the Belly, and wound the very bottom of the Soul. And in another place, The fpirit of man is the candle of the Lord fearching all the inward parts of the Belly. The Spirit of man is like the light of God, which penetrates the very bottom of the Soul. And again, Preferve the leffons of Wifdom, if thou keep it within thy Belly, in thy heart, it will not break out upon thy lips. Prov. xviii. 8. — xx. 27. — xxii. 18.

The Belly of Hell, the grave, or fome imminent danger of death. The Author of Ecclefiafticus fays, that he was delivered de altitudine ventris inferi; and Jonah that he cried to the Lord out of the Belly of Hell, from the bottom of the Sea, from the whale's Belly. Eccl. li. 7. Jonah ii. 3.

BELMA. The Book of Judith fpeaks of Belma, or Belmon, near the valley of Efdraelom. Judith. vii. 3.

BELMEN. Judith iv. 4. in the Greek mentions Belmen, the fame probably as Beel-main; perhaps Abel-main, of the Tribe of Naphtali, 2 Chr. xvi. 4. or Abel-mehira, as the Syriac reads it, Judith iv. 4. and vii. 3. So that Belmen, Belma, Belmaim and Abel-mehola may be all the fame place.

BELSHAZZAR, the Son of Evil-merodach, and Grandfon to the Great Nebuchadnezzar. This Prince made an entertainment for a thoufand of his moft eminent Courtiers, at which every one drank according to his Age [x]. The King overpowered with wine, commanded the gold and filver veffels to be produced before him, which Nebuchadnezzar his Grandfather brought from the Temple of Jerufalem, that he might drink out of them with his Wives, his Concubines, and the Grandees of his Court. They began therefore to drink and praife their falfe Gods; at that very inftant there was an appearance feen as it were of a man's hand and fingers, writing upon the wall of the King's hall over againft the candleftick. [y] Belfhazzar obferving this, was very much aftonifhed, made a great outcry, and commanded all the Diviners and Sages of Babylon to be fent for, in order to have that explained which was written on the wall. Dan. v. 1, 2, &c.

When they came the King promifed, that whoever fhould expound this writing, fhould be clothed with fcarlet, fhould wear a gold chain round his neck, and fhould be the third perfon of his Kingdom in place and power. The Magi could could comprehend nothing at all of this writing, which increafed the diforder and uneafinefs that the King was in and his whole Court. In the midft of this difturbance, the Queen Mother, Wife [a] to the late Nebuchadnezzar the Great, coming into the room of entertainment, told Belfhazzar, that there was one Daniel in his Dominions, who had more knowledge than all the Magi and Soothfayers of Chaldæa, and had given proofs of his fufficiency in the reign of Nebuchadnezzar. Hereupon the King immediately fent for him, and directed him, if he could, to interpret what was written on the wall, with an affurance, that he fhould have the third place in his Kingdom, fhould be clothed in fcarlet, and wear a gold chain about his neck. Daniel thanked him for the prefents which he mentioned, and promifed to perform what he required of him.

[v] מצלותים נחשת להשמיע [w] Vide Scholiaft: Ariftoph. in Ranis, & Etymologic. in κωδωνίζω; & Hen. Steph. in Thef. in [illegible]. [x] Diodor. Sicul. Bibl. l. xviii. [y] Belfhazzar afcended the Throne of Chaldea in the year of the world 3444. He made this great Entertainment in the year 3449. So that we allow him to have reigned but four years.

He reproached him with great freedom for his ingratitude to God, who had advanced him to the rank and authority of a Sovereign, and for his profanation of the Veffels which were confecrated to the Lord; then he faid, the writing is this, Mene, Tekel, Upharfin, which is to be thus interpreted, Mene God hath computed the days of thy reign, and hath appointed the end of it. Tekel, thou haft been weighed in the balance, and found light. Peres thy Kingdom is divided and given to the Medes and Perfians.

Daniel hereupon was clothed with fcarlet, had a gold chain put on, and was proclaimed the third perfon in the Kingdom: and that very night Belfhazzar was killed, and Darius the Mede fucceeded him in his Kingdom at the age of fixty two years. This is what we read in the fifth chapter of Daniel concerning Belfhazzar. But we are infinitely perplexed, when we attempt to reconcile profane Hiftory with the account of this particular in the facred Writings. It is generally believed, that Evil-merodach was fucceeded by Neriglifſor, and that Neriglifſor was fucceeded by Laborofoardoch; and that Belfhazzar is the fame as Nabonidas or Labynites. See our Comment upon Dan. v. 1. pages, 627, 628, 629, and 638. and the Difcourfe concerning the four great Monarchies prefixed to our Comment on Ifaiah, pages 57 and 58.

All the marks whereby Nabonidas is defcribed in Hiftory, agree with Belfhazzar. Herodotus [a] fays, that Nabonidas, otherwife called Labynites, was the laft King of Babylon, that he was not of Neriglifſor's or Laborofoardach's Family, but was the Son of the great Queen Nitocris. Belfhazzar in like manner is the laft King of the Chaldæans, Son to a King of Babylon, who can be no other than Evilmerodach. Daniel fomewhere calls Belfhazzar the Son of Nebuchadnezzar; but this is becaufe the Grandfons, in the ftile of the Hebrews have often the name of Sons given them. Laftly, Jeremiah fays expreſly, that all the nations fhall be fubject to Nebuchadnezzar his Son, and Grandfon, till the time fhall come when vengeance is to be taken on himfelf and his country. Dan. v. 2. Jerem. xxvii. 6, 7.

Xenophon [b] fays, that Cyrus took Babylon by ftratagem, having cut the channel of the Euphrates in feveral places: and diverted the Waters of it into ditches dug long before by Queen Semiramis; that his Army entred into the City by the channel of the river, and the gates through which it had a paffage into Babylon; that the whole City was then engaged in debauchery and joy, by reafon of fome Feftival which was that day celebrated; that the King of Babylon was put to death in his palace by the people belonging to Gadutas and Gobrias Babylonians, who had deferted to the party of the Medes, in order to revenge themfelves on the King of Babylon.

Berofus and Megafthenes [c] relate, that Nabonidas was attacked by Cyrus in the feventeenth year of his reign; Nabonidas gave him battle and loft it. He fled for fecurity with fome few of his troops to Borfippe. Cyrus by this means became mafter of Babylon, and having demolifhed the outward walls of it he marched directly to Borfippe; but Nabonidas did not think it proper to ftand a fiege, he furrendered therefore to Cyrus, who treated him with humanity, and gave him a retreat in Carmania, where he paffed the reft of his life. This doubtlefs is very different from what the Scripture tells us of Belfhazzar.

But what variety foever may be obferved in the different Hiftorians, the refult of their accounts is always this, that the Prophecies againft Babylon were for the moft part literally fulfilled at the death of Belfhazzar. This City was befieged by an Army compofed of Medes, Elamites, and Armenians, according to the Predictions of Ifaiah and Jeremiah, that the fords of the river fhould be feized, that confufion and difturbance fhould prevail throughout the City, that the braveft of the inhabitants fhould be in a confternation, that the river Euphrates fhould be made dry, and the City taken in a time of rejoicing, that its Princes, Sages and Captains fhould be overwhelmed with drunkennefs, and pafs from a natural to an eternal fleep, out of which they never fhould awake, that the City which was formerly Is. xiii. 17. xxi. 2. Jerem. l. 11, 27, 28, 29, 30. Jerem. l. 38. li. 36. Jerem. li. 39, 57.

[a] Vide Origen. & Theodoret. apud Hieronym. in Dan. v. [a] Herodot. l. i. [b] Xenoph. Cyroped. l. 7.
[c] Berof. apud Joseph. l. i. contra Appian. p. 1045. & Megafthen. apud Eufeb. Præpar. l. ix. c. 41.

formerly so beautiful, so powerful, and so Isaiah xiv. 23. flourishing, should become a dwelling for bitterns and birds of bad omen.

II. BELSHAZZAR, one of the wise men who came to worship Jesus Christ at Bethlehem, is called by this name: but we have no proof that any one of them was so denominated.

Dan. i. 7. BELTESHAZZAR. The name given Daniel at the court of Nebuchadnezzar.

BELUS. See Bel or Beleus.

BELZEPHON or Belsephon. See Baal-zephon.

BEMESELIS, otherwise Bethome, a city subdued by Demetrius King of Syria. Compare Josephus de Bello, l. i. c. 3. & Antiq. l. xiii. c. 22.

BEN-ABINADAB, governor of the country of Dor, married Taphath, the daughter of Solomon. 1 Kings iv. 11.

I. BENAIAH, the Son of Jehoiada, Captain of David's guard. He took the 2 Sam. xxiii. 20. two lions of Moab, that is to say, the two cities of Ar or Ariel, or the city Ar *, divided in two by the river Arnon. He killed also a lion that had fall'n into a pit in a time of great snows. He fought a giant five cubits high, armed with sword and spear, tho' he had a staff only in his hand, and left him dead upon the spot. He adhered to Solomon's party against Adonijah, was sent by 1 Kings i. 36. ii. 29. Solomon to kill Joab, and was made Generalissimo in his place.

II. BENAIAH, or Bananias, the Son of Pahath-Moab. After his return from Ezra x. 30. Babylon, separated from his wife, whom he had married against the Law.

III. BENAIAH, the Son of Banai, and Benaiah the Son of Parosh, both Jews, who left their wives after their return from the Captivity, because they had married them contrary to the Law. Ezra x. 25 & 35.

BEN-DEKAR, Governor of the cities of Makaz Shaalbim, Bethshemesh, Elon and Bethanan, in the reign of Solomon. 1 Kings iv. 9.

BENE-BERAK, a city in the Tribe of Josh. xix. 54. Dan. The Vulgate makes two cities of it, Bane and Barak.

I. BENEDICTION. The Hebrews under this name often understand the presents which friends make to one another; in all probability because they are generally attended with blessings and compliments, both from those who give, and those who receive them. See Gen. xxxiii. 11. Jos. xv. 19. 1 Sam. xxv. 27. xxx. 26. 2 Kings v. 15, &c.

III. BENEDICTIONS. Solemn Blessings, given the people by the Priests in certain ceremonies; for example, Moses says to Numb. vi. 23. &c. Aaron the High-Priest, On this wise shall ye bless the children of Israel, saying unto them, The Lord bless thee and keep thee, the Lord make his face to shine upon thee, and be gracious unto thee, the Lord lift up his countenance upon thee, and give thee peace. He pronounced these words standing, with a loud voice, and hands elevated and extended. The Prophets also, and inspired men, frequently blessed the Servants of God, and People of the Lord: The Psalms are full of Benedictions of this nature. The Patriarchs on their death-bed blessed their children and families. God Gen. xxvii. 49. ordains, that upon the arrival of the people Deut. xxxiii. of Israel in the promis'd land, the whole Tob. vii. 7. multitude should be convened between the mountains of Ebal and Gerizim, and that Deut. xi. 26, 29. &c. blessings should be published on mount Gerizim, for those who should observe the xxvii. Laws of God, and curses on mount Ebal xxviii. against the violators of these Laws. This was executed by Joshua, after he had conquered part of the land of Canaan. See Jos. viii. 30, 31. the article Ebal.

III. BENEDICTION, signifies likewise abundance; He that soweth sparingly shall 2 Cor. ix. 6. reap sparingly; and he who soweth with benediction, shall reap with benediction, with abundance. And again, I exhorted the bre- Job vi. 5. thren that they would go before unto you, and make up before hand your blessing, that it may be, as it really is, a blessing and not Gen. xlix. 25. of covetousness: And Jacob wishes his Son Joseph the blessings of heaven above, or rain and dew in abundance, blessing of the deep that lieth under, or water from the springs, blessings of the breasts and of the womb, fruitful women and cattle. And the Psalmist, Thou fillest all things living with Psal. cxlv. 16. benediction, with abundance of thy benefits.

IV. BENEDICTION, Valley of Blessing. A place situated in the Tribe of Judah, near the Dead-sea and En-geddi. It was called the Valley of Berachah, or Blessing, after the miraculous Victory which Jehosaphat obtained over the confederated army of the Ammonites, Moabites and Edomites, 2 Chron. xx. 23, &c. in the year of the world, 3108. before J. C. 892. before the vulgar Æra 896.

BEN-GABER, the Son of Gaber, of the Tribe of Manasseh; he possessed the cities of Jair, and all the region of Argob, beyond the river Jordan. 1 Kings iv. 13.

I. BEN-HADAD, Son of Tabrimon King of Syria; he came to the assistance of Asa King of Judah, against Baasha King of Israel; and obliged Baasha to return and succour his own country, and abandon Ramah, which he had undertaken to fortify. 1 Kings xv. 18. This happened in the year of the world 3066. before the vulgar Æra 938. This Ben hadad is probably Hadad the Edomite, 1 Kings xi. 25. who rebelled against Solomon at the end of this Prince's reign.

II. BENE-

* In the Hebrew we read שני אראל, Schene Ariel, two lions, as the Author observes. The word El in composition with Ari, signifies a Lion of God, or a very strong lion; as by the Cedars of God are meant very tall Cedars.

[1 Kings xx. 34. Ibid. per totum.]

II. Ben-hadad, King of Syria, Son of that Ben-hadad we have been fpeaking of, made war againft Ahab King of Ifrael, in the year of the world 3103. that is to fay, feven and thirty years after the war of Ben-hadad I. againft Baafha King of Ifrael. We have difcourfed very particularly of this war, under the article Ahab. Ben-hadad was defeated, and loft all his baggage. His generals told him, that the God of the Hebrews was the God of the mountains, and that if he intended to fubdue this people, he muft fet a new army on foot, and attack them in the plain. Ben-hadad purfued this advice, and in the beginning of the year following came to Aphek with a powerful army. Ahab took the field likewife, with his troops; both armies were feven days in fight of each other, without coming to blows: At laft, on the feventh day they engaged, and the Ifraelites killed an hundred thoufand of Ben-hadad's people; and the remainder of his army endeavouring to fecure themfelves in Aphek, the walls of the city fell upon them, and crufhed to death feven and twenty thoufand more. Ben-hadad concealed himfelf in the moft private part of his palace, to prevent his falling into the hands of Ahab.

[In the Year of the World 3103, & 3104. before the vulgar Æra 900, and 901.]

Then Ben-hadad's fervants faid to him, we are inform'd that the Kings of Ifrael are mild and merciful, let us therefore put fackcloth on our loins, and ropes about our necks, and beg our lives of king Ahab. They went to him therefore, and faid, thy fervant Ben-hadad fent us to ask life of thee: If he is yet alive, faid Ahab, he is my brother, Go, bring him to me. Ben-hadad being come, Ahab obliged him to get up into his chariot, and the king of Syria faid to him, I will reftore the cities which my Father took from thy Father, and thou fhalt make ftreets for thee in Damafcus, as my Father made in Samaria, and give me liberty. Ahab accepted thefe conditions and let him go. Hereupon God fent a Prophet to him, to reprove him for thus giving a wicked Prince his liberty; and Ahab, tranfported with indignation, imprifoned the Prophet, and laughed at his predictions.

[In the Year of the World 3115. 2 Kings vi. 8. & feq.]

About twelve years after, the fame Ben-hadad declared war againft Jehoram, the Son and fucceffor of Ahab; but the Prophet Elifha difcovered all Ben-hadad's defigns to Jehoram, and thereby difappointed them. Ben-hadad fufpected fome treachery in his officers, but he was told, that all his projects were revealed by Elifha, to his enemy. He refolved therefore to lay hold of Elifha, and underftanding that he was at Dothan, he fent fome of his beft troops to inveft the city, and feize him, but the Peophet ftruck them with blindnefs, fo that they were not able to diftinguifh him when he fpake to them, and was in their company. He led them as far as to Samaria before they perceived any thing of it, and when they were there, he prayed to God to open their eyes, and defired Jehoram to furnifh them with provifions, and difmifs them without offering any violence to them.

Some years after, when Ben-hadad befieged Samaria, the famine was fo extremely great in the place, that the head of an afs, which the Hebrews look upon to be an unclean fort of food, was fold for fourfcore fhekels, and about a pint of a particular kind of peafe [a] for five fhekels: in fhort matters were at fuch a pafs, that a certain mother eat her own child. Jehoram being informed of thefe calamities, attributed them to Elifha, and fent orders to put him to death; but before his people could get into the Prophet's houfe, he came thither himfelf; and Elifha foretold, that the next day about the fame hour, a meafure of fine flour would be fold at the gate of Samaria for a fhekel, which accordingly happened; for in the night-time a panick fear fpread through the Syrian army: They imagined that Jehoram had procured an army of Hittites and Egyptians to come to his affiftance, and leaving their horfes, tents, and provifions, they thought of nothing more than of faving themfelves by flight.

[In the year of the World 3119, before J. C. 881. before the vulgar Æra 885.]

[2 Kings vii.]

Four lepers, who were without the city, their difeafe not allowing them to dwell with other men, ventur'd into the Syrian camp, and finding it to be deferted, and withal obferving it to abound with all forts of riches, they gave notice of it to Jehoram. The King immediately rofe, for it was night, but thought the Syrians defigned only to infnare him; he fent people therefore to make what difcoveries they could, and they reported, that all the way they went, they found cloaths and arms which the Syrians had thrown away, that they might be more expeditious in their flight. As foon as this news was confirmed, the people of Samaria went out, and pillaged the Syrian camp; then was feen the perfect completion of Elifha's prediction who had faid, that a meafure of fine flour fhould be fold at the gate of Samaria for a fhekel.

The next year, Elifha being gone fomewhere towards Damafcus, Ben-hadad, who was then fallen fick, fent Hazael with prefents to meet the Man of God, and learn from him, whether there were hopes of

[Year of the World 3120, before J. C. 880, before the vulg. Æra of 884. 2 Kings viii. 7, 8, & feq.]

[a] The Vulgate tranflates the Hebrew, חרי יונים, pigeons dung, Bochart fuppofes it to mean a fort of pulfe of the nature of Chich-peafe, Bochart de Animal. facr. t. 2. l. i. c. 7. art. 7.

of his recovery. Hazael departed therefore from Damascus with forty camels loaded with the most valuable things that were to be procured in that City, and told Elisha, Ben-hadad, thy Son, King of Syria, would be glad to know of thee, whether he shall recover of his illness. Elisha answered, Go, tell him, Thou mayest certainly recover, however the Lord hath shewed me, that he shall surely die. At the same time Elisha foretold to Hazael, that he should himself reign at Damascus, and would do infinite mischief to Israel. Hazael therefore returning to Damascus, told Ben-hadad, that his health would be restored; but the next day he took a thick cloth, which he dipp'd in water, then spread it over the King's face and stifled him. After which he took possession of the Kingdom, and reigned at Damascus according to the prediction of Elisha. Such was the end of Ben-hadad.

2 Kings xiii. 3, 24, 25. In the year of the World 3168.

III. BEN-HADAD, the Son of Hazael, whom we have been speaking of. Jehoash King of Israel recovered all from Ben-hadad, that Hazael had taken from Jehoahaz King of Israel, his Predecessor. Jehoash beat him three several times, and compell'd him to surrender all the Country beyond Jordan, that is to say, the lands belonging to Gad, Reuben, and Manasseh, which Hazael had made himself master of in the foregoing reigns.

Josephus [d] calls these two last Princes Hadad, who in Scripture have the name of Ben hadad, or Son of Hadad; and adds that [e] the Syrians of Damascus paid divine honours to the last Hadad, and Hazael in consideration of the benefits of their Government, and particularly because they adorn'd the City of Damascus with magnificent Temples. They carried their Statues every day in procession, and boast of their Antiquity, tho' they are by no means ancient, and it is not eleven hundred years from their time to ours, says Josephus. But according to our Chronology, from the death of the second Ben-hadad and beginning of Hazael's reign, to the Death of Jesus Christ, there are not above nine hundred and seventeen years.

BEN-HAIL, was one of those whom Jehoshaphat sent to the several cities of his Dominions, in order to instruct the people, and recover them from Idolatry. 2 Chr. xvii. 7.

Josh. xv. 8. 2 Kings xxiii. 10.

BEN-HENNON, or Ben-hinnon, or Geh-hinnon, or Geh-bene-hinnon, the Valley of the Children of Hinnon. It lay South East of Jerusalem [f]. Some say it was the Sink to Jerusalem, and an emblem of Hell; for which reason Hell is called Gehenna, derived from Gehennon the Valley of Hinnon. See Gehenna. This Valley was likewise called Tophet. See under the name of Tophet.

BEN-HESED, was Governor of Sochoh and the Canton of Hepher, in the reign of Solomon. 1 Kings iv. 10.

BEN-HUR, was Governor of the Province of Ephraim in the reign of Solomon. 1 Kings iv. 8.

Genes. xxxv. 16, 17, &c.

BEN-JAMIN, the youngest Son of Jacob and Rachel. Jacob being upon his journey from Mesopotamia, as he was proceeding Southward with Rachel in his company, she was surprized with the pains of child-bearing, about a quarter of a league from Bethlehem [g], and died after the delivery of a Son, whom with her last breath she named Ben-oni, that is to say, the Son of my sorrow. But Jacob changed this name, and called him Ben-jamin, the Son of my right hand. He is often called in Scripture Jemini only, that is my right hand.

Genes. xlii. xliii.

During the great famine which laid waste the land of Canaan and the Countries round about, Jacob having sent his Sons into Egypt to buy corn there, kept Benjamin at home, to be a comfort to him, and to prevent any misfortune, which might happen to him in the way. Joseph knew very well his Brethren, tho' they did not discover who he was, and seeing Benjamin was not among them, he enquired in a very artificial manner, whether he were living, and would give them no corn but upon condition they would bring him to him; and for the better security of their promise, detained Simeon in custody till their return. Jacob with all the uneasiness in the world at last permitted Benjamin to undertake this journey; the extremities he was reduced to by famine, and the sollicitations of his Sons with great difficulty prevailed; he committed him therefore to their care, and they set out for Egypt.

Gen. xliii. 16, 17, &c.

Joseph seeing Benjamin with the rest of his Brethren, carried them to his house, made them eat with him, but not at his own table, because he was not willing to discover himself as yet to them, nor that the Egyptians should eat with the Hebrews. Joseph appointed his Brethren to be placed according to their age, and in the distribution which he made of the meat he sent to them, took care that Benjamin's portion should be five times larger than that of any of the rest. After this, Joseph, as a trial of their fidelity and friendship for their Brother Benjamin, commanded his Steward to fill their sacks with corn, and in that belonging to the youngest

Gen. xliv. 1, 2, 3, &c.

[d] Antiq. l. viii. c. 8. & l. ix. c. 2. [e] Idem l. ix. p. 306. [f] Vide Euseb. ad vocem Γαι ἐννόμ.
נא הננום Geh-hennon. נאבני הנום [g] בן אוני Ben-oni. בן ימין Ben-jamin.

youngest of them, to put the silver cup which he made use of, and the money which Benjamin brought to pay for the quantity of corn he was to purchase. This order was executed; and when Joseph's Brethren were gone out of the City, he sent his Steward after them; who reproached them with robbery, and told them they had carried off his Lord's cup with them. They excused themselves, and declar'd that they were with all their hearts consenting, that he who should appear to be guilty of this theft, should immediately be put to death, and that the rest should become Joseph's Slaves. The Steward answered, that he had to do with him only, who had committed this fact, and for the rest, they were at liberty to pursue their journey.

At the same time he searched all the sacks, and in that of Benjamin the cup was found. Then they rent their clothes, and returned to the City. Joseph reproached them with their treachery; and Judah said what he could to excuse it. He conjured Joseph to detain him as his slave in the room of his Brother; told him, that their Father was an old Man, and would never be able to survive the loss of his Son; that moreover he had charged himself with him, and was to be responsible for him. Hereupon Joseph could no longer contain his tears, revealed himself to them, fell on
Gen. xlv. Benjamin's neck and kissed him, and all his Brethren after him. He invited them to come and settle in Egypt, and bring their Father thither. He gave to each of them two suits of raiment, that is to say, two coats and two cloaks, but to Benjamin five suits, with three hundred pieces of silver. He gave them likewise presents for his Father, and so dismissed them, recommending peace and union to them.

From this time the Scripture says nothing particularly of Benjamin's person; for that I count for nothing which is related in the Testament of the twelve Patriarchs, which, as is very well known, is an apocryphal piece and of no authority.
Gen. xlix. 27. Jacob on his death-bed says to Benjamin; Benjamin shall ravin as a wolf, in the morning he shall devour the prey, and at night he shall divide the spoil. And Moses in Deut. xxxiii. 12. his last Song says of Benjamin, The beloved of the Lord shall dwell in safety by him; and the Lord shall cover him all the day long, and he shall dwell between his shoulders. These words, Benjamin is a ravening wolf, are generally explained either of S. Paul, who was of the Tribe of Benjamin, or of the valour of those, belonging to this Tribe, who carried on a War against all the other Tribes, in defence of the crime committed by the inhabitants of Gibeah, that violated the Levite's Wife, as she passed through their City.

BENJAMIN of Tudela, a celebrated Jew, originally of the Kingdom of Naples, and a native of Tudela; he lived in the twelfth Century. He travelled to all places where he thought that there were Synagogues, in order to make himself acquainted with the state of his Nation. After he had employed many years in his travels, he returned to France in the reign of Lewis the Young, and in 1173 went to Castile, where he died the same year. He has written an account of his travels, wherein we find several particulars relating to the Jewish Nation; but he is very unaccurate, a bad Geographer, and oftentimes a fabulous Historian. Notwithstanding which he is very proper to give us a general idea of the Jews and their condition, as well in the East as West, during the twelfth Century. He is reproached with very strong prejudices in favour of his Nation. His work was first of all printed in Hebrew at Constantinople in the year 1543. Arias Montanus translated it into Latin, and had it printed at Antwerp in 1575. Constantine L'Empereur has since re-printed it with Annotations at Leyden in 1633. See Fabricius de Apocryphis veteris Testamenti p. 1168. and a Criticism of this Author by M. Basnage, in his History of the Jews, tom. iii. l. v. c. 6. p. 111, &c. of the Paris Edition.

BENONI, the Son of my Sorrow. This is the name which Rachel gave her Son, who was called Benjamin by Jacob. Gen. xxxv. 18.

BEON-ZOHETH, the Son of Ishi. 1 Chr. iv. 20.

BEON, Numb. xxxii. 3. otherwise Bean 1 Macc. v. 4, 6. a City beyond Jordan, Eusebius says it belonged to the Tribe of Reuben. Euseb. ad Βαιάν.

BEOR, the Father of Bela King of Dinhabah in Edom. Genes. xxxvi. 32.

BERA, King of Sodom, lived in the time of Abraham. This Prince was tributary to Chedorlaomer King of Elam. We do not know by what accident this King of Elam, who was so remote from Palestine, subdued the Kings of Pentapolis. But however this might be, Bera and four other Kings of the neighbouring Cities supported probably by the people round about them, shook off the yoke of the Elamites. Chedorlaomer having entred into a confederacy with three other Kings, came and attacked Sodom, Gomorrah, Admah, Zeboïm, and Zobar, took, plundered them, and carried off the spoil as far as Hobak, a little beyond the springs of Jordan. Abraham pursued, overtook, and dispersed them, recovered the booty, and restored to Bera, and the other Kings of Pentapolis, what had been taken from them. This Gen. xiv. is the first War, whereof there is any express mention in the Scripture. It happened in

in the year of the world 2092, before J. C. 1908, before the vulgar Æra 1912.

II. Bera, or rather Beera. Eusebius places a City of this name at eight miles distance from Eleutheropolis, towards the North. See Beer.

BERÆA, or Beroe, a City of Macedonia, where S. Paul preached the Gospel with great Success. Acts xvii. 10, 13.

BERED, a City in the Tribe of Judah situated in the neighbourhood of Kadesh. The Chaldee calls it Agara the Syriac, Gedar, the Arabic Jader. It is the same perhaps as Arad or Arada *, mentioned Numb. xxxiv. 4. in the Southern part of Judah.

I. BERENICE, the Daughter of Agrippa, firnamed the Great, King of the Jews, and Sister to young Agrippa, King also of the Jews. She was first of all betrothed to Mark the Son of Alexander Lysimachus, Alabarch of Alexandria; afterwards she married Herod King of Chalcis, her own Uncle by the Father's side [h].

The death of Herod King of Chalcis happened in the year of J. C. 48. After the death of Herod a proposal was made with her consent to Polemon King of Pontus, and part of Cilicia, that upon condition he would be circumcised, she would marry him. Polemon accepted this offer, and the match was consummated. But Berenice did not continue long with him. She returned to her Brother Agrippa, with whom she lived after such a manner, as made all the world talk of her †. She was one day present with her Brother Agrippa, and heard the discourse which S. Paul made Acts xv. 13—25. before Festus at Cæsarea of Palestine. Titus the Son of Vespasian had a friendship for Berenice, and Vespasian himself made her large presents [i].

II. Berenice. Many are of opinion, that this is the name of a Holy Lady, commonly called Veronica, who presented her handkerchief to our Saviour, as he was going to Mount Calvary; he wiped his face with it, and imprinted his picture upon it. This is believed to be the very image preserved at Rome, and called the Holy Face, or the Veronica. All that has been published hitherto concerning Veronica, as her journey with S. Martial to Gaul, and afterwards to Rome to see S. Peter; and lastly her return to Bourdeaux to S. Martial, never seemed to deserve much credit with understanding Criticks. There are some who believe, that there never was any Berenice or Veronica that received the impression of our Saviour's Face upon her handkerchief, and that the Veronica, as it is called, is only Vera Icon, the true Image, which some imprudently have made a person, whom others of the moderns have ranked among the Saints, and observe her Festival on the fourth day of February, or upon other days. But she is not inserted in the Roman Martyrology, tho' it is pretended that she died at Rome. Some will have it, that this is she, who in some places is honoured under the corrupt name of S. Venice [k].

BERESCHITH. This is the name, which the Hebrews give the book of Genesis, because it begins with the word Bereschith §, which in Hebrew signifies [l], In the Beginning *⁎.

BERI, the Son of Zophah, of the Tribe of Asher. 1 Chr. vii. 36.

BERIA, the Son of Asher, and Father of Heber and Malchiel. Gen. xlvi. 17. The Family of the Beriites so called from him. Numb. xxvi. 44.

BERITH or Baratres, a City of Phœnicia, lying upon the Mediterranean, between Biblos and Sidon, four hundred furlongs Northward from this last City [m].

It is a question whether the Scripture speaks at all of this place. Some are of opinion, that the God Berith, taken notice of above by us, under the name of Baalberith, was worshipped here, and gave this City its appellation; others derive it from Beroe, the Daughter of Venus and Adonis, who was the Deity most honoured in this Country; others again think the word Berith comes from Bearoth, Wells or Springs. There are more Cities than one of this name in Palestine. David carried 2 Sam.
off a great deal of brass from the towns of viii. 8.
Betah and Berothac in Syria.

BERODACH BALADAN, the Son of Baladan King of Babylon. He sent Ambassadors to Hezekiah King of Judah with [h] Antiq. l. xx. c. 5. p. 693. [i] Tacit. l. ii. Hist. c. 81. [k] See Bolland. 4. Februar. & M. de Tillemont. tom. i. Hist. Eccles. not. 33. in J. C. p. 471. [l] בראשית In Principio. [m] Strabo. l. xvi.

* In the Hebrew Text it is חצר־אדר, in the Vulgate ad Villam Adar. Our English Translation keeps to the Original, and renders it Hazar-Addar.

† Juvenal takes notice of this incestuous commerce between the Brother and the Sister. Satyr. VI. v. 156.

Deinde Adamas notissimus, & Berenices
In digito factus pretiosior: hunc dedit olim
Barbarus; incestæ dedit hunc Agrippa Sorori.

§ Solomon Meir, a celebrated Cabbalist, who became a Convert to Christianity, undertaking to explain the motives of his Conversion to David an eminent Jew called Il Duca delli Ebrei, took the first word of Genesis Bereschith for his Text, and in this discovered all the Mysteries of Christianity. Bereschith is likewise the name given to the second Part of the Cabbala, which includes the study and contemplation of this sublunary World; as the first Part called Mercava relates to the knowledge of God's Perfections, and of heavenly Intelligences. Maimonides More Nevochim, c. xxxix. p. 273.

*⁎ Rabbi Nachmenides, who was Head or President of the Academy of Sora, and died in 322, wrote a Comment upon the first Book of Moses, containing the History of the holy Land, together with the literal and mystical sense of this Book. It was called Bereschith Rabba, but it is to be distinguished from another work of the same name, which is a Comment on Judah the Holy's Mishnah composed by one of his Disciples.

2 Kings xx. 1, 2, 3, &c. In the Year of the World 3292, before J. C. 708, before the vulgar Æra 712. with letters and presents, upon receiving information, that he had been sick, and was recovered in a miraculous manner, the Sun or at least the shadow of it, with drawing ten lines backward to confirm the truth to him of Isaiah's promises; who assured him that his health would be restored, and he live fifteen years longer. Hezekiah was extremely pleased with the arrival of these Ambassadors; and shewed them all that was rich and beautiful in his Palace. God disapproved of his conduct in this particular, and sent Isaiah to tell him, that every thing in his Palace, and all the riches which he and the Kings his Predecessors had amassed together, with the sight whereof he had entertained these foreigners, would be carried to Babylon.

BEROSUS, the Babylonish Historian, was by nation a Chaldean, and Priest of Belus, the God of Babylon. Tatian[n] says, he lived in the time of Alexander the Great, and that he dedicated his work to King Antiochus, the third after Alexander, that is to say, to Antiochus Theus; for Seleucus Nicanor was the first King of Syria, Antiochus Soter the second, and Antiochus Theus the third. If any would include Alexander the Great in the number of the three, it would be necessary to say, that Berosus lived under Antiochus Soter; and indeed the many years elapsed between Alexander and Antiochus Theus (for some reckon 64 from the death of Alexander to the first year of Antiochus Theus) might induce one to believe, that in reality we should understand it in this sense. But let this be as it will, Berosus having learned the Greek tongue, went first to the Isle of Cos[o], where he set up a School, and taught Astronomy and Astrology; from thence he came to Athens, where he acquired so much reputation by his astrological predictions, that in the Gymnasium, where the youth performed their exercises, a Statue with a golden tongue was erected for him. Josephus[p] and Eusebius have preserved some excellent fragments of Berosus's History, which give great light to many places in the Old Testament, and without which it would be difficult to produce an exact Series of the Kings of Babylon.

BEROTH. See 2 Sam. viii. 8. a City conquered by David. This is probably Beroe of Syria, or Berytus in Phœnicia, otherwise called Baruth.

Ezek. xlvii. 16. 2 Sam. viii. 8. BEROTHAH or Berothai, between Hethalon and Emesa, is perhaps Berytus or Beroth, which David obtained by conquest from Hadadezer King of Syria.

BERSABA, a town in Galilee. It lay to the South of upper Galilee, and to the North of lower Galilee[q]. Josephus the Historian procured this town to be repaired and fortified.

BERYL, the eighth Stone belonging to the High-Priest's Pectoral. The Vulgate and the Septuagint call it Beryl, and the Hebrew, Jasphe. It has been already observed, that the proper signification of the Hebrew names of precious stones was for the most part unknown to the Hebrews and the Commentators. Exod. xxviii. 20.

BESARA or Bezara, a City in the neighbourhood of Ptolemaïs twenty furlongs from Gibeah[r].

BESETHA, one of the mountains on which the City of Jerusalem was built. It lay on the North side with respect to the Temple[s].

BESIMOTH, the same with Beth-Jesimoth beyond Jordan.

BESIRA, the same as the Well of Sirah mentioned in the second book of Samuel. Josephus places Besira[t] at twenty furlongs, or seven leagues distance from Hebron. 2 Sam. iii. 26.

BESODEIAH, the Father of Meshullam. Nehem. iii. 6.

BESOR, or Bosor, a Brook which falls into the Mediterranean, between Gaza and Rhinocorura; or rather between Rhinocorura and Egypt, according to S. Jerom, on the sixth Chapter of Amos. This is the brook of the wilderness, which many have taken unadvisedly for the brook or river of Egypt, which is spoken of in some places of Scripture, and is no other than the Nile, or the most Eastern branch of this river. Amos vi. 14. Josh. xv. 4, 47. 2 Chron. vii. 8.

BETAH, or Beten, a City of Syria, taken by David from Hadadezer. It is the same possibly with Beten, which Joshua sets down as belonging to the Tribe of Asher; or Bathne in Syria, between Beræa and Hierapolis. 2 Sam. viii. 8. Josh. xix. 25.

BETHABARA. At this place beyond Jordan S. John the Baptist baptized. The Latin Text of S. John instead of Bethabara reads Bethania; but the true reading is Bethabara, as Origen[v], S. Chrysostom[w], and Epiphanius[x] observe. Bethabara, which in Hebrew signifies the House of Passage, is thought to be the place where the Israelites passed the river Jordan under Joshuah, and that there was the common ford of this river. John i. 28.

BETHACAD, a village fifteen miles from Legio, in the great plain[y].

BETH-ACHARA, or Beth-haccerim, Jerem. vi. 1. a City situated on an eminence between Jerusalem and Tekoa. Malchiah the Jerem. vi. 1.

[n] Tatian. contra Gentes. [o] Vitruv. l. ix. c. 7. [p] Plin. l. vii. c. 37. [q] Joseph l. iii. de Bello, c. 2. & lib. ii. c. 25. & lib. de Vita sua, p. 1015. [r] Lib. de Vita sua. [s] Joseph. de Bello, l. vi. c. 10. p. 919. [t] Joseph. Antiq. l. vii. c. 1. [v] Origen. in Joan. Tom. VIII. [w] Chrysost. Homil. 16. in c. 1. Joan. [x] Epiphan. l. ii. contra hæres. p. 435. [y] Euseb. in locis.

the Son of Rechab, was Prince of Bethacara. Nehem. iii. 14.

BETH-AGABRA, or methogabri, or Bethogabria. Peutinger's Tables place Bethogabri between Askelon and Jerusalem. Ptolemy puts down Bethogotria at 65⅙. degree of latitude, and the 31⅙ of longitude. Josephus [z] fixes Begabris in the midst of Idumæa. William of Tyre says, that the Arabians called Beersheba, Bethgabril, and that it was twelve miles from Askelon. Benjamin tells us, that Bethgaberin is five parasangs from Hebron, and is the same as Maresa; and the acts of S. Ananias place it in the territory of Eleutheropolis. All these characters joined together, determine us to set it down between Eleutheropolis and Hebron.

BETHANATH, a city in the Tribe
Jos. xix. 38. of Naphtali.

John xi. 18. BETHANY, was fifteen furlongs, or about two miles from Jerusalem, at the foot of the Mount of Olives, eastward of Jerusalem, on the way from Jericho to Jerusalem. There it was that Martha and Mary dwelt with their brother Lazarus, whom Jesus Christ rais'd from the dead. There it was likewise, that Mary pour'd out the perfume upon our Saviour's Head. We have already taken notice in the article of Bethabara, that the Latin copies of S. John, ch. i. 28. read Bethania instead of Bethabara. See Suidas on Bethania; several Greek as well as Latin copies are in this place altered.

BETHANIM, a village four miles from Hebron, and two from Abraham's turpentine tree [a].

BETH-ARABAH, a city belonging to the Tribe of Judah, Joshua. xv. 6. and afterwards given to that of Benjamin. Joshua xviii. 22.

Jos. xiii. 27. Numb. xxxii. 36. BETHARAN, or Beth-haram, or Betharamphta, afterwards called Livias, beyond the Jordan, towards the Dead-sea. Antiq. l. xviii. c. 3.

BETHAVEN, the same as Bethel. After Jeroboam the Son of Nebat had set up his golden calves at Bethel, the Hebrews, who were in the interest of the house of David, in derision called this city Beth-aven [b]; that is to say, the house of nothing, or the house of iniquity, instead of Bethel, the House of God, the name which Jacob formerly gave it, when he had the vision there of the mysterious Ladder, made use of by the Angels in ascending and dexxviii. 19. scending from Heaven to Earth. See hereafter Bethel.

BETH-BAAL-MEON. Joshua xiii. 17. The same as Baal-meon. Numb. xxxii. 37.

BETH-BARAH, a place beyond the river Jordan, Judg. vii. 24. It is probably the same as Bethabara, whereof we have before said something.

BETH-BASI, a city in the Tribe of Judah, which the two Maccabees, Simon and Jonathan fortified; and where Bacchides besieged them without any success. 1 Macc. ix. 62. 64.

BETH-CAR, a city in the Tribe of Dan, 1 Sam. vii. 11.

I. BETH-DAGON, a city in the Tribe of Asher, Josh. xix. 27. Beth-dagon signifies the house or temple of Dagon.

II. BETH-DAGON, a city in the Tribe of Judah; so called, in all probability, because there was a temple of Dagon there, before the Israelites possessed it. Jos. xv. 51.

BETHEKED or Beth-akad, which some construe in a general sense, to signify a Shearing-house, or the House of Shepherds binding Sheep [c]. But the Septuagint, and several good Interpreters, explain it to be a place situated between Jezreel and Samaria. It is the same perhaps as Bethker. 2 Kings x. 12, 14.

BETHEL, a city to the west of Hai, upon the confines of the Tribes of Ephraim and Benjamin. The Patriarch Jacob flying from the anger of his brother Esau, and going into Mesopotamia, arrived at sun-set in a certain place, where he had a mind to pass the night, and taking one of the stones that lay there, he placed it under his head and fell asleep. While he was thus sleeping, he dreamed that he saw a ladder, the bottom whereof rested on the Earth, and the top of it reached to Heaven, and Angels ascending and descending by this ladder. Upon the upper part of it he saw the Lord, said to him, I am the Lord, the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, I will give to you and your posterity, the land wherein you now are sleeping. Your generation shall be as numerous as the sea sand, and all nations shall be blessed in you, and in him who shall issue from you. I will be your Conductor wheresoever you go, and will bring you again into this land. Jacob waking after this vision, said, surely the Lord is in this place, and I knew it not; and he was afraid and said, how dreadful is this place? this is none other but the House of God, and this is the Gate of Heaven.

Gen. xii. 8. Gen. xxviii. 10, 11, 12. In the Year of the World 2245. before J. C. 1755. bef. for the vulg. Æra 1759.

He rose up therefore early in the morning, and took the stone which he had made his bolster, and set it up for a pillar, poured oil upon the top of it, and called the name of that place Bethel, the name whereof before was Luz; that is to say, the wilderness, wherein he passed the night, he called Bethel; and this was near a village named Luz, which the Hebrews called Bethel, when they made themselves masters

[z] De bello, l. v. c. 4.
[a] Euseb. ad vocem, 'Aρ.
[b] בית און, Bethaven, בית אל, Bethel. vid. Hos. iv. 15. v. 8. x. 5.
[c] Ita Vulg. in 2 Reg. x. 12.

1. The Mount of Olives.
2. The village of Bethphage.
3. Marthas house.
4. Mary Magdalens house.
5. The Castle of Lazarus.
6. Lazarus's Sepulchre.

A VIEW AND PLAN OF THE TOWN OF BETHANY.

7. The house of Simon y Leper.
8. The valley of y curs'd Fig tree.
9. The way to Jerusalem.
10. The Mountain Quarantania.
11. The celebrated river Jordan.
12. The Dead Sea.

[illegible]

' #!9 ' 0 ' - ' ' # ' * . . ' , ? '
0 % $'>% H % 1 ' ' '" #
% ' # "W # % ' , $ A ' ,
, # '/ 0 # $ ' $ % 4 . 5 % & ! _
% ' # % ' $ + & " * / / A !
- '" ' $ / % ' 4
+ , / ' ' A" " , , A . " # # ' *
/ ' % $ # ' +/ " . K
+ 9 # $ @ " % % 4 " 4 4
% + # # ' # / 9
>% % % .# V + " 1 ,9 # # #
(# $ # % $, % * #
$ # .# % V # * EJ % $
' @ " " / + # % ' $, , @ # $ +
/ # # ' , % % / # $ ' # .
& 0 / A" %
, . $.
& O 0 " / # % # * E
$ $ # , . 4 \ $ + 0 # & ! *
% # / + + . % + $!
, " 4 % # , . ?E
& A - 1 , 9 4 . & / ,
, 0 , 9 ' # 0 % ! " #
& A - 4 $ 3 " S E
% % H8 $ 5 =J 4 . # $ @ f $
& A - (* E + O % +
4 & , " . # + %
! 0 9 # " @ . E
& A : 1 & # ! 0 D ! ! _E O
& , " . . ! _E 1 ! S % +
% ' % # " '& ' # , * 4 + # 3 " "
T ? # # / # # (H'. # 0 'A
9;A * 4 $ *
0 / P
, 9 . $ $ 0 " # / # + * A
. / 0 " , , % % 3 "
/ # % . $ # , / # , " # , 3
1 % !! _D % # % , % #A
. + + # + +
& A (& # G / . 4
2 % . RH'N" 1 $ A + 0 # @ % #+
$ AGG N . W !0 L_ * 1 / # $ / 5 , 9
1 & A (, 9 , / $ *
$ 5 G # / , # & , . 4 # 5 3 "
. + # , . E * + # . 4
+/ $ * . . % $ * ?KA
$ $ & , O 1 " 3 $ #0 L 2
WQA # @ % 4 , / E
5 $ < , 4 & % 3 . 4
F ! # , ! 0 + # 0 & # - #
V /G , / % 1 0 #
* * ! + # 7 +# $ * 3
5 $ " 0 + " / , & / % / # , $ / $
, / + / , 0 U 3 E
$ + / # . & % . %
$ $ $ - # # , /
, / 3 1 * # & 3 "
+ # , + _KGWA " 0 % # + / $ "
/ % % , , $, #
+ , V , / . 4 % $ 4 4 / ,
% # $ + / 1 $
0 # / " " # 5 + *
3 " * % A % + 0 3 9 5
- #

f : " # 0 A T 8 @ + 8 , $ $ $ / :
> && . & , 7 4 * 8 $ 0 4 & $ CQ>
JD # 9 / N
M , . 4 % : 5 & 5 / $, 8 , (#

P. 267.

A VIEW OF THE CAVE IN BETHLEHEM WHERE OUR SAVIOUR WAS BORN.

[illegible]

& D' PJJ E <

4' #' ' ' ' ' 'Q ' ' 5& A && ' " , ' ' '
6, ' 0 ' , ' ' ' ' ' ' ' $ $ /' #))# !4' ('
' '% ' / ' ' $' 5 $ (!+ _ ' / '5 'A' ' ' $ ' ' $' L '
' & ' & ' $ ' " , , ' ' $* !' % #' ' ' ' # '
, ' ' ' U' ' '0 ' ' /
, ' ! ' ' JE : & A ' $ ' + '@ % '
& ' & ' $ ' ' ' " ` , ' ' $ ' ' " # * !/' & ' ' #'
, , ' ' , ' , ' , ' #' , @' ' "" ! ' ! ' _P ' " ' ' '
& ' " / ' $ ' % A' ' !' / # #' / + ' # ' ' ' $' 0 ($ '
' ' ' $ ' ' #' - ' , 9' ' ' ' 0 ' ' 0 ' $ ' % ' $ @ '
' ' ' ' , ' & ' 3 9' % ' #' % ' + / ' ' ' $ '
4' ' ' '& , ' ' 0 +' ` ' ' + / ' $ *#(! ' ' ' '% ' ' 0 #' , ' ' " ' ' ' $ 5' / # #' #' % ' ' / + ' ' $' 7
: ' '!! ' 9/ #' ' ' ' ' ' ' , / ' 1 ' !'9' # +' ' % ' $" / ' '
% ' # +' ' 4' % 0 ' ' A' ' , ' ' ' ' ' ' @ ' ' ! ' '
#' " ' ' / ' + / ' ' $' ' $ ' - + " ' " #' ' ' 1 ' '
% # '% ' '& ' ' ' ' ' ' ' ' # ' ' ' ' % ' % #' ' ' !A'
' ' ' ' / ' ' ## ' ' ' $ ' ' + ' 3 ' ! K H'
' / " " ' , ' % ' , / ' , '% ' ' ' ' 1$ ' 0 ' % ' ' ' ' '
#' ' % ' ' + #' ' ' / 4' ' ' 0 ' ' ' " # * !/' & ' $ '
' , ' 4' " ' , E ' " # * ! ' ' ' ' ' ' " # ! '
' ' , / ' ' / # #' ' / + ' ' $' 9' $ ' # +' ' ') " (! ' W '
. ')' ' . ' ' ' ' ' ' ' $' ' " # ! '% '$ # ' ' / " '
" ' #' / + ' , ' ' , 4' ' ' ' $ ' ' ' + ') $ ' ' ' % ' ' $' & ' ' . ' ! ' 7 +' '0 (#/' *# !' ' = ' 6
& A3 (& ' ' , 9 ' ' ` *# ' #' ' ' @ % ' ' $
' ' / #' ' ' $ ' ' ' ' / ' " ' ' 1 ' 6 , ' ! ' ' ' #' & ' $ '
' & , ' ' ' . 4' . ' !0 ' ' & ' @' ' $ #' #)# /' / ' ' " / + '
' ! ' N' ' & ' '% ' ' ' ' ' ' 0(/' ' _S ' #' #)# ' % ' ' `
% '% ' # #' / " ' ' ' & ' ' ' '% E #' ' ' ' " ' "" # !/' #' ' '
' , @ ' ' "" !' #' 0 $ *#(! ' ' + '
& A3 OO O ' ' ' ' '& , ' 0 ' ' Y/ ' , ' ' $ ' ' " # * !/
' '3 ' Q S! ! ' _J ' ' ' , ' A ' = ' ' +) !'
& A3 ' ' ' ' * ' + 0 ' 0 +' @ ' ' , # ' ' ('B '0 7
4 ' 0' ' & , ' ' " ' & ' ' - #' # ' / +' $' ' / " ' '% ' ' #7
D< '% '% " " #)# /' / ' ' , ' '0 0 = # '
& 3 - ' ' ' 0 + ' ' ' ? ' ' ' Q ' ' # ' ' '0 ' $ '
' ' ' ' ' / ' ' ' / 4 ' , % ' , E ' ' + ' #' ' ' ' , # ' #' A'
' #' . ' . 4' ' , +' .#' $' / , ' / # ' 5 0 ' '
$ ' ' $' , ' ' , ' $ ` @ ' ' '
$ # #' ' 4 ' " ' ' ' ' @' ' ' ' ' ' 1 ' & ' 6 ' , + ' '
' 22' A $ ' ' ' $ + ' $ @ ' / ' ' ' ' ' ' ' ' +' ' ' 3 ' ' #' ' ' & , ' ' ' . 9' 'Wi6' WW
@' / $ " ' ' ' & ' 1 ' 4KH' / ' ' ' ' $ ' : 'AXW>
' ' , % ' , ' #' 19' ' $' - 4 ' ' % #' ' '% ' '
: ' ! ' ' ' $ " / #' ' ' ' ' ' / + ' ' ' ') ? 4' ' 4' ' " ' @ ' J_'
'PA + ' / # #' #' ' 0 ' ' 0 ' " '1' % ' ' / #' # ' + / ' 9 ' ' 'W' & 3 ' ' ' ' ' ' ' & , ' ' # ' ' ! ' . , 9 . ' ' ' ' '
'& , ' J'. ' J' ' 0 ' & , ' ' ' . '9' , / ' ' ' ' ' ' '
& 14 ' & ' ' " ' ' " ' / ' 0 ' & ' 0 ' " ' ' + '% ' B 5f W
' ' . ' #' , T ' ' #' ' , 9' " #/ ' / ' ! ! 'DJ ' $ " #
' 1" @ +' ' ' ' ' ' A" ' ' ' % 'C) 4' 0 'S ' 9 4' '
1 ' ' $ @ ' ' ? ' / ' ' / ' " #' ' " ' ' , 9. . ' `
+' ' , ' '% ' 0 ' , 0 #' 0 ' / ' ' ' ' ' ' ' $ ' '
' ' ' , + +' ' '% # ' & ' 9. . ' ' + ' ' ' ' ' ' ' / '
' 1, $ ' % ' , 0 ' ' #' #' , ' ' / ' ' ' ' ' /
' 3 ' ' #' ' ' #' ' ' ' ' ' " ' ' '& , ' ' 3 ' #' 0(#' ' #`
' % / ' % ' % ' ' ' $ ' ' ' 9 ' $ ' ' ' ' ' # % ' 1, $ WW'
& ' P' ' ' ' '% ' ' / #' @' $ ' ' , + +' ' ' ' $ $ ' '
'% ' % ' , + ' " / #' / " ' ' ' & 'M - # $!' 0 +' ' ' , @'
' / A ' ' + ' @' ' ' ' ' ' ' ' ' @' ' ' (#' ' % ' 5, / + ' '
' / ' , + ' 1 ' / " ' ' / ' ' " ` # *# $ V' #' ' $ ' ' ' " " '
' ' % / ' ' 1, #' ' / # , +' # ' / ' ' @' % ' ' $ / ' >
/ '

W / ' , ' # ' ! ' 5 (, ' _ ' # ' ' ' / ' / $' , ' ! ! ' Y' ' D
' / ' , ' $ ' ' ' : ' " ' , ' # ' 0 ' ' / ' 9' W - +' ' "A_JDW
W % ' (+ ' . ' ' * ' " ' D

[illegible]

[illegible]

@ K% ' D : *

[illegible]

[illegible]

Genesis.
Exodus.
Leviticus.
Numbers.
Deuteronomy.
Joshua.
Judges and Ruth.
The first Book of Kings.
The second Book of Kings.
The third Book of Kings
The fourth Book of Kings.
The first Book of Chronicles.
The second Book of Chronicles.
The first Book of Esdras.
The second Book of Esdras, or Nehemiah, Tobit.
Judith.
Esther.
Job.
The Psalms.
The Proverbs.
Ecclesiastes.
The Song of Solomon.
The Book of Wisdom.
Ecclesiasticus.
Isaiah.
Jeremiah and Baruch.
Ezekiel.
Daniel.
Hosea.
Joel.
Amos.
Obadiah.
Nahum.
Jonah.
Micah.
Habakkuk.
Zephaniah.
Haggai.
Zechariah.
Malachi.
The first Book of Maccabees.
The second Book of Maccabees.

The Books of the New Testament, are

The Gospel of S. Matthew.
The Gospel of S. Mark.
The Gospel of S. Luke.
The Gospel of S. John.
The Acts of the Apostles.

The Epistles of S. Paul.

The Epistle of St. Paul to the Romans.
The first Epistle of S. Paul to the Corinthians.
The second Epistle to the Corinthians.
The Epistle to the Galatians.
———to the Ephesians.
———to the Philippians.
———to the Colossians.
The first Epistle to the Thessalonians.
The second Epistle to the Thessalonians.
The first Epistle to Timothy.
The second Epistle to Timothy.
The Epistle to Titus.
———to Philemon.
———to the Hebrews.

Catholick or general Epistles.

The Epistle of S. James.
The first Epistle of S. Peter.
The second Epistle of S. Peter.
The first Epistle of S. John.
The second Epistle of S. John.
The third Epistle of S. John.
The Epistle of Jude.
The Revelations of S. John.

Of the Apocryphal Books of the Bible.

The Apocryphal Books of the Old Testament are, the Book of Enoch, the third (Vid. Jude 14.) and fourth Books of Esdras, the third and fourth Books of the Maccabees, the Prayer of Manasseh, the Testament of the twelve Patriarchs, the Psalter of Solomon, and some other Pieces of this nature *.

The Books which are now lost and are cited in the Old Testament, are these; the Book of the Righteous, Jos. x. 13. and 1 Sam. xvii. 18. the Book of the Wars of the Lord, quoted Numb. xxi. 14. the Annals of the Kings of Judah and Israel, so often cited in the Books of Kings and Chronicles. The Authors of these Annals were the Prophets who lived in the kingdoms of Judah and Israel. We have likewise but a part of Solomon's three thousand Proverbs, and (1 Kings iv. 32.) his thousand and five Songs. And we have intirely lost what he wrote upon Plants, (1 Kings iv. 33.) Animals, Birds, Fishes, and Reptiles. The Prophet Jeremiah's writing is not extant, wherein he injoined the Captives (2 Mac. ii. 1.) who went to Babylon, to take the Sacred Fire and conceal it; nor the precepts which he gave them to secure themselves from Idolatry. Lastly, It is a question, whether we have the Lamentations which he composed upon the death of Josiah King of Judah; for the taking of Jerusalem, and the destruction of it by Nebuchadnezzar *, seem to be the objects of those, which we have remaining of this Prophet.

The Apochryphal Books of the New Testament are, the Epistle of S. Barnabas, the pretended Epistle of S. Paul to the Laodiceans, several spurious Gospels, Acts of the Apostles, and Revelations, the Book of Hermas, intitled, The Shepherd, Jesus Christ's letter to Abgarus, the Epistles of S. Paul to Seneca, and several other pieces of the like nature, which may be seen in the collection of the Apochryphal Writings of the New Tastament made by Fabricius.

Of the Language wherein the Books of the Bible were written.

The Books of the Old Testament were written for the most part in Hebrew. There are

* See our Preface on the Lamentations of Jeremiah.
* The Apochryphal Books of the Old Testament, in the account of all Protestants, are more numerous, and are placed generally in the Romish Canon, according to the Decree made in this particular at the Council of Trent. Any one who looks into his Bible may see how they are distinguished.

Esra iv. 7. 8. v. vi. 1.-19. vii. 12.-27. Dan. iv. 1, 2.-34. Dan. ii. 4. & seq. iii. 14, 15. & v. 17. &c. vi 21, &c.

are some places of Esdras, and Daniel, which are written in Chaldee; Tobit, Judith, the Maccabees, and Ecclesiastes were likewise written in this Language, or in Syriac; but for the Book of Wisdom, it was never written in any other than in Greek. The Reader may consult our Prefaces upon all these Books in particular.

The Books of the New Testament were all written in Greek, except S. Matthew, which was written in Hebrew, that is to say in Syriac, which was the language spoken at that time in Judæa. It is disputed, whether S. Mark wrote in Greek or Latin, and whether the Epistle to the Hebrews was not at first written in Hebrew. But we think that we have shewn very clearly in our several Prefaces to these Books, that they were originally composed in Greek.

Of the Translations of the Books of the Bible.

The Hebrews were at first very reserved in communicating themselves to strangers [a]. As they despised and shun'd the Gentiles, they would not condescend to disclose any thing to them, of those treasures which were concealed in the Holy Scriptures; and the people bordering upon the Jews, such as the Egyptians, Arabians and Phœnicians, for their parts, were not very curious to know the Laws or History of a people whom they reciprocally hated and contemned. It was not till after the several Captivities of the Jews, that foreigners admiring the singularity of their Laws and Ceremonies, were inclined to have a more particular knowledge of them.

Josephus, who studied the Antiquities of his Country with an almost incredible diligence, could discover only some slight footsteps of the Jewish History, interspersed in the Egyptian, Chaldean and Phœnician History. Nor has he there observed any notice to be taken of their Laws or Religion, except in times very modern, compared with the Antiquity of the Hebrews. The Author was so sensible of this, that he thought himself obliged to enquire into the reasons, why foreign writers were so silent in affairs relating to his Nation [b]. And all he has to say after this consideration is, that they never read books written by the Hebrews. He adds, that Demetrius Phalereus, Philo the Elder, and Eupolemus, did indeed speak of the Jews, but with very little accuracy and success, because they were not able to apply themselves with all necessary care to the reading of their History; which want of opportunity to use such application proceeded from hence, viz. that the Sacred Books were not as yet translated into Greek, nor known to the writers of that Nation.

Aristeas indeed says, there was a translation, tho' an imperfect one, of the Jewish Scriptures before the time of Demetrius Phalereus, and that Theopompus intending to insert something of them in his verses, was deprived of his understanding; but all this is affirmed by Aristeas without any proof or probability. For whose use could this version have been made? Not sure for the heathen Greeks, for there were none of them in the East, who could be any way concerned to have this done. And the Jews themselves had still less occasion for any such Translation of their Sacred Books. It was sometime therefore after Alexander the Great, that the Jews who dwelt in great numbers in the Provinces, and had not a sufficient understanding of the Hebrew, desired a Greek Translation of their Scriptures. To this we may add, that the Curiosity of the Philosophers, and learned Heathens, and if you please the great inclination of the Egyptian Kings to embellish and enrich their Library, produced the first Translations of the Scripture. These are the true reasons which first induced the undertakers to think of translating the Jewish Scriptures out of Hebrew into Greek.

The Greek Bible of the Septuagint.

In the article of the Septuagint, we shall examine the History of Aristeas, and what he says of the Version [*] procured by Demetrius Phalereus, Library-keeper to Ptolemy Philadelphus. In the mean time we take this opportunity to declare, that we are not inclinable to believe the Greek Version attributed to the Septuagint, to be much later than the reign of Ptolemy; and further we believe, that there is not any more antient. Nor can we be easily persuaded, that the whole Bible was at once translated into Greek. It is very certain, that the Translations of the other Books of Scripture are not near so correct and exact as that of the five Books of Moses; and that in the other Books the Criticks observe considerable differences as to the style, and ways of expressing, and translating the same term.

Chaldee Translations.

The Chaldee translations of the Scripture are thought generally to be antient, and there are some Criticks, who believe them to be made before the time of Jesus Christ. But they are certainly of a later date, as may [a] Joseph. contra Appion. l. i. p. 1038. [b] Ibid. p. 1021.

[*] See his account of the Septuagint confuted by Dr. Prideaux, in his Connection of the History of the Old and New Testament, Part II. Book I. See likewise M. Dupin's Dissertation Preliminaire, sur la Bible. l. i. c. 6. Histoire Critique du vieux Testament par M. Simon, l. 2. c. 2. and Dr. Hoddy de Bibliorum textibus originalibus versionibus Græcis, & Latinâ vulgatâ. These Authors are refer'd to by Dr. Prideaux for a more accurate account of this matter.

may be ſeen in F. Morinus's critical Comments on the Bible, l. ii. Exercit. 8. c. 2. They are not plain literal Tranſlations of the Hebrew Text, but rather Paraphraſes or Expoſitions. We ſhall ſpeak of them more at large in the article Targum, or Chaldee Paraphraſes.

The Syriack Bible.

The Syrians have in their Language a Tranſlation of the Old Teſtament out of Hebrew, which they give out to be of great antiquity. They pretend, that a great part of this Verſion was made in Solomon's time, and the reſt in the time of Abgarus King of Edeſſa. Hiram King of Tyre, and Solomon's Friend, deſir'd, as they ſay, this Prince to communicate the uſe of Letters, and writing to the Syrians, and to tranſlate for them the Sacred Books of the Hebrews, which were then in being, into Syriac; namely, the Pentateuch, Joſhua, Judges, Ruth, the two Books of Samuel, the Pſalms, Proverbs, Eccleſiaſtes, Solomon's Song, and Job. Solomon granted very readily the favour which Hiram requeſted of him; and from this Prince's reign to the time of Jeſus Chriſt, the Syrians had no other Books of Scripture than thoſe which we have juſt now mentioned. But after the preaching of S. Thaddæus, (not the Apoſtle of this name, who was ſent to them after the Aſcenſion of our Saviour) they received all the other Books of Scripture, which were then tranſlated into Syriac by the care of Abgarus King of Edeſſa, who had a knowledge of Jeſus Chriſt, even before his Paſſion, and embraced Chriſtianity. This is the Tradition of the Maronites relating to their tranſlation of the Scripture out of Hebrew.

But all that they ſay of their Tranſlation made in the time of Solomon and Hiram, is looked upon as fabulous. Nor is it agreed that even the Syriac Tranſlation, which we now have, was of Abgarus's time; tho' we muſt allow it to be very antient [*], ſince it is very frequently cited by the Fathers. Who the Author of it was we cannot tell, nor in what time particularly it was made. Pocock [c] quotes a Syriac Verſion by one Thomas of Heraclea, but he confeſſes that there was one very antient before it. Abbot Renaudot ſays, Thomas was a Jacobite, or of Dioſcorus's Sect; and that when he came into Egypt, he took the pains to compare the Syriac Bible with the old Copies, which were preſerved in the Monaſtery of S. Antonius. From that time therefore all the Sacred Writings of the Syrians are collated with and corrected from this Edition of Thomas of Heraclea, which is eſteemed to be the moſt accurate and correct of all. But there is no proof that he himſelf ever compoſed any Tranſlation.

Beſides this old Syriac Verſion from the Hebrew, which is printed in the Polyglotts of Paris and England, the Syrians have another made from the Greek. The original of it is not diſtinctly known. Maſius [d] ſays, that he had in his poſſeſſion, Deuteronomy, Joſhua, Judges, Kings, Chronicles, Eſdras, Judith and Tobit, tranſlated in the Year of J. C. 615. from the Greek Copies corrected by Origen. But theſe Verſions, which Maſius ſpeaks of, have never yet appeared, and ſeveral doubts as to this point muſt neceſſarily ariſe, when we conſider the extreme difference between the Greek and Syriac Languages, and the poſſibility of placing all Origen's Obeliſks and Aſteriſks in a Language, wherein are none of thoſe articles or other particles which are in the Greek. One Syriac Verſion from the Greek we know of, and we know too that one Mar-Abba [e] was the Author of it.

Latin Bibles.

The Latin Tranſlation of the Bible is one of the moſt antient; but does not exceed the beginning of Chriſtianity: The Jews who liv'd in the Roman Empire, never thought of tranſlating the Old Teſtament into Latin; becauſe they all underſtood Greek or Hebrew; and as they came out of Aſia or Greece, Greek was very well known among them: But as ſoon as Chriſtianity began to prevail, ſeveral Heathens, who underſtood the Latin tongue only, having embraced the Faith of Jeſus Chriſt; there was a neceſſity to procure for them a tranſlation of the Scripture in this language. The Author or rather Authors, for there were ſeveral imployed about it [f], are not known; and their manner of tranſlating the Greek into Latin, ſhews rather, that they themſelves were not maſters of all the delicacies of the Latin tongue, or that they for whoſe uſe they made it, were plain, ignorant and illiterate people. And it is certain, that there were many of this ſort upon the firſt prevalency of Chriſtianity [g]. Now, ſcarce any beſides theſe had occaſion for a Latin Tranſlation: for perſons of quality 1 Cor. i. 26, 27.

[c] Pocock. Præfat. gener. in Joel. [d] Maſius Proëm. Comment. in Barcepha de Paradiſo. Et Ep. Nuncupator. Comment. in Joſue. [e] Hebed-Jeſu Catalog. lib. Chaldæorum. [f] Aug. de Doctr. Chriſt. l. ii. c. 11. Qui Scripturas in linguam Græcam verterunt, numerari poſſunt. Latini autem Interpretes, nullo modo. Ut enim primis fidei temporibus, in manus venit codex Græcus, & aliquantulum facultatis ſibi utriuſque linguæ habere videbatur, auſus eſt interpretari. Vide Mill. Proleg. in nov. Teſt. Græc. p. 50.

[g] Vide Juſtin. Martyr. Apolog. Chryſoſt. ad cap. 11. primæ ad Corinth.

[*] Dr. Prideaux, is of opinion that it was made within the firſt Century after Chriſt, that the Author of it was ſome Chriſtian of the Jewiſh Nation, well acquainted both with the Hebrew and Syriac Languages; and that it is the beſt Tranſlation of the Old Teſtament. See Connect, &c. Pt. II. B. I.

lity and learning, and they who were of any rank in the world, underſtood Greek, and had no occaſion to conſult Tranſlators: beſides, the firſt Chriſtians in general deſpiſed the charms of worldly Wiſdom; ſolid truth was what they aimed at: all that they ſought for in the Sacred Writings, was to be edified and made better men, not to be diverted or amuſed with the beauty of words, and the order and diſpoſition of a diſcourſe.

The firſt Latin verſion of the Old Teſtament was made from the Greek of the Septuagint, which was the only one that the Latin Tranſlators had any knowledge of. There were no thoughts of tranſlating the Old Teſtament from the Hebrew, till Saint Jerom's time: Among the many Latin Editions, which were extant before S. Jerom, the old or the Italick was always diſtinguiſhed, as the cleareſt and moſt literal interpretation. [h] But after S. Jerom had finiſhed his Tranſlation from the Hebrew, the whole Latin Church inſenſibly forſook the old Italick, and adopted that of this Father, which is at this day in our printed and manuſcript Bibles.

The old Italick is nowhere, that we know of, to be found intire; but ſome fragments of it are preſerved in our common Bibles; for example, The Pſalter, the book of Wiſdom, Eccleſiaſticus, and the additions to Daniel, and the book of Eſther, Baruch, the Maccabees, and the Epiſtle of Jeremiah. As to the New Teſtament, the ſame S. Jerom tranſlated it intirely from the Greek; and the Church at this day makes uſe of his Tranſlation, which was declared authentick by the Council of Trent.

The old Italick of the New Teſtament is not intirely loſt, nor would it be impoſſible to recover it. The four Goſpels according to this Verſion, were found in a very old Manuſcript at Corbie; indorſed 195, the various readings whereof have been produced by us in our Supplement printed at the end of the Revelations. F. Martianay has publiſhed the Goſpel of S. Matthew from other old Manuſcripts, as well as the Epiſtle of S. James. Luke of Bruges ſays, he [i] had an antient Latin Manuſcript in his poſſeſſion, belonging to the Abby of Malmedy, that contained the old Italick, which was in uſe before S. Jerom's time. To theſe we may add the Greek and Latin Manuſcript of S. Paul's Epiſtles, whereof there is a copy in the King's Library, and another in that of St. Germain des Prez, the Latin column whereof contains the old Vulgate. I make no queſtion but that if diligent ſearch were made in Libraries, all this old Verſion might be found. But we are not to imagine that it would be all uniform, ſince S. Jerome and S. Auſtin inform us [k], that the old Copies differ'd very much from one another.

We ſhall have another opportunity to ſpeak of the Latin Tranſlation of the Bible under the article Vulgate.

Arabic Bibles.

Pocock and Walton obſerve, that there are two Arabic Verſions of the old Teſtament in uſe among the eaſtern Chriſtians, one in the Church of Alexandria, the other in that of Antioch, and in the Churches which depend upon theſe two principal Metropolis's of the Eaſt. Cornelius a Lapide thought he had diſcovered Copies of them both in the great Duke of Tuſcany's Library [l]; but Abbot Renaudot [m] aſſures us, that the Greek Church of Alexandria makes uſe of the Greek language in its Office, and of the Verſion of the Septuagint; and that in private, where the publick Offices are not uſed, it makes uſe of the Arabic Tranſlation of the Septuagint. But the Coptic, or heretical Egyptian Church of the ſame Country, uſes the Coptic language in the publick Office, tho' it be no longer common in Egypt.

The ſame Abbot adds, that the Greeks of Antioch, or Syrian Melchites, who follow the Greek Ritual, perform the Office, and adminiſter all the Sacraments in Greek; but the Syrian Jacobites or Neſtorians uſe the Syriac Verſion in their publick Office, and an Arabic Tranſlation from the Syriac in private, and conſequently one pretty near the Hebrew, from which the Syriac itſelf was formed. This is what Walton and Pocock were not very particularly acquainted with. M. Renaudot farther remarks, that tho' the Syrians have likewiſe a Syriac Tranſlation from the Greek, they never make uſe of it in the Office of the Church, nor in their theological Diſputes.

Beſides the Arabic Tranſlation from the Syriac, there is another from the Septuagint by Hareth the Son of Senan. The diverſity to be obſerved between the ſeveral Copies of this Verſion is ſo great that it is impoſſible to reconcile it. The uſe of it is not general in the Eaſt, but is limited to ſome Churches of the Melchites, or orthodox Greeks, who perform the Office in Greek, and in private read the Scripture in Arabic, according to the Verſion of the Septuagint. The Coptites have alſo an Arabic [h] Aug. l. 2. de Doct. Chr. c. 15. [i] Vide Brugenſ. in notationib. in ſacra Bibl. in quib. variantia loca diſcutiuntur. In catalogo MSS. quib. uſus eſt. [k] Aug. loco ſupra citato. Hieronym. Præfat. in quatuor Evangelia. [l] Cornel. a Lapide argumento in comment ad prophetas minores. [m] Euſeb. Renaudot. apud P. le Long. Bibliot. Sacr. c. 2. Sect. 5. p. 176. Vide eundem Commentar. in Liturg. Copticam S. Baſilii. p. 208.

Arabic Verfion, made either immediately from the Greek, or from the Coptic itfelf, which is tranflated from the Greek; for this is a particular which ftill feems dubious to Abbot Renaudot, who has furnifhed us with thefe remarks.

The Arabic Tranflations printed in the Polyglotts of Paris and London, are in all points different from the Arabic Verfions ufed in the Eaft; and what is very fingular, no eaftern Church could know its own Tranflation by thofe which we have been fpeaking of. The Arabic Verfion of the Pentateuch, printed in the Polyglotts, is taken for the moft part from that which Saadias Gaon a Jew of Egypt, made from the Hebrew Text, for the fervice of his Brethren. But the Chriftians having interpolated, and fafhioned it for their own particular ufe, Gabriel Sionita, who had the chief direction of the edition of the Arabic in the Polyglott of Paris, made ufe of this Tranflation thus changed and interpolated: The other Books of Scripture are Tranflations by different hands; and the Arabic Verfions are made fometimes from the Greek, and fometimes from the Syriac; they who had the care of this edition, concerning themfelves no further than to provide an Arabic Verfion of fuch or fuch a book, without giving themfelves the trouble to examin it with a critical exactnefs. So that thefe Arabic Verfions are of no Authority among the eaftern Chriftians.

The Jews have likewife feveral Arabic Tranflations of the Scripture, fome whereof are to be met with in Libraries; but they are not very antient, and confidered by themfelves are of no authority. Some are written in Arabic, others in Hebrew characters; that of Saadias Gaon is perhaps the firft of all thofe which have been made from the Hebrew; but it would be convenient to have it all intire in its purity.

Ethiopic Bibles.

The Ethiopic Verfion of the Old Teftament is made immediately from the Greek Text, or from the Coptic or Arabic Text, which are themfelves tranflated from the Greek of the Septuagint. M. Ludolphus [n] obferves, that there is a very fenfible agreement between this Tranflation and the Alexandrian Manufcript. The order of the chapters, the infcriptions of the Pfalms, and every thing befides, are all together alike. The Ethiopians attribute their Verfion of the Scripture to Salama, who is thought to be the fame as Frumentius the Apoftle of Ethiopia, fent into this Country by S. Athanafius. The Martyrology of the Abyffinians, fuppofes him to be the Author of it. But others [o] believe it to be the work of the nine firft Apoftles of this Nation, and that it was made from the Arabic. But M. Ludolphus is of opinion, that under the name of Sacred Books, we are to underftand the Apoftolical Canons and Conftitutions, which are indeed tranflated from the Arabic into Ethiopic.

But Mr. Renaudot [p] and M. Simon maintain, [q] that the Ethiopic Verfion of the whole Scripture, both of the Old and New Teftament, is made from the Coptick or Egyptian. Thus the Egyptian Verfion being made from the Septuagint, and old Copies agreeing with the Alexandrian Manufcript, it is not at all furprifing, that there fhould be obferved to be fo much conformity between the Ethiopic Verfion and that of the Septuagint in this Manufcript. It is certain, that fince the Mahometans have been mafters of Egypt, the Church of Ethiopia has been always fubject to the Church of the Jacobites in Egypt; and fo it is not ftrange, that it fhould take from thence the Text of Scripture, from which it procured that Tranflation to be made into the Ethiopic language, which is in ufe among the Chriftians of this Country.

Coptic or Egyptian Bibles.

The word Coptic is formed from that of Egyptos, or Aiguptos; and the Coptic Verfion is the Tranflation into the Egyptian tongue. Learned men agree, that this Verfion is made from the Greek of the Septuagint, that it expreffes literally the fenfe of thefe Interpreters; and M. Renaudot [r] obferves fomething particular to this purpofe, which is, that the Egyptians were fo punctual in preferving the old Greek Verfion of the Septuagint, which their Church of Alexandria had made ufe of from the beginning, that they refufed to take any advantage from the labours of Origen or others, who had been at great pains in comparing the Greek Verfion with the Hebrew Text; and we read in the life of Demetrius Archbifhop of Alexandria, that Origen quite deftroyed the old prophecies relating to the Meffiah, and after being excommunicated by his Bifhop, retired among the Jews. Such was the idea which the Egyptians had of Origen.

There are difputes concerning the antiquity of the Egyptian Verfion. Some are of opinion, that from the beginning of Chriftianity, there was a Tranflation of the [n] Ludolf. Hift. Æthiop. l. iii. c. 4.

[o] Epift. P. P. Societ. Jef. de annis 1607, and 1608. c xv. p. 28.
[p] Renaudot apud P. le Long. in addendis, Bibliot. Sacr. p. 666.
[q] Simon. Hift. critique Du vieux Teft.
[r] Renaudot. Liturg. Oriental. Tom. i. Comment. in Liturg. Coptic. Bafilii, p. 207.

the Scripture in this language, made by S. Mark, for the service of such Christians, as did not understand Greek. Athanasius observes[s], that S. Antony, who understood no Language but the Egyptian[t], having one day heard these words read in the Church, Go, sell that ye have and give it to the poor, supposed them to be directed to himself only, and immediately resolved upon putting them in practice. From hence it is concluded, that there was therefore at that time an Egyptian Translation of the Scripture, which was read publickly in the Church. But others are of opinion, that S. Antony heard these words from the Priest who explained that in Egyptian, which he had read in the publick Office in Greek; for it is certain, that in Egypt[u], from the beginning, the Liturgy was read in Greek, as some particular parts of the Office still shew, which are recited in this Language: This however does not hinder, but that the common Prayers of the Church might be celebrated in Coptic in upper Egypt, where Greek was not so generally known, and in the mean time continued in Greek at Alexandria, and in lower Egypt[w].

Mat. xix. 21.

However this may be, the original of the Coptic Version is what we are not acquainted with, nor do we know whether that which we have at this day, be that very antient one which is presum'd to have been used when S. Antony was living, and in the following ages, wherein we see the Councils of Ephesus and Chalcedon subscribed by some Bishops in Egyptian, who knew not how to write in Greek, wherein too there were many Monks and Abbots living, who understood no other Language but Egyptian. Now it is not at all credible, that so many Bishops and Religious should have lived without reading or explaining Holy Scripture. There was therefore at that time an Egyptian Translation. But, as I said, we have reason to doubt, whether that which we now have, is this old Version, or whether it be one more modern. I should be more inclinable to believe it is the old one; for to what purpose should a new one have been made, if there already was another? Besides if any one had undertaken to make a new Translation since the seventh and eighth Ages, we should in all probability have known the Author, and the particular time of its production; but as we are ignorant of both, it is very reasonable to believe, that the Version which we have, is the old one.

The Coptic Language, which is that of the Egyptian Version, is the primitive Egyptian Language[x], at least as to the ground and substance of it: but it is blended with many words and phrases in imitation of the Greek. The very character is copied from the Greek. Altho' the Coptic is now no longer common in Egypt, and this language is not understood by the people, yet the publick Prayers are still performed in it, but the Gospel and Epistle are explained in Arabic, which is the vulgar Language of the country.

Persian Bibles.

There are several Persian Translations both of the Old and New Testament, composed by different Authors, for the most part unknown, who have performed some one part, some another. But there is not one intirely made by one Author only, and acknowledged as authentick by all those who use the Persian Language. Among those which we meet with in Libraries, some are in Hebrew Characters; these in all probability were made purely for the service of the Jews, others in Persian Characters, and the greatest part of them are still in Manuscript[y].

There is a Version of the Psalms in Persian by one Father John, a Carmelite, and another of the same Book made from the Latin by the Jesuits. We have the Gospels likewise in Persian, copied in the Year 1388. from an Original of greater antiquity. Walton in the London Polyglott has published the Gospels translated from the Syriac, by one Simon the Son of Joseph, a Christian of Persia, who lived in 1341. This Walton made choice of as the best and oldest of all those which we know any thing of in this Language[z]. Wheelock, in 1657. printed a Persian Translation of the Gospel, which is different from that of Simon the Son of Joseph, of Tabriz, but it is made from the Greek, as well as those printed in the London Polyglott, except the Translation of the Pentateuch, which was made from the Hebrew, by one Jacob a Jew, the Son of Joseph of Tavas.

Bibles in the Turkish, Armenian and Georgian Languages.

We have some manuscript Translations of the Scripture in the Turkish Language. For example, John Vugnadius procured a Translation of the whole Bible to be made into this Language, as Thuanus tells us in his History of what was transacted in the year 1565. Albert Bobavius, a Polish Renegade, after his Abjuration called Ali-beg, made likewise a Turkish Version of the Scripture, at the instance of Levinus Varnerius. We have no knowledge of any thing printed in this Language from the Old Testament; but in the Year 1666. there was a Turkish Translation of the New Testament printed at [s] Athan. in vitâ Antonij. [t] Pallad. sub finem, c. 26. hist. Lausiacæ. [u] Renaudot. tom. 1. p. 206. Liturg. Orient. [w] Idem t. 1. p. 43. [x] Vide P. le Long. Bibliot. Sacr. t. 1. p. 236. & addenda. [y] Vide Jacobi le Long. Bibliot. Sacr. tom. 1. p. 219, 220, 221. [z] Idem p. 222.

at London, which differs from the pure Arabick and Persian.

The Armenians have an Old Translation of the Bible in their Language taken from the Greek of the Septuagint. Gregory, Bishop of Alexandria, who lived in 620. says, that while S. Chrysostom was in exile at Cucusa, a city of Armenia, he there very fortunately found out some persons who understood Greek, and ingaged them to undertake an Armenian Translation of the New Testament and Psalter, for the service of the common people [a]. But the truth of this fact is very disputable, as well as the sincerity of Gregory of Alexandria, whom Photius accuses with having sometimes advanced facts against the truth of History.

We are assured [b] that the first Translations, which were seen, of Scripture in Armenian, were of the Emperor Arcadius's time and S. John Chrysostom's. Three learned Armenians were imployed about them, viz. Moses, sirnamed the Grammarian, David the Philosopher, and Mampræus, these translated most of the Books both of the Old and New Testament out of Greek into Armenian.

Others attribute the honour of this performance to Abbot Mesropus, assisted by his two Disciples John and Joseph, in the time of Theodosius the younger. Gretzer cites a Greek Fragment, which tells us, that in the time of Theodosius the Great, and Bahram King of Armenia, who lived about the Year 380. some persons translated the Psalms into Armenian, at which Theodosius was offended, and complained, that the Tradition received by the Armenians from Gregory their Apostle, was neglected by them. See Gretzer, Defens. Bellarm. l. ii. c. 16. col. 881. But the truth of this relation is very much to be questioned; the eastern people are not very exact, nor very scrupulous in their accounts of historical Facts.

We are told likewise [c], that Bartholomew le Petit, and John l' Ange, two preaching Friars, with two Armenians, whose names where John and James, translated the whole Bible out of Latin into Armenian, in the Year of J. C. 1316. But this particular too is very dubious, and attested by no antient Author.

The Armenians in 1666. procured an Impression of the Bible in their Language, to be made at Amsterdam, under the direction of an Armenian Bishop, who had the principal care of this Edition. It was translated from the Greek of the Septuagint, and not very well liked by the Armenians. Another therefore was printed at Antwerp in 1670. by the care and procurement of Theodorus Petræus; and the New Testament separately in 1668 and 1669. M. Pique, Doctor of the Sorbonne, was of opinion, that the Armenian Translation was of great Antiquity, and might be very useful in correcting the Greek Text, from which this Version was made.

The Georgians [d] have likewise a Translation of the Bible in the old Georgian Language; but as this Language is known to very few persons, and the people of the country are extremely ignorant, there is scarce any one to be found, who either reads or understands this Version, except some women, who have learned some historical Passages of the Gospel by rote out of it.

French Bibles.

We shall not enlarge much on the French Translations of the Bible; there are already several Books printed on this Subject, which may be consulted by those who would have a more particular knowledge of it. The first French Bible, whereof we have any certain and distinct knowledge, is that of Peter de Vaux, the Author, and principal of the Waldenses, who lived about the Year 1160. We do not know whether there are any Copies of it still remaining or not in some old Libraries [e].

Innocent III. in a Letter to Bertram Bishop of Metz, tells him [f], that several Laymen, who were desirous of reading Holy Scripture, had procured a French Translation of the Gospels, S. Paul's Epistles, the Psalter, Job's Morals, and several other Books. This Epistle of Innocent III. was written in the Year 1200.

Several modern Writers have ascribed an old French Translation of the Bible to Nicholas Oresme; but F. le Long [g] maintains, that Oresme was not the Author of the Bible translated into French under Charles V. King of France, but Raoul de Presle, who set about it by the King's command, as he declares expressly in his Epistle Dedicatory to this Prince, sirnamed the Wise. This Translation was finished about the Year 1380.

And consequently it is later than Guiard des Moulins, which was compleated in 1294. as he himself says in his Preface. This Translation is to be found in Manuscript in several Libraries. Guiard acknowledges, that he inserted several marginal Annotations in the text of the Bible, and several remarks taken from the Scholastick History of Peter Comestor; and that he hath omitted divers things, which he thought it was [a] Greg. in vita Chrysost. tom. 8 Oper. D. Chrysost. Edit. Savill. f. 59. [b] Vide Jacobi le Long Bibl. Sacr. tom. 1. p. 230, 231. & seq. [c] Altamur. Bibliot. prædicat. ad an. 1333.

[d] Chardin Voyage de Perse, & le Long Bibliot. p. 235. [e] See F. le Long. Bibl. Sacr. tom. 2. p. 3.
[f] Innocent. III. Ep. 171. p. 472. Edit. Balus. [g] Le Long. Bibl. Sacr. t. 2. p. 4. & 17.

was not neceſſary to tranſlate, as the particulars of Genealogies, and things of that nature. This Bible was printed oftner than once under this title, Bible hiſtoriale, or hiſtorical Bible.

Beſides theſe Verſions, wherein the whole Bible is contained, there are other old ones of ſome parts of Scripture, as the Pſalter or the New Teſtament; the Catalogue whereof may be ſeen in F. le Long's Bibliotheca Sacra, t. 2. p. 21, 22, 23.

William le Menard, about the Year 1484. printed a French Bible after the Latin Tranſlation of Peter Comeſtor. Perhaps it may be that only of Guiard de Moulin's revis'd, and put into a new dreſs.

John de Rely reviewed likewiſe des Moulins's Bible in the Reign of Charles the Eighth. James le Fevre of Eſtaples, tranſlated the whole Bible out of Latin into French, and had it printed at Paris in 1528. The New Teſtament had been printed in 1523. and the Pſalter in 1525. It has been ſince ſeveral times reprinted in different places of the Kingdom.

The Doctors of Louvain having tranſlated the Bible out of Latin into French by the Emperor Charles the Fifth's order, they printed it at Louvain in 1550. Charles the fifth's Licence is dated 1546, and this Bible has been very frequently reprinted. The Doctors of Louvain have been reproached [h] with doing nothing more in their Tranſlation than copying almoſt throughout, and correcting in ſome places the Verſion of Geneva publiſhed by Olivetan. But M. Simon [i] remarks, that in the year 1530, or rather 1534, Martin L'Empereur printed a French Bible at Antwerp tranſlated by Nicholas de Leuſe Doctor of Louvain; and that this Bible is the ſame in Subſtance with that which appeared ſome years after, under the name of the Louvain Doctors, printed principally by the care of the ſame Nicholas de Leuſe, who had been imployed in the firſt Tranſlation. And from this Verſion of de Leuſe, Olivetan himſelf made his which was printed at Geneva in 1535.

In 1566, Renatus Benoiſt publiſhed a French Bible at Paris, with Marginal Notes on ſome difficult places. This Edition was cenſured by the Faculty of Divinity at Paris, in 1567, as being no other than the Verſion of Geneva, which Renatus Benoiſt thought he had ſufficiently purged; but it was ſtill found to be very full of faults. F. Veron in his Preface to the New Teſtament, which he had tranſlated into French, aſſerts, that the French Verſions, which appeared afterwards under the names of Peter Frizon, and Peter de Beſſe, were the ſame with that of Renatus Benoiſt, or rather that of Geneva, and were likewiſe very faulty.

James Corbin in 1643, printed a French Bible, which he tranſlated by Lewis the XIIIth's order; but it is generally thought to be too barbarous, and to keep cloſe too ſervilely to the Latin Text; the very turn whereof, and particular phraſes, the Tranſlator has endeavoured to imitate.

Cardinal Richelieu had begun to ſet ſome at work about a new Tranſlation of the Bible into French; but his death put a ſtop to the execution of this undertaking.

Michael de Maroles having tranſlated the Bible into French, and added Annotations to it from Pereira, ſet about the printing of it, and had already proceeded as far as the xiii. chap. of Leviticus, when on a ſudden a ſtop was put to the impreſſion by Chancellor Seguier, about the year 1671; I have ſeen the printed ſheets of it in the King's Library, and the publick, in my opinion, has loſt nothing by the ſuppreſſion.

Iſaac le Maitre de Sacy, in the year 1672, publiſhed his Tranſlation of the Bible, with Explanations of the literal and ſpiritual meaning of it, and it was received with wonderful applauſe and approbation. It has been ſince corrected very much, and printed very often in different forms. The perſon who procured the edition by Broncard in 1701, reviſed and mended it in ſeveral places. We likewiſe have made ſome farther amendments of it in the edition of this Text, which is prefixed to our literal Comment.

As to New Teſtaments which have been printed ſeparately, and by particular Authors, one of thoſe which has made the moſt noiſe, and deſerved moſt conſideration, is that of F. Amelotte of the Oratory, compoſed by the direction of ſome French Prelates, and printed with Annotations, in the years 1666, 1667, and 1670, viz. The Goſpels and Acts in 1666, the Epiſtles of S. Paul in 1667, the general Epiſtles and the Revelations in 1670. This Author tells us in his Preface, that in order to make his Tranſlation the more perfect, and to be convinced the more fully, that the Latin Text of the Vulgate agrees with the moſt ancient Greek Originals, he had taken care to have ſearch made in all the Libraries of Europe, for the oldeſt Manuſcripts that could be found there, ſome whereof appear'd to be of twelve or thirteen hundred years ſtanding; that he had made extracts out of them; that he had had the inſpection of twenty Manuſcripts belonging to France, and of all thoſe in the Vatican or other Libraries in Italy; of ſixteen Manuſcripts belong-

[h] Franc. Veron's Preface on the New Teſt. in French. c. xxix. See F. le Long. t. 2. p. 31, 32.

[i] Simon's critical Hiſtory of the New Teſt.

belonging to Spain, without reckoning those which Cardinal Ximenes made use of in his Edition of the Complutensian Polyglott. Lastly, that he had had the use of several Manuscripts out of England, and the northern Countries, and of many others, which were in Greece, &c. But when we examine F. Amelotte's Annotations[i], we find, that excepting three or four Manuscripts consulted by him, which too are not above four or five hundred years old, he has produced no various Lections that are in any degree considerable, which had not been before taken notice of, either in the London Polyglott, or elsewhere. And when he has been pressed close upon this Point, he has made no scruple of confessing, that all which he had said of this matter was no more than a figurative way of speaking, which he had made use of to give the World a greater Idea of his Performance.

The New Testament of Mons, which was printed in 1665, with the Archbishop of Cambray's Permission, and the King of Spain's Licence, has made so much noise, that it deserves to be particularly considered. The first Author of this Work was M. le Maitre, who having translated the four Gospels into French, M. Antony Arnaud, and M. le Maitre de Sacy, corrected them in several places. M. de Sacy composed a new Preface to them, with the help of M. Nicole and M. Claude de Sainte Marthe: But in the Licence, Mr. Arnaud alone is taken notice of; for that informs the World, that the Translation is the work of a Doctor of the Sorbonne. The Manuscript written with M. le Maitre's hand, with Emendations in the Margin of M. Arnaud's and M. de Sacy's Hand-writing, was given to M. Toinard by one of the Elzevirs[k], who printed it; for tho' we read in the Title Page, that it was printed at Mons by Gaspard Migiot, it is nevertheless very true, that no Copies of it were ever printed at Mons. M. de Cambout Abbot of Pont Chateau, went to Amsterdam on purpose to have it printed by the Elzevirs.

This Book has met with a great deal of Opposition, the account whereof has no relation to my Subject. It was condemned by Pope Clement IX. in 1668, by Pope Innocent XI. in 1679, and in several Bishopricks of France at several times. All which notwithstanding it has gone through many Editions, and the generality of those who, since that time, have attempted to translate the New Testament into French, have made use of this Version as a Foundation to work upon, and have endeavoured to correct and purge it of every thing disagreeable to them; and which might draw upon them the Censure of the Pope and Bishops; for both the Version which is in M. de Sacy's Bible, and that which is published with F. Quesnel's Reflections, and that in M. Hure's New Testament, are the same in Substance with the Translations of Mons, revised and reformed by them in all those places, which gave uneasiness to the Censors.

M. Antony Godeau Bishop of Vence, printed his Translation of the New Testament at Paris in 1668; but it is, properly speaking, neither a literal Translation, nor a Paraphrase; but it is a medium between both, and adds some particular words to the Text, which explain the sense of it.

The New Testament published at Trevoux in French by M. Simon in the year 1702, with literal and critical Annotations upon difficult Passages, was condemned by the Bishops of Paris and Meaux, who in 1702, 1703, prohibited the use of it in their Dioceses.

F. Bouhours a Jesuit, in the year 1697, published a Translation of the New Testament, which he composed in conjunction with his Brethren FF. Michael Tellier and Peter Besnier. During the Impression of this Work, the Archbishop of Paris named Revisers of it, in order to examin and correct it. The Translation for the most part is harsh and obscure, which was owing to the Author's Inclination to keep too scrupulously close to the Latin Text, which he translated. F. Lallemant a Jesuit, in his Exposition of the New Testament put out by him some years since, has adopted this Translation.

We have likewise a new Version of the New Testament by F. Martianay, printed at Paris in 1712, with Annotations, and literal Explanations borrowed, as he says, from the pure Fountains of the Scripture.

Lastly, Abbot Fleury, heretofore Preceptor to the Children of France, and at present Confessor to King Lewis XV. has prepared a French Translation of the New Testament, by express orders from the King and Cardinal de Noailles, which has not yet been printed. These are the principal Translations of the Old and New Testament, which have been made by Catholick Writers.

French Translations of the Bible by Protestants.

The first French Bible which the Protestants published, was that of Robert Peter Olivetan, printed at Geneva in 1535, and since reprinted often with the Corrections of John Calvin, and some others.

[i] Hist. critique des Versions du Nov. Test. c. 32.

[k] Le Long. Bibl. Sacr. t. 2. p. 58, 59.

others. But the firft Editions of Olivetan were very defective, becaufe the Author did not fpeak good French, and underftood not the original Languages of the Old and New Teftament. His Verfion is faid to be the fame as Dr. Nicholas de Leufe's Bible, printed at Antwerp by Martin l'Empereur in 1534. and indeed, when we compare them together, we may obferve, that they differ only in thofe places, wherein Olivetan thought it neceffary to forfake the Vulgate, and adhere to the Hebrew of the Old Teftament, tranflated by Pagninus, and to the Greek of the New, tranflated by Erafmus. Olivetan therefore might very eafily boaft, that in the fpace of one Year he had tranflated the whole Bible into French, the Old Teftament from the Hebrew, the New from the Greek; for this is what he values himfelf upon, in the Edition publifhed at Neufchatel, in 1535. at the expence of the Vaudois.

Sebaftian Caftalio, or Chateillon, publifhed a French Tranflation of the Old Teftament from the Hebrew, and of the New from the Greek, at Bafil, in the Year 1555. But this Tranflation had no manner of fuccefs, and did no honour to its Author, becaufe he did not underftand French. He made himfelf ridiculous by particular ways of expreffing himfelf, which were never ufed by good judges of the Language; for example, inftead of tranfgreffer he put trefpaffer, inftead of circoncifion he would fay rognement, inftead of prepuce he would ufe the word avantpeau. An inftance whereof we have in his Tranflation of the 25, 26 and 27th Verfes of the fecond Chapter of the Epiftle to the Romans, which runs thus, Si tu viens á tréfpaffer la loi, ton rognement devient avantpeau. Que fi un empellé (he means one uncircumcifed) garde les ordonnances de la loi, certes fon avantpeau lui fera compté pour rognement, Et celui qui de nature eft empellé, et garde la loi, te condamnera, toi qui as la lettre et rognement, et fi trefpaffes la loi.

John Diodati publifhed a French Bible tranflated from the Greek and Hebrew, with Annotations of his own; this was printed at Geneva in 1644. The Reformed extremely approved it, and they ftill make ufe of it as much or more than of Olivetan's, tho' that has been revifed fo often, and both the fenfe and expreffions have been corrected by the moft learned Proteftant Divines. But Diodati's method is found fault with; he does not keep clofe enough to the Letter, and that he may make himfelf the more intelligible to all the world, he rather paraphrafes the Text than tranflates it, and inferts words frequently in his Tranflation to make it more clear.

We are affured, that M. Charles le Cene and M. Le Clerc have both compofed intire Verfions of the Bible, but they have not yet been publifhed.

As to the New Taftament, printed feparately by Proteftant Authors, the principal Tranflation of it is that of John le Fevre of Eftaples, revifed and accommodated to the ufe of the reform'd Churches in Piedmont, and printed in 1534.

The New Teftament tranflated into French by Peter Dolet, appeared before the Year 1545. the Year wherein the Author was burnt.

John Daillé the Son, and Valentine Conrart, printed a French New Teftament at Paris, in 1671. compiled from the Tranflations of Mons and F. Amelotte; but the Edition was fcarce finifhed before it was intirely fuppreffed [l].

M. John le Clerc printed a New Teftament in French at Amfterdam for De Lorme, in 1703. with Annotations taken for the moft part from Grotius and Hammond. M. Bayle fays, that this Edition was prohibited and profcribed in Holland, by order of the States General, and by the Decrees of feveral Synods of the Proteftant Churches there; and in Pruffia by the Confiftory of Berlin, as a work tending to renew the errors of Sabellius, and foment thofe of Socinus.

Italian Bibles.

Sextus Senenfis [m], and after him Antony Poffevin [n], fpeak of an Italian Tranflation of the Bible, made by James de Voragine, who lived in 1270. But it is queftioned with good reafon, whether there ever was fuch a Bible, fince James de Voragine himfelf fays nothing of it in the Catalogue of his Works, publifhed by him in his Hiftory of Genoa, in the Year 1292. and no Copy of any Tranflation of the Bible under his name is to be met with in the Libraries of Italy [o]. The Italian Bibles which are to be found in Manufcript in the Libraries there have no name of any Author prefix'd to them.

The firft Italian Bible publifhed by the Catholicks, is that of Nicholas Malerme, or Malherbe, a Benedictine Monk of the Order of Camaldulenfes, printed at Venice in Auguft 1471. There was another put out under the name of the fame Author, in October of the fame Year 1471. very different from the firft as to the Old Teftament, but much the fame as to the New. There is no name to it either of the Printer or the place of Impreffion. Malerme's Bible has been printed feveral times in Italy. It was tranflated from the Vulgate.

Antony

[l] Vide P. le Long. Bibl. Sacr. t. 2. p. 93.
[m] Sext. Sen. l. iv. Bibliot.
[n] Poffevin. in Apparatu Sacr.
[o] Le Long t. 2. p. 97, 98. Bibliot. Sacr.

Antony Brucioli made another Verſion of the Old Teſtament from the Hebrew, and of the New Teſtament from the Greek, which was printed at Venice in 1532. But this Bible was placed among the Books which were prohibited by the Council of Trent. This Tranſlation of the New Teſtament has been printed ever ſince the year 1530.

Santes Marmochinus reviſed Brucioli's Edition, and printed it at Venice as a new Tranſlation, in 1538, and there have been ſeveral Editions of it ſince.

Gregorio Leti [p] informs us, that Sixtus V. ordered a Tranſlation to be made of the whole Bible in 1590, but that Philip II. King of Spain, and the Cardinals, having made Remonſtrances to him concerning it, he was pleaſed to ſuppreſs it. He ſays, that there are Copies of this Verſion ſtill to be ſeen in the Library belonging to the Great Duke of Tuſcany, in the Ambroſian Library at Milan, and in that of Geneva [q]. But this whole account is contradicted; [r] and it is confidently aſſerted, that there never was ſuch a Tranſlation, nor that any Copies are to be found in any Library of an Italian Bible, publiſhed by the Directions of Sixtus V.

The Calviniſts have likewiſe their Italian Bibles. An Italian Bible tranſlated from the Hebrew of the Old, and from the Greek of the New Teſtament, was publiſhed at Geneva for their uſe in 1562. This is Brucioli's Tranſlation reviſed, and rendred much purer, and more elegant. The New Teſtament is taken rather from Fabius Tudeſque's Edition of 1560, than from that of Brucioli.

John Diodati publiſhed an Edition of the Bible in Italian, firſt of all in 1607, then again in 1641, wherein he has obſerved the ſame method, as in his French Verſion; that is to ſay, he is rather a Paraphraſt than a literal Tranſlator. His New Teſtament was publiſhed ſeparately at Geneva in 1608, and at Amſterdam and Harlem in 1665.

Maximus Theophilus printed likewiſe an Italian Tranſlation of the new Teſtament at Lions in 1551, which was dedicated to Francis de Medicis Duke of Tuſcany.

The Jews of Italy have no intire Verſion of the Bible in Italian, the Inquiſitors conſtantly refuſing to allow them the liberty of printing one. To ſupply in ſome ſort what was wanting in this particular, Leo of Modena in the year 1612, publiſhed a Dictionary in Italian and Hebrew, wherein he explains all the moſt difficult paſſages of the Bible in Italian [s]. So that this Work may ſerve in the room of an intire Tranſlation of the Bible in this Language.

Spaniſh Bibles.

James the firſt King of Arragon, who died in 1276, made a Conſtitution, which ordered, that whoſoever had the Books of the Old and New Teſtament in the language called Romance *, or in the vulgar language of the Country, and did not bring them to the Biſhop of the place, in order to be burnt, ſhould be looked upon as one ſuſpected of Hereſy, whether he were of the Laity or Clergy [t]. Theſe Books were probably tranſlated by the Albigenſes.

Alphonſo King of Caſtille gave Directions for tranſlating the Books of holy Scripture into the Caſtilian language, if Mariana is to be credited in this particular [u]. Geſner ſays, [v] that John King of Leon and Caſtille had likewiſe the holy Scriptures tranſlated into his language: He adds, that theſe Books were ſtill in being. We have indeed ſome Spaniſh Tranſlations of ſeveral parts of the Bible; which are to be found in many Libraries, but the Authors of them are not named.

The firſt Spaniſh printed Bible that we know of, is that which Cyprian de Valera ſpeaks of; and which he ſays was publiſhed about the year 1500. This Author declares he had ſeen it. Who the Tranſlator was, we cannot tell, but it is believed, that he lived about the year 1420, and that he tranſlated the whole Bible into Spaniſh, as it was then ſpoken in the Kingdom of Valencia.

The ſame Cyprian de Valera in the year 1602, printed at Amſterdam a Bible of his own tranſlating into Spaniſh from the Hebrew, which in reality is the ſame as that of Caſſiodore de Reyna a Calviniſt, reviſed and publiſhed under Valera's name.

In 1512, Ambroſe de Monteſin publiſhed the Epiſtles and Goſpels of the whole Year, which he had tranſlated into Spaniſh. I take no notice here of the Pſalms. and

[p] Greg. Leti vita Sixti V. Hetruſco Idiomate anni 1688. l. iv. p. 399. [q] Ibid. [r] Le Long Sacr. l. ii. p. 106, 107. [s] Richard Simon t. 1. Epiſt. Select. Ep. 25. initio. Vide P. le Long Bibliot. Bibliot. Sacr. t. 2. p. 114, 115. [t] Cangius ad vocem Romancium. t. 3. Gloſſar. Latin. [u] Mariana de Reb. Hiſpan. l. xiv. c. 7. [v] Geſner Partition. Theol. tit. 2. Sect. 6. lib. ult.

* The ſeveral dialects of Piedmont, Provence, Catalonia, and the Griſons Country may be called by this name: For tho' they have ſeveral Phraſes derived from the languages of the People round about them; yet they ſeem originally to come from the Roman, as it was uſed in the Ages of its greateſt Corruption: or rather from the old Italick, Gallick and Spaniſh Idioms, generally termed Langue Romance, according to Du Freſne's Obſervation, under the word Romancium. t. 3. Gloſſar. Latin. See F. le Long's Bibl. Sacr. t. 1. in the Article Biblia Lingua Romanenſi.

and other leſſer parts of the Bible tranſlated into this language by ſeveral Catholick Writers: Such a particular account would carry me too far.

Caſſiodore de Reyna, a Calviniſt, publiſhed his Tranſlation of the Bible in Spaniſh, from Pagninus's Latin Verſion of the Hebrew, and printed it at Baſil in 1569. Cyprian de Valera, as we have ſaid, reviſed it, and had it reprinted in 1602.

Francis Enzinas, otherwiſe called Driander, in 1543, publiſhed at Antwerp the New Teſtament in Spaniſh, tranſlated from the Greek, and dedicated it to the Emperor Charles V.

The Jews in Spain have the Old Teſtament in Spaniſh, tranſlated out of Hebrew for their uſe. Gilbert Voetius [w], and after him Henry Hottinger [x] have affirmed, that the famous Rabbi David Kimchi, who lived ſometime in the thirteenth Age, tranſlated the Bible into Spaniſh. But this Fact we very much queſtion, nor have we any knowledge of this Verſion, unleſs it be that, the Pentateuch whereof was printed at Conſtantinople in Hebrew Characters in the year 1546.

The firſt Bible which was printed in Spaniſh for the uſe of the Jews, was that printed at Ferrara in 1553, in Gothick Characters, and dedicated to Hercules d'Eſt Duke of Ferrara, whoſe Licence was annexed to the Tranſlation. The Pentateuch of this Edition is almoſt intirely like that, which was printed at Conſtantinople in 1546 in Spaniſh, but in Hebrew Characters. Without doubt this Verſion is very ancient [y], and was probably in uſe among the Jews of Spain, before Ferdinand and Iſabel expell'd them out of their Dominions in the Year 1492. And altho' the Jews in the Preface to their Bible of Ferrara, give out, that they have followed the Tranſlation of Pagninus the Dominican, yet it is plain that they did this only to avoid Proſecution from the Inquiſitors, who are very careful in prohibiting the Publication of the Bible in the vulgar tongue of their tranſlating. The Spaniſh Bible of Ferrara was reprinted in 1630, at Amſterdam, under the Inſpection of Manaſſeh Ben-Iſrael; and in 1661, by the Care and Diligence of Samuel de Cazéres.

German Bibles.

As the ſeveral Dialects of the German Language have made it very extenſive, and it has produced very many different Verſions, we do not take upon us here to mention all exactly, but thoſe only which are the beſt and principal of them: They who have a mind to be more particularly informed of them, may conſult thoſe Books which treat expreſly of them.

The firſt and moſt ancient Tranſlation of the Bible in the German Language, that we have, is that of Ulphilas Biſhop of the Goths [z], made about the Year 360. But this Biſhop did not think it proper to tranſlate the Books of Kings, which treat much of War; becauſe the Goths were already but too much inclined to this Exerciſe, and he was afraid of encouraging their martial humour ſtill more, by a recital of the Wars recorded in theſe parts of Scripture. We have no more remaining of this old Verſion, than what was found of it in the Abby of Verden near Cologn, in a Manuſcript written in Silver Letters; for which reaſon it is called Codex Argenteus. This Monument having fallen into the hands of M. De la Gardie Chancellor of Sweden, who bought it for five hundred Ducats; he permitted Francis Junius to take a Copy of it, and he printed it in 1665, with M. Marechal's Notes, and a Dictionary to explain it. This Manuſcript is ſtill preſerved at this day in the Library of Upſal, and it contains the four Goſpels, not altogether entire, but with many Breaks and Interſtices, becauſe the old Copy has ſuffered by time, and the Negligence of thoſe who have been Maſters of it.

Some Authors tell us [a], that Charlemain appointed a Tranſlation to be made of the New Teſtament in the Frank or German Language; but theſe Writers produce no old Evidence to warrant what they advance. We know that Charlemain took a great deal of pains to have the Latin Vulgate corrected, and that he made uſe of the Greek and Syriac Texts, in order to reſtore the New Teſtament to its purity. This appears by the Hiſtorians of his time [b], but they do not ſay, that he had the New Teſtament tranſlated into the Frank Language then in uſe, which was the ſame as the German.

Others [c] aſſert, that Lewis the Debonnaire gave orders to tranſlate the Scripture into Saxon: But this particular is not founded on any good hiſtorical proofs. We find here and there in Libraries ſeveral German Verſions of the Bible which are in Manuſcript, and pretty antient; but no one can aſſure us certainly, that they were made in the time of Charlemain, or of Lewis the Debonnaire. There was a Pſalter kept in the Library of S. Gal, [w] Voet. Bibliot. Studii Theol. l. ii. p. 511.

[x] Henric. Hotting. Diſſert. de Tranſlat. Bibl. in linguas vernaculas. Vide & P. le Long. t. 2. p. 123. Bibliot. Sacr.
[y] Idem. p. 129, 130.
[z] Socrat. l. iv. Hiſt. Eccl. c. 33 Sozomen. l. iii. Hiſt. Eccl. c. 37. Philoſtorg. l. ii. c. 5, &c.
[a] Vide Vit. Amerbach. Præfat. Dedicatoria ad Carol. V. Imp. & Ferdin. Cæſar. in Conſtitut. Caroli Magni. Hotting. Bibliothecarii quadripart. l. i. c. 3.
[b] Vide apud Andr. Ducheſne, t. 2. n. 7. p. 277.
[c] Vide apud P. le Long. t. 2. p. 145, 146. Bibliot. Sacr.

S. Gal, which was ſome Years ago deſtroyed by the Swiſs Proteſtants, and the Book of Job, tranſlated by Notkar Labeon Abbot of this Abby, who lived in the reign of the Emperor Arnold, about the Year 890. And Goldaſt aſſures us, that he had in his poſſeſſion at the time, when he was writing, a German Pſalter, written by Ekhardus the Younger, about the Year 1004. for the uſe of the Empreſs Cunegunda, Wife to the Emperor Henry II. This is all we know of the antiquity of theſe manuſcript Tranſlations.

As to the German Bibles which are printed, we ſee ſome very ancient, but for the moſt part they are without the date of the Impreſſion, unleſs it be added by ſome hand to them [d]; for which reaſon theſe dates are very much to be ſuſpected. The oldeſt with the Year fixed to it, and moſt certainly known by us, is that of Nuremburg, printed in 1477. and that of Augsburg, of the ſame Year. Of theſe there were ſeveral Editions in the Cities which we have named, before the appearance of Luther, and at Strasburg in 1485. but who the Authors are of this old Tranſlation, we cannot tell.

John Dietemberger tranſlated the Bible from the Vulgate into German; his Verſion was printed at Mentz in 1534. and has been ſince ſeveral times reprinted. The Criticks remark, that the Tranſlator copied almoſt throughout the German Tranſlation of the New Teſtament made by Jerom Emzer, Chaplain to George Duke of Saxony. Emzer undertook his Tranſlation in oppoſition to that of Luther, when this Reformer began firſt to ſhew himſelf.

John Eckius tranſlated the Old Teſtament from the Vulgate, but he declares in his Epiſtle dedicatory, that he joined Emzer's New Teſtament to it, which we lately mentioned; he being unwilling to imitate their injuſtice, who have put out his performance under their own name, without doing honour to him, who is the true Author of it. Eckius's Bible was printed in 1537.

Ferdinand Duke of Bavaria, and Elector of Cologn, procured a new Tranſlation of the Bible to be made by Gaſpar Ulembergius; it was printed at Cologn in 1630. but as Ulembergius was of Weſtphalia, and was not maſter of the German Tongue in all its purity, the Divines of Mentz reviſed his Verſion, and had a new Edition of it publiſhed in 1662. Theſe are the principal German Tranſlations, which have been produced by the Catholicks.

Martin Luther publiſhed his Tranſlation of the Old and New Teſtament from the Hebrew and Greek Originals, after having been imployed eleven Years in this work. The Pentateuch was put out in 1522. the hiſtorical Books of the Old Teſtament and the Pſalter in 1524. Solomon's Books are ſuppoſed to have been printed in 1527. Iſaiah in 1529. the Prophets in 1531, and 1532. the other Books of the Old Teſtament in 1530. the New Teſtament in 1522. Several Editions of the whole have been ſince publiſhed of Luther's tranſlating. The Learned agree that the Language of it is pure, and the Verſion clear, and without any intricacies. But the Author is oftentimes rather a Paraphraſt than a true Interpreter [e].

Luther's Bible was corrected ſeveral times by himſelf while he was living, and by others after his death. But theſe are particulars that do not properly come under our conſideration in this place. The German Bibles which have been printed in Saxony, Switzerland, and elſewhere, are for the moſt part the ſame, as to the ſubſtance and foundation of them, with that of Luther, with very little variation. For example, that of Zurick, which is the moſt celebrated, and that about which the greateſt pains have been employed, delivers the ſenſe of the Old Teſtament almoſt throughout, according to the Interpretation of Leo de Juda a German Miniſter who tranſlated the Bible out of Hebrew into Latin. Neverthelefs in many places it copies the expreſſions which Luther had made uſe of in thoſe Books of the Bible which he had then publiſhed, for his whole Bible was not as yet printed.

In 1604. John Piſcator publiſhed a new Tranſlation of the Bible in the German Tongue, made by him, from the Latin Verſion of Junius and Tremellius. He confined himſelf ſo much to the ſenſe of theſe Authors, and their manner of delivering it, that it was the opinion and complaint of many, that his Tranſlation abounded with turns of Expreſſion, which were purely Latin, and not at all agreeable to the genius of the German Language.

The Anabaptiſts have likewiſe their German Bible, printed at Worms in 1529. and tranſlated by Lewis Hetzerus, with the aſſiſtance of John Denkius. Theſe Tranſlators are ſaid to have made great uſe of the Zurich Verſion.

John Crellius publiſh'd his German Tranſlation of the New Teſtament at Racovia in 1630. And Felbinger printed another Tranſlation of it at Amſterdam in 1660.

The

[d] Vide le Long, p. 150, 151.

[e] Vide P. le Long. Bibliot. Sacr. t. 2. p. 163, 164. & Autores ab eo laudatos. We are aſſured, that in order to improve the purity and beauty of his Tranſlation, he got it reviſed by ſeveral perſons of quality, who were perfect maſters of all the delicacy of the German Language. See the Life of Luther ſet forth in Medals.

The Jews of Germany have ſome Verſions of the Bible in their Language, part whereof are printed in Hebrew, the reſt in German Characters. The objection to their Tranſlations is, that they are too literal, and render ſervilely the Hebrew Text word for word in German.

Flemiſh Bibles.

The Flemiſh Bibles, which were prepared for the uſe of the Catholicks, are very numerous, and for the moſt part have no name of any Author prefixed to them, till that of Nicholas Vink appeared, which was printed at Lovain in 1548, and the ſame year at Cologn. The Author confeſſes that he was aſſiſted in his undertaking by two Divines of Louvain, whoſe names he does not mention.

The Flemiſh Verſions, which the Calviniſts made uſe of till the Year 1636. or 1637. were copied from that of Luther, or that of Zurich in Switzerland. But their Synod of Dort having in 1618. and 1619. appointed a new Tranſlation of the Bible to be made into Flemiſh, Deputies were named for this work, which was not finiſhed till 1636. and 1637. ſince which time there have been very many Editions of it.

Daniſh Bibles.

The firſt Edition of the Daniſh Bible printed in 1550. was made by Peter Palladius, Olaus Chryſoſtom, John Synningius, and John Maccabæus, wherein Luther's firſt German Verſion was the model which they followed. This Edition was reviſed and reprinted in 1589.

John Paul Reſenius, Biſhop of Zealand, publiſhed likewiſe in the Year 1605. a new Daniſh Bible, tranſlated from the original Hebrew. The Tranſlator has too ſervilely endeavour'd to render his original literally, by which means he has made himſelf almoſt unintelligible in his own Language. His Verſion is harſh and obſcure. But in 1633. Chriſtian IV. King of Denmark, gave orders to have it corrected, and put into a better Style.

John Michel tranſlated the New Teſtament into Daniſh, and printed it at Lipſick in 1524. and at Antwerp in 1529. and Chriſtian, Son to Peter Canon of Lunden, put out a Tranſlation of it likewiſe in 1531. Upon the firſt Edition of this Verſion it was thought very barbarous, but in the following Editions it was corrected.

Swediſh Bibles.

The Author of S. Bridget's Life [f] ſays, that this Saint who lived in the fourteenth Age, was a diligent reader of the Holy Bible; and that ſhe procured it to be tranſlated into her mother Tongue. Matthias Canon of Lincolp, and Confeſſor to this Saint, is ſaid to be the Author of this Tranſlation; but there is now no Copy of it that we know of, to be found any where.

In 1534. Olaus, and Lawrence the Son of Peter, publiſhed a Swediſh Bible which they had tranſlated from the German Verſion of Martin Luther. Guſtavus Adolphus King of Sweden had it reviſed about the Year 1617. ſo that afterwards it was almoſt generally followed; for tho' it has been ſince frequently corrected, yet the ſubſtance of it is ſtill the ſame.

Engliſh-Saxon, and modern Engliſh Bibles.

We are aſſured that Adelmus Biſhop of Sherburn [g], who lived in 709. made an Engliſh-Saxon Verſion of the Pſalms, and that Eadfridus or Ecbertus, Biſhop of Lindiſferne *, who lived about the Year 730. tranſlated ſeveral Books of Scripture into the ſame Language [h]. It is ſaid likewiſe [i], that venerable Bede, who died in 735. tranſlated the whole Bible into Saxon. But Cuthbert, Bede's Diſciple, in the enumeration of his Maſter's Works, ſpeaks only of his Tranſlation of the Goſpel, and ſays nothing of the reſt of the Bible [k].

Some will have it that Alfred King of England, who lived in 890. tranſlated likewiſe a great part of the Scripture into his own Language, at leaſt that he ſet about a Tranſlation of the Pſalter [l], which he did not live to finiſh. Balæus cites alſo William of Malmesbury, who ſays, that King Ethelſtan directed a Tranſlation to be made of the Old Teſtament out of Hebrew into Engliſh Saxon. It is very probable that ſome Jew converted to Chriſtianity had the care of this Work.

We find an old Verſion in this Language, of ſeveral Books of the Bible made by Elfrick Abbot of Malmesbury. William Lille an Engliſhman, in the Year 1638. printed the Fragments of the Bible tranſlated by this Elfrick, at London; but Edmund Thwaits publiſhed Elfrick's genuine Tranſlation at Oxford, in 1699. There are ſeveral manuſcript Tranſlations of particular Books of Scripture in this Language but without the Authors names, which are to be ſeen in the Libraries of England [m].

Matthew

[f] Apud Surium 23. Julii. [g] Balæus Script. Britan. cent. 1. c. 88. [h] Idem cent. 2. c. 4. [i] Joan Foxius Præf. in Evang. Anglo-Sax. an. 1571. Joan. Caius l. i. de antiq. Academ. Cantabrig. p. 150. Balæus cent. 2. c. 1. [k] Acta SS. Ord. S. Bened. t. 3. parte 1. p. 537. [l] Guillelm. Malm. l. ii. de Geſtis Reg. Angl. l. v. ad an. 893. [m] See F. le Long's Bibl. Sacr. t. 2. p. 238. &c.

* Lindisfern in Holy Iſland, was a Biſhop's See belonging to the Kingdom of Northumberland. In the Year 995. Aldhun Biſhop of this place, to ſecure himſelf from the Daniſh Invaſion, removed to Durham, tranſported thither the Relicks of S. Cuthbert, his Predeceſſor in the See of Lindisfern, erected a Cathedral, and fixed his See there. See Camden's Britan. p. 947. Bede l. iv. c. 27. Dunelm. Hiſtor. de Dunelm. Eccleſ. p. 27.

Matthew Parker, in the Year 1571. publiſhed at London the four Goſpels in the Engliſh-Saxon Language. They were of ſome very old Tranſlation, the Author whereof was not known. Thomas Mareſchal reprinted them in 1665. in Engliſh-Saxon Characters, with remarks of his own added to them. Dr. Mill obſerves, that this old Verſion was made from a Latin Copy of the old Vulgate, which was in uſe over all the weſtern part of the World, before S. Jerom publiſhed his new Tranſlation; for which reaſon the Author of it is believed to be very antient.

As to the Engliſh Verſions of the Bible, the firſt Author of them is thought to have been John Trevisa, who finiſhed his Tranſlation in the Year 1357 [n]. The ſecond that we know of, who undertook a Work of this kind, was Wickliffe, the Manuſcript of whoſe Engliſh Tranſlation is in ſeveral Libraries in England; but we do not know that it was ever printed. Several other Manuſcripts of Engliſh Verſions are to be met with, but generally without the name of any Author affixed to them.

The firſt Engliſh Bible printed for the ſervice of the Catholicks, is that which was publiſhed at Doway in 1609 and 1610. and at Paris in 1635. This Bible contains only the Old Teſtament, and is tranſlated from the Vulgate, with Notes by ſome Divines of Doway. The New Teſtament was publiſhed at Rheims in 1582. with the Annotations of the Engliſh Divines in this place.

The Engliſh Bible was tranſlated for the uſe of Proteſtants, partly by William Tindal, and partly by Miles Coverdale. It was publiſhed at London in 1535. This Book, as well as the Authors of it, had very unaccountable fortune; but at laſt after much contradiction it paſſed, and King Henry VIII. commanded it to be printed, and placed in all the Churches in England, in order to be there publickly read [o].

Thomas Matthew's or John Rogers's Verſion, which was publiſhed at London in 1537. ſcarce differs in any thing from that we have been ſpeaking of. That which was put out at London in 1541. by the authority of King Henry VIII. was revis'd and corrected by Cuthbert Tunſtal and Nicholas Heath, the firſt, Biſhop of Durham, the ſecond, Biſhop of Rocheſter. The Year following, this very Verſion was prohibited by Act of Parliament and the King's Proclamation [p]; ſo that during the remainder of Henry VIII.'s reign, there was no Verſion of the Scripture in the vulgar Language publickly approved and authorized in England. But as ſoon as Edward was ſeated on the Throne, Cranmer procured a new Edition of the Bible tranſlated by Tunſtal and Heath, to which he added a Preface of his own. It was publiſhed at London 1549.

In Queen Mary's reign, ſeveral of the Engliſh, who had lived in exile at Geneva [q], undertook to make an Engliſh Tranſlation of the Bible from that of Geneva. It was put out in 1561. and dedicated to Queen Elizabeth; it was afterwards ſeveral times reprinted. But all the Engliſh were not pleaſed with it; for which reaſon Matthew Parker's Bible, called the Biſhop's Bible, was * reprinted in 1568. Vid. le Long Bibl. Sacr. t. 2. p. 264.

Laſtly, in 1612. in the reign of James I. the Bible, called the King's Bible, was publiſhed: This was tranſlated from the Greek and Hebrew by Andrews Biſhop of Wincheſter, and ſeveral other Divines, to the number of ſeven and forty, who ſhared the Work among them, and took great pains about it. Theſe are the principal Editions of the Bible in Engliſh.

Sclavonian Bibles.

It is believed that S. Jerom, who was of Dalmatia, tranſlated the Holy Scripture of the Old and New Teſtament into the Language of his own Country [r]; but this opinion is not ſupported by any good proofs: for firſt, S. Jerom was of Dalmatia, and not of Sclavonia; and ſecondly, when this Saint tells Sophronius in his Letter to him, that he had tranſlated the Scripture ſuæ linguæ hominibus, for ſuch as uſed his Language; we are to underſtand the Latin Tongue, which was very familiar and as it were natural to him.

Others are of opinion, that the Sclavonian Verſion was the Work of S. Cyril and Methodius, who were imployed in the converſion of the Sclavonians, about the Year 880. and this opinion is ſupported by two Hiſtorians of Bohemia, one of whom lived in 995. the other in 1200. This old Verſion was printed by the Muſcovites in 1581.

The firſt Bible printed in this Language, is that which was tranſlated by John of Glogow, and printed at Cracow. This Author died in 1507. and we have not the whole Bible of his Tranſlation, but ſeveral Books of it only, printed as we have ſaid at Cracow. Nor do we believe that there is an intire Verſion of the whole Bible printed in this Language; but only the Pſalter, and the Epiſtles and Goſpels for the whole Year.

Bohemian,

[n] Vide le Long. Bibl. Sacr. tom. 2. p. 250. [o] Acta Erudit. Lipſ. an 1694. p. 319. & Supplem. p. 184. 1. tom. [p] Joan. Durell. Vindic. Eccl. Angl. c. 27. p. 306. [q] Idem ſub finem c. 9. p. 72. [r] Vide le Long & Autores ab eo laudatos, p. 277.

* The Author here miſtakes, for the firſt impreſſion of this Bible was made in the Year 1568.

Bohemian, Polish, Russian, or Muscovite Bibles.

The Taborites, a sort of Bohemian Hereticks, procured a Bible to be printed in their Language at Venice, in 1506. This they had themselves translated from the Vulgate; it has been several times reprinted. But as the Text from which it was taken, did not please the new Reformers, their Brethren in the year 1579, printed the whole Bible translated from the Greek and Hebrew, by eight of their own Doctors, whom they had sent to the Schools of Wittemberg and Basil, particularly to study the original Languages in these places. This Bible was printed at the Castle of Cralitz in Moravia. The first Part, or Tome was published in 1579, and the sixth and last not till 1593.

The first Version of the Polish Bible that is any where known, is, they say, that composed by Hadewich Wife to Jagellon Duke of Lithuania, who imbraced Christianity in 1390. We are told likewise of a Polish Version of the Bible by Andrew de Jassowitz, and written in 1455, by the Order of Sophia, wife of Jagellon King of Poland. But these Bibles are in Manuscript only.

In 1599, there was a Polish Translation of the Bible published at Cracow, which was the Work of several Divines of this Nation, wherein James Wieck a Jesuit had a principal Share. Another was published in 1608, at Hanovia, probably Hayin in Bohemia, in the Province of Silesia, translated by Jerom of Leopolis, or as Sixtus of Sienna calls him, John of Leopolis.

In 1596, the Protestants published a Polish Bible from Luther's Version. It was reprinted in 1632, and dedicated to Uladislaus IV. King of Poland.

The Socinians have likewise their Bible in this Language, it was translated from the Greek and Hebrew, and printed at Brestia a City of Lithuania, in 1562. Some time after, viz. in 1572, another was put out by them at Caslaw, a City of Lithuania, revised and corrected by Simon Budneus. They have besides the New Testament translated by Martin Czechovick, and another by Valentine Smalcius.

The Russians or Muscovites in 1581 published the Bible in their Language at Ostrowick, translated from the Greek by S. Cyril the Apostle of the Sclavonians. But as this old Translation was too obscure, Ernest Glick, who had been carried captive to Moscow after the taking of Nerva, undertook to make a new Translation of the Bible in Sclavonian; and Glick dying in 1705, the Czar of Muscovy now reigning, gave Directions to continue the Work which he had begun, and appointed some particular Divines for this purpose [a]. But this new Translation has never yet been published, that I know of.

I shall say nothing more particularly in this place of the several Bibles translated into vulgar Languages. This is sufficient for a Dictionary. They who would have a more exact Knowledge of this matter, may consult such Authors as have written expresly on this Subject: For example, the critical Works of M. Simon on the Old and New Testament, and F. le Long's Bibliotheca Sacra, from whence we have borrowed almost all that we have here related.

As to the Authors of each respective Book of the Bible, the time wherein they wrote, their admission into the Canon, and other questions which are generally proposed concerning every one of them, the Reader may have recourse, if he pleases, to our Prefaces, and turn to such Articles in this Dictionary, wherein the names of these Books and of their Authors are to be met with.

BIBLIOTHECA. The Collection of the holy Scriptures of the Old and New Testament is sometimes called Bibliotheca Sacra, or Sacred Library. Thus we say, S. Jerom's Sacred Library, meaning the Collection of the Sacred Writings translated by him. We do not read that there were any Libraries formed among the old Hebrews, before the time of Nehemiah, and Judas Maccabæus. But the Annals of the Kings of Judah and Israel, which are mentioned after so summary a manner in the Books of Kings and Chronicles, may be considered as so many Libraries. Solomon complained so early as in his time, that there was no end of making Books. He himself had written a great many, Eccl. xii. 12. and among other Effects of his Magnificence, it is very probable, that he did not 1 Kings iv. 32, 33.
forget to compose a large and royal Library.

Ezra, who revised and put in order most of the historical Books of Scripture, had doubtless abundance of Memoirs, Annals, genealogical and other Registers, which are cited by him principally in the Chronicles. It is particularly remarked in the second Book of Maccabees, that 2 Macc. ii. 13.
Nehemiah founded a large Library in Jerusalem, composed of the Acts of the Kings, the Prophets, and of David, and the Epistles of the Kings concerning the holy Gifts. Judas Maccabæus imitated the Diligence of Nehemiah. He collected Ibid.
what the War with Antiochus Epiphanes had dispersed, and repaired what that had destroyed. There is mention likewise in the Book of Proverbs of several Sentences Prov. xxv. 1.

[a] Vide le Long Bibl. Sacr. p. 295, 296.

or Proverbs collected by the command of Hezekiah. Benjamin of Tudela, a Jewish Traveller *, says, That on the Banks of Euphrates, near the Prophet Ezekiel's Sepulchre, there was a large Library, which contained the Books that were in being under the first and second Temples. Among others, there was to be seen there the Volume of Ezekiel's Prophecy written with his own hand; there were also many other Books there; and it is the custom, says our Author, for all those who have no Children, to leave their Books as a Legacy to this Library.

BIBLUS, a City of Phœnicia. See hereafter Byblos.

BICHRI, the Father of Sheba, who was remarkable in his Rebellion against David, 2 Sam. xx. 1, 2, &c.

BIDKAR, Captain of the Guards to Jehu King of Israel: He was commanded by this Prince to cast the Body of Jehoram Son of Ahab into the Field of Naboth the Jezreelite, 2 Kings ix. 25.

BIGTHAN. An Officer of the Guards to King Ahasuerus, or Darius the Son of Hystaspes, who having conspired against the King his Master, was discovered by Mordecai, Esth. ii. 21. The term Bigthan or Bagathan is not very different from Bagoas, which signifies an Eunuch. The Chaldee, and some Copies of the Septuagint imply, that Bigthan and Teresh his Companion conspired against the King, because they feared the future Elevation of Mordecai the Queen's Uncle. Others are of opinion, that they being very closely attached to Haman and his Interest, had formed a Design of setting him upon the Throne, and murdering Ahasuerus. This is certain, that the cause of their Discontent was not known.

I. BIGVAI and his Children returned from Babylon with Zerubbabel, Ezra ii. 2, 24.

II. BIGVAI returned from Babylon with Ezra, Ezr. viii. 14.

BILDAD, the Shuhite, one of Job's Friends, descended from Shuah the Son of Abraham and Keturah. Shuah's Family lived in Arabia Deserta, eastward of the Holy Land.

BILEAM, a City in the Tribe of Manasseh, on the other side of Jordan. It was given to the Levites of Kohath's Family, 1 Chr. vi. 70.

BILGAH, Principal of the fifteenth Band of Priests established by David, 1 Chr. xxiv. 14.

BILHAH, Rachel's Handmaid, given by her to her Husband Jacob, that at least through her means, she might have a Son. Bilhah conceived and brought Gen. xxx.
forth Dan, which word signifies Judg- 3. 4. 5. &c.
ment. She had a second Son also called Naphtali. The Testament of the twelve Patriarchs [t], an antient but Apocryphal Book, says, that Reuben Jacob's Son committed that act of Incest with which he is so sharply reproached in Gen. xlix. 3. with Bilhah his Father's Concubine; and that Rachel dying in labour of Benjamin, the Child was given to Bilhah to be brought up [u].

BILHAN, the Son of Jediael, and Father of Jeush. 1 Chr. vii. 10.

To BIND and loose, are taken in Scripture for condemning and absolving:
I will give unto you the keys of the king- Matt. xvi.
dom of heaven, and whatsoever ye shall 19.
bind on earth, shall be bound in heaven; and whatsoever ye shall loose on earth, shall be loosed in heaven.

By binding and loosing, in the language of the Jews [x], is understood likewise permitting or forbidding, or declaring any thing in a judicial manner to be permitted or forbidden; and in the Promotion of their Doctors, they put Keys into their hands, with these words, Receive the power of binding and loosing.

I am not come to unloose the law, but Mat. v. 17.
to compleat it, says our Saviour; that is to say, I am not come to destroy the Law, but to perfect it. Religion has perfected the Law of Moses, discovered the true Spirit of it, unravel'd all its secret Meanings, and accomplished all the Figures of it; and if it has abrogated some of its ceremonial Institutions, it was only with a design of making the essential points of it observ'd the better.

Ye shall not bind or muzzle the Ox's mouth that treadeth out the corn. See to Deut. xxv.
Thresh. To Bind is used for putting in 4.
Bonds, and in Prison. We are come to Judg. xv.
bind Samson, to make him our prisoner. 10.
To bind the Law upon one's hand for a sign; to wear it like a Bracelet on one's Deut. vi.
arm. And Prov. vi. 21. Bind my pre- 8.
cepts about thine heart, and tie them about thy neck. And again, vii. 3. Bind my Commandments upon thy fingers, and write them upon the table of thine heart. In Isai. viii. 16. Liga testimonium, signa legem, is to be understood in another sense. Seal what thou hast been writing, bind it about with thread or ribband, and put thy seal to it.

It is said that Daniel was found to be the most learned of the Diviners, Magi, and Interpreters of Dreams, and things hidden. Spiritus amplior—, & interpretatio somniorum, & ostensio secretorum & solutio

[t] Testament. xii. Patriarch. in Reuben, c. 3. [u] Idem in Benjamin. initio. [x] Lightfoot hor. Thalmud. in Matt. xvi. Maim. Tract. Sanhedrin.

* This Benjamin was of Tudela a City of Navarre, and lived in the eleventh Century. He travelled to all those places where he thought there were any Synagogues, in order to make himself well acquainted with the State and Condition of the Jews.

lutio ligatorum inventæ sunt in eo. And lower, Quod possit obscura interpretari & ligata dissolvere, &c. Where we see, that loosing things which were bound, is used as an expression to explain things concealed. Dan. v, vi. 16.

BINNUI, an Israelite, who separated from his Wife, he having married her contrary to the Law. Ezra x. 30.

BIRD, or Fowl. It is a disputed Point, whether Birds come out of the Earth or Water; and whether as to the use of them, they may not be placed in the Category of those Fishes, which are permitted to be eaten on fast days, when the Church forbids the use of Flesh; or whether they are really as much flesh-meat, as the four footed beasts. Opinions are divided on this question. Moses speaking of the Creation of Gen. i. 20. Birds, says, Producant aquæ reptile animæ viventis, & volatile super terram, sub firmamento cœli. Let the Waters produce living Fishes, and Fowls upon the Earth, under the Firmament of Heaven. The literal construction of the Hebrew runs thus, Let the waters produce creeping things that have life, and let the birds fly upon the earth. This Text does not clearly prove, that Fowls proceed from the Waters, as well as Fish. And Chap. ii. v. 19. of Genesis, seems to intimate, that Birds are taken from the Earth; Out of the ground the Lord God formed every beast of the field, and every fowl of the air. As to the Consequence which some would draw from it, viz. That the use of Fowl as well as Fish is allowable on Fast-days, it is manifestly wrong, since Fowls are more delicate than the Flesh of four-footed beasts, and are neither less juicy, nor less contrary to the Spirit of fasting, which is Abstinence, and the Mortification of the Senses. Nec ideo te carne vesci non putes, says S. Jerom, si suum agrestium, leporum atque cervorum, & quadrupedum animantia esculentias reprobes; non enim hæc pedum numero, sed suavitate & gustu comprobantur.

The opinion of Birds proceeding from Water as well as Fish, seems to be better founded on Scripture and the Fathers. The Text of Moses very much favours it. He relates in the same place, Chap. i. v. 20. the Creation of Fish and of Fowls. He says not a word of Fowls on the sixth day, where he speaks of the Production of terrestrial Creatures, Gen. i. 24, 25. And in the Recapitulation of the Works of the fifth day, Chap. i. v. 21. he says expresly that God created Fishes, and Sea Monsters, and all the winged Fowl, according to their species. Lastly, he says, that God blessed what he had created the fifth day, and said to the Fishes, Multiply and fill the waters in the seas; and to the Fowls, Multiply in the earth. The Fathers, and the generality of Interpreters [w] have understood the Text of Moses in this Sense. They believed Fishes and Fowls to have had the same Original, and to have been created the same day.

Another proof which shews, that the Antients believed Fishes and Fowls to have sprung both from the Waters, is this, viz. They allowed themselves the use of Poultry upon days of Abstinence and Fasting; as appears in Socrates the Historian [x], and Nicephorus [y], who say, that formerly many did eat indifferently of Fish or Fowl, upon this Supposition, that both proceeded from Water. There were several Examples of holy Persons who used Fowls, tho' they professed Abstinence from Flesh. Epiphanius having served up a Fowl before S. Hilarion, this holy Monk refused to touch it [z], saying, that he never eat any thing which had had life. S. Epiphanius was not, certainly, unacquainted with the rules of a monastick life, and was far from tempting S. Hilarion that he might violate them. S. Jerom in his Letter to Salvina, supposes Fowls to be sometimes used on fasting days, tho' he did not approve the abuse which some made of this Permission, in giving a loose to their Sensuality. Bede [a] relates, that S. Cuthbert one day put a Duck before some Monks, who came to visit him. Altho' S. Bennet forbids his Monks to eat the Flesh of four-footed Beasts, [b] he does not expresly prohibit that of Birds; and there are several Examples which prove, that in his Order they did eat it without scruple upon certain days in the year [c]; for example, four or eight days at Christmas, and as many at Whitsuntide; and this at such times, when his Rule was most strictly observed. Concerning this matter, see the Commentators upon Genesis, Chap. i. v. 20, 21, 22. and the Authors, who have explained S. Bennet's Rule, Chap. xxxix. See in particular F. Haeften in his monastick Disquisitions, and F. Martenne in his Comment on S. Bennet's Rule.

Some Interpreters [d] have asserted, that Birds were made of the Earth as well as fourfooted Creatures; and others have maintained, [e] that they rather proceeded from the Air, because the Air and Water are [w] Vide Ambros. l. v. c. 14. in Hexaëmer. & hymno feriæ 4. ad Vesper. Cyrill. l. i. in Genes. Damasc. de fide Orthod. l. ii. c. 9. Basil. Homil. 9. in Hexaëmer. Hieronym. Ep. ad Oceanum. Vide Peter. & alios Interp. ad Genes. i. 20, 21, 22. [x] Socrat. l. v. Hist. c. 21. [y] Nicephor. Hist. l. xii. c. 34.

[z] Monument. Eccl. Græc. t. 1. p. 428. [a] Bede in vita S. Cutbert. [b] S. Benedict. Reg. c. xxxix.
[c] Vide Theodemar. Epist. ad Carol. August. & Martenne, Comment. in Reg. S. Bened. c. xxxix. p. 525, 526.
[d] Cajet. Cathar. Lipom. Vielmias, Zurich, &c. [e] August. l. iii. de Genes. ad Litt. 3. Rupert. l. i. c. 50. de Trinitate.

are ſomething related; and it is natural for animals to live in the Element, whence they ſprang, as we ſee that animals produced from the Earth, live upon the Earth, Fiſhes as they proceeded from Water, live in Water. Thus they ſay, Birds living in the Air, is a ſtrong preſumption that they were made of Air. Theſe things are treated more at length in the Commentators, as may be ſeen by thoſe who have a mind to conſult them.

If any one would know what Birds were clean or unclean, according to the Law, he may have recourſe to Leviticus xi. 13---24. and Deut. xiv. 11, 12. and we have ſaid ſomething of each of them in particular under their proper titles in this Dictionary.

Birds were offered in Sacrifice upon many Occaſions; for example, in the Sacrifices ordained for ſin, he who had not a
Lev. v. 7, 8. Lamb or a Kid, might offer two turtles or two young pigeons, one for a ſin-offering, and the other for a burnt-offering, theſe he preſented to the Prieſt, who offered that firſt which was for the ſin-offering, and wrung off his head from his neck, but did not divide it aſunder: the other he was to offer for a burnt-offering, according to the manner: In another place Mo-
Lev. i. 14, 15, 16. ſes relates more at length the manner wherein the Sacrifice of Fowls was performed. The Prieſt took that which was appointed for the Burnt-offering, brought it unto the altar, wrung off his head, and burnt it on the altar: and the blood thereof he wrung out at the ſide of the altar: and he pluckt away his crop with his feathers, and caſt it beſide the altar on the eaſt-part, by the place of the aſhes: and he clave it with the wings thereof, but did not divide it aſunder; and he burnt it upon the altar, upon the wood that is upon the fire.

Lev. i. 15. Some Interpreters [f] will have it, that the head of the Bird was pulled off, but others maintain, that there was only a hole opened with the nails between the head and the throat, without ſeparating intirely the head from the body. The Text of Moſes does not intimate what was done with the Head thus ſeparated; and it is obſerved, that when Abraham offered Birds for a Burnt-offering, he did not cut them aſunder, but placed them intire upon the other Victims which
Gen. xv. 10. he ſacrificed, Aves autem non diviſit. In the other places where Moſes ſpeaks of the Sacrifices of Birds, he does not command the Heads to be pluckt off. See Levit. v. 7, 8. When a Man who had been ſmitten with a Leproſy, was healed, he came to the entrance into the Camp of Iſrael, and the Prieſt went out in order to Lev. xiv. 5, 6.
diſcover whether he were well cured. After this the leprous perſon came to the door of the Tabernacle, and offered two Sparrows or two Birds alive, and pure, whereof it was lawful to eat; he made a Wiſp with the Branches of Cedar and Hyſſop tied together with a Thread, or Scarlet Ribbon; he filled an earthen Pot with running Water, ſo that the Blood of the Bird was mingled with it; then the Prieſt dipping the bunch of Hyſſop and Cedar into the Water, ſprinkled the Leper with it who was healed, after which he let the living Sparrow looſe, that it might fly where it would.

As to what relates to the diſtinction of clean and unclean Birds: See the diſtinction of them above in the Article Animal.

Dead Bodies were ſometimes left in Paleſtine, expoſed to Birds of prey, as appears from ſeveral paſſages of Scripture.
But generally they were buried in the Deut.
evening; and the very Bodies of Crimi- xxxii. 24. and 2 Sam.
nals were taken down from the Gallows. xxi. 10.
There were only ſome extraordinary Caſes 1 Kings wherein dead Bodies were thrown into the xiv. 11. Jerem. vii.
common Sewers. 13.

Moſes, in order to inſpire the Iſraelites Deut. xxi.
with Humanity, requires them, if they 23.
find a Bird's Neſt, not to take the Dam xxii. 6, 7.
with the Young, but to ſuffer the old one to fly away, and take the Young only; that, ſays he, it may be well with thee, and that thou mayeſt prolong thy days.

It appears from Scripture, that the Antients hunted Birds; Baruch ſpeaking of Baruch iii.
the Kings of Babylon, ſays, That they had 17.
their paſtime with the fowls of the air.
Daniel tells Nebuchadnezzar, that God Dan. iii. had made the Fowls of the Air ſubject to 38.
him.

The Prophets ſpeak often of Birds of paſſage, of the Swallow and the Stork that return to the place of their firſt Habitation, whereas Man does not acknow- Prov.
ledge the Lord his God. God ſays, that xxvii. 8. xxvi. 2.
he will recall his captive People like a Jer. viii. 7.
Bird that cometh from a far Country. Hoſ. ix.

The Lord ſpeaking of his People, ſays 12. xi. 11.
in Jeremiah [g], Mine heritage is unto me as Jer. xii. 9.
a ſpeckled bird: come ye, aſſemble all ye 10.
beaſts of the field, come to devour. As if he ſaid, Judah was like a Bird of charming beauty, yet have I ſpared him whenever he offended me: have I not given him up to Birds of prey, to be devoured by them? The Hebrew may be literally tranſlated thus, Is not mine heritage as a ſpeckled bird, is it not with reſpect to me a bird ſhut up? one of the moſt beautiful birds for a cage; nevertheleſs have I not given

[f] טלקאת ראשו 70. Ἀποκνίσει κεφαλὴν Rabb. alii plures.

[g] נחלתי לי העיט צבועהעיט כבוב עלוה given it to the beasts of prey? Some translate the Hebrew [i], is not mine heritage become like an Hyena against me? is not all mine heritage filled with wild beast? &c.

The Hebrew word Zippor, translated generally Sparrow, is taken likewise in general for a small bird, and sometimes for a Pullet. The Preacher speaking of old Eccl. xii. 4. men, says, that they rise up at the voice of the bird, that is to say at the crowing of the Cock. The Greek, Ornis, signifies a Bird, a Hen; and the Translator of Origen [k] has used pullet for bird.

BIRSHA, King of Gomorrah, who was at war with Chedorlaomer, and his Allies, Gen. xiv. 2.

BIRZAVITH, the Son of Malchiel, 1 Chron. vii. 31.

BISHLAM Mithridath, one of the King of Persia's Officers on this side the Euphrates, who with Reum Beelteem, wrote to King Artaxerxes, desiring him to give his orders to the Jews, not to go any further with their building of the Temple, Ezra iv. 7.

BISHOP, in Greek, Episcopos, in Latin Episcopus, which signifies an Overseer, one who has the inspection and direction of Nehem. xi. 22. any thing. Nehemiah speaks of the Overseer of the Levites [l] at Jerusalem, Et episcopus Levitarum in Jerusalem Azzi filius Bani *. Uzzi had the inspection of the other Levites. The Hebrew word Pekid, which we render Episcopus, has the same signification. The Athenians gave this name to the person, who presided in their Courts of Justice, and the Digest to those Magistrates, who had the inspection of the Bread Market, and other things of this nature. But the most common notion of Acts xx. 28. the word Bishop, is that which occurs to us in the Acts, and in S. Paul's Epistles, Philipp. i. 1. where it signifies the principal and first Pas- 1 Tim. iii. tor of some considerable Church, with other 2 Tit. i. 7. inferior and subordinate Pastors under him.

Bishops are the successors of the Apostles, and chief Judges of such controversies as relate to the Faith of Christians. S. Peter 1 Pet. ii. 25. calls Jesus Christ, the Shepherd and Bishop of our souls. And indeed he is the Pastor and Bishop of all those who have either of these denominations. S. Paul describes the qualities requisite in a Bishop, after this 1 Tim. iii. 1, 2, &c. manner: If a man desire the office of a bishop, he desireth a good work. A bishop then must be blameless, the husband of one wife, vigilant, sober, of good behaviour, given to hospitality, apt to teach, not given to wine, no striker, not greedy of filthy lucre, but patient, not a brawler, not covetous, &c. From Episcopus comes Episcopatus, which the Psalmist makes use of to signify office, Psal. cviii. 8. of the Vulgate Translation. inspection and government. And S. Peter produces the same term, to denote the Apostleship, which the traitor Judas had forfeited by his perfidiousness. S. Matthias was substituted in his room, and admitted to his charge of Bishop. Et episcopatum ejus accipiat alter, and his bishoprick let another take. Acts i. 20.

BITHIAH, the Daughter of Pharoah, and Wife of Mered, 1 Chron. iv. 18.

BITTER. Bitterness. I will send the Chaldeans against you that bitter nation; Hab. i. and in another place [m], take care lest people, who are bitter of Soul amari animo, Judg. xviii. 25. or, as in the Vulgate, animo concitati, run upon thee? and again, David in his flight 2 Sam. xvii. was accompanied with men bitter of Soul, or chafed in their minds, as a Bear robbed of her Whelps. The energy of these expressions is sufficiently discernible; it denotes anger, vexation, fury. Sometimes bitterness of Soul signifies only grief. Thus Hannah the Mother of Samuel, was in bitterness of soul; and of Elisha's 1 Sam. i. 10. Landlady, whose son was dead, it is said, her soul is vexed or bitter within her. Job complains that God wrote bitter things 2 Kings iv. 27. against him, that were matter of grief, Job xiii. 26. sadness, and affliction.

The waters of jealousy, which Women suspected of adultery were obliged to drink, are called bitter waters, by reason Numb. v. of their effects, they produced great sorrows in those who were guilty. Bitter envying in S. James, denotes mortal and per- James iii. manent hatred, the effects whereof cause abundance of bitterness to those who are the objects of it. King Hezekiah in his Hymn says, that in the midst of the peace Is. xxxviii. 17. which he enjoyed, he was attacked with great bitterness, that is to say, with a very dangerous disease, Ecce in pace amaritudo mea amarissima. And Jeremiah, Learn Jer. xi. how hard and bitter it is to be forsaken of the Lord; to how many evils and calamities this exposes you.

BITUMEN, a fat, combustible, oily matter, to be found in many places, particularly about Babylon, and in Judea, in the lake Asphaltites, or the Dead-Sea †. Noah did over the Ark with Bitumen, and Gen. vi. 14. the Builders of the Tower of Babel made use of this matter for a cement. The lit- Gen. xi. 3. tle vessel also wherein Moses was exposed, near to the banks of the river Nile, was daubed over with Bitumen. Exod. ii. 3.

BLAS-

[i] 70 & Bochart. de Animal Sacr. t. 1. l. iii. c. 11. [k] Origen. [l] פקיר הלוים 70. Ἐπίσκοπος Ἀσιτᾶς. [m] מרי נפש fall upon thee.

* The Jews here in England, under the first Norman Kings, had one over them, who was licensed by them to this office, and stiled Episcopus Judæorum. See Selden's Marmora Arundeliana, cited by Dr. Prideaux.

† Demetrius, while he was encamped upon the Dead-Sea, observing the nature of this Bitumen, formed a project, whereby the royal Revenue might be encreased by it; this he laid before Antigonus, by whom it was approved; and Jerom the Cardian sent to see it executed. But while he and his workmen were imployed there, the Arabians fell upon them, and dispersed them, and the design was never after prosecuted, Diodor. Sic. l. 19. See Prid. Connect. &c. P. 1. B. viii.

BLASPHEMY. A man is guilty of the ſin of Blaſphemy, when he ſpeaks of God or his Attributes in an injurious manner, when he aſcribes ſuch qualities to him as do not belong to him, or robs him of thoſe which do. The Law paſſes ſentence of death upon Blaſphemers. (Levit. xxiv. 12. 16.) Whoſoever heard another blaſpheming, and was a witneſs to his offence, laid his hand upon the criminal's head, to expreſs as it were by this ceremony, that he laid the whole blame and puniſhment of this action upon him. The guilty Perſon was led out of the city, and all the people ſtoned him.

BLIND. Blindneſs. Blindneſs is ſometimes taken for a real privation of light, ſometimes for no more than a dimneſs of ſight; for example, the blindeſs of the man in the Goſpel who was born blind, and that of Tobit were real, and they had truly loſt their ſight. The men of Sodom, who endeavoured to find Lot's door, and could not, (Gen. xix. 11.) and S. Paul, for the three firſt days of his being at Damaſcus, (Acts ix. 9.) loſt the uſe of their ſight only for a ſeaſon, the offices of their eyes were ſuſpended. The Septuagint * have extremely well repreſented the ſituation wherein the inhabitants of Sodom were, by expreſſing that they were ſtruck aoraſia, as if they had ſaid avidentia, with an actual inability of ſeeing.

(Levit. xix. 14.) Moſes forbids the putting any thing before the blind with a deſign of making them fall; thou ſhalt not put a ſtumbling block before the blind, which may be underſtood ſimply and literally; or as if Moſes had thereby recommended that humanity and charity which ſhould be ſhewn to them, who want light and counſel, to put thoſe in the way, who are in danger of going out of it, to inſtruct the ignorant, not to offend the poor and weak. Moſes ſeems to explain his meaning in Deuteronomy, (Deut. xxvii. 18.) where he ſays, Curſed be he that maketh the blind to wander out of his way.

The Jebuſites in the way of inſult to David and his army, who beſieged Jeruſalem, mocked them in theſe words, (2 Sam. v. 6.) Thou ſhalt not come in hither except thou take away the blind and the lame, who defend the place, as if in reality to make their inſult appear greater, they had produced people of this ſort upon their walls, or as if their meaning were, that they deſir'd none but the blind and the lame to defend their city. Jeruſalem notwithſtanding was carried, and David forgave none of thoſe blind and lame people who inſulted him, he ſmote the lame and the blind that were hated of David's ſoul. Job ſays that he (Job xxix. 15.) had been eyes to the blind, that he had given good advice to thoſe who ſtood in need of it, that he had taken pains to ſet them right who through want of light and underſtanding had gone aſtray. Our Saviour almoſt in the ſame ſenſe ſays, that if the blind lead the blind they will both (Matt. xv. 14.) fall into the ditch. His deſign was, to deſcribe the preſumption of the Phariſees, who as blind as they were in the ways of God, yet pretended to lead others. Again he tells them in another place, that he came (John ix. 40, 41.) into the world to the end that they who ſee not might ſee, and that they which ſee might be made blind. And as the Phariſees perceived that this was ſaid with a view to them, they replied, Are we blind alſo? he anſwered them, If ye were blind, ye ſhould have no ſin; but now ye ſay, we ſee, therefore your ſin remaineth. If you had been ſincere and humble enough to acknowledge that you wanted light, and had you addreſſed yourſelves to him, who is the light of the world, you might have avoided ſin, &c.

One of the principal characters of the Meſſiah taken notice of in the Prophets is, (Iſ. xxix. 18. xxxv. 5. xlii. 16.) that the blind ſhall be enlightened by him. This therefore Jeſus Chriſt propoſed to the obſervation of John's Diſciples, who came from their maſter to be inform'd whether he were the perſon whom they expected. Tell John, ſays he to them, what ye have ſeen and heard; The blind ſee, the deaf receive their hearing, &c. (Matth. xi. 5.) The Evangeliſts have preſerved the memory of more miraculous cures than one which were wrought by our Saviour on the blind.

Blindneſs of Heart in the obdurate Jews is often taken notice of, particularly in the Books of the New Teſtament, our Saviour ſaw and was afflicted at it. (Mark iii.) Iſaiah foretold it, and God ſpeaking to him of it ſaid, Go, tell (Iſa. vi. 9. 16.) this people, ſee ye indeed but perceive not, make the heart of this people fat, and their ears heavy, and ſhut their eyes. That is to ſay, propheſy and tell them, that will be blind and obdurate, that they ſhall neither ſee nor underſtand what is deſigned in order to procure ſalvation for them.

BLOOD. God from the beginning of the World forbad the eating either of blood (Gen. ix. 4, 5, 6.) alone, or of blood mixed with fleſh, that is to ſay, creatures ſuffocated and killed without drawing their blood from them; becauſe the ſoul of the creature is in its blood; that is to ſay, the animal life does (Levit. xvii. 11. Deut. xii. 23.) ſo depend upon the blood, that no creature can live without it *. From hence proceed the ſeveral acceptations of the word Blood.

1. It is taken for life. God will require the blood of a man, that is to ſay, he will puniſh murder, in what manner ſoever it ſhall happen. His blood be upon us, let them impute his death to us. The voice

* בסנורים 70. Ἀορασία.

* According to which notion is Virgil's expreſſion in his ninth Æneid deſcribing the death of Rhætus. Purpuream vomit ille animam.

voice of Abel's Blood crieth unto the Lord. The Murder committed in his perſon crieth for Vengeance. Propinquus ſanguinis ultor ſanguinis; he who is to revenge Murder committed in the Perſon of his Relation. Numb. xxxv. 24. 27.

2. Blood, means Relation. No one ſhall come near to any Woman who is near of kin to him. Ad proximam ſanguinis ſui. Lev. xviii. 6. Haman was a Stranger from the Perſian Blood; he was of a foreign Race. Eſth. xvi. 10.

3. Blood is taken for that which commonly happens to Women. Lev. xx. 18. Qui coierit cum Muliere in fluxu menſtruo, ----ipſaque aperuerit fontem ſanguinis ſui, interficientur ambo. And, Lev. xv. 24. Si coierit cum ea vir tempore ſanguinis menſtrualis, immundus erit ſeptem diebus----. Lev. xii. 4. Si pepererit maſculum, triginta tribus diebus manebit in ſanguine purificationis ſuæ.

4. Fleſh and Blood are often ſet in oppoſition to Wit and Reaſon. Fleſh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but my Father which is in Heaven. Mat. xvi. 17. Fleſh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God. 1 Cor. xv. 50. We wreſtle not againſt fleſh and blood, againſt viſible Enemies compoſed of Fleſh and Blood, but againſt principalities and the powers of this world, againſt Devils, &c.

5. Wine is alſo called the pure Blood of the Grape. Sanguinem uvæ bibent meraciſſimum. Deut. xxxii. 14. And Judah ſhall waſh his Garments in the Blood of the Grapes. Gen. xlix. 11.

6. The Prieſts are eſtabliſhed by God to judge between Leper and Leper, between Blood and Blood; that is to ſay, to judge in criminal matters, and where the Life of a Man is at ſtake; whether the Murder be caſual, or voluntary; whether it deſerves Death or Pardon.

7. David ſaid, he would not drink the Blood of his Heroes, who had expoſed their Lives to bring him Water from the Well of Bethlehem; that is to ſay, he would not drink of that Water, which had been ſo near coſting them their Lives. 1 Chr. xi. 19.

8. God reſerved to himſelf the Blood of all Sacrifices, as abſolute Maſter of Life and Death. The Blood of Animals was poured upon his Altar, or at the foot of his Altar, according to the nature of the Sacrifices; and if the Temple was too remote, it was poured upon the ground, and covered with duſt. This Blood of the Sacrifices in the Old Teſtament, was only a figure of that Blood which Jeſus Chriſt has poured forth for us, and which merits for us the forgiveneſs of our Sins.

Blood. A Man of Blood: An Huſband of Blood; that is to ſay, a cruel and ſanguinary Man, a Huſband purchaſed with much Blood, or who is the occaſion and innocent cauſe of the effuſion of his Son's Blood; thus Zipporah called her Huſband Moſes, when ſhe had circumciſed her Sons, in order to preſerve them from Death, with which they were threatned. To build one's houſe with Blood; that is to ſay, Hab. ii. 12. with Oppreſſion, and the Blood of the unhappy. To waſh one's Feet in Blood, to obtain a ſignal and bloody Victory. Pſal. lviii. 11. The Vulgate reads to waſh his hands; but the Hebrew imports, he ſhall waſh his feet. The revenger of Blood is he Numb. xxxv. 27. who, according to cuſtom, had the charge, as neareſt Relation, to purſue the Murderer of his Kinſman, and ſeek Blood; that is to ſay, to take vengeance on him.

Libera me de ſanguinibus, deliver me Pſ. l. 16. from Blood, forgive me the Murther of Uriah, whom I ſlew. I will viſit the Blood Hoſ. i. 4. of Jezreel, I will revenge the Blood which Jezabel hath ſhed there. Sanguis ſanguinem Hoſ. iv. 2. tetigit; they committed Murder upon Murder: The Blood was no ſooner wiped away, but more was ſhed. The Moon Joel ii. 31. ſhall be changed into Blood, it ſhall appear red like Blood. I ſaid unto thee even when thou waſt in thy Blood, live. I ſaw Ezek. xvi. 6. thee all over polluted with the Blood of thy Birth, and I ſaid to thee, notwithſtanding this Impurity which is upon thee, I will give thee Life. As for thee alſo, by the Blood of thy covenant I have ſent forth thy priſoners out of the pit, where there is no water. He ſpeaks of Zech. ix. 11. Jeſus Chriſt. Thou haſt delivered thy Captives the holy Fathers, who were in Hell; thou haſt redeemed them with the Blood of thy Covenant, which thou haſt ſhed for them. Some explain it of the Deliverance of the Hebrews out of Egypt; God relieved them out of this Priſon by the Blood of his Covenant, of his Paſchal Lamb. It is ſaid, that his Blood crieth from the Ground, that their land is drunken with Blood. Gen. iv. 10, 11. If. xxxiv. 7. That Blood is in any one's hands, upon any one's head, &c. All which Expreſſions are better underſtood by the particular Energy that goes along with them, than by all the Comments that can be made to explain them.

The Blood of Jeſus Chriſt is the Price of our Salvation; it is by his Blood that he has purchaſed his Church. Quam acquiſivit ſanguine ſuo. Acts xx. 28. It is by the Merit of his Blood that we acquire Juſtification, and the remiſſion of our Sins. We are juſtified in his Blood. Rom. v. 9. And again, We have redemption through his Blood. Eph. i. 7. and Coloſ. i. 14. By his Blood he hath pacified all things in Heaven and Earth; Pacificans per ſanguinem crucis ejus ſive quæ in terris, ſive quæ in cœlis ſunt. Coloſ. i. 20. By his Blood he hath entred into Heaven and procured admiſſion for us: By his own Blood he entred in once into the holy place, having obtained eternal redemption for us. Hebr. ix. 12. His Blood is the Blood of the new and everlaſting Covenant, Heb. xiii. 20. venant, ſhed for the Sins of Mankind, which is drunk by us, and is an earneſt to us of Immortality.

Luke viii. 43. The woman having an iſſue of Blood; ſhe is mentioned in the Goſpel, and ſaid to have had this Indiſpoſition twelve years, and to have ſpent her whole Fortune on Phyſicians, without any Succeſs. She came behind our Saviour and touched the border of his Garment, and immediately her Iſſue of Blood ſtanched. Hereupon Jeſus ſaid, who is it that hath touched me? S. Peter anſwered, Maſter, the Multitude throngs and preſſes thee, and thou ſayeſt, who touched me? But Jeſus ſaid, Some body hath touched me; for I perceive that vertue hath gone out of me. Then the Woman came trembling all over, and declared before all the People what had induced her to touch him, and how ſhe had been healed; and Jeſus ſaid unto her, Daughter, be of good comfort, thy Faith hath made thee whole; go in peace.

Saint Ambroſe is of opinion, that this Woman was Martha [o]. John Malala and Codinus call her Veronica. But Euſebius aſſures us, that ſhe was a Gentlewoman of the City of Paneas, near the ſource of Jordan, who, in acknowledgement of this Miracle, erected a Statue to our Saviour, which Euſebius affirms, that he had ſeen with his own Eyes. Sozomen [p] and Philoſtorgius [q] relate, that it was in being till the Emperor Julian's time.

BOANERGES, that is to ſay, The Son of Thunder. This is the name given by our Saviour to the Sons of Zebedee, Mark iii. 17. James and John, upon the occaſion probably of their requeſt to him, that he would call for Fire from Heaven, and reduce a certain Village belonging to the Samaritans to Aſhes, which had refuſed Luke ix. 53. 54. to entertain them. The term Boanerges is neither Hebrew nor Syriac. There is ſome reaſon to believe, that the Greek Tranſcribers have not copied it exactly, and that inſtead of Baneregem, [r] Son of Thunder, or Bane-reges, [s] Son of Tempeſt, they wrote Boanerges. Or laſtly, Boanerges may be an ill way uſed by the Galilæans of pronouncing Banereges.

BOAR, Aper, or ſingularis ferus. This Beaſt was unclean, as well as the Hog. The Prophet complains in the Pſalms, that the wild Boar of the Foreſt hath rooted Pſal. lxxx. 13. up the Lord's Vine. Singularis ferus depaſtus eſt eam. Which is underſtood either of Sennacherib, or Nebuchadnezzar, or Antiochus Epiphanes, who ravaged Judea. The Hebrew word Sis, is taken in general for all wild beaſts. See Pſalm xlix. 11. The Syriac underſtands it in the place cited of the wild Aſs, and the Chaldee of the wild Cock.

BOCHERU, the Son of Azel, of the Tribe of Benjamin. 1 Chr. viii. 38.

BOCHIM, the place of Mourners, or of Mulberry Trees. See hereafter Clauthmon.

BODY. An Aſſembly or Community is called a Body; for Example, all the 1 Cor. x. 17. Faithful make but one Body: Unum corpus multi ſumus. S. James ſays, that the James iii. 6. Tongue pollutes the whole Body, maculat totum corpus, the whole Body of our Actions; or that in all the Sins which we commit, it influences us by the other Members of the Body. Thus our Saviour in the Goſpel, If thine eye be ſingle, thy Matt. vi. 22. whole Body ſhall be full of light. If thy Intentions are right, thy whole Conduct will be agreeable to God. Or otherwiſe, If thine eye be ſingle, if thou art liberal and beneficent, all the reſt of thy actions will be good; at leaſt thou wilt avoid many Sins, which are the conſequence of Avarice, and a too great fondneſs for earthly things.

S. Paul ſpeaks of a ſpiritual Body, in 1 Cor. xv. 44. oppoſition to one which he calls animal, Seminatur corpus animale, ſurget corpus ſpirituale. The Body which we animate, and returns to the Earth, is an animal Body; but that which will riſe again will be ſpiritual, will be no more groſs, heavy, frail, &c. nor ſubject to the wants which we are now ſenſible of.

Body is oppoſite to Shadow, Figure, Which are a ſhadow of things to come, Coloſ. ii. 17. but the Body is of Chriſt. The Ceremonies of the Law, the Feſtivals of the Jews are but Figures and Shadows, which are realized in Jeſus Chriſt, and the Chriſtian Religion. The Jewiſh Paſſover for example, is but the Figure of the Chriſtian Paſſover; the Sacrifice of the Paſchal Lamb, is but a Shadow of the Sacrifice of Chriſt; the fulneſs of the Godhead reſides bodily in Jeſus Chriſt. In Coloſ. ii. 9 ipſo inhabitat omnis plenitudo divinitatis corporaliter, really, eſſentially. God dwells in the Saints as in his Temple; he dwells there by his Spirit, his Light, his Grace, but in Jeſus Chriſt, the whole fulneſs of the Godhead dwells, not allegorically, figuratively, and curſorily, but really and eſſentially. The Body of any thing in the Stile of the Hebrews is the very reality of the thing. The Body of Gen. xvi 13. xvii. 23. xii. 17. Lev. xxiii. 4. Day, the Body of Purity, the Body of Death, the Body of Sin, ſignify broad day, Innocence itſelf; the ſubſtance, reality, force of Sin; or our Body begotten in Sin. The Body of Death, ſignifies either our mortal Body, or the Body which violently [o] Ambr. de Solomone. c. 5. [p] Sozom. l. v. c. 20. Hiſt. Eccl. [q] Philoſtorg. Hiſt. l. vii. c. 3.

[r] בני רעם Bene-Rekem or Regem. [s] בני רעש Bane-Rahaſch or Ragaſch.

Oooo

lently engages us in Sin by Concupiſcence, which ſets up its Empire in our Members.

Ubicunque fuerit corpus, illic congregabuntur & aquilæ. Matt. xxiv. 28. This is a ſort of Proverb made uſe of by our Saviour in the Goſpel, and borrowed from the Book of Job xxxix. 30. where it is ſaid, that the Eagle hath its dwelling on the higheſt Rocks, viewing its prey at a great diſtance; and that as ſoon as there is a dead Body any where, it immediately reſorts thither to devour it. Our Saviour compares the Nation of the Jews to a Body, which God in his wrath hath given up to Birds and Beaſts of prey; wherever there ſhall be any Jews, there will be likewiſe Enemies to purſue and pillage them. Corpus in good Latin Authors is ſometimes uſed to ſignify a Carcaſe or dead Body.

Exod. xxi. 3. To come in with his Body, and go out with his Body, are Expreſſions, by which is meant a Servant's coming to, and going from his Maſter alone, without Wife and Children. If a Slave enters the Houſe with his Wife, he ſhall depart out of it with her in the Sabbatical Year. S. Jerom tranſlates it, Cum quali veſte introierit, cum tali exeat. But the beſt Interpreters underſtand it as we have juſt now ſhewn: Gaph in Hebrew ſignifies the Body, and the Lappet of a Garment.

Body is often uſed in the way of oppo-
Rom. viii. 10. ſition to ſpirit. The Body is dead becauſe of Sin, but the Spirit is Life becauſe of Righteouſneſs. We are born Sinners and mortal, but Jeſus Chriſt reſtores us to Life, and merits eternal Happineſs for us by his Death, and Grace if we perſevere in the practice of what is good.

BOETHIUS, the Father of Simon. This laſt was High Prieſt of the Jews, from the year of the World 3981, to 3999.

BONI PORTUS, The fair Havens upon the ſouthern Coaſt of Crete, near Thalaſſus or Laſſus. See Acts xxvii. 8.

BONNETS of the Hebrew Prieſts. See hereafter Cidaris, and the article of Prieſts.

BOOK; in Latin Liber, in Hebrew, Sepher, in Greek Biblos [t]. Several ſorts of Materials were uſed formerly in making Books. Plates of Lead and Copper, the Barks of Trees, Bricks, Stone and Wood, were the firſt Matter imployed to engrave ſuch things and Monuments upon, as Men were willing to have tranſmitted to Poſterity. Joſephus ſpeaks of [u] two Columns, one of Stone, the other of Brick, upon which the Children of Seth wrote their Inventions, and aſtronomical Diſcoveries. Porphyry [v] makes mention of ſome Pillars preſerved in Crete, on which the Ceremonies were recorded that were practiſed by the Corybantes in their Sacrifices. Heſiod's Works were at firſt written upon Tables of Lead, which were firſt in the Temple of the Muſes in Bœotia. God's Laws were written upon Stone, and Solon's upon wooden Planks. [w] Tables of Wood, Box, and Ivory, were likewiſe very common among the Antients. When they were of Wood only, they were oftentimes covered with Wax, that any one might write on them with more eaſe, or blot out what they had written with a Style.

The Leaves of the Palm-Tree were uſed afterwards in the room of wooden Planks, and the fineſt and thinneſt Bark of ſuch Trees as the Lime, the Aſh, the Maple and the Elm. From hence comes the word Liber, which ſignifies the inner Bark of Trees. And as theſe Barks were rolled up, in order to be removed with more eaſe, theſe Rolls were called Volumen a Volume; a name given likewiſe to ſuch Rolls of Paper or Parchments as we are going to ſpeak of.

Paper, Papyrus, * is a kind of Reed which grows upon the Banks of the Nile. The Trunk of this Plant is compoſed of ſeveral leaves lying one upon the other, which are taken off with a Needle. They are afterwards ſpread upon a Table, ſo much whereof is moiſtned, as is equal to the Size, which it is intended that the leaves of the Papyrus ſhall be of. This firſt bed of leaves is covered with a layer of fine Paſte, or with the muddy Water of the Nile warmed: Then a ſecond bed of Paper leaves is laid on upon this Paſte, and ſo the whole left to dry in the Sun. † Such was the Egyptian Papyrus, from whence our Paper takes its Name, tho' it be ſo very different from it.

The Kings of Egypt having collected a great Library at Alexandria, the Kings of Pergamus were inclined to imitate their example: But the Egyptian Monarchs, either out of Envy, or for ſome other Reaſon, prohibited the Exportation of [t] ספר Sepher. Græc. Biblos. Liber. [u] Joſeph. Antiq. l. i. c. 3. [v] Porphyr. l. ii. de Abſtinentia. [w] Plutarch. in Solone. Vide & Laert. in Solone.

* Varro obſerves, and Pliny from him, that the uſe of the Papyrus for writing on, was firſt diſcovered in Egypt, at the time of Alexander's building Alexandria. To this time the following Verſes of Lucan have a reference.

Nondum flamineas Memphis contexere biblos
Noverat, in ſaxis tantum volucreſque feræque
Sculptaque ſervabant magicas animalia linguas.
Lucan l. iii.

† As to the way of preparing the Papyrus for uſe, ſee Pliny's Natural Hiſtory. l. xiii. c. 11, 12. Guilandinus de Papyro, and Salmaſius's Comment on the Life of Firmus in Vopiſcus, who was one of the Writers of the Hiſtoria Auguſta.

of Paper out of their Dominions, which obliged the Kings of Pergamus to invent Parchment, called Pergamenum from the City of Pergamus; or Membrana, becauſe made of the skin wherewith beaſts and the ſeveral members of them are covered. With theſe leaves of Vellum or Parchment, two ſorts of Books were made; the one were rolls compoſed of many leaves of Vellum ſewed or glewed together at the end. Theſe Books were written on upon one ſide only, and they were to be unroll'd and ſpread before they could be read. The others were like ours made up of many leaves faſtened to one another, were written upon both ſides, and were opened like our Books. The Jews ſtill make uſe of rolls in their Synagogues, and the Bibles which they read there in a ſolemn manner, are made after the manner of the old Volumes.

The Antients wrote likewiſe upon linen. Pliny ſays [x], the Parthians even in his time wrote upon their clothes; and Livy [y] ſpeaks of certain Books made of linen, lintei libri; upon which the names of Magiſtrates, and the hiſtory of the Roman Commonwealth were written, and preſerved in the Temple of the Goddeſs Moneta.

As to the paper at preſent uſed by us, which is made of rotten rags beaten ſmall, and reduced to a kind of pulp; the original of it is what we are not acquainted with *. We ſee no Book written on this paper which is above five hundred years old; and perhaps the moſt antient Author wherein there is any mention of it, is Peter the Venerable [z], who ſpeaks of paper made of old rags, ex raſuris veterum pannorum. F. Bernard de Montfaucon has treated likewiſe of cotton paper, charta bombycina, which he ſhews to have been in uſe above ſix hundred years ago [a]. The original of this paper is not very well known; but the matter of it is certainly cotton, and the uſe of it has been very common ever ſince the tenth Age.

Numb. xxi. 14. Book of the Wars of the Lord. This Book is cited by Moſes, where he is ſpeaking of his paſſing the river Arnon with the Iſraelites, in their way to the country of the Amorites. The particular paſſage which he quotes is this, What he did in the Red-Sea, and in the brooks of Arnon, and at the ſtream of the brooks that goeth down to the dwelling of Ar, and lieth upon the border of Moab. This deſcription is adapted only to the brook or river Arnon, which flows round the City of Ar, and ſets bounds to the land of Moab. The Book of the Wars of the Lord related ſome particulars which happened when the Hebrews paſſed this brook. It declared that this river became dry, and retired as the Red-Sea had done, a circumſtance which we read no where elſe.

Enquiry has been made what this Book of the Wars of the Lord was †; ſome think it was a work of greater antiquity than Moſes, and contained a recital of thoſe Wars, which the Iſraelites had begun or carried on in Egypt, or out of Egypt, before their withdrawing out of this country under Moſes. Indeed it is not natural to quote a Book, which is not more antient than the Author who is writing, particularly when any extraordinary and miraculous Fact is to be ſupported and confirm'd. The Hebrew of this paſſage in the printed Bibles is perplexed. As it is written in the Book of the Wars of the Lord; at Vaheb in Suphah and in the brooks of Arnon, and at the ſtream of the brooks that goeth down to the dwelling of Ar, and lieth upon the border of Moab. We do not know who or what this Vaheb is. M. Boivin the elder is of opinion, that ſome Prince is meant by it, who had the government of the Country, watered by the river Arnon, and was defeated by the Iſraelites, before they came out of Egypt. Others think, that Vaheb was a certain King of Moab, who was overcome by Sihon King of the Amorites.

Grotius, inſtead of Vaheb, reads Moab, and tranſlates it, Sihon beat Moab at Suphah. I ſhould rather read Zared inſtead of Vaheb after this manner, As it is written in the book of the wars of the Lord, the Hebrews came from Zared and incamped at Suphah, and about the ſtream of the brook of Arnon, which reaches as far as the dwelling of Ar, and leaneth upon the frontiers of Moab. Zared we know; ſee Numb. xxi. 12, 13. from thence they came to Suphah, which too is mentioned in Deut. i. 1. and perhaps in Numb. xxii. 36. From thence they came to the brook of [x] Plin. l. xiii. c. 11. [y] Tit. Liv. Decad. 1. lib. iv. & x. [z] Petrus Venerabil. contra Judæos in Bibl. Clun. p. 1070. Vide Mabill. de Re Diplom. [a] Paleograph. Græc. l. i. c. 2. p. 17.

* Dr. Prideaux ſays, that this invention ſeems to have been brought out of the Eaſt. For moſt of the old Manuſcripts in Arabic, and the other Oriental Languages, which we have from thence, are written on this ſort of paper, and ſome of them are certainly much antienter than any of the times here mentioned about this matter. But we often find them written on paper made of the paſte of ſilk, as well as of linen. It's moſt likely the Saracens of Spain firſt brought it out of the Eaſt into that Country, of which Gallicia being a Province, it might from thence according to Mr. Ray, have been firſt brought into Germany. Prid. Connect. &c. P. 1. B. vii.

† The Learned Diodati thinks, it might be ſome poem or antient writing upon the ſubject of the peoples voyages; and it is uncertain whether it was a Sacred Book written by any Prophet. See Diodat. Annot. upon Numb. xxi. 14. And other Interpreters agree with Diodati in this account: Non librum, ſed carmen, immo alij interpretantur; carmen, inquam, tritum ore vulgi ad victorias Ebræorum concelebrandas, ſtatim poſt pugnam conditum, quod in rei teſtimonium affert Moſes, cum Pentateuchum diu poſt rem geſtam ſcriberet. Huet. Demonſtr. Evang. Propoſitio iv. lxiv.

of Arnon, which flows down to Ar the capital City of the Moabites. All this is cited very seasonably in this place, to confirm what is said in the preceding Verses; whereas if we explain this Quotation after any other manner, we cannot find to what purpose Moses here produced it. Zared may easily be made from Vaheb in the Hebrew [b].

Others [c] are of opinion, that the Book of the Wars of the Lord, is the very Book of Numbers, wherein this passage is cited, or that of Joshua, or Judges; they do not translate as we do, It is written in the book of the wars of the Lord, but thus only, It is said in the recital of the wars of the Lord, &c. Others assert, that this Narration of the Wars of the Lord is contained in the hundred thirty fifth, and the hundred thirty sixth Psalms. Tostatus will have it, that the Book of the Wars of the Lord, and the book of Jasher, referr'd to
Jos. x. 13. in Joshua, are the same. Cornelius a Lapide conjectures, that this place and citation are here added to the Text of Moses, and that the Book of the Wars of the Lord, contained the Wars which the Israelites carried on under the conduct of Moses, Joshua, the Judges, &c. that therefore it was later than Moses. S. Austin [d] supposes, that this Book might possibly be written by the Moabites, and contain an historical account of the Wars, which they had been ingaged in, and in particular what happened when the Israelites came upon their frontiers. Lastly, It may be said, Moses either wrote himself, or procured a Book to be written, wherein he took care to have all the Wars of the Lord inserted. This Book was continued under the Judges and the Kings, and was called Annals; and from these Annals came those Sacred Books, which contain the Histories of the Old Testament. But however this may be, this Book of the Wars of the Lord is not now in being; and we have no reason to doubt of its being very certain and authentick, at least in the particular passage, which is here cited. The Reader may consult the Commentators on Numb. xi. 14.

Jos. x. 13. Book of Jasher or the Upright. There is a citation from this Book in Joshua, and in the Book of Samuel; and the same difficulties almost are proposed concerning this, as concerning the Book lately mentioned of the Wars of the Lord. Joshua, after having related how miraculously he put a stop to the course both of the Sun and Moon, adds, Is not this written in the book of Jasher? So the sun stood still in the midst of heaven, and hasted not to go down about a whole day. There is a great diversity of opinions concerning this Book *. Some will have it to be the same with that of the Wars of the Lord, whereof we have been speaking; others that it is the Book of Genesis, which contains the lives of the Patriarchs, and other good Men [e]; others again comprehend under this name all the Books of Moses. But the opinion which seems most probable is this, viz. that there were publick persons among the Hebrews from the very beginning of their Commonwealth, who were imployed in writing the Annals of their Nation, and the most memorable Events which at any time happened to it. These Monuments were lodged in the Temple or Tabernacle, whither upon occasion recourse was had to them. The Book, therefore, of the Wars of the Lord, the Book of Days or Chronicles, and the Book of Jasher or the Righteous, are properly speaking the same thing differently express'd according to the difference of times. Before there were any Kings over the Hebrews, these monuments were intitled, The Book of the Wars of the Lord, or the Book of Jasher, or Right. After the reign of Saul they were called the Book of the Chronicles of the Kings of Israel or Judah.

It is matter of dispute with some, whether the citation from the Book of Jasher, were inserted by Joshua himself, or by those who digested his Memoirs, and put his Book into the form wherein we now find it. It is very credible, that this passage was inserted afterwards, and we may easily observe, that the Book of Joshua is not in the condition that he himself left it, but that some additions have been made to it. This Book of Jasher is intirely lost. See the Commentators upon Joshua x. 13.

The Book of Chronicles or Days, in Hebrew, Deberei Jamim [f]. This Book contained the Annals and Journals which were written in the Kingdoms of Israel and Judah. These Memoirs or Journals are not now in being, but are cited in every page almost of the Books of Kings and Chronicles, which are composed chiefly from such old Memoirs as the Author had in his possession, and which in all probability were still subsisting even after the return of the Jews from the Babylonish Captivity. See our Preface to [b] את והב בסופה Ethhaheb Besuphah. את ורד בסופה. [c] Rabbini quidam.

[d] Aug. quæst. 42. in Numer. [e] Ita Rabbini quidam. [f] דברי ימים Verba dierum.
* Grotius is of opinion, that this Book was a triumphant Song made with a design to celebrate the success of Joshua, and the prodigy attending it. And M. Dupin declares for this opinion, as the most probable, because the words cited by Joshua from this Book, Sun stand thou still upon Gibeon, and thou Moon in the valley of Ajalon, are poetical expressions not very proper for historical Memoirs. And 2dly, Because a Book under the same title is referred to in the passage of Samuel abovementioned, where David's Song is repeated upon the death of Saul and Jonathan. For these reasons he is persuaded that the Work here in question did not contain Annals. See Dupin Dissert. Prelimin. sur la Bible, l. i. c. 3. s. 2.

to the two Books of Chronicles, and those of Kings. The Authors of the Books of the Days, or Chronicles, were generally Prophets, and inspired Persons.
Book of Life, or Book of the Living, or Book of the Lord. It is very probable, that these several ways of speaking, which Exod. are frequent in Scripture, are taken from xxxii. 32. the custom observed generally in the Courts Psalm. of Princes, of keeping a State, a List of all lxvii. 29. those who are in their Service, of the Provin-Psalm ces which obey them; of the Officers of their cxxxviii. Armies, of the number of their Troops, and
16. sometimes even of the names of their Sol-Eccles. diers. Thus Moses's begging of God raxxiv. 33. ther to blot him out of his Book, than to Philip. iv. reject his People Israel, is the same almost
3. as S. Paul's expression, when he declared,
Rev iii. 6. that he would consent in some sort to be Rom ix. 3. accursed, separated from the company of the Saints, and struck out of the Book of the Lord, if thereby he might be able to procure the Salvation of his People.
And when it is said, that any one is written in the Book of Life, nothing more is meant by it, than that such an one in a particular manner belongs to God, that he is in the number of his Friends and Servants. And on the contrary, when it is said, that such an one is blotted out of the Book of Life, this signifies, that he is razed out of the List of God's Friends and Servants, in like manner as they who die, or are guilty of any sort of Treachery, for which they are dismissed the Court, are struck off the Roll of Officers belonging to the Prince.
In a more exalted sense, the Book of Life, signifies the Book of Predestination to Glory, Faith and Grace. They who are predestinated to Faith or Grace only, may fall, and be blotted out of the Book of Life, but they cannot, who are predestinated to Glory. This Predestination is absolute and irrevocable; and if the Elect sometimes incur the Guilt of mortal Sins, God never finally forsakes them, but gives them Grace to repent, and so to return to him.
Dan. vii. Book of Judgment. Daniel speaking
10. of God's Judgment, says, The Judges were seated, and the Books opened, Judicium sedit, & Libri aperti sunt. Judgment was set, and the Books were opened.
This is an allusion to what is practised, when a Prince calls his Servants to account. The Accounts are produced, and what every one owes is inquired into.
It is possible he might allude also to a custom of the Persians, among whom it was a constant practice every day to write down what happened, the Services which were done the King, and the Rewards given to those who had performed them, as we see in the History of Ahasuerus and Esth. iv.
Mordecai. When therefore the King sits 1, 2, 3, 4.
in Judgment, the Books are opened, he obliges all his Servants to reckon with him; he punishes those who have been failing in their duty, or erases their name out of his Register; he compels those to pay who are indebted to him, and rewards those who have done him any important Services. There will be in Proportion the same way of proceeding at the day of God's final Judgment.
Book is sometimes put for Letters, Memoirs, an Edict, or Contract; in short, the word Book, in Hebrew, Sepher, is much more extensive than the Latin, Liber.
The Letters which Rabshakeh delivered from Sennacherib to Hezekiah, are called Is. xxxvii.
a Book *. The Contract which Jeremiah 14.
confirmed for the purchase of a Field, is Jerem.
called by the same name. Ahasuerus's xxxii. 10, Edict in favour of the Jews, is likewise 11, &c. Esth. ix.
called a Book. Job writes, that his Judge 20, 30, &c. or his Adversary would himself write his Job xxxi.
Sentence. Librum scribat ipse qui judicat. 35.
(Hebr. homo litis meæ) ut in humero meo portem illum, &c. The Writing likewise which a Man gave to his Wife when he divorced her, was called a Book of Di- Deut.
vorce †. See our Dissertation concerning xxiv.
the matter and form of old Books, prefix-ed to our Comment upon Genesis. Isai. xxix.
The Book that is sealed, mentioned by Rev. v. 1,
Isaiah, and the Book sealed with seven 2, 3.
Seals, spoken of in the Revelations, are Isaiah's and S. John's Prophecies, which were written in a Book or Roll after the manner of the Antients, and were sealed;
that is to say, were unknown enigmatical, obscure and mysterious, had respect to Times remote, and Events that were to come; so that no knowledge could be had of them, till after that which was foretold should happen, and the Seals were taken off. In old times, Letters, and other Writings that were to be sealed, were first wraped up with Thread or Flax,
and then the Seal was applied to them;
to read them, it was necessary to cut the Thread and Flax, or break the Seals. Zech. v.
Book, or flying Roll, spoken of in Za- 1, 2.
chary, Volumen volans, twenty Cubits long, and ten wide, was one of those old Rolls, composed of many Skins or Parch-ments glewed or sewed together at the end. This Volume which appeared to Zachary in a Vision, in all probability never had any real existence. Tho' some of these Volumes were very long, yet none were ever made of such a size. This was written,

* The English indeed reads Letter, but the 70 βιβλίον, and the Hebrew Text הספרים.
† So the Original ספר כריתת.

written, and contained the Curses, Menaces and Calamities which should fall upon the Jews. The extreme length and breadth of it shew the excessive enormity of their Sins, and the terrible nature of the Evils with which they were threatned.

Gen. i. 1. The Book of the Generation of Adam signifies the History of his Life, in like manner as the Book of the Generation of Noah, or of Jesus Christ, signifies in the Stile of the Hebrews, their History, what has happened to them, and what they have done.

Nehem. vii. 5. Liber census, signifies the Roll, and enumeration of those who returned from the Captivity of Babylon. For, as has been already observed, Liber with the Hebrews signifies all sorts of Writings, Letters, Ordinances, Memoirs, Rolls, &c.

Eccl. xii. 12. Solomon said so long ago as his time, that there was no end of composing Books. Faciendi plures libros nullus est finis; that is to say, that to write upon all sorts of Subjects, and to compose Discourses upon theological as well as natural things, was an infinite Work; but that it was a grand Point, and the Sum of all, to fear God, and observe his Precepts. This cuts short an infinite number of Discourses, Writings, and difficult and curious Questions: Of making many Books there is no end. Let us hear the conclusion of the whole matter; Fear God and keep his Commandments; for this is the whole Duty of Man.

Isai. xxxiv. 4. Isaiah describing the Effects of God's Wrath, says, that the Heavens shall be folded up like a Book, Complicabuntur sicut liber cœli. He alludes to the way among the Antients, of rolling up Books, when they had a mind to close them again. A Volume of several Foot in length, was on a sudden reduced to a very small one. Thus the Heavens should be shrunk into themselves, and disappear in some sort from the Eyes of God, when his Wrath should be kindled. These ways of speaking are figurative, and full of Energy.

Macc. iii. 48. It is said in the Books of Maccabees, that the Jews, under the Persecution of Antiochus Epiphanes, laid open the Book of the Law, wherein the Gentiles endeavoured to find the Figures of Idols: Expanderunt libros legis de quibus scrutabantur Gentes similitudinem simulacrorum suorum. Some believe, that the Jews laid open before the Lord the Sacred Books, wherein the Gentiles in vain sought for something wherewithal to support their Idolatry; others, that they laid open the Sacred Writings, wherein the Gentiles were desirous to paint their Idols. Or otherwise; the Hebrews laid open their Sacred Books, wherein the Gentiles had sought diligently if they could not find some Figures which the Jews adored. The Heathens imagined that they should discover some Flourishes or Figures in the front of some Jewish Books, which would manifest to them what was the God whom they adored; for the Gentiles were very uneasy on this Article, some believing that they worshipped an Ass, or a living Man, or Bacchus, or something else which they would not own. With some small variation in the Greek Text, it might be translated thus, They laid open the Book of the Law at the same time that the Gentiles consulted the Images of their false Gods.

We read in Psalm xl. 7. In the volume of the Book it is written of me, I delight to do thy will, O my God. In capite libri scriptum est de me ut facerem voluntatem tuam. S. Paul has left us no room to question the sense of this passage, since he applies it to the Incarnation of Jesus Christ. Some of the antient Fathers[g] have explained this in capite libri of the Book of Genesis, which imports, that in the beginning God created the Heavens and the Earth; that is to say, God created the whole Universe by his Son, his Word, his Wisdom, which in this sense is the beginning of all things. Others, as Chrysostom, &c. explain it of S. John's Gospel, which begins with these words. In principio erat Verbum. The Hebrew reads[h] In the volume of the Book it is written of me; that is to say, in the Body of the Sacred Writing in general: The Greek may receive the same sense: Kephalis[i], which is render'd Caput, or beginning, signifies likewise Roll, a Volume. Ps. xxxix. 11 Vulg.

The Book of Heaven. Some of the Antients have asserted, that Heaven was as it were a great Book wherein every thing was written which was to happen upon Earth. The[k] Rabbins, and some Christian Authors have revived this opinion, and improved upon it, by saying, that there were Hebrew Characters to be distinguished in the Vault of Heaven, which form'd a certain Writing legible, and intelligible to those who understood it, wherein whatever is in Nature may be found. Picus of Mirandola[l] says upon this matter, that as the Astrologers see certain Images in Heaven, from which they draw their Consequences, the Jewish Masters have likewise their Alphabet in Heaven, and maintain that they find there the Elements and Characters of their Language. Agrippa[m] asserts the same thing, [g] Tertull. contr. Praxeam Ambrof. Hieron. in Psal. xxxix. Hilar. in Psal. ii. [h] בּמגלת ספר כתוב קלי.

[i] 70. Ἐν κεφαλίδι βιβλίου γέγραπται περὶ ἐμοῦ. [k] See Basnage Hist. des Juifs. t. 6. l. 9. c. 22.
[l] Pic. Mirand. in Astr. l. viii. c. 50. [m] Agrippa de occultâ Philosoph. l. 3. c. 30.

thing, and Gaffarel [n] adds to their opinion the Authority of many celebrated Rabbins, such as Maimonides, Nachman, Aben-ezra, Kimchi, Abrabanel. Among the Antients Origen [o] has advanc'd, that what is to come may be written in Heaven, which is as it were a great prophetick Volume; for this reason, adds he, Jacob said to his Sons, Read in the leaves of Heaven what is to befall you and your Children. He says further, that the Book is with difficulty enough legible to Men, but that Angels have the advantage of knowing perfectly this Writing.

Books Sacred, or Canonical, are those printed in our Bibles. See Bible and Canon, and enquire under the names of the several Books and Sacred Writers, for a critical account and Judgment of their Books.

Books Apocryphal. See above Apocryphal.

Numb. xxxi. 27. BOOTY, Spoil. Moses, or the Lord rather, requires in the Law, that the Booty taken from the Enemy, should be divided equally between those who were in the battle, and the rest of the people. That is to say, that the whole Booty should be divided into two parts, the first whereof was for those who had been in the action, the other for the People, who continued in the Camp. Thus suppose the Army which fought consisted only of twenty thousand Men, and they who remained in the Camp, were forty thousand, he former had one whole Moiety of the spoil, tho' fewer considerably in number

Moses adds, Ye shall likewise separate the Lord's share, which ye shall take out of the whole Booty belonging to the men of war; and of every five hundred men, oxen, asses, or sheep, ye shall take one, and give it to the High priest, because these are the Lord's first-fruits. As to the other moiety which shall belong to the children of Israel, who did not fight, out of every fifty men, oxen, asses, or sheep, or other animal whatsoever ye shall take one, ye shall give unto the Levites, who have the charge of the tabernacle of the Lord. So that Eleazar's and the Priests share was much larger in proportion than that of the twelve thousand Soldiers who had been in action, and than that of the Levites. And what was practised upon this occasion was a Law for ever after. An Example of this may be seen in what happened under David, after the defeat of the Amalekites,

1 Sam. xxx. 24, 25. who had plundred Ziklag.

The Rabbins [p] pretend, that under the Kings of Israel, another Rule was followed in the distribution of the Spoil. First, Every thing was given to the King, which belonged to the conquered King; his Tent, his Slaves, his Cattel, his Spoils, his Treasure. After this the rest of the Booty was divided into two equal parts, whereof the King had one moiety, and the Soldiers who were concerned in the Engagement the other. This last part was distributed equally between the Soldiers, who were in the action, and those who continued behind to guard the Camp. They assert, that these Rules had been in force ever since the time of Abraham: It is difficult indeed to prove it; but we know that Abraham offered to the Lord the tenth Gen. xiv. 20. of what he had taken from the five Kings, and made a present of it to Melchizedeck.

Almost the same usages with those here taken notice of by us, were observed among prophane Nations. Among the antient Greeks the Spoil was all placed in common, after which the King or General divided it equally among them [q]. They presented also to the Gods their share of the Spoils won from the Enemy: Numa ordained [r], that the first part of them should be offered to Jupiter Feretrius, the second to Mars, the third to Quirinus. Sometimes that part of the Booty which was intended for the Gods, was burnt in honour of them; and at other times it was lodged in their Temples. In the Alcoran, under the Title of Anfal, it is mentioned, that two parts in five of what was taken from the enemy should be the Soldiers share, and the fifth should belong to God, the Prophet Mahomet and his Relations, to Orphans, the Poor and Pilgrims. Several Mahometan Interpreters maintain, that the giving any part of the Spoil to God, is mentioned only out of ceremony and respect; but others on the contrary assert, that this is what they are obliged to, and that this Portion ought to be employed in the Repairs and Ornament of the Temple of Mecca, and of other Mosques. As to the share belonging to the Prophet and his Relations, some say, that it is sunk by his Death and theirs, and that therefore the fifth part of the Spoil belongs intirely to Orphans, to Pilgrims and the Poor. Others are of Opinion, that the Prophet's Portion ought to be employed in the general affairs of Mussulmen, or given to the head of the Mosque upon the Spot, or in the places where there was most need of it. This is of very little concern to us; but it is visible, that the Impostor borrowed this from the Laws of Moses.

BOOZ, the Son of Salmon and Rahab. Rahab, we know was a Canaanite of Jericho, [n] Gaffarel. Curiositez inouies, c. 13. p. 279. [o] Origen. apud Euseb. de præpar. l. 6. c. 11. See the Testament of the twelve Patriarchs. [p] Vide Selden. de Jure Nat. & Gent. l. vi. c. 16. [q] Homeri Iliad. Δ. [r] Servius in Æneid. l. i.

richo, Salmon, who was of the Tribe of Judah, married her, and had Booz by her, one of our Saviour's Anceſtors in the fleſh. Some ſay there were three of this name [s], the Sôn, Grandſon, and Great-Grandſon of Salmon; the laſt Booz was Ruth's Husband and the Father of Obed. They pretend that the Scripture can no other way be made reconcilable with itſelf, ſince it reckons three hundred and ſixty ſix Years between Salmon's marriage, and the birth of David, and owns there were but three perſons between Solomon and David, viz. Booz, Obed and Jeſſe. But altho' it be difficult to fill ſuch a ſpace as that of three hundred and ſixty ſix Years with four perſons from Father to Son ſucceeding one another, and it is uncommon to ſee four perſons in the ſame Family ſucceſſively living very long, and having Children in a far advanced age, yet there is nothing abſolutely impoſſible in the thing, particularly at this time, wherein we find that there were perſons who had lived above an hundred Years. Salmon at the age of an hundred and twenty might beget Booz, about ſixty ſix Years after the Iſraelites had entred into the Land of Promiſe. Booz at that age, ſuppoſe of an hundred, might beget Obed, who at ſomething more or leſs than this age might have Jeſſe; and laſtly, Jeſſe, when an hundred Years old, might poſſibly have David: This indeed is all but ſuppoſition. However it is ſufficient, that there is no contradiction or impoſſibility, to make it neceſſary for us to reject this opinion of there being three perſons of this name, inſtead of that one Booz only, whom the Scripture ſpeaks of.

Some Rabbins [t] will have it, that Ibzan, who was Judge of Iſrael, and is mentioned Judg. xii. 8. is the ſame as Booz. The foundation of this opinion is no more than this, that Ibzan was of Bethlehem, and that there is ſome relation between this name and that of Booz. But Ibzan having governed Iſrael from the Year of the World 2823 to 2830. he cannot be the ſame as Booz, who could not be born later than in the Year of the World 2620. his Father Salmon having married Ruth in 2553. Now ſuppoſing him to be born in 2620. he muſt have been two hundred and ten Years old in 2830. when he died, which does not ſeem to be at all credible.

Booz, or rather Boaz, the name of one of thoſe two brazen pillars which Solomon erected in the Porch of the Temple. [1 Kings vii. 21.] The other Column was called Jachin. This was on the right hand of the entrance into the Temple, and Booz on the left. Jachin ſignifieth God hath ſtrengthened it [v], and Booz ſtrength [w], firmneſs. They were together thirty five cubits high, as is ſaid in the Chronicles, that is to ſay, each ſeparately ſeventeen cubits and an half [x]. [2 Chron. iii. 15.] The Text of the firſt Book of Kings, and of Jeremiah, ſays eighteen cubits; [1 Kings vii. 15.] but it is believed that the Sacred Writer choſe to ſet down a round, rather than a broken number. [Jerem. lii. 21.] The thickneſs of theſe Columns was, as Jeremiah ſays, of four fingers, for they were hollow. [Jerem. lii. 21.] The circumference of them was twelve cubits, or four cubits diameter. [1 Kings vii. 15.] The Chapiter of each was in all five cubits high. [1 Kings vii. 16.] Theſe Chapiters in different parts of Scripture are ſaid to be of different heights, of three, four or five cubits; [Jerem. lii. 22.] becauſe they were compoſed of different Ornaments, which were conſidered ſometimes ſeparately, and ſometimes as united with the Chapiter. The body of the Chapiter was of three cubits, the ornaments wherewith it was joined to the ſhaft of the pillar, were of one cubit, theſe make four cubits; the row which was at the top of all the Chapiter was alſo of one cubit, in all five cubits.

BORITH. There is mention of the herb Borith in Jeremiah xi. 22. Si multiplicaveris tibi herbam Borith, maculata es iniquitate tua. The herb Borith is thought to be the Kali or Saltwort, of the aſhes whereof ſome make Soap, and a very good Lye to waſh Linen withal. It is confidently affirmed, that the leaves of Saltwort bruiſed and rub'd with the hand, take ſpots out of the Skin. John Michael Lagius has made a large Diſſertation on the herb Borith. We have a long diſcourſe on it in our Comment on Jeremiah, Chap. xi. 22.

BOSOM. We put the things which we moſt value into our Boſoms. Job concealed the hope of his reſtoration in his own Boſom, [Job xix. 27.] there he locked up the words and promiſes of his God. The wicked Man receives preſents taken out of the boſom, [Job xxiii. 12. Prov. xvii. 23.] things of the greateſt value. And Jeſus Chriſt in the Goſpel ſays, that if we do good to others, [Luke vi. 38.] we ſhall receive the reward of it, which will be poured forth plentifully into our Boſom.

The Wife of our Boſom; be not jealous over the Wife of thy Boſom, or her who reſts in thy boſom, [Ecclus. ix. 1.] is an expreſſion very famaliar in Scripture, ſignifying a lawful Wife.

Lazarus was carried into Abraham's boſom, [Luke xvi. 22, 23.] as a favourite Child is received within the Arms and Boſom of his Father. S. John tells us, that the Son of God is in the boſom of the Father, [1 John i. 18.] thereby deſcribing his perfect union with him. The well beloved [s] Quidam in Rab. Salom. Lyran. in Ruth ii. & iv. Catharin. alij.

[t] Targum Ruth. Talmud. Jeroſol. Rabbini Sal. Kimchi, Levi fil. David. Abraham Zaccuta, &c.
[v] יכין Statuet.
[w] בועז Firmitas, Robur.
[x] Vat. Grot. Sanct.

beloved Apostle lay with his head in our Saviour's bosom at his last Supper with his Apostles; because it was then customary to lie down at Table with the head turn'd towards it, and the feet from it. Thus S. John who was below Jesus, was near him with his head, and as it were in his bosom.

BOSOR or Bosra, is four days journey southward from Damascus [f]. There is a very strong Castle belonging to it, a Gate twenty cubits high, and one of the largest Basons or Pools of Water in all the East, as the Persian Geographer assures us. See Bezer, ver. 20. ספרד Sepharad.

BOSPHORUS. The Prophet Obadiah speaking of the Jews, and their return from the Captivity, says, And the captivity of this host of the children of Israel, shall possess that of the Canaanites, even unto Zarephath, and the captivity of Jerusalem which is in Sepharad, or Bosphorus, shall possess the cities of the South. There are three Bosphorus's whither the Hebrews might have been carried. 1. The Cimmerian Bosphorus, at the extremity of the Euxine Sea, between this Sea and the Lake Mæotis. 2. The Thracian Bosphorus, which is that of Constantinople, or the arm of the Sea between Chalcedon and Constantinople. 3. The Bosphorus or Arm which separates Spain from Africk: Each of these Streights is called in Greek, Bosphorus, or rather Bosporus, because an Ox may swim over them; and because the Daughter of Inachus, transformed into an Heifer, swam over the Thracian Streights between Constantinople and Chalcedon. This narrow passage of the Sea is not above five furlongs or five hundred paces over.

Interpreters are divided concerning the Streights which Obadiah speaks of. The Jew whom S. Jerom consulted upon such difficulties as occurr'd to him in the Hebrew [g], told him, that the Bosphorus mentioned by the Prophet, was the Cimmerian Bosphorus, whither the Emperor Adrian had banished many of those Jews, whom he had taken prisoners during the War in Palestine; which notwithstanding is a circumstance that we have no account of in History. Others believe, with more reason, that the captives taken notice of by Obadiah were such as Nebuchadnezzar had sent away as far as the Palus Mæotis, about which the country is generally thought to be one of the most frightful in the world, and hither the great Persecutors of the Christians sent frequently the Confessors of our Religion. Lastly, There are others, and those in good number, who understand the Hebrew of Spain, and translate Obadiah thus, The captives of Jerusalem which are at Sepharad, that is to say, in Spain, shall possess the cities of the south. Profane Historians, as Megasthenes [a] and Strabo [b] assert, that Nebuchadnezzar extended his conquests as far as Africk and Iberia, beyond the Pillars which we apprehend to be those called Hercules's Pillars. Now in this expedition against Spain, some say that he transported many of the Jews thither. Thus they reconcile the Version, which reads Bosphorus, with the opinion of the Jews, and of such Authors as have followed them in interpreting Sepharad to mean Spain.

But we may very well question whether Sepharad signifies Spain. Some suppose France to be denoted by it, and the old Greek Interpreters have kept to the Hebrew term without changing it in the Translation. In S. Jerom's time, the Hebrews explained it by Bosphorus. The Septuagint read Ephrata instead of Sepharad. I should think some country beyond the Euphrates to be meant by Sepharad, such as that of the Sapires or Saspires, towards Media; or the city of Hippara in Mesopotamia.

BOTTLE, a Kag made of Goat's Skin with the hair on the inside, well pitched and sewed together, wherein Oil and other Liquors were preserved: The mouth of the Bottle is through one of the animals paws, which furnishes the matter of it. There is frequent mention of Bottles in Scripture, and as every one is not acquainted with the nature of them, it may not be unprofitable to say a word or two of them in this place. When Abraham dismissed Hagar, he gave her and her Son bread, and water in a Bottle for their journey. (Gen. xxi. 14, 15.) The Gibeonites the better to deceive Joshua and the Elders of the people, shewed them their old Bottles, telling them, that they had brought them new from their own homes, thereby hoping to convince them that they came from some remote country. (Josh. ix. 4, 13.) Jael the wife of Heber the Kenite opened a Bottle full of Milk, and offered Sisera some of it to drink. (Judg. iv. 19.)

The Psalmist in order to exalt the power of God, says, that he holdeth the waters of the Sea, shut up as it were in a Bottle, or a Portmantle; (Ps. xxxii. 7.) and speaking of the passage through the Red-Sea, he says in like manner, that he shut up the waters as in a Bottle. He locked them up, drew them back, bound them up. (Ps. lxxvii. 13.) In another place he compares himself to a Bottle exposed to the Frost. (Ps. cxix. 83.) Factus sum sicut uter in pruina, or exposed to the smoak, as a bottle dried, blackened, shrivelled. Our Saviour says, that men do not put new wine into (Matth. ix. 17.)

[f] Bibl. Orient. p. 211. col. 2. [g] Hieronym. Abdiam. [a] Megasthenes apud. Euseb. Præp. Evang. l. ix. c. 41. [b] Strabo l. xv.

into old bottles, elſe the bottles break, and the wine runneth out. His Apoſtles were, as it were, old Bottles before the deſcent of the Holy Spirit upon them, they were not capable either of comprehending or practiſing all the perfection which Jeſus Chriſt came to teach mankind.

BOW. Every one knows what this is. It was a ſort of Arms very well known among the Iſraelites, who had many very expert Archers in their Troops. When there is any mention in Scripture of bending the Bow, the verb tread under foot is generally made uſe of; becauſe in effect it was their cuſtom to put their feet upon their Bow that they might bend it with more eaſe. David thanks God for giving him the ſtrength of a brazen Bow in his Arms. Poſuiſti ut
Pſ. xvii. 35. arcum æreum brachia mea. Their Bows were commonly of wood. When they would ſay that God will deſtroy the power of ſuch or ſuch a people, they make uſe of this expreſſion; God will break their Bow. Confringam arcum Ælam, and Hoſea conteram
Hoſ. i. 5. arcum Iſrael. A deceitful Bow, They are
Hoſ. vii. 16. like a deceitful bow, ſignifies one that is not well ſtrung, which does not carry ſtrait to the mark. King Uzziah provided good Arſenals, wherein he lodged abundance of Arms, among others a large quan-
2 Chron. xxvi. 14. tity of Bows and Slings. God is repreſented in Scripture with his Bow and Arrows, as Warriors and Conquerors are deſcribed
Hab. iii. 9. with them. Thy bow was made quite naked according to the oaths of the tribes. Thou wilt awaken thy Bow, thou wilt bend it, and put it in a condition to be drawn, &c. The Children of Ephraim, who prided themſelves in being ſuch ex-
Pſ. lxxviii. 9. pert Archers, fled in the day of battle. The Lord promiſes to deliver up the Nations, like ſtubble driven by the wind, to the bow of the righteous man, of Cyrus,
Iſaiah xli. 2. of the Meſſiah. The Perſians, who in the Scripture are called Elamites, were the moſt expert Archers in the world.

BOWELS. The Bowels are the ſeat of mercy, tenderneſs, and compaſſion. Joſeph's bowels were moved at the ſight
Gen. xliii. 30. of his brother Benjamin; he perceived himſelf to be ſoftned, and concerned. The true Mother of the Child, whom Solomon commanded to be divided into two parts, felt her Bowels to be moved at this propoſition, and conſented, that he ſhould be 1 Kings iii. 26. given to her who was not his real Mother. She was touched with compaſſion. God Luke i. 78. through the bowels of his mercy, hath viſited us by ſending the Meſſiah to us. S. Paul recommends it to the faithful, to have Bowels of mercy for their Brethren. He Coloſ. iii. 12.
praiſes Philemon for having refreſhed the Bowels of the Saints; and begs of him to Philem. 7.
receive Oneſimus as his own Bowels. Et viſcera mea ſuſcipe. Ibid. 12.

Job deſcribing a merciles, hard-hearted, rich Man, ſays, that his Bowels are loaded with fat. Solomon in his Proverbs, that Job xxi. 24. Vulg. Edit.
the Bowels of the wicked are cruel. And S. Paul 2 Cor. vi. 12. reproaches, as it were, Prov. xii. 10.
the Corinthians in a friendly manner, ſaying, Ye are not ſtraitned in us, but ye are ſtraitned in your own bowels.

The Hebrews likewiſe place wiſdom and underſtanding ſometimes in the Bowels: Who hath put wiſdom in the inner parts, ſays Job. And the Pſalmiſt, Renew a Job xxxviii. 36.
right ſpirit in my Bowels, within me. And Iſaiah, The ſpirit of the Egyptians ſhall Pſal. li. 10.
fail, ſhall be annihilated in the bowels, or in the midſt thereof, and I will deſtroy the Iſaiah xix. 3.
counſel thereof. It ſhall fall into diſorder, miſtake, and uncertainty. And Jeremiah, Jer. xxxi. 33.
I will engrave my law in their bowels, or inner parts. And Habakkuk, There is no ſpirit in the intrails, in the midſt of the idol; it has neither ſoul, ſpirit nor underſtanding. Hab. ii. 19.

Wiſdom ſpeaks of certain Canaanites, who eat the entrails of men, who were devourers of human fleſh. See Fleſh. Formerly men were ſacrificed to Bacchus in Wiſd. xii. 5.
the Iſle of Chios [c], and were torn to pieces alive. They did as much in the Iſle of Tenedos. And in the ninth Century [d] human fleſh was ſold at China in the publick markets. As to eating the Fleſh and Bowels of living animals, this was common in the feaſts of Bacchus [e].

BOZEZ. The name of a Rock which Jonathan the Son of Saul climbed up when he went to attack the Philiſtines. 1 Sam. xiv. 4.

BOZRA. See Bezer, Boſor.

BRACCA. It is ſaid in Daniel [f], that Dan. iii. 21.
his three companions were thrown into the fiery furnace with their hozen cum braccis ſuis. The Hebrew reads Saraballa, which were a ſort of Breeches, wherewith the Perſians covered their Legs and Thighs [g].

BRANCH. The Prophets ſometimes give this name to the Meſſiah, Behold the man, whoſe name is the Branch, ſays Zechary. And in another place [h], Behold, I Zech. vi. 12.
will bring forth my ſervant the branch. Zech. iii. 8.
And ſo the Hebrew reads, what the Vulgate tranſlates Oriens. Jeſus Chriſt is the Branch * of the houſe of David. He is likewiſe Oriens, the Sun of Righteouſneſs, which is riſen in order to enlighten us, and deliver us out of the ſhadow of death.

The

[c] Porphyr. de abſtin. l. iii. [d] Voyage de deux Arabes a la Chine. p. 55.
[e] Arnob. l. v. contra Gentes. Lucian. proſlalia. Clem. Alex. Protreptic. p. 19. [f] בסרבליהון Aqu. Theodot. Σαραβάροις Sym. Ἀναξυρίδας. [g] Vide Briſſon. l. i. de Regno Perſar. [h] צמח Tzemach.
* The Antients were uſed to call their Heroes Deorum Germina; of this we have frequent examples in the Poets. One is called Ἔρνος Ἄρηος, Germen Martis. Another Διὸς ἔρνος, Jovis germen. And Ζηνὸς θάλος, Jovis ramus. Huet. Dem. Evang. Prop. ix. c. lix.

The Messiah is called likewise by the same name of Branch in Isaiah, iv. 2. Jeremiah, xxiii. 5. xxxiii. 15. and this denomination is a kind of prophecy of his miraculous birth of a Virgin.

BREAD. In the Scripture style Bread Gen. iii. 19. is taken for every sort of food; In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread. I will fetch a morsel of bread, says A- Gen. xviii. 5. braham to his Guests, and comfort ye your hearts. If God give me bread to eat, said Jacob when he made his Vow at Bethel. Gen. xxviii. 20. Call him that he may eat bread, invite him Exod. ii. 20. to come and eat with us, &c. Manna is called Bread from Heaven; God in giving Exod. xvi. 15. it says, that he feeds his People with Bread; that he gives them Bread in abundance, &c.

The antient Hebrews had several ways of baking Bread. They often baked it under the Ashes. Abraham served the three Angels, whom he received into his Tent, with Loaves baked upon the Gen. xviii. 6. Hearth[i]; the Hebrew, Huggoth, signifies Loaves, or little Cakes, much like our broad thin Cakes, which are baked under the Ashes, or upon round Copper Plates well warmed, or in Pans, or Stews made on purpose, and heated.

Exod. xii. 39. The Hebrews at their departure out of Egypt made some of these unleavened Loaves for their Journey. Elijah in his flight found a Cake at his Bolster, which had been baked upon the Coals, and a 1 Kings xix. 6. cruse of Water. The same Elijah desir- 1 Kings xvii. 13. ed the Widow of Sarepta to make a little Bread for him, and bake it under the Ashes. The Hebrew Text of the first Book of Kings, Ch. xix. 6. calls them Hosea vii. 8. Huggoth; and the Prophet Hosea compares Ephraim to these Huggoth, which were not turned, were baked on one side only. Busbequius [k] says, that in Bulgaria this sort of Loaves is still very common. They are there called Hugaces: As soon as they see a Guest come, the Women immediately make these unleavened Loaves which are baked under the Ashes, and sold to Strangers; for there are no Bakers in this Country.

The Arabians[l], and other eastern People, among whom Wood is scarce, often bake their Bread between two Fires made of Cow-dung, which burns slowly, and bakes the Bread very leisurely. The Crumb of it is very good, if it be eat the same day, but the Crust is black and burnt, and retains a smell of what was Ezek. iv. 9, 10, 12, 13. used in baking it. This may serve to explain a passage in Ezekiel, which is extremely shocking to the generality of Authors. The Lord commands this Prophet to make a Paste composed of Wheat, Barley, Beans, Lentils, Millet, and Fitches, and of this a Loaf baked under the Ashes, and to cover it with human excrements in the sight of all the People. The Prophet expressing an extreme reluctancy to this, God permitted him to cover it with Cow-dung instead of human dung. We are not to imagine that it was God's design to make the Prophet eat Man's dung; but he only enjoined him to bake his Bread under such kind of excrements. Afterwards he allowed him to have it baked under Cow-dung, as the Arabians do.

The Hebrews, and other eastern People, have still at this day a kind of Oven called Taanour, which is like a large Pitcher of gray Stone open at top, in which they make a Fire. When it is well heated, they dilute Flour in Water, as we do to make Putty for Sashes; this Paste they apply to the outside of the Pitcher with the hollow of their hand; thus it is baked in an instant, and the moisture of it being dried up, it is taken off in thin fine pieces like our Wafers.

The Easterlings believe Eve's Oven to have been of this kind, that it was left to Noah, and that the boiling Water which ran over occasioned the Deluge. Strange Extravagancies!

A third sort of Bread in use among the People of the East, is that which is baked in a great Pitcher half full of certain little Flints that are white and glistering, on which they cast the Paste spread in the form of little flat Cakes. The Bread is white, and smells well, but it is good only for the day on which it was baked, unless there is some Leaven mingled with it to preserve it longer. This is the most common way in Palestine.

During the whole Octave of the Passover, the Hebrews use only unleavened Bread, as a memorial, that at the time of their departure out of Egypt, they wanted leisure to bake leavened Bread; and having left the Country with precipitation, they were content to bake Bread which was not leavened, under the Ashes. This is what they practise still at this Ex. xii. 8, 9. day with scrupulous Exactness. See the Article Azuma.

Moses enjoined the Israelites upon their arrival in the promised Land, to offer up Numb. xv. 20. a Cake of the first of their dough for an heave-offering in their generations. These First-fruits of Bread or Dough were given to the Priest or Levite, who dwelt in the place where the bread was baked; and if there was no Priest nor Levite there, the part of the Dough designed for the Lord or his Minister was thrown into the

[i] Heb. עגות Huggoth, 70. ἐγκρυφίας. [k] Busbeq. Constantinop. p. 36. [l] D' Arvieu Coutumes des Arabes, c. 14.

the Fire or the Oven. The quantity of Bread to be given for First-fruits was not settled by the Law; but Custom and Tradition had determined it, says S. Jerom [m], to be between the fortieth part of the whole Mass, at most, or at least the sixtieth. Philo [n] remarks, that something was set apart for the Priest, as often as they kneaded, but does not say how much this was.

Leo of Modena [o] tells us, that the modern custom of the Jews is, when the Bread is kneaded, and a piece of Dough made as big as forty Eggs, to take a small part of it and make a Cake, which is instead of the First-fruits appointed by the Law. It had been a custom to give this Cake to the Priest; but at present it is thrown into the fire, where they let it burn away intire. This is one of the three Precepts which should be observed by the Women, for they generally make the Bread. The Prayer to be recited by them, when they throw this little Portion of Dough into the Oven, or the Fire, is as follows, Blessed art thou, O Lord our God, the King of the World, who hast sanctified us by thy Precepts, and hast commanded us to separate a Cake of our Dough.

Shew-Bread, or according to the Hebrew Text, the Bread of Faces, was Bread offered every Saturday to God upon the golden Table placed in the Holy. The Hebrews affirm, that these Loaves were square, and with four Surfaces, and covered with leaves of Gold. They were twelve in number, in memory of the twelve Tribes of Israel, in whose names they were offered. Every Loaf was composed of two Assarons of Flour, which make about five Pints $\frac{1}{10}$. These Loaves had no Leaven in them. They were presented very warm every Sabbath day, and at the same time the old were taken away, which were to be eaten by the Priests only. With this Offering there was Salt, and Incense, and even Wine too, according to some Commentators. The Scripture mentions only Salt and Incense, but it is presumed that Wine was added, because it was not wanting in other Sacrifices and Offerings. It is believed that these Loaves were placed one upon the other in two Piles, of six each; and that between every Loaf there were two thin Plates of Gold folded back in a Semicircle for the whole length of them, to let in Air, and hinder the Loaves from growing mouldy. These Golden Plates so turned in, were supported at their extremities by two golden Forks, which rested upon the Ground.

Exod. xxv. 30.

We have remarked, that the Shew-bread was eaten by none but the Priests. Nevertheless David having received some from the High-Priest Abimelech, eat of it without scruple in his necessity; and our Saviour makes use of this Example to justify his Apostles, who eat ears of Corn and bruised them on the Sabbath day. The Priest Abimelech calls those Laicos Panes, which every one was allowed to partake of, and those Panes Sanctos, which the Priests only were to eat of.

2 Sam. xxi. 3, 4. Mat. xii. 4.

Under the Article Offerings, we shall speak of the different sorts of Bread which were offered in the Temple, as well with the Sacrifices as with the Offerings of Flour, Cakes, Loaves, Grains, &c. It appears from several places of Scripture, that there was always near the Altar a Basket full of Bread, in order to be offered together with the ordinary Sacrifices. Panes qui sunt in canistro; & canistrum panum azymorum.

Exod. xxix. 32. Numb. vi. 15.

Moses forbids the Priests to receive Bread from the hands of Strangers, or any thing else that they would give, because all these Gifts are corrupted.

Lev. xxii. 25.

There are different opinions concerning the meaning of this Law. Some, as Tostatus, Cajetan, and others, pretend, that under the name of Bread we are to understand all sorts of Sacrifices and Offerings, because the Victims that were slain are in Scripture sometimes called the Bread of God. Others, that God forbids the receiving Sacrifices of any kind, or any real Offering immediately from the hands of infidel People, but only Money wherewithal to purchase Offerings and Victims. Lastly, others explain it literally of Offerings of Flour, Bread, or Cakes; that none of these are to be received in the Temple from the hand of an Idolater or Infidel.

God threatens to break the Staff of Bread, Baculum panis, or Virgam panis, or Robur panis, or Firmamentum panis; that is to say, to send the scourge of Famine among the Israelites, or to order it so, that the Bread which they should take, should not sustain them, to send them a canine and insatiable Appetite.

Lev. xxvi. 26. Ezek. iv. 16. v. 16. Ezek. xiv. 13. Isai. iii. 1. Ps. civ. 16.

To eat, to devour any one like Bread; that is to say, to devour, to destroy him without resistance, without scruple, to make sport, and a diversion of doing so. See Ps. xiii. 4. lii. 5.

Numb. xiv. 9.

Man doth not live by Bread only, but by every word which proceedeth out of the mouth of God. That is to say, God can sustain us, not only with Bread and ordinary Food, but likewise with every thing besides, if he thinks fit to communicate a nourishing virtue to it. Thus he fed the Israelites

[m] Hieron. in c. xlv. Exod. Part. ii. c. 9.

[n] Philo de præm. Sacerd.

[o] Leon de Modene Cerem. des Juifs.

Israelites in the Wilderness with Manna, and five thousand Men with five Loaves distributed by the hands of Jesus Christ and his Apostles. Verbum is put for thing. In the Hebrew Text of Deuteronomy we do not read verbo, but only, In omni quod procedit ex ore Dei.

Bread and Water are used for all Sustenance in general. Thus it is said, that Deut. ix. 9, 18. Moses continued forty days upon Mount Sinai, without eating Bread, or drinking Deut. xxiii. 4. Water. God complains of the Moabites and Ammonites, because they did not meet the Israelites with Bread and Water; Nabal in answer to David's Message, said, Shall I take my bread and my water, and give them to men whom I know not? 1 Kings xviii. 13. Obadiah the Governor of King Ahab's House, fed an hundred Prophets of the Lord with Bread and Water. The chief thing for Life is Water and Bread, says the Author of Ecclesiasticus, xxix. 21.

The Bread of Affliction, and the Water of Affliction in the first Book of 1 Kings xxii. 27. 2 Chr. xviii. 26. Kings, are the same thing as a little Bread and a little Water. Isaiah threatens the Jews with the Wrath of God, and says, that he will give them so little Bread and Water, that they will not have what is Is. xxx. 20. sufficient to satisfy them. Dabit vobis Dominus panem arctum & aquam brevem.

As the Hebrews generally made their Bread very thin, and in the form of little flat Cakes or Wafers, they did not cut it with a Knife, but broke it; which gave rise to that expression so usual in Scripture, of breaking Bread, to signify eating, sitting down to table.

It is remarked likewise, that they who undertook Journeys, commonly made Provision of Bread; because in those times there were neither Inns nor Bakers in Palestine, at least they were very rare. Jesus Christ tells his Disciples, that when they went upon any Journey, in order to preach the Gospel, there was no occasion Mark vi. 8. for their troubling themselves to provide Bread; nevertheless they generally had some, while they followed our Saviour; and one day they shewed great concern for having forgotten to carry any with Mat. xvi. 5, 6, 7, 8. them; whereupon Jesus severely reproved them: O ye of little faith, why reason ye among yourselves, because ye have brought no Bread?

The Psalmist speaks of the Bread of Tears, Fuerunt mihi lacrymæ meæ panes Ps. xli. 4. die ac nocte; and in another place, Thou Ps. lxxx. 5. feedest them with the bread of tears; and Ps. cxxvii. 2. again, Thou that eatest the bread of sorrows. We may easily comprehend, that by all this is meant continual Sorrow and Tears, which make us lose the thoughts and desire of eating and drinking.

The Bread of Wickedness, the Bread of Prov. iv. 17. Deceit, is Bread acquired by criminal and fraudulent practices. By the Bread Prov. xx. 17. xxiii. 3. of Mourners in Hosea ix. 4. is meant impure and polluted Bread. Some are of opinion, that this passage of Jeremiah xi. 19. Mittamus lignum in panem ejus, let us put Wood in his Bread, signifies to poison his Bread, by mingling Wood in it of a venomous nature; or let us throw wood upon his Body, overwhelm him with cudgelling; the Hebrew Lechem, which signifies bread, being taken likewise for the Body.

Cast thy Bread upon the waters, for thou shalt find it after many Days, says Solomon; that is to say literally, Sow thy Eccles. xi. 1. Corn in a Soil which is well watered, and thou shalt reap a plentiful Harvest; or in a moral sense, Be liberal of thine Alms, do not refuse thine Assistance to any one, and thou shalt receive a Reward suitable to thy Generosity, and the extent of thy Charity.

The Eucharist or Sacrament of the Body and Blood of Jesus Christ, contained really and substantially under the appearances of Bread and Wine *, is very often described in the New Testament by the word Bread, the Bread of Life, Bread which giveth Life; the Bread which we break; and the holy Communion is mentioned under the term breaking of Bread. The same Sacrament is represented by Manna, the Bread of Heaven, the Bread of Angels, the Bread which contained all sorts of Delights and Sweets.

Breaking of Bread; an Expression familiar to the Hebrews, signifying the eating of Bread, or making a Meal. Frange Isa. lviii. 7. esurienti panem tuum; and Jeremiah, Neither shall men break bread for them in Jer. xvi. 7. mourning to comfort them from the dead. And again, the young children ask bread, Lament. iv. 4. and no man breaketh it unto them. In the Institution of the Eucharist, our Saviour broke the Bread which he had consecrated and distributed it to his Apostles; from whence it is, that to break Bread, and the breaking of Bread, in the Books of the New Mat. xxvi. 26. Testament, are used likewise for celebrating the holy Eucharist.

The natural and literal reason for these expressions, arises from hence, viz. That the Hebrews in Palestine, as well as the Syrians, Arabians and Egyptians, generally bake their Bread very thin, so as to have no need of Knives to cut it. They eat it new, and break it with their Fingers. See

* It may be superfluous to observe here, that the Author speaks of the Sacrament, according to the Sentiments of his Church, and the received Doctrine of Transubstantiation; the absurdity whereof is visible to all who have not renounced the use of their Senses.

See what we have remarked upon the word Bread.

BROOK, Torrens; in Greek Cheimarros; in Hebrew Nachal[p]. A Brook is diſtinguiſhed from a River; a River flows at all times, a Brook at ſome particular times only: For example, after great Rains, or the melting of the Snow. As the Hebrew word Nachal ſignifies a Valley as well as a Brook, one is often placed in Scripture for the other; for example, the Brook of Gerar, for the Valley of Gerar. This Ambiguity is not very dangerous, ſince generally there are Brooks in Valleys: But it may deſerve to be taken notice of, becauſe ſometimes that is attributed to the Valley which belongs only to the Brook; for example, to the Valley of Kidron, which ſhould be underſtood of the Brook ſo called.

The diſtinction between a Brook and a River is not always obſerved in Scripture, and one is often taken for the other; by giving great Rivers, ſuch as the Euphrates, the Nile, and Jordan, and other Rivers which flow the whole year, ſuch as Jabok and Arnon, the name of Brooks. The Euphrates in Iſaiah is called the Brook of Willows, Iſai. xv. 7.

Joel iii. 18. The Brook of Thorns, mentioned in Joel, is called in the Hebrew, the Brook of Shittim; and in the Septuagint the Brook of Cords[q]. I take this Brook to be the ſame as that of Kidron, which diſcharged itſelf into the Dead Sea.

The Brook Kidron, runs between the City of Jeruſalem to the Weſt, and the Mount of Olives to the Eaſt. See Kidron.

Brook of Egypt. This is probably the Nile, or the moſt eaſtern arm of this River. See Egypt.

The Brook Beſor, is commonly placed between Gaza and Rhinocorura: But S. Jerom, upon the vi. Ch. of Amos, ſays, it lies between Rhinocorura and Peluſium. See Beſor, and 1 Sam. xxx. 9, 21.

The Brook of Grapes, or Cluſter of Numb. xiii. 25. Deut. i. 24 Grapes, in Hebrew Nachal Eſhcol[r]. We are of opinion that it lay to the South of Judah, and the Lot of Simeon, not far from the Valley of Sorek.

The Brook Zered, Deut. ii. 13, 14. It is further ſouthward than the Brook Arnon.

The Brook Arnon. This is rather a River than a Brook. See Arnon.

The Brook Jabok. This is rather a River than a Brook. See Jabok.

The Brook or Valley of Gerar, near the City of this name, ſouthward of the promiſed Land, in Arabia Petræa.

The Brook of Jeruel, or rather the Brook oppoſite to the Wilderneſs of Jeruel, in the ſouthern part of Judah. 2 Chr. xx. 16.

The Brook Kiſhon, ſprings up at the foot of Mount Tabor, and falls into the Mediterranean, between Carmel and Ptolemais. See Kiſhon.

The Brook Cadumim. This, in my opinion, is the ſame as Kiſhon. See Judg. v. 21.

The Brook Cherith, beyond Jordan, towards Succoth. See Cherith, and 1 Kings xvii. 3.

The Brook of Gaaſh, 1 Chr. xi. 32. was probably in the Tribe of Ephraim, at the foot of Mount Gaaſh, upon which the Joſh. xxiv. 30. City of Timnath-Serah was ſituated, when Judg. ii. 9. Joſhua was buried, Joſh. xxiv. 30. His Tomb was ſtill ſhewn on Mount Gaaſh in Euſebius's time.

The Brook of Mamre. This is the Valley of Mamre, Geneſ. xiii. 18. xiv. 13, &c. Judith ii. 14. We have already obſerved, that the Hebrew Nachal ſignified equally a Valley and a Brook.

The Brook of the South. Pſal. cxxv. 11. Sicut torrens in auſtro, ſignifies probably the Brooks which are to the South of Paleſtine, or no more than the flux of Water, which was ſeen when the ſouth Wind diſſolved the Snow. The Hebrew word[s] is not Nachal, which ſignifies a Brook, but Aphikim, which ſignifies drains of Water, Inundations.

The Brooks or Rivers of Ethan. See Pſal. lxxiii. 15. Ethan.

BROTHER. This word is underſtood, not only in the common and literal Signification of it, but likewiſe in general for a Relation, a Man of the ſame Country, of the ſame Nation, and ſtill more univerſally for a Man in general, for our Neighbour, in the notion which our Saviour requires us to have of all the World, and whom he hath commanded us to love as our ſelves.

Brother is likewiſe uſed ſometimes for one who reſembles another in either good or evil; He that is ſlothful in his work, is Prov. xviii. 9. brother to him that is a great waſter. And Job, I am a brother to dragons, and a com- Job xxx. 29. panion to oſtriches. I have imitated them in their doleful cries, and in their flying from Mankind. And Eccleſiaſticus, He Ecclus. xxxiv. 27. that ſheddeth blood, and he who defraudeth the labourer of his hire, are brothers. Theſe two crimes are equal.

Brother is likewiſe to be underſtood for Friend, or Huſband, as Siſter, for Wife. O that thou wert as my brother that ſuck- Cant. viii. 1. ed the breaſts of my mother! And, Thou haſt raviſhed my heart, my ſiſter, my ſpouſe. Cant. iv. 9. And [p] נחל Nachal χείμαῤῥος, Torrens. [q] נחלהשטים χείμαῤῥον τῶν σχοινῶν. Torrentem funium.

[r] נחל אשכל Nachal Eſhcol. Torrens or Vallis. Botri. Num. xiii. 24. xxxii.
[s] Hebr. בנגב אפיקים Effuſiones in Auſtro.

Job xvii. 14. And Job, I said to the worm thou art my Prov. vii. 4. sister. And Solomon in his Proverbs, Say unto Wisdom, Thou art my sister.

Deut. xxv. 7. According to the Law of Moses, the Brother of a Man who died without Children, was obliged to marry the Widow of the deceased, in order to raise up Children to him, that his name and memory might not be extinct in Israel. See lower the Article Widow.

BRUCHUS. A sort of Locusts. The Hebrew Arbe [t], is differently translated, by the Septuagint and Vulgate generally Bruchus, and by other Interpreters Locusta. Now Locusta and Bruchus differ, as S. Austin says [v], like the Parent and the Child. Locusta is a perfect Locust, Bruchus a young one, as yet without its wings. There were several species of Locusts which
Lev. xi. 22. the Hebrews were allowed by God to eat. And we know that this sort of food was the common diet which S. John Baptist Matth. iii. 4. made use of. There were several other people, who eat of them, as is shewn in the Comments on S. Matthew.

BUBALUS. There is frequent men-
Deut. xiv. 5. tion of the Bubalus in Scripture. Moses suffered the Hebrews to eat of it; and it was 1 Kings iv. 23. served up at Solomon's Table. The Hebrew Jachmur [w], signifies a certain Animal which is found about the Euphrates, with horns like a Stag, and red hair. After this manner the Arabians describe the Jachmur, which the Vulgate has translated Bubalus.

BUBASTUS, a famous City of Egypt. Ezekiel speaks of it under the name of פי בזת Pi-bezeth, Ezek. xxx. 17. It is situated on the eastern shore of that arm of the Nile which extends furthest towards Arabia. Ezekiel threatens it with the utmost calamities, which would be brought upon its inhabitants by Nebuchadnezzar King of Babylon.

BUGEUS; this is the sirname which Esth. xii. 6. the Scripture gives Haman the great enemy of the Jews. The Greek Bugeus or Bougaios, signifies a vain Man, one puffed up with pride. We do not read Bugeus in the Hebrew, but in the Greek only. I am of opinion, that it is put for Bagoas, which signifies an Eunuch, an Officer belonging to the King of Persia's Court.

To BUILD. Besides the proper and literal signification of this word, it is used likewise to signify producing Children and a numerous posterity. Sarah desires Abraham to take Hagar to wife, that so by her
Gen. xvi. 2. means she may be builded up, that is to say, have Children to support her family. The Midwives who refused obedience to Pharaoh's orders, when he commanded them to put to death all the male Children of the Hebrews, were rewarde dfor it, because God built them houses, gave them a nu- Exod. i. 21.
merous posterity.

The Prophet Nathan promises David on the part of God, that he would build his house for him, that he would give him 2 Sam.
Children and Successors. The Scripture vii. 27.
speaking of the formation of the first Woman, says, that God built her with the Rib Gen. ii.
of Adam. To edify, in the moral sense of 22.
the word, is used with relation to the good instructions and examples which we give our Neighbour, in order to inspire him with the love of virtue, to keep him in those sentiments, and improve them in him.

I. BUKKI, the Son of Jogti, of the Tribe of Dan, Numb. xxxiv. 22.

II. Bukki, High-Priest of the Jews, the Son of Abishua, and Father of Uzzi, 1 Chron. vi. 5.

BUKKIAH, a Levite, who played before the Ark, 1 Chron. xxv. 4.

BUL, the eighth month in the Hebrew Kalender, since called, Marshevan; it answers to our October. It is the second Month of the Civil, and the eighth of the Ecclesiastical Year. It is composed of nine and twenty days. The sixth Day of this Month was a fast, because on this Day Nebuchadnezzar put to death the Children of Zedekiah in the presence of this unhappy Prince, whose Eyes, after they had been witnesses to this sad spectacle, he ordered to be put out. See 2 Kings xxv. 7. We find the name of Bul mentioned only in 1 Kings vi. 38. in the reign of Solomon.

BULL. Bullock. This animal was reputed by the Hebrews to be clean, and was generally made use of by them for Sacrifices. The Septuagint and Vulgate have often rendred that Ox which signifies a Bull, [x] under the word Ox comprehending rather the Species than the Sex or Quality of the Animal. The antient Hebrews in general never cut any Creature, and Lev. xxii.
where in the Text we read Ox, we are to 24.
understand a Bull by it.

The beauty of Joseph is compared to that of a Bullock. The Egyptians had a Deut.
particular veneration for this Animal, they xxxiii. 17.
paid divine honours to it; and the Jews imitated them in their worship of the golden Calves, that is to say, golden Bulls in the Wilderness, and in the Kingdom of Israel. Jacob reproaches his Sons Simeon and Levi for having dug down the Wall of the Sichemites [y]; or, according to Gen. xlix.
another Translation of the Hebrew, for 6.
hamstringing a Bull. Thus the Septuagint have translated it, and many of the antient Fathers [z] have followed their Version, [t] ארבה 70 Βροῦχος. [v] Aug. in Psal. civ. [w] יחמור Bubalus. [x] שור Schor. Taurus or Bos.

[y] עקרו שור 70. Ἐνευροκόπησαν ταῦρον. [z] Origen homil. xvii. in Genes. Tertull. contra Judæos, c. 10.

sion, and explained this passage of Jesus Christ, and his being put to death by the Jews. The Hebrew, Shor, signifies a Wall, and a Bull.

This last word, in a figurative and allegorical sense, is taken likewise for powerful, fierce, insolent Enemies. Fat bulls (in the Hebrew, Bulls of Bashan) kept me
Ps. xxii. 13. in on every side, says the Psalmist. And
Ps. lxviii. 31. in another place, Rebuke the beast of the reeds, the multitude of the bulls: Lord smite in thy wrath these Animals which feed in large Pastures, these herds of Bulls.
Is. xxxiv. 7. And Isaiah, The Lord shall cause his Victims to be slain in the land of Edom, a terrible slaughter will he make, he will kill the Unicorns and the Bulls, that is to say, those proud and cruel Princes who oppressed the weak.

BUNAH, the Son of Jerahmeel, 1 Chr. ii. 25.

BURIAL. The Hebrews have at all times been very careful in the burial of their dead; to be deprived of it was thought to be one of the greatest dishonours that could be done to any Man: this last duty was denied to none, not even to Enemies; but it was not allowed to those who were self-murderers, till after Sun-set, and the Souls of such Persons were believed to be plunged into Hell [a]. This mighty concern for burial proceeded from the persuasion they were under of the Soul's immortality [b]. The Scripture threatens the wicked with being deprived of it, as if it were one of the greatest calamities that could happen to them. If a man beget an hundred children, and live many years, so that the days of his years be many, and his soul be not filled with good, and also that he have no burial; I say that an untime-
Eccles. vi. 3. ly birth is better than he. Jeremiah threatens the Kings, Priests and false Prophets who had adored Idols, that he would have their bones thrown out of their graves
Jer. viii. 2. like dung upon the Earth. The same Pro-
Jer. xxii. 18, 19. phet foretold that Jehoiakim King of Judah, who built his house by unrighteousness, and gave himself up to avarice, violence, and all manner of vice; he foretold that this Prince should be buried with the burial of an Ass, that he should be cast out of the Gates of Jerusalem into the com-
2 Mac. v. 10. mon sewer. It is observed that Jason who had denied the rites of burial to many of the Jews, was himself treated in the same manner, that he died in a foreign Land, and was thrown like carrion into the fields without being laid even in a stranger's grave. Good Men made part of their devotion to consist in interring the dead, as we see by the example of Tobit.

There was nothing determined particularly as to the place of burying the dead. There were graves in the town and country, upon the highways, in gardens and moun- 1 Kings tains. Those belonging to the Kings of ii. 10. xi.
Judah were in Jerusalem, and the King's 43. xiv.
gardens. Ezekiel intimates, that they 31. xv. 8.
were dug under the mountain which the xxiv. 12, &c.
Temple stood upon, since God says, that 2 Kings for the future his Holy Mountain should xxxi. 18. 26.
not be polluted with the dead bodies of their Kings. The Sepulchre which Joseph of Arimathea had provided for himself, and John xix.
wherein he placed our Saviour's body, was 41. xx.
in his garden. That of Rachel was upon 15.
the highway from Jerusalem to Bethle- 2 Macc.
hem. That of the Maccabees at Modin, xiii. 25, 27. 28, upon an eminence, from whence it was vi- 29.
sible at a distance both by Sea and Land. We have given the description of it under the articles Maccabees and Jonathan. The Kings of Israel had their burying places in Samaria. Samuel was interr'd in his own house. Moses, Aaron, Eleazer and Joshua in mountains. King Saul and Deborah, Rebekah's Nurse under trees. It is affirmed, that the Sepulchres of the People of Jerusalem were in the Valley of Kidron. There likewise were the burying places for foreigners.

The Jews call what we term a Churchyard, the house of the living [c], to shew their belief of the Immortality of the Soul, and of the Resurrection; and when they come thither bearing a dead body [d], they address themselves to those who lie there, as if they were still alive, and say, Blessed be the Lord who hath created you, fed you, brought you up, and at last in his justice taken you out of the world. He knows the number of you all, and will in time revive you. Blessed be the Lord who causeth death, and restores life. Their respect for Sepulchres is so great, that they build Synagogues and Oratories near those of great Men and Prophets. For example, They have Synagogues near the Tombs of Ezekiel, Zachary, Mordecai and Esther. They go and pray near them, being persuaded, as we are, of the efficacy of prayers for the dead, and the intercession of the Saints [e]. The Rabbins teach, that it is not lawful to demolish Tombs, or disturb the repose of the dead, by burying another dead person in the same grave, even after a long time; nor [a] Joseph. de Bello, l. iii c. 25. in Græco, p. 852, 853. [b] Tacit. Hist. l. v. c. 5. [c] Leo of Modena part 5. c. 8. [d] Buxtorf. Synag. Jud. c. 35. [e] Johan. Nicolai de Sepulcr. Hebr. l. iv. c. 6. Basnage hist. des Juifs, l. 7. c. 24. n. 24.

* Here likewise we find them in Virgil's description of this place Æneid. l. vi. 434.

Proxima deinde tenent mœsti loca, qui sibi lethum
Insontes peperêre manu, lucemque perosi
Projecêre animas. Quam vellent æthere in alto, Nunc et pauperiem et duros perferre labores!

nor to carry an aquæduct cross the common place of burial, or through an high-way, nor to go and gather wood there, or suffer cattle to feed there.

When the Jews are come with the Funeral to the Burying place, the blessing directed to the dead, as above mentioned, is repeated; the body is put down upon the ground, and if it be a person of consideration, a kind of funeral Oration and Encomium is made of him; then they walk round the grave, reciting a pretty long prayer, which they call the Righteousness of Judgment; because therein they return thanks to God for having pronounced an equitable judgment concerning the life and person of the deceased. It begins with these words of Deuteronomy, Deut. xxxii. 4. He is the rock, his work is perfect; then a little sack full of earth is put under the dead person's head, and the coffin is nailed down and closed. If it be a man, ten persons take ten turns about him, and say a prayer for his soul; the nearest relation tears a corner of his clothes, the dead body is let down into the grave with his face turned towards Heaven; and they cry to him, Go in peace, or rather, Go to peace, according to the Talmudists. The nearest relations are the first that throw earth upon the Body; after them, all who are there present do the same with their hands, or with shovels. This done they retire walking backwards, and before they go out of the Burying-ground, they pluck bits of grass three times, and cast them behind their backs saying, They shall flourish like grass of the earth. Ps. lxxii. 16.

I do not observe in all Antiquity, any example of an Epitaph inscribed upon the tombs of the Hebrews; for that which is reported of Adoniram's found in Spain, and some others of the like authority, do not deserve our notice. Monuments were erected in memory of a King, a Hero, a Prophet, or a Warrior: the tomb itself spoke sufficiently, and the memory of the person was perpetuated among the people. King Josiah destroying the tombs of the false Prophets of Baal, and of the Priests belonging to the Golden Calf, took notice of a sepulchral Stone among the rest, which was said to be the tomb built up for the man of God, who came and declared to Jeroboam, that a King by name Josiah should burn the bones of the false Prophets upon the Altar at Bethel. There was therefore no Epitaph upon it. 1 Kings xiii. 2. Absalom called his tomb, The Hand of Absalom. 2 Sam. xviii. 18. The tombs belonging to the Kings which were in caves dug in a rock, were certainly not adorned with Epitahps.

The set form of Epitaphs used at this day by the Jews, is as follows; This Stone is placed at the head of N. the Son of N. who was buried on such a day in the year N. May he rest in the Garden of Eden with all the righteous who have been therefrom the beginning: Amen, Amen, Selah. Or else; Let his Soul be buried in the Garden of Eden. Amen, Amen, Amen, Selah. Or otherwise, This Monument or this Pillar is erected near the head of the most illustrious, most holy, and most pure Virgin Rebekah, the Daughter of Samuel the Levite, who died in good reputation such a day of the month N. in the year N. May her Soul be buried in the Garden of Eden. Amen, Amen, Amen, Selah. But these set forms are neither ancient nor uniform. Benjamin of Tudela says, that as he travelled through Palestine, he observed this inscription on Abraham's Tomb, Here is the Sepulcher of Abraham our blessed Father. But this had been but lately made.

BURNING BUSH, wherein the Lord appeared to Moses at the foot of Mount Exod. iii. 2. Horeb. Not far from hence Moses was feeding his Father-in-law Jethro's flocks, when he perceived a Bush all on fire without consuming. Hereupon he said within himself, I will go near that I may see this great vision; but as he approached, God called out to him from amidst the Bush, and said, Put off thy shoes from off thy feet, for the place whereon thou standest is holy ground. This nakedness of the Feet is a Ceremony which has been imitated by several people, as a mark of their respect when they enter into their Temples. The Egyptians, Mahometans, Indians, and Ethiopians practise it still at this day, when they go into their places of Prayer. God injoined the Hebrew Priests to wash their feet and hands, when they approached the Altar, and entered into the Exod. xxx. 19. Sanctuary. The Rabbins[a] believe, that even the common people among the Israelites left their shoes behind them, when they went into the Temple. Juvenal seems to say the same thing[b].

Exercent ubi festa mero pede Sabbatha Reges.

But I do not know whether these Authors were rightly informed; for I see nothing like it appointed in the Law.

As to the person that appeared in the Bush, the Scripture in several places calls him by the name of God. He says himself, that he is the Lord, the God, who Exod. iii. 2, 6, 13, 14, &c. is the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, the God who was to deliver his people out of bondage in Egypt; and Moses blessing Joseph, says, Let the blessing of him that dwelt in the Bush come upon the Deut. xxxiii. 16. head of Joseph. But in the places of Exodus, which we are examining, instead of the Lord appeared to him, the Hebrew and the Septuagint import, the Angel of the Lord appeared to him. S. Stephen in the Acts vii. 3. Acts reads it in the same manner; S. Paul writing

[a] Rab. Salom. in Levit. xix. 30. Maimonid. in Misna de Benedict.

[b] Juvenal. Satyr. 6.

Gal. iii. 19. writing to the Galatians says, that the Law was given by Angels. S. Jerom[c], S. Austin[d], and S. Gregory the Great[e] teach the same thing. It was an Angel who represented the Lord, and spoke in his name: Angelorum vocabulo exprimuntur, qui exterius ministrabant, & appellatione Domini ostenditur, qui eis interius praerat, says S. Gregory. It is nevertheless true, that the Ancients generally hold the Son of God to be the person who appeared in the Bush[f], and S. Austin[g] acknowledges, that both opinions may be maintained without any prejudice to the true Faith. Duæ sunt sententiæ quarum quælibet vera sit, ambæ secundum fidem sunt.

The Mahometans believe, that one of Moses's Shoes put off by him as he drew near towards the burning Bush, was placed in the Ark of the Covenant, in order to preserve the memory of this Miracle.

BUTTER, is taken in Scripture, as it has been almost perpetually in the East, for Cream or liquid Butter. See our Comment upon Genesis, xviii. 8. and the Supplement at the end of the Revelations. Children were fed with Butter and Honey. Isai. vii. 15, 22. that is to say, with Milk-diet, with Cream, and Honey, which was very common in Palestine. Some think that by the name of Butyrum, in the Scripture, we are to understand Cheese. But we cannot be of their opinion. The Hebrews have a particular name to signify Cheese, different from that which they make use of to signify Cream or Butter.

I. BUZ, the Son of Nahor and Milcah, and Brother to Huz, Genes. xii. 21. Elihu one of Job's friends was descended from Buz the Son of Nahor. The Scrip-
Job xxxii. 2. ture calls him the Aramean or Syrian; Elihu the Jebusite of the kindred of Ram.
Jerem. xxv. 23. Ram is put for Aram. The Prophet Jeremiah threatens the Buzites with the effects of God's wrath. They dwelt in Arabia deserta.

II. Buz, the Son of Abdiel, and Father of Jahdo, of the Tribe of Judah. 1 Chron. v. 14.

BUZI, a Priest, the Father of the Prophet Ezekiel. Ezek. i. 3.

BYBLOS, a City of Phœnicia, lying between Sidon and Orthosia, and famous for its constant adherence to the worship of Adonis, who was believed to have been wounded by a boar in Libanus, above Byblos. The river Adonis, which descends from Mount Libanus, passes by to Byblos, its waters are sometimes as red as blood, occasioned by the particular sort of earth through which it runs, and carries off with it in great quantities as often as it overflows. This is the time when the inhabitants of Byblos lament Adonis, pretending that their river is then coloured with his blood[h]. The Egyptians had a custom every year at the Feast of Adonis, to throw a Box into the Sea, made in the shape of a head, which they said was the head of Osiris, and in it was a Letter directed to the inhabitants of Byblos, who lived at the distance of above fourscore leagues from them. They pretended that this Box of itself went to Byblos in seven days time. The Prophet Isaiah is believed by Isai. xviii. 2.
some to allude to this custom, when he says, Wo to the land that sendeth Ambassadors by Sea, even in vessels of bulrushes upon the waters.

Some are of opinion, that they who in the Scripture are called Giblii, and whose 1 Kings v. 18.
dexterity in cutting wood and building vessels is there commended, were the inhabitants of Byblos, in Hebrew called Ge- Ecclus. xxvii. 9.
bal. It was seated at the foot of Libanus, upon the Mediterranean, almost opposite to the place, where we still see some Cedars at this day.

BYSSUS. By this word we generally understand that fine Egyptian Linen to be meant, which the Priests Tunicks were made of. But we are to distinguish carefully three sorts of things, which are generally confounded, and are comprehended under the name of Linen[i]. 1. The Hebrew, bad, which signifies Linen. 2. Schesch, which signifies Cotton. 3. Buz, which is what we commonly call Byssus, which is the Silk growing under a certain shell-fish called Pinna.

Philo[k] says, that the Byssus is the clearest, and most beautiful, the whitest, strongest, and most glossy sort of Linen; that it is not made of any thing mortal, that is to say, of woollen or the skin of any animal, but that it comes out of the earth, and becomes always whiter and more shining, when it is washed as it should be. There is a sort of Pumice-stone in the confines of Arabia, and in the isle of Cyprus[l], called Amiantus, or incorruptible which is beaten and dissolves much after the manner of our making paper, then being dried, it is spun like cotton. Of this the Arabians make them socks, stockings and drawers, to defend themselves from the burning heats of the sands in Arabia. This sort of linen cloth is incorruptible, and does not burn, but is cleansed in the flames. Pliny[m] calls it Linum vivum, and says, that the Romans made table-cloths and napkins of it, which were cleaned ed and became more beautiful by passing through the fire. One would think Moses should not have forgotten this kind of Linen among those mentioned by him. But has he spoke of it under the name of Byssus? This is what no one can affirm certainly without temerity.

[c] Hieronym. in Ep. ad Galat. c. iii. [d] Aug. l. iii. de Trin. c. 11. [e] Greg Mag. l. xxviii. Moral. c. 1. [f] Tertull. contra Judæos. Justin. dialog. cum Tryph. Iren. l. iv. c. 16. Basil. l. ii. & iv. contra Eunom. Hilar. l. iv. & v. de Trinit. Theodor. qu. 5. in Exod. [g] Aug. Ser. 7. de Scrip. Vet. & Nov. Test. [h] Lucian. de Dea Syria. [i] בד Linnen. שש Schesch, Gossypium. בוץ Butz, Byssus. [k] Philon. de Somniis p. 592. [illegible] &c. [l] Relation des Caravannes imprimée à Nancy, 1707. par M. Bugnon. Geograph. de S. A. R. [m] Plin. l. xix. c. 1.

In our Comment upon Exodus and the Chronicles, we have declared ourselves in favour of that kind of Silk, which is to be found at the tail of a certain Fish called Pinna, and fastens it to the Earth with a sort of tuft, in colour like a yellow gilded Silk, and of this formerly the richest Mantles were made for Kings [a]: Procopius says, the Emperor Justinian had a Mantle of this sort of Silk, which he made use of upon occasions of Ceremony.•

Nevertheless, I have still some doubt concerning this opinion; for I do not find the name of Buz in the Hebrew Text of Moses, tho' the Greek and Latin Interpreters have made use of the word Byssus, to signify the fine Linen of certain Habits belonging to the Priests. There is room therefore to believe, that it was not the design of Moses to speak of it. The word Buz is not to be met with in the Bible, excepting in the Chronicles, in Ezekiel, and Esther. In the Chronicles Ezek.
we see David dressed in a Mantle of Buz, xxvii. 16.
with the Singers and all the Levites. 1 Chr. xv. 27 and Solomon uses Buz in the Vails of the Tem- 2 Chr. v.
ple and the Sanctuary. Ahasuerus's Tents 12.
were upheld by Cords of Buz, and Mor- 2 Chr. ii. 14. and iii.
decai was cloathed with a Mantle of Pur- 14.
ple and Buz, when King Ahasuerus ho- Esth. i. 6. Esth. viii.
noured him with the first Employment in 15.
his Kingdom. Lastly, it is observed, that there was a Manufacture of Buz in the City of Beersheba in Palestine. I can 1 Chr. iv.
hardly persuade myself, that the Silk of 21.
the Fish Pinna could have been so frequent in this Country, so early as in the time of David and Solomon. Nevertheless it is certain, that this Buz must have been different from common Linen, since in the very same place, where it is said, that David had a Mantle of Byssus upon him, we read likewise, that he wore a Linen Ephod. See the Article Cotton.

[a] Basil. in Hexaëmeron. Orat. 7. Πόθεν αἱ κόχλαι τοῖς βασιλεῦσι τὰς ἁλουργίδας χαρίζονται.

C.

CABBALA. This word, according to the Hebrew Style, has a very different signification from that wherein we understand it in our Language. The Hebrew Cabbala signifies Tradition [a], and the Rabbins, who are called Cabbalists, study principally the Combination of particular Words, Letters and Numbers; and by this means pretend to discover what is to come, and to see clearly into the sense of many difficult passages in Scripture. There are no sure and certain Principles of this Knowledge, but it depends upon some particular Traditions of the Antients; for which reason it is termed Cabbala. The Cabbalists have abundance of names which they call sacred; these they make use of in invoking Spirits, and imagin that they receive great Lights from them: They tell us, that the Secrets of the Cabbala * were discovered to Moses on Mount Sinai, and that these have been delivered down to them from Father to Son, without interruption, and without any use of Letters; for to write them down is what they are by no means permitted to do. It is said, that there are many of the Jewish Cabbalists in Poland, and other places in the North. See Basnage's continuation of Josephus, t. 6. l. ix. c. 7.

The manner wherein Maimonides [b] explains the Cabbala, or Tradition of the Jews, is as follows.

God not only delivered the Law to Moses on Mount Sinai, but the explanation of it likewise. When he came down, and entred into his Tent, Aaron went to visit him, and Moses acquainted him with the Laws which he had received from God, together with the Explanation of them. After this, Aaron placed himself at the right hand of Moses, Eleazar and Ithamar the Sons of Aaron were admitted, and Moses repeated to them what he had been saying just before to Aaron. These being seated one on the right, the other on the left hand of Moses, the 70 Elders of Israel came in, who composed the Sanhedrin; Moses again declared the same Laws to them, with the Interpretations of them, as he had done before to Aaron and his Sons. Lastly, All whoever pleased of the common People were invited to enter, and Moses instructed them in the same manner as the rest. So that Aaron heard four times what Moses had

[a] קבלה Cabala Traditio. [b] Maimonidas's Preface to the Mishnah.

* The first who delivered any thing of the Cabbala in writing was Simon Jochaides, Author of the celebrated Book called Zohar, to which great additions have been since made. The first part of this Work is entitled Zeniutha or Mystery, the second Idra Rabba, or the great Synod, the third Idra Lata, or the little Synod, which is Jochaides's last adieu to his Disciples. See Histoire des Juifs par Basnage, l. iii. c. 10 where and in the following Book this learned Author is very copious on this Subject.

had been taught by God upon the Mountain, Eleazar and Ithamar three times, the 70 Elders twice, and the People once.

Moses afterwards reduced the Laws which he had received into writing, but not the Explanations of them. He thought it sufficient to trust them to the Memory of the persons abovementioned, who being perfectly instructed in them, delivered them to their Children, and these again to theirs from Age to Age. The written Laws of Moses are to be read in his Books, in Exodus, Leviticus and Numbers, but the Explanation, Tradition or Cabbala of these very Laws, is preserved to this day in the memory of the Hebrews. This is termed likewise the Oral Law, because it passed from Father to Son, from Mouth to Mouth, in order to distinguish it from the written Laws.

Some of these Traditions, or Cabbalas, the Patriarchs are supposed to be the Authors of, and to have been instructed by their Angels. [c] The Angel Raziel was Adam's Master, and taught him the Cabbala. Raphiel was Shem's; Zedekiel was Abraham's, Raphael Isaac's, Peliel Jacob's, Gabriel Joseph's, Metacron Moses's, and Malathiel Elias's. Thus the Rabbins endeavour to give great Authority to their Traditions and Explanations of the Law, against which our Saviour appeared with so much vehemence.

There is another Cabbala called artificial, which consists in searching for abstruse and mysterious Significations of a word in Scripture, from whence they borrow certain Explanations, by combining the Letters which compose it. This Cabbala is divided into three kinds, the Gematrie, the Notaricon, and the Temura or change. The Gematry consists in taking the Letters of a Hebrew word for Cyphers, or arithmetical Numbers, and explaining every word by the arithmetical value of the Letters whereof it is composed; for
Gen. xlix. 10. example, the Hebrew Letters of יבא שילה Jabo-schiloh, [d] Shiloh shall come, make up the same arithmetical Number as משיח Messiach, the Messiah, from whence they conclude, that Shiloh signifies the Messiah.

The second kind of Cabbala, which is called Notaricon, consists in taking every particular letter of a word for an intire diction. For example, of Bereschith [e], which is the first word of Genesis, composed of the Letters B. R. A. SCH. II. they make Bara-Rakia-Arez-Schamaim-Jam-Tehomoth [f]. He created the Firmament, the Earth, the Heavens, the Sea and the Deep; or in taking the first Letters of a Sentence to form one Diction only with them; for example, [g] Atah-Gibbor-Leholam-Adonai. Thou art strong for ever, O Lord. They put the first Letters of this Sentence together, and make the word Agla [h], which may signify, I will reveal, or a drop of Dew.

The third kind of Cabbala, called Themurah [i], that is to say, change, consists in making different Transpositions or changes of Letters, placing one for the other, or one before the other, much after the manner of making Anagrams in Latin, or any other Language; for example, of the word Bereschith [k], with which Genesis begins, they make A-betisri, the first day of the Month Tizri; and infer from it, that the World was created the first day of the Month Tizri, which answers very near to our September.

Among Christians likewise, a certain sort of Magick is by mistake called Cabbala, which consists in using improperly Passages of Scripture for Magick Operations, or in forming Magick Characters or Figures, with Stars and Talismans. Such are the Abraxas so well known among the Antiquaries. Under the same name likewise is sometimes comprehended the hermetical Art, or the search after the Philosopher's Stone.

CABBALISTS. The Rabbinical Doctors among the Jews are called by this name, who receive not only the Text of Scripture, but also the Explanations of the Talmud, and the Traditions of the Antients, and who besides study to discover mysterious and concealed Meanings in the Scripture, of God's appointing, and left by him to the enquiries of Men; for, in their opinion, there is not a Word, Letter, or Accent in the Law, without some Mystery in it.

The first Cabbalistical Author that we know of, is Simon the Son of Joachai, whom the Jews, and some Christians glory in mightily, and affirm him to have lived some little time before the ruin of Jerusalem by Titus [l]; but others allow him to [c] R. Abraham-Bendior præfat. in Jetzira.

[d]

ר.	10.	ט.	40.
ב.	2.	ש.	300.
א.	1.	י.	10.
ש.	300	ח.	8.
.	10.
ל.	30.
ה.	5.
	358.		358.

[e] בראשית In principio. [f] בא־רקיע־ארץ שמים־ים תהוסות. [g] אתהגבור לעלם ארני.

[h] אגלא Vide Galatin Arcan. l. 2. c. 15. [i] תמורה Change. [k] בראשית א־בתשרי 1. in Tizri.

[l] See Basnage Hist. des Juifs. t. 6. l. ix. c. 7. p. 317.

to have appeared no earlier than in the tenth Century, and underſtand all that is ſaid of this famous perſon to be fabulous. His Book entitled Zohar is printed; but it is agreed, that many additions have been made to it.

CABBON, a City in the Tribe of Judah, Joſh. xv. 40.

CABUL. See Chabalon.

CABUS or Cab, an Hebrew Meaſure, the ſixth part of a Seah or Satum; and the eighteenth part of an Epha. A Cab * contained two pints ⅙ of our Corn Meaſure. A quarter Cab was the Meaſure of Dove's Dung, or a ſort of chich-peaſe, called by this name, which was ſold at Samaria during the Siege of this City for five Shekels. This quarter of a Cab contained ſomething above half a pint. It is called likewiſe Log or Robah. A Cab is very different from a Cad or Cadus.

CAD, or Cadus, † ſignifies in Hebrew a Pitcher, a Hogſhead, a Bucket. But in S. Luke a particular Meaſure is meant by it. How much oweſt thou unto my Lord? And he ſaid, an hundred Meaſures of oyl. ‡ The Greek reads, an hundred Baths. Now the Bath or Ephah, contains ten Gallons, and ſome ſmall matter over. A Cad is very different from a Cab, which is no more than the eighteenth part of an Ephah or Cadus.

CADUMIM. The Brook Cadumim is mentioned in Judges, Chap. v. 21. Many are of opinion, that this Brook ran from Weſt to Eaſt, from the foot of Mount Tabor into the Sea of Tiberias. But we have no evidence of there being any ſuch Brook in this place. Others think, Cadumim is only a ſynonymous term for the Brook Kiſhon: And there is nothing in the Scripture which contradicts this opinion. Torrens Ciſon traxit cadavera; torrens Cadumim, torrens Ciſon [m]. We know there was a City in theſe parts called Cadmon, mentioned in the Book of Judith, from whence the Brook Cadumim or Kiſhon might take its name. Euſebius ſpeaks of a large place, called Cammon, in the great Plain, ſix Miles northward from Legio. (Judith vii. 3. in Syriaco.)

CÆSAR. This is the name of all the Roman Emperors, from Julius Cæſar to the Deſtruction of the Roman Empire. In Scripture the reigning Emperor was generally mentioned by the Name of Cæſar, without expreſſing any other, under which he was more known in Hiſtory. For example, Jeſus Chriſt calls Tiberius, Cæſar, without adding any other appellation, ſaying, Render unto Cæſar, the things that are Cæſar's. And S. Paul mentions Nero under the ſame Title only. (Mat. xxii. 21.) I appeal unto Cæſar; that is to ſay, to Nero, who then reigned. (Acts xxv. 10.)

CÆSAREA in Paleſtine, before called Strato's Tower, and built by Herod the Great in Honour of Auguſtus, was ſituated on the eaſtern Coaſt of the Mediterranean, and had a very fine Harbour belonging to it. Joſephus [n] ſays, it was ſix hundred Furlongs; that is to ſay, about five or ſix and twenty common Leagues from Jeruſalem. Veſpaſian, after the Jewiſh War was ended, ſettled a Roman Colony in Cæſarea. Its Inhabitants were part Jews and part Greeks, or Idolaters: Hence aroſe thoſe Seditions which were ſo frequent between theſe two People. Cæſarea is often ſpoken of in the New Teſtament. There it was that King Agrippa was ſmitten of the Lord, in neglecting to give God the Glory, when the People were ſo liberal to him of their Praiſes. (Acts xii. 23.) Cornelius the Centurion, who was baptized by S. Peter, lived at Cæſarea. (Acts x. 1. & ſeq.) There S. Philip the Deacon, with his four Maiden Daughters, had his Habitation. (Acts viii. 40.) At Cæſarea the Prophet Agabus foretold to S. Paul, that he would be bound and confined by his Enemies at Jeruſalem. (Acts xxi. 10, 11.) Laſtly, the ſame Apoſtle continued two years a priſoner at Cæſarea, till he was conducted to Rome, where he had appealed to Nero's Tribunal. (Acts xxiii, xxiv, xxv.) Whenever there is mention of the Cities in Paleſtine, and Cæſarea is named without the addition of Philippi, we are always to ſuppoſe that Cæſarea to be meant, whereof we are ſpeaking in this place.

Cæſarea Philippi, before called Paneas, is ſituated at the foot of Mount Paneus, near the Springs of Jordan. Its ancient name is believed to have been Dan or Lais; and it is called Paneas by the Phœnicians only. [o] But Euſebius diſtinguiſhes Dan from Paneas, as if they were two different places near each other. [p] Cæſarea was at the diſtance of a day's journey from Sidon, [q] and a day's journey and an half from Damaſcus. [r] Philip the Tetrarch built it, or at leaſt embelliſhed and enlarged it, and gave it the name of Cæſarea in honour of Tiberius; afterwards, in [m] Ita Verſio Vulg. [n] Joſeph. de Bello. l. i. c. 3. Antiq. l. xiii. c. 19. [o] Euſeb. Hiſt. l. 7. c. 16. Sozomen. Hiſt. l. 5. c. 21. [p] Euſeb. ad vocem Βεδραμάνις. et ad vocem Δάν. [q] Antiq. l. v. c. 2. [r] Abulfeda apud Reland. Paleſt. t. 2. p. 920.

* A Cab contained three Pints ⅓ of our Wine Meaſure, and two Pints ⅙ of our Corn Meaſure. Arbuth. Tables of antient Coins, Weights and Meaſures.

† Dr. Arbuthnot having enumerated the ſeveral Jewiſh Meaſures for things liquid, concludes his account of them with theſe words, In the Scriptures are alſo found, Nebel, Aſiſa, Nod, Cad, Aboth. Purah, Bacbuc, which ſome Authors take for certain Meaſures; but they rather ſeem to have been the names of Veſſels of no determinate Bigneſs. Tables of antient Coins, Weights and Meaſures, &c. p. 162.

‡ The Vulgate reads, Centum cados olei.

in respect to Nero, it was called Neronias. [r] The Springs from which the River Jordan proceeds, appear near Cæsarea Philippi, and pass through natural and subterraneous Channels from the Lake Phiala, which is at the distance of an hundred and twenty Furlongs, or five Leagues from this City. [s] The Woman who was troubled with an Issue of Blood, and healed by our Saviour, is said to have been of Cæsarea Philippi, and to have returned thither after her cure, and erected a Statue to her Benefactor [t]. At the foot of this Statue there grew an Herb, which had the vertue of curing several Diseases. Julian the Apostate pulled down this Figure, and set up his own in the room of it. But the Christian Inhabitants of the City took this Statue of our Saviour, and placed it with Honour in their Church, and Fire from Heaven consumed that of Julian.

Mat. ix. 20. Luke viii. 43.

CAIN, the eldest Son of Adam and Eve. He was born towards the end of the first year of the World's Creation, some believe, that Eve at the same time produced a Daughter, Cain's Sister, who is by some called Catmana, by others, Azura or Azrun: But the Scripture says nothing of any such person.

Gen. iv. 2, &c.

When Cain was grown up, he applied himself to Agriculture, and his Brother Abel imployed himself in feeding his Flocks. Upon a certain day Cain having offered the first Fruits of his Labour to the Lord, and Abel the Fat or Milk of his Flock, God shewed by some sensible Sign, that Abel's Offerings were agreeable to him, and that Cain's were not so; which so inraged Cain, and stung him with envy, that his Countenance was intirely changed; whereupon the Lord said to him, why art thou troubled, and why is thy Countenance so dejected? If thou dost well, shalt thou not be accepted? and if thou dost not well, shall not Punishment be the consequence of thy Sin? Abel shall be subject to thee, and thou, as the First-born, shalt rule over him.

But Cain suffering himself to be governed by his envious Passion, said to his Brother, Let us go into the Fields, and when they were there, he rose up against him and killed him. Then said the Lord to Cain, where is thy brother Abel? He answered, I know not, am I my Brother's keeper? God said, what hast thou done? the voice of thy Brother's Blood ariseth unto me from the Ground on which thou hast shed it. And now thou art cursed from the Earth, which hath opened her Mouth to receive thy Brother's Blood from thy hand. When thou tillest it, it shall not henceforth yield unto thee her Strength: A Fugitive and a Vagabond shalt thou be in the Earth. Cain replied, My Punishment is greater than I can bear. Behold thou hast driven me from thy Presence, and I shall be a Vagabond on the Earth, and every one that findeth me shall slay me. It shall not be so, said the Lord; for whosoever slayeth Cain, Vengeance shall be taken on him sevenfold. And the Lord set a mark on Cain, [u] lest any finding him should kill him [v].

Cain went out therefore from the Presence of the Lord, and retired to the Land of Nod, which lies to the East of the Province of Eden. While he dwelt in this Country, he had a Son, whom he named Enoch, in Memory of whom he built a City of the same name. This is what we learn from Scripture concerning Cain. Several Questions relating to him are proposed by different Persons, which are treated of by the Commentators. For example, what the pretence or motive was, which induced Cain to kill his Brother Abel; what Instrument he made use of; whose Resentment and Revenge he apprehended; to what Country he retired, what the Mark was which God fixed upon him; and what death he died. As to this last Article, it is said, he was killed by Lamech one of his Nephews. Lamech, they tell us, by some accident became blind; but notwithstanding this Misfortune, he sometimes went a hunting; upon which occasions he was led by a young Man, who gave him notice when he saw any Game. One day he heard a rustling in the Thickets, whereupon his Guide thought there was some wild Beast there. In reality it was Cain; and Lamech shooting at the place killed him. As soon as he discovered his Mistake, he was so inraged, that he stab'd his Guide, and returning to his own House, he said to his two Wives, Adah and Zillah, Hear my voice ye wives of Lamech, hearken to my speech: for I have slain a man to my wounding, and a young man to my hurt. But there is no certainty at all in this Tradition. Gen. iv. 23.

Josephus

[r] Joseph. Antiq. l. xx. c. 8. [s] Idem de Bello. l. i. c. 16. [t] Euseb. l. viii. c. 4. Nicephor. l. viii. c. 15.

[u] There is great diversity of Opinions concerning this Mark; some will have it, that God produced a Horn upon his Fore-head; and others, that he ingraved a letter on it; for example, the first letter of the word Cain. Others are of Opinion, that God created such a trembling in all his Limbs, as shewed his evil Concience and Remorse for the Sin he had committed. This last Opinion is most followed by the Fathers. The Rabbins say, he had a Dog with him, which went barking continually before him.

[v] He feared the resentment of Abel's Children, and of his other Brothers and Relations. He apprehended that they would pursue and kill him, unless he retired to such a distance from them, that it might be never possible for him to fall into their Hands. For at that time, and long after, people looked upon themselves to be obliged in duty to revenge the Death of their near Kinsmen. The Law appointed Cities of Refuge for involuntary Murderers, and in some sort tolerated Revenge in other Cases.

Josephus says [w], that Cain having settled at Naid or Nod, built a City there for himself and his Family; and instead of being reformed by this State of Exile, wherewith God had punished him, he grew more wicked, and gave himself up to all sorts of irregularities, and violence, and put himself at the head of a band of thieves, whom he had got together, and taught how to grow rich as well as he, at the expence of others. He quite changed the old simplicity and honesty, which reigned in the world, and introduced fraud and deceipt in trade by inventing weights and measures. He was the first, who set particular bounds to the fields, and who built and fortified a City.

We do not know how long Cain lived: Some say he was eight hundred; others seven hundred, others six hundred and fourscore; others again, that he was nine hundred and one and thirty years of Age, when he died. Some say he lived to the deluge. There are some too who believe that he was crushed in pieces under the ruins of an house; others, that he was killed, as we have said, by Lamech; and lastly others, that he killed himself [x]. There is nothing certain in all this, nor in the generality of those questions, which are proposed concerning other parts of his History. The Reader may hereupon consult the Commentators.

CAINS, or Cainites, certain Hereticks, who appeared in the second Century, and believed Cain to have been produced by some greater and more excellent power than Abel; and that for this reason Cain prevailed over Abel. Upon the same principle they paid extraordinary honours and respect to all those persons, who are represented in the Scripture to be the worst and most infamous of mankind, such as the inhabitants of Sodom, Corah, Dathan, and Abiram, and in particular to the traitor Judas, who knowing that the Salvation of Men was to be procured by the Death of Jesus Christ, delivered him up to his enemies in order to be executed, notwithstanding the resistance of some certain powers, who were ill-wishers to our happiness, and would have prevented him. The Cainites collected, and adopted all that was most impure and ignominious in the Heresy of the Gnosticks, and other Hereticks of those times. See Epiphanius, Heresy 38. Tertull. De Præscriptionibus, c. 47, &c.

The Eastern people assert, that the children of Seth, who were the Sons of God, and the Faithful before the Deluge, had many wars to maintain against the Sons of Cain, in Scripture called the Sons of Men. They add that Caiumaras first King of the East, in the account of the Persians, was very serviceable to the Sons of Seth, as well as his General, whose name was Dudasch [y].

In the first Ages of the Church there was an Heresy called Cainians or Cainites, which took its name from Cain, whom they looked upon as their Head and Father. These were one branch of the Gnosticks, who embraced very monstrous errors: they maintained, that Cain, Esau, Lot, the traitor Judas, the inhabitants of Sodom, and in a word all those, who are mentioned in the sacred Books with horror, and whose impious actions are related there, were born of some celestial and very mighty power; that Abel on the contrary, and other righteous men were produced by some weaker power. The examples of these wicked wretches, and the books whereof they are reputed to be the Authors, encouraged them in committing the most shameful actions [z], and most excessive debauches.

I. CAINAN, the Son of Enos, was born in the year of the world 325. His Father Enos was at that time ninety years of Age. Genes. v. 9. We know no other particularity of his Life, except that at the Age of seventy, he begat Mahalaleel. Cainan died at the Age of nine hundred and ten, in the year of the World 1235, before J. C. 2765, before the vulgar Æra 2769.

II. Cainan, the Son of Arphaxad, and Father of Salah, is neither in the Hebrew Text nor in the Vulgate, Genes. xi. 12, 13, 14. But he is named in S. Luke iii. 36. who places him betwen Salah and Arphaxad, which was the Son of Salah, which was the Son of Cainan, which was the Son of Arphaxad.

The Septuagint, Genes. x. 24. and xi. 12. admit him as well as S. Luke. Some have been of opinion, that the Jews suppressed the word Cainan, and expunged it out of their Copies with a design of rendring the Septuagint and S. Luke suspected, who had received it. Others have thought, that Moses purposely omitted Cainan, because he had a mind to reckon ten Generations only from Adam to Noah, and from Noah to Abraham. Others will have it, that Arphaxad was the Father of both Cainan and Salah, of Salah in a natural way, and of Cainan according to the Law. Lastly, others have asserted, that Cainan and Salah were the same person mentioned in the Septuagint and S. Luke by the two names belonging to him. This is what some say to support that opinion, which maintains Cainan to be really the Son of Arphaxad, and Father of Salah. We shall not stay here to confute these different

[w] Joseph. Antiq. l. i. c. 3.
[y] D'Herbolet. Bibl. Orient. p. 323.
[x] See Bayle's Dictionary, in the Article Cain.
[z] Vide Epiphan. hæres. 38.

rent opinions; but refer the Reader to our Comment upon Genesis x. 24. and those Authors who have written particularly on Cainan [a].

They who assert, that Cainan was surreptitiously inserted into the Septuagint, and from thence was taken by S. Luke, pretend, that the Authority of the Hebrew, Vulgate, Chaldee, and Syriac is much preferable to the Septuagint: that S. Luke having only copied these Interpreters, his Text in this place can be of no greater authority than the Septuagint: that the defalcations and changes which have been made in the years of the Patriarchs, are alone sufficient to destroy their Authority, wherever they contradict the Hebrew: and that upon comparing the Editions of the Septuagint, they are found not to agree with one another. Lastly, there are some, who affirm, that the name of Cainan is new and strange in the Text of the Septuagint; that these Interpreters did not put it there, and the most ancient of the Fathers did not read it there. And indeed neither Josephus, nor Philo knew any thing of Cainan's being the Son of Arphaxad; and the old Fathers generally reckon no more than ten Generations from Noah to Abraham. But there would be eleven, if Cainan were to be included in the number. If S. Luke therefore inserted his name in the Gospel, which he wrote, it was certainly at that time in some Copies of the Septuagint; and many learned men believe, that this name was not to be met with in the first Texts of S. Luke, but that it is an addition which has been made by the Transcribers.

CAIPHA, or Caïapha, or Hepha [b], a Town situated at the foot of Mount Carmel to the North, upon the Gulph of Ptolemaïs. Its ancient name was Sycaminos, or Porphyreon. The name of Sycaminos, or Sycaminon, was derived probably from the Sycomore-trees, which grew there; and that of Porphyreon from catching a particular kind of Fish there, which was made use of in dying purple. We may suppose that of Cepha or Caipha to have been given it, on the score of its rocks, which in Syriac are called Cepha: but the Hebrews write Hepha and not Chepha or Kepha. This City was separated from that of Acco or Ptolemaïs, by its harbour, which is very large and beautiful. From Acco to Cepha by Sea, and in a strait line, is not above fifteen miles or five leagues; but by Land the distance is double this length [c].

CAIPHAS, or Joseph Caiphas, High Priest of the Jews, succeeded Simon the Son of Camith in the High Priesthood, and after he had possessed this dignity for nine years, that is to say, from the year of the world 4029 to 4038. he was succeeded by Jonathan the Son of Ananus or Annas. Caïphas was High Priest in the year of the world 4037, which was that of Jesus Christ's Death. He was deposed by Vitellius Governor of Syria. Caïphas married one of the Daughters of Annas, who also is called High Priest in the Gospel, because he had for a long time enjoyed this dignity.

When the Priests deliberated, whether they should lay hold of Jesus Christ, and put him to death, Caïphas told them, that there was no room for debating on that matter, and that it was expedient for one man to die for all the people, that the whole nation might not perish. This was a prophecy, which God suffered to be pronounced by the mouth of the High Priest on this occasion, to shew, that the Death of our Saviour would be the Salvation of the World. John xi. 49. 50.

After that Judas had betrayed Jesus Christ, and our Saviour, the night before his Passion, had been apprehended and bound in the Garden of Olives, he was first carried by the Soldiers, who had seized him, to the house of Annas, Father-in-law to Caïphas. Annas proposed several questions to him concerning his Disciples, and his Doctrine. Jesus answered, that he had taught nothing in secret, and that all the people were witnesses of his Doctrine and Opinions. John xviii. 21, 22. Whereupon one of Caïphas's Servants struck him with the palm of his hand, saying, Answerest thou the High-Priest so? Annas however was not High Priest this year, but, as we have said, Caïphas. But as he had before been in this office, he still had the title given him.

Annas having thus heard what Jesus had to say, sent him back to his Son-in-law Caïphas, who perhaps lived in the same house. John xviii. 24. The Priests and Doctors of the law were there assembled to judge Jesus, and endeavoured to procure evidences against him, that they might be able to condemn him. The depositions of some false witnesses were heard; but their testimony not being sufficient to justify them in pronouncing sentence of Death against him, and Jesus continuing profoundly silent, Caïphas demanded of him, why he did not speak; but received no reply from him. Hereupon the High Priest said to him, I adjure thee by the living God that thou tell us, whether thou art the Christ, the Son of God. Jesus answered, [a] See Usher's Dissertation on Cainan; Cornel. a Lapide, in Genes. xi. Natal. Alex. Differt. in V. T. Grot. in Luc. iii. 36. Mill. ibidem. Spanhem. Dub. Evang. Bochart. Phaleg. l. ii. c. 13. and our Comment. upon Genes. x. 24. and Luke iii. 36.

[b] היפא Heipha.

[c] Vide Scherif ibn idris, seu Nubiens. apud Reland. t. ii. p. 819.

anſwered, Thou haſt ſaid: nevertheleſs I ſay unto you, hereafter ſhall ye ſee the Son of Man ſitting on the right hand of power, and coming in the clouds of Heaven. Upon hearing theſe words Caïphas rent his clothes, and ſaid, What further need have we of witneſſes? behold now you have heard his blaſphemy. What think ye? they anſwered, he is worthy of death. Then Jeſus was returned into the Soldiers hands, and the Aſſembly of the Prieſts ſeparated, till early the next morning; when Caïphas and the reſt of the Prieſts, the Doctors and the Senate, met again in the Sanhedrim, which was held in the Temple: thither Jeſus was brought, and they asked him, Whether he was the Chriſt? He anſwered; tho' I ſhould tell ye, yet would ye not believe me; and if I ſhould entreat you to ſet me at liberty, ye would not hearken unto me: but I ſay unto you, that ye ſhall one day ſee the Son of Man ſitting on the right hand of God. They ſaid, Art thou then the Son of God? He anſwered, I am. Whereupon they concluded inſtantly, that he deſerved death. And as the power of life and death was not lodged in their hands, but reſerved to the Romans, they conducted him to Pilate, who was Governor of the Province, that he might confirm their Sentence, and give orders for his execution.

Two years after, that is to ſay, in the 35th year of the vulgar Æra, and 38th from the Birth of J. C. Vitellius Governor of Syria coming to Jeruſalem at the time when the Feaſt of the Paſſover was celebrated, was received there very magnificently by the people; and as an acknowledgment for the honour done him, reſtored the cuſtody of the High Prieſt's ornaments to the Prieſts, remitted certain impoſitions, which were levied upon the fruits of the earth, and depoſed the High Prieſt Caïphas. Joſephus ſeems to place this depoſition among the other favours granted by Vitellius to the Jews. What the end of Caïphas was, and when he died, we cannot tell. His houſe is ſhewn ſtill at this day in Jeruſalem. But how can we depend on monuments of this kind after ſo many revolutions, as have happened to the City of Jeruſalem?

CAIUS CALIGULA, Emperor of Rome, and Succeſſor to Tiberius. He took upon him the Government of the Empire in the year of J. C. 37, and reigned three years, nine months and twenty eight days. We do not find in the Hiſtory of the Church, that he did any thing againſt the Chriſtians. He undertook indeed to procure himſelf to be adored, and this deſign he eaſily accompliſhed among the Heathens. But having commanded Petronius Governor of Syria to place his Statue in the Temple of Jeruſalem, the Jews ſo vigorouſly oppoſed him in the execution of theſe orders, that he, fearing a Sedition might enſue, and a general Rebellion, wrote to Caïus[a], informing him, not that the Jews could no way be perſuaded to receive his Statue, and pay divine honours to it; for by this means he would have expoſed himſelf to certain death, and drawn the utmoſt calamities upon the Jews; but that hitherto he had had no opportunity to obey his orders, becauſe the Artificers, who were imployed about the Statue, required more time to finiſh it with all poſſible perfection, and to make it, if they could, a maſter-piece of Art. He added, that as yet he had not ventured to preſs the Jews in this particular, by reaſon of the ſeaſon; becauſe if the lands ſhould not be ſown, the whole country would be barren and produce nothing, and ſo the ordinary taxes could not be raiſed from them; and that want and famine would create an infinite number of thieves.

Caius received Petronius's Letters, and pretended not to diſapprove the reaſons of his delay. In a Letter which he directed to be written to him, he commended his prudence; but charged him to conſecrate his Statue without farther loſs of time. Nevertheleſs they, who were acquainted with him, and had obſerved his air, while he was reading theſe Letters, made no queſtion but that the ruin of Petronius was reſolved on.

In the mean while Agrippa returning from Judæa to Rome, without knowing any thing of what had happened, or of Petronius's Letters, came as uſual to make his court to Caius. He found this Prince in great diſorder, and not being able to divine the cauſe of his indignation, he was very much confounded, while he looked on Caius, and ſaw his Eyes fixed upon him. Hereupon the Emperor ſeeing him in this perplexity, ſaid to him, Your Jews, a people indeed much to be admired, who alone of all mankind will not allow Caius to be a God, ſeem to run voluntarily upon their own deſtruction, by refuſing, as they do, to obey me. I commanded the Statue of Jupiter to be placed in their Temple, and they under pretence of begging pardon, and forbearance, have every where rebel'd againſt me.

Agrippa, when he heard thoſe words fainted away, and was carried home, where he continued till the evening of the next day without motion, or the knowledge of any any thing. At that time he began to open his eyes a little, and look upon thoſe who were about him; then relapſed into the ſame drowzy ſtate. Upon the third day, his underſtanding was entirely recovered, and he wrote a long letter to the Emperor, entreating him to forgive the Jews, and that he would not compel them to receive his Statue into their Temple. Caius was moved with Agrippa's reaſons, who invited him to an entertainment at his houſe in Rome, where he treated him with all the magnificence he could deviſe. Caius was very well ſatisfied with his generoſity, and in the warmth of his wine told him, that he was determined to make him happy, and heap abundance of favours on him. He afterwards preſs'd him to tell him, wherein he could moſt oblige him. Agrippa anſwered, that the only favour which he asked of him, was, that he would think no more of ſetting up his Statue in the Temple of Jeruſalem. The Emperor immediately granted it, and in the Letter ſent by his order to Petronius, commanded him to let his Statue remain in the Temple, if it were already placed there; if it were not, to purſue this matter no farther, adding withal, that he had changed his mind in conſideration of Agrippa.

[a] Vide Joſeph. Antiq. l. xviii. c. 11. de Bello, l. ii. c. 17.

But as if he had repented of the favour which he had ſo lately ſhewn the Jews, inſtead of the Statue, which had been begun at Sidon, he appointed another to be made at Rome, of copper gilt, extremely large, with a deſign to have it carried privately to Egypt, when he went thither, as he propoſed to do, in the beginning of the year following; and ſo have it placed without noiſe in the Temple of Jeruſalem, before the Jews had any notice of it. He proceeded ſo far as to ſend a Letter to Petronius, wherein he told him, that ſince he had ſhewn leſs regard to his commands, than to the preſents, which he had received from the Jews, he required him to be himſelf his own judge, and to treat himſelf in ſuch a manner, as that man deſerved, who had diſobeyed his Prince. This was in effect commanding him to kill himſelf. But it pleaſed God that this Letter was not delivered to Petronius, till after the death of Caius.

The Jews of Alexandria at the ſame time ſuffered ſtrange perſecutions from the Heathens of that City, who being ſupported by Flaccus their Governor, loſt no opportunity of uſing them ill. Philo the Jew was ſent with ſome other Deputies to the Emperor [*], to demand juſtice againſt the inhabitants of Alexandria. They preſented a Memorial to him, which contained a ſhort account of their ſufferings. Caius at firſt received them very civilly, and directed his Officers to acquaint them, that he would himſelf hear them, as ſoon as he had leiſure. All the world believed, upon this favourable reception, that they would gain their cauſe. But Philo, whom age and experience had made more diffident than the reſt, was apprehenſive, that this Prince had already been engaged by the Alexandrians, and that theſe fair appearances would at laſt terminate in the loſs of their cauſe.

At length Philo had his audience near the City in the pleaſure-houſes which were called Mecænas's. Caius ordered all the chambers of theſe palaces to be opened, that he might ſee them one after another, and while he was thus imployed he ſent for the Jews. Upon his firſt accoſting them, he ſaid with a reproachful ſmile, Are you then thoſe enemies of the Gods, who refuſe to acknowledge me as a Deity, tho' all other people own me as ſuch; and who chooſe rather to adore another, whom you cannot ſo much as name? At the ſame time lifting up his hands to Heaven, he ſpoke ſo blaſphemouſly, that Philo, who relates this whole ſtory, did not dare to mention what he ſaid. Hereupon one Iſidorus addreſſing himſelf to the Emperor told him, that he would ſtill have a greater deteſtation for this people, if he knew the averſion which they had to him; for they, ſaid he, are the only people, who have not ſacrificed for your health, which all beſides have done. At theſe words, the Jews all cried out together, that this was meer ſlander, that they had three times offered the moſt ſolemn Sacrifices, which their Religion preſcribed to them for his proſperity. Grant it, ſaid Caius, but you have ſacrificed to another; and what honour have I received, ſince you did not ſacrifice to me?

In the mean time Caius run over his apartments, and gave directions for the particular alterations, which he intended to have made in them. After which he returned to the Jews, and very gravely asked them, why they did not eat ſwine's fleſh? The Jews repreſented to him, that every Nation had its peculiar Laws and Cuſtoms, and that there were ſome things, which their adverſaries did not eat of. Whereupon one obſerving that there were many, who would not eat lamb's fleſh; they are in the right, ſaid Caius ſmiling, for there is no taſte in it. After this, he asked them, upon what grounds they pretended to be free of Alexandria? They began to lay before him their right to this privilege; and without waiting till they had done, he broke off the diſcourſe, and ran away into a large Hall, round which he he walked. As he came out of it, he asked the Jews with an air of more Moderation, if they had any thing further to say to him? and as they began to speak to him, he left them again, and went into another Hall, where several Pictures had been placed by his Orders. Some time after he dismissed them, saying, these People do not seem to me to be so wicked, as they are foolish and unfortunate, in not believing me to be a God. How he determined the matter of Complaint, we do not know; but we learn from Philo and Josephus, that in his Reign, the Jews of Alexandria were continually oppressed some way or other, and exposed to the Violence of their Enemies.

[*] See Philo, de Legatione ad Caium.

We do not relate here the particulars of Caius's Life; it is sufficient for us to take notice of his Actions, so far as they had any respect to the Jewish Nation; which is all that we are concerned about in this Work. This Prince was killed in a tragical manner by Chæreas, one of his Guards, as he was coming out of the Theatre, in the year of Jesus Christ 41, and the fourth of his Reign. He was succeeded by the Emperor Claudius.

Caius enriched King Agrippa, and gave him the Kingdom of Judæa: When this Prince returned to Judæa, his Uncle Herod Antipas, who was Tetrarch of Galilee, envying his good Fortune, and sollicited by his Wife Herodias, believed that if he went to Rome, he too should obtain from Caius the Title of King. He therefore undertook this Journey. But Agrippa, who apprehended his succeeding, sent after he was gone, and accused him to the Emperor of carrying on a Correspondence with the King of Parthia against the Romans, and of having in his Arsenals wherewithal to arm seventy thousand Men [e]. When Herod came to Italy, he went directly to Baiæ, where Caius then was: And while he was there, Fortunatus, once a Slave belonging to Agrippa, but made free by him, arrived there likewise, and presented Letters from his Master to the Emperor. Caius immediately read them; and when he had done, asked Herod if it were true, that he had so large a quantity of Arms in his keeping. Herod could not deny it: Whereupon the Emperor, without giving him any opportunity to justify himself, instead of conferring the Title of King upon him, deprived him of his Tetrarchy, and all his Wealth, and banished him for his whole Life to Lions. Upon Information, that Herodias was Agrippa's Sister, he was inclined, for her Brother's sake, to pardon her: But she chose rather to follow her Husband into his Exile, since she had engaged him in this Misfortune. Thus God revenged the Death of John the Baptist, who had been executed at the Sollicitation of Herodias, and by the Command of Herod.

CAKES. The Hebrews had several sorts of Cakes which they offered in the Temple; they were made of the Meal either of Wheat or Barley; they were kneaded sometimes with Oil, and sometimes with Honey; sometimes they only rub'd them over with Oil when they were baked, or fryed them with Oil in a Frying-pan upon the Fire. In the Ceremony of Aaron's Consecration, they sacrificed a calf and two rams, and offered unleavened Exod. bread, and cakes unleavened tempered with xxix. 1, 2. oil, and wafers unleavened anointed with oil, the whole made of fine wheaten flour.

The Hebrew Text calls all Offerings Lev. ii. 14. Mincha [f], which were made of Grain of any kind, or of Flour, Paste, Bread, or Cakes, of any nature whatsoever: These Offerings were made either alone, or together with other things. Sometimes fine Flour was offered [g], simila erit ejus oblatio, Lev. ii. 1. sometimes Cakes, or other things that were baked: Sacificium coctum in clibano: At Ibid. v. 4. other times Cakes baked in a Frying-pan: Oblatio de sartagine; or in a Fry- Ibid. v. 5. ing-pan with holes, or upon a Grid-iron. Oblatio de craticulâ. Lastly, Ears of Ibid. v. 7. Corn were sometimes offered in order to roast them, and so get the Corn out, that it might be afterwards reduced to Meal or Oatmeal. Ibid. v. 14.

All these several Offerings of Paste, Corn, Bread, Cakes or Meal, were instituted principally in favour of the Poor, who were not in a Condition to offer Sacrifices of greater value. This however is to be understood of voluntary Offerings, and such as were not appointed by the Law; for as to Sacrifices which they were oliged tŏ make, the Law exchanged one Animal for another; for instead of two Lambs and an Ewe, it permits the Poor to offer only one Lamb, and two young Pigeons.

As to the manner of offering these Cakes, it was to be observed in the first place, that they were salted and unleavened; for nothing which was not salted, or which had Leaven in it, was to be offered: But leavened and common Loaves might be given to the Priests for their Sustenance. If therefore the Cakes which were offered, were baked in an Oven, and sprinkled or kneaded with Oil, the whole Lev. ii. 4. 5. was presented to the Priest, who waved the offering before the Lord, then took so much of it as was to be burnt upon the Altar, threw it into the Fire, and kept the rest for himself. If the Offering was a Cake [e] See Joseph. Antiq. l. xviii. c. 8, 9.

[f] מנחה Mincha.

[g] סלת simila.

a Cake kneaded with Oil, and dreſſed in a Frying-pan, it was reduced into pieces, and Oil poured upon it, then preſented to the Prieſt, who took his hand full of it, threw it upon the Altar Fire, and the reſt was his.

If theſe Cakes or Loaves were offered together with Sacrifices of Beaſts, as was the common Practice, for with the great Sacrifices there were always Offerings of Cakes and Libations of Wine and Oil, the Loaves or Cakes were kneaded with Oil, and offered to the Lord. And the manner was not to pour the Wine and the Oil on the Animal's Head, which was going to be ſacrificed, as was the cuſtom of the Greeks and Romans, but they were ſpilt upon the Fire wherein the Victim was conſumed. The Law regulated the quantity of Meal, Wine and Oil, which was to be uſed with every Victim; for they had different quantities for the Sacrifices of Bullocks, Sheep, Goats, Ewes and Numb. xxviii. 1, 2, 3, &c. Lambs. To the Sacrifices of Bullocks were added three Aſſarons of Flour, kneaded with half an Hin of Oil, and as much Wine: To thoſe of Rams two Aſſarons, or two tenths of an Ephah of Flour, with the third of an Hin of Oil, and as much Wine; to thoſe of Goats and Ewes, of Lambs and Kids, one tenth-deal of Flour kneaded with one fourth part of an Hin of Oil, and another of Wine. The Capacity of the Hin and Aſſaron may be ſeen in our Tables, where we reduce the hollow Meaſures of the Hebrews to our own.

Gen. x. 12. CALAH, a City of Aſſyria, built by Aſher. See Cale.

CALAMUS AROMATICUS, or Odoratus. A ſort of Reed or ſweet-ſcented Root. It is ſpoken of in ſome places of Exod. xxx. 23. Iſai. xliii. 24. Jerem. vi. 20. Ezek. xxvii. 19. Scripture, where there is mention made of the particular Drugs whereof the ſacred Perfumes were compounded. It is a knotty Root, rediſh without, and white within, which puts forth long and narrow Leaves. The true ſweet Calamus comes from the Indies. The Prophets ſpeak of it as a foreign Commodity, of great Value. [h] Theophraſtus and Pliny mention the ſweet Calamus, which grows in Syria, beyond Libanus, between this and another ſmall Mountain, in a Lake, the Marſhes whereof are dried up in the Summer; this Lake took up the ſpace of above thirty Furlongs, and was an hundred and fifty Furlongs from the Sea: All which Circumſtances perſuade us, that they meant the Lake Semechon: Theſe ſweet ſcented Reeds have no ſmell while they are green; but when they are dry only. Their form is not at all different from other Reeds, and their ſmell is perceived as ſoon as any one enters the Marſhes.

CALAMUS, a ſort of Meaſure; in Hebrew Canna [i]. Ezekiel and S. John in Ezek. xl. 3.
the Revelations ſpeak of this meaſuring Rev. xi. 1.
Reed. * Ezekiel ſays, it was ſix Cubits long, and an Hand-breadth; or rather ſix Cubits and ſix Hand-breadths; that is to ſay, ſix Hebrew Cubits, every one whereof is larger by an Hand-breadth, than a Babyloniſh Cubit. The Prophet is obliged thus to determine the Cubit he is ſpeaking of; becauſe he was at that time beyond the Euphrates; and the Meaſures of that Country were not ſo large as thoſe of Paleſtine. The Hebrew Cubit contained four and twenty Inches, or ſix Hand-breadths; or about twenty Inches and an half, reckoning twelve Lines to the Inch.

CALAMUS SCRIPTORIUS, a Reed or Ruſh to write with. The Antients made uſe of Styles to write on Tables covered with Wax, or of Reed or Ruſh to write on Parchment or Egyptian Paper; for our common Paper is of a new Invention. The Pſalmiſt ſays, his Tongue is the Pen of a ready Writer. [k] Lingua mea Pſ. xlv. 2.
calamus ſcribæ. But the Hebrew Text ſignifies rather a Style, than a Reed to write with. The Author of the third Book of Maccabees ſays, that the Writers employed in making a liſt of the Jews who were in Egypt, produced their Reeds quite worn out, declaring, that they were not able to prepare ſuch a Roll as was required of them. Baruch wrote his Propheſies with Ink, and conſequently with Jer. xxxvi. 8.
the Reeds we have been ſpeaking of; for it does not appear, that the uſe of Quills was known at that time. S. John in his third Epiſtle, ſays, it was not his deſign 3 John 13.
to write with Pen and Ink, Nolui per atramentum & calamum ſcribere tibi. This cuſtom was common among the Gentile Nations [l].

Inque manus chartæ, nodoſaque venit arundo.

The Arabians, Perſians, Turks, Greeks, and Armenians ſtill to this day make uſe of Reeds or Ruſhes as is teſtified by Travellers.

CALCOL, or Chalcol, the fourth Son of Mahol the Son of Zerah, a Levite and eminent Muſician, 1 Chr. ii. 6. 1 Kings iv. 3

CALE, or Chale, or Calah, or Chalach, a City of Aſſyria, built by Aſher or Nimrod; for ſome ſuppoſe the Text of Gen. x.
Scripture, wherein the Foundation of this 11, 12.
City is mentioned, to be ambiguous. But whoever founded it, it is certain that it was at a great diſtance from Nineveh; and that the City of Reſen lay between

Cale

[h] Theophraſt. Hiſt. Plant. l. ix. c. 7. Plin. l. xii. c. 22. and l. xiii. c. 11.
[i] קנה
[k] לשניעט ספר
[l] Perſius Satyr. 3.
* See Dr. Arbuthnot on this Subject, where he treats of the Jewiſh Meaſures of Length, p. 66. of his Tables of antient Coins, Weights and Meaſures.

Cale and Nineveh. Chale is perhaps the Capital of the Chalacene Province, near the Springs of the River Lycus; or Chala may be the Capital of the Chalenitis, which is ſeparated by mount Zagrus from Media [m].

CALEB, the Son of Jephunneh, of the Tribe of Judah, was ſent with Joſhua, and ten other Deputies, choſen out of the twelve Tribes of Iſrael, to go and view the Land of Canaan, which God had promiſed them. (Numb. xiii. 2. & ſeq.) The Deputies performed exactly their Commiſſion; they went through the whole Country, and brought ſome of the fineſt Fruits which it produced, to ſhew the Multitude of their Brethren; but ſome of them, after the Report which they had made of the beauty and goodneſs of the Country, added, It is indeed a Country flowing with Milk and Honey, but the Inhabitants of it are of an extraordinary Strength, and the Cities belonging to it are large, and incloſed within good Walls. In the mean time, as the People began to murmur, Caleb the Son of Jephunneh ſaid to them; The Country is excellent, let us go boldly and take poſſeſſion of it. (In the year of the World 2514. before the vulgar Æra 1490. Caleb was then 40 years of age.) But the other Deputies who had been with him, on the contrary told the People, that they could never make themſelves Maſters of it; becauſe the Inhabitants, who poſſeſſed it, were ſtronger than they were. We have ſeen Giants there, ſaid they, in compariſon of whom, we appear but as ſo many Graſshoppers.

Hereupon the People openly declared againſt this Expedition, and ſaid, Had we not better return into Egypt, than periſh, we and our Children, in this Country? let us chooſe a Captain, and under his Conduct return into Egypt. At theſe words Moſes and Aaron fell on their Faces before the whole multitude then aſſembled; and Joſhua and Caleb rent their Clothes, and began to encourage the Iſraelites, telling them, that the Country which they had ſeen was excellent; and that if God were with them, they might eaſily make a Conqueſt of it. Only rebel not againſt the Lord, ſaid they; our Enemies are without any ſuccour, and we ſhall devour them like Bread. But the People being enraged, made a great outcry, and took up Stones to ſtone them. Then the Glory of the Lord appeared upon the Tabernacle, and threatned to exterminate the whole Multitude. But Moſes prayed for them ſo earneſtly, that God was pleaſed not to deſtroy them immediately; but proteſted with an Oath, that none of thoſe who had murmured againſt him, ſhould ſee the Land of Canaan, and that they ſhould all die in the Wilderneſs. But for my Servant Caleb, added he, who hath faithfully followed me, him will I bring into the Land, and he ſhall poſſeſs it, he and his Children after him.

When Joſhua therefore had entred into the Land of Canaan, and had conquered a great part of it, Caleb, with thoſe of his Tribe, came as far as Gilgal to ſee him; and Caleb ſaid to him, Thou knoweſt (Joſh. xiv. 6, 7.) what the Lord ſaid to Moſes in my Favour, and the promiſes which he made me. (In the year of the World 2559. before the vulgar Æra 1445. Caleb was then 85 years of age.) I was forty years old, when Moſes the Servant of the Lord ſent me from Kadeſh-Barnea, to view the Country into which we are now entered. I made my Report with great Truth, and ſuppreſſed as far as I was able the Murmurs of the People. Then the Lord ſaid to me, Thou ſhalt poſſeſs the Land which thou haſt viſited, thou and thy Poſterity after thee, becauſe thou haſt followed the Lord. God hath preſerved my Life unto this Day; five and forty Years are now paſt, ſince the Lord made me theſe promiſes; I am now above fourſcore, my health and ſtrength are not impaired: Give me, I pray thee, this Mountain, where the Anakims dwell, that I may take Poſſeſſion of it. Joſhua beſtowed a great many Bleſſings on him, and granted him his Requeſt. (Joſh. xv. 13, 14.)

Caleb therefore marched with thoſe of his Tribe, againſt the City of Kirjath-arba, afterwards called Hebron; and having taken it, he killed three Giants of the Race of Anak, viz. Sheſhai, Ahiman and Talmai. From thence he went to Debir, otherwiſe Kirjath-ſepher. As this place was extremely ſtrong, Caleb promiſed, that whoever took it, ſhould marry his Daughter Achſah. Othniel the Son of Kenaz took it, and accordingly had Caleb's Daughter. This brave Iſraelite is thought to have ſurvived Joſhua. But the time of his death we are not acquainted with.

II. Caleb, The name of a Canton in the Tribe of Judah, wherein the Cities of Kirjath-ſepher and Hebron were ſituated, (1 Sam. xxx. 14.) belonging to the Family of Caleb the Son of Jephunneh, of whom we have been ſpeaking.

III. Caleb, or Chelubi, the Son of Heſron, married firſt Azuba, and afterwards E[illegible]th. There is ſome difficulty rela[illegible] to this matter in the Hebrew Text, which it may be well to conſider in the Text itſelf, 1 Chr. ii. 9. 18, and 24. and in the Commentators.

CALENDS. See Kalends.

GOLDEN CALF, which the Iſraelites worſhipped at the foot of mount Sinai. (Exod. xxxii. 4. 19, 20, &c.) "When the People ſaw that Moſes de"layed to come down from the Mount,
"they gathered themſelves unto Aaron,
"and

[m] Strabo l. xi. & l. xxi. • Iſidor. Characen.

In the year of the world 2513, before J. C. 1487, before the vulgar Æra 1491, in the fourth month of the ſacred year.

" and ſaid unto him, Up, make us Gods " which ſhall go before us: For as for " this Moſes, the Man that brought us up " out of the Land of Egypt, we wot not " what is become of him. And Aaron " ſaid unto them, Break off the golden " ear-rings which are in the ears of your " Wives, of your Sons, and of your Daugh- " ters, and bring them unto me. They " brought them to him, and Aaron " with the aſſiſtance of the Founder's art " formed them into a molten Image. " Then the people ſaid, Theſe are thy " Gods, O Iſrael, which brought thee up " out of the land of Egypt. Aaron ha- " ving obſerved this, built an Altar be- " fore the Calf, and made publick pro- " clamation by an herald, To-morrow is " a Feaſt unto the Lord. And the peo- " ple roſe up early on the morrow, and " offered Burnt offerings, and brought " Peace offerings, and they ſat down to " eat and to drink and roſe up to play.

" The Lord having informed Moſes of " what the people had done, commanded " him to go down from the Mountain, " and Moſes as he came near the Camp, " ſeeing the people dancing about the " Calf, threw the tables of the Law, at " that time in his hands, upon the ground " and broke them at the foot of the Moun- " tain; then taking the Golden Calf, he " threw it into the fire, reduced it to " powder, ſcattered the aſhes of it in the " water which the people drank, reproach- " ed Aaron ſharply with his weakneſs " in conſenting thus to the people's re- " queſt; ſtood at the gate of the Camp, " and ſaid, Who is on the Lord's ſide? " let him come unto me. And all the " Sons of Levi gathered themſelves to- " gether unto him, took every man his " ſword, and paſſing backwards and for- " wards through the Camp, they killed " all whom they met without diſtinction, " and there fell of the people this day " about three and twenty thouſand men. But the Hebrew, Samaritan, Chaldee, Septuagint, and greateſt part of the old Greek and Latin Fathers, inſtead of three and twenty, read three thouſand.

The Hebrews without doubt [o] intended upon this occaſion to imitate the worſhip of the God Apis, which they had ſeen in Egypt [p]. This falſe Deity was adored un- der the figure of a real and living Bull, and under the form of one made artifici- ally; and laſtly under the figure of a Man with a Bull's head: and it is certain, that ſeveral of the ancient Fathers [q], ſpeak- ing of the Golden Calf, expreſſed them- ſelves as if there had been no more than the Head of a Calf or Bull. Aureum ca- put bovis, ſays Lactantius, and, bibulum caput, ſays Tertullian; and, conflatum eſt bibulum caput. But however this may be, it muſt be agreed, that they deſigned to make a ſuperſtitious figure, with an intenti- on to pay an idolatrous worſhip to it, as they ſufficiently demonſtrate in theſe words, Be- hold, Iſrael, theſe are the Gods, which brought thee up out of the land of Egypt.

Monceau in his book intitled Aaron pur- gatus, has endeavoured to ſhew, that the Golden Calf made by Aaron, was a figure in all reſpects like the Cherubims, upon which, as he pretends, the Lord ſat, when he appeared to Moſes on Mount Sinai. Theſe Cherubims, in his account of them, were winged Oxen, after the model where- of Moſes afterwards made the Cherubims of the Mercy-ſeat. This is the particu- lar fancy of this Author. He adds, that Aaron's ſin did not conſiſt ſo much in mak- ing the Golden Calf, whereby he repre- ſented the Cherubims, on which the Lord was ſeated; but in giving the people an opportunity of paying a ſuperſtitious and idolatrous Worſhip: that the people with- out ſin might have adored the Lord at the ſight of this Cherub, or Golden Calf; and that his crime lay only in transfer- ring the Worſhip which was due to God alone, to a creature, and ſenſible figure. He moreover is of opinion, that the Golden Calves made by Jeroboam, after the ſepa- ration of the ten Tribes, were real Cheru- bims, and that neither Jeroboam nor the ten Tribes forſook the Worſhip of the Lord by receiving that of the Golden Calf; but only made a Schiſm, by ſeparating from their Brethren, who at Jeruſalem worſhip- ped the ſame God ſeated on the Cherubims, whom the other Tribes adored as ſeated on the Golden Calves at Dan and Bethel. This is a very ſingular opinion, and has been juſtly cenſured and oppoſed by ſe- veral Authors.

Aaron when he declared the Feaſt of the Golden Calf, ſaid to the people, To-mor- row will be a feaſt unto the Lord. They who endeavour to excuſe this High Prieſt obſerve, that he made uſe of the word Je- hovah, to try, ſay ſome Interpreters [r], whe- ther he could induce the people to worſhip God in the preſence of this Calf, as if this figure had been conſecrated to the true God; but the people did not ſtop there, they paid their adorations to a Calf that eateth hay: They made a Calf in Horeb, and worſhipped the molten Image: thus they turned their glory into the ſimilitude of a Calf that eateth hay. It is ſure very vain to attempt the making any apology for

Pſ. cvi. 19, 20.

[o] Philo was of opinion, that the Hebrews intended to adore Typhon, an Egyptian Deity, which this Author generally confounds with Oſiris. See de Vita Moſ. l. iii.

[p] Ambroſ. Ep. 66. nov. Edit. ad Romul. Hieron. in Oſee iv. Aug. l. xxii. c. 39. contra Fauſt. Alii plures.

[q] Lactant. l. iv. c. 10. Tertull. adverſ. Jud. c. 1. Hieron. in Oſee iv. Aug. in Pſal. xli. Ambroſ. Ep. 66. Optat. Mile vit. l. iii.

[r] Vatab. Eſtius, Lyran. Bochart. Le Clerc.

for Aaron upon this occasion: He does not excuse himself, and we read in Deuteronomy, that God was provoked at his sin, and would have slain him, if Moses had not made use of his prayers to disarm the anger of the Lord. Deut. ix. 20.

Some Rabbins [s] inform us, that Moses having reduced the Golden Calf to powder, and thrown the dust of it into the brook of Horeb, all, who drank of this water, and were guilty of worshipping this Idol, experienced the same effects, that the waters of jealousy produced upon such women, as were guilty of adultery. They were smitten with ulcers, whereby they were distinguish'd by Moses, and gave him an opportunity of chastising them with the utmost severity. Others [t] maintain, that by drinking of this water, the most zealous worshippers of the Golden Calf saw with amazement their beards turn of a gold-colour, and this mark, they say, was transmitted to their Children [v].

> Nam rutilans auro monstrabat barba nocentes,
> Dum patulo latices fluminis ore bibunt.

The Golden Calves of Jeroboam the Son of Nebat. This Prince having been acknowledged King by the ten Tribes of Israel, and intending to separate these Tribes for ever from the house of David, thought fit to provide new Gods for them, whom they might worship in their own Country, without being obliged to go to the Temple of Jerusalem, there to pay their adoration. "He said in his heart, Now shall "the Kingdom return to the house of "David: If this people go up to do sacrifice in the house of the Lord at Jerusalem, then shall the heart of this "people turn again unto their Lord, even "unto Rehoboam King of Judah, and "they shall kill me, and go again to "Rehoboam King of Judah. Whereupon he made two Calves of Gold, and "said unto the people, Behold thy Gods, "O Israel, which brought thee up out "of the land of Egypt. And he set the "one in Bethel, and the other put he in "Dan, at the two extremities of his Kingdom. And this thing became a sin; "for the people went to worship before "these Calves even unto Dan and Bethel. 1 Kings xii. 26, 27, 28, &c. In the year of the world 3030, before J. C. 970, before the vulgar Æra 974.

We have already observed that Monceau [w] thought the Golden Calves of Jeroboam were an imitation of the Cherubims, which Moses had placed upon the Ark of the Covenant, and were looked upon as the Lord's Throne: So that Jeroboam and the Israelites of the ten Tribes were to be considered rather as Schismaticks than Idolaters. And it must be confessed that all Israel did not renounce intirely the Worship and Religion of the Lord, by adopting the Worship of the Golden Calves, and by ceasing to go up to the Temple at Jerusalem. God did not altogether abandon Israel; he sent Prophets to them, and preserved to himself a great number of faithful Worshippers, who were in a capacity to be saved. But when Jezebel, in Ahab's reign, introduced the Worship of Baal and Astaroth, and other Gods of the Canaanites, then Elijah complained bitterly to God, that all the world had forsaken his Worship, and that he only remained. I have been very jealous for the Lord God of hosts; for the Children of Israel have forsaken thy Covenant, thrown down thine Altars, and slain thy Prophets with the sword; and I, even I only am left. 1 Kings xix. 10. The God of Israel therefore had before his Prophets and Altars in Ahab's Kingdom; and when the same Elijah had assembled the people on Mount Carmel, he bad them choose either the Lord or Baal. How long halt ye between two opinions? If the Lord be God, follow him; but if Baal, then follow him. 1 Kings xviii. 21. This is what is said to justify the Worship of the Israelites belonging to the ten Tribes.

But S. Jerom [x], and the generality of Commentators thought it was Jeroboam's design with his Golden Calves to imitate the worship of the Ox Apis, which he had seen practised in Egypt during the time of his abode there, towards the end of Solomon's reign. This Prince's crime is not any thing of an ambiguous nature; the Scripture reproaches him in an hundred places, with having made Israel to sin, Jeroboam the Son of Nebat, who made Israel to sin. 1 Kings xi. 40. When at any time the Scripture would describe a bad Prince, it says, that he imitated the sin of Jeroboam. It says, that Jeroboam drew Israel from following the Lord, and made them sin a great sin. 2 Kings xvii. 21. The Prophet Abijah tells this Prince's Wife, Thou hast gone and made thee other Gods, and molten Images, to provoke me to anger, and hast cast me behind thy back. 1 Kings xiv. 9. How often did the Prophets bitterly exclaim against the false Worship of the Golden Calves? Hosea by God's direction threatens them saying, The inhabitants of Samaria shall fear, because of the Calves of Bethaven .... the high places of Aven, the sin of Israel, shall be destroyed. Hosea x. 5. Vide & xiii. 3.

I confess there were Saints and Prophets in Israel, who were faithful to the Lord, and might attain to Salvation, but they did not worship the Golden Calves, nor were any ways concerned in the Schism, nor in the new Worship introduced by Jeroboam; either they went privately to the Temple of Jerusalem, as Tobit, or they worshipped God in their houses, and under Tob. i. 5.

[s] Vide Rabb. apud Moncæum in Aarone purgato, lib. ii. c. 8. [t] Rabb. Rupert. Petr. Comestor. Naucler. Lyr. [v] Petrus de Riga in Aarone. [w] Moncæus in Aarone purgato. l. i. c. 8. Vide & Grot. in 3 Reg. xii. [x] Hieron. in Osee iv. 25. & in cap. v.

2 Kings iv. 23. der the direction of some Prophets, as the woman of Shunam.

The Septuagint and the Greek Fathers generally read Golden Cows instead of Golden Calves; and some speak as if there had been the head only of a Cow or Calf. Some think that Menahem King of Israel was obliged to send one of his Golden Calves to Pul, thereby ingaging him to Hosea x. 5, 6. come to his assistance. The [y] Rabbins re-
Vide Osee v. 6. late, that Hosea King of Israel having been under a necessity of sending one of 2 Kings xv. 19, 20. the Golden Calves to Salmaneser King of Assyria, in order to make up the sums, which he demanded, the Priests belonging to this idol, instead of the Golden Calf, sent him another of brass well covered over and concealed. The people who knew nothing of their cheat, mourned, and very much lamented the loss of their Golden Calf; but the Priests privately rejoiced, believing their fraud to be well secured from discovery. To this is applied the Hosea x. 5. passage of Hosea, where he says, The people mourned over it, and the Priests thereof rejoiced on it. But Salmaneser having examined the present, which was sent him, and finding a brazen Calf only instead of a golden one, marched against Samaria, and carried away the Golden Calves with all the people, who adored them.

S. Jerom [z] informs us of another Tradition among the Jews, concerning the Golden Calves, in his explanation of these words of Hosea, Divisum est cor eorum. Nunc interibunt. While the people of Israel, and their Kings were agreed upon the Worship of the Golden Calf, God suspended his vengeance: The people had an excuse; they obeyed their King. But Hosea the last King of Israel, being less addicted to the Superstitions of the country than his Predecessors, and declaring that he did not design to force any one, but left them at liberty to go and worship at Jerusalem, the people shewed great opposition, and said they would not use this liberty. This produced a division among them: Divisum est cor eorum. Wherefore the Lord resolved to destroy them: Nunc interibunt.

In the Article of Jeroboam, we shall mention what happened at the ceremony of this Prince's dedicating the Altar of 1 Kings xii. 23. the Golden Calf at Bethel; as the Man of xiii. 1, 2, 3, &c. God, who was sent from Judah, pronounced this Prophecy against the Altar, "O Altar, Altar, thus saith the Lord, "A Child shall be born unto the house "of David, Josiah by name, and upon "thee shall he offer the Priests of the high "places, that burn incense upon thee, "and mens bones shall be burnt upon thee, "Behold the Altar shall be rent, and "the ashes that are upon it shall be poured out. The King hereupon stretching out his hand, it immediately dried up; but was restored at the Prophet's prayer. See 1 Kings xiii. 1, 2, 3, &c. Josephus [a] speaks of the Temple of the Golden Calf, which was still in being in his time, somewhere towards Dan, and not near Daphne on the lesser Jordan, as the printed Copies of this Author have it.

As the Glory of Israel was their God, their Law, and their Ark; so the Adorers of the Golden Calves consider'd these Idols as theirs. The Priests thereof rejoiced on Hosea x.
it for the Glory thereof, because it is de- 5.
parted from them. They valued themselves for worshipping them, which indeed should have overwhelmed them with confusion. Wherefore the Prophets used to say to them in the way of raillery [b], Ye who Hosea worship Calves, come and sacrifice Men. xiii. 2.
Can there be any greater madness? Ye adore Calves and sacrifice Men to Moloch and Saturn. The Septuagint, They say, we want Calves, sacrifice Men. We have no more Calves to sacrifice, let them bring us Men. The Hebrew may be interpreted in another sense, Let them who would sacrifice, come and kiss or adore the Calves. This is what Jeroboam said to the Israelites of the ten Tribes.

Hosea foretold the destruction and captivity of the Calves of Samaria in the following terms; Thy Calf, O Samaria, hath Hosea cast thee off, mine anger is kindled against viii. 5, 6.
them .... It was Israel who invented this Idol .... The Calf of Samaria shall become as contemptible as spiders webs. The Assyrians having got possession of Samaria, carried off the Golden Calves which the people worshipped; these vain Deities were of no more service to them than spiders webs; they could not secure them from the hands of their enemies. The Hebrew Text, which is translated Spiders Webs [c], is very intricate. The Septuagint translate it, the Calf of Samaria is deceitful, or mistaken; Symmachus, is inconstant; the fifth Edition, is gone astray, all which is much to the same purpose. The Rabbins; it is as it were dust, saw-dust. The generality of modern Interpreters; it is broken to pieces. S. Jerom was inform'd by his Hebrew master, that it signified Spiders Webs, which float in the air and are soon dispersed.

Several Questions are proposed, relating to the Golden Calf formed by Aaron in the Wilderness. Some of the Rabbins are willing to excuse Aaron from the Sin committed by him in making it. They pretend that it was not he, but some Magicians of Egypt, and certain Proselytes of the same Nation, not truly concerted, who,

[y] Seder. Olam. & Hieronym. [z] Hieronym. in Osee v. 2. [a] Joseph. de Bello, l. iv. c. 1. 863.
[b] זבחי אדם עגלים ישקון Θύσατε ἀνθρώπους μόσχοι ἐκλελοίπασι. [c] שבבים יהיה שמרון 70. πλανῶν Decipiens. Ita Aqu. & Theod. Symmach. ἀκαταστατῶν. quint. Edit. Ῥεμβεύων Aberrans.

who had it made, contrary to the intention of Aaron. Josephus has concealed the matter, and omitted this ftory of the Golden Calf. The Septuagint fay, [d] that Aaron defcribed it with a graving Tool, but that the People made and caft it. Some of the Jews are of opinion, that at firft a wooden Calf was formed, and that afterwards it was covered with Golden Plates. Selden [e] conjectures, that he ufed a graving Tool to draw thofe marks upon the Golden Calf, which diftinguifhed the Ox Apis; that is to fay, a Crefcent on the fide, and a white fquare fpot upon the Forehead.

Exod. xxxii. 4.

Some are of Opinion, that his defign in cafting it, was in order to draw the work out into length, and that the Idol coming out of the Furnace might have nothing beautiful and glittering in its appearance. Others on the contrary will have it, that Aaron left nothing undone to make it as beautiful and perfect as poffible; and that for this reafon he is faid to have ufed a graving Tool. Formavit opere fuforio. In the Hebrew [f], He formed a calf for them with a graving tool. But the Chaldee Paraphraft differs widely from both thefe Verfions: Aaron, he fays, received their Ear-rings from them, tied them up in a Purfe, and made the Golden Calf of them. Bochart maintains, that this is the beft Tranflation of all, and that the Hebrew Charet fignifies a Purfe, and not a graving Tool [g].

Ibid.

The Mahometans [h] have a fingular Tradition relating to the Golden Calf: They affert, that this Figure, which was only a Body without a Soul, made a noife like an Ox. Which Fable they drefs up in the following manner. The Ifraelites having borrowed of the Egyptians, before their departure out of Egypt, many Veffels of Gold and Silver, and gathered abundance of rich Spoils belonging to the Egyptians, who were drowned in the Red Sea, and caft upon the Shore, began to traffick among themfelves with thefe Jewels. Sameri, one of the principal Heads of the Hebrews, informed Aaron of it, who commanded in the abfence of his Brother Mofes, and told him that he did not think this kind of Commerce lawful. He required him therefore to get all thefe Ornaments immediately together, and keep them fafe in his Poffeffion, till the return of Mofes, who was then upon Mount Sinai.

Sameri, who was very well skilled in melting down Metals, thought it would be an advantage to have all this Gold and Silver reduced into one mafs, that Mofes might afterwards imploy it in what manner he fhould judge moft proper. He did fo, put all thefe jewels into a Crucible, and without any defign of his, there came out a kind of molten Calf. At the fight of this Figure, which chance had produced, the Ifraelites, who were accuftomed to Idolatry in Egypt, conceived fome refpect for it, and Sameri defirous to increafe their veneration for it, took duft, and threw it into the Calf's Throat, which immediately began to bellow; whereupon the Hebrews fell proftrate before it, and paid their Adorations to it. And how came Sameri by this miraculous Duft? why, he took it, they fay, from under the Horfe's Feet belonging to Gabriel the Arch-angel, who marched at the head of the Hebrews in the Wildernefs.

The fatted Calf, mentioned in fome places of the Scripture, as in Prov. xv. 17. 1 Sam. xxviii. 24. Luke xv. 25. Jer. xxvi. 21. was fatted particularly for fome certain Feftivals, or extraordinary Sacrifices. The Heathens had the fame cuftom [i].

Pafcitur in veftrum reditum votiva Juvenca.

Calf of Lebanon fpoken of in Pfal. xxviii. 6. Comminuet eas tanquam vitulum Libani, may be taken fimply to be a Calf or young Bullock feeding upon Libanus. The Voice of God, is Thunder, the Tempeft breaketh a Cedar of Libanus, with as much eafe as it overfets a Calf of Libanus. The Hebrew may be otherwife tranflated; The voice of the Lord maketh the Cedars of Libanus to skip like a Calf bounding in the meadows: He will fhake the mountains of Libanus and Sirion like a young Unicorn.

The Calves of the Lips mentioned by Hofea [k], We will render the Calves of our Lips, fignifies Sacrifices of Praife, Prayers which the Captives of Babylon addreffed to God, being no longer in a condition to offer Sacrifices in his Temple. The Septuagint read the Fruit of our Lips, inftead of the Bulls of our Lips, and their reading is followed by the Syriac, and by the Apoftle to the Hebrews, Ch. xiii. 15.

Hofea xiv. 2.

Jeremiah fpeaks of a remarkable ceremony, which is not taken notice of in the hiftorical Books of Scripture: The Lord fays, I will give the men which have tranfgreffed my Covenant, that have not performed the words of the Covenant which they had made before me, when they cut the calf in twain, and paffed between the parts thereof. When this Covenant was fworn to, and upon what occafion, no one can tell: So much however is probable, that it was not of any long date, fince they who formerly had fworn to it, were

[d] 70. Ἔπλασεν αὐτὰ ἐν τῇ γραφίδι. [e] Selden de Diis Syris Syntagm. i. c. 4. [f] יצראהו בחרט
[g] Bochart. de Animal. Sacr. Part 1. l. ii. c. 34. [h] D'Herbelot. Bible Orient. p. 650.
[i] Horat. l. i. Epift. 3. [k] פרים שפתינו 70. Καρπὸν τῶν χειλέων ἡμῶν. They read Peri inftead of Parim.

were ſtill living. The cuſtom of cutting a Victim in two, of putting the ſeveral moieties upon two different altars, and making thoſe who contracted any Covenant paſs between both is well known in Scripture and profane Authors. See Gen. xv. 9, 10, 17.

CALVES. There is very frequent mention in the Scriptures of Calves, becauſe they were made uſe of commonly for Sacrifices. But Vitulus on ſeveral occaſions is put for an Heifer, which, according to our way of ſpeaking, would not be termed meerly a Calf. Vitulus de armento, a Calf of the Herd, is in all probability ſet in oppoſition to a ſucking Calf, ſtill under the care of its Dam. Vitulus is ſometimes taken for a grown Bull, Circumdederunt me vituli multi. (Pſal. xxii. 12.) The fatted Calf, vitulus ſaginatus, was a Calf fatted particularly for a Wedding, or ſome religious Feaſt. (Luke xv. 23.)

To CALL. This word is taken frequently for to be. (Iſai. ix 6.) He ſhall be called Wonderful, the Mighty God, Counſellor, and Everlaſting Father, &c. He ſhall poſſeſs all theſe Qualities, he ſhall be truly wonderful, the mighty God, &c. And in S. Luke, He ſhall be called the Son of the moſt High. (Luke i. 32) He ſhall in reality be ſo. And again, ſpeaking of John the Baptiſt, Thou ſhalt be called the Prophet of the Higheſt. (Luke i. 76.)

To be called by name to the Aſſemblies, was a particular mark of diſtinction: The People were called thither by a general cry, but the Heads of the Tribes, and Princes of the People were called by name. (Numb. xvi. 2.) The Hebrew [1] imports Men of name, celebrated, noted Men. God called Bezeliel by name: He deſigned to imploy him in making the Tabernacle. He called Abraham by name; he appointed him for his Service. God called Cyrus by name, &c.

To call in the Senſe of a vocation to an Imployment, to the Chriſtian Religion. S. Paul ſays, that he was called to the Apoſtleſhip. (Rom. i. 1.) Jeſus Chriſt, that many are called, but few are choſen. (Mat. xx. 16.) We are exhorted to live in a manner worthy of the vocation wherewith we are called. And, let every man abide in the calling wherewith he is called; (Eph. vi. 1.) and that he give diligence to make his calling ſure, by doing good works. 1 Pet. i. 10.

To call any thing by its name. To give it a name, to fix a name upon it, is an exerciſe of Authority: The Father names his Son, the Maſter his Servant. God giveth the Stars a name, and calleth them by their names, Pſal. cxlvii. 4.

To call the Name of any one upon ourſelves or another; Let thy name be called upon us. (Iſai. iv. 1.) Let us only be in the Quality of thy Wives. Thy name, O Lord, is invoked or called upon us. We are known under the Name of the People of God. Let the name of Jacob be named on them, they ſhall be eſteemed as Sons of Jacob. (Gen. xlviii. 16.) And the Pſalmiſt, The rich have called their name upon their lands; they have denominated them by their own Names. (Pſal. xlix. 11.) And in Geneſis, In Iſaac ſhall thy ſeed be called; (Gen. xxi.) the Sons of Iſaac ſhall paſs for thy true Poſterity.

To call, ſhews Authority; as a Maſter calls his Servants. God calleth a Famine upon the Earth, 2 Kings viii. 1. and Pſalm l. God calleth the Earth to judge it. And in Haggai i. 11. The Lord called for a drought upon the Land. And in Amos v. 8. He calleth for the waters of the ſea, and poureth them out upon the face of the earth. And Jerem. xxv. 29. He calls for a Sword or War upon the Land, &c. He calleth the ſtars, and they ſay, here we be. Baruch iii. 34.

To Call, taken in the ſenſe of an Invitation to a Feaſt, is commonly met with in the Scripture. And vocati, the called, denotes ſometimes the Gueſts.

To call upon the name of God, to call him to our Aſſiſtance, to ſue to him in our Neceſſities. Enos began to call upon the name of the Lord. (Gen. iv. 26.) Others tranſlate the Hebrew, Then the name of God was profaned, by giving it to Idols. See the Article Enos.

Let thy name be called upon us. Let us have the honour to belong to thee, to be called thy People, thy Servants. Let my name be called on them; (Gen. xlviii. 16.) let them be called the Sons of Iſrael; let them be reputed to be my Children. Iſaiah ſpeaking of a particular time when the Land would be very much deſerted, and Men very rare, ſays in a ſort of proverbial manner, Seven women ſhall take hold of one man, ſaying, We will eat our own bread and wear our own apparel, only let us be called by thy name; (Iſai. iv. 1.) take us for your Wives, and let the World own us in this Quality; free us from the reproach of Celibacy. Come and ſtand before me in this houſe, whereupon thy name is called. (Jer. vii. 10.) This Temple known by the name of the Temple of the Lord. O my God, open thine eyes and behold the city whereupon thy name is called; (Dan. ix. 18.) Jeruſalem known by the name of the holy City, the City of the Lord.

To call upon God, is an expreſſion ſometimes uſed to ſignify all the acts of Religion, for the publick Worſhip of God. Whoſoever ſhall call upon the name of the Lord ſhall be ſaved. (Rom. x. 13.) Whoſoever ſhall believe, hope, love and pray, as he ought to do, ſhall be ſaved. God in ſome ſort takes it for an Honour, that we ſhould call [1] אנשי שם 70. Ἄνδρες ὀνομαστοί.

call upon him; he is in some sort jealous of our Adorations; he requires that we should call upon no other God besides him-
Ps. l. 15. self. Call upon me in the day of trouble; I will deliver thee; and thou shalt glorify me. Thy deliverance, and the confidence which thou hast reposed in me, shall redound to my Glory.

CALLIRHOE, a City beyond Jordan, near the lake Asphaltites. There were springs of hot water there, which were very serviceable to the health of people, and were very agreeable to drink [m]. These waters discharged themselves into the Dead Sea.

CALLISTHENES, one of the King of Syria's Officers, who set fire to the Temple-gates in the time of the Maccabees. But on the day, when the Festival was celebrated at Jerusalem, in commemoration of the victories obtained over Antiochus's Generals by Judas Maccabæus, the people having discovered Callisthenes, who had fled into an house for safety, set 2 Macc. viii. 33. fire to it and burnt him in it.

CALMANA. This is the name which some give Adam and Eve's eldest Daughter, Cain's Twin-sister. But there is a very slender degree of certainty in traditions of this nature.

CALNEH, a City in the land of Shinaar, built by Nimrod, and the seat formerly of his Empire, being one of the Genes. x. 10. principal Cities in it. We believe it to be
If. x. 9. the same as Calno mentioned in Isaiah,
Ezek. xxvii. 23. and Canneh in Ezekiel. It must have been situated in Mesopotamia, since these Prophets join it with Haran, Eden, Assyria, and Chilmad, which carried on a trade with Tyre. Several learned Men are of opinion, that this was Callinicum; but others [n] assert, that it was rather Ctesiphon, the Capital of a Province called Chalonitis [o].

CALPHI, the Father of Judas. This last commanded part of the Troops belonging to Jonathan Maccabæus; and kept his ground with three others in the Battle which Jonathan fought against the Syrians in the plain of Nasor, near the 1 Macc. xi. 70. lake of Genesareth, in the year of the world 3860, before the vulgar Æra 183.

CALVARY, or Golgotha [p], that is to say, the place of Skulls. A little Mountain to the North of Mount Sion [q], went by this name, probably by reason of the similitude it bore to the figure of a Skull, or Man's Head. Many of the Ancients were of opinion [r], that this Mountain was called Calvary, because the Head of the first Man in the world was buried there; and that our Saviour was crucified in the same place, that his blood running down upon the body of this person, who was the first of mankind, he might thereby be restored to Life, and the favour of a Resurrection procured by it. To support this Tradition, they tell us, that Noah having put his Body in the Ark, distributed the Relicks of it to his Children, and as a particular favour gave the Skull or Head to Shem, who was to be the Parent of that holy Stock, from which the Messiah was to descend; that Shem with a spirit of foresight buried this Skull at Calvary, where he knew the Messiah would be crucified. But neither the ancient Fathers, nor any modern Authors, that mention these Traditions, were ever well persuaded of the truth of them, and we may, without any disrespect to them, take these to be apocryphal Stories.

Mount Calvary was very near to Jerusalem, and was the place, in all probability, where criminals were generally executed. After the destruction of Jerusalem by the Romans in the reign of Titus, it was by degrees rebuilt, and the Jews were very numerous there, when Barchochebas revolted against the Romans. Adrian, or his Generals were forced to besiege it, and having taken it they entirely destroyed it [s]. After this Turanus Rufus, or Tinnius Rufus, who was then Governour of Judæa, plowed up the ground, on which the Temple formerly had stood [t], to shew that this place was never to be rebuilt, without a particular Decree of the Senate. When the War was ended, Adrian forbad the Jews ever to set footing in Jerusalem, upon pain of death to those who should act contrary to this order [v]. He settled a Roman Colony in the place, and called the City Ælia Capitolina. This new City was not built upon the ruins of the old, but more to the North; so that Mount Calvary, which before lay out of the City, was almost in the center of Ælia. There was but a small part of old Jerusalem included within this City. Mount Sion, where the Temple stood before, was either cultivated as a field, or was covered with ruins [x].

At present the City of Jerusalem is in the same place, where Adrian built it. But whereas this Prince had profaned Mount Calvary, and in particular the place, where Jesus Christ was crucified, and and that where his body had been buried, the Empress Helena, Mother to Constantine the Great, erected there a stately Church, which is still in being, and enriched it with abundance of magnificent ornaments. So that the Cross and Sepulcher of Jesus Christ, and Calvary, are more honoured by all Christians, than old Jerusalem ever was by the Children of the Synagogue *.

[m] Joseph. l. xvii. c. 8. de Bello, l. i. c. 21. Plin. l. v. c. 16. [n] Plin. l. vi. c. 26. [o] Chaldæi Interpp. Euseb. Hieron. Bochart &c. [p] קיקלתא Gigoltha, for קלקלתא Golgoltha. Cranium. Syr. [q] Euseb. & Hieronym. in locis. [r] Vide Hieron. in Ephes. v. 14. & Ep. Paulæ & Eustoch. ad Marcellan. Vide & Ambros. in Luc. xxxii. Vide & Tertull. Origen. Cyprian. Euseb. August. &c. apud Gretser de Cruce, l. i. c. 18. [s] Euseb. Demonstr. l. vi. c. 18. Hieron. Chronic. an. 124. in Joel. c. 1. & in Jerem. xxxi. in Dan. ix. in Zach. v. &c. Appian. Syriac. p. 83. &c. [t] Scaliger. Isag. l. iii. p. 311. & in Euseb. p. 211. [v] Euseb. l. iv. c. 6. Hist. Eccl. Hieronym. in Isai. vi. &c. [x] Euseb. Demonstr. l. vi. c. 13. & l. viii. c. 3. & Cyril. Jerosolym. Catech. 16.

CALUMNY. Isaac's herds-men gave the name of Calumny †, or Injustice and Violence, to the Well which they had dug in the neighbourhood of Gerar, and which the Shepherds belonging to Abimelech King of Gerar by force took from them, Genes. xxvi. 20. The word Calumny in the Scripture style is often taken for Injustice, Violence, Fraud, Oppression.

CAMBYSES, the Son of Cyrus, succeeded his Father in the year of the world 3475, before the vulgar Æra 529. This Prince was violent, passionate, and cruel; he had sometimes fits of passion which proceeded to downright madness. We do not here take upon us to set down the History of his whole Life: It is sufficient to observe what may have a relation to the Scripture, and the Jewish History. As soon as he came to the Crown, the Samaritans, who in the reign of Cyrus never ventured to attack the Jews any otherwise than privately, and in an indirect manner, now set upon them directly and openly, and wrote to Cambyses, whom Ezra iv. 6. they call Ahasuerus, to sollicit him, that he would forbid the Jews to carry on their works any farther in rebuilding of their Temple. What the motives were, which they made use of, we cannot tell; but it is certain, that Cambyses put a stop to the works, and for the remaining seven years and five months of his life, no one was employed upon this Edifice.

In the second year of his reign, he prepared to make war against Egypt. One of the King of Egypt's Eunuchs, who betrayed his Master, and delivered up the bridges and avenues of the Country to Cambyses, made his entrance into Egypt, and the conquest of it easy to him. After five years continuance in this Country, he was obliged to leave it and return to Babylon, where the Magus Pathizites had placed his own Brother Smerdis on the throne of Persia, pretending that he was Smerdis the Brother of Cambyses. Cambyses was at Ecbatane in Palestine, at the foot of Mount Carmel, when news was brought him, that Smerdis had usurp'd the Empire. Whereupon in great transports of rage he mounted his horse with precipitation, and his sword by accident falling out of its scabbard wounded him in the thigh. Twenty days after, seeing himself to be near the point of death, he called the principal men of Persia about him, and told them, that he had put to death his Brother Smerdis, and that he who reigned was an Usurper. He exhorted them that they would not suffer his crime to go unpunished, and that they would hinder Smerdis from translating the Empire from the Persians to the Medes [y]. For Smerdis was by birth a Mede. After this he died at Ecbatane, as the Oracle had foretold; not at Ecbatane in Media, as he imagined, but at Ecbatane in Syria.

(In the year of the world 3478, before the vulgar Æra 526.)

What Ezekiel says of the Wars of Gog and Magog against Israel, and the judgment which God was to exercise against the enemies of his people, we think may be referred to the time of Cambyses. And what the Prophets say of all those misfortunes which were to befal the Israelites after the return from their Captivity, is, probably, all applicable to this event. See for example, Joel ii. 30, 31. iii. 2, 3, 4, 5, 15, 16. Isai. xli. 15, 16. Micah iv. 11, 12, 13. Lastly, some Authors [z] refer the History of Judith to the time of Cambyses. The Reader may consult our Dissertation upon Gog and Magog, prefixed to Ezekiel. (Ezek. xxxviii. xxxix.)

CAMEL, an Animal very common in Arabia, Judæa, and the neighbouring Countries. It is called Gamal in Scripture; and as to the signification of its name there is no difficulty. Moses ranks it among those creatures that were unclean. We may distinguish three sorts of Camels: Some are large and full of flesh, and fit only to carry burthens; it is said that they will carry a thousand pound weight. Others there are, which have two bunches upon their backs, like a natural saddle, which makes them fit either to carry burthens, or for men to ride on. Lastly, there is a third kind, which is leaner, and of a smaller size; these they call Dromedaries, because of their swiftness. These are the Animals generally made use of by men of quality to ride on. (Deut. xiv. 7. Levit. xi. 4.)

The Arabians, Persians, and other people eat the flesh of Camels, and it is served up at the best tables [a]. But the use of it was forbid the Hebrews, as we have observed already. Eliezer, Abraham's servant, [y] Herodot. l. iii. c. 62, 63, 64, 65, 66.

[z] Petr. Comestor. Anth. Hist. Scolast. Dionys. Carthus.
[a] Aristot. Hist. l. 6. c. 26. Plin. l. xi. c. 41. Athen. l. iv. Herodot. in Clio.

* We have a very ingenious and entertaining description of the many superstitious Ceremonies observed here by Pilgrims and other Devotees, who visit the Holy Sepulcher, in Dr. Maundrell's Journey from Aleppo to Jerusalem, p. 86, &c.

† Our English Translation more truly expresses the sense of the original word עשק, which it renders Contention; and thus it is interpreted by Buxtorf.

vant, made his Camels kneel down to rest themselves near a well of water. Camels keep Water a long time in their Stomach for their Refreshment. Nature has given them for this purpose a very large Ventricle, round about which are many bags closed within the Coats of it, wherein it is very probable that these Animals keep water in reserve. It is confidently said, that they will continue ten or twelve days without either eating or drinking.

But what is usually said of these Bags to be found about the Stomach of Camels, and their reserving water for many days in them, is contradicted by the physical Observations of the Jesuits made in China, where they dissected several Camels, and found nothing like them. As soon as a Camel is born, they tie his four Feet under his Belly, put a Carpet over his Back, and Stones upon the Borders of it, that he may not be able to rise for twenty days together. Thus they teach him the habit of bending his Knees to rest himself, or when he is to be loaded or unloaded. He has a large solid Foot, but not a hard one; in the Spring all his Hair falls off in less than three days time, and his Skin remains quite naked. At such times the Flies are extremely uneasy to him, and there is no remedy besides belabouring his Body. They dress him with a Switch instead of a Curry Comb; with this they beat him as they wou'd a Carpet, to clear it of the dust. When he is upon a Journey, his Master follows him singing and whistling, and the louder he sings, the better the Camel goes.

CAMELEON. Moses forbids the Hebrews to eat the Flesh of a Cameleon, it being an unclean Animal. The Cameleon is a little creature like a Lizard, but with a larger and longer Head. It has four Feet, and on each Foot three Claws. Its Tail is long; with this as well as with its Feet it fastens itself to the Branches of Trees. Its Tail is flat, its Nose long, and made in an obtuse Point; its Back is sharp, its Skin plaited, and jagged like a Saw from the Neck to the last Joint of the Tail, and upon its Head it has something like a Comb. In other respects it is made like a Fish; that is to say, it has no neck. Some have asserted, that it lives only upon Air; for which reason Tertullian [b] calls it a living Skin: But they who have observed it more nearly, take notice that it feeds on Flies, which it catches with its Tongue; its Tongue is about ten lines long, and three large, made of white Flesh, round, and flat at the end; or it is hollow and open in some sort like an Elephant's Trunk.

Levit. xi. 30.

In like manner it shrinks or grows longer. This Creature darts it upon Flies, draws it back immediately, and there they stick upon it as it were upon Glew.

It is said likewise to assume the colour of those things, to which it is applied; [c] that it grows white upon any thing that is white, and black or red on any thing black or red. But our modern Naturalists assure us, that its natural colour when it is at rest, and in the Shade, is a blueish grey. There are some yellow, and others green, which are of the smaller kind. When it is exposed to the Sun, this grey changes into a darker grey, inclining to a dun colour; and its parts which have least of the light upon them, are changed into different colours, which form spots of the bigness of about half an Inch. The grain of its Skin when the light does not shine upon it, is like Clothes mixed with many colours. Sometimes as we handle it, it seems to be speckled with dark spots inclining to green. If it is put upon a black Hat, it appears to be of a Violet colour. Sometimes again, if it is wrapped up in Linen, when it is taken off it is white; but it is not true that it takes the colour of those Stuffs which it is covered with: It changes colour in some parts only of the Body. This is what is said of the Cameleon.

But we very much question, whether the Hebrew term, which the Author of the Vulgate has translated Camelion, and which Moses forbids the Hebrews to eat, as an unclean creature, be truly a Cameleon. Bochart, who has considered with much application what relates to the Animals, which the Scripture mentions, is of opinion, that the Hebrew [d] hakoah signifies a sort of large strong Lizard, found often in Arabia, which attacks Serpents in their Holes, drives them out, and kills them. The Arabians call it Aluarlo.

CAMELO-PARDUS, or Camelo-Pardalus, an Animal like a Camel and a Panther; the use whereof the Hebrews were allowed by Moses. It derives its name from the resemblance it bears to a Camel in its Size, and a Panther in its Hair, having its Skin speckled with white upon a reddish ground. It is said to be produced by the Copulation of a she Panther with a Camel, or rather with a Panther of a female Camel: But both are equally improbable.

Deut xiv. 5. 6. זמר

Others translate Camelo-Pardalus, Giraffa, which is a Beast found in the East Indies, beyond the River Ganges. Its Neck is long and slender, about a Fathom in length: Its Ears are slit, and its Feet cloven; its Tail is round, and does not reach reach below its Houghs: Its Legs are taller than any other Animal's, so that it cannot drink without stradling. It is described with two little Horns. Others maintain, that it is a chimerical Animal, which has no real existence any where. Bochart is of opinion that Moses did not intend to mention either the Giraffa or the Camelopardus; because these were Animals which the Hebrews had no knowledge of, and were not to be found any where but in Countries too remote from theirs. Moreover he says, that the Camel being an Animal which was declared unclean by the Law, it is not probable that a Beast compounded of a Camel and a Panther should be allowed of. Lastly, He thinks the Hebrew Zamor signifies a wild Goat. Others translate it an Elk or wild Goat.

[b] Tertull. de Pallio. c. 3. Pellicula vivit.... jejunus scilicet semper, & indefectus, oscitans vescitur, follicans ruminat, de vento cibus. [c] Idem ibidem. Cum illi coloris proprietas una sit, ut quid accessit, inde suffunditur. [d] הכח Hachoab.

CAMINUS, Furnace, Hearth, Chimney [f]. Exod. ix. 8. We are not to imagine, that either the Hebrews or Egyptians had Chimneys like ours, nor that Caminus signifies properly a Chimney made after our manner. In Palestine, Arabia and Egypt, People use very little Fire to warm themselves, because these Countries are very hot; and whenever they do warm themselves, it is at a Hearth or foot Stove filled with Coals. King Jehoiakim was seated in his winter Apartment, with a Fire on the Hearth before him, when Jeremiah's Roll was presented to him. He cut it Jerem. xxxvi. 22. with a Pen-knife, and threw it into the Fire which was upon the Hearth. When it is said in Exodus, Ex. ix. 8. that Moses took Ashes out of the Chimney, Plenas manus cineris de camino, the Hebrew reads Furnace *, or Forge, de fornace. The Scripture speaks frequently of Caminus, or the Forge or Crucible wherein Gold or Silver are refined, Prov. xvii. 3. Rev. i. 15. Eccl. ii. 5. and Metals are melted; and the sad and deplorable condition of the Poor, of Slaves, and People under Oppression, is by a Metaphor called, the Furnace of Humility, Poverty and Servitude. Moses says, Jer. xlviii. 10. Eccl. ii. 5. Rev. ii. 15. Deut. iv. 20. 1 Kings viii. 35. Jer. xi. 4. that God delivered the Hebrews out of the Iron Furnace, out of Egypt; an expression which we find repeated in several places of Scripture. See hereafter the Article Punishments for the fiery Furnace into which Daniel was cast.

I. CAMON, a City on this side Jordan, in the great Plain, six Miles from Legio, inclining to the North [g]. The same perhaps as Cadmon.

II. CAMON, a City beyond Jordan, in the Country of Gilead [h]. It is in all probability the same Camon as that mentioned by Polybius [i], and taken by King Antiochus. Jair Judge of Israel was buried in the City of Camon, belonging to the Tribe of Manasseh, on the other side of Jordan. Judg. x. 5.

CAMP, Incampments, and Marches of the Hebrews. See hereafter Marches.

CANA, in Galilee, a little Town, where Jesus performed his first Miracle. John ii. 1, 2, &c. Cana is said to lye between Sephoris and Nazareth, six Miles westward from Sephoris. In the same Canton we meet with Sepher-Cana, four Miles from Nazareth, northward, a little veering to the East. Josephus speaks likewise of a Town called Cana [k]: But I should take this rather to be Kenath. Others discover another Cana somewhere towards Sidon; and they pretend, that the Woman of Canaan, Mat. xv. 21. Mark vii. 24. whose Faith was admired by our Saviour, was of this place; but they have no solid Foundation for this conjecture.

CANAAN, the Son of Ham. The Hebrews [l] believe, that Canaan having first discovered Noah's nakedness, gave notice of it to his Father Ham; that Ham diverted himself with it, and acquainted his Brothers Shem and Japhet with it, who with Respect covered their Father: That Noah when he awoke, having understood what had passed, cursed Canaan, who was the first Author of this indecency. Others are of opinion [m], that Noah, not knowing how to do any thing more sensibly displeasing to his Son Ham, than by cursing Canaan, resolved thus to punish him in the person of his Son. Some, instead of Cursed be Canaan, a servant of Servants shall he be unto his brethren, Gen. ix. 25. read, Cursed be Ham, &c. or supply, cursed be the Father of Canaan: The effect of Noah's curse appeared in the Anathema pronounced by God against the Canaanites, and in the severity wherewith he required his People to treat them, Vide Deut. vii. 2, 26. xiii. 15. and xx. 17. when they had made a conquest of their Country. The Canaanites were not reduced only to suffer the most cruel slavery, Vide Lev. xvii. 25. Deut. xviii. 9. and xx. 16, 17. but were intirely extirpated, put to the Sword, or driven out of their own Land.

The Posterity of Canaan was very numerous. His eldest Son was Sidon; who Gen. x. 15. 16, 17. at least founded, and peopled the City of Sidon, and was the Father of the Sidonians and Phœnicians. Canaan had besides ten Sons, who were the Fathers of so many People dwelling in Palestine, and in part of Syria, namely, the Hittites, the Jebusites, the Amorites, the Girgasites, the Hivites, the Arkites, the Sinites, the Arvadites, the Zemarites, and Hamathites. Of each of these People we shall say something under their particular Articles.

[f] הכבשן [g] Euseb. in locis. [h] Joseph. Antiq. l. v. c. 8. [i] Polyb. Hist. l. v. p. 414.
[k] Antiq. l. xv. c. 6. & de Bello, l. i. c. 14. [l] Bereseh. Rabb. Sect. 37. Theodoret. qu. 57. in Genes.
[m] Chrysost. homil. 29. in Genes. Ambros. de Noë, & Arca, c. 32. Aug. l. xvi. de Civit. c. 1.
* And our English Translation, which adheres generally with more exactness to the Orignal Hebrew, than either the Septuagint or the Latin Vulgate, reads Furnace.

A PLAN of the Land of CANAAN and the Distribution of it according to EZEKIEL'S VISION.

Chap. XLVIII. which was never put in Execution according to the Letter after the Return from the Captivity.

Shewing the Prince of Israels Portion and that of the Levites

A. The Sanctuary of the Lord of 500 reeds in breath & 500 in length Square round about Ezek. XLV. 2.

BB The City for the Levites 4500. reeds Square and 1800 round about Ezek. XLVIII. 16.

cccc. The Suburbs for the Levites City 250. reeds in breath — Ezek. XLVIII. 17.

dddd. The Gates of ye Levites City, in all twelve, three on every side Ezek. XLVIII. v. 31. 32. 33. 34

EE. The City for the whole House of Israel 5000 reeds broad & 250 long Ezek. XLV. 6

FF. Remaining possessions for the Subsistance of those who serve the City.

GG The portion for the Prince of Israel 2500 reeds long and 12500 broad Ezek. XLVIII. 21.

@ U E * $ 5

[illegible]

- ˢ G L = ^ R ˢ

+ '/ ˢ ˢ ˢ #ˢ ˢ b/ ˢ 99 '#ˢ /" ˢ ˢ ˢ' $ˢ ˢ 'ˢ 'ˢ
ˢ% ˢ 0 #ˢ #ˢ, 0 #ˢ ˢ. 4ˢ % ˢ3 ˢ ˢ $ ˢ /ˢ ˢ ˢ% ˢ' !ˢ
ˢ" / # #ˢ / ˢ, ˢ ˢ" ` ' ˢ 'ˢ @ ˢ ˢ0 ˢ' # ˢ ˢ
+ˢ 'ˢ ˢ / / % ˢ # #ˢ ˢ ˢ + ˢ #ˢ, ˢ ˢ
4 (&1 7ˢ 'ˢ ˢ ˢX / ˢ ˢ ($"ˢ & ˢ & , ˢ #ˢ # ' @ˢ
, 4ˢ ˢ & ˢ% ˢ $ # ˢ, ˢ * 4ˢ ˢ % ˢ #+ #ˢ ˢ ˢ& $" ˢ, / ˢ, ˢ I 9ˢ
, ˢ "/ ˢ ˢ ˢ & , Fˢ 1 ˢ % ˢ 'ˢ #ˢ ' #ˢ ˢK(Kˢ #ˢ ˢ EE ˢ eV6 @\ , #- #ˢ ˢ& ˢ ˢ + ˢ 1 ˢ ˢ' ˢ 'ˢ / ˢ(ˢ ˢ ˢ ˢ `
#ˢ ˢ8 ˢ 'ˢ ˢ $ ˢ ˢ #ˢ ˢ /$" ˢ ˢ ˢ0 ', ˢ /" ˢ% ˢ
@ˢ % ˢ 0 ˢ ˢ # #ˢ ˢ I ›A& /$" ˢ ˢ " ' #ˢ #ˢ
Y/ ˢ#' ˢ% ˢ' !ˢ8 % ˢ @ ˢ(Aˢ ˢ' 0 ˢ /$ ˢ% ˢ% ˢ `
ˢ% ˢ ˢ$ ˢ % ˢ #ˢ 7 "ˢ" ` #ˢ "/, @ ˢ ˢ ˢ3 '' ˢ ˢ `
#ˢ ˢ " ˢ ˢ @ˢ #ˢ' !ˢ + 0 #ˢ $ +ˢ ˢ 'ˢ ˢ # ' 'ˢ
ˢ 'ˢ ˢ # ' 'ˢ% ˢ ˢ % ˢ 0 ˢ ˢ ˢ ˢ, ˢ, 0 #ˢ ˢ
+ # ˢ($" ˢ% ˢ% ˢ $$ 0 , ˢ & ˢ + # ˢ # ' 'ˢ % ˢ 0 ˢ 5 5
% ˢ ˢ% ˢ "/ ˢ ˢ #ˢ ˢ ˢ' ˢ ˢ ˢ * ' ˢ, ˢ ˢ3 " ˢ
& ' ˢ 0 ˢ($" ˢ% ˢ + #ˢ 0 ˢ O ˢ50 ˢ @ ˢ ˢ 'ˢ* 4ˢ #ˢ ˢ5 ˢ ˢ
0 +ˢ #ˢ ! +/ ' #ˢ 0 ˢ ` " 0 # #ˢ, ˢ% $ ˢ ˢ#'' ˢ ! !! ˢ
+ˢ & ˢ ˢ% ˢ ˢ # ' @ˢ % ˢ ˢ ˢ ˢ ˢ ˢ ˢ ˢ3 ' ˢ LX
% ˢ " #ˢ % ˢ ˢ ˢ% ˢ ˢ ` " / #ˢ ˢ ˢ1 " ˢ ˢ ˢ ˢ ˢ
$, ˢ ˢ ˢ ' / ˢ #ˢ 0 #ˢ - ' M ˢ ˢ ˢ ˢ% ˢ $$/ #ˢ(ˢ ˢ + ˢ' $ˢ ˢ ˢ" ˢ, / ˢ' $ˢ Y/ ˢ ˢ ˢ' 0 ˢ ' - & ˢ /+ ˢ
ˢ # ' @ ˢ 1 ˢ % ˢ" #ˢ ˢ ˢ 0 ˢ 3" ˢ % ˢ 0 #ˢ $ˢ ' $ˢ
/ ˢ' # ˢ ˢ ˢ ˢ #ˢ ' 0 #ˢ ˢ ` ˢ $$ ˢ ˢ" #ˢ ˢ ˢ #ˢ
/$ ˢ ˢ ˢ 'ˢ3 '/$ ˢ #ˢ ˢ ˢ/"" ˢ" ˢ 'ˢ ˢ # ' @V #ˢ ˢ
& , ˢ 'ˢ %A, #ˢ% ˢ% ˢ ˢ ˢ ˢ% ˢ' #ˢ % ˢ ˢ% ˢ# "" #ˢ $ ˢ" # % ˢ% ˢ /+ ˢ % ˢ@ #ˢ 'ˢ&/ `
ˢ% ˢ #ˢ, / ˢ ˢ& $" ˢ 'ˢ ˢ% ˢ 0 #ˢ ˢ' $ˢ % ˢ 0 ˢ
ˢ(#ˢ ˢ% ˢ ˢ' ' #ˢ% ˢ" ` ˢ" #ˢ ˢ ˢ% ˢ' # ˢ 'ˢ ˢ
+ˢ ˢ+ # ˢ # ' @ˢ ˢ, / ˢ # ' @ˢ ˢ# ˢ ˢ, 0ˢ ˢ ˢ
#ˢ ˢ "/ ˢ /"ˢ 'ˢ ˢ $ ˢ' $ˢ #ˢ ($"ˢ 0 ˢ% ˢ ˢ, +F /ˢ ˢ ˢ ˢ
ˢ% ˢ ˢ # ' , #ˢ , ˢ * 4ˢG # '' : ˢ ˢ ˢ $" ' ˢ 'ˢ ˢ 1 ˢ
'0 ˢ ˢ ˢ ˢ #ˢ' 0 ˢ ˢ / ˢ / ˢ $ ˢ ˢ ˢ3 " ˢO ˢ% ˢ
W 7 +ˢ '# ˢ 'ˢ ˢ ˢ & ˢ& + ˢ #ˢ /'` 0 ˢ !" #ˢ ˢ ## ˢ #ˢ / # ˢ
0 ˢ^P ' ˢ, + +ˢ ˢ ˢ+ # ˢ # @ ˢ ˢ0 ' ˢ 'ˢ ˢ # ' '
ˢ% ˢ ˢ ˢ 'ˢ * 4ˢ ˢ ˢ ˢ' 'ˢ ˢ ˢ T ? ˢ!!0 ˢ_=ˢ ˢ
% ˢ% ˢ 'ˢ0 ˢ "/ ˢ - #ˢ VRI Aˢ ' $ ˢ " , , ˢ% ˢ ˢ - ˢ! ˢJE
/ ˢ' $ ˢ ˢ 0 ˢ #5+ #ˢ 0 ˢ' ˢ ˢ * ˢ
$ @ +ˢ 0 ˢ # @ ˢ ˢ% ˢ ˢ ˢ & ˢ $ˢ '+ ' ˢ " - ˢ
) "6 6 ˢ - #ˢ' ˢ ˢ 'ˢ ˢ ˢ / ˢ% ˢ# ˢ # +ˢ ˢ ˢ $" ˢ 'ˢ ˢ ?$ 1 ˢ
ˢ ˢ' #ˢ ˢ ˢ1 ˢ ˢ ˢ ˢ" ` ˢ" / ˢ/' #ˢ ˢ ˢ +/ + ˢ 'ˢ ˢ
/ ˢ% ˢ ! / #V / ˢ % ˢ / ˢ ˢ'+ ' ˢ'/ ˢ / ˢ ˢ ˢ" Aˢ
$ # ˢ 1, $ ˢ 'ˢ 0 ˢ' ˢ ˢ/' ˢ 'ˢ ˢ ' , #ˢ , ˢ / ˢ +ˢ 8 ˢ
& $" ˢ #'' ˢ' $ˢ ˢ+ # ˢ ˢ 4 ' " ˢ #ˢ ˢ 1 ˢ ˢ $ # ˢ/' ˢ
% ˢ% ˢ" #ˢ ˢ ˢ 'ˢ @ % ' ˢ ˢ# ˢ ' ˢ @ ˢ 'ˢ "`
' ˢ ˢ . 4ˢ / #ˢ ' $ˢ ˢ / ˢ% ˢ ˢ 0 #ˢ ˢ " #ˢ #ˢ
" 0 ˢ ˢ+ # ˢ # '' @ˢ% ˢ + ˢ ˢ #ˢ ˢ# ' +/ ˢ $ˢ ' $ˢ
" #ˢ ˢ ˢ& $" ˢ ˢ ˢ #ˢ, ˢ, ` ˢ " ' ˢ " " ˢ ˢ# '"/ #ˢ
' ˢ ˢ ˢ& , ˢ, ˢ * 4ˢG #ˢ ˢ @ ˢ 8 ˢ ! $" ˢ% ˢ' ˢ
S5 , ˢ0 O ˢ ˢ ˢ !" ˢ ˢ$ ˢ 'ˢ ˢ 4ˢ 'ˢ " ˢ 'ˢ ˢ' #ˢ ˢ 'ˢ ˢ
ˢ% ˢ ˢ ˢ ˢ @ ˢ 'ˢ ˢ* 4ˢ " / ˢ #ˢ ˢ @ % #+ #ˢ ˢ, ˢ ` aˢ 4ˢ ' ˢ ˢ' ˢ ˢ" 4ˢ #ˢ ˢ, ˢ, ˢ. 4ˢ #ˢ 4
' #ˢ ˢ& $" ˢ ˢ' 0 ˢ# +ˢ ˢ ˢ ˢ ˢ @ˢ 'ˢ '# $ˢ ˢ
%a ˢ% ˢ' / #ˢ% ˢ ˢ% ˢ 5ˢ #ˢ ˢ, ˢ ˢ ˢ ˢ ˢ, / ˢ ˢ ˢ /$" ˢ ˢ" ˢ0 M ˢ ˢ+ # ˢ& ` ˢ ˢ 'ˢ ˢ. 4ˢ (ˢ ˢ ˢ' #ˢ
, ˢ #ˢ ˢ+ # ˢ # ' @ˢ% ˢ' 0 ˢ ˢ" / ˢ @ˢ 0 ˢ, ˢ' ˢ1, $ ˢ
ˢ / ˢ ˢ ˢ ## ˢ ˢ ˢ $ ˢ ' #ˢ #ˢ 0 ˢ ˢ, ˢ 0 #ˢ
' @ˢ % ˢ' #ˢ ˢ ˢ #'' ˢ ˢ ˢ ˢ% ˢ ˢ/ $ / ˢ Aˢ
' $ˢ' $ˢ ˢ% ˢ% 5ˢ/' #ˢ ˢ ˢ ` ' ˢ 'ˢ ˢ ˢ / ˢ ˢ ' ˢ5
ˢgˢ' ˢ ˢ% ˢ$ # ˢ ˢ ˢ " ˢ 'ˢ ˢ3 1, $ ˢ + ˢ '/ ˢ ˢ @ ˢ 'ˢ '# $
A

GOLDEN CANDLESTICK WITH SEVEN BRANCHES

THE GOLDEN CANDLE-STICK WITH SEVEN BRANCHES.

seen by Zechariah in a Vision. Zech. IV.

Ecclesiasticus, Tobit, Judith, the two first Books of Maccabees and Baruch; and for the New Testament, the Epistle to the Hebrews, the second of S. Peter, the second and third of S. John, and the Revelations.

The Hebrews admit no more than two and twenty Books into their Canon of the Scriptures, or at most but four and twenty, supposing Ruth to be separated from Judges, and the Lamentations from Jeremiah: The manner of their distributing them in their Bible, may be seen under the Article Bible. They believe generally that the Canon of Scripture was not closed, as they term it; that is to say, that the number of inspired Books which it includes, was not fixed in the manner we have related, till the time of Esdras, who, with the consent of the General Council of the whole Nation, collected all the sacred and inspired Books, which were acknowledged as such by the Jews, composed one Body of them, and regulated, what we call the second Canon of the Scripture [t]. So that ever since the Jews have not admitted any Book among those, which they hold to be canonical: At least they have received none, which have the same degree of Authority with them as the former: This we learn from Josephus [x], who tells us, that from Moses to the reign of Artaxerxes King of Persia, the Jews had received two and twenty Books from the Prophets, which they looked upon to be divine, * and did not dare to make any the least alteration in them; and that after the time of Artaxerxes, they continued with the same diligence to write down every thing memorable, which happened to their Nation; but that the Books which have been so composed, are not allowed to have an equal degree of Authority with the first.

Genebrard and Serranus are of opinion, that after Esdras, the Jews of the great Synagogue admitted Books into the Canon, which were composed after this time; such as Wisdom, Ecclesiasticus, Tobit, Judith, and the two Books of the Maccabees; nevertheless, that their Authority was not the same with them, as that of the old ones, tho' these too were held by them to be inspired. But this is not without some Difficulty; for first, it is very probable, that the Books of Tobit and Judith were written before the Captivity. Secondly, If the Jews thought they were inspired, why did they not receive them into the Canon, and own them to be of equal Authority with the rest? The reason which Josephus gives for it [y], which is, that from the time of Artaxerxes, there was no succession, as there had been, of the Prophets, is of no weight: For if they had men among them, who were acknowledged to be inspired, and had written the Books which we are speaking of, could not these inspired persons have added their Books to the Canon, which was composed by Esdras? Had not Mattathias, Judas Maccabeus, Simeon and Jonathan his Brothers, had not they Authority to do so? And John Hircanus, whom Josephus himself declares [a] to have been a Man particularly favoured by God, and supernaturally enlightned, could not he too have done the same thing? The Author of the second Book of Maccabees [b] says, that Judas Maccabeus imitated the zeal and care of Nehemiah in collecting those Books, which contained the History of what had happened to the Jews, during the War against the Syrians. Why did not Judas insert these Monuments in the Canon, since he thought them so much to deserve his care and consideration? 2 Macc. ii. 14.

It may be perhaps suspected, that the Jews, who retained the use of the Hebrew Tongue, might have expunged these Books out of the Canon, because they were not written in Hebrew, which is the sacred Language. But they received without scruple Daniel and Esdras, wherein there are several large passages to be found, which are written in Chaldee: Now it is certain, that Ecclesiasticus, Tobit and Judith, and at least the first Book of Maccabees, were originally written in this Language. Might not the envy conceived by the Hebraizing Jews, against the Hellenistical part of this People, have been the cause of this diversity, and have induced the Hebraizing Jews to exclude those very Books out of their Canon, which the Hellenists esteemed to be inspired? Or, lastly, the vain superstition of the Jews might have been the reason of their doing so; since out of a mistaken respect for the disposition made by Esdras, they might not venture to touch that Canon of the Scriptures, which he had formed. However this may be, the Christian Church received these Books without doubt from the Jews, and probably from the [t] Ita Hebræi communiter. Vide & Iren. l. iii. c. 25. Tertul. de habitu mulierum. c. 3. Hieronym. contra Helvid. c. 3. Hilar. Præfat. in Psal. Athenas. in Synopsi. [x] Joseph. l. i. p. 1036. contra Appion.

[y] Joseph. loco cit. l. i. contra Appion. [a] Antiq. l. xiii. c. 18. p. 454. &c. 20. p. 456.

[b] Ωσαυτως δε και Ιουδας, τα διαπεπτωκοτα δια τον Πολεμον τον γεγονοτα ημιν επισυνηγαγε παντα, και εστι παρ ημιν. Which we may translate methinks after this manner. He collected those Books which had been either mislaid or lost during the last War; he made search after them, and got them together. But the other sense expressed by us in the Text, is more literal.

* Dr. Prideaux with great appearance of reason says, it is more likely, that the two Books of Chronicles, Ezra, Nehemiah and Esther, as well as Malachi, were afterwards added in the time of Simeon the Just, and that it was not till then, that the Jewish Canon of the holy Scriptures was fully compleated. See Connect. &c. Part I. Book 5.

the Hellenists too, and she certainly would never have received them as inspired, and as such have inserted them into her Canon, if they, from whose hands they were conveyed to her, had not themselves acknowledged them to be inspired and Canonical.

If particular Churches have sometimes deliberated, whether they should range them among the sacred Writings; if some Doctors and Councils have not included them in their Catalogues of the Scriptures; and others have formally rejected them, this ought not to offend any one; for such a conduct is a proof of nothing but the great circumspection, which the Church has used, and the care which it has taken to receive nothing into its Canon, but what really was inspired; and this reserve should be a demonstration to us, that if at last it has determined to receive them, there were good reasons for its doing so. Time was necessary to examine the Tradition of the Churches in order to be well assured of it, and to fix the doubts of such particular Churches, as from the beginning had not received them. Those among the Ancients who did not admit the Books, which we are speaking of to be canonical, kept close to the Canon of the Hebrews, the Christian Church as yet having none solemnly approved of by a general Council. But since the Council of Trent there is a perfect uniformity in the Church *, both of language and opinions in this matter.

CANONICAL. Canonical or Catholick Epistles. See hereafter Catholick.

CANTHARA. Simon Canthara the Son of Simon Boethus, was advanced to the dignity of High Priest of the Jews, by the favour of Agrippa, sirnamed the Great, by whose procurement he succeeded Theophilus the Son of Jonathan [w]. He enjoyed this dignity for about two years [x] at two several times. The first for one year, having been obliged to resign in favour of Matthias the Son of Ananus [y], and the second time he succeeded Elionæus. After the death of Agrippa, Herod King of Chalcis deprived him of this dignity, in order to confer it upon Joseph the Son of Camith [z].

CANTICLES, or Songs. The Hebrews had a custom of composing Songs upon important occasions; for example, Moses made one after the passage of the Red Sea, to thank God for the deliverance of his people, and celebrate the greatness of this Miracle. David composed a mournful Song upon the death of Saul and Jonathan, and another upon the death of Abner. Jeremiah wrote his Lamentations, which are a Song, wherein he deplores the ruin of Jerusalem; and made another upon the death of Josiah King of Judah. Deborah and Barak made a triumphant Hymn after the defeat of Sisera, and Judith after the defeat of Holofernes.

(Exod. xv. 1, 2, &c. — 2 Sam. i. 18. — 2 Sam. iii. 33. — 2 Chron. xxxv. 25. — Judg. v. 1, 2, 3, &c. — Judith xv. 1, 2.)

The Canticles, and the xlix Psalm, are Songs to celebrate a wedding, such pieces as the Greeks call Epithalamia. Hannah the Mother of Samuel, and King Hezekiah, returned thanks to God for the favours they had received in solemn and spiritual Songs. The Canticles composed by the Blessed Virgin, by Zachary the Father of John the Baptist, and old Simeon, are of the same nature. They are thanksgivings to God, for blessings received from him. The Scripture says [a], that Solomon had composed five thousand Songs, whereof we have that only remaining which is intitled, The Song of Songs, which we shall now speak of in a distinct Article.

(1 Sam. ii. 1, 2, &c. — 2 Sam. xxxviii. 10, 11. & seq. — 1 Kings iv. 32.)

II. CANTICLES, or the Songs of Solomon. This is a sacred Book in Scripture, by the Hebrews called Schir Haschirim, the Song of Songs, or the most excellent of all Songs. It is believed that Solomon composed it upon the occasion of his own Marriage with the King of Egypt's Daughter, and that it is, as it were, his Epithalamium; but they who would penetrate the meaning, and comprehend the whole mystery of it, must raise their conceptions above things relating to flesh and blood, and contemplate in it the espousals of Jesus Christ with human Nature, with the Church, and with good and faithful Souls. This is the Key of this divine Book, which is a continued allegory, wherein under the terms of a common Wedding, a divine and supernatural Marriage is expressed.

It is observed that seven nights and seven days are very distinctly set down in this Song; because Weddings among the Hebrews were celebrated for seven days. This Song relates the adventures of these seven days, but in a poetical manner and in a way very different from a common and historical narration. The Hebrews apprehending it might be understood in a gross and carnal manner, very prudently forbad the reading it before the age of thirty [b]. This rule has been followed even among Christians: and nothing is more dangerous than to read it with carnal thoughts and

(Gen. xxix. 22. Judg. xiv. 12, 15, 17. Tob. viii. 23.)

[w] Antiq. l. xix. c. 5. [x] The first time from 4044 to 4045, and the second in 4048; he was deposed the same year. [y] Joseph. Antiq. l. xix. c. 1. [z] Antiq. l. xx. c. 1. [a] Fuerunt carmina ejus quinque & mille; literally a thousand and five. Josephus construes it five thousand Odes. But the generality explain it by five thousand pieces in verse, or by five thousand verses. [b] Origen & Theodoret. Præfat. in Cant. Hieronym. in Ezech.

* This is to be understood of that Church only, which acknowledges the Authority of this Council, and is in subjection to the See of Rome.

and dispositions; People not only being liable to the hazard of losing thereby all the esteem which they ought to have for this Book; but of even wounding the Soul instead of edifying it.

The Christian Church as well as the Synagogue, has always received this Book among the Scriptures as generally owned to be canonical[c]. In all Antiquity we know of none but Theodorus of Mopsuesta that rejected it, and declared it not to be canonical. Some Rabbins questioned whether it were written by inspiration; and the Anabaptists lay it aside as a dangerous composition. But in opposition to these we plead the Authority both of the Synagogue and the Christian Church, which have at all times ranked it among the least dubious parts of Scripture. If it be objected, that neither Christ nor his Apostles have ever cited it, and that the name of God is not once to be found in it, we answer, that there are several other Sacred Books, which our Saviour has not expresly quoted; and that in an allegory, wherein the Son of God is concealed under the figure of an Husband, it is not necessary that he should be expressed by his proper name. If he were by name mentioned, it would cease to be an allegory.

CAPERNAUM, a city celebrated in the Gospels, where Jesus Christ principally abode, during the three years of his preaching. It lay eastward on the Borders of the lake Genezareth. We do not now exactly know its situation: But by the Gospel it appears, that it was not far from Bethsaida. It was still to be seen in the seventh and eighth Ages, as is manifest from the travels of Adamnanus, and S. Willibaldus. Adamnanus says, that it extended itself from West to East, having a Mountain to the North, and the lake of Tiberias to the South; our Saviour preached frequently at Capernaum, and wrought many Miracles there: But the Inhabitants were not the better for all his instructions; wherewith he reproaches them sharply, telling them, that tho' they were exalted unto Heaven, they should be brought down to Hell; and that if he had done as many Miracles in Tyre and Sidon, as he had performed in that City, Tyre and Sidon, which were heathen places, would have been long before converted. At Capernaum, Jesus Christ called S. Matthew, and invited him to follow him.

(Mat. iv. 13. Mark ii. 1. John vi. 17.) (Mat. xi. 23.) (Mat. ix. 9.)

CAPER-NOMA, or Capharnaum, beyond Jordan, where there was a fine Fountain, which was believed to be a Branch of the Nile, says Josephus[d].

CAPHAR, in Hebrew signifies a Field or Village; for which reason we find it often in conjunction with another word, which is the proper name of the Field or Village. We meet with the word Caphar annexed sometimes to the name of a City; because it often happens, that a Village is augmented, and becomes a City.

CAPHAR-ABIS, a Castle in Idumæa mentioned by Josephus[e]. Cerealis, Tribune of the Roman Troops, took this place with a very small force. The Gemara[f] speaks of a considerable Town in the southern part of Idumæa, called Caphar-bisch. This must have been a large City, and not a Fortress only.

CAPHAR-BARUCHA, that is to say, the Village of Blessings, in the Tribe of Judah. S. Jerom[g] says, that S. Paula being at this place, remembred Lot's Cave, and saw the place where formerly Sodom and Gomorrha stood. It is the opinion of some, that the Patriarch Abraham waited so far on the Angels, whom he had had the honour to receive, and who were going to Sodom. Epiphanius[h] fixes this place at three miles distance from Hebron.

CAPHAR-ARIA, the Village or Field of a Lion, between Jerusalem and Askelon, according to Pentinger's Tables.

CAPHARATH, a Village of Galilee, fortified by Josephus, as he says in his own Life, page 1013.

CAPHAR-DAGON, the Village of Dagon, between Diospolis and Jamnia, says Eusebius[i].

CAPHAR-ETHAIA, the place of the Arch-heretick Menander's birth. It was in Samaria[k].

CAPHAR-GAMALA, a place twenty miles distant from Jerusalem. Lucius the Priest, an Author of the fifth Age, who wrote an historical account of the manner wherein S. Stephen came to be found, was of Caphar Gamala. This place seems to have taken its name from Gamaliel, who was the proprietor of it, and took care to have S. Stephen buried there.

CAPHAR-JAMA[l], the same as Jabneel, in the Tribe of Naphtali. (Josh. xix. 33.)

CAPHAR-ORSA, a City of Idumæa, to the West of Jordan.

CAPHAR-SABA, Herod built the City of Antipatris, in honour of his Father Antipater, in the Field of Caphar-Saba[m].

CAPHAR-SALAMA, or Caphar-Sarama; the same perhaps as Caphar-Semelia, mentioned in the History of the discovery of S. Stephen's relicks. It was not far from Jerusalem. (1 Macc. vii. 31.)

CAPHAR-

[c] Concil. Constantinopol. 2. Collat. 4. orat. 58. & Seq. & Epist. Pelag. ii. &c.
[d] Joseph. de Bello. l. iv. c. 33.
[e] Joseph. de Bello. l. iii. c. 18.
[f] Gemar. Babyl. Gittim. 57, 1.
[g] Hieronym. in Epitaph. Paulæ.
[h] Epiphan. contra Hæref. p. 291.
[i] Euseb. in [illegible]
[k] Just. Martyr. Apolog.
[l] Gemar. Jerosol. Megill. fol. 70, col. 1.
[m] Antiq. l. xvi. c. 9.

CAPHAR-SOREK. In S. Jerom's time there was a Town of this name to the North of Eleutheropolis near Saraa [n]. Capher-Sorek is thought to have taken its name from the Brook or Valley of Sorek, Judg. xvi. 4. where Delilah lived.

CAPHAR-TOBA, a Village of Idumæa. Josephus de Bello, l. v. c. 4.

CAPHET-RAMIS, or Caphetra, a city of upper Idumæa, which was demolished by the Tribune Cerealis. Joseph. de Bello. l. v. c. 8.

CAPHTOR, the Island Caphtor,
Deut. ii. 23. Jer. xlvii. 4. Amos ix. 7. Gen. x. 14. Deut. ii. 23. whence came the Caphtorims. Otherwise called, Cretims, Cerethims, or Philistines. The generality of Interpreters believe, that by Caphtoris was signified Cappadocia, and by Caphtorims, the Cappadocians; and that the Philistines and Cerethims came from thence. In the first edition of our Comment upon Genesis chap. x. 14. we said, that the Caphtorims came from the Isle of Cyprus. But we have since endeavoured in a particular dissertation printed before the first Book of Samuel, to shew that they were originally of the Isle of Crete. The reasons which persuaded us, that Caphtor is the Isle of Crete, are these following. The Philistines were Strangers in Palestine; this the Scripture ob-
Gen. x. 14. Jerem. xlvii. 4. Amos ix. 7. serves expresly. The Septuagint always translate this name Allophulos; that is to say, Strangers. Their proper name was Cherethims, as we may see by Ezekiel, Zephaniah, and the first Book of Samuel. Ezekiel speaking against the Philistines has these words, I will stretch
Ezek. xxv. 16. out mine hand upon the Philistines, and I will cut off the Cherethims, and destroy the remnant of the sea coast. Ze-
Zeph. ii. 5. phaniah inveighing against the same People, Wo unto the inhabitants of the sea coasts, the nation of the Cherethites.
1 Sam. xxx. 14, 15. And the Sacred Historian says, that the Amalekites made an Irruption, into the country of the Cherethites; that is to say, of the Philistines, as the sequel of the discourse proves: And afterwards the Kings of Judah had foreign Guards called Cherethites and Pelethites, who were
2 Sam. xv. 18. See the Comment. of the number of the Philistines.

Ezek. xxv. 16. The Septuagint, under the name of Cherethites, understood the Cretans, and by Chereth, Crete [o]. Besides, the Scripture says, that the Philistines came from the Isle of Caphtor [p]. Now we see no Island in the Mediterranean, wherein the marks, whereby the Scripture describes Caphtor and Cherethim, agree better than in the Isle of Crete. The name Cretim or Cherethim is the same with that of Cretenses. We know of a River there called Kairat, of the Goddess Ceres [q]; of the Curetes who brought up Jupiter on mount Ida; and of Curetis the name given to the whole Island. The Cretans are one of the most antient and celebrated People which inhabited the Islands of the Mediterranean. They pretended to have been produced originally out of their own Soil: This Island was already well peopled in the time of the Trojan War; Homer calls it the Island with a hundred Cities [r]. The City of Gaza in Palestine went by the name of Minoa [s], because of Minos King of Crete, who coming into that Country, called this antient City by his own name.

Herodotus [t] acknowledges, that the Cretans were originally all Barbarians, and did not come from Greece. Homer says, that a different Language was spoken in the Isle of Crete, that there were Greeks there, true Cretans, or antient Cretans, Pelasgians, &c. The antient Cretans are the same as the Cherethites, the Pelasgians are the Philistines or Pelethites of the Scripture. Their Language was the same with that of the Canaanites or Phœnicians, that is to say, Hebrew: they were descended as well as Canaan from Ham by Misraim.

The Manners, Arms, Religion and Gods Gen. x. 6. 13, 14. of the Cretans and Philistines were pretty near the same. The Arms of both one and the other were Bows and Arrows. Dagon the God of the Philistines was the same as the Dictimus of the Cretans. Stephen the Geographer says, that Marnas of Gaza, is the Jupiter of the Cretans. The God Belzebub, or the God Fly was in all probability in memory of the Bees which fed Jupiter on mount Ida, and were rewarded by this Deity, with several Prerogatives, particularly he changed their black colour into that of Brass bordering upon Gold [u].

It may be objected against our opinion [x], that in Abraham's time the Philistines were already settled in Palestine, and that the Isle of Crete could not then be very well peopled, much less send Colonies into Palestine; I answer, that Abraham's time, that is to say, the year of the World 2090, or thereabouts, was four hundred and thirty four years from the Deluge, and about three hundred and twenty years from the dispersion of the People at Babel. Mizraim, Grandfather to the Philistines and Caphtorims, had a numerous Family. He was the immediate Son of Ham, and peopled Egypt betimes. The passage from Egypt to the Isle of Crete is neither long nor difficult; and what may not be done in [n] Hieronym. Onomast. in Sorec.

[o] הכרתי את כרתים 70. Ἐξολοθρεύσω Κρῆτας & Zeph. ii. 5 הוי ... כרתים 70. Πάροικοι Κρητῶν & v. 6 והיתה חבל הים נות כרת רעים 70. Καὶ ἔσται Κρήτη νομὴ ποιμνίων.
[p] Jer. xlvii. 4.
[q] Callimach. Hymn. in Dianam.
[r] Homer. catalog. navium.
[s] Steph. Byzant. in Gaza.
[t] Herodot. l. ii. c. 173.
[u] Plin. l. iv. c. 10.
[x] Diodor. l. v. p. 236, 237.
[y] Dict. de Trevoux Caphtorim.

in the ſpace of three or four hundred years? Aptera a City of Crete has a ſenſible relation to Caphtor; this name was given it by King Apterus. Near this City it was, that the Syrens being conquer'd by the Muſes, loſt their wings.

Exod. xxx. 30. CAPITATION of the Jews. Moſes ordained, that every Iſraelite ſhould pay by the head half a ſhekel for his Soul, or for his Redemption, that there might be no plague among the people when they were numbred. And many learned Interpreters are of opinion, that this law was deſigned by Moſes to take place, as often as the people were numbred; and that David having failed in the payment of the half-ſhekel per Head, when he appointed an enquiry to be made into the number of 2 Sam. xxiv. 1. his ſubjects, God therefore puniſhed this neglect with the death of ſo many of them. But the generality maintain, that Moſes here laid this tax upon all the people, payable every year, to provide for the expences of keeping up the Tabernacle, for the ſacrifices, wood, oil, wine, flour, habits, and ſubſiſtence of the Prieſts and Levites. In our Saviour's time this Tribute was paid very exactly to the Temple. See hereafter Didrachma.

Nehem. x. 32. The Iſraelites at their return from the Captivity of Babylon obliged themſelves to pay one third part of a Shekel to the Temple, they in all probability not being in a condition at that time, by reaſon of their poverty, to do more. After the deſtruction of the Temple by the Romans [a], the Jews were compell'd to pay the half Shekel to the Temple of Jupiter Capitolinus, which had been cuſtomarily given to the Temple of Jeruſalem. They levied it throughout all the Provinces where any of them were ſettled, and they had Procurators who carried it to Jeruſalem. Cicero remarks [b], that Flaccus would not ſuffer that to be conveyed thither which was collected among the Jews in Italy, and Titus ſpeaking to the Jews [c], reproaches them with their ingratitude, for employing this tax againſt their Benefactors, and in carrying on the War with the Romans, which the Emperors of Rome had by a particular indulgence permitted them to levy.

The Rabbins obſerve, that even the Prieſts and all the Jews in general, except Women, Children under thirteen years of age, and Slaves, were liable to pay the half Shekel. The Collectors demanded it in the beginning of the month Niſan, but uſed no compulſion with any one till the Feaſt of the Paſſover: then they either conſtrained thoſe to pay, who had not hitherto complied with the demand, or took ſecurity from them. The half Shekel was worth about eighteen pence of our money. Moſes ſays, that it was paid according to the Meaſure of the Sanctuary, that is to ſay, according to the juſteſt Meaſure, the ſtandard whereof was kept in the Temple. See hereafter Weights of the Sanctuary. See 1 Chr. xxiii. 29.

CAPITOLIAS, a City of Paleſtine, which Peutinger's Tables place between Gadara and Edrai, or Adraa beyond Jordan.

CAPITOLINA, the ſirname of Jeruſalem, after Adrian had rebuilt it, and given it the name of Ælia Capitolina.

CAPPADOCIANS. This name is frequently met with in the books of the Old Teſtament. But in all theſe places the Hebrew reads Caphtorim [d], whereby we apprehend ſome ancient People of Crete to be meant, who removed into Paleſtine, and were there known by the name of Cerethims, and Philiſtines.

CAPTIVITY. God generally puniſhed the vices and infidelities of his People, by different Captivities or Servitudes whereinto he permitted them to fall. The firſt of theſe Captivities or Bondages is that of Egypt, from which Moſes delivered them, and ſhould be conſidered rather as an effect of Providence, permitting it for the manifeſtation of his own Glory, than as a puniſhment of the ſins whereof the Iſraelites were guilty. As to the Duration of this Captivity, ſee hereafter Exodus.

After this there are reckoned ſix Bondages or Captivities during the Government of Judges: the firſt under Chuſham-Riſhathaïm King of Meſopotamia, which continued about eight years; the ſecond under Eglon King of Moab, from which they were delivered by Ehud: the third under the Philiſtines, out of which they were reſcued by Shamgar: the fourth under Jabin King of Hazor, from which they were delivered by Deborah and Barak: the fifth under the Midianites, from which Gideon freed them: laſtly, the ſixth under the Ammonites and Philiſtines, during the Judicatures of Jephthah, Ibzan, Elon, Abdon, Eli, Samſon, Samuel.

But the greateſt and moſt remarkable Captivities of the Hebrews were thoſe of Judah and Iſrael, which happened under the Kings of each of theſe Kingdoms.

Tiglath-pilezer, in the year of the world 3264, took ſeveral Cities belonging to the Kingdom of Iſrael, and carried away a great number of Captives, principally from the Tribes of Reuben, Gad, and the half Tribe of Manaſſeh. 2 Kings xv. 29. Next to him Salmaneſer took and deſtroyed Samaria, after [a] Xiphilin. in Veſpaſiano.

[d] כפתורים Caphtorim.
[b] Cicero Orat. pro Flacco.
[c] Joſeph. de Bello, l. vii. c. 13.

after a siege of three years, in 3283, and transplanted the Tribes, which had been spared by Tiglath-pileser, to the Provinces beyond the Euphrates. It is generally believed, that there was no return from this Captivity, and that the ten Tribes never came back again after their dispersion. Josephus [e] assures us, that they never returned after their exile, and that in his time they were still known in the Provinces beyond the Euphrates, where, says he, they are so numerous, that there is no computing their multitude. And S. Jerom writing upon the following words of the Prophet Hosea [f], Call her name Loruhamah; for I will no more have mercy upon the house of Israel, but I will utterly take them away, says, that the Captivity of the ten Tribes still continued, and that in his time they were subject to the King of Persia: Usque hodie Persarum regibus serviunt, & nunquam est eorum soluta captivitas.

2 Kings xxii. 6 xviii. 10, 11.

Nevertheless when we examine carefully the Writings of the Prophets, we find the Return of Israel from the Captivity pointed out in a manner almost as clear as that of the Tribes of Judah and Benjamin. The same Hosea, who is cited to prove, that the ten Tribes did not return from their Captivity, says elsewhere, The number of the children of Israel shall be as the sand of the Sea which cannot be measured nor numbred; and it shall come to pass, that in the place where it was said unto them, Ye are not my people; there it shall be said unto them, Ye are the Sons of the living God. And again, They shall tremble as a bird out of Egypt, and as a dove out of the land of Assyria, and I will place them in their houses, saith the Lord, &c. And Amos, And I will bring again my people Israel from their Captivity, they shall build their ruined Cities and inhabit them, &c. Obadiah: The house of Jacob shall be a fire, and the house of Esau for stubble, and they shall kindle in them and devour them. The captivity of this host of the Children of Israel shall possess that of the Canaanites even unto Zarephat, &c.

Hosea i. 10. Hosea xi. 11. Amos ix. 14. Obadiah v. 18. & 20.

The great Prophets Isaiah, Jeremiah, and Ezekiel, are no less clear to the same purpose. Isaiah: The Lord shall assemble the outcasts of Israel, and gather together the dispersed of Judah from the four corners of the earth. Ephraim shall not envy Judah, and Judah shall not vex Ephraim. Ezekiel received an order from God, to take two pieces of wood, and write on one, for Judah and for the Children of Israel. And upon the other, for Joseph and for all the house of Israel, to join these two pieces of wood, that so one might be made of them, and this to shew the re-union of Judah and Israel. Jeremiah is as express, The house of Judah shall walk with the house of Israel, and they shall come together out of the North, to the land which I have given for an inheritance unto their fathers. See likewise Jeremiah xxxi. 7, 8, 9, 16 17, 20. xvi. 15. xlix. 2, &c. The Reader may consult Zachary ix. 13. x. 6, 10. and Micah ii. 12.

If. xi. 13. 14. See likewise xxvii. 12, 13. Ezek. xxxvii. 16. Jerem. iii. 18.

If with the Prophecies we join the historical Books of Scripture, we shall there see the Israelites as well as those of Judah and Benjamin, were to return from the Captivity. Tobit assures his Son, that the word of the Lord is not faln to the ground, that his Brethren of the ten Tribes, which were dispersed out of the land of Israel, should return thither. Among those who came back with Zerobabel from Captivity, those of Ephraim and Manasseh are reckoned, who settled at Jerusalem, with others belonging to the Tribe of Judah. When Esdras numbred those who returned from the Captivity, he made no other enquiry than whether they were of the race of Israel: Utrum ex Israel essent. And at the first Passover, which was then celebrated in the Temple, there was a Sacrifice of twelve He-goats for the whole house of Israel according to the number of the Tribes. Under the Maccabees, and in our Saviour's time, we see all Palestine peopled with Israelites of all the Tribes indifferently. The Samaritan Chronicle [g] asserts, that in the 35th year of the Pontificate of Abdelus, the Israelites by the permission of King Sauredius, returned from their Captivity to the number of three thousand, under the conduct of Adus Son of Simon.

Tobit. xiv. 6. Vide & xiii. 12, 17. 1 Chron. ix. 34. Ezra ii. 59. Ezra vi. 16. 17. viii. 35.

The Captivities of Judah. They are generally reckoned to be four: the first falls out in the year of the world 3398, under King Jehoiakim, at which time Daniel and his companions were carried captive to Babylon; the second in the 3401, in the seventh of Jehoiakim, when Nebuchadnezzar carried with him 3023 Jews to Babylon; the third in 3406, and in the fourth year of Jehoiachin, when this Prince together with part of his people was sent to Babylon; lastly, the fourth and last in the year of the world 3416. Under Zedekiah; from this Period begin the seventy years Captivity foretold by the Prophet Jeremiah.

2 Kings xxiii. 36. 2 Chron. xxxv. 5, 6. Jerem. xxvi. 1, &c. 2 Kings xxiv. 2. Jerem. lii. 28. 2 Kings xxiv. 14. Jerem.

The Jews were removed to Babylon and Babylonia, by Nebuchadnezzar, who designing to make this City the Capital of the East, transplanted thither very great numbers of the several people subdued by him in different Countries, in order to the better peopling of it. The Jews had Judges and Elders there, who governed them, and decided juridically in all contests according to their Laws. A proof of this xxii. 4. xxxiv. 3. Ezek. xii. 13. Jerem. xxv. 11. xxix. 10.

[e] Joseph. Antiq. l. xi. c. 5. [f] Hieron. in Osee i. v. 6. [g] Chron. Samar. sub an. 3905.

this we see in the story of Susanna, who was tried and condemned to death by the Elders of her own Nation.

Dan. xiii. 41, &c. King Cyrus in the year of the world 3457, and in the first year of his reign at Babylon, permitted the Jews to return into their own Country; but they did not obtain leave to rebuild the Temple of Jerusalem, and the perfect completion of the Prophecies, which foretold the end of the Captivity after the expiration of seventy years, was not seen till the year of the world 3486, when Darius the Son of Hystaspes, by a particular Edict, allowed them to rebuild the Temple. Lastly in 3537 Artaxerxes Longimanus sent back Nehemiah to Jerusalem. The Jews assure us, that none but the bran, the refuse of their Nation return'd from the Captivity, the principal of them continued in the places where they had settled near Babylon, and the country belonging to it, where indeed they grew very numerous after the transplanting of them thither under Nebuchadnezzar. (Ezra i. 1. Ezra vii. 1, 7, 8.)

Since the destruction of the Temple by the Romans, the Hebrews boast, that they have always had their Heads or particular Princes.

Princes of the Captivity in the East and West. The Prince of the Captivity in the East governed the Jews who dwelt at Babylon, in Chaldæa, Assyria, and Persia; and the Prince of the Captivity in the West governed those who dwelt in Judæa, Egypt, Italy, and in other parts of the Roman Empire [h]. The Jews make a great difference between the Patriarchs of Judæa and the Princes of the Captivity at Babylon. The first are called Rabban, and the other Rabbana; these descended from David in a direct line by the Males, whereas the Patriarchs descended from him only by the Females. They say moreover, that the house of David is in all its vigour, because there are illustrious persons of this Family at Bagdad, among whom the Princes of the Jewish Nation are chosen, as has been always the custom from time immemorial. This is the Story the Jews tell us.

The Prince of the Captivity who resided in Judæa, resided commonly at Tiberias, and assumed the title of Rosch-Abboth, Head of the Fathers or Patriarchs. He presided in Assemblies, and in the Synagogues; he decided the important affairs of the Nation, and cases of Conscience. He levied taxes to provide for the expences of his visits; he had Officers under him, who were dispatched through the Provinces for the execution of his orders. The Jews maintain, that the Institution of these Patriarchs preceded the destruction of the Temple by an hundred years; for they reckon, that thirty years before the Birth of Jesus Christ, Hillel sirnamed the Babylonian came to Jerusalem, was consulted concerning the celebration of the Feast of the Passover, which fell out this year upon Saturday, and that people were so well satisfied with his decision, as to make him Patriarch of their Nation, and that his posterity succeeded him till the fifth Age of the Christian Church, in which the Patriarchs of Judæa were abolished.

The Jewish Authors are not agreed concerning the number of these Patriarchs; some reckon thirteen from Hillel, others only ten. Their names are as follow:

1. Hillel the Babylonian.
2. Simeon his Son.
3. Gamaliel the Son of Simeon.
4. Simeon II. Son of Gamaliel.
5. Gamaliel II. Son of Simeon.
6. Simeon III. Son of Simeon II.
7. Judas Son of Simeon III.
8. Gamaliel III. Son of Judas.
9. Judas II. Son of Gamaliel III.
10. Hillel II. Son of Judas.
11. Judas III. Son of Hillel II.
12. Hillel III. Son of Judas.
13. Gamaliel IV. Son of Hillel.

See Basnage's History of the Jews, l. iv. c. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5. where he gives a very large account of these Princes of the Captivity in the West, and examines particularly whatsoever the Jews relate of them, shewing that in the whole there is a great deal false and dubious.

As to the Princes of the Captivity of Babylon or the East [i], we know neither the original nor succession of them; it appears only, that they were not in being before the end of the second Century. They did not concern themselves about making Princes of the Captivity while the Temple subsisted; the Eastern Jews as well as Western continued subject to the High Priest. No Historian has said any thing of these supposed Princes of the Captivity before the destruction of the Temple. The first of these Princes who appeared upon the stage, was Huna, who did not live till the close of the second Century, and from Huna to the perfection of the Talmud, that is to say, for the space of three hundred years, they scarce produce three. The Jews affirm, that among these Princes of the Captivity of Babylon, who were all of the tribe of Judah and race of David, was found the Scepter of Judah mentioned by the Patriarch Jacob, and that in Judæa, among the Patriarchs spoken of above, was found the Law-giver taken notice of in the same place. Gen. xlix. 10.

The

[h] Basnage Hist. des Juifs, t. ii. l. iv. c. 3.

[i] Basnage Hist. des Juifs, l. iv. c. 6, 7, &c.

The Jewiſh Authors deſcribe very pompouſly the manner of appointing the Prince of the Captivity in the Eaſt [k]. The Heads of the neighbouring Univerſities, the Senators and People came in crowds to Babylon. The Prince of the Captivity was ſeated on a Throne, and the Head of the Univerſity of Syria harangued him, exhorting him not to abuſe his power. The Thurſday following the Heads of the ſeveral Univerſities laid their hands on him in the Synagogue. On Saturday morning he was conducted in great Ceremony to the Synagogue; there he made a ſermon, and gave the bleſſing to the people. Some days after he went to the King of Babylon's Audience, who did him very great honours.

The Princes of the Captivity in the Eaſt have ſometimes dwelt at Mahazia, but their reſidence was transferr'd from thence to Babylon or Bagdad.

There there were ten Courts of Juſtice in which he preſided. There were likewiſe eight and twenty Synagogues, among which that of the Prince was diſtinguiſhed by the beauty and magnificence of the Structure. Before the preſs, wherein the Law was ſhut up, was a Pew raiſed ten ſteps from the ground, in which ſeats were placed for the Prince of the Captivity and his Family. His Dominion extended over all the Jews diſperſed throughout Aſſyria, Chaldæa, and the whole Kingdom of the Parthians. Benjamin of Tudela, who lived in the twelfth Century, ſays, that he found even in his time a Prince of the Captivity there. But there have been none known there ſince, and perhaps they were ſuppreſſed before.

It were to be wiſhed, that the Succeſſion and Hiſtory of theſe Princes of the Captivity, both in the Eaſt and Weſt, were better proved, and more connected: the Jewiſh Hiſtorians are very unaccurate, and Hiſtorians that are not of their Nation ſay nothing at all relating to theſe Princes of the Captivity. I except the Patriarch of the Weſt, of Paleſtine, or Egypt, of whom the Emperor Adrian, Origen, S. Jerom, and the Theodoſian Code make mention; but they take no notice of the Prince of the Captivity at Babylon, becauſe he lived under the dominion of the Perſians.

After the firſt intelligence brought to Portugal, of the diſcovery which had been made of Preſtejan or King of Ethiopia, which reported this Prince to be of the race of Solomon [l], that all his ſubjects were circumciſed, that they obſerved the Sabbath, and abſtained from ſwine's fleſh, and had diverſe other Jewiſh cuſtoms, it was immediately believed, that theſe people were Jews. As there were two Jews choſen among others to make this diſcovery, they did not fail to aggravate all theſe circumſtances to thoſe of their own Nation. This was ſufficient without any thing more to perſuade them that there was a Jewiſh King in Africk: from whence they drew all the conſequences that might moſt favour their prejudices.

Rabbi Abarbanel who was then at Liſbon, in ſome places of his Comments on the Prophets, made uſe of the firſt relations given by the Portugueze, concerning the great number of Jews found by them in the Indies. They of Conſtantinople had a Spaniſh Tranſlation printed of a ſuppoſititious Letter from Preſtejan in Hebrew characters, and it was every where diſperſed in ſeveral languages. But it was not long before the falſity of this opinion of the Jews was diſcovered; for the Portugueze having got admittance into Ethiopia, diſcovered, that notwithſtanding theſe people had many Jewiſh practices, for which ſome modern Authors have in vain endeavoured to juſtify them, they were nevertheleſs Chriſtians. Thus the whole ſyſtem which had been built on this foundation, to prove that the Scepter was not yet departed from Judah, of itſelf fell to the ground.

CARAITES, a ſort of Sect among the Jews. This name comes from the Hebrew, Caraï, or Caraïm [m], which ſignifies perſons conſummate in the ſtudy of Scripture, and adhering cloſely to the Text and Letter of Scripture. This is the diſtinguiſhing mark of the Caraïtes. They are oppoſite to the Rabbiniſts in this particularly, that whereas the Rabbiniſts admit of all the Traditions of the Ancients, the Caraïtes ſtrictly keep to the Text and Letter of the Scriptures, and do not eaſily receive what others would paſs upon them for Traditions, till they have firſt carefully examined them, and are well aſſured, that they are really tranſmitted from the Ancients, and contain nothing contrary to the Text and Spirit of Scripture [n].

The Caraïtes are ſaid to glory in a deſcent from Eſdras, and to prove the Succeſſion of their Churches by an exact Catalogue of all thoſe perſons, who have either taught, or contended againſt Caraïſm. There are ſome who boaſt of a ſtill greater Antiquity;

[k] Baſnage Hiſt. des Juifs, t. ii. l. iv. c. 6. Abbot Renaudot in his Notes upon a Journey to China by two Arabians in the ninth Century, p. 332, 333. ſays, that what the Jews tell us of this Prince or Head of the Captivity is true; that the manner of inſtalling him, was almoſt the ſame as that of the Chriſtian Patriarchs in the ſame Country. Any one may read what he ſays of this matter.

[l] Renaudot. Notes ſur le Voyage de deux Arabes, &c.

[m] קראים Karaïm.

[n] Morinus and others maintain, that they receive no Traditions at all. See Baſnage's Hiſt. of the Jews, t. vi. l. ix. c. 1. p. 206, 207, 208, &c.

Antiquity; for they who live at prefent in Poland and Lithuania, pretend to be defcended from the ten Tribes, which were led into Captivity by Salmanefer. The Rabbinifts, who always run counter to the Caraïtes, inform us, that the Sect of the Caraïtes was in being at Jerufalem in the time of Alexander the Great; that Jaddus, who was Principal of the Rabbinifts performed a miracle in the prefence of this Prince, which Ananus and Crefcanatus the Chief of the Caraïtes could not do. All this deferves not to be any way regarded. It is believed [o], with more probability, that the Caraïtes did not appear till about the eighth Age, or at leaft that their Sect was then reftored by Ananus, when the Talmudifts endeavoured to authorize their Traditions, and rank them with the moft facred truths and practices of Religion. At that time there was a good number of the Jews, who were zealous for the Law, that oppofed this attempt, and were therefore called Caraïtes, as people adhering only to the Text of Scripture.

The Rabbinifts charge the Caraïtes [*] with the generality of thofe Errors, that are maintained by the Sadducees; as the denying the Immortality of the Soul, and the Exiftence of Spirits. But the Caraïtes reject thefe accufations, and fhew the purity of their Faith, and their particular fenfe of thefe Articles. There are fome very good Caraïte Authors, who may be confulted with advantage, by enquirers into the true meaning of the Scripture; but few of them are printed; for the moft part they are in manufcript, and lye concealed in great Libraries. They expect the Meffiah, whom with the reft of the Jews, they look upon as a temporal King; they forbid all computation of the years wherein he is to appear. They reject all thofe books, which are not in the old Canon of the Jews, and require an implicit faith in the Holy Scripture, without permitting to examine, whether any article of the Law be true or falfe. They have neither Phylacteries, nor Parchments upon the doors of their houfes, nor thofe Frontlets, which the Jews wear upon their fore-heads. They call the reft of the Jews, bridled Affes, when they fee them thus in their Synagogues with Parchments on their forehead; the paffages, wherein thefe Phylacteries are mentioned, and which are underftood literally by other Jews, they explain figuratively. There are Caraïtes not only at Conftantinople, in Syria, Paleftine, and beyond the Euphrates; but in Poland alfo and Lithuania.

Wolfius in his account of the Caraïtes [p], defcribes likewife their Original, Progrefs and Fall, from the Memoirs of Mordecai one of this Sect. Alexander Jannæus King of the Jews having put to death all the Doctors of the Law, and almoft all the learned Men of the Nation, occafioned the Schifm which divided the Jews. Simeon the Son of Setah, and the Queen's Brother, having been refcued by his Sifter from the King's fury, fled into Egypt, where he imagined the fyftem of pretended Traditions. At his return to Jerufalem he fpread abroad his Vifions, and interpreted the Law after his mode, making his boafts of being entrufted with thofe particular notices of things, which God communicated to Mofes. He had many Difciples and Oppofers: the latter of thefe afferted, that all which God fpake to Mofes was written. This divifion produced two Sects, that of the Caraites, who adhered only to the Text, and that of the Traditionifts, who fupported the Traditions. Hillel diftinguifhed himfelf among the latter, and Judah the Son of Sabbai among the former.

Wolfius places the Scribes and Sadducees mentioned in the Gofpel among the Caraites; but the Traditionifts otherwife called Rabbinifts or Pharifees, were the ftrongeft and had the advantage of the Caraïtes. They had funk intirely in the eighth Century, had they not been fupported by fome of their Sect, and in particular by Rabbi Anan. In the ninth Century Rabbi Solomon, the Son of Jerucham, imitated the zeal of Anan, and attacked Saadias Gaon. The following Ages were not lefs fortunate to the Caraïtes, and produced feveral celebrated Writers. Their Sect has become fomething weaker ever fince the fourteenth Century.

Trigland, who printed a Treatife at at Delph in 17[illegible]3. concerning the Caraïtes, explains the original of them in a manner fomething different from Wolfius. In fome fhort time after the Death of the Prophets, the Jews were divided concerning works of Supererogation; fome maintaining that they were neceffary, according to the Traditions; others adhering to what is written in the Law; thefe laft gave birth to the Sect of Caraïtes, who value themfelves upon their defcent from the Prophets Haggai, Zachary, Malachi, and Efdras. One of their principal Authors [q] fays, that after much fearch he had difcovered, [o] Bafnage t. vi. l. ix. c. 2. p. 225, &c.

[p] Wolf. Notitia Car. at Hamburg and Lipfick. 1714.

[q] Rab. Mof. Refchitzi.

[*] They who would fee a more particular Hiftory of thefe Caraïtes, and their Opinions from the time of their Original to this prefent Age, may find a very copious and entertaining account of both in Bafnage, Hift. des Juifs. l. ii. c. 16, 17.

discovered, that in the time of John Hircanus and Alexander his Son King of the Jews, Rabbi Judah the Son of Thaddai, set up in opposition to Rabbi Simeon the Son of Setach, who endeavoured to introduce a new Law; this Judah therefore is one of the first Authors of the Caraïtes. The Mishnah makes mention of this Sect where it speaks of the Tephilims; which shews their Antiquity.

CARAITES. We have again another History of their Original from Dr. Prideaux [1]. The compilation of the Talmud appearing in the beginning of the sixth Century, all people of good sense were so shocked with the trifles, the stuffs, the ridiculous and incredible fables it was cram'd with, and to see at the same time a set of men should dare to assert all this to come from God, that many gave it up, and were resolved to found their Faith only upon the Word of God contained in the Scriptures, looking upon the Talmud as a meer human composition, not to be received without examination. This refusal to admit the Talmud an as irrefragable rule of Faith, did not however for a long time produce any Schism amongst them.

But about the year 750 Anan a Babylonish Jew of the race of David, and his Son Saul, declared openly for the written Word of God alone, exclusive of Traditions which were not conformable to it. Their declaration produced a Schism: they who maintained the Talmud with all the Traditions, being almost all Rabbins, or Disciples of the Rabbins, were called Rabbinists: the others who rejected human Traditions, receiving the Scripture only for a Rule, were called Caraïtes, or Scripturists, from the word Cara, which in the Babylonish language signifies Scripture.

The Jews [2] pretend, that the true cause of this Schism proceeded from the Ambition of Anan, who exasperated at his being refused the degree of Gaon, that is to say, Excellent, (for this is a title given to certain Doctors,) and out of humour at his disappointment in pursuing after the office of Prince of the Captivity, to which he had pretended as one descended from David, gave the first rise to the Schism we are speaking of.

The Caraïtes pass for the most learned of the Jewish Doctors: there are few of them in the West: the greatest part of them are in Poland, Muscovy, and the East. About the middle of the last Age there was a particular account taken of their number: there were two thousand of them in Poland, at Caffa in Crim Tartary twelve thousand, at Cairo three hundred, at Damascus two hundred, at Jerusalem thirty, in Babylon an hundred, in Persia six hundred: in all four thousand, four hundred, and thirty: the whole of them together makes but a very small number, compared with the gross of the Nation which is of the Rabbinists party.

The Rabbinists or Traditionists have so great an aversion for the Caraïtes [3], that they will have no alliances, nor even any conversation with them; they treat them as Mamzerim, or bastards, because they observe none of the constitutions of the Rabbins in their marriages, divorces and purifications of their Wives. Their aversion is such, that if a Caraïte would turn Rabbinist, the other Jews would not receive him.

To give an example of the Method of the Caraïtes, we may take what is said in Moses: Thou shalt bind my words upon thy hands, and they shall be as frontlets between thine eyes, and thou shalt write them upon the posts of thy house and upon thy gates. (Deut. vi. 8, 9.) The Rabbinists understand all this literally, and practise it accordingly. The Caraïtes on the contrary believe, that God by these words intended nothing more than that the Law of God ought always to be present to the mind of every Israelite, whether they go in or out, &c. In like manner Moses forbids them to seeth a kid in his mother's milk; (Exod. xxiii. 19. xxxiv. 26. Deut. xiv. 21.) which the Rabbinists understand literally, or as if the eating both the flesh and milk at the same meal were a thing prohibited. The Caraïtes on the contrary explain this by another passage in Deuteronomy, Thou shalt not take the dam with the young, &c. (Deut. xxii. 6.) It is a precept of humanity given by God to his people.

Rabbi Caleb, a Caraïte, reduces the particulars wherein the Rabbinists differ from the Caraïtes, to three points. 1°. The Caraïtes deny that the oral Law comes from Moses, and reject the Cabbala or Traditions. 2°. They have an abhorrence for the Talmud. 3°. They observe the Sabbath much more rigorously in many things than the Rabbinists. Moreover, they set no limits almost to the prohibited degrees of Marriage; and as to their copies of the Law, they have them as well as the Rabbinists, but concern themselves little about dictions full or defective; they are nevertheless of opinion according to Peringer, that the vowel Points are derived from Moses.

CARBUNCLE, in Latin, Carbunculus, in Greek, Anthrax, and in Hebrew, Nophec. A Carbuncle is as it were a large Ruby or Grenat, of a dark red, and of a deep colour, something like bull's blood. It

[1] Prideaux History of the Jews, t. iv.

[2] Rab. Abrah. Ben. David Cab. historica. Zachut in Juchasin. David Ganz in Zemach David.

[3] Leo of Modena's Ceremonies of the Jews, Pt. v. c. 1.

A PLAN OF MOUNT CARMEL

1. Mount Carmel
2. Elijah's Cave
3. Elisha's Cave
4. The Monks Caves
5. The Great Convent of the Carmelites
6. Another Cave
7. The first Monastery built for the Carmelites
8. Elijah's Well
9. The place of Elijah's famous Sacrifice
10. The Brook Kishon
11. The City of Hepha
12. The City of Ptolemais formerly called S^t. John d'Acre
13. The port of Ptolemais or S^t. John d'Acre
14. The River Belus

$ @ G>4? D $

1 ' ' % + 0 % ' $ '/"" 3 "
+ #1" @ $ / $ # ' # ! , + , ' 3 `
' / , 4 ,' 0 ' " # ' $ 0 0 #
, 4 , ! 0 - A # # / " , / ' %
4 % " " #
/ , 111 & $ ' $ $ i)W
- ' 0 " " + 0 + ' " " `
/ / , + + ! . % @ # % 0 # ' / A # $ @`
/ , # " JE , ' ' 1 ' # @ % '
1 & % + / " " / " # , $ V , A
4 # , + + / ' / `
$ 3 & 7 + @ ' $ % # A' % / +
D ' 6A 7 + ! . . & ' - A % % + / ' # +
000 9 8: % % @ # / ' /
+
!! VKA " ' / 1 1 ' / "
5 $ 7 + . , &' TT K OK # # 8 $ 4' \ , . '" @ 5 / $, ! ! 0 <
' $ 2 9 $ # ++ 8 !
Y/ ' 9 " " ' $ C & , . : ' 0 JT
4 3 ' / + W 111 $ # %
/ , # % 4 , ' + #
0 " , , ' $. / JE
? 1 !
' / # + ' $ # , A ! %
9/ # 4 # , # . # E
4' ! . 9 &
8 . ' # _ * ! _J
1 (& , 5 , A , ' / #
. ' / # / " # + ' # 5 ? ! 0 JN'
$ $ / A" >(9 4?4'
: ' 2* ? & & 7 ! E 3 4 ' " 5 . %
== #
M 7 + K4 / , # #% . 66 #% 2 4" ($ + ! 9
$ " 4 # - . : < 9 # # +
' (! % , / # ' # 2 % #+ # % 4 # '
$ / . @ / ' \ ! " _& $ '
" 0 / % / + , + " / , @ f V # , ' #
' $! " # + ' ! ? #A ' $ % + # " $
/ $ " % " ! 0 , @ % / " 0 / $ # , 0
11 / / 0 , " / c
(% # >(# @ % 0 4' / " * ' & ?4 / + $ " / ` / '# / % 0 / &
, @) G # ' ` $ % ' 0 # 9
0 , 4 . 4 $ @ , " + # / ' A
" , / , + # 0 " % / + , / #
& , * # " % (K4 '
/ " & , ! . + - '" # %
& % # ' + * # V $ " # , $ + (
. $ / " & $ @ $, ' ,
/ , / # # % + # # # # " G 2 4
" / " # 4 % $ $ $ $ JL
% ' " " # # @ % ' 5V , / # ?4 < " * '
% 2 4 ' ` "
/ & $ " , + + V " "5 N Q Q . 3 ' ; D'
% # + / & 1 2 (
% ' " % " # 4 0 F & $ # / ' (
. ># 2 V . 9 #5 " # , / ' %
4G ! A / . 9 & ' Y/ $ "A
4 / (4 % ' ` / V ! $ " . $ 2
/ # $ # * / #
& $ " ' # ! " ! ! 0 / " _S
% # 0 1 % 4 5

. * # /' 3 " $! 0 N & # $ Y/ ' '"
5 : ' " F # W & M 0 # # $ ' " F F '
DT N " 1 0 P W 3 / / $ > * # 9 & $: A
W 5 # M< 9

ʿ$ʿ ʿ B!CC1

ʿG ʿ 4ʿ ʿ 9 ʿ ʿ 13 1 ʿ 9T ʿ' ʿ ʿ, +/"Aʿ
ʿ ʿ ʿʿ 9 #W + "ʿ! ʿ 9.ʿ ʿ ʿ" ʿ ʿʿ / +ʿ ʿ. ʿ ʿ
ʿ ʿ ʿ ʿ 4ʿ / ʿ A ʿ% ʿ#% ʿ ʿ ʿ
4ʿ ʿ ʿʿ #ʿ! 4ʿ ʿLʿ ʿ ʿ ʿʿ " ʿ ʿ ʿ$ ʿ / ʿ
U ʿ / ʿ ʿ 4 4ʿ ʿʿ 4ʿ ʿ ʿ ʿ, % ʿ * 9
5 ʿ ʿ ʿ4 ʿ% ʿ, ʿ/" ʿ0 ʿ 0!ʿ ʿ% ʿ ʿ% ʿ$
%ʿ #ʿ0 ʿ @ʿ ʿ, / #ʿ% ʿ " 0 ʿ [5V '0 ʿ JS
1 ʿ % #ʿ % ʿ #ʿ /"ʿ #ʿ # % ʿ 1ʿ 1 ʿ ʿ / ʿ% ʿ' " Aʿ
/" ʿ ʿ 0 ʿ #ʿ %ʿ ʿ # ʿ ʿ ʿ% ʿ' $ʿ ʿ #ʿ ʿ, % ʿ
'ʿ @ʿ $ʿ #ʿ' ʿ ʿ ʿ/ ʿ& ʿ ʿ 'ʿK I ʿ #ʿ ʿ @ ʿ% '
ʿ4 " ʿ% ʿ8ʿQ \%J<Mʿ+0 ʿ ʿʿ . ʿ' $ #ʿ #ʿ " ' #
$ʿ ʿ ʿ $ $ ʿ /" ʿ3 ʿ "ʿ % ʿ ʿ3 $ + ʿ ʿ ʿ #ʿ% ʿ' Aʿ
22*ʿ % ʿ ʿ ʿ ʿ 4ʿ ʿ $ ʿ # #ʿ ʿ g& ʿ % #ʿ 4ʿ
ʿ ʿ ʿ ʿ ʿ/ 4 ʿ ' $ʿ ʿ $ʿ' $ʿ ʿ 4ʿ7 Mʿ
U ʿ. ʿ ʿ ʿ ʿ ʿ% ʿ + ' ʿ ! $ ʿ, / #ʿ ʿ
(' $ X , / ʿ 4ʿ #0 # #ʿK ʿ
& ʿ% ʿ'0 ʿ' ʿ ʿʿ 'ʿ ` #ʿ '
ʿV ʿ', ʿ" ʿ ʿ% ʿ +ʿ 11ʿ ʿ ʿ / ʿ ʿʿ% ʿ ʿ
% # ʿ ʿ $ #ʿ% ʿ1 ʿ "@ % ʿʿ + ʿ ʿ ʿʿ "$ ʿ ʿ
ʿ ʿ# %ʿ 0 ʿ ʿ 0 ʿ I ʿ # , #ʿ, ʿ * 4ʿ ʿ ʿ'% #
\'" @ʿ)ʿ > ʿʿ ʿ J#ʿ2 Q ʿ * ʿ ʿ* 4'ʿ W ʿ ʿ0
ʿ ' +ʿ / ʿ, ʿ ' ʿ ʿʿ ʿ ! ''0ʿ
+ ʿ & ʿ% ʿ ʿ, / # ʿ
K2 U ' 4ʿ 4ʿ/ / ' ' ʿ ʿ Y#ʿ 'ʿ3 $' 6ʿ ʿ ʿ ʿ 9ʿ
ʿ2 U ʿ U ' 4ʿ ʿ 'ʿ% ʿ ʿ',/
/" ʿ% / 4ʿ $ @ʿ ʿ ʿ 1ʿ (1 ʿ 3 " ʿ # # #
ʿ ʿ ʿ% / ʿ ʿ ʿ ʿ@ #ʿ ' $ʿ * T ʿ% ' ʿ / ʿ #ʿ3 ʿ
'ʿ ʿ $ #ʿ 0 ʿ% ʿ% ʿ& ʿ ʿʿ , ʿ%ʿ ʿ / Y/ #ʿ% ʿ
ʿ 0ʿ ʿ ʿ ʿ$ #ʿ/ ʿ ʿʿ" Aʿ & ʿ#% ʿ" , , ʿ ʿ/"" ʿ ʿʿ ʿ
" ʿ ʿ ʿ ʿ ʿ ʿ $ $ ʿ ʿ ʿʿ !ʿ JDʿ #
& ʿ " / + ʿ #ʿ %ʿʿ. ʿ ʿ 5 ʿ ʿ ʿ ʿ< ʿ ʿ !ʿ
$ ʿ 'ʿ ʿ ʿ@ #ʿ ʿʿ % ʿ 11ʿ ʿ ʿ,ʿʿ ʿ ʿ
1' ʿ! ʿ 4ʿ ʿ ʿ 5, / ʿ ʿ * T ʿʿ & ʿ ʿ ʿ+ ʿ#0 ' ʿ
J=Aʿ SEʿ ʿ ʿ16/" ' ʿ ʿʿ $ʿ% ʿ ʿ @ʿ " ʿ +ʿ ʿ" ʿ ʿʿ ʿ, # ʿ
' ʿ% ʿ& ʿ @ʿ ' ʿ ʿʿ ʿ %ʿ 2Y C #ʿ ʿ ʿ% ʿʿ ʿ% ʿ8 / Aʿ
/ ʿ 0 +ʿ$ #ʿ $ ʿʿ ʿ ʿʿ" 9ʿ # ʿ & ʿ3 " ' ʿ. ʿ !" ʿ
ʿ ʿ " ʿ ʿʿ ʿ! 4ʿ # Aʿ ʿ, ʿ 2 4ʿ ʿ1 , Aʿ
#ʿ ʿ ʿ1 , ʿ ʿʿ ʿ ʿ,ʿ / #ʿ ʿ ʿʿ ʿ" 4ʿ ʿ Kʿ ʿ
ʿ" ʿ/ # ʿ ʿ, / #ʿ , / ʿ% ʿ . ʿ / # ' #ʿ ʿ
1 ʿ #ʿ/ # ʿ / ʿ' ʿ ʿʿ ʿ ʿ%ʿ $ +ʿ ʿ1 , ʿ ʿʿ" 4ʿ
Lʿ $ʿ! ʿ 1" @ +ʿ ' ʿ ʿ 4ʿ 9ʿ ʿ ʿ % ʿ ʿʿ #ʿ ʿ ʿ! ?ʿ
LQʿ / ʿ A ʿ ʿ ʿ 4ʿ ʿ 9ʿ & ' ʿ ʿ ʿ # #ʿ ʿ1 , ʿ
! ʿʿ ʿ(ʿʿ ! 4ʿ ? 4ʿ ʿ ʿ7 +ʿ ' ' ʿ% 4ʿ ʿ ʿ2 4ʿʿ , ʿ #ʿ
' #ʿ ʿ3 4ʿ ʿʿ ʿ(#ʿ $ ʿ ʿ ' ʿ $ʿ / # #ʿ ʿ ʿʿ
ʿʿ ʿ ʿ ʿ$ ʿ & ʿ #ʿ' $ ʿ ʿ ?? 4ʿʿ 4ʿ ʿ ʿ ʿ ʿ
ʿ ʿ ʿ" ' ʿ ʿʿ ʿ" 4ʿ 3 " ʿ - 4ʿ ʿ /$ ' #ʿ Aʿ
4ʿ #ʿ ʿ 4ʿ% ʿ % ʿ ʿ ʿ 4ʿ ʿ ʿ% ʿ ʿʿ
/ #ʿ ʿ ! / ʿ3 " ʿ, ʿ"/ +ʿ $ʿ ʿ % ʿ $" ! ʿ ʿ ʿ ʿ% ʿ
/ # ʿ / # ʿ # #ʿ% ʿ+ ʿ ʿ , @ʿ #ʿ / #ʿ #ʿ ʿ ʿ (Aʿ
ʿ ʿ ʿʿ 2 4ʿ. ʿ ʿ ʿ +/ + ʿ #ʿ% ʿ ʿʿ 0 +ʿ% ʿ ʿ' $ ʿ
4ʿ ʿ ʿ U ʿ ʿ 4ʿ ʿ ʿ% ʿ ʿ/' ʿ $ +ʿ ʿ 4ʿʿ ʿ
4ʿ ʿ ʿ 4ʿʿ ʿ ʿ ʿ ''/ ʿ / ʿ ʿ% 4ʿ / +ʿ ʿʿ ʿ
4ʿʿ 'ʿ ʿ ʿ ʿʿ ʿ& "ʿ ʿ ʿ 4'
& - ʿ ʿ , #ʿ ʿ' Aʿ ʿ ''ʿ ʿ % ' # +ʿ ʿ ʿ
#ʿ ʿ ʿ ' ʿ ʿʿ! ?ʿ #ʿ ʿ ʿ 4ʿ #ʿ ʿ $ $, ʿ ʿʿ ʿ
6ʿ 9+@ʿ 0 /4G2 G2 J K ʿʿ T ? A' ʿ ʿ ' 5 Q% , + + ' / Aʿ
0 ʿʿ;;ʿʿ 4ʿ $ ʿ ʿ2 ʿ ʿ 95 ʿ
ʿ& #ʿ ʿF 4ʿ 9ʿ & ' ʿ ʿ" /', ʿ ' ʿ / ʿ Aʿ
4ʿ ʿʿ / ʿ ʿ ʿ& ! ʿ ' #ʿ 66ʿ% ʿ% ʿ ʿ %ʿ ʿ ʿ 4ʿ
ʿʿ 4ʿ #ʿ2 ʿ% ʿ ʿ ʿ% /#ʿ ʿ" 0ʿ ʿ ? 4ʿ #ʿ
ʿ'+ ' ʿ ʿ ʿ ʿʿ2 4ʿ ʿ 9ʿ ʿ ʿ ʿ, ʿ ʿ' $ ʿ3 " ʿ ʿ
ʿ % ʿ' $ ʿ% ʿ ʿ" ʿ' $! ʿ 5" ' +ʿ ʿ% ʿʿ ʿ ʿ% 4ʿ
' ʿ ʿ& # ʿ 'ʿ ʿ ʿ ʿʿ 4ʿ ʿ - %
% / #

& / ʿ ʿ 6ʿ * + ʿ- +ʿ
6 # ʿJʿ ʿ ʿJ<Dʿ Nʿ ʿ" #ʿ /$ʿ" ' $
>ʿ3 ʿ . ʿ* ʿ ʿʿ)

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

$ G L<P R &

- # * / $ $? "" ' g
/ " ! N 4 ! ! 0 ? % 9 # / @
& A) ' ' " # ' $ / $
' / & $ 11 . '/ ? 4"
3 " ' % " A & J 1 0 / $, $
' 0 # * ' T . 4 % (
M @ ! 0 JD 1 ' . # " &
& & & % # # 6 ? , / #
A $ ' $? g # 8 '/ # "
4 % + $ + / / g #
% '% # $ " ! / 36 C
- 6 # 0 % / & 1 , $ # ' %
% " # # % $ @ % # %6 " A
" " , # & # " / , #
% $ 0 + " % % " # ' $
" , # * 4 $ + ?4) " /
- # " # 0 # # $ '/ / + 3
/ # # / + % $ " & % #
' 0 # # % % @ # % # 0 # # , / / $, $ $
9A5 K W [9 $F 0 ! % & 0 # ' 0 V
5 # $, @ A # 9 # # (
-=US-U # % " + 0 # 1 , $ 0 A # # # > . # "
W6 # " V # " / $ @ / . e & " # -5 " # $ $ # $ 0 " ' " '/
, / # " ' + ' $ % & 4 4 #
0 1 # ' ' " $ 0 # A @ F % , / A
0 % " # ' " / " 3 + , % - '" '
! ! 0 JT * " JE " / # ' / # #
& 3' $ ' ! " $ ' / + # @ H
% % % % 0 % $ # && & & , "
3' 5 E ' O : ' ! ! 7Z
K - 4 / / & (- 0 (9
/ $ K + ' g # ' # / $,
> % # $ # / " " . 4 3 0 % %
' ' $ / # " 'A + + 4 /
' + % % $ % % # g # / . 0 %
& 2 ! O # / # " % % " $ '
% ' + - / K2 "" $ + 1 ,
4 % " 4 % # ! # #
4 / , / # " / # " / $
4 / & + / % % # " ' #
% # 0 % 0 , " # M # %
1 $ # $ / ! $ " $ # $
+ 0 % $ $ 9 D
& 1 T ? - * K - ! ! %T * ?9
$ % ' + 3 g '
(\ %6 ' V C * % , / # $
" , / # ` (
, # $ # $ $, " ?'
] K G'JB' / (Y / & +
/ 4 4 " 4 # # ! T ,
4 ! 4 $ '
@ % # + $ 6 0 # * 4 , 9
' 0 / 0 ' $ $ F g * 4 # , &
4 U K T / $ % " , $ % U T 4 4' " / , / $ $ #
1 6 (7 7 & $ + ` # @ # #
? 1 + @ 5 / 0 + ` % & ' $ * 4 % ' / # & / / . 4 ` / " % ' & % `
? , ' ! # / + ` ' 0 , 9
/ % # # $ # , $ % ' # 0 " %
' 4B ' 6 ? , / ' % % ' / # &
0 # , 8 '/ 9 " / " % %
0 /

W 3 + $ $ ' ") - F M6 M A $ # " /
6 / + # ' N " , JD . : ' " # # 11 1 0 8Y

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

* (1

@ / ; @ LS_ J @ / A

I Q# I # # 9 ' ' 9 $ ' 0 ' # + $ # $ ' #
& +H , ' X R ' ' $ / , 0 $ / $ M #
$! $, # 5 + 5 % % Y'' & # : / + $ V
6 0 $ 5 , 0 0' $ $ 8 % A
+ # # / 5 ' " % - ' # + ' "A
% @ " " ' % $ # ! Q # " # #0 * % $ @ $
@ & / ! % 0 % ' # # 9 5
+ % $, ' ' @ ' AV , / , Q 3' $ % 9 +
$, # ' + , @ $ - 5 8 9 , % / # ,
% " " # & % , # ' ' # / ,
4K4 $ % ' " $ ' @ % % ' +
' . - # # , ' # # 0 + 1 ' $ ' W
' @ % h # % A 99 " $ # ,
@ # % , " ' # : , Y / I - + H * # A
, ' / # + 5 $ % / % ' 5 % % + AV
$ ' ' %C 0 0 , `
" / ? $ @ - #
21 : 4 / 0 / 4 + / ' 0 / # ' # % % / # @
/ $L 4 # ' ' # 5
/ ? / 9 G , " 7 + 2 G $ # ' 3
. 5 2 4 / 9Y / ' % 0 ' A
- % 4 % * A
$ ' " ' / , + + 0 ! $ " 2 4'
/ # 0 1) 0 / A A 6
' 1 , $ # #0 + / + / # # 5 # ' V % $ /
% " " % # ' # $ $ &$? $ %
$ ' 6 1 / # @ $ M %# $ $ # $ A $
$ % - % ` 1 M F $ &$ 6 $
$ " % $ + # , $ @ # 0 #F $) #) # # $ $
% A" V # (/
, / # # # ' " - 3)
8 % % % $ @ + #
% 1 0 " / , # 4 '& + $ ' $ 1 %
$ Q 5 03 $" . ! $ - 4 % = ! # # - $ /
% 1 % " + # , ('5 5 3 6 5 , # % 555 0
0 % + # 8 $ ' + " ' 9 % . - ?
8 8 % @ 3 , 0 *#
0 ' + $ / 1 / # 1 / ' % A
0 % + 1 @ 3 H
! $ " 0 # $ " - - 4 N h ' , , $ + $ (- 97
$ 1 ' + " # / 0 Q 5 # % " *
" " $ " 4
. 0 + " & # , @ % 0 / Y " 0 + @ % : # + A
+ ! " # G ' $ / ' 0 # 5 - # , # $ $ # $
, , $ # " / + -
' # R / ' # / # + 5 @ " ' 57
3 , % I 5 4 .
/ G 4 - 4 4 /
, 4 4 K
1 " , % % $, $ * # 0 # 6
@ % + # % # " < f J G
$ % , # " ' #W ' % # (! , ! 6 # , #
$ # " / # + , 0* # # $ " ($ # , !
$ " ' # 5 ' b 6 I $ * # ! $ #
% # ' Q $ 0 , @ ? . $ $ #
% ' @ , $ # V) $! !) , !
1 / # ' 0 # W ' * # # = ! . !
/ " % + V # 8 P' N W .] 4 (
V + # " A & , # / " A
1 $ % @ % " # % # , % # %
$ 0 $ V " " # # ' @ % + % *# !
$ / @ - ' $ # # W W " ' * I C , ' I (' / %
& ' # 6 # 0% D # ' " ' 0
, . $ / ' 0 ' / " # ! $ # b / ' " @%@
& 1 ' % ' %9 1 ' / " ' ! # A ' 9/ i " @

W 37 0 " N C ! 0 _A

@ / A @ G G D @ / A

[illegible]

. @ G E D

[illegible]

[illegible]

particular Ceremonies, Laws and Sacrifices of the Hebrews, there would be no bounds to such an undertaking; some Examples of them we shall produce in the course of this Work.

CESENNIUS GALLUS, or Gallus only, according to the Greek, Commander of the twelfth Legion of the Roman Army in Syria, was sent by Cestius to reduce Galilee [q]. He took Sephoris, and several other places, and defeated a great Body of the Jews, who had intrenched themselves on mount Azamon in Galilee.

CESTIUS GALLUS, Governour of Syria for the Romans. The Jews began their Rebellion under his Government. Florus Governor of Judæa had quite tired out the patience of this People, by his repeated Injuries, Vexations and Cruelties. He desired nothing more, than to see them in Rebellion, and to have a War kindled in this Country, knowing very well, that if his Conduct were at any time examined, he could not possibly escape punishment with Death. For this reason he omitted nothing which might tempt the Jews to be the Aggressors, by forcing them in some measure to take Arms against the Romans [r]. Cestius Gallus coming to Jerusalem at the Passover in the year of J. C. 66, the Jews made great Complaints to him against Florus [s]. He encouraged them to hope that Florus would behave himself better; but he laugh'd at this, and as soon as Cestius was returned, began afresh to torment the Jews; which reduced them to despair.

While Cestius was at Jerusalem, as he saw the Province very much disposed for a Revolt, he had a mind to know the number of the Jews who were come up to the Passover; by which means he might be able to inform Nero, that this Nation was not so contemptible as he believed it to be. He desired the Priests therefore to reckon up the Lambs which were sacrificed on this solemn Commemoration of the Passover, from three to five a Clock in the Evening [t]. None but the Jews sacrificed any, and of the Jews none eat of them besides those who had been purified. A Lamb sometimes served twenty Persons, and never fewer than ten. Upon a computation of the Lambs which were then killed, there was found to be two hundred fifty five thousand and six hundred of them; which allowing ten persons only to each Lamb, made two Millions five hundred and fifty thousand persons.

In some short time after the return of Cestius, the Jews revolted, and took Arms. Cestius upon intelligence of this, advanced with a powerful Army towards Palestine. He first of all sent Cesennius Gallus into Galilee, who reduced it. He then took Lidda and Joppa in his way, and incamped near Gibeon, at two leagues distance from Jerusalem [u]. The Jews neglected the Feast of Tabernacles, which was then celebrated, and fell upon Cestius with so much vigour and impetuosity, that they gave the Roman Army a great shock, and had almost broke it. Cestius continued three days in this place, encompassed with Jews, and in danger of sustaining great loss, whenever he attempted to remove. But Agrippa having sent proposals to the Jews of Peace and Pardon, upon Condition that they would lay down their Arms, a division hereupon arose among them; and Cestius taking this opportunity, pushed them so briskly, that he put them into disorder, and pursued them as far as Jerusalem.

He remained three days incamped in a place called Scopos, or the Centry-box, at a good quarter of a league from the city, without however attacking it, as if he had believed, that the Jews would of themselves surrender. Upon the fourth day, which was the thirtieth of October, he advanced in order of Battel, and so terrified the Seditious, that they shut themselves up within the last inclosure of the City, and in the Temple, abandoning the rest, which he set Fire to. It was agreed, that if he had then given the Assault, he had carried the City, and had on that day finished the War. But he was diverted from it by several of his Officers, who, as Josephus believes, had been corrupted by Florus.

For the five days following he sought for some weak place in the Walls which he might force, but found none, the Seditious keeping a good guard every where. On the sixth day, which was the fifth of November, he gave orders for assaulting vigorously one of the Temple Gates; which so frightned the Seditious, that they were ready to forsake the City and retire; and the People, who desired Peace, were disposed to open the Gates to the Romans. But on a sudden Cestius, who knew nothing of his advantage, put a stop to his Assault, left the City, and returned to the Camp at Scopos. The Seditious pursued him, and killed many both of his Horse and Foot in their retreat.

The next day he decamped from Scopos, with a design to reach his first Camp at Gibeon: But he was continually harrassed by the Jews, who attacking him in Flank and Rear, killed a great number of his Soldiers, and took a great part of his Baggage. He halted two days at Gibeon, without knowing what to resolve on: At last, upon the third day, which was was the eighth of November, observing the number of the Jews to be every day increasing, he begun to march, abandoning the Baggage, and killing all the beasts of burden, excepting those which carried the Machines and Javelins. The Jews pursued them but very faintly, till they came to a very narrow descent, where they attacked them in the Front, and on every side. The combat lasted till night: The Romans lost four thousand Foot, and about four hundred Horse. The night gave the Romans an opportunity of retiring to Betheron.

[q] De Bello, l. ii. c. 23. in Lat. & c. 37. in Græco, p. 818. [r] See Joseph. Antiq. l. xx. c. 9. p. 702. de Bello, l. ii. c. 25. [s] De Bello, l. ii. c. 24. [t] De Bello, l. vi. c. 43. p. 968. [u] De Bello, l. ii. c. 37.

But Cestius seeing himself every way encompassed by the Jews, did not think it convenient to wait for day light to decamp; but broke up in the dark, and left four hundred Men in Bethoron, with orders to get upon the Platforms of the Houses, and every now and then to cry as the Centinels do in the night time. By which means the Jews might believe the whole Army to be there still. The next morning the Jews fell upon these four hundred Men, cut them in pieces, and began to pursue Cestius. But he had marched with so much speed, that they could not overtake him. He left them his Machines, which were afterwards very useful to them, during the Siege of Jerusalem. Cestius survived this Defeat but a very little while: He died the next year, of J. C. the 67th.

CHABALON, Chabelon, or Chabulon, or Cabul. There is mention in the first Book of Kings of the land of Cabul *. 1 Kings ix. 13.
Thus Hiram King of Tyre called the twenty Cities whereof Solomon made a present to him, in acknowledgment for the great services he had done him in building of the Temple. There are some disputes concerning the signification of Cabul, and the situation of this Country. Josephus says *, that Cabul in the Phœnician language, signifies that which is displeasing, others, that it signifies a barren, sandy, dry Soil; or as others on the contrary say, a miry wet Soil, overrun with weeds. The Septuagint have it, He called them from the frontier, as if they had read Gabal instead of Cabul. Others think, that Cabul in Hebrew may signify something of no value, Cabul, quasi nihil.

As to the situation of Cabul, Josephus says, that the Cities of Cabul were in the Neighbourhood of Tyre. Others place them beyond Jordan in the Decapolis *. Grotius is of opinion, that the Cities which Pharaoh had conquered from the Philistines, and yielded up to Solomon, were comprised among the Cities of Cabul. The generality are persuaded, that the City of Cabul, mentioned in Joshua, was Josh. xix. 27.
one of these, and it was probably on this occasion that Hiram gave this name to the other Cities, whereof Solomon had made a cession to him. Now Cabul was in all probability the same as Chabalon, or Chabul, which Josephus * places in the neighbourhood of Ptolemais, south of Tyre.

CHABRIS and CHARMIS, two Priests or Elders, who were in Bethulia, when Holofernes laid siege to it. Judith complained to them that Ozias had promised to surrender the City, if it was not relieved within five days; thereby intending in some sort to prescribe Laws to Judith viii. 9.
God.

CHADCHOD. Ezekiel mentions Chadchod among the several Merchandises Ezek. xxvii. 16.
which were brought to Tyre. The old כדכד Chadchod.
Interpreters not very well knowing the meaning of this term, continued it in their Translation. S. Jerom acknowledges, that he could not discover the signification of it. The Chaldee interprets it Pearls; others think that the Onyx, Ruby, Carbuncle, Chrystal, or Diamond is meant by it: Every one according to their particular conjectures.

I. CHÆREAS, Brother to Timotheus and Apollophanes Governour of Gazara. He and his Brothers were killed in a marsh, where after the taking of Gazara, they had endeavoured to conceal 2 Mac. x. 32, 37.
themselves.

II. CHAREAS, a Roman Knight, who killed the Emperor Caius Caligula.

CHALCIS, a City and Principality of Syria, situated between Libanus and Anti-libanus *. There is no mention of it in the sacred Books. But Josephus often speaks of it; and it was possessed by some of Herod's Posterity with the title of a Kingdom; as it was likewise by Ptolemy the Son of Mennæus.

CHALDÆA, a Country in Asia, near the Place where the Tigris and Euphrates meet, the Capital whereof was Babylon. The name of Chaldæa is no where to be met with in the Hebrew Text, but that of Chasdim; whether the Chaldæans derived this name from Cased, the Son of Nahor, Abraham's Brother, or from any other, who was more ancient. Chaldæa in itself was originally included within a narrow compass, but the Empire of Chaldæa being afterwards very much inlarged, the name of Chaldæa is likewise taken in a more uncertain and extensive meaning.

CHALDÆANS. This name is taken either for the people of Chaldæa, and the subjects

* ארץ כבול 70. ἐκάλεσεν αὐτὰς Ὅριον.
* Joseph. in vita sua, p. 1015. and 1016.
* Joseph. Antiq. l. viii. c. 2.
* Hieronym. in Amos.
* Vide Strabo, l. xvi. p. 753. & Joseph. Antiq. l. xiv. c. 13. p. 480.

subjects belonging to the Empire of Chaldæa, or for a sort of Philosophers or Soothsayers, who were called Chaldæans, and in Hebrew, Casdim. The principal employment of these Philosophers was the study of Mathematicks and Astrology: they pretended by an inspection of the Stars to know the good or bad destiny * of men, who were born under certain constellations. [y] Chaldæi non ex artis sed ex gentis vocabulo nominati, diuturnâ observatione siderum, scientiam putantur effecisse, ut prædici posset quid cuique eventurum, a quo quisque fato natus esset. They gloried in having astronomical observations among them for four hundred and seventy two thousand years [z]; Cicero says [a], for four hundred and seventy thousand; Epigenes, as he is cited in Pliny [b], for seven hundred and twenty thousand; lastly, they who are lowest in their computation of their Antiquity, make their observations to be of four hundred and fourscore thousand years standing. [c] But this Antiquity has always been suspected to be false. Aristotle, who was curious to know the truth of it, wrote to Callisthenes, who was at Babylon with Alexander, desiring him to give him the most certain account of this matter, that he could procure in the Country. Hereupon Callisthenes sent him celestial Observations for nineteen hundred and three years; [d] from the beginning of the Chaldee Monarchy to the reign of Alexander the Great. Now if we go back from Alexander, that is to say, from his Victory over Darius in 3674, we find the year of the world 1771, which comes very near the time, wherein the Tower of Babel was founded.

As to the Empire of the Chaldæans, we know it began under Nimrod, but the sequel of it is what we are not particularly acquainted with. In the time of Abraham, we find a King of Shinar, who in all probability was King likewise of Chaldæa. Julius Africanus says Evechous reigned in Chaldæa two hundred and twenty four years before the Arabians, that is to say, in the year of the world 2242, when Isaac was living. The Arabians conquered the Empire of Chaldæa in 2466, and kept possession of it for two hundred and sixteen years till 2682. Belus the Assyrian succeeded the Arabians. He reigned five and fifty years before the Foundation of the Assyrian Empire laid by Ninus.

Gen. xiv. About the year of the World 2092.

The Chaldæans continued under the dominion of the Assyrian Kings till the time of Sardanapalus. In the year of the world 3254, before J. C. 750, Arbaces Governor of Media, and Belesis Governor of Babylon, rebell'd against Sardanapalus, compell'd him to shut himself up in Nineveh, and there burn himself. Belesis freed the Chaldæans from the dominion of the Assyrians, and was acknowledged King of Babylon [e]. He is the same person, who in Scripture is called Baladan and Nabonassar in Hipparchus, Censorinus and Ptolemy. He was succeeded in the Kingdom of Chaldæa by Berodach-Baladan, or Merodach-Baladan, who is mentioned in the second book of Kings, and sent Ambassadors to Hezekiah King of Judah.

Isai. xxxix. 1.

2 Kings xx. 12.

It appears that the Babylonians soon fell again under the power of the Assyrians, since in the year of the world 3378 under the reign of Josiah King of Judah, Nabopolassar having been established Governor of Babylon by Chinaladanus or Sarack King of Assyria, rebell'd against his King, and having entred into a confederacy with Cyaxares Governor of Media, they laid siege to Nineveh, took it, killed King Chinaladanus, and divided the Assyrian Empire between them [f]. Cyaxares had Media and Armenia; and Nabopolassar Assyria and Chaldæa. It was properly under Nabopolassar that the great and famous Monarchy of Chaldæa began, which subsisted under the several Kings Nabopolassar, Nebuchadnezzar, Evilmerodach, and Belshazzar, till the reign of Darius the Mede, who was succeeded at Babylon by Cyrus.

CHALIZA [g]. The Jews call by this name the Ceremony whereby a Woman who is left a Widow, pulls off her Brother-in-law's Shoes, who should espouse her, and by this means is allowed to be at liberty to marry whom she pleases.

CHAMANIM. Thus they call that in Hebrew, which the Greeks name Pyræia, or Pyrateria, and S. Jerom in Leviticus [h] has translated Simulachra, in Isaiah [i] Delubra. These Chamanim were, according to Rabbi Solomon, Idols exposed to the Sun upon the tops of houses. Abenezra says, they were portable Chapels or Temples, made in the form of Chariots in honour of the Sun.

Lev. xxvi. 30.

Isai. xxvii. 9.

What the Greeks call Pyræia were Temples consecrated to the Sun and Fire, wherein a perpetual Fire was kept up. They were built upon eminences; and were large enclosures without covering, where

[y] Cicero de nat. Deorum, l. i. c. 1. [z] Diodor. Sicul. l. ii. p. 83. Bibliot. [a] Cicero l. i. & l. ii. de Divinat. [b] Plin. l. vii. c. 56. [c] Berof. & Critodem. apud eund. Plin. ibidem. [d] Apud simplic. l. iii. de Cœlo. [e] See Diodor. Sic. l. ii. & Usser. ad an. 3254. [f] Usser. ex Alexandro Polyhist. ad an. 3378. ante Æram vulg. 626. ante nat. Christ. 623. [g] חליצה Chaliza. Extractio vel Exuviæ. [h] חמנים το. [illegible] [i] חמנים το. [illegible]

* Cicero seems to be out of all patience, while he is confuting the folly of these pretensions, O deliberationem incredibilem! O vim maximam erroris! See his second Book de Divinatione.

where the Sun was worſhipped. Herodotus [h] and Strabo [i] ſpeak of them, and the Guebres or Worſhippers of Fire in Perſia and the Indies have ſome of theſe Pyræia ſtill at this day. Strabo ſays, that in his time there were many of theſe Temples to be ſeen in Cappadocia, conſecrated to the Goddeſs Anaïta and the God Homanus; Anaïta is in all probality the Moon, and Homanus the Sun. The word Chamanim is derived from Chaman, which ſignifies to warm, to burn.

CHAMARIM. We meet with this word in ſeveral places of the Hebrew Bible, and generally it is tranſlated, the Prieſts of the Idols, or Prieſts cloathed in black, because Chamar ſignifies black or blackneſt. S. Jerom in the ſecond Book

2 Kings xxiii. 5. Hos. x. 5. וכמריו Zeph. i. 4. of Kings [m] renders it Aruſpices. In Hoſea and Zephaniah he tranſlates it Æditui, Churchwardens; but the beſt Commentators are of opinion, that by this word we are to underſtand the Prieſts of the falſe Gods, and in particular of the Worſhippers of Fire [n], becauſe they were, as they ſay, dreſſed in black; or perhaps the Hebrews gave them this name in deriſion, becauſe as they were continually employed in taking care about the fewel and keeping up the Fire, they were as black as Smiths or Colliers. We find Prieſts among thoſe of Iſis called Melanephori, that is to ſay, that wear black. But I cannot tell whether this might be by reaſon of their dreſſing in black, or whether it were becauſe they wore a certain black ſhining Vail in the Proceſſions of this Goddeſs. [o] Quæ longe lateque meum confutabat obtutum palla nigerrima, ſplendeſcens atro nitore. Camar in Arabic ſignifies the Moon: Iſis is the ſame Deity. Grotius thinks the Roman Prieſts called Camilli, came from the Hebrew, Chamarim. They among the Heathens who ſacrificed to the infernal Gods, were dreſſed in black [p].

Vidi egomet nigrâ ſuccinctam vadere pallâ
Canidiam pedibus nudis, paſſoque capillo.

כמוש Chamos. CHAMOS, or Chemoſh, the Idol or God of the Moabites. The name of Chamos comes from a Root, which in Arabic ſignifies to make haſte: For which reaſon many believe Chamos to be the Sun, whoſe precipitate courſe might well procure it the name of ſwift, or ſpeedy. Others have confounded Chamos with the God Hammon; adored not only in Libya and Egypt, but alſo in Arabia, Ethiopia and the Indies [q]. Macrobius [r] ſhews that Hammon was the Sun, and the Horns with which he was repreſented, denoted his Rays. We are of opinion, that the God Hamanus, and Apollo Chomeus, mentioned by Strabo [s] and Ammianus Marcellinus [t], was the very ſame as Chamos or the Sun. Theſe Deities were worſhipped in many of the eaſtern Provinces. Some who go upon the reſemblance of the Hebrew term Chamos, with the Greek Comos, have believed Chamos to ſignify the God Bacchus, the God of Drunkenneſs, according to the ſignification of the Greek Comos [u]. S. Jerom [x], and with him moſt Interpreters take Chamos and Peor for the ſame Divinity. But we have made it appear, that Baal Peor was the ſame as Tammuz or Adonis; ſo that Chamos muſt be the God whom the Heathens call the Sun.

They who derive this word from the Hebrew Camos with a Caph, Mem, and Samech, pretend that it ſignifies the hidden God, or Pluto, whoſe abode is in Hell; in this ſenſe it will be the ſame as Tammuz, which ſignifies the ſame thing, כמם Chamas. occultavit. and is taken for Adonis, becauſe this God was adored as one that had been conceal'd and buried in a Coffin, then rais'd from the dead, and appearing alive again. But תמוז Tamaz. the God Chamos is never written in Scripture after the manner we have been ſpeaking of, ſo as to ſignify the hidden God.

Theſe are particulars which may be ſeen more at length in our Diſſertation on Baal-Peor and Chamos prefixed to our Comment on the Book of Numbers.

CHANTERS, or Singing-men. In the Temple of Jeruſalem there was a great number of Levites, who were imployed in ſinging the Praiſes of God, and in playing upon Inſtruments before his Altar. In the reign of David there were four thouſand Singing-men, with their Heads and Preſidents. Aſaph, Heman, and Jeduthun were Maſters of the Muſick belonging to the Temple in the Reigns of David and Solomon. Aſaph had four Sons, Jeduthun ſix, and Heman fourteen. (See 1 Chr. xxv. 1, 2, 3, &c.) Theſe four and twenty Levites, the Sons of the three principal Muſick Maſters, were ſet at the head of four and twenty Companies of Singers. Each of theſe had eleven Maſters of an inferior Order under him, who preſided over other Singers, and inſtructed them: Thoſe of Kohath's Family were placed in the middle of the Temple, thoſe of Merari's on the left, and thoſe of Gerſhon's on the right. They ſeem to have been farther diſtinguiſh'd by the Inſtruments of Muſick which they uſed. The Sons of Jeduthun played on the Kinnor or Harp, thoſe of Aſaph on the Nabal or Pſaltery; and thoſe of Heman

[h] Herodot. l. i. p. 87. [i] Strabo. l. 15. [m] השבית את הכמרים [n] Kimchi in Sophon. 1. 4.
[o] Apul. l. x. Mileſ. [p] Horat. l. i. Satyr. 8. v. 23. [q] Lucan. l. ix. Pharſal.
Quamvis Æthiopum populis, Arabumque beatis
Gentibus, atque Indis unus ſit Jupiter Ammon.
[r] Macrob. Saturn. l. i. c. 21. [s] Strabo, l. xv. [t] Ammian. l. xxiii. [u] Voſſ. de orig. & progreſſ. Idol. l. ii. c. 8. [x] Hieronym. in Iſai. xxi.

man on the Mistothaim, which was a sort of Bell.

The Chanters and Levites, who were employed in singing, playing upon Instruments, and other Functions of the Temple, had no habits distinct from the rest of the People. Nevertheless, in the Ceremony of removing the Ark to the Temple of [2 Chr. v. 12.] Jerusalem built by Solomon, the Chanters appeared dressed in Tunicks of Byssus or fine Linnen. Josephus [a] remarks, that in King Agrippa's time, they obtained the favour from this Prince of wearing a Linen Robe in the Temple like the Priests. Agrippa believed it would be for the Honour of his Reign, to signalize it by so considerable a change as this. The other Levites imployed in different Exercises under the Command of the Priests in the Temple, procured likewise permission to learn to sing, to the end that they might enjoy the same Privileges with their Brethren. This was contrary to the Laws of God, says Josephus, which were never violated with impunity.

CHAOS. This is the name whereby we call that Confusion, wherein matter lay, when newly produced out of nothing at the beginning of the World, before God, by his Almighty Word, had put it into the order and condition wherein it was after the six days Creation. Moses [Gen. i. 2.] makes use of the Terms Tohu and Bohu [x], to express this Chaos, which the Septuagint translate invisible, and in disorder; Symmachus, a Mass without motion, and in disorder; Aquila and Theodotion, a void and nothing. Ovid describes the Chaos very well in these verses.

—— Rudis indigestaque moles,
Nec quidquam nisi pondus iners, congestaq; eodem
Non bene junctarum discordia semina rerum.

Chaos is taken likewise for an Abyss, an impenetrable Space, which prevents any one's passing from one place to another. Thus Abraham told the rich Man, [Luke xvi. 26. Μέγα χάσμα.] that there was a great Chaos or Gulf (or as in the Greek a great Hollow) which separated them. Inter vos & nos chaos magnum firmamentum est.

CHARABE, a Town in upper Galilee, fortified by Josephus the Historian [y]. It is probably the same which he calls the Stone of the Achabanes [z].

CHARACA, a City in the Tribe of Gad, from whence Judas Maccabeus drove Timotheus, 2 Macc. xii. 17.

CHARAC-MOBA, or perhaps Charac-Moab, a City of the third Palestine. It is joined to Areopolis, Petra and Zobar, in the antient Accounts of the Empire, and in the Subscriptions to Councils [a]. I take it to be the same with Characa, which I have been speaking of.

I. CHARACTER, the Character or Mark of the Beast or Antichrist, mentioned in the Revelations, is nothing else but [Rev. xiii. 6. xiv. 9. xvi. 2. xix. 20. xx. 4.] the number of Letters which compose his name, according to the numerical value of these Letters. See what we have said above concerning Antichrist.

II. CHARACTER, of certain Sacraments of the new Law, such as Baptism, Confirmation and Orders, whereby we understand some Sign and invisible Mark impressed upon the Souls of those who have received these Sacraments; for which reason they should never be repeated.

CHARACTERS Hebrew. See Hebrew Letters.

I. CHARIOTS of WAR. The Scripture speaks of two sorts, one was for Princes and Generals to ride in, the other to break the Enemies Batalions, by letting loose these Chariots against them, armed with Iron, which made terrible havock in the Troops. The most antient Chariots of War whereof we have any knowledge, are Pharaoh's, which were drowned in the Red Sea. The Canaanites, whom [Exod. xiv. 7.] Joshua engaged with at the waters of Merom, had Cavalry, and a multitude of Chariots. Equi & currus immensæ multitudinis. [Josh. xi. 4.] Sisera, Jabin the King of Hazor's General, had nine hundred Chariots of Iron in his Army. The Tribe of Judah [Judg. iv. 3.] could not get Possession of the lands belonging to their partition, because the antient Inhabitants of the Country were strong in Chariots of Iron. The Philistines [Judg. i. 19.] in the War carried on by them against Saul, had thirty thousand Chariots, and six thousand Horsemen. David [1 Sam. xiii. 15.] having taken a thousand Chariots of War from Hadadezer King of Syria hamstrung the Horses, and burnt nine hundred Chariots, reserving only an hundred to [1 Chr. xviii. 4. & 2 Sam. viii. 4.] himself.

It does not appear that the Kings of the Hebrews ever made use of Chariots in War. Solomon had a considerable number of them; but we know of no military expedition wherein they were employed by him. He had, says the Scripture, fourteen hundred Chariots, and [1 Kings x. 26.] twelve thousand Horses. As Judæa was a very mountainous Country, Chariots could be of no use but in the Plains, and the Hebrews often made them needless, by combating upon their Mountains; and from hence in all probability it came, that they never were very curious of having any in their Armies.

In the Books of the Maccabees there is [2 Macc. xiii. 2.] mention made of Chariots armed with Scythes, which the King of Syria led against Judea. The Descriptions which the Antients give us of these Chariots, is much

[a] Joseph. Antiq. l. xx. c. 8.
[z] Idem, l. ii. de Bello. c. 25.
[x] תהו ובהו 70. Ἀόρατος καὶ ἀκατασκεύαστος.
[a] Vide Reland. Tom. i. p. 212, 213. & Tom. ii. p. 533. & 705.
[y] Joseph. in vita, p. 1013.

much after the following manner[b]. The Beam to which the Horſes were faſtened, was armed with Pikes having iron points to them, which projected forward; the Yokes of the Horſes had likewiſe two long points of three Cubits. To the Axle-tree alſo were fixed iron Spits, armed at their extremities with Scythes; between the Spokes of the Wheels were placed Javelins, and the very fellows of the wheels were furniſhed with Scythes, which tore every thing they met with to pieces.

The Axle-tree was longer than uſual, and the Wheels ſtronger, that they might be able to reſiſt the ſhock of the motion, and the Chariot be leſs ſubject to overturn. The Driver's ſeat was a kind of little Tower made of very ſolid Wood, and raiſed breaſt high. The Charioteer was armed all over, and covered with Iron. Sometimes ſeveral Men well armed were put in the Chariots, who fought with Darts and Arrows. Any one may judge what dreadful Shocks were cauſed by theſe Machines, when once they were in motion, and met the Enemies Troops[c].

The Kings of Iſrael, when they went to War, were generally mounted on their Chariots; they fought thus, and iſſued out their orders; and there was always a ſecond Chariot empty which followed them, that if the firſt were broke, they might immediately get up into the other. 2 Chron. xxxv. 23.

Chariots were ſometimes conſecrated to the Sun; and the Scripture obſerves, that Joſiah burnt thoſe which had been offered to the Sun by the Kings his Predeceſſors. 2 Kings xxiii 31. This ſuperſtitious cuſtom was an imitation of the Heathens, and principally of the Perſians, who had Horſes and Chariots conſecrated in honour of the Sun. Herodotus, Xenophon, and Quintus Curtius[d] ſpeak of white Chariots, crowned, which were conſecrated to the Sun, and among the Perſians in their Ceremonies, were drawn with white Horſes conſecrated to the ſame Luminary.

The Rhodians threw a Chariot every year into the Sea, in honour of the Sun, becauſe they believed, that every day he travelled round the Earth riding in a Chariot. Feſtus in Octobri.

II. Chariots, or Sledges made uſe of in threſhing out Corn. See hereafter Sledges.

CHEBAR, a River of Aſſyria, which empties itſelf into the Euphrates in the upper part of Meſopotamia. Ezekiel was upon the River Chebar, when God made him ſenſible of the impreſſion of his holy Spirit, Ezek. i. 1.

CHEDORLAOMER, King of the Elymæans or Elamites, who were either the Perſians, or People bordering upon them. Chedorlaomer was one of the four confederated Kings, who made war againſt the five Kings of the Pentapolis of Sodom, and who after having defeated them, and made themſelves Maſters of a great Booty, were purſued and diſperſed by Abraham, in the year of the World 2092, before the Birth of J. C. 1908, and before the vulgar Æra 1911. Gen. xiv. 1, 2, & ſeq.

This Prince, after he had for twelve years kept five Kings ſubject to his Dominion, viz. Bera King of Sodom, Birſha King of Gomorrah, Shinab King of Admah, Shemeber King of Zeboim, and the King of Bela, which is Zoar: They at laſt revolted from him about the year of the World 2091. Chedorlaomer gathered a great Army, and entring into a Confederacy with Amraphel King of Shinar, Arioch King of Ellaſar, perhaps Thalaſſar, near Aſſyria, in the Province of Eden, and with Tidal King of the Nations; probably the Nations which lay beyond Jordan, in Galilee of the Gentiles: Theſe four Kings with their Troops marched towards the Land of Canaan; in their way they attacked ſome People of the Countries beyond Jordan, ſuch as the Rephaims, Giants, who poſſeſſed the Land lying between the Brook Jabbok and the Arnon: They took and pillaged Aſhteroth Karnaim, a famous City ſituated eaſtward of the Sea of Galilee. Before J. C. 1909, before the vulgar Æra 1933. See Mat. iv. 15. Iſa. ix. 1.

They likewiſe defeated the Zuzims, the ſame probably with the Zumzummims, antient Inhabitants of the Country afterwards poſſeſſed by the Ammonites. Moſes ſays, the Zuzims were beaten at Ham, perhaps Chamin, an antient City of the ſame Territory. They farther routed the Emims in Shaveh Kiriathaim. The Emims are an antient People, who dwelt originally in the Country which was afterwards poſſeſſed by the Moabites; and Shaveh Kiriathaim is a City in the ſame Land, which afterwards belonged to King Sihon. Laſtly, in the Mountains of Gilead, the Horites, a famous People deſcended from Seir the Horite, whoſe Country was afterwards ſeized by the Edomites. They carried on their Conqueſts as far as the Plains of Paran in Arabia Petræa. From thence they returned towards Kadeſh-Barnea, where is the Fountain of Miſhpat, which however did not go by this Name till the time of Moſes. They ravaged the Country of the Amalekites, who inhabited part of Arabia Petræa, and defeated the Amorites, whoſe ſettlement was at Hazezon-tamar, which ſome believe to be the ſame as Engeddi, a City adjacent to the Pentapolis and Gomorrha; thus the four Kings, who were Allies, began to deſtroy the Power of the ſeveral People Deut. ii. 10, 21. See Judg. ii. 5. and the Notes on Gen. xiv. 5. Deut. ii. 20, 21. Joſh. xiii. 19, 21. Gen. xxxii. 3. & xxxvi. 20. Numb. xx. 13.

[b] Diodor. Sicul. l. xvii. Q. Curt. l. 4. Xenophon. Cyropæd. l. 6.
[d] Herod. l. vii. Xenoph. l. viii. Cyrop. Q. Curt. l. iii.
[c] Vide Lucret. de rerum naturâ, l. iii.

People bordering upon Sodom and Gomorrha, that so these Cities having no more assistance to expect from this Quarter, might not be able to escape their vengeance.

The five revolted Kings seeing the Allies drawing towards their City, took the Field with their Army, and put it in order of Battel in the very Plain, where their several Towns were situated. Now there were many Wells in this Plain, out of which People got Bitumen, a circumstance which might have rendred the access to it more difficult and dangerous to the Enemies Horse. Here the Battel was fought, and the Kings of Sodom, Gomorrha, Zeboim, Admah, and Zoar, were put to flight; one part of their Army was cut in pieces, and the other fled to the neighbouring Mountains, leaving their Cities a Prey to the Conquerors. Sodom, Gomorrha, and the other places were pillaged, and the Enemy loaded with Spoil and Captives returned by the way of the Euphrates.

About the year of the World 2092.

Observations on the Battel between the five confederate Kings and Chedorlaomer in the Valley of Woods. Gen. xiv. 8.

☞ I shall not enquire much about this Battel; for how can we discourse upon facts of such remote Antiquity? It will be hard for any one to cure me of an opinion entertained by me, that at this time, and ever before, the People of Asia were not so ignorant and unskilful as we may imagine. In the manner wherein the Scripture speaks of them, they may be said to make War very well; for even then we perceive there was military Discipline regulated with a great deal of good Sense and Knowledge. If you were to hear certain Persons, you would say that Armies in the time of Abraham fought as the Hottentots would have done. If the World be not older than is generally supposed, it must be surprizing to find People who were able, in so short a time, to make so great a progress in War. This is what I shall make appear to be very remarkable in my Dissertation on the Tacticks of the Hebrews and People of Asia; but this is not a proper place to do so.

The Scripture says not one word concerning the disposition of the two Armies; but this does not prevent us from putting them in order of Battel: Because we cannot be unacquainted with their Tacticks. It is certain that they fought in great Bodies, drawn up with a great depth: This a thousand Examples will demonstrate. The order of Abraham's Troops, who upon notice of the loss of this Battel, marched against the five victorious Kings, is a good proof that they engaged in this manner; that is to say, in Portions or Divisions of a Phalanx, and often in a perfect Phalanx: For the so much boasted Phalanx of the Greeks differed in name only from that of the Asiatick People.

I range therefore the Troops of these five Kings in so many Bodies of a great depth, according to the method of these old times, which shews a better Understanding, and more Judgment than ours. It is probable Chedorlaomer's Army was disposed in the same order to make head against them. Let no one object that these two Dispositions are imaginary: For, as I have already said, we are acquainted with their method of fighting, and this is sufficient to give us a competent insight into such other Orders of Battel as are not explain'd by the Sacred Writers, which yet is very rare. It would be easy for an Author, who would make a plan of the Battel of Lens a thousand years hence, to draw up the Army in this Plain, tho' our method of fighting now in use were to be lost, provided he was not a Stranger to the French Tacticks, and those of other People in these times. We have no Plan of the Battle of Cannæ; nevertheless since Polybius acquaints us with the Disposition of it, we cannot be mistaken in the Plans of both the Carthaginian and Roman Armies, whose method is well known to us; and although that of the latter be not intirely conformable to the common Disposition of their Cohorts, yet the Historian explains it to us so clearly, that it is impossible for one, who has any little degree of Experience, to be mistaken in the Plan which he would give of it. The Scripture does not set forth the particular Circumstances of this Battel between Chedorlaomer and the five Kings; the latter were beaten, and consequently put to flight, which is all we learn from it.

After the defeat of the five Kings by Chedorlaomer and his Allies, Lot who had retired to Sodom, was involved in the Calamity of this City. He was plundered of all he had, and was himself carried away with the other Captives. Hereupon one who had preserved himself by flight, went and gave intelligence to Abraham of what had passed. Abraham dwelt at that time in the Valley of Mamre, and had made a kind of offensive and defensive League with Mamre, Eshcol, and Aner, who all dwelt in the same Plain. As soon as he heard this News, he gave Intelligence of it to his Allies, and exhorted them to be assisting to him in the deliverance of his Nephew Lot: They armed their People; Abraham put himself at the head of three hundred and eighteen of his Servants, all Men of Resolution, and Gen. xiv. 14.
began to pursue the Army of the four victorious Kings. They marched near seventy Leagues without being able to overtake them; at last they joined them at Dan, near the Springs of Jordan. Shalam formed several Bodies out of his own

People,

People, and thoſe of his Allies, and falling upon the Enemy by night, he ſtruck their Camp with great Terror, routed, and purſued them as far as Hobah, or Abila, to the north of Damaſcus, in the Valley between Libanus and Antilibanus. He brought back his Nephew Lot with him, and all that belonged to him, the captive Women, and all the Booty which Chedorlaomer and his Allies had taken upon defeating the five revolted Kings, and plundered Sodom and Gomorrha.

Obſervations on Abraham's ſurprizing Chedorlaomer's Camp. Gen. c. xiv. v. 14. ☞ There was a great Battel fought in the Vale of Siddim: Chedorlaomer, King of the Elamites, and three other Kings his Allies, obtained a ſignal Victory over five Kings, who were confederated againſt them. Abraham being informed that his Nephew Lot was taken in this Battel, without loſing a moment's time, immediately prepared to reſcue him; He armed his trained Servants, ſays the Scripture, born in his own houſe, three hundred and eighteen, and purſued them unto Dan.

To tranſlate Perſecutus eſt eos uſque Hoba in a true military Senſe, I would ſay, that Abraham fell upon the Conquerors in their March; for the word purſue would ſignify, that Abraham had already broken them, whereas it was another Enemy, an Enemy quite new, who followed them in their Rear, and concealed his March, that ſo he might prevent diſcovery and ſurprize them. He was too weak to attack them in broad day light; he therefore waited for the night, which is the refuge of Generals, who have ſmall Armies, and the moſt commodious time for ſurpriſing Camps. And having divided his People into ſeveral Troops, he fell upon the Enemy by night, defeated them, and purſued them as far as Hobah, which is on the left hand of Damaſcus.

The Stratagem was good, and it is always moſt adviſable in Attacks by night, to find employment for the Enemy in ſeveral places. Not only darkneſs encreaſes the Terror, and the Surprize magnifies every thing for the worſe; but the Enemies Forces are not known, and they are believed always to be more conſiderable than in reality they are, becauſe it cannot be imagined that a handful of People would venture upon attacking a great Army; and this opinion in Surprizes is very common.

Abraham therefore drew up in ſeveral ſmall Bodies, diviſis ſociis; the number of them is not particularly expreſſed in Scripture: I believe theſe three hundred and eighteen Men might do ſome execution in four little Bodies. We may eaſily comprehend, that he might beat his Enemies; Night and Surprize, are two things of more dangerous Conſequence in great than in ſmall Armies; becauſe they are more ſubject to pannick Frights. The example of the defeat of the Bavarians near Rhinsfelt, who had juſt before obtained a remarkable Victory over the Duke of Weimar, is a demonſtrative proof of this maxim: For he having got together again the ſad remains of his Defeat, rallied them, and making a good March by night, fell ſuddenly upon the Bavarian Camp; whereupon the whole Army fled, without offering to come to action. It is probable Abraham might ſet fire to the Camp, after having given the Plunder of it to his victorious Troops.

CHELAL, an Iſraelite, who returned from Babylon, and forſook his wife, whom he had married contrary to the Law, Ezra x. 30.

CHELCIAS, the Father of Suſanna, Dan xiii. 2.

CHELLUS, is a Canton in the Province of Palmyra, or it may be the ſame as Allaſh, a City in the ſouthern part of Edom, otherwiſe called Eluza, or Chaluza: Euſebius and S. Jerom place Allush in the Neighbourhood of Petra, the capital City of Arabia Petræa.

CHELMON, a City oppoſite to Eſdraelon; near unto which, part of Holoferneſ's Army was encamped before he went, and laid ſiege to Bethulia. Chelmon is perhaps the ſame with Salmon mentioned in the Pſalms, and elſewhere; or Cedmon, or laſtly Belmon or Cyamon, as the Greek has it, Judith vii. 3. or Cammon ſpoken of by Euſebius, and placed by him ſeven Miles from Legio, towards the North. Judith vii. 3. Pſ. lxviii. 15 and Judg. ix. 48.

CHELUB, the Father of Ezri. 1 Chr. xxvii. 26.

CHEMOSH. See Chamos.

I. CHENAANAH, the fourth Son of Bilhan, 1 Chr. vii. 10.

II. CHENAANAH, Father to the falſe Prophet Zedekiah. 1 Kings xxii. 11.

CHENANI, a Levite, Ezra ix. 4.

CHENANIAH, a Maſter of the Temple Muſick. He tuned the Songs in the ceremony of removing the Ark from Obed-edom, becauſe he excelled mightily in his Art. 1 Chr. xv. 22.

I. CHEPHIRAH, a City of the Gibeonites, afterwards given up to the Tribe of Benjamin, Joſh. ix. 17. xviii. 26.

II. CHEPHIRAH, the Son of Kirjath-arim, Ezra ii. 25.

CHERAN, the youngeſt Son of Diſhon, the Son of Seir the Horite. Gen. xxxvi. 26.

CHEREAS. See Chæreas.

CHEREM, Anathema. The Hebrews diſtinguiſh three ſorts of Excommunications. The firſt is Niddui, Separation, the leſſer Excommunication. The ſecond is Cherem, the greater Excommunication, or Ana- חרם Cherem, Anathema. נדוי Niddui.

[illegible]

SEVERAL FIGURES OF THE CHERUBRIMS.

and Eve. But it is very probable, that both one and the other had a human figure, since it is said of those which were placed at the entrance of Paradise, that they had their Station there assigned them to guard the entrance to it, and held a flaming Sword in their hands. (Gen. iii. 24.) And Ezekiel compares the King of Tyre to the Cherubin that covered the Ark of the Covenant, upon the holy mountain; (Ezek. xxviii. 14.) that is to say, that he was like this Cherub glittering all over with Gold and Glory. Moreover, Moses says, that two Cherubins covered the Mercy-seat with their Wings extended on both sides, and looked one upon another, having their Faces turned towards the Mercy-seat, which covered the Ark.

The result of all that I have said is this, that the figure of the Cherubins was not always uniform, since they are differently described in the shapes of Men, Eagles, Oxen, Lions, and in a composition of all these figures put together. Moses likewise calls those symbolical or hieroglyphical Representations which were represented in Imbroideries upon the Veils of the Tabernacle, (Exod. xxvi. 1.) Cherubins of costly work[h]. Such were the symbolical Figures which the Egyptians placed at the gates of their Temples, and the Images of the generality of their Gods, which were nothing commonly but Statues composed of Men and Animals[i].

> Omnigenumque Deûm monstra, & latrator Anubis.

CHESALON, a City in the Tribe of Judah, Josh. xv. 10.

CHESED, Father of the Casedim or Casdim. Thus the Hebrews call the Chaldæans. Chesed was the Son of Nahor and Milcah. (Gen. xxii. 22.) But there is a great deal of probability, that the Casdim or Chaldæans came from some other Chesed.

CHESIL, a City in the Tribe of Judah, Josh. xv. 30. Eusebius calls it Xil, and places it in the southern part of Judah.

CHESITAH. Genes. xxxiii. 19. This term is translated Lambs. See Kesitah.

CHESULLOTH, or Chesulloth Thabor, a City situated on the side of mount Thabor, Josh. xix. 18. Eusebius and S. Jerom call it [k] Casalus or Exalus, and place it ten Miles from Diocæsarea towards the East.

CHETHIM. See Kittim. Macedonia is so called, 1 Macc. ii. 1.

CHESIB. In Genesis, instead of these words, (Gen. xxxviii. 5.) Judah's Wife ceased to have Children, after the birth of Shelah: The Hebrew reads, She was at Chesib when she bare him. Chezib is the name of a place in Joshua, and in Micah. (Josh. xv. 44. Micah i. 14.) Chesib was a desart place near Adullam, in Eusebius's time.

CHIDON. The threshing floor of Chidon is the place where Uzzah was suddenly struck dead, for having imprudently laid his hands upon the Ark, which tottered in the Cart. (1 Chr. xiii. 9.) In the second Book of Samuel, this threshing floor is called the threshing floor of Nachon. (2 Sam. vi. 6.) We do not know whether the names of Nachon and Chidon are the names of Men or Places.

CHILD, puer or filius. In the Scripture Disciples are often called Children or Sons. Solomon in his Proverbs gives this name to his Disciple, Audi, Fili mi, &c. The Children of the Devil, the Sons of Belial are those who follow the maxims of the World and the Devil. The descendants of a Man, how remote soever they may be, are called Sons or Children; for example, the Children of Edom, the Children of Moab, the Children of Israel. This Expression, the Children of the Wedding, the Children of Light, the Children of Darkness, is sometimes used to signify those who are invited to the Wedding, who follow Light, who remain in Darkness; the Children of the Kingdom, those who belong to the Kingdom.

Persons who are almost of Age, are often called Children. For example, Joseph is called puer, tho' he were at least sixteen. (Gen. xxxvii. 2, 3, 4, &c.) Isaac was above twenty, when Abraham still gave him this name. (Gen. xxii. 5.) Benjamin of the age of above thirty, is still called puer parvulus. (Gen. xliv. 20.) The Hebrews as well as the Greeks and Latins, called their Servants and Slaves pueri. Lastly, Men of full age have often the name of Children given them: The strange Children shall fail. They pleased themselves in the children of strangers. (Psal. xviii. 46. Isai. ii. 6.) The child shall die an hundred years old; (Isai. lxv. 20.) that is to say, Men shall die at the age of an hundred years; there shall be no more untimely deaths seen.

CHILDREN, Sons of God. By this name the Angels are sometimes described: for example, Now there was a day when the sons of God came to present themselves before the Lord, and Satan came also among them. (Job i. 6. ii. 1.) And in the Psalms, Who among the sons of the mighty can be likened unto the Lord? (Psal. lxxxix. 6.) Good Men, in opposition to the wicked, are likewise called by this name, the Children of Seth's family, in opposition to the Race of Cain. The Sons of God saw the daughters of men and they were fair; and they took them wives of all that they chose. (Gen. vi. 2.)

Judges, Magistrates, and Priests are likewise termed Children of God. I said ye are Gods, and the children of the Most High. (Psal. lxxxii. 6.) He speaks to Judges. And in another place, directing himself to Priests, he says, Give unto the Lord, O ye Children of the mighty, give unto the (Psal. xxix. 1.) Lord

[h] Vulg. varietas opere plumario. Heb. כרבים מעשה חשב Cherubim opus industrii hominis.

[i] Virg. Æneid. 8. [k] Vide Euseb. & Hieronym ad Acsaph.

Lord glory and strength. All this in the way of opposition to the sons of men, who are the common part of Mankind, ordinary People, Men in general.

Hos. i. 10. & e John xi. 52. The Israelites are elsewhere called Sons of God, in opposition to the Gentiles, whereas before it was said unto them, ye are my people, they shall be called the children, the sons of God. Sometimes the Elect, the Blessed, have this name Wisd. v. 5. given them. How is he numbred among the children of God, and his lot is among the Saints!

In the New Testament, Believers are commonly called children of God by vertue of their adoption, and the prerogatives which Christ acquired for them, by assuming human flesh, and communicating this quality to us by Baptism, and a participation in the merits of his death. He
John i. 12. hath given us, says S. John, power to become the sons of God. And St. Paul in several places extols the advantages of being adopted to be the Sons of God, which adoption we have received by the
Rom. viii. 14. holy Spirit. For as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God—— the Spirit it self beareth witness with our spirit that we are the children of God.
Gal. iii. 26. And in another place, Ye are all the children of God by faith, &c.

Children, Sons of Men. This name is given to the Men of Cain's family, who lived before the Deluge, and in particular to the Giants, those violent and corrupt Men, who before the Deluge had corrupted their ways, and drew down the most terrible effects of God's anger upon the Earth. Afterwards the impious, the wicked, bad Israelites, were called the Sons
Psal. iv. 5 of Men: For example, How long will ye
Psal. xii. 1. love vanity, O ye Sons of men? And, The faithful are minished from among the chil-
Ps. lvii. 4. dren of men. And, The sons of men, whose teeth are spears and arrows. But very often, by the Sons of Men, mankind are to be understood without any odious
Ps. viii. 4. notion. What is man, that thou art mindful of him; or the son of man, that thou Psal. xi. 4. visitest him? And, His eyelids try the
Ps. cxlv. 12. children of Men. And again, To make known to the sons of men his mighty Acts.

Children, or Sons of Belial. See Belial.

Children sacrificed to Moloch. See Moloch.

2 Sam. iii. 3. CHILEAB the Son of David, and Abigail, formerly Wife to Nabal.

CHILION, the Son of Elimelech and Noami, of the City of Bethlehem in Judah, who, during a great famine, retired with his Father and Mother into the land of Moab, where he married a Moabite Woman, whose name was Orpah. He died sometime after in this Country, without leaving any Children behind him. Ruth i. 4, 19.

CHIMHAM, the Son of Barzillai the Gileadite. He followed David to Jerusalem after the War with Absalom; and David bestowed great riches on him, in consideration of his Father Barzillai, who had so generously assisted him in his 2 Sam. xix. 37, 38.
flight.

CHIMHAM, a place in the Neighbourhood of Bethlehem, Jer. xli. 17.

CHIMNEY. See Caminus.

CHINA, is one of the finest Countries in Asia. The Arabians write it Sin; the Persians, and other eastern People Tchin. They tell us, that this Country derives its name from one of the Sons of Japheth[l], called Sin. He was, say they, the eldest and most understanding of Japheth's Children; he had likewise the best partition, and the large Country of China for his Inheritance. He it was who taught his Sons painting, sculpture, and the art of preparing Silk, so as to make different sorts of Stuffs with it. In a word, some assert, that the Works so much in vogue in China, and so much valued by Foreigners, are for the most part of his Invention.

His eldest Son was Matchin, who peopled the southern part of China, wherein we comprehend Cochinchina, Tunquin, and the Kingdom of Anan, together with those of Siam and Pegu. The antient Histories of the Persians say, that Feridoun King of the first Dynasty, called the Peichadians, gave China and Turkastan to his Son Tour for his Inheritance, with the title of Fagfour, which has continued hereditary to the Kings of this Country, like Pharaoh to those of Egypt. It is a very antient Tradition among the eastern People, [m] that there is a very great number of Jews in China, and that they removed thither in the time of Joshua, God having opened a way thither for their arrival. But there is much more probability, that they who are to be met with in this part of the World, went thither after the Captivities of Israel under Salmanesser, and the other three Kings of Assyria. In reality the passage thither is not very difficult from the Territories of the Medes and Persians.

It cannot be denied, that formerly there was a great number of Jews in China; the eldest relations [n] that we have of this Country declare, that at the general desolation of it, principally at the taking of Cumdan, there was a great number of Christians and Jews massacred. But when, and upon what occasion the Jews came thither, we do not know. The Chinese Histories give us no intelligence in this

[l] Bibl. Orient. p. 811.

[m] Idem. p. 474.

[n] See the account of China printed at Paris in 1718. p. 374.

this particular, either becaufe the fettlement of this People was made there infenfibly, and without noife, or becaufe the Chinefe Hiftorians, with whom it is a maxim to take no notice of foreign affairs, did not think proper to make mention of them.

At prefent there are few of them in China, where they lye difperfed in feveral Provinces, and particularly in the trading Cities. F. Ricci relates, that a Jew of Caifamfu coming to Pekin, in order to take his degrees there, had the curiofity to vifit him, upon receiving information that he adored one God only, and was not engaged in the Superftitions practifed by the Idolaters of that Country. F. Ricci carried him to a Chapel, where there was a picture of the Bleffed Virgin holding the Child Jefus in her arms, and S. John Baptift near him. The Jew imagined thefe to be Rebekah, Jacob and Efau. He made the like judgment of a Picture reprefenting the four Evangelifts. This Father afterwards propofed feveral Queftions to him, and difcovered by his Anfwers, that he was Profeffor of the old Law, and owned himfelf to be an Ifraelite, not a Jew; whereupon he concluded, that he was a defcendant of the ten Tribes, which were led into Captivity.

Father Ricci fhewed him afterwards the Polyglot Bible of Antwerp; the Jew found out the Hebrew Characters in it, but could not read them; becaufe, as he confeffed, he had neglected the ftudy of this Language, and had applied himfelf to that of the Chinefe Letters, upon which account he had been like to be expelled out of the Synagogue. He was likewife informed by him, that there were ten or twelve families of Jews in the fame City, where they had a handfom Synagogue, and had preferved the Pentateuch written in Volumes or Rolls for about five or fix hundred years; that there was likewife in the Province of Chequiang a greater number of Ifraelites, and a Synagogue; but that in the other Provinces, their number was very much diminifhed, and they had no Synagogue.

Father Adam Shaal, a famous Miffionary, wrote from Pekin, that he had feen Jews in the Kingdom of Kafchemir, who had preferved Judaifm and the Old Teftament, and knew nothing of the death of Jefus Chrift; that they fhewed an inclination to choofe this Jefuit for their Chakam, provided he would abftain from eating Swine's flefh.

Another Jefuit, whofe name is Gozani, mentions the difcovery of a Synagogue in the Province of Henan in China. He believes that there were Jews in this Country before Jefus Chrift. They were acquainted with Efdras and Jefus the Son of Sirach (probably Jefus the Son of Sirach, author of Ecclefiafticus) and followed the method of the Talmudifts in their explanations. But all this is more proper to perfuade us, that thefe Jews are modern, than that they are derived from the old difperfion of the ten Tribes; for neither the Talmudifts nor Ecclefiafticus, nor the Hiftory of Judith, could have been known to them.

There is a long Letter from the Jews of Cochin[a], written to the Synagogue of Amfterdam, wherein they fay, that they retired to the Indies at the time when the Holy Land was conquered by the Romans; that they have had feventy two Kings fucceeding one another, for the fpace of a thoufand years; that a divifion arifing between two Brothers, who contended for the Kingdom, the neighbouring Princes fubdued them: From which time they have continued fubject to the Kings of China; that by their conftant fidelity to thefe Princes they had merited many marks of efteem and confidence; that in the year 1640, Samuel one of their brethren died Governor of Cochin, and left his Office to a Jew of the fame name.

Manaffeh-Ben-Ifrael, who was perfuaded that there was a great number of Ifraelites in China, applied the following Paffage of Ifaiah to them; [b] Thefe from the Ifa. xlix. 12.
land of Sinim fhall come from far; that is to fay, according to him, from the land of the Chinefe. S. Jerom tranflates it from the land of the fouth. The Septuagint from Perfia; but the Hebrew Sin fignifies dirt, and the City of Pelufium, or Damietta; fo that the Prophet in all probability intended to defcribe Damietta and Egypt by thefe words from the land of Sinim.

As to what the eaftern People fay of Schin or Sin the Son of Japheth, and Father of the Chinefe, we believe there is no great account to be made of it, the facred Books taking no notice of him. Hereafter, under the Article of S. Thomas, we fhall fpeak of the Chriftians of China, and the famous infcription found in this Country.

CHIPPUR or Kippur, the Feaft of folemn expiation among the Jews. This term comes from Caphar or Kipper to expiate. See Expiation.

CHISLON, the Father of Elidad of the Tribe of Benjamin. He was one of thofe deputed to make a diftribution of the land of Canaan, Numb. xxxiv. 21.

CHIT-

[a] Bafnage Hift. des Juifs t. 5. l. 7. c. 33.

[b] מארץ סינים Vulg. de terra Auftrali, ἐκ γῆς de terra Perfarum. Ἀπὸ γῆς Περσῶν.

CHITTIM. Isaiah ſpeaking of the deſtruction of Tyre by King Nebuchadnezzar, ſays, Howl ye veſſels of the ſea, for the place where the ſhips were uſed to ſail is deſtroyed, its ruin ſhall come from the land of Chittim. If the land of Chittim ſignifies Macedonia, as we have ſhewn in our Comment on the tenth Chapter of Geneſis, and in this Dictionary, how can it be ſaid here, that the deſtruction of Tyre occaſioned by Nebuchadnezzar, ſhould come from the land of Chittim? might it not be more properly interpreted as relating to the deſtruction of this City by Alexander the great? A modern Author [a] by the word Chittim underſtands the Cuthæans, Inhabitants of the Suziana near Babylon, and Subjects to Nebuchadnezzar, who marched under the Conduct of this Prince, and contributed to the ſiege of Tyre, with the other People who compoſed his Army. But in what place of Scripture are the Cuthæans deſcribed by the name Chittim? Bochart ſuppoſes the Romans to be meant by Chittim; but the Romans were not concerned in the Siege of Tyre, here mentioned by Iſaiah, and Tyre under the Roman Empire was not an object worthy of their indignation.

We are of opinion, that in this place, as well as every where beſides, the Macedonians are intended by the word Chittim, and we tranſlate the Hebrew of Iſaiah af-
Isai. xxiii. 1. ter the following manner, Howl ye ſhips of Tarſhiſh, becauſe Tyre is deſtroyed within; it is open on the ſide where people enter who come from Chittim. They come from Macedonia to Tyre from the Seaward. The City was thought to be impregnable on this ſide, becauſe it was built upon a Rock waſhed every way by the Sea. Notwithſtanding the Prophet foretels, that it would be taken, laid waſte, and open on this ſide: Moreover that it ſhould be ravaged from within, by its own Inhabitants; diviſion would ariſe among the Citizens, or Soldiers who defended it.

Iſaiah adds, v. 12. Thou daughter of Zidon, city of Tyre, ariſe, paſs over to Chittim, there alſo thou ſhalt have no reſt. Seek for refuge in Macedonia in a remote and maritime Country, yet even thither God will purſue you: his hand will not ſuffer you to reſt there.

Jeremiah reproaching the Iſraelites with their inconſtancy in the Religion of Jer. ii. 10. their Forefathers, ſays to them, Paſs over the iſles of Chittim and ſee; and ſend into Kedar and conſider diligently, and ſee if there be ſuch a thing. Hath a nation changed their gods which are yet no gods? The Prophet ſpeaks of the Iſles of Chittim, of the Country of Macedonia, under the name of an Iſland, after the manner of the Hebrews, who call thus Peninſulas and maritime Countries.

CHIUN, or Chevan. We meet with this word in the Hebrew of the Prophet Amos, cited in the Acts of the Apoſtles. S. Luke reads the paſſage thus: Ye took up the taber- Acts vii. 43.
nacle of Moloch, and the ſtar of your god Remphan, figures which ye made to worſhip them. The import of the Hebrew is as follows, Ye have born the Tabernacle of your Amos v. 26.
kings, and the pedeſtal (the Chiun) of your images, the ſtar of your gods, which ye made to yourſelves. The Septuagint in all probability read Repham or Revan, inſtead of Chiun or Chevan, and took the pedeſtal for a God. Others are of opinion, that three falſe Deities are to be diſtinguiſhed here, Moloch, Chiun and Remphan. Others again affirm, that the three mean only one God, adored under ſo many different names; and that this God was Saturn, and his planet. Salmaſius and Kircher aſſert, that Kium is Saturn, and that his Star is called Keiran among the Perſians and Arabians, and that Remphan or Rephan ſignified the ſame thing among the Egyptians. They add, that the Septuagint, who made their Tranſlation in Egypt, changed the word Chiun into that of Remphan, becauſe they had the ſame ſignification. See the Article Remphan and our Diſſertation upon the Idolatry of the Hebrews in the Wilderneſs, prefixed to the twelve Prophets. M. Baſnage in his Book intitled, Jewiſh Antiquities, after having diſcourſed a good deal upon Chion or Rempham, concludes, that Moloch was the Sun, and Chion, or Chiun, or Rephan, the Moon. t. 2. p. 576— 581, 611, 614, 617.

CHLOE, a Woman of Corinth, and a Chriſtian: She gave S. Paul notice of the diviſions which were then reigning at Corinth, upon the account of Cephas, Apollos and himſelf. See 1 Cor. i. 11. Chloe did not herſelf write to Paul; but procured ſome of her family to do this for her. [1] S. Chryſoſtom conjectures, that ſhe 1 Cor. i. 11. Ab his qui ſunt Chloes ὑπὸ τῶν Χλοῆς.
made uſe of Stephanus, Fortunatus and Achaicus, who were the firſt fruits of Achaia. Some have taken Chloe for a Man; but it is the name of a Woman. Pauſanias gives Ceres the ſirname of Chloe.

CHOEROGRYLLUS, a Hedgehog, or a Porcupine, an animal which the Law of Moſes has declared to be unclean [2]. The Legiſlator ſays, that the Hedge-hog chews the Cud; but as it divides not the Levit. xi. 5. שפן χοιρογρύλλιος Choerogryllus.
hoof, it is judged unclean. The Hebrew Schaphan is not very well underſtood by us.

[a] Baſnage Antiquites des Juifs t. 1. p. 330.

הילילו אניות תרשיש כי שדד מבית מבוא מארץ כתים נגלה למו

נשאתם סכות מלככם ואת כיון צלמיכם כוכב אלהיכם אשר עשיתם לכם us. Some fay it is the Hare, others the Rabbit. But Mofes had before fpoken of the Hare, and the Rabbit does not chew the cud. It cannot therefore be either of thefe animals. Nor can it be the Chærogryllus or Hedgehog, becaufe it does not chew the cud. Bochart believes it to be a kind of large Rat, common in Arabia, good to eat, and called Aliarbuho. Thefe animals chew the cud, dwell in rocks, and go in troops; qualities which the Scripture afcribes to the Schaphan.

See the Hebrew Vol. xiv. 18. Prov. xxx. 26. Levit. xi 5.

CHOREBA, a Town in Judah, 1 Chr. iv. 22. the fame probably as Cafeb or Cazbi, Jofh. xv. 44. Micah i. 14.

CHRIST. This word comes from the Greek, Chriftos, which fignifies anointed, and anfwers to the Hebrew Meffiah. This is the name attributed by the Hebrews to that Saviour and Deliverer whom they expected, and who was promifed to them by all the Prophets. As the holy Unction was given to Kings, Priefts and Prophets, by defcribing the promifed Saviour of the World, under the name of Anointed, or Meffiah, it was fufficiently evidenced, that the qualities of King, Prophet and High-Prieft, would all eminently meet in him, and that he fhould exercife them not only over the Jews, but over all Mankind, and in a particular manner over thofe who fhould believe in him, and acknowledge him for their Saviour, their King, their Prieft and their Prophet. We fhall in another place fpeak of Jefus Chrift the true Meffiah and Redeemer of Mankind. See the Article Jefus Chrift, and that of Meffiah.

CHRISTIAN, Chriftianus, Difciple of Jefus Chrift. Chriftians were diftinguifhed from Jews firft at Antioch, and there were called Chriftiani, or Difciples of Chrift. They were generally called Brethren, Faithful, Saints, Believers. The name of Nazarens and Galileans, was likewife given them by the Gentiles. It has been the opinion of feveral, that Chriftian was derived originally from the Greek, Chreftos, good, ufeful; and Suetonius[t] fpeaking of Claudius, and of his expelling the Jews out of Rome, fays, that he banifhed them thence, becaufe they were continually quarrelling concerning Chrift. Judæos, impulfore Chrefto, affidue tumultuantes, Româ expulit. Chrift, as Lactantius fays, is no proper name, but one denoting power[u]; for the Jews were ufed to give this appellation to their Kings, and called them Chrifts', or anointed by reafon of the Sacred Unction received by them. But, as he adds, the Heathen by miftake call Jefus Chrift Chreftus: Sed eum, immutata littera, Chreftum folent dicere. And Tertullian[x], The name of Chriftian comes from the Unction received by Jefus Chrift, and that of Chriftianus, which you fometimes through miftake give us, (for you are not particularly acquainted with our name) fignifies that Gentlenefs and Benignity whereof we make profeffion: Sed & perperam Chriftianus pronuntiatur a vobis (nam nec nominis certa eft notitia penes vos) de fuavitate vel benignitate compofitum eft.

Acts xi. 26.

CHRISTIANS of S. John. They whom Travellers call Chriftians of S. John, and the Eaftern people Sabians[y], are not a particular Nation, as that might be of the Sabeans in Arabia, but they who make profeffion of a particular Religion, prevailing pretty much in the Provinces of the Eaft: It is not eafy to demonftrate in what particularly this Religion confifts, the eaftern Authors being very little agreed about it; but this is evident, that the Religion of the Sabians, is one of the three to which Mahomet granted his protection in the Alcoran; which three Religions are Judaifm, Chriftianity, and Sabiifm. See the Article Zabians or Sabians.

The Chriftians of S. John, or Sabians, have borrowed many obfervances from the Chriftian Religion; they have a kind of Baptifm, and great veneration for S. John Baptift, whofe Difciples they call themfelves. They read not only the Book of Pfalms, which they call Zebour, but another Book alfo, which they attribute to Adam, and look upon as their Bible, the characters whereof are very particular, but the language of it is almoft intirely Chaldee.

The Arabian Authors tell us[z], that thefe people are defcendants of the moft antient Nation in the World, that they ftill at this day, in their Books at leaft, fpeak the language ufed by Adam and his Sons; that they hold their Religion and their Law from Scheith and Edris, who are the Patriarchs Seth and Noah, whofe Books abounding with moral inftructions are ftill in their poffeffion. They pray to God feven times a day, and intermix no other action with this exercife. They faft during the whole courfe of a Moon, and take no nourifhment from the rifing to the fetting of the Sun. This faft always ends at the vernal Equinox, which anfwers very nearly to the Jewifh Paffover.

They honour the Temple of Mecca, and have likewife much refpect for the Pyramids of Egypt; becaufe they believe Sabi the Son of Enoch to be buried in the third. Their principal Pilgrimage is performed at a place near Haran in Mefopotamia, which fome maintain to be the place of Abraham's birth; but is certainly that from whence he departed when he fet

[t] Sueton. in Claudio.
[y] Bibl. Orient. p. 725.
[u] Lactant. de vera Sapient. l. 4. c. 7.
[z] Ben Schunah. ibid.
[x] Tertull. Apologet.

set out upon his journey to Palestine. Others are of opinion, that this place is honoured by them, by reason of Sabi the Son of Mari, who lived in Abraham's time, and from whom probably they derive their original, much rather than from Sabi the Son of Enoch, who is not known to us in the Scripture, and must have lived before the Deluge.

Another Arabian Author [y] says, that the Religion of the Sabians was not only the most antient, but farther, the general and only Religion of the World, till the time of Abraham, from whom all other Religions are descended. They say, that the antient Persians, Chaldæans, Assyrians, Greeks, Egyptians, and Indians, were all Sabians, before they embraced Judaism, Christianity, or Mahometanism. And the eastern Christians make no scruple of affirming that Constantine the Great forsook the Religion of the Sabians, to espouse that of the Christians.

M. Chardin [z] in his travels into Persia, says, that the Disciples of S. John are inconsiderable in number, and scattered over Arabia, Persia, and along the Persian Gulph; that they come originally from Chaldæa, and were the antient Disciples of Zoroastres, many of whose opinions are maintained by them: they received the Baptism of S. John, and blended the Doctrine of Christianity with Jewish practices, and the extravagancies of Mahometanism. They esteem S. John Baptist to be the Author of their Creed, their Rites, and even of their Books. They receive every year the Baptism of S. John, who, with his Father and Mother, is their great and only Saint. They place his Tomb near Chuster the Capital of Chusistan; where likewise they suppose to be the source of Jordan. They do not hold Jesus Christ to be the Son of God, but only for a Prophet, and the Spirit of God. Their veneration for the Cross proceeds almost to idolatry.

They have a Book called Divan, which they esteem sacred: There we may read that God is corporeal, and that he has a Son whose name is Gabriel, by whom he hath created the World. He created also Angels with bodies, and of different sexes, capable of engendering. It is said, that they consecrate, or believe they consecrate Bread kneaded with Wine and Oil, and that after they have carried it in procession, they eat it. They have Bishops and Priests who succeed one another from Father to Son; their Priests marry young Virgins. Some assure us, that once every year they sacrifice a Hen upon the banks of some River; they sacrifice also a Ram. They receive their Baptism every year with aspersion or immersion, as they please, and in the name of God only; for they acknowledge neither the Son nor Holy Ghost. Polygamy is permitted among them. They are almost as scrupulous in observing Purifications as the Jews. Such are the pretended Christians of S. John.

Christians of the Girdle. In the East [a], they call the Nestorians or Jacobites, and sometimes even the Maronites by this name, tho' the latter are Catholicks. The original of this denomination is as follows. Motavakel, tenth Caliph of the house of the Abbassides, was the first Mahometan Prince who obliged the Christians and Jews of his Dominions to wear a black leathern Girdle [b], which they continue to do at this day, principally in Asia, in order to be distinguished from Mahometans. From this time the Christians of Syria and Mesopotamia, who are almost all Nestorians or Jacobites have generally worn it; for which reason they are called the Christians of the Girdle. When any of these people were excommunicated, their Girdle called Zonar was cut, and with it some stripes were given them upon the shoulders. When the eastern Poets intend to praise their Princes, and exaggerate their conquests over Christians, they say they have silenced their Bells, and cut their black Girdles in a thousand pieces.

CHRONICLES. The two Books, by the Greeks called Parallipomena, and by the Hebrews Dibrei haiamim, or words דברי of days go under this name. See Para- הימים lipomena.

The Jews have Chronicles or Histories in their Language, but they are uncorrect, and very modern. We have discoursed concerning the History of Joseph Ben-Gorion under the title of this Author. Besides this, there are seven Chronicles or historical Books among the Jews, whereof it may be proper to say a word or two in this place.

1°. Seder-olam-Rabba, that is to say, the great Chronicle, or the great order of the Age, so called, to distinguish it from the small Chronicle, which goes under the name of Seder-olam-Seutah; because this is shorter, and a later composition [c]. It is thought Rabbi Jose Son of Caliptha is the Author of Seder-olam-Rabba; he lived a little after the beginning of the second Century, and was, as is reported, Master to Rabbi Judah the Holy, who composed the Mishna. But Rabbi Azarias in the third part of his Meor-enaim, says, he had seen a Manuscript of it, wherein it was asserted, that the Author lived seven hundred seventy two years after the destruction destruction of the Temple at Jerusalem, which answers to the year of Jesus Christ 832. It is very certain, that he did not write till after the Babylonish Talmud, for it contains abundance of fables, and extravagant conceits, which may be clearly discerned to have been taken from thence. The Author scarce speaks of any thing but events which are recorded in the Scripture. Buxtorf says, that it descends to the time of Adrian; and the victory obtained by this Prince over Barchochebas: What proves R. Jose not to be the Author of it is, that he is cited in many places of it. The Author affirms, that the Prophet Elijah, after his transportation, wrote ten letters to King Jehoram; that he wrote the history of the World in the place of his abode; that Job was the Father of Balaam; that Joshua, after the passage of Jordan, wrote the Law in seven Languages, upon the twelve stones which by his order were taken out of Jordan.

[y] Ben-Hazem. [z] Chardin. Voyage de Perse, t. 3. p. 307. [a] D'Herbelot. Bibl. Orient. p. 68, 939. [b] This Ordinance was published in the 235th year of Hegira. [c] Prideaux's Preface to his History of the Jews, Bartolocci Bibl. Rabbin.

The second Chronicle of the Jews is intitled Teshuvoth R. Sherira Gaon. The answers of R. Sherira the sublime Doctor. This is an historical treatise written by way of Questions and Answers; the Work is very short. The Author was President at Babylon, and head of all the Schools and Academies in this Country. He entred upon his office in 967, and was thirty years in possession of this dignity, which he resigned to his Son R. Haia, the last of those who bore the title of Gaon or Sublime Doctors. It was in his time, in 1037, that the King of Babylon, who was a Mahometan, banished all the Jews out of his Dominions; so that all their Schools were forsaken. Sherira wrote the History of these Academies, and inferred the Succession of the several Rabbins who had appeared in them from the Talmud to his time.

The third Chronicle is intitled Seder-olam-Zutha, or the lesser Chronicle, to distinguish it from the Seder-olam-Rabbah above-mentioned. The lesser Chronicle was written 1055 years after the destruction of the Temple; that is to say, in the year of Jesus Christ 1123; who the Author of it is we know not. He gives us a very short abridgment of History from the Creation of the World, to the year of Jesus Christ 522. From this time it is continued further for eight Generations, but without mentioning any thing besides names.

The Title of the fourth Chronicle is, Sepher Kabbalah R. Abraham Levitæ Ben-Dior, the Book of Tradition composed by Rabbi Abraham the Levite, Son of Dior. The principal design of this Work is to give an account of the succession of those through whose hands the Traditions of the Jews passed from Generation to Generation, from Moses down to the Author, who was living in the year of Jesus Christ 1160. He follows very much Josephus the Son of Gorion, and is one of those who brought him most into vogue.

The fifth Chronicle is, Sepher Juchasin, or the Book of Genealogies. This Work is larger than any of the four above-mentioned. He begins with the Creation, and continues the History down to the year of Jesus Christ 1500. The Author of it was Abraham Zacuth, who published it at Cracow in Poland in the year 1580. he describes with great care the Succession of the Jewish Traditions from mount Sina, and the names of those eminent Doctors, who taught them as low as his own time.

The Title of the sixth Chronicle is Shalsheleth Haccabalah, or the Chain of Tradition. It is an historical Book of the same kind with that preceding. The Author was Rabbi Gedaliah, the Son of Jechaiah, who published it at Venice in 1587.

The seventh Chronicle is Zemah David, or the branch of David. It begins at the Creation, and descends to the year of Jesus Christ 1592, when it appeared at Prague in Bohemia. The subject is the same with that of the two last preceding. The Author was David Ganz a Bohemian Jew. William Henry Vorstius Son of Conrad Vorstius, translated it into Latin, and published it at Leyden in 1644.

The Chronicle of the Prophet Moses, intitled in Hebrew, Dibrei-Hajamima-Schel-Mose, is a fabulous Book concerning the life of Moses, printed at Venice, in 1544, translated into Latin by M. Gaulmin.

The Samaritan Chronicle was published by M. Bernard, and communicated to the Journalists of Lipsick. M. Basnage * has inserted it with some remarks in his History of the Jews. It begins at the Creation of the World, and continues to taking of Samaria by Saladin 1187. It is very short and unaccurate. See the Article Samaritans.

CHRYSOLITE, a precious Stone, the tenth fixed upon the High-Priest's Pectoral, with the name of Zebulon engraven on it. This Stone is transparent, of the colour of Gold, with a mixture of green in it, which casts a fine lustre. The Hebrew word is Tarshish, which the Septuagint and S. Jerom translate sometimes Carbuncle; the Rabbins in their explanation of it, will have it to be the Beryl. But we Exod. xxviii. 20. & xxxix. 19.

תרשיש Tarshish.

* Hist. des Juifs, t. 6. l. viii. c. 6. p. 64.

we may be very certain that they do not know well what it is.

CHRYSOPRASUS, the tenth of those precious Stones, which adorned the foundation of the heavenly Jerusalem; the colour of it was green, much like that of a Leak, but something inclining to that of Gold, as its name imports.

CHRYSTAL. See Glass.

CHUB. This is a word which we meet with in Ezekiel; it probably signifies the Cubians, placed by Ptolemy in the Mareotis [a]. Chub, is a term which occurs in no other part of Scripture.

Ezek. xxx. 5.

CHUN, a City of Syria, conquered by David. We think it to be Cunna, described in Antonin's Itinerary, and perhaps called Ganna in Ptolemy.

CHURCH. The Greek word Ecclesia signifies Assembly: It is taken both for the place where the Assembly is held, and for the persons there assembled. We find it made use of to signify either a profane, or a sacred and religious Assembly. In the Books of the New Testament it generally stands for the Church of Christ, which is the Congregation of the Faithful; who under the conduct of lawful Ministers, make but one Body, whereof Jesus Christ is the Head. Particular Churches are likewise meant by it, as that of Corinth, Ephesus, Thessalonica and others.

In the Books of the Old Testament, Ecclesia is sometimes taken for the Society of the Jews; for example, Cur eduxisti Ecclesiam Domini in solitudinem? Why hast thou brought the Assembly, the Body, the multitude of God's People into the Wilderness? And elsewhere: Eunuchs, Bastards, the Ammonites and Moabites shall not be admitted into the Church of God. They shall not be received into the Land; the Israelites shall neither marry with them, nor permit them to dwell among the People; or they shall not be received as Proselytes to profess the Religion of the Lord: This shews an extreme aversion and contempt for these People; they were looked upon as profane persons, with whom the Hebrews were to have no commerce, either in civil or religious affairs.

Numb. xx. 4.

Deut. xxiii. 1, 23, &c.

But as to the Edomites and Egyptians, Moses suffers them to enter into the church of the Lord after the third generation; that is to say, if an Egyptian or Edomite settle in the Land, and is willing to become there a sojourning Proselyte [b], his Children after the third generation, may marry Israelitish Women, and be let into the privileges of the Hebrews: Or otherwise, if an Hebrew marries an Edomite or Egyptian Woman, his Children cannot be esteemed true Israelites till the third Generation. They cannot marry an Israelitish Woman, and be admitted into the Temple, and publick employments.

Ibid. v. 8.

The Church is likewise taken for a Communion in the Society and Prayers of God's People; to be excluded from the Church, signifies Excommunication: For example, it is said, that he, who after he had touched a dead body, or been present at a funeral, should not purify himself with lustral water, wherein were cast the ashes of a red Heifer sacrificed for that purpose, should be cut off from among the congregation, because he had defiled the Sanctuary: He should be excommunicated and shut out from the Congregation of Israel; he should be looked upon as a profane and uncircumcised person. The Rabbins understand this as meaning bodily death, a sudden, or violent death; or the death of the Soul, or of both Body and Soul, according to the grievousness of the crime, and the importance of the matter.

Numb. xix. 21.

The Church is likewise used for the holy place, the Tabernacle, Temple, or Synagogue, where the People of the Lord assembled. The Elders of Israel performed their Prayers in the Church or Synagogue of Bethulia. Intra Ecclesiam oraverunt. And the Psalmist, I will praise thee in the Church; I will publish thy praises in the church of the Saints; in a great Church; that is to say, in the Temple, where the Saints, the Israelites, and in a word, all the People assembled together.

Judith vi. 21.
Psal. xxii. 23. 26.

By the Church is sometimes meant the society of the Faithful, who have preserved the true Religion committed to their care, from the beginning of the World to this day, and will preserve it to the consummation of Ages. The Succession of this Church hath been delivered down to us by Moses, from the beginning of the World unto his time; and from Moses to the coming of Jesus Christ, we have the sacred Writings of the Hebrews, and their Histories, which inform us of the different Revolutions that have happened in Religion among the Israelites. Adam instructed his Sons in the true Religion; but corruption of manners soon crept into his family:

[a] Ptolem. l. 4. c. 5. p. 107.

[b] There were two sorts of Proselytes among the Jews, the Proselytes of the Gates, and the Proselytes of Justice. The former were obliged to renounce Idolatry, and worship God according to the Law of Nature, which they reduced to seven Articles, called by them the seven Precepts of the Sons of Noah; such were allowed to live with them, and from hence were called Gerim Toshavim, or sojourning Proselytes, and likewise for the same reason Gere Shaar, or Proselytes of the Gates, as being permitted to dwell with those of Israel, within the same Gates. Concerning these Proselytes, see Mede Book I. Discourse 3. Hammond's Annotations on Mat. iii. 1. and xxiii. 15. Buxtorf's Lexicon Rabbinicum, p. 407—10. But the fullest account of both these sorts of Proselytes, is in Maimonides's Yod, from whence it was published by D. Prideaux, about 50 years since, with a Latin Version, and Annotations under the Title, de Jure Pauperis & Peregrini. See Dr. Prideaux's Connection, &c. Book v. Part ii.

family: Two Churches were hereupon formed, one composed of the Children of God, descended from Seth, the other of the Children of men issuing from the Race of Cain. Both continued till the Deluge, after which Noah inspired his Sons with such sentiments of Religion, as he himself abounded with: But how long these were preserved by them, we cannot tell.

Moses is our Guide from Shem down to Abraham the Father of the Faithful; but he does not inform us, whether the true Religion was preserved by the Descendants of Ham and Japheth, nor how long it subsisted among them: But on one side we see, that Abraham's Ancestors worshipped Idols in Chaldea, and on the other (Gen. xx. 3, 4, 5.) we know, that the fear of the Lord was not intirely banished out of Palestine and Egypt, when Abraham came thither: For the King of Gerar, as well as the King of (Gen. xii. 17, 18, &c.) Egypt, feared God, and had a great abhorrence of sin. The High Priest Melchisedech is a farther Proof of what we have been saying. (Gen. xiv. 18.) The same Abraham imagined, that there were at least ten or twenty righteous persons in Sodom. (Gen. xviii. 23, 24, 25.) From Abraham down to Jesus Christ we find a continued succession of the true Church among the Jews, and other descendants of this Patriarch; for it is very credible that the Sons of Abraham, by Hagar and Keturah, did likewise for some time preserve the depositum of the Faith, which they had received from their Father. Job, who was one of Esau's Posterity, and his friends, knew the Lord. The Ammonites and Moabites, descended from Lot, did not probably fall immediately into that Idolatry wherein we see them plunged so early as in the time of Moses.

The Ishmaelites Sons of Hagar and Abraham, value themselves upon having adhered always to the worship of the true God, and extended the knowledge of him in Arabia, as Isaac did in Palestine. We do not credit them upon their bare word; for it is certain, that in the time of Mahomet, and long before, they had forsaken the true Faith; but it is impossible to shew exactly the particular period of their perversion. As to the Descendants of Isaac, we have indubitable proofs, that notwithstanding so many revolutions as happened in their Nation, the frequent transgressions of the Law by most of their Princes, and the almost continual Infidelities of the Israelites in general, God was at all times known among them, and reserved to himself a good number of true worshippers. And lastly, that we are to look for the true Church in Israel, till the formation of the Church of Christ.

CHUSHAN-RISHATHAIM, King of Mesopotamia, oppressed the Israelites for eight years. At the end whereof, the Hebrews cried unto the Lord, and he raised up a deliverer for them; Othniel, the Son of Kenaz, and Son-in-law of Caleb. (From the Year of the World 2591, to 2599.) Othniel marched against Chushan-Rishathaim, and the Lord delivered him into his hands. (Judg. iii. 8, 9, 10.)

CHUZA, Steward to Herod Agrippa, and husband to Joanna, of whom there is mention made in S. Luke. viii. 3.

CHYTROPODES, Skillets or Pots. We meet with this term in Leviticus xi. 35. where God commands the earthen Pots to be broken, into which any unclean thing should fall. The Hebrew word Kiraim, which S. Jerom has translated Pots, (Levit. xi. 35. כירים Kiraim.) is understood by others to mean an Hearth, or Oven, a Cistern or Bason to wash ones feet in. Kiraim is of the dual number, and signifies a vessel composed of two pieces. (כיור Laver. A Bason, a Cistern.)

CICER, Chich Pease. The antient Hebrews made use of chich Pease as their common provision, when they took the field. They parched them, and so eat them. Among other provisions wherewith Barzillai supplied David in his flight, parched Pease is reckoned, frixum cicer. (2 Sam. xvii. 28.) And still at this day in Egypt, when people undertake a journey, they lay in a good stock of chich Pease parched in a Frying-pan. [c] Bellon assures us, that at Grand Cairo and Damascus there are abundance of Shops, where people do nothing else but fry Pease, it being a sort of Provision wherewithal they furnish Travellers. (Account of Ethiopia.) In Ethiopia they take Barley with them roasted in the same manner. In Turky they lay in a stock of Rice on these occasions, which they prepare and shell. The Hebrew term cali signifies properly any thing roasted in general, and by it is understood roasted Pease, Rice or Barley. Some will have even Coffee to be meant by it. (2 Kings vi. 25.) There is a sort of chich Pease called Dove's Dung, which will be spoken of in its proper place.

CIDARIS, the Mitre used by the Jewish High Priests. Whenever there is mention of the High Priest's Mitre, the Hebrew word made use of to express it, is always Miznepheth, and Migbaoth, to signify the Bonnet belonging to common Priests. (Exod. xxviii. 4. מצנפת Miznepheth. Cidaris. מגבעות Pileus.) The Rabbins say, the same thing is meant by both these terms, and that the Bonnet used by Priests in general, was made of a piece of linen cloth sixteen yards long, which covered their heads like an Helmet, or a Turbant; and they allow no other difference to be between the High Priest's Bonnet, and that of other Priests than this, that one is flatter, and more in the form of a Turbant, whereas the other worn by ordinary Priests, rose something more in a point. I say nothing here of the [c] Bellon l. ii. c. 73.

the plate of Gold, which was an Ornament peculiar to the High Prieſt's Mitre.

Joſephus ſays [d], that the Bonnet worn by private Prieſts, was compoſed of many rounds of Linen Cloth turned in and ſewn together, ſo as to appear like a thick Crown made of Linen wove together. The whole was intirely covered with a piece of Linen Cloth, which came as low as the Forehead, that ſo the deformity of the ſeams might be concealed. As to the High Prieſt's Bonnet, he ſays it is like that which we have been deſcribing, but that another was put over it of a Violet colour, which covered the hinder part of the Head, and the two Temples, and was encompaſſed with a triple Crown of Gold, wherein were ſmall Buttons of henbane Flowers. This circle of Flowers was interrupted in the fore-part of the Tiara, at that place where the plate of Gold, with the name of God on it was fixed.

S. Jerom aſſures us, that the Prieſt's Bonnet was round, like that with which Ulyſſes was generally painted, as if a Sphere were cut in two, and one half of it were made uſe of for a Bonnet [e]. There was no point upon the top of it, nor did it cover the whole head of hair, but left one third part of it before bare: And to prevent its falling off, it was faſtened with a Ribbon, which was tied behind. It was of fine Linen, and ſo neatly covered with a Linen Cloth, as to hide all the Seams. This he takes to be what the Hebrews called Miznepheth; and that this kind of Bonnet was uſed both by the Prieſts and High Prieſt. Pileo de quo diximus, tam Sacerdotes, quam Pontifices utebantur.

It appears from all that we have ſaid, that the form of theſe Bonnets is not now well underſtood, the deſcriptions which are given us of them being ſo various and different. Moſes expreſly tells us, that the High Prieſt's Tiara was made of Scheſh, that is Cotton, and that of other Prieſts, of Linen only. The Tiara and the Prieſts Bonnets were tied with a Ribbon, which Ezekiel calls Crown; but that uſed by the High Prieſt was richer, and remarkable for the plate of Gold, with the name of God engraven on it, which was placed on the fore-part of the Tiara, and covered ſome of the High Prieſt's Forehead; the Ribbon was tied behind his Head. Laſtly, the Hebrew term Migbaoth, whereby the Bonnet of the common Prieſts was expreſſed, and which S. Jerom tranſlates Mitra, intimates, that this Bonnet had ſome reſemblance with an Helmet. And that of Miznepheth, which denotes the High Prieſt's Tiara, and is tranſlated Cidaris by the ſame S. Jerom, was probably of another form, and perhaps like thoſe ſtrait Tiaras, which were worn by the Kings of Perſia [f]. We ſee in Iſaiah, that the Kings of Judah wore a Bonnet on their Heads called Zenuph, which is derived from the ſame root as Miznepheth. It is to be obſerved, that the Hebrew Prieſts never appeared in the Temple without covering their Heads. And ſtill at this day it is reckoned an incivility in the Eaſt, and a mark of contempt, for any Man to pull off his Hat or Turbant to another, or to ſhew his naked head before any one.

CIGNUS. The Swan is a large water Fowl, that has a long and very ſtraight Neck; it is very white, excepting when it is young. Its Legs, Feet and Bill are black; its Bill is very like that of a Gooſe, but ſomething rounder, and a little hooked at the lower end of it; the two ſides below its Eyes are black and ſhining like Ebony. This Bird ſtretches its Wings like Sails, that the wind may drive it along, when it is in the water. It feeds upon herbs, and ſome ſort of grain like a Gooſe. It is very long lived, and ſome there have been which are ſaid to have lived three hundred years. There is a ſort of Swan, the right foot whereof is like the talons of a Bird of prey; this it makes uſe of in catching Fiſh by diving for them; but its left foot is like that of a Gooſe, and is of uſe only in ſwimming. There is beſides another ſpecies, which has all the feathers of its head towards the breaſt marked at the ends with yellow points like Gold, inclining to red [g]; and in all probability this is the ſpecies of Swans which Horace [h] calls purpurei, and by which he repreſents the Chariot of Venus to be drawn. The Swan was conſecrated to Apollo as to the God of Muſick, becauſe it was thought to ſing melodiouſly * when it was near expiring. The Latin Text of Scripture ſpeaks no where of the Swan, but in the enumeration of the Birds which were forbidden to be eat.

Moſes reckons the Swan among the unclean creatures; at leaſt S. Jerom thus tranſlates the Hebrew Tanſchemeth, where by — Lev. xi. 18 תנשמת [illegible]

[d] Antiq. l. iii. c. 8. [e] Hieronym. ad Fabiolam. [f] Xenophon de expedit. Cyri junioris. [g] See the word Cygnus in the Dictionary of Trevoux. [h] Hor. Carm. l. iv. Od. 1. Purpureis ales oloribus.

* The ſweetneſs of its ſinging is a Tradition generally received, but fabulous, Geeſe making as much melody as theſe creatures. But from this opinion the Poets have aſſumed the Title of Swans. Horace would be thought to be metamorphoſed into one. l. ii. Od. 20.

Jam, jam reſidunt cruribus aſperæ
Pelles & album mutor in alitem
Superne, naſcunturq; leves
Per digitos humeroſq; plumæ.

by the Septuagint underſtood the Porphyrio to be meant, which is a Bird, the bill whereof and legs are red like Porphyry. Onkelos the Samaritan Tranſlator, and Bochart, explain it by the Owl. We have offered ſome conjectures on Iſaiah, xiii. 21. to ſhew, that the Hebrew, Bath-janah was the Swan. This Bird loves the water; it is very cruel; it is celebrated for its mournful way of ſinging, and the ſhrill cries which it ſometimes ſends forth with ſo much force, and for ſo long a time, as to kill itſelf [i]: Which has given room for the obſervation made by many, of its ſinging, when it is upon the point of expiring.

Sic ubi fata vocant udis abjectus in herbis
Ad vada Mæandri concinit albus olor.

Lev. xi. 16. Deut. xiv. 16. Moſes ranks the young of the Haiana, which is generally tranſlated Oſtridge, among the unclean Animals.

CILICIUM, a ſort of habit made of coarſe ſtuff, of a black or dark colour formerly in uſe among the Hebrews in times of mourning and diſtreſs. It was called Cilicium, becauſe it came from Cilicia, or rather becauſe the Cilicians invented this kind of habit, made of Goats hair, and uſed principally in Camps and Ships, by Soldiers and Mariners [k]. The Septuagint and Hebrew call that Sackcloth, which S. Jerom tranſlates Cilicium, either becauſe Sacks were made of this ſort of ſtuff, or becauſe Hair-cloths were ſtrait and cloſe like a Sack. S. John in the Revelations ſhews plainly, that theſe Sack-cloths, or Hair-cloths were black, when he ſays, that the Sun became black as Sack-cloth made of hair. Sol factus eſt niger tanquam ſaccus cilicinus.

Gen. xxxvii. 34. It is ſaid in Scripture, that Jacob put on Sackcloth, when he was told that his Son Joſeph was dead. 2 Sam. xxi. 10. Rizpah Saul's Concubine lay on Sackcloth, while ſhe guarded her Sons, whom the Gibeonites had hanged. 1 Kings xxi. 27. Ahab cloathed himſelf with Sackcloth, when he heard how terribly the Prophet Elijah had by God's Command threatned him. 2 Kings vi. 29, 30. The ſame Prince put Sackcloth on his fleſh, while the Syrians beſieged Samaria; and having underſtood that a Woman had eaten her own Child, he tore his royal Robes, and all the people ſaw the Sackcloth which he wore upon his fleſh. So that theſe Hair-cloths were very different from what we call at preſent by this name. The old Monks were very often cloathed with theſe Hair-cloths of the old faſhion; that is to ſay, with coarſe rough habits of a darkiſh colour, much like the habit of the Capuchins. Paulinus ſpeaking of S. Martin, ſays [l],

Quin & contexto ſetis coopertus amictu,
Exeſa aſſiduo compunxit acumine membra.

CINIPHES. See Sciniphes.

CINNAMOMUM. God commands Moſes to take Cinnamon, and ſeveral other ſweet Spices, and make a perfumed Oil with them, to anoint the Tabernacle, and all the veſſels belonging to it. The Cinnamomum is a ſhrub, the bark whereof has an admirable ſcent; ſeveral of the Moderns confound it with the Cinnamon Tree and Caſſia Aromatica. Others diſtinguiſh theſe Species. It is certain that the true Cinnamomum is very rare. Matthiolus aſſures us, that whatever inquiries he had made after it, he could never find any of it; and in Galen's time it was ſo ſcarce, that it was hardly to be found any where but in the Emperor's Cabinet. Pliny [m] ſays, that it was formerly valued at a thouſand Denarii; but that the price of it was raiſed to double what it had been by the great waſte made by the Barbarians, who had burnt all theſe Trees. Matthiolus is of opinion, that the Cinnamomum is quite loſt in Arabia, as the Balſam Tree in Judæa. Some Rabbins by the Hebrew Cinnamon ſuppoſe Aloes to be underſtood. קנמן Kinnamon. 70. Kinnamomum.

No one at preſent makes the leaſt queſtion, but the Cinnamomum ſpoken of ſo confuſedly by the Antients, is Cinnamon; now Cinnamon is a long thin Bark, rolled up together, of a dark red colour, of a poignant taſte, aromatick, and very agreeable. The fine Cinnamon comes all from the Iſle of Ceylon. Some other Barks are likewiſe called Cinnamon, ſuch as Clove Cinnamon, white Cinnamon, and the Caſſia Lignea. Clove Cinnamon is the bark of a Tree to be found in the Iſle of Madagaſcar, and called Ravendſara. White Cinnamon is the bark of a Tree which grows in America, at Jamaica, and S. Domingo. The Caſſia Lignea is the Bark of a Tree called by the People of Malabar Katoukarva. Some believe it to be the ſecond Bark of the wild Cinnamon Tree.

But there is no probability that Moſes intended to ſpeak of the Cinnamon of Ceylon, nor thoſe of America, which was an unknown Country, and in all likelihood not peopled in his time, and Trade was not as yet opened with the Iſle of Ceylon, or Taprobrana. But there might be Cinnamon in Arabia, or Ethiopia; or however, the Hebrew word Cinnamon made uſe of by Moſes, ſignifies ſomething elſe, beſides Cinnamon. The Hebrew reading is Kinnamon here and in Cant. iv. 14. Exod. xxx. 23. Matthiolus tells us, that the Cinnamomum has failed in Arabia, in like manner

[i] Ælian l. v. c. 34.

[k] Nec minus interea barbas incanaque menta
Cinyphii tondent hirci, ſetaſque comantes;
Uſum in caſtrorum & miſeris velamina nautis. Virgil. Georgic. l. iii. v. 311.

[l] Paulin. l. ii. de vita Sancti Martini.

[m] Vide Plin. l. xii. c. 19.

ner as the Balfam Tree in Judæa. This fhould feem to be rather a Gum or Oil, than a Bark or odoriferous Wood.

CINNERETH, or Ceneroth, or Cinneroth, a City in the Tribe of Naphtali, to the South whereof there lay a great Plain, which reached as far as the Dead Sea all along the River Jordan. Many believe, with a good deal of probability, that Cinnereth was the fame as Tiberias; and as the Lake of Genezareth, which in Hebrew is called the Lake of Cinnereth, is without doubt that of Tiberias, there is fome reafon to believe that Cinnereth and Tiberias are likewife the fame City. See Tiberias, where we relate fome reafons for the contrary opinion.

Jofh. xix. 35. Jofh. xi. 2. xii. 3. Deut. iv. 49.

The Lake of Cinnereth, the Sea of Cinnereth or Tiberias, or the Lake of Genezareth, or Genezar [n], are fo many names given to it from the fituation of the City Cinnereth or Tiberias, lying upon the weftern Shore, and towards the fouthern Extremity of it; and becaufe the Canton of Genezar lies upon the eaftern coaft of it. It is called likewife the Sea of Galilee, becaufe the north and eaft fides of it are enclofed by Galilee. In Jofephus's Account of it, it is an hundred Furlongs in length, and forty wide; that is to fay, about twelve Miles or four Leagues and an half long, and two over. The water of this Lake is very good to drink, and breeds abundance of Fifh. There S. Peter, S. Andrew, S. John, and S. James, who were Fifhermen, carried on their Trade. The River Jordan paffes through this Lake, and is continually bringing into it a frefh fupply of water. The Country which borders upon the Sea of Galilee is very beautiful and fruitful.

1 Macc. ii. 67. Mat. iv. 18.

CINYRA. This, and the Hebrew, Cinnor, which is generally tranflated Cithara, or Lyra, or Pfalterium, are the fame. This inftrument was in ufe before the Flood, and Jubal the Son of Lamech was the inventor of it. It was upon the Cinnor that David played before Saul, and it was this the captive Levites hung upon the Willows of Babylon. It was made of Wood, and was played on in the Temple of Jerufalem. The Prophet Ifaiah intimates, that the found of it was fad and mournful, when he fays, Ifai. xvi. 11. my bowels fhall found like the Cinnor or Harp. Hefychius obferves, that Cinnyros in Greek fignifies fad and lamentable. Jofephus fays, that the Cinyra of the Temple had ten ftrings,[o] and that it was touched with a Bow [o]. In another place he fays, [p] that Solomon made a great number of them with a precious kind of Metal called Electrum; wherein he contradicts the Scripture, which informs us that Solomon's Cinnors were of Wood.

כנור Cinnor. Κιθάρα, ψαλτήριον, κινύρα. Gen. iv. 21. 1 Sam. xvi. 16, 23. Pfal. cxxxvii. 2. 1 Kings x. 12. & 2 Chr. ix. 11. 1 Kings x. 12.

The firft Book of Maccabees feems to diftinguifh the Cithara from the Cinyra; Templum renovatum eft in Canticis & citharis & cinyris. Others confound them. It is certain, that there was very little difference in thefe Inftruments, and all that there was, confifted perhaps in the number only, or difpofition of the ftrings. For among the Antients there were Citharæ or Harps of feveral forts. So much feems to be out of all difpute, that the generality of the Inftruments, whereof the Antients make any mention, are derived from the Cinnor of the Hebrews, and even thofe too which are in ufe at prefent, as the Harp, the Guitar, Pfaltery, Lute, Violin, Bafe Viol, &c. What the Greeks tell us of the invention of the Harp by Mercury, and the perfection it was brought to by feveral Muficians, relates to Greece only. Mufick, and the Inftruments of it were known in perfection among the Hebrews long before Mercury, Orpheus, Linus, Terpander, Simonides, and Timotheus.

1 Macc. xiii. 51.

CIRCUMCISION. This Term is taken from the Latin, circumcidere, which fignifies to cut all round, becaufe the Jews who circumcifed their Children, cut off the little skin after this manner, which covers the Prepuce. God enjoined Abraham to ufe Circumcifion, as a fign of that Covenant which he had entered into with him. This is the covenant, fays the Lord to Abraham, which ye fhall keep between me and you, and thy feed after thee. Every male child among you fhall be circumcifed. And ye fhall circumcife the flefh of your foreskin, and it fhall be a token of the covenant betwixt me and you. And he that is eight days old fhall be circumcifed among you, every man-child in your generations, he that is born in the houfe or bought with money of any ftranger, which is not of thy feed. And the uncircumcifed man-child whofe flefh of his forefkin is not circumcifed, that foul fhall be cut off from his people: he hath broken my covenant. In purfuance of this order, Abraham, who was then ninety nine years of age, was circumcifed; he circumcifed alfo his Son Ifhmael, and all the Slaves in his family.

Gen. xvii. 10.

God repeated the Precept of Circumcifion to Mofes, and ordained that all thofe who intended to partake of the Pafchal Sacrifice, fhould receive Circumcifion, and that this operation fhould be performed on Children newly born, on the eighth day after their birth. The Jews have been always very exact in obferving this Ceremony, and it appears that they did not neglect it in Egypt. But Mofes, while he was in Midian with Jethro his Father-in-law, did not circumcife the two Sons which he had in that Country; and during Exod. xii. 44. Levit. xii. 3.

[n] Jofeph. Antiq. l. xiii. c. 19, &c. [o] Antiq. l. vii. c. 20. p. 243. [p] Idem. l. viii. c. 2.

CEREMONIES USED AT THE CIRCUMCISION OF THE JEWS.

a. The Godfather who holds the Child while he is circumcised.
b. The Mohel, or Circumciser.
c. The young lad who holds the dish whereon are all things necessary for the operation.
d. An empty Chair for Elias whom they believe to be invisibly present at all circumcisions.
e. The Godmother accompanied with some women who are not allowed to enter into the Synagogue.

ing the journey of the Israelites through the Wilderness, the Children who were then born, were not circumcised: Probably by reason of the danger which their lives might have been exposed to, because they were not fixed in any one place, and were obliged very often to change their habitation.

The Law has ordained nothing either concerning the Minister, or the Instrument of Circumcision. The Father, or any other Relation, or a Surgeon, or any other whom they had a mind to choose, might perform this Ceremony. They generally made use of a Knife or Razor. Zipporah the Wife of Moses circumcised her Son Eliazer with a sharp Stone. Joshua made use of the like Instrument in circumcising those who had not received Circumcision in the Wilderness. It is very probable that the Egyptians with these Stones fashioned like Knives, opened the bodies of such persons as they embalmed [r]. Some pretend that the Knives of this kind are much less dangerous than others made of Brass or Iron, and that they do not cause so great an Inflammation in the Wound. The Galli who were the Priests of Cybele, the Mother of the Gods, castrated themselves with a sharp Stone, or with a broken pot-sherd, not knowing how to do it otherwise without endangering their Lives [s].

Exod. iv. 25.

Josh. v. 3.

The Ceremonies now observed in Circumcision by the Jews, are such as these. When a Son is [t] born in any Family, it is customary for some to put little Notes in the four corners of the Chamber, with these words inscribed, Adam and Eve; Lilith, be gone. (The Jews assert, that Lilith was Adam's first Wife, who upon her separation from him, took up her habitation in the air, where she still continues, and is a great enemy to the delivery of Women, and new born Children.) They write likewise in these Notes the names of three Angels, in order to defend the Child from all sorts of Witchcraft. But all do not observe these superstitious Practices.

The Father is obliged to have his Son circumcised upon the eighth day, unless the weakness or indisposition of the Child oblige him to defer it. The night before Circumcision is called watching; because the whole Family is awake to guard the Child; and the Father and Mother are visited by their male and female Friends: On which occasions abundance of Joy and Civility is expressed. The Godfathers and Godmothers are chosen some time before. The Godfather holds the Child while the Operation is performing, and the Godmother carries it to the Synagogue. As to the person who circumcises, they choose for this purpose whom they please. The Father himself may do this Office, if he is capable of it. It is esteemed a great honour among the Jews to be Mohel; that is to say, a Circumciser. It is not necessary to go to the Synagogue in order to perform this Ceremony; the Child may be circumcised at home, if the Parents please.

Two Seats are provided for this purpose, with two silk Cushions: One of the Seats is for the Godfather who holds the Child; the other is left empty, and is designed, as some say, for the Prophet Elias, who they believe to be invisibly present at all Circumcisions, so great was his Zeal for the observance of the Law. He who circumcises comes with a dish, wherein are the Instruments, and other things necessary for that Operation, such as the Razor, the astringent Powders, the Linen Cloth, the Lint, and Oil of Roses. They who are present sing some Songs, while they wait for the Godmother, who brings the Child upon her arms, and is attended with a company of Women. But not one of them go beyond the door of the Synagogue: There they deliver the Child to the Godfather, and immediately all who are there cry, Baruch haba welcome.

The Godfather sits down upon his Seat, and settles the Child in a proper posture on his Knees; then he who is to circumcise him, opens the Blankets. Some make use of Silver Tweezers to take up so much of the Prepuce as they design to cut off. Others take it with their Fingers. Then he who circumcises holding the Razor in his hand, says, Blessed be thou, O Lord, who hast commanded us to use Circumcision. And while he is saying this, he cuts off the thick Skin of the Prepuce; then with his Thumb nails he tears off another finer Skin still remaining. He sucks the Blood two or three times, which flows plentifully upon this occasion, and spits it out into a Cup full of Wine. After this, he puts some Dragon's Blood upon the Wound, some Coral Powder, and other things to stop the bleeding; to all which he adds Bolsters of Oil of Roses, and covers all close. In the next place, he takes the Cup into which he had spit the Blood sucked by him from the Wound, blesses that and the Child, gives him the name appointed for him by the Father, at the same time pronouncing these words of Ezekiel, I said unto thee when thou wast in thy blood, live; and then moistens his lips with the Wine which is in the Cup. After which they repeat the 128 Psalm, Ezek. xvi. 6.

Blessed

[r] Herodot l. ii. c. 86. [s] Plin. l. xxxv. c. 12. Samiâ testâ matris Deûm sacerdotes, qui Galli vocabantur, virilitatem amputabant, nec aliter citra perniciem. Ovid Fast. 4. Ille etiam saxo corpus laniavit acuto, &c. [t] Leo of Modena c. 8. and Part the fourth, of the Ceremonies of the Jews. See the Dissertation of John James Quandt de cultris circumcisor. Hebraeorum.

Blessed is every one that feareth the Lord. This being over, the Godfather returns the Child to the Godmother, who carries him home, and returns him to his Mother. All those who were present at the Ceremony, say to the Father as they take their leave, May you thus be present at his Wedding. The Child is commonly cured of the Wound received by Circumcision in four and twenty hours. If he dies before the eighth day, there are some who circumcise him after death, by cutting off the Foreskin with a Reed.

As to the Girls born of Jewish Parents, they receive not Circumcision; but with relation to them, this custom is observed. The Mother continues in her House for Levit. xii. 5, 6. fourscore days; after which she goes to the Synagogue, and the Chanter blesses the little Girl, and names her as the Father or Mother desires. In some places, the Child is not carried to the Synagogue, but the Chanter goes to the House of the lying in Woman, and there performs the Ceremony. They do not now observe what the Law appoints, that the Mother who had a Son or Daughter, should go to the Temple Gate, or to the door of the Tabernacle, and offer a Lamb, a young Pigeon, or a Turtle Dove. Since the destruction of the Temple, this Ceremony is no longer practicable.

It is matter of dispute, whether Circumcision took away the guilt of Original Sin, or was a mark only of distinction between Jews and Gentiles. The old Fathers, who lived before S. Austin, set bounds to the effects of Circumcision, and allowed it only to imprint a sensible mark upon the Hebrews, whereby they were distinguished from other People, who were not in Covenant with God. This is the opinion of S. Justin the Martyr [l], of S. Irenæus [m], S. Chrysostom [n]. S. Epiphanius [o], of Hillary the Deacon [p], S. Jerom [q], and John Damascen [r]. But S. Austin [a] maintained, that Circumcision procured the Remission of Original Sin; and he founded his opinion on the Scripture, which declares those to be utterly cut off from God's People, who were not circumcised upon the eighth day. Gen. xvii. 12. 14. Now, what other Sin besides that which is original, could such Children be guilty of? Gregory the Great [b], venerable Bede [c], Fulgentius, Prosper, S Bernard, have followed this opinion of S. Austin. Our Dissertation on this subject may be consulted, which is prefixed to our Comment on S. Paul.

Circumcision was in use not only among the Hebrews, but likewise among the Arabians, Ethiopians, Egyptians, and Idumæans. There are some Authors of Reputation, who assert, that all other people received this practice from the Egyptians. Celsus and Julian the Apostate affirmed, that Abraham learnt this Ceremony in Egypt [d]. Marsham [d], and M. le Clerc [e], have adopted this opinion: But the Authority of Herodotus [f], who assures us that Circumcision was known to those People only, to whom the Egyptians had communicated it, does not deserve credit in this instance on his bare word, or rather upon that of the Egyptian Priests, who imposed upon him with a vain-glorious relation of their Antiquity and Ceremonies. The Scripture speaks of the Institution of Circumcision, when first it was enjoined Abraham, as of a thing intirely new. It informs us, that this was the Seal of that Covenant which God had made with this Patriarch. And how should Circumcision be a mark to distinguish Abraham and his Posterity from the rest of Mankind, if it were then common among the Egyptians, Ethiopians, Phœnicians, and so many other People who had before practised it?

We are not at all perplexed in discovering the original of Circumcision among the Arabians, Saracens and Ismaelites. These People as well as the Hebrews sprung from Abraham; but they never looked on Circumcision as an essential Ceremony which obliged them, upon pain of being cut off from their People. They received it rather out of devotion than necessity. Circumcision was introduced with the Law of Moses among the Samaritans and Cuthæans. The Idumæans, tho' descended from Abraham and Isaac, never were circumcised, till they were subdued by John Hircanus, and compell'd by him to receive both Circumcision and the Law of Moses [g]. They who assert, that the Phœnicians are circumcised, mean probably the Samaritans; for we know from other hands, that the Phœnicians did not observe this Ceremony.

As to the Egyptians, Circumcision never was of general and indispensible obligation upon their whole Nation. Some certain Priests only, and particular Professions were obliged to it. Philo [h] gives none but natural or symbolical reasons for this Practice. Wesling [i], an eminent Physician, is of opinion, that there were some natural reasons for the Egyptians, both men and Women, receiving Circumcision. Artapanus, as he is cited in Eusebius [k], assures us us, that Moses communicated this Rite to the Egyptians. Origen [l] thinks, that Circumcision became so much in vogue among Strangers upon a Belief entertained by them, that there was an Angel, who put those to death, that were not circumcised, and had no power over those who had received Circumcision. Many are of opinion, that the Egyptians began to be circumcised in the reign of Solomon. Others, as Bochart, suspect, that the Egyptians borrowed this custom not from the Jews, but from the Arabians. Lastly, it is generally supposed, that the Hebrews were the first who ever practised it. See Spencer de Legib. Ritual. l. i. c. 4. and our Dissertation on the Original of Circumcision prefixed to our Comment upon Genesis.

[l] Justin. Dialog. cum Tryph. p. 251. [m] Iren. l. iv. c. 3. [n] Chrysost. homil. 39. in Genes. [o] Epiphan. hæres. 30. [p] Ambrosiast. in Rom. iv. 11. [q] Hieronym. in Epist. ad Galat. l. 2. [r] Damascen. de fide Orthod. l. iv. c. 25. [a] Aug. l. ii. de nuptiis & concupisc. c. 11. & l. xvi. de Civit. c. 17. & de Baptismo contra Donatistas, l. iv. c. 24. [b] Greg. l. iv. Moral. in Job. c. 3. [c] Beda in Luc. ii. [d] Vide Origen contra Cels. l. i. & l. v. & Cyrill. l. x. contra Julian. [d] Marsham Canon. Ægypti seculo v. [e] Cleric. in Genes. Cap. xvii. v. 10. [f] Herodot. l. ii. c. 36. 104. [g] Joseph. Antiq. l. 13. c. 17. [h] Philo de Circumcisione, p. 810. [i] Wesling. Syntagm. Anatom. c. 6. [k] Euseb. Præpar. l. ix. c. 28.

As to the Circumcision of Women, it never was in use among the Hebrews, but only among the Egyptians, and in some places of Arabia and Persia. S. Ambrose [m] asserts indefinitely, that the Egyptians circumcise both Men and Women in the beginning of the fifteenth year. Strabo [n] says likewise, that the Egyptian Women receive Circumcision. But those Travellers and Physicians [o] who inform us, that this Custom is still at this day common in Egypt, do not tell us that it is general there, or of any obligation. It is founded only upon natural reasons, which are not applicable to all the Women of this Country. Chardin [p] says, it is binding only in some particular Countries of Arabia and Persia; as towards the Persian Gulph and the Red Sea, where both Sexes are circumcised with equal regularity. But with this difference, that the Males may be circumcised at five, six, nine, or thirteen years of age. But for the Women, they were not circumcised till they were passed their youth, because before, there was no excrescence to be cut off.

The Question is, whether Circumcision is sometimes repeated? Never by the Hebrews, no more than we ever rebaptize those who have once received Baptism in a due manner; but when the Jews admitted a Proselyte of any other Nation, wherein Circumcision has been customary, as a Samaritan, an Arabian or Egyptian, if he had already received Circumcision, they were satisfied with drawing some drops of Blood from the part usually circumcised; and this Blood was called the Blood of the Covenant. S. Epiphanius [q] says, that the Samaritans when they became Jews, were circumcised again, as was Symmachus, who embraced Judaism. Three Witnesses were present at this Ceremony, in order to make it more authentick: They blessed God, and recited the following prayer, O God, grant we beseech thee, that as thou hast received this Man into thy Covenant, we may find good Works and thy Protection in the Law.

The Jews who renounced Judaism, endeavoured to erase the mark of Circumcision, as may be seen in the Book of Maccabees [r], They made themselves uncircum- 1 Macc. i.
cised, and forsook the holy Covenant. The 15.
Rabbins pretend, that Esau was the first who put in practice this way of disguising his Circumcision, when he deserted the Covenant of the Lord, and the Religion of Abraham and Jacob. Some are of opinion, that the Israelites in the Wilderness had likewise concealed the mark of their Circumcision, which obliged Joshua to circumcise them a second time. It is said, Josh. v. 2.
that many Jews used some Art to make their Foreskin grow, during the Persecution which they suffered under the Romans, after the destruction of the Temple; but that Barchochebas made them all be circumcised again. It seems as if S. Paul apprehended, lest the Jews who were converted to Christianity should bethink themselves of doing the same, Is any man cal- 1 Cor. vii.
led being circumcised? let him not become 18.
uncircumcised.

It is true, S. Jerom [s], and some others [t] after him, have affirmed, the mark of Circumcision to be so indelible, that nothing was capable of suppressing it in the flesh of the circumcised person: Neque enim potestatis nostræ est adducere præputium post circumcisionem. And that what is said in the Maccabees, should be understood of those Fathers, who would not circumcise their Sons. Origen [u] somewhere says likewise, that it is impossible to make the Skin which is once cut in Circumcision grow again, but in another place [x] he acknowledges, that many, in order to conceal the deformity of their Circumcision, put themselves into the Surgeons hands to recover their Skin again.

Epiphanius [y] speaks of the Instruments used by Physicians for this purpose, and the

[l] Origen. contra Cels. l. v. p. 163. [m] Ambros. l. ii. de Abrah. c. 11. [n] Strabo l. xvii.

[o] Vide Huet. not. in Origen. p. 5. Circumcisio fœminarum fit resectione clitoridis, quæ pars in Australium præsertim mulieribus ita excrescit, ut ferro sit coercenda. Ita tradunt medici insignes Paul. Ægineta l. vi. c. 70. Aet. tetrabib. l. iv. Serm. 4. c. 103. Quorum hic ita pergit. Quapropter Egyptiis visum est, ut antequam exuberet (pars illa corporis) amputetur, tum præcipue, cum virgines nubiles sunt elocandæ.—— Porro hanc consuetudinem circumcidendarum mulierum hodieque retinere Ægyptios ferunt ii, qui regiones illas lustraverunt, ignemque ad compescendam partis hujus luxuriem adhiberi scribit. Bellon. l. iii. cap. 28. Morem hunc servare fœminas in Persia, & Cophtas etiam in Æthiopia, Christi licet nomen professas. Leo Africanus, l. viii. Narrat Mahumedi lege id præscribi, quamvis in Ægypto tantum & Syria obtineat, manusque id obire vetulas quasdam per vicos Cairi ministerium suum venditantes.

[p] Chardin Voyage de Perse. c. 3. p. 207. [q] Epiphan. de ponderib. & mensf. l. ii. p. 172.

[r] Joseph. Antiq. l. xii. c. 6. [s] Hieronym. in Pac. ii. & in Jovinian, l. i.

[t] Rupert. l. 9. de victoria, c. 18. Haimo in 1 Cor. vii. 18. [u] Origen. περὶ ἀρχῶν, l. 4. c.

[x] Philocaliæ c. 1. [y] Epiphan. de ponderib. & mensuris.

the means practised by them in making the Skin which had been so curtailed grow again. The celebrated Physician Cornelius Celsus has a whole Chapter particularly upon this Opinion: And Galen mentions it much in the same manner as Celsus. Bartolin [w] cites Ægineta and Fallopius, who taught the secret of covering the marks of Circumcision; and Buxtorf the Son, in his Letter to Bartolin, cites a great number of Jews, who speak of this practice, as customary among Apostates from their Religion.

CISLEU, the ninth month in the Ecclesiastical year, and the third in the Civil or political year among the Hebrews. It answers pretty nearly to November. The seventh of Cisleu is a great Fast day with the Jews, in memory of Jehoiakin's piercing the Book of Jeremiah's Prophecies with a Penknife, and throwing them into
Jer. xxxvi. 23. the fire that was on the hearth. On the fifteenth of the same month, they afflict themselves before the Lord; because on that day Antiochus Epiphanes profaned the Temple of Jerusalem, and placed the
1 Macc. i. 57. Statue of Jupiter Olympius in it. On the twenty fifth of Cisleu Judas Maccabæus purified the Temple, and dedicated it
2 Macc. i. 18. anew: The memory whereof is religiously preserved; and in S. John, we see, that Jesus Christ was present at the Festival which was every year celebrated on John x. 22. this occasion. And it was at Jerusalem the feast of the dedication, and it was winter. It is said likewise, that on the thirteenth of this month, Nehemiah offered a solemn Sacrifice, and sprinkled the Victim with muddy water, which had been found in the place, where before the sacred fire had been hidden. A flame from Heaven by God's appointment descen-
2 Macc. i. 19, 20. ded on the Altar, and kindled a fire there.

CISTERN. There were Cisterns all over the Country in Palestine: There were some likewise in Cities and private Houses. As the Cities for the most part were built on Mountains, and the Rains fall regularly in Judæa at two seasons of the year only; in Spring and Autumn, People were obliged to keep water in Cisterns in the Country, for the use of their Cattel, and in Cities for the conveniency of the Inhabitants. There are Cisterns of very large dimensions to be seen still at this day in Palestine: Some whereof are an hundred and fifty paces long, and sixty wide; others an hundred and two and twenty paces long, and fifty four wide. There is one to be seen at Ramah of two and thirty paces in length, and eight and twenty in width. Wells and Cisterns, Fountains and Springs, are generally confounded in the Scripture Language.

CITHARA. The Hebrew term Kinnor is frequently translated Cithara. Now כנור Kinnor. Cithara. the Cithara or ancient Harp, is an Instrument which is no longer in use. It was composed of a base or hollow sounding belly, and of two Branches raised perpendicularly on the two sides of this belly. Above these Branches was a piece of Wood, which went across, and was fastened to each of them. To this piece of Wood were fixed three, six, or nine strings, which made a very harmonious sound as often as they were either play'd upon with the fingers, or touched with the Bow. See above Cinyra.

CLAUDA, was a small Island situated towards the South-west extremity of the Isle of Crete. It is called Cauda or Gauda in Pliny, but in the Greek Text of the Acts, and in Ptolemy, Clauda.

CLAUDIA, a Roman Lady converted by S. Paul. Some believe her to have been 2 Tim. iv. 21. the Wife of Pudens, who is named immediately before her in S. Paul's second Epistle to Timothy. Martial speaks of one Claudia the Wife of Pudens. [x] Others think, that Claudia was the wife of Pilate, that she returned to Rome with her Husband, and persevered in the Faith, which she had received, during her abode in Palestine. But this is absolutely apocryphal. We know not so much as the name of Pilate's Wife; and tho' we did know that she was called Claudia, yet what proofs have we, that she ever embraced the Christian Religion? Others will have it, that Claudia was an English Woman, and the Wife of Aulus Rufus Pudens. But these are vain conjectures.

I. CLAUDIUS. The Emperor Claudius, of whom there is mention made in some places of the Scripture, succeeded Caius Caligula, in the year of J. C. 41, and reigned thirteen years eight months and nineteen days, and died in the year of J. C. 54. King Agrippa contributed a great deal by his persuasions, to his accepting, and keeping possession of the Empire, which was tendered to him by the Soldiers. As an Acknowledgment of this Service, he gave Agrippa all Judæa, and the Kingdom of Chalcis to his Brother Herods. He put an end to the dispute which had been for some time on foot between the Jews of Alexandria, and the other Freemen of that City, confirmed the Jews in the possession of their Right of Freedom, which they had enjoyed from the beginning, and every where maintained them in the free exercise of their Religion and Laws [z]; but he would not permit them to hold any Assemblies at Rome [a].

King Agrippa dying in the fourth year of Claudius, and of J. C. 44, the Emperor again reduced Judæa into a Province, and sent Cuspius Fadus to be Governor. About the same time the Famine happened, which is mentioned in the Acts of the Apostles [b], and was foretold by the Prophet Agabus. (Acts xi. 28, 29, 30.) In this extremity the Christians of Antioch assisted those of Jerusalem, and sent Alms to them by the hands of Barnabas and Saul, in the year of J. C. 44. Claudius the year following ordained, that the High Priest's pontifical Robes should remain in the possession of the Jews [c]; whereas the Governors of the Province had a mind to have the keeping of them.

[w] Bartolin de Morb. Bibl. Art. 26. [x] Vide Bolland. 19 Maii. [y] Joseph. Antiq. l. x. c. 4. De Bello l. ii. c. 18. p. 793. [z] Antiq. l. xix. c. 4. p. 674. [a] Dio. l. 60. p. 669.

At the same time Herod King of Chalcis obtained the favour from the Emperor of having Authority over the Temple, and the Money consecrated to God, with a power of deposing and establishing the High Priests. At length, in the ninth year of Claudius, and of J. C. 49, the Emperor published an order for expelling all Jews out of Rome. (Acts xviii. 2.) It is very probable that the Christians, who were at that time confounded with the Jews, were banished thence likewise; and [d] Suetonius plainly intimates it, when he tells us, that Claudius drove the Jews out of Rome, by reason of the continual disturbances which were then excited by them, at the instigation of Chrestus: Judæos, impulsore Chresto, assidue tumultuantes, Roma expulit. This is almost all that we can find in the Reign of Claudius, particularly relating to the affairs of Jews and Christians, and which is proper to be inserted in a Dictionary of the Bible. Claudius was poisoned by his Wife Agrippina, and was succeeded by Nero.

II. Claudius Lysias, Tribune of the Roman Troops, which kept guard at the Temple of Jerusalem. He observing the Tumult which was raised upon S. Paul's account, whom the Jews had seized on, and designed to put to death, (Acts xxi. 27, 28, &c. xxii. 1, 2, 3, &c.) came seasonably to Paul's assistance, and rescued him out of their hands. He ordered him to be bound with two Chains, and carried him to the Fortress Antonia, where the Roman Cohort was in Garrison. Then Lysias being desirous to know what the reason was of this animosity which the Jews expressed against St. Paul, ordered him to be extended on the ground, with a design of putting him to the Torture by whipping him. But S. Paul having demanded whether it was lawful to treat a Roman Citizen after this manner, Lysias was afraid, and directed those to withdraw, who were preparing to scourge him.

The next day the Tribune sent for the Priests, and the whole Council of the Jews, to learn particularly the reason of that Commotion which had happened the day before. S. Paul was permitted to speak to them; and understanding that the Assembly was composed of Pharisees and Sadducees, he cried out, that he was a Pharisee, and that the accusation which was brought against him, proceeded from his believing the Resurrection of the dead. This was enough to sow division among those who made up this meeting. The Pharisees took Paul's part; and as the Tumult increased, Lysias sent Soldiers with Orders to carry off Paul by force out of the Assembly, and convey him to the Tower of Antonia, where he was imprisoned.

The day after, above forty of the Jews having engaged themselves in a Conspiracy to kill Paul; notice was given him of their design by his Nephew, his Sister's Son. And the Tribune, upon receiving intelligence of it by the same person, commanded a good Guard to be provided the night following, in order to conduct Paul to Cæsarea. This is what we know of Lysias, so far at least as relates to our purpose.

III. Claudius Felix, the Successor of Cumanus in the Government of Judæa. Felix found means to sollicit Drusilla, young Agrippa's Sister, [e] to leave her Husband Azizus King of the Emesenians, and marry him. (In the year of the vulg. Æra 53.) Drusilla consented, and was divorced from Azizus. Felix sent to Rome Eleazar, the Son of Dinæus, Captain of a band of Robbers, who committed great Ravages in Palestine [f]. He likewise procured the death of Jonathan the High-Priest, who took the liberty sometimes to represent his duty to him [g]. He defeated a body of three thousand Men, which an Egyptian, a false Prophet, had got together in the Mount of Olives [h]. Lastly, S. Paul being brought to Cæsarea, the place where Felix kept his usual Residence, (Acts xxiii. 26, 27, &c. xxiv. 1, 2, 3, &c.) he treated him very well, and permitted his friends to see him, and do him what services they pleased, hoping that S. Paul would procure his Redemption with a sum of Money. (In the year of the vulg. Æra 58.) He did not think it convenient either to condemn him, or to set him at liberty, when the Jews accused him; but chose rather to adjourn the determination of this Affair till the arrival of Lysias, who commanded the Troops at Jerusalem, where he had taken Paul into custody, and who was expected at Cæsarea.

Felix being one day with his Wife Drusilla, who was of the Jewish Religion, sent for S. Paul, and desired him to explain to him the Religion of Jesus Christ. (Acts xxiv. 24.) S. Paul on this occasion spoke with his usual boldness; and as he discoursed to him him concerning Justice, Chastity, and the last Judgment, Felix was terrified, and sent Paul back to the place of his Confinement. He had S. Paul thus brought to him from time to time, and heard him, as if he were disposed to receive some benefit from his Instructions. For this reason he detained S. Paul two years at Cæsarea, without terminating his affair, and besides was glad of this opportunity to oblige the Jews, who were otherwise extreamly dissatisfied with him. He was recalled to Rome in the year of J. C. 60, and many of the Jews going thither to complain of the Extortions, and several acts of violence committed by him in Judæa, he had certainly been executed, if the credit of his Brother Pallas, who had been Claudius's Slave, and was made free by him, had not preserved him. [i] Felix was succeeded by Pontius Festus.

[a] Joseph. Antiq. l. xx. c. 3. [c] Antiq. l. xx. c. 11. p. 682. [d] Sueton. l. v. c. 25.
[e] Antiq. l. xx. c. 5. [f] Antiq. l. xx. c. 6. [g] Ibidem, p. 695. [h] Idem. p. 695.

CLAUTHMON. This is a Greek word, which signifies Tears, and answers בכים Bochim. Knowl. Spain. to the Hebrew, Bochim, and the Latin, Locus flentium, Judg. ii. 1. An angel of the Lord came up from Gilgal to Bochim, ad locum flentium. There is mention of the same place in 2 Sam. v. 24. When thou hearest the sound in the top of Bochim, thou shalt bestir thyself. Lastly, the Psalmist seems to speak of the same place, when he says, Who going through
Ps. lxxxiv. 6. the vale of misery. Others translate the Hebrew, Bochim, Mulberry-trees, or Pear-trees, and instead of the Vale or place of Tears, read, the vale or place of Mulberry-trees.

The difficulty consists in fixing the place of Bochim, whether we understand by it Mulberry Trees or they who weep. Some fix it at Shiloh, because the People were assembled at the place where the Angel came to find them, and there they sacrificed. Now, it was not lawful to sacrifice any where but at the Tabernacle. It is very probable therefore that Clauthmon and Bochim are the same as Shiloh, where the Tabernacle at that time was. Others place Bochim near Jerusalem. It is certain, that the Battel between David and the Philistines in the Valley of Bochim, 2 Sam. v. 24. was fought near Jerusalem. Wherefore, unless two places are distinguished by the same name Bochim, it must be confessed, that this was near Jerusalem.

CLAVUS. Moses told the Hebrews, that if they spared the Canaanites, these People would prove to them quasi clavi in Numb. xxxiii. 55. oculis, & lanceæ in lateribus. Or, according to some Interpreters, They shall be pricks in your eyes, and thorns in your sides. By the word Clavi, those Stakes are often meant, which were fixed into the Earth for the support of Tents. Isaiah speaking of the new Jerusalem, under the allegory of a Tent newly set up, says, Non aufe- Is. xxxiii. 20.
rentur clavi ejus in sempiternum, & omnes funiculi ejus non rumpentur. And elsewhere speaking of Eliakim the Son of Hil- kiah, Figam illum paxillum in loco fideli--- Isa. xxii. 23.
& suspendens super eum omnem gloriam domus patris ejus. I will fasten him as a nail in a sure place, and they shall hang upon him all the glory of his Father's house.

CLAVI. Jesus Christ without doubt was fastened to the Cross with Nails, and his Hands and Feet were pierced with them: The Text of the Gospel clearly shews the truth of this. The Psalmist John xx. 26.
had foretold long before, that they should Luke pierce his Hands and Feet. But there xxiv. 39.
are disputes concerning the number of the Ps. xxxii. 17.
Nails. The Greeks represent our Saviour always to be fastened to the Cross with four Nails; in which particular Gregory of Tours agrees with them [k], one at each Hand and Foot, and under his Feet a kind of Basis, to prevent his Body's sinking with its weight, and the Hands from being torn. Gregory of Tours adds, that the Empress Helena had two of them put into the Bit of a Bridle, which her Son Constantine made use of when he rode on Horseback, and that she threw another of them into the Adriatick Sea, to calm the violent agitation of it. Others [l] tell us, that she put another of these Nails into Constantine's Helmet.

But others are of Opinion, that our Saviour's Hands and Feet were pierced with three Nails only, viz. one at each Hand, and one at both his Feet; and the custom of the Latins is rather for this last opinion: For the generality of the old Crucifixes made in the Latin Church, have only three Nails wherewith Christ was nailed to the Cross. Nonnus [m] thinks, that our Saviour's Arms were besides bound fast to the Cross with Chains; and S. Hilary speaks of the Cords wherewith he was tied to it. The Nails, or rather parts of the Nails with which our Lord was pierced are shewn in several Churches. But from hence it cannot be concluded, either that these Relicks are all false and uncertain, or that more than four Nails were used to fasten Jesus Christ to the Cross. Those which are to be seen in the Treasuries of several Churches, are but parts of the Nails which we are speaking of, and some of them perhaps were used, not in piercing our Saviour's Hands and Feet, but in nailing together the several pieces of the Cross, the Foot-board on which his Feet

[i] Antiq. l. xx. c. 7. p. 696. [k] Greg. Turon. l. i. de gloria Martyr. c. 6. [l] Theodoret. l. ii. Hist. Eccles. c. 18. Ambros. &c. [m] Nonnus in Joan. Nazianz. Poemat de Christo, &c.

Feet rested, and the Inscription which Pilate appointed to be placed on the upper end of the Cross: These might all afterwards have been confounded with the Nails which pierced the Hands and Feet of Jesus Christ. The Figure of them may be seen under the Article Thorns.

It has been questioned, whether the weight of our Saviour's Body fastened to the Cross was sufficiently stayed by the Nails made use of in fixing him to it; and it has been the opinion of some, that to supply what was wanting in this particular, and prevent its being dragg'd down by its own weight, as also his Hands from tearing asunder, there was a necessity to put a kind of Basis or Prop under his Feet; and besides this, a piece of Wood between his Thighs, or a seat to uphold him [a]. But Bartholin has very well observed, that not a living person only might be held while he is hanging upon the Cross by two Nails drove through his two Hands, but a dead Man likewise; that indeed they did sometimes place something under the Feet, or in the middle of the crucified Bodies, that so Malefactors might continue long after death upon the Cross, even when their Bodies were so rotten and putrified, that they could not be stayed nor continue fastened by Nails only. The Reader may likewise see Nicholas Fontaine's Letter on the same subject, wherein he produces some examples of Persons who remained hanging by the Hands, or by even one Hand alone, or by the Skin of the Side.

CLEMENT. There is mention of Clement in S. Paul's Epistle to the Philippians. S. Paul says, Clement's name is written in the Book of Life. The generality of the Fathers and other Interpreters make no question, but that this is the same Clement who succeeded S. Peter after Linus and Cletus, in the Government of the Church of Rome, and the Church seems to intimate the same thing, when in the Office on S. Clement's day, it appoints this part of the Epistle to the Philippians to be read. Grotius on the contrary is of opinion, that Clement, whom S. Paul speaks of, was no more than a Priest of the Church of Philippi.

Philip. iv. 3.

We find many things relating to the Life of Clement in the Recognitions and Constitutions called Apostolical: But as these Works are not believed to be authentick, tho' there may be many truths in them derived from the Tradition of the first Ages, we dare not lay any great stress upon their Testimony. S. Chrysostom [q] thinks, that Clement whom S. Paul speaks of in his Epistle to the Philippians, was one of this Apostle's constant fellow Travellers. S. Irenæus [r], Origen [s], Clement of Alexandria [t], and others of the Antients, assert, that Clement was a Disciple of the Apostles; that he had seen them, and heard their Instructions. S. Epiphanius, Jerom, Rufinus, Bede, and some others were of opinion, that as the Apostles S. Peter and S. Paul could not be continually at Rome, by reason of the frequent Journies which they were obliged to make to other Places, and it was not proper that the City of Rome should be without a Bishop, there was a necessity to supply the want of them, by establishing Linus, Anaclet, and Clement there. The Constitutions [u] inform us, that Linus was ordained by S. Paul. [x] Tertullian and Epiphanius [y] say, that S. Peter ordained Clement. Rufinus [z] tells us, that this Apostle chose S. Clement for his Successor: But Epiphanius believes, that after he had been made Bishop of Rome by S. Peter, he refused to exercise this Office, till after the death of Linus and Anaclet; he was obliged to take upon him the care of the Church: And this is the most generally received Opinion. The immediate Successor of S. Peter was Linus; Linus was succeeded by Anacletus, and Anacletus by [a] S. Clement, in the year of J. C. 91, which was the tenth of Domitian's reign.

During his Pontificate, the Church of Corinth having been disturbed by the spirit of division, S. Clement wrote a large Letter to the Corinthians, which is still remaining, and was so much esteemed by the Antients, that they read it publickly in many Churches; and some have been inclined to range it among the Canonical Writings. The Emperor Domitian intending to declare War against the Church of Jesus Christ, a revelation of his design was made to Hermas, and he ordered to give a copy of it to Pope Clement [b], that he might communicate it to other Churches, and exhort them to provide against the Storm. We have no certain Accounts of what happened to S. Clement during this Persecution, but we know, and are very well assured, [c] that he lived to the third year of Trajan, which is the hundredth of J. C. His Festival is set [a] Justin. contra Tryphon. Irenæ. l. ii. 42. Ipse habitus crucis fines & summitates habet quinque, duos in longitudine, & duos in latitudine, & unum in medio, ubi requiescit qui clavis affigitur. Vide Bartholin. de cruce, c. 1. & sedili medio. [q] Chrysost. homil. 1. in Timoth. i. p. 403. [r] Iren. l. iii. c. 3.

[s] Origen. Princip. l. ii. c. 3. [t] Clem. Alex. Strom. l. iv. p. 516. [u] Constit. l. vii. c. 46.
[x] Tertul. Præscript. c. 32. [y] Epiphan. Hæres. xxvii. c. 6. [z] Recognit. prim. parte, p. 358.
[a] Iren. l. iii. c. 3. Euseb. l. iii. c. 2, 4, 21. Hist. Eccles. [b] Hermas Pastor. l. i. c. 2.
[c] Euseb. l. iii. c. 34. Hist. Eccles. Hieronym. de viris illustrib. c. 15.

set down by Bede, and all the Latin Martyrologies on the twenty third of November. The Greeks honour him on the twenty fourth or twenty fifth of the same Month. Rufinus and Pope Zozimus give him the Title of Martyr, and the Church in its Canon places him among the Saints who have sacrificed their Lives for Jesus Christ.

We read in an antient History, to which however there are some exceptions, that S. Clement was banished by Trajan to the Chersonesus, beyond the Euxin Sea; That he produced a Fountain by his Prayers, for the service of other holy Confessors, who were banished to the same place with him; that after about a year's abode there, he converted all the Country round about; that Trajan sent an Officer thither, by whose order Clement was drowned in the Sea, with an Anchor fastned to his neck; that the Sea afterwards retired as far as the place where his Body was thrown into it, which was at a full league's distance from the Shore, and that the Christians going thither, found his Body in a Stone Monument under a Temple all made of Marble; and that every year the Sea retired in the same manner on the Festival day of this Saint, and left the Faithful the liberty of visiting his Grave.

CLEOPAS, according to the antient Fathers, who speak of him [a], was brother to Joseph, and both of them the Sons of Jacob. He was the Father of S. Simeon Bishop of Jerusalem, of S. James the lesser, of S. Jude, and Joseph or Joses. Cleopas married Mary Sister to the Blessed Virgin: So that he was Uncle to Jesus Christ, and his Sons were Cousin Germans to our Saviour. Cleopas, his Wife and his Sons were some of the faithful Disciples of Jesus Christ, and of their number, who looked upon him as the Redeemer and Salvation of Israel. But Cleopas did not sufficiently understand the mystery of the Cross, and what Jesus had so often told his Disciples, that it was expedient that he should die, and return unto his Father. Cleopas having beheld our Saviour expire upon the Cross, lost all hopes of seeing the Kingdom of God established by his means upon Earth.

He departed from Jerusalem two days after our Saviour's death; that is to say, on the very day of his Resurrection; and
Luk. xxiv. as he was going to Emmaus with another 13–35. Disciple [b], while they were entertaining themselves with what had passed during the Feast, particularly with respect to Jesus Christ, our Saviour joined them in the form of a Traveller, asked what they were discoursing upon, and encouraged them, convincing them from the Scriptures, that it was necessary Christ should suffer death. When they came near Emmaus, Jesus made a shew as if he intended to go farther: But Cleopas and his Companion detained him, and made him sup with them. Jesus, while they were at Table, took Bread and blessed it, brake it, and presented some of it to them. Hereupon their Eyes were opened, and they knew him: But he disappeared and left them.

Immediately they returned to Jerusalem, and sought for the Disciples, whom they found assembled in the same place. They related what had happened to them. The Apostles and Disciples in their turn declared to them the reason which they had for believing Christ's Resurrection, and how he had appeared to Peter. While they were yet talking, Jesus appeared standing in the midst of them, tho' the Doors were shut. He saluted, blessed and encouraged them, shewed them the wounds in his Hands and Feet, eat in their presence, expounded the Scriptures to them, and directed them to go and preach the Gospel throughout the World.

We do not know particularly the actions of S. Cleopas during the remainder of his Life. But Usuardus and Ado tell us, that he suffered Martyrdom, and was buried in the same house where he had received Jesus Christ at his Table. It is indeed the opinion of S. Jerom, [c] that Cleopas abode generally at Emmaus, and that it was in this house that he invited our Saviour to continue with him. Some believe, that afterwards a Church was built there. But supposing Cleopas to have been the Brother of Joseph, and Father of S. James, S. Jude, Simon and Joses, it is more probable that he was a Galilæan, and that his habitation was in some City of Galilee. However this may be, the Latins honour Cleopas as a Saint upon the twenty fifth of September. The Greeks make mention of him on the thirteenth of October, or rather on the thirtieth, and give him the Title of Apostle.

CLEOPATRA. There are many Princesses of this name, who are either tacitly or expresly mentioned in the Scripture.

I. CLEOPATRA, the Daughter of Antiochus the Great, and Wife of Ptolemy Epiphanes King of Egypt. Antiochus the Great having formed the design of making himself Master of Egypt, gave his Daughter Cleopatra in Marriage to the young

[a] Euseb. l. iii. hist. Eccles. c. 11. Epiph. hæres. 78. c. 7. [b] Gregory the Great in Job, l. i. c. 1. believes, that the Disciple, who went to Emmaus with Cleopas, was S. Luke. Origen in Jerem. Homil. 19. and S. Basil in Isai. vi. call him Simon. S. Epiphanius hæres. 23. c. 6. thinks it was Nathanael. S. Ambrose in David's Apology, l. ii. c. 8. and upon S. Luke, c. xii. and elsewhere calls him Emmaus. He has the same name given him in a very antient Manuscript kept at Corbie, the various readings whereof have been set down by us at the end of our Comment on the Revelations. [c] Hieron. Epist. 27.

young King Ptolemy, with hopes that she would espouse his interest, and so render the conquest of her Husband's Kingdom more easy to him: But it fell out quite otherwise. Cleopatra preferr'd the Interest of her Husband to the unjust views of her Father [a]. We are of opinion, that this Princess is described in these words of Daniel; He shall be confirmed in his design of getting possession of the whole kingdom belonging to the king of the South, the King of Egypt, he shall pretend to act uprightly with him; he shall give him his daughter (Cleopatra) in marriage, in order to destroy him: But she shall not stand on his side, neither be for him. (Dan. xi. 17.)

II. Cleopatra, Daughter of the Cleopatra we have been speaking of, and Ptolemy Epiphanes King of Egypt. She married Ptolemy Philometor her own Brother. There is mention of this Cleopatra and Ptolemy her Husband in the Book of Esther, xi. 1. where it is said, In the fourth year of the reign of Ptolemeus and Cleopatra, Dositheus, who said he was a Priest and Levite, and Ptolemeus his son brought to the Jews of Alexandria the Book of Esther, or the Epistle of Pharim, translated out of Hebrew into Greek by Lysimachus the Son of Ptolemy. This happened in the year of the World 3827, of the Julian Period 4537, before J. C. 177, before the vulgar Æra 181.

III. Cleopatra, the Daughter of Ptolemy Philometor, and the Cleopatra we have been last speaking of, married first of all Alexander Balas King of Syria. Four years after her Father Philometor took her from Balas, with an intention to give her to Demetrius Nicanor, who likewise was King of Syria. But Demetrius remaining a Prisoner with the Parthians, against whom he had made War, and having married Radeguna the Daughter of Arsaces his Conqueror, Cleopatra was wedded to Antiochus Sidetes, the Brother of Demetrius Nicanor. At last Demetrius Nicanor returning into Syria, and re-ascending the Throne of his Ancestors, Cleopatra was reconciled to him, and returned with him. There is no express mention of this Princess in the sacred Writings; but she is sometimes spoken of in the Comments on the Maccabees. She had laid a design to poison her Son Gryphus, but he prevented her, and obliged her to drink the draught which she had provided for him [a], in the year of the World 3882, before J. C. 118, before the vulg. Æra 122.

IV. Cleopatra, the Sister and Wife of Ptolemy Physcon. She, after the death of her Husband Ptolemy was desirous to place Alexander the youngest of her two Sons upon the Throne of Egypt: But the great Men of the Kingdom having obliged her to follow the Law of Nature, and make Lathyrus King, she so embroiled his affairs, that he was compelled to retire to Cyprus. This Princess had a particular confidence in the Jews of Egypt, and gave the command of her Troops to Chelcias and Ananias, who were both of this Nation: [b] She pursued her Son Lathyrus into the Isle of Cyprus, whither he had fled. He went into Palestine, to which Country he had been invited by the Inhabitants of Ptolemais, that they might have the benefit of his assistance against Alexander Jannæus King of the Jews, who was then besieging them. We shall have occasion to say more of this Princess in the Articles of Ptolemy Physcon, and Ptolemy Lathyrus.

Alexander Jannæus, who knew how ill disposed Cleopatra was to Lathyrus, invited this Princess to enter into an alliance with him against Lathyrus. The Queen was easily induced to do so [c], and sometime after, sent her Army under the command of Ananias, against the City of Ptolemais. Thither she came soon after in person; and having taken the City, Alexander Jannæus visited her there, and brought presents for her. The Enemies of Alexander would have persuaded her to possess herself of the Country of the Jews; but Ananias diverted her from it, by remonstrating to her, that if she were guilty of so perfidious an action, all the Jews in the World would be her Enemies. Cleopatra therefore made an alliance with Jannæus in the City of Scythopolis. She died in the year of the World 3916, before J. C. 84, before the vulgar Æra 88. As she had formed a design to rid herself of her Son Alexander King of Egypt, he prevented her, and put her to death [d]. This Alexander reigned eighteen years with his Mother. See Ptolemy Lathyrus. (In the year of the World 3901, and 3902.) (In the year of the World 3902 before J. C. 98, before the vulg. Æra 102. Antiq. l. iii. c. 21.)

V. Cleopatra, the last Queen of Egypt, Daughter of Ptolemy Auletes, that is to say, the player on the Flute, sacrificed her two Brothers, and her Sister Arsinoë to her ambition. She had such an ascendant over Mark Antony, that he put away Octavia the Sister of Augustus to marry her. She was no way concerned in the religious Affairs either of the Jews or Christians; and her name is not to be met with in the Bible: But there was an intimate Friendship between her and Alexandra the Mother of Mariamne, and Mother-in-law to Herod the Great; who, having received some Mortifications at her Son-in-law's Court, wrote to Cleopatra concerning them, and was invited by her to [a] Hieronym. in Dan. xi. 17. Appian. Syriac. p. 88.

[a] Justin. l. xxxix. c. 2. Appian. Syriac. p. 132.
[b] Joseph. Antiq. l. xiii. c. 18. & Strabo apud eundem, p. 457.
[c] In the year of the World 3898. J. C. 102. before the vulg. Æra 106.
[d] Justin, l. xxxix. c. 4. Pausan. Atticis, p. 8.

to come with her Son Ariſtobulus into Egypt [g]. This being known by Herod, extremely provoked him againſt Alexandra, and contributed not a little to the reſolution which he took, of putting her to death, and which he executed ſome years after, firſt againſt Ariſtobulus, and afterwards againſt Alexandra.

In the year of the World 3970, before J. C. 30.

Cleopatra never ceaſed ſolliciting Antony, to revenge this wicked act committed by Herod againſt Ariſtobulus. Antony hereupon commanded Herod to attend him, and give an account of his Conduct. But Herod wrought on Antony by his Preſents, and engaged him in his Intereſts. About the end of this year 3970, Cleopatra paſſed through Judæa in her return from a Journey ſhe had made with Antony, as far as the Euphrates. Herod received her with all imaginable Magnificence; ſhe endeavoured to inſpire him with Love, and ſollicited him to converſe criminally with her: But Herod always appeared to be inſenſible of her allurements, and deliberated with his Friends, whether he ſhould not take this opportunity to diſpatch her. But they diſſuaded him from any ſuch attempt. He conducted her therefore as far as Peluſium, and loaded her with Preſents [h]. Soon after the Battel of Actium was fought, wherein Antony was overcome by Auguſtus: Antony upon this defeat fled to Cleopatra in Egypt, and Auguſtus followed him. Cleopatra killed herſelf with the ſting of an Aſp, in the Year of the World 3974, before J. C. 26. before the vulgar Æra 30.

CLERUS, comes from the Greek, Cleros, which ſignifies Inheritance. Neither as being Lords over God's heritage, but being enſamples to the flock. (1 Pet. v. 3.) Neque ut dominantes in Clero, ſed forma facti gregis ex animo. Others read [i], Neque dominantes in Clero, and explain it as a prohibition directed by S. Peter to the Biſhops, forbidding them to exerciſe a too deſpotick Authority over Prieſts, Deacons, and others of the Clergy, who are ſubject to them.

We find the ſame term Cleros in the lxvii. Pſalm of the Vulgate Tranſlation. Si dormietis inter medios Cleros, pennæ columbæ deargentatæ, & poſteriora dorſi ejus in pallore auri. Which may be rendered thus, Tho' ye have lien ſtill amidſt the lands allotted you, yet ſhall ye be like pigeons with ſilver wings and gilded feathers. (Pſal. lxviii. 13.) And it is our opinion, that the Pſalmiſt in this place ſpeaks to the Tribes of Reuben and Gad, which were not preſent in the Battel fought by Deborah and Barak with Siſera. He tells them; it is true, O ye Pigeons with ſilver Wings, and gilded Feathers, that upon this occaſion ye had no ſhare in Deborah's victory, when the Lord put to flight the confederated Kings. You continued in the quiet Injoyment of your Inheritance amidſt your Streams and Rivers; yet are you become there white as Snow in Salmon: You have made yourſelves illuſtrious by other gallant Actions.

I. CLOUD. When the Iſraelites departed out of Egypt, God gave them a Pillar of Cloud to direct them in their march. It attended them from the time of their leaving Succoth, according to S. Jerom in his Epiſtle to Fabiola, or from Rameſes, according to others, or only from Etham, till the death of Aaron, as the Hebrews ſay, or as far as the Paſſage over Jordan, as the generality of Commentators will have it. (Exod. xiii. 21, 22. עמוד ענן) This Pillar was commonly in the front of the Iſraelitiſh Army. But when they were come to the Red Sea over againſt Pihahiroth, and the Egyptian Army appeared before them, the Pillar of Cloud which ſtood before the Camp of Iſrael, placed itſelf between that and the Camp of the Egyptians, ſo that the Egyptians could not come near the Iſraelites all night. (Exod. xiv. 19, 20.)

But in the morning about break of day, ſeeing the Cloud moving on toward the Sea, and following the Iſraelites who had paſſed through its Channel, which was left dry for them in the night time, the Egyptians reſolved upon purſuing them, and were all covered with the waters of the Red Sea, which returned upon them and deſtroyed them. This Cloud continued always from that time to attend the Iſraelites in the Wilderneſs. It was clear and bright during the night, in order to give them light when it grew dark, and in the day time it was thick and gloomy, the better to defend them from the exceſſive heats of the Arabian Deſarts, through which they performed their Journey. It appears that the Angel of the Lord governed the motions of this Cloud, ſince it is ſaid, Exod. xiv. 19. The Angel of God which went before the Camp of Iſrael, removed and went behind them; and the pillar of the cloud went from before their face, and ſtood behind them. Where we may obſerve, that the Angel and the Cloud made the ſame motion.

The ſame Cloud by its motions gave likewiſe the ſignal to the Iſraelites, either to encamp or to decamp; ſo that where that ſtayed, the People ſtayed, till it roſe again, then they broke up their Camp, and (Numb. ix. 15, 16, 17. &c. x. 34, 35. and Exod. xl. 34, 35.)

[g] Joſeph. Antiq. l. xv. c. 4. In the year of the World 3969. before J. C. 31. before the vulg. Æra 35.
[h] Joſeph. de Bello l. I. c. 13. Antiq. l. xv. c. 5.
[i] Septima Synod. general. Can. Hieronym. ad Nepotian. Ep. 2. Bernard. Ep. 237, &c.

and followed it till it ftopped. It was called a Pillar by reafon of its form, which was high and elevated as it were a Pile and Heap of Fogs. There are fome Interpreters, who will have it, that there were two Clouds[h]; one to give light to, the other to cover and fhade the Camp of 1 Cor. x. 1, 2. Ifrael. S. Paul fays, that the Pillar of Cloud was a figure of Baptifm. In effect it enlightned the Ifraelites in the night time, as Baptifm enlightens us, and makes us Children of Light. It protected them, and was a continual earneft of God's Power and Protection, in like manner as Baptifm procures both thefe advantages for us. See the Commentators upon Exodus xiii. 21, 22. and xiv. 19, 20. and the Differtation by Chriftian Mandenus, De Columna nubis & ignis. At Goflar 1712.

The Lord appeared at Sinai in the Exod. xix. 9. xxxiv. 5. midft of a Cloud; and after Mofes had built and confecrated the Tabernacle, the Cloud filled the Court round about it, fo that neither Mofes nor the Priefts could Exod. xl. 32, 33. go in. The fame thing happened at the dedication of the Temple of Jerufalem 2 Chr. v. 13. and 1 Kings viii. 10. by Solomon. When the Cloud appeared upon the Tent, before which were held the Affemblies of the People in the Defart, it was then believed that God was prefent. Exod. xvi. 10. xxxiii. 9. Numb. xi. 25. The motion of the Cloud which refted upon this Tent, was the fign of God's prefence. The Angel defcended in the Cloud, and from thence fpoke to Mofes, without being feen by the reft of the People. See Exod. xvi. 10. Numb. xi. 25. xxi. 5. It is common in Scripture, when there is any mention of God's appearing, to reprefent him always, as incompaffed with Clouds, which ferve him for a Chariot, and caft a Veil before his dreadful Majefty, Job xxii. 14. Ifai. xix. 1. Mat. xvii. 5. xxiv. 30, &c. Pfal. xviii. 11, 12. xcvii. 2. civ. 3.

II. Cloud is ufed fometimes for morn- Hofea vi. 4. & xiii. 3. ing Mifts, Your goodnefs is as a morning cloud, and as the early dew it goeth away. And Ifaiah xviii. 7. Quafi nubes roris. The Scripture reprefents the Clouds as Confervatories of Water or Rain, which are fcattered upon the Earth at God's Com- Job xxvi. 8. mand. Qui ligat aquas in nubibus fuis. God confines the Waters in the Clouds as in a Bottle, he fcatters them afterwards on the Earth as it were through the Nozzle 2 Sam. xxii. 12. of a watering Pot; Cribrans aquas de nubibus cœli. Job fpeaking of the matter of the Chaos, which covered the whole Earth at the beginning of the World, Job xxxviii. 9. fays, that God had hem'd in the Sea or the Waters as it were with a Cloud, and covered it with darknefs, as a Child at nurfe is wrapped up in its Blankets. The Ecclus. xxiv. 6. Author of Ecclefiafticus ufes the fame expreffion. Quafi nebula texi omnem terram. Ifaiah prays to God to haften the coming of the righteous One, and to command the Clouds to pour him down upon the Earth. Et nubibus pluant Juftum. Ifai. xlv. 8. When the facred Writers fpeak of the coming of the Son of God at his fecond Advent, they defcribe him to us as de- Mat. xxiv. 30. Luke xxi. 27. Rev. xiv. 14, 15, 16. fcending upon the Clouds, and encompaffed with all his Majefty.

CLYSMA, or Clifma, or Colfum. This is the place, where the Ifraelites paffed the Red Sea, as is expreflly fhewn by Eufebius[i], Philoftorgius[k], Cofmas the Egyptian a Monk[l], and Gregory of Tours[m]. Clyfma, according to S. Epiphanius[n], was one of the three ports which lay upon the Red Sea. The firft was Ailat; the fecond Berenice; and the third at the Caftle of Clyfma. Some[o] place it to the Eaft, others[p] to the Weft of the Red Sea; but we are perfuaded it fhould be placed eaftward; and that Clyfma is the fame with the prefent Colfuma. And as the whole weftern Coaft of this Sea received its name from Clyfma; fo in like manner at this day the Arm of this Sea, which extends towards Egypt, and is oppofite to the Gulf of Elat or Ailath is called the Sea of Colfuma, or Baharel-Colfum. Clyfma lay towards the extremity, or point of the Red Sea: But I cannot exactly tell the diftance, which there was from Clyfma to the extremity of this Sea. Gregory of Tours, Paulus Orofius, and fome others affure us, that ftill in their time, at the place where the Hebrews paffed the Red Sea, the remains of Pharaoh's Chariots, and the tracks of their Wheels were to be feen.

According to Abulfeda's account of Colzum[q], It is a fmall Town fituated upon the northern extremity of the Red Sea, in the forty fourth degree and $\frac{1}{4}$. Others fay in the forty fixth degree of Longitude and $\frac{1}{2}$, and in the twenty third degree of Latitude and $\frac{1}{2}$. It lies to the weft of Ailat or Elat; both being almoft in the fame Latitude. Ailat is feated on the extremity of the eaftern Arm or Channel, and Colfum at the extremity of the weftern Channel. Between Ailat and Colzum is Mount Al-tour or Sinai, which is more fouthern than Colzum. They who come from Sinai in their way to Egypt, muft neceffarily pafs through the Neighbourhood of Colzum. The Red Sea, at fome diftance beyond Colzum, extends its felf self on both sides towards the South and East, till its Channel from one Shore to the other becomes about sixty thousand paces wide; and this place, which is one of the widest, is called Barka Gorandal. Clysma and Colzum are the same.

[h] Rab. Solom. & Abenezra. [i] Eufeb. in locis in Beelfephon. [illegible] [k] Philoftorg. Hift. Ecclef. l. iii. c. 6. [l] Cofm. Ægypt. l. v. p. 194. [m] Greg. Turon Hift. l. i. c. 10. [n] Epiphan. l. ii. contra hæref. p. 613. [o] Vide Athenaf. Hift. Arian. ad Monach. t. 1. p. 385. & Tabul. Peutinger. [p] Ptolem. Itinerar. Antonini, &c. [q] Abulfeda's description of the Red Sea, p. 70, 71, 74, 75.

COA. There is mention of Coa * in 1 Kings, x. 28. and 2 Chr. i. 16. and it is said in these places, that Horses were brought to Solomon from Coa at a certain price. Some by Coa understand the Isle of Coos, celebrated for the Silks and Woollen Stuffs that were wrought there. But this is no proof that there were fine Horses there, or that any were brought from thence to Solomon. Others are of opinion [r], that these Horses came from the City of Coa in Arabia Felix. Others [s] bring them from Co a City of Egypt, and Capital of the Province called Cypopolitana.

The Hebrew may be thus translated; They brought horses to Solomon from Egypt and from Michoe [t]. Pliny assures us [u], that antiently the Country of the Troglodytes near Egypt was called Michoë. Others translate the Hebrew thus. [v] They brought Horses to Solomon out of Egypt, and the King's merchants bought thread for Money. They pretend that the Hebrew Mikoa, signifies Thread. Jarchi supposes a string of Horses to be meant by it, fastned by the tail to one another; and this Interpretation is followed by several modern Expositors [w]. Bochart [x] by Mikoa understands Tribute, and his Translation of this passage runs thus. They brought Horses for Solomon out of Egypt; and as to the Tributes, this Prince's Farmers received them at certain rates.

COCCUS, Coccinum, Coccineus color, Crimson, or according to others, Scarlet. Moses often makes use of coccum bis tinctum, of Scarlet twice dyed, because in reality Scarlet or Purple was twice dyed [y].

Nec quæ bis Tyrio murice lana rubet.

תולעת שני S-hani. Tolahat. In the Hebrew it is Tolahat Schani; that is to say, the double Worm, or the Worm Schani, as if Schani were the proper name of this Worm. I shall set down here the account which Bellonius gives us of the Worm which is made use of in dying Crimson [z]. There is abundance of Coccus in the Isle of Crete, with which they drive a great Trade there. It is found in the month of June, upon a sort of small Oak, the Leaves whereof are prickly, and are covered with certain small Berries about the bigness of a little Pea, and full of little red Worms, no larger than Nits. These Berries are plucked from the Leaves, and the little Animals come out through a hole on that side, which was fastened to the Leaf. These little Animals are separated from the Berry by a Sieve, and are put together and pressed gently. They make balls of them about the size of a Pullet's Egg. The Arabians call these Worms Charmes, whence the French word Cramoisy or Crimson is derived; because they are of use in dying this colour. See hereafter Ver, Vermiculus.

COCK, Gallus, a tame Bird very well known to every one. It is said in Job, Quis dedit Gallo intelligentiam? Which, as some explain it [a], relates to the exactness with which the crowing of the Cock distinguishes the hours of the night; for he generally crows three times in a night, at Midnight, two hours before Day, and at break of Day. But the Hebrew term [b] translated Cock, signifies, in the opinion of many Interpreters [c], the Soul, and Understanding. The Septuagint seem to understand by it a Woman well skilled in embroidering. xxxviii. 36. Vulg.

In the Proverbs the majestick gate of a Cock is commended, Gallus succinctus lumbos †. Several Interpreters translate the original word, Leopard, Greyhound, War-Horse, or Bee: But there are many too, who interpret it Cock. Prov. xxx. 31. זרזיר מתנים

Isaiah [d] threatens Shebna with being transported out of his own Country, as a Cock is carried to Market. Dominus asportari te faciet sicut asportatur gallus gallinaceus. S. Jerom says, that the Rabbi who taught him Hebrew, inform'd him, that the term in the Original, which generally signifies a Man, stood in this place for a Cock. But this has not prevented several Interpreters from keeping to the common signification of this word, and translating the verse thus, The Lord will cause thee to be transported to some other place, O man of war; or, he will make thee to forsake thy Country like a warrior, &c. Isai. xxii. 17.

The Jews in the evening before the solemn Expiation, take a white Cock [e], if they can find one of this colour, and never a red one, imagining a white Cock to be a mark of Innocence, a red one of Sin. After having pronounced some Prayers, they strike themselves three times on the head with the Cock, using at the same time this expression, May this Cock be sacrificed in my stead; he shall suffer death for me, he shall be my expiation, and reconciliation.

[r] Malvenda. [s] Serar. Cornel. [t] יקחו מקוה במחיר [u] Plin. l. 6. c. 19. [v] Moutan. Jun. Lud. de Dieu. Braun. [w] Paguin. Vatab. Castal. [x] Bochart. de anim. facr. parte I. l. ii. c. 9. [y] Ovid. Amor. l. iii. [z] Bellon. observ. l. i. c. 17. [a] Chald. & Hebræi Lyr. Thom. in Job. xxxviii. 36. [b] מי נתן לשכוי בינה [c] Syr. Mercer. Grot. Vatab. Scultet. Boch. [d] יהוה מטלטלך גבר [e] Buxtorf. Synag. Jud. c. 20.

* The Septuagint read, ἐκ Θεκουέ. † Vulgate.

conciliation. This done, they kill the Cock, cut off his neck, throw him againſt the ground, take out his Bowels, and throw them upon the top of the Houſe, and roaſt him. In every one of theſe particulars ſome figurative ſignifications are implied, which it is not neceſſary to collect in this place. Leo of Modena[f] ſays, that the Jews of Italy, and in the Levant, ſcarce ever practiſe this Ceremony; becauſe they own it to be a piece of ſuperſtition, without any foundation. But it appears by Buxtorf, that it is ſtill obſerved in Germany.

COCYTUS, a River of Arcadia; it takes its riſe from the Styx, and the Poets feigned, that it was one of the four Rivers of Hell. There was one of the ſame name in the Campania, which fell into the Lucrine Lake. The Latin Tranſlator of the Book of Job has inſerted this term in his Tranſlation, in order to deſcribe the deſcent of the wicked into Hell, Job xxi. 33. There is nothing in the Hebrew, or in the old Verſions, which has any relation to Cocytus, and there is no probability at all, that Job ever intended to ſpeak of it. Theſe fables are of a much later invention, than the time he lived in. In the Hebrew it is ſaid only, The clods of the Valley ſhall be ſweet unto him, whereas in the Vulgate we read, Dulcis fuit glareis Cocyti. His preſence was agreeable to the Banks of Cocytus.

COELE-SYRIA, in Greek Coile-Syria, hollow Syria. The Valley between Libanus and Antilibanus, was principally called by this name[g]. It reaches in length from North to South, from the entrance of Emath as far as beyond Heliopolis or Baal-Bek. Dionyſius the Geographer ſuppoſes it to lye between Libanus and Mount Caſius.

But in the larger ſenſe, the whole Country ſouthward of Seleucia, and extending as far as Egypt and Arabia, is called Cœle-Syria. Joſephus places the Country of Ammon in Cœle-Syria[h], and Stephens the Geographer fixes the City of Gadara in it, which is eaſtward of the Sea of Tiberias. You have here a liſt of the ſeveral Cities in Cœle-Syria, according to Ptolemy's account of it; Abila, Lyſanium, Saana, Inna, Damaſcus, Samulis, Abida, Hippos, Capitolias, Gadara, Adra, Scythopolis, Geraſa, Pella, Dium, Gadara, Philadelphia, and Canatha. Whereby we ſee that it included ſeveral Cities of the Peræa.

Cœle-Syria is diſtinguiſhed by no particular name in Scripture, but is comprized under that general one of Aram; and perhaps Syria of Soba, or Aram Soba reached to Cœle-Syria; of which notwithſtanding I do not know that there are any good proofs; for we cannot tell where the City of Soba was, whence Aram of Soba is ſuppoſed to take its name; unleſs it be the ſame with Hobah mentioned in Geneſis, or Chobal, as the Septuagint Genes.
reads it, whence Abyla is derived, which xiv. xv.
is ſeated at the entrance of Cœle-Syria.

COENACULUM, in Greek, Hyperoon, ſignifies properly an upper Room, or an apartment wherein people generally eat. Our Saviour, the evening before his Paſſion, directed his Diſciples to go and provide a ſupper for him in Jeruſalem, and told them that they would find a large upper Room furniſhed. Cœnaculum grande ſtratum, a Dining-room, with Beds for the accommodation of the Gueſts at Table. In after Ages there was a great Room ſhewn at Jeruſalem, which was converted into a Church by the Empreſs Helena, where it was ſuppoſed that our Saviour eat his laſt Supper, and inſtituted the Euchariſt. But there is great reaſon to queſtion, whether this Room were preſerved, when Jeruſalem was ſo totally ruined by the Romans.

COENA MORTUI. An entertainment in honour of ſome dead Perſon. See hereafter Dead.

COENOMUYA, or Cynomya, or Cinomuia. This word is differently written in the Pſalms. At preſent we read Cœnomyian. Ps. lxxvii.
But the old Latin Copies read 50. civ. 31
Cynomyian, Dog's fly, as the generality of the Greek Copies do at this day. The proper and right reading is that of the Vulgate, which has Cœnomyian, a mixture of all ſorts of flies; this agrees with the Hebrew[i], and the old Greek Copies. Some old Latin Pſalters, ſuch as thoſe of Rome, Milan, and S. Peter of Chartres read, Muſcam Caninam, which literally expreſſes the Greek, Kynomyian. S. Jerom in Exodus viii. 21. tranſlates it Omne genus muſcarum. But the Septuagint at the ſame place read Dog's Fly, Cynomyian. Now this Fly is a very dangerous Inſect, which faſtens principally upon Dogs, and the ſting of it is very malignant.

COHORT, in Latin, Cohors, in Greek, Spira. A military term in uſe among the Romans. A Cohort was generally compoſed of ſix hundred foot Soldiers. A Legion conſiſted of ten Cohorts, every Cohort of three Maniples, and every Maniple of two hundred Men: and a Legion conſequently of ſix thouſand. Others allow but five hundred Men to a Cohort, which if we ſuppoſe, there would be then no more than five thouſand in a Legion. It is very probable, that Cohorts among the [f] Ceremon. of the Jews, part iii. c. 6. [g] Strabo. l. xvi. [h] Joſeph. Antiq. l. i. c. 11.

[i] Heb. ערב Miſtura Κοινόμυια Muſcæ variæ. Κυνόμυιαν, Muſcam Caninam.

the Romans, as companies among us, often varied as to the number whereof they were composed.

COLHOSEH, the Father of Shallum, Neh. iii. 15.

COLOSSÆ, a Town in Phrygia the greater. Some believe that S. Paul never was in this place [k], tho' he preached in Phrygia; but the Colossians received the Faith in all probability from Epaphras their Bishop. S. Paul having been informed that there had been false Apostles at Colossæ, who had preached the necessity of Circumcision, and other legal observances, and out of a mistaken humility, had recommended the superstitious worship of Angels, telling the People there, that they were to address their Prayers not to God the Father or Jesus Christ, but to the Angels, who were Mediators between God and Man; the Apostle, I say, being informed of all this, either by Epaphras, who was then a Prisoner with him at Rome, or by a Letter from the Laodiceans, wrote the Epistle to them, which we now have, wherein he insists upon Jesus Christ, being the only Mediator of Christians, the Reconciler of Mankind with God, and the Head of the Church, from whom all his Members receive Action, Sense, Life and Spirit. He attacks the false Apostles, and with great solidity confutes their Doctrine concerning the obligation of observing Circumcision, and the legal Ceremonies; and afterwards delivered lessons to them of the most excellent and sublime Morality.

The Apostle was then a Prisoner at Rome, in the year of J. C. 62, there were with him besides Epaphras, Timotheus, Aristarchus, Marcus, Luke, Demas, and Jesus, firnamed Justus. The Letter was carried to the Colossians by Tychicus his faithful Minister, and Onesimus, whom Philemon had sent to attend him in his Confinement. Several Greek Copies, instead of Colossæ read Colassæ; and some Criticks there are, who maintain this last reading to be the best. But the Latin Copies do not vary, and constantly read Colossæ. There have been some Greek as well as Latin Writers [l], who have been of opinion, that this Epistle was written to the Faithful of Rhodes, a City famous for the Colossus of the Sun.

COLOSSUS. The Colossus of Rhodes was a brazen Statue of such a prodigious height, that Ships with full Sails might pass between its Legs. It was one of the seven wonders of the World [m], was seventy Cubits, or an hundred and five Feet high. Chares, disciple to the famous Lysippus, cast it in a mould. There were few People who could encompass the Thumb of it: It was consecrated to Apollo or the Sun. King Demetrius, after he had besieged the City of Rhodes for one whole year, without being able to get Possession of it, concluded a Peace with the Inhabitants, and upon his return presented them with all the warlike Machines made use of in the Siege. These they sold some time after for three hundred talents, which with other sums added to them, they imployed in making this Colossus. Chares was twelve years at work upon it. It was begun in the year of the World 3700, and overthrown by an Earth-quake sixty years after it had been erected.

The Rhodians pretending that they design'd to set up the Colossus again, made gatherings over all the States of Greece, and begg'd of all the Kings [n] of Egypt, Macedonia, Syria, Pontus and Bithynia; they so far aggravated their loss, that the Collection which was raised for them, amounted to five times as much as their real damage. Instead of imploying these Sums in restoring their Colossus, they gave out, that the Oracle forbad it absolutely, and so kept the Money for themselves. The Colossus continued thus broken down as it was for 894 years, at the end whereof, in the year of Jesus Christ 672, Moravias, sixth Caliph of the Sarracens, having taken Rhodes, sold the Brass of the Colossus to a Jewish Merchant, who had as much of it as loaded nine hundred Camels: Which reckoning eight Quintals to a Load, amounted to 7200 Quintals, or 720000 Pounds. See Rhodes.

The Rhodians generally represented on one side of their Medals the head of Apollo, or the Sun, and on the other a Rose, with this Legend, ΡΟΔΙΩΝ, belonging to the Rhodians. It has been affirmed, that the Jews gave some of these pieces to Judas, as the reward of his treachery. See Rhodium and Rhodes.

COLZUM, the City of Colzum, formerly so celebrated, and considerable, lay on the Red Sea upon the Shore, opposite to that where Elana stood, a Town situated at the foot of Mount Sinai [o]. Both these places are now in Ruins. There was formerly a Canal made from Colzum to Cairo, whereof at present no Footsteps are visible. Omar second Caliph after the Conquest of Egypt, commanded Arnon, who had subdued it, to have this Canal dug, that by this means Corn might be more easily transported from Egypt into the Red Sea. But as Medina in process of time ceased to be the seat of [k] Vide Col. ii. 1. Hieronym. ad Philemon. v. 22. Chrysost. Theophyl. Athanas. in Synops. Estius, alii.

[l] Suidas. Zonar. Glycas. Eustat. Calepin. Munster.
[m] Plin. l. xxxiv. c. 7. Strabo l. xiv.
[n] Polyb. l. v. Strabo l. xiv.
[o] Bibl. Orient. p. 171.

of the Caliphs, the use of this Canal being then no longer so necessary, it was neglected and filled up with Sands.

COMMON. By Common is meant sometimes profane, unclean. To eat with common hands; that is to say, without
Mat. vii. 2, 5. washing ones Hands. Communibus manibus, id est, non lotis manducare. I have Acts x. 4, 15. never eaten any thing common, says S. Peter, but he heard a voice from Heaven saying unto him, What God hath purified, that call not thou common: Quod Deus purificavit, tu commune ne dixeris. And S. Paul, Rom. xiv. 14. There is nothing in its own nature common or profane: Nihil commune per ipsum, nisi ei qui existimat quid commune esse. Moses, almost in the same sense calls a Vineyard common or prophane, which all the World
Deut. xx. 6. was permitted to eat of. What man is he that hath planted a vineyard, and hath not yet made it common? If there be such an one, he may return to his House, because the first fruits of Trees and Vines were reckoned unclean, or rather were
Lev. xix. 24, 25. consecrated to the Lord, and the owner was not allowed to touch them, till after the fourth year. See hereafter Profane.

COMPUNCTION. This is a word particularly set apart in the Language of the Church, to signify sorrow for our Sins. Have Compunction * in your Bed for what
Psal. iv. 4. you have said in your Heart. The wicked hath persecuted the Poor, he hath morti-
Ps. cix. 17. fied him, whose heart is full of Compunction, Compunctum corde mortificare.

But the Septuagint use frequently the word Catanuxis, which signifies Compunction, in a very different sense for Sleep, Heaviness, Stupefaction, Hardness, Isai. xxix. Infensibility. For example, Isaiah; The
10. רוח Lord hath poured out upon you the spirit of תרדמה deep sleep, of heaviness, of dulness. The Vulg. Spiritum soporis. Septuagint translate it the spirit of compunction. And S. Paul hath followed
70. πνεῦμα κατανύξεως. them, Rom. xi. 8. Dedit eis Dominus spiritum compunctionis. Thus in Psalm.
יין lx. 5. where we read in the Hebrew, Thou תרעלה hast made us to drink the wine of astonishment, Wine which intoxicates, and takes away the Senses, such as was given to persons condemned to death. The Septuagint read the Wine of Compunction. Lastly, in the passage above cited, of the beginning of this Article, In cubilibus vestris compungimini, Psal. iv. 4. The Hebrew imports, Speak in your hearts upon your beds, and continue in silence. The Septuagint, Be touched with compunction on your beds.

In all these instances we must recur to the original, and by the word Compunction in Isaiah xxix. and Psalm lx. must understand deep Sleep, such as disturbs and clouds our reason. In some other places, for example, Acts ii. 35. Compuncti sunt corde. And Psalm cix. 17. Compunctum corde mortificare, we are to understand by it Compunction of Heart. But in other passages, Psalm xxix. 13. Ut cantet tibi gloria mea, & non compungar; the Hebrew reads, Et non taceat, that my Glory may publish thy praises, and not be silent. And Psal. xxxiv. 16. Dissipati sunt nec compuncti, the Hebrew reads, They tore me to pieces with their malicious tongues, and were not silent.

CONCORDANCES of the Bible. By this name we call a sort of Dictionary, wherein the words of the Bible are ranged in alphabetical order, with the several Books, Chapters, and Verses quoted, in which they are contain'd; we have discoursed of them at sufficient length in the Preface to this Dictionary, and in the Bibliotheca Sacra, which is placed at the end of it.

CONCUBINE. This term in Latin Authors signifies commonly a Woman, who tho' she be not married with a Man, yet lives with him as his Wife. But in the sacred Writers, the word Concubine is understood in another sense; it means a lawful פלגש Wife, who has not been wedded with the Pilegesh. Pellex.
common Ceremonies and Solemnities; a Concubina.
Wife of the second rank, inferior to the Matron and Mistress of the House. The Children of Concubines did not inherit their Father's Fortune; but the Father in his life-time might provide for them, and make presents to them. Thus Sarah was Abraham's Wife, of her he had Isaac, the Heir of all his Wealth: But he had besides two Concubines, namely Hagar, and Keturah; of these he had other Children, whom he distinguished from Isaac, and made presents to them. As Polygamy was tolerated among the Jews, it was a common thing to see one, two, or many lawful Wives in every Family; and besides these, several Concubines. David had seven Wives, and ten Concubines.
Solomon had seven hundred Wives, who 2 Sam. 3.
all lived in the quality of Queens, and 2, 3. &c.
three hundred Concubines. Rehoboam his 1 Kings Son had eighteen Wives, and sixty Con- 11. 3. cubines. Ever since the Abrogation of 2 Chr. xi.
Polygamy by Jesus Christ, and the re- 21.
duction of Marriage to its primitive Institution, the abuse of Concubines has been con-

* Our Author here, as usual, follows the Latin Vulgate, which runs thus, Quæ dicitis in cordibus vestris in cubilibus vestris compungimini. The incomparable Grotius disapproves of this Version, and produces one more accurate, and agreeing better with the Hebrew. Cogitate in corde vestro, in cubili vestro, & silete; id est, pœnitentiam agite according to the Arabic Interpretation. Our English Translation, which seldom varies from the Original, is in this Passage a literal Explanation of it, Commune in your own heart upon your bed, and be still. The Hebrew is, אמרו בלבבכם על־משכבכם ודמו condemned and forbidden among Christians; notwithstanding which clandestine Marriages were a long time tolerated, and the Women so married were frequently called Concubines.

CONCUPISCENCE. This term is made use of by S. John, to signify an irregular love of Pleasure, Wealth, and Honours, comprehended by this Apostle
1 John ii. 16. in the following words, All that is in the world, the lust of the flesh, and the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life. Concupiscence is not a Sin; but it is the effect and cause of Sin. And as in both Testaments bad desires, as well as bad actions, are equally forbidden; the first and principal care of every Man who would please God, is to restrain his Concupiscence. This word is generally taken for a disorderly appetite to any thing whatsoever. The Hebrews demanding of Moses change of Diet in mutinous terms, and with an irregular desire, God punished many of them with death, and the place hereupon
Numb. xi. 33, 34. was called the Graves of lust. God prohibits the desiring any thing, with a love Exod. xx. 17. Deut. v. 21. of Concupiscence, which belongs to our Neighbour. Concupiscence is most generally understood in a bad sense, particularly for the inclinations of the flesh; but sometimes it is taken in a good meaning; for example, for the love of Knowledge and Wisd. vi. 18, 20. Wisdom; Initium sapientiæ, verissima est disciplinæ concupiscentia; and a little after, Concupiscentia sapientiæ deducit ad regnum perpetuum; and in Psalm lxxxiii. 3. Concupiscit & deficit anima mea in atria Domini. And Psalm cxviii. 20. Concupiscit anima mea desiderare justificationes tuas. The Lord says to Cain, who envied the favours which Abel had received from
Gen. iv. 7. him, thy Concupiscence shall be subject to thee, and thou shalt rule over it. Sub te erit appetitus ejus, & tu dominaberis illius. Thus this passage is generally understood; but others explain it in another sense, referring ejus not to Sin, but to Abel; as if God had said to Cain, what art thou afraid of, and why doest thou suffer thyself to be so dejected? If thou doest well, doest thou not receive the reward of it? and if thou doest evil, Sin is at thy door. Abel shall be subject to thee, and thou shalt preserve thy right of Seniority over him. Thus S. Chrysostom [a] explains it after the Septuagint, and this passage has a manifest relation to that, whereby God gives Man the Superiority over Woman, Gen. iii. 16. Thou shalt be under the power of the man, and he shall rule over thee. The Hebrew, Ad virum tuum concupiscentia tua, & ille dominabitur tui.

To CONDEMN, declare guilty; is an expression used not only in judicial Acts but in every other thing likewise, which relates to them. The Priests condemn'd Lepers of impurity; that is to say, they Lev. xiii. 8. declared them unclean, Daniel i. 10. Condemnabitis caput meum morte. Thou shalt be the cause of my being condemned to lose my Life. My mouth shall condemn Job ix. 20.
me, God shall judge me by my own words. The righteous which are dead, shall condemn the ungodly that are living. The Wisd. iv. 16.
conduct of the Righteous who are dead, is a condemnation of the disorders of the Wicked. It is much in the same sense that the criminal and idolatrous Jerusalem justifies Sodom and Gomorrha; she makes them appear righteous in comparison of her. Thou hast justified thy sisters in all Ezek. xvi. 51, 52.
thy abominations.

CONFESSION. The publick or private Declaration which any one makes of his Sins to a Minister, who has the power of absolving, in order to receive Penance and Absolution, is called Confession. S. Matthew says, that the Jews came Mat. iii. 6.
from all parts to confess their Sins to John the Baptist, and receive Baptism; S. James James v. 16.
requires us to confess our Sins to one another, that so we may be saved; and S. John says, that if we confess our Sins, 1 John i. 9.
God is faithful and just to forgive them.

The Confession required by S. John Baptist, of those who desired to be partakers of his Baptism, was not only a general Declaration, whereby they acknowledged themselves to be sinners, or an indefinite Confession of faults committed by them in thought or deed, or by omissions; but it was a definite and particular Declaration of such Offences as they might have committed against the Law, like that which the Hebrews made when they put their hands upon the head of the Sin-offering. Moreover, the Baptism of John did not really remit the Sins which were thus confessed; he only promised the forgiveness of them, which was received by the Baptism of Jesus Christ. Ut ab eo baptizatis in spe remitterentur peccata, re ipsa vero in Domini baptismo id fieret [b]. He was not satisfied even with this Confession, and the inward Sorrow which was to accompany it, he required fruits meet Mat. iii. 8.
for repentance.

We see in the Acts of the Apostles, Acts xix. 18.
that the Gentiles who were converted, came and confessed their Sins at the feet of the Apostles: Multi credentes veniebant confitentes & annuntiantes actus suos. The Jews at present confess much after the same manner as the Romanists on their Death-bed [c]. The most ignorant have a general form of Confession, which they repeat. Others express their Sins more particularly. They confess likewise their Sins in [a] Chrysost. Homil. 18. in Gen. p. 203. [b] Aug. l. v. contra Donatist. [c] Buxtorf. Syn. Judæor. c. 35.

THE CONFESSION OF THE JEWS.

in the beginning of the year, ſtanding in a Tub full of water. There are two and twenty words in their form of Confeſſion, as many as there are Letters in the Alphabet; and as often as they pronounce any word in the Confeſſion, one who is preſent thruſts their Heads into the water, and the Penitent ſmites his Breaſt with his right Hand[d].

Upon the great day of Expiation, they confeſs themſelves after the following manner[e]. Two Jews retire into a corner of the Synagogue, one bows very low before the other, with his Face turned towards the North: He who performs the Office of Confeſſor, gives the Penitent nine and thirty blows upon the back with a leathern ſtrap, repeating theſe words, God being full of Compaſſion, forgave their iniquities, and deſtroyed them not; yea many a time turned he his Anger away, and did not ſtir up all his Wrath: And as there are but thirteen words in this verſe recited in the Hebrew, he repeats it three times, and at every word ſtrikes one blow; which makes nine and thirty words, and as many Laſhes. In the mean time the Penitent declares his Sins, and at the Confeſſion of every one, beats himſelf upon his Breaſt. This done, he who has performed the Office of Confeſſor, proſtrates himſelf on the ground, and receives nine and thirty Laſhes from his Penitent.

Grotius[f] on S. Matthew explains himſelf in a remarkable manner, with relation to private Confeſſion. As to the Queſtion, ſays he, which is propoſed among learned Men, namely, whether the Paſſages in Numbers and Leviticus, wherein mention is made of Confeſſion, refer to a Man's confeſſing himſelf to God only, or whether every one ought to declare his Sins to the Prieſts: I hold their opinion to be very probable, who maintain, that a particular Confeſſion was made by every one of his Sins to the Prieſts, in caſes which did not expoſe the guilty to the penalty of Death; for in other caſes it was ſufficient for them to accuſe themſelves in general; and it is very credible, that the ſame thing was obſerved with ſtill more Piety and Confidence by thoſe who came to John the Baptiſt, who was both Prieſt and Prophet; and beſides, one whoſe fidelity was very well known *.

CONFESSOR, Confeſſion. In the language of the Church, the name of Confeſſors is given to thoſe who have confeſſed the name of Jeſus Chriſt before Judges, or have undergone ſome puniſhment for defending the Faith. If they died under their Torments, they were called Martyrs. Jeſus Chriſt ſays, he will confeſs thoſe before his heavenly Father, who ſhall have confeſſed him generouſly before Men; and S. Paul commends Timothy for having confeſſed a good Confeſſion; Mat. x. 32. 1 Tim. vi. 12.
that is to ſay, for having, at the hazard of his Life, given a glorious Teſtimony to the Truth. The ſame Apoſtle ſays, that Jeſus Chriſt witneſſed a good Confeſſion before Pontius Pilate. 1 Tim. vi. 13.

We find two ſorts of Confeſſions in the Old Teſtament; the Confeſſion of Praiſes, and the Confeſſion of Sins. Nothing is more common in Scripture, than theſe words, Confitemini Domino; confitebor Domino, &c. that is to ſay, Praiſe the Lord, I will praiſe the Lord. Confeſſion of Sins too both in publick and private, was in uſe among the Iſraelites. They confeſſed their Sins to God and the Prieſts. In the Ceremony of the ſolemn Expiation, the High Prieſt confeſſed in general his own Sins, the Sins of other Miniſters of the Temple, and thoſe of all the People; Lev. xvi. 6. 16. 21.
and upon all other occaſions, when any Iſraelite came to offer a Sacrifice for Sin, he put his hands upon the head of the Victim, and confeſſed his faults. There are ſome Interpreters, who believe, that it Levit. iv. 1, 2, 3, 4, &c.
was not ſufficient for him to declare himſelf in general a Sinner; but that he was to confeſs in particular the Sin for which he offered this Sacrifice. We are aſſured, that the Jews ſtill at this day make a private Confeſſion of their Sins upon the day of ſolemn Expiation, by them termed Cippur.

CONFIRMATION. The Sacrament of Confirmation † is that which makes us perfect Chriſtians, and impreſſes an indelible Character upon us after Baptiſm, and imparts to us the ſpirit of Fortitude, whereby we are enabled to confeſs Chriſtianity, even at the hazard of our Lives. It is frequently called by the Antients, laying on of Hands, becauſe it is conferred by impoſition of Hands. The adminiſtration of this Sacrament was in the beginning reſerved to the Apoſtles, or the Biſhops their Succeſſors, who only are the ordinary Miniſters of it. We ſee the practice of it in the Acts of the Apoſtles, Acts viii. 14, 15, 16. &c.
where it is ſaid, that the Apoſtles being informed, that the People of Samaria had received the word of God, and had been baptized by Philip the Deacon, S. Peter and S. John went thither, and laid their hands upon all the Faithful there, who immediately received the Holy Ghoſt. *S. Paul ſpeaks likewiſe of the effects of this Sacrament, ſaying to the Epheſians, Grieve not the holy Spirit of God, [d] Idem, c. 18. [e] Idem, c. 20. [f] Grot. in Mat. III. 6.

* Concerning the Romiſh Doctrine of Auricular Confeſſion, ſee Dallæus de Sacramentali, ſive Auriculari Latinorum Confeſſione, and our moſt eminent Writers in the Controverſy between us and the Romaniſts.

† Confirmation is no Sacrament; no federal Rites are declared to belong to it: It is no new Stipulation, but rather a Ratification of our Baptiſmal Vow. See J. Dallæus de Confirm. and the eminent Divines of our own Church, who have treated of this Subject, ſuch as Barrow, Tilloſon, Burnet, &c.

God, whereby ye are sealed unto the day of redemption.

In the Infancy of Christianity, the laying on of Hands by the Apostles, or Confirmation, was attended generally with miraculous Gifts and Graces, and with external Gifts of the Holy Ghost, such as that of Tongues, Prophecy, Miracles, and healing of Diseases. This is what Acts x. 44. manifestly appeared at the Baptism of Cor-
45, 46, &c. nelius, the Holy Ghost descending upon those who like him desired Baptism, and by such an extraordinary Dispensation of Providence preventing Imposition of Hands. The Jews who came with S. Peter to Cæsarea, were amazed at it; and beheld those Gentiles with admiration, who spoke divers Languages, and glorified God as they did, who had been baptized, and received Imposition of Hands.
Acts viii. And when the Apostles came to Samaria,
9. 14, 16, to confirm the Faithful who imbraced
17, 18. Christianity on S. Philip's preaching, they laid their Hands on them, and gave them the Holy Ghost. Hereupon Simon the Magician observing the wonderful effects wrought by their thus laying on their Hands, offered them a Sum of Money, to procure this surprising Power from them of conferring the Holy Ghost.
1 Cor. xii. Lastly, S. Paul in his Epistles speaks very xiii. Rom. often of these supernatural Gifts granted
xii. 6, 7. to the Faithful, by the laying on of Hands.
Ephes. iv. And it appears by the Fathers[a], that this
7. extraordinary Power continued in the Church so long as to the third and fourth Ages.

As to the manner of Confirming made use of by the Apostles, the Scripture speaks only of Prayer, and Imposition of Hands. The most antient of the Fathers, and the oldest Rituals, do likewise take notice only of the laying on of Hands. In the eastern Churches, the Bishops and Priests for a very long time, have confirmed by anointing with the holy Oyl; and in the Latin Church the Bishops, who only are the ordinary Ministers of this Sacrament, confer it by laying on of their Hands, and by anointing the Forehead with the holy Chrism, using at the same time this Prayer, I sign you with the Sign of the Cross, and confirm you with the Chrism of Salvation, in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost.

CONSCIENCE, is the Testimony or secret Judgment of the Soul, which gives its approbation to Actions that it thinks good, or reproaches itself with those which it believes to be evil. It is a Consequence of the light of Nature, which judges of the good or ill tendency of our Actions.
Ecclus. xxii. Est qui promittit & quasi Gladio pungitur
16. conscientiæ, says the Wiseman. There are People who engage themselves too easily, and have no sooner promised than they are touched with remorse for doing so: Such was Herod, who promised Salome the Daughter of Herodias all that she should ask, and had very soon the Mortification to hear, that she desired the Head of John the Baptist. A troubled Con- Mat. xiv.
science, an evil Conscience, presumes al- 6, &c.
ways that some misfortune must follow.
Semper præsumit sæva perturbata conscien- Sap. xvii.
tia. S. Paul says, that they who are with- 10.
out the written Law, have their Conscience, which gives them an inward Testimony of the Good and Evil performed by them. He requires Christians to be sub- Rom. xiii.
missive to secular Powers, not only for 5.
fear, but also for conscience sake: Non solum propter iram sed etiam propter conscientiam. In another place, he permits the faithful to go and eat at the houses of the Gentiles, if they are invited thither, and to partake of every thing which is served up at their Tables, without making particular inquiries out of any scrupulosity of Conscience; asking no questions for Conscience sake. But if any one says to them, this has been sacrificed to Idols, do not eat of it, says he, for his sake who gave you this Information; and likewise left you wound not your own, but another's Conscience: Conscientiam autem dico, non tuam sed alterius. If he who gives you this notice is a Christian, and notwithstanding the Information so given you forbear not to eat; he will condemn you in his heart, or will eat of it after your example against his own Conscience, and so the guilt of his Sin will be imputed to you. If he is an Heathen, who thus advertises you, and he sees you eat of it, he will conceive a contempt for you and your Religion.

CONSECRATE, Consecration. To consecrate is to offer or devote any thing to God's Worship and Service. In the old Law, God ordained that all the first born both of Man and Beast should be consecrated. He likewise consecrated the Exod. xiii.
whole Race of Abraham particularly to 2, 12, 15.
his Worship. Lastly, he devoted the xxxiv. 19.
Tribe of Levi, and the Family of Aaron Numb. iii.
in a more especial manner to his Service. 12.
Besides these Consecrations which God Exod. xix.
thus ordain'd by his own absolute and sove- 6. 1 Pet.
reign Authority, there were others which ii. 9.
depended on the good will of Men, who Numb. i. 49. iii. 6. & seq. Deut. x. 8. consecrated themselves, or the things belonging to them, or the persons depending on them, to the service of God for ever, or for a time only.

Joshua devoted or consecrated the Gibeonites

[a] Vide Iren. l. ii. c. 52, & 57. & l. v. c. 6. Justin. Apolog. 1 & Dialog. cum Tryphone, p. 315. Constit. Apost. l. viii. c. 1. Hilar. in Psal. lxiv. v. 12. Euseb. in Psal. xlvi.

Josh. ix. 27. Ezra viii. 20. & ii. 58. & 1 Kings ix. 20. 21. 1 Sam. i. 11. beonites to the ſervice of the Tabernacle. David and Solomon in like manner devoted the Nethenims, who were ſome remains of the Canaanites, to the ſervice of the Temple; they thus devoted them and their Deſcendants for ever. Hannah, Samuel's Mother offered her Son to the Lord, to ſerve all his life-time in the Tabernacle. Luke i. 15. The Angel who promiſed Zachary a Son, commanded him from God, to conſecrate him to the Lord, and to take care, that he obſerved thoſe Laws for his whole life, Numb. vi. 1, 2, 3, &c. with the Nazarites, who are likewiſe conſecrated to God, tho' but for a certain time, obſerved during this time of their Conſecration.

The Hebrews ſometimes devoted their Fields or Cattle to the Lord; after which they were no longer in their power. If they had a mind to enjoy them again, they Levit. xxvii. 28, 29. were obliged to redeem them. David, and the Kings his Succeſſors, often vowed and conſecrated to the Lord the Arms and 1 Chr. xviii. 11. 2 Chr. xxiii. 9. Spoils taken from their Enemies. As to the conſecrating and devoting, as they did ſometimes, their Enemies, their Cities, and their Country to intire ruin, the Reader upon this Point may conſult the Article Anathema.

In the New Teſtament we ſee in proportion the ſame Conſecrations, as in the Old. All the Faithful are conſecrated to the Lord; they are his holy Race, his 1 Pet. ii. 9. choſen People. Biſhops and other ſacred Miniſters are devoted to him in a more peculiar manner, than common Chriſtians, and they who conſecrate themſelves to God by ſolemn Vows, and the exerciſe of a Religious Life, come very near to the perpetual Nazarites of the Moſaic Law. Churches, Church-yards, Religious Houſes, Monaſtries, Sacred Veſſels, and every thing belonging to the Worſhip of God, are likewiſe things conſecrated *, which deſerve more or leſs Reſpect, as they relate more or leſs to the unbloody Sacrifice of the Body and Blood of Jeſus Chriſt, who is offered for us upon our Altars, is the Holy of Holies, and ſanctifies every thing that comes near him.

CONSISTORY, Conſiſtorium Palatii, mentioned in Eſther, is called likewiſe Eſt. v. 1. Baſilica Regis; in Hebrew, the Kingdom's Houſe. It is to be obſerved, that in the King of Perſia's apartment there were three principal pieces of Work. The firſt was the outward Court, Atrium exterius, where the Courtiers met, who came to Court, Eſth. vi. 4. The ſecond was the Hall, or inner Court, Atrium interius, where every one was forbid to come on pain of Death, unleſs he were called, Eſth. iv. 11. The third was the Cabinet, or a ſort of corner or alcove, wherein was the King's Throne, called Conſiſtorium Palatii, or Baſilica Regis, Eſth. v. 1, 2.

As to the different Conſiſtories, or places where the Hebrews adminiſtred Juſtice, we ſhall ſpeak of them under the Title Sanhedrim or Tribunal.

CONSOLATION, to Conſole, are words often uſed by the Hebrews in the Senſe of Revenge. See Revenge.

CONSUMMATION, Conſummatio. This word does not ſignify only the Finiſhing, the End, the Perfection of any thing, but it likewiſe denotes frequently the utmoſt Miſery. Numquid iratus es nobis Neh. ix. 14. uſque ad conſummationem? Art thou angry with us ſo far as to deſtroy us without hopes of recovery? And Pſalm lviii. 14. Annuntiabuntur in conſummatione, in ira conſummationis, & non erunt: It will be every where publiſhed, that thou exerciſeſt thy Vengeance in the day of Wrath, and they ſhall not ſubſiſt any longer. And Iſaiah x. 22. Conſummatio abbreviata inundabit juſtitiam; conſummationem & abbreviationem faciet Dominus: The Juſtice of God ſhall be poured out upon Sinners, like a Deluge of Water; their ruin is reſolved on, he will in a little time exterminate and deſtroy them: Conſummatio abbreviata, or rather according to the Hebrew Conſummatio or deſolatio deciſa, reſolved, fixed, determined Deſtruction. The Prophet Nahum ſpeaking of the ruin of Ni- Nahum i. 8, 9. neveh, In diluvio prætereunte conſummationem faciet—— conſummationem faciet, & non conſurget duplex tribulatio: God will overflow this City with the Flood of his Wrath, he will deſtroy it, and will do it at once.

Jeremiah iv. 27. Deſerta erit omnis terra, ſed tamen conſummationem non faciet: The Lord will reduce the Land to a meer ſolitude, but will not intirely deſtroy it. And Ezekiel xi. 13. Heu, heu, heu, Domine Deus, conſummationem tu facis reliquiarum Iſrael: Alas! Lord, thou art going to annihilate the remains of Iſrael. We may obſerve expreſſions much alike in Iſaiah xxxviii. 22. Jeremiah v. 10, 18. xxx. 11. xlvi. 28. Ezekiel xx. 17. Daniel ix. 27, &c. In Pſalm cxviii. 96. there is a more difficult paſſage, which however comes to the ſame. Omnis conſummationis vidi finem, latum mandatum tuum nimis: I have ſeen, I have gone through the greateſt dangers and misfortunes, times, I have been exposed to utter Destruction: but thy Commandments have set me free, have protected me. The Hebrew, Latitudo mandatorum tuorum, is opposite to finis consummationis, or extremæ consummationis.

* He might have inlarged his Liſt of things conſecrated in the Romiſh Church, ſuch as Bells, Candles, Books, Water, Oil, Aſhes, Palms, Swords, Banners, Pictures, Croſſes, Agnus Dei's, Roſes, Childrens Clouts, &c. which, as the Romaniſts aſſert, are of great uſe to preſerve People from Diſeaſes, Storms by Sea or Land, Thunder, Lightning, &c.

CONTRADICTION. Waters of Strife, or Contradiction. This is the name of the place where Moses encamped when he smote the Rock with his Rod, and water thereupon issued out of it, where also he expressed some diffidence of God's Promises: For which reason God declared to him, that he should never enter into the Numb. xx. 7, 13. Land of Promise. This happened in the Desert of Paran, when the Israelites were encamped at Kadesh; and these Waters were called the Waters of Strife; because they rebell'd against Moses, and murmured against the Lord.

CONTRITION, or Sorrow for our Sins, attended with a sincere resolution of reforming them[a]. The Scripture never uses this term in this sense; but there are many expressions to be observed in it, which are equivalent, and prove that without Contrition there is no Repentance, and without Repentance no Remission of Sins: A broken and contrite heart, O God, thou shalt not despise. Psal. li. 17. I shall go softly all my years in the bitterness of my soul. Isai. xxxviii. 15. But if from thence thou shalt seek the Lord thy God, thou shalt find him, if thou seek him with all thy heart, with all thy soul, or, with all the sorrow of thy soul. See likewise Deut. iv. 29. xxx. 1, 2. S. Paul speaking to Agrippa, said, I have shewed unto the Jews and Gentiles that they should repent, and turn to God, and do works meet for repentance.

In those places generally where we meet with the words conterere and contritio, they signify to bruise, Bruising, Humiliation, Grief, Ruin, Destruction. For example, Contrition and Unhappiness Psal. xiii. Vulg. are in the way of the Wicked; that is to say, God shall destroy them, and overwhelm them with Misfortunes. Prov. xvi. 18. Vulg. Pride goeth before Contrition; that is to say, Pride and Elevation are commonly followed with a Fall, with Destruction, &c.

CONVERTERE. Every one knows, that the literal signification of this word Ps. xl. 11. denotes changing, Thou hast turned my tears into joy. Turn ye not unto Idols: Lev. xix. 4. Ad idola nolite converti. God converted the heart of the King of the Assyrians. Turn us, O Lord, and we shall be turned, &c. These are ways of speaking in use even among ourselves. But Converti is often taken in Scripture for returning from the Babylonish Captivity. When the Lord hath turned the Captivity of Sion; Ps. cxxvi. 1. when he hath delivered his People from Captivity. I will gather the remnant of Jer. xxiii. my flock out of all countries whither I have driven them, and will bring them again to Jer. xxxii. 44. their folds: Et convertam eos ad rura sua. And elsewhere, Convertam captivitatem eorum, &c.

COPHER. It is said in Cant. i. 14. My Beloved is to me as a cluster of Copher in the vineyards of Engedi. Copher is translated Cyprus in the Vulgate. Botrus Cypri. Now the Cypress Tree is a Shrub that grows as high as a Pomegranate Tree, its Leaves are like those of the Olive Tree, its Blossom is white and sweet, and its Fruit hangs like clusters of Grapes, and is of a very agreeable scent. When its leaves are dry and bruised, they make a yellow powder, with which the Egyptians and Turks painted their nails, and the Women among them their hands, part of their hair, and of their body.

COPONIUS, was the first Governor of Judæa established by Augustus, after the Banishment of King Archelaus to Vienne in France. Coponius was succeeded by Marcus Ambrivius[i].

COPTÆ. The Egyptians who profess Christianity are called thus at this day. This name is derived probably from Aiguptos, or Aicuphtos, by cutting off the first syllable Ai. There is frequent mention of Egypt in the Scripture, under the name of Misraïm in those Books which are written in the Hebrew, and of Aigyptos in those written in Greek.

CORAL. The Rabbins assert, that the Hebrew, Almugim, which S. Jerom has translated ligna Thyina, 1 Kings x. 11. signifies Coral. See Almugim.

CORBAN, Mark vii. 11. or Corbona, Mat. xxvii. 6. This word comes from the Hebrew, Karab, or Hekerib to offer, present. It stands for an Offering, a Gift, a Present made to God, or his Temple. קרב Karab. קרבן Corban. The Jews sometimes swore by Corban, or the Gifts offered unto God. Whosoever Mat. xxiii. 18. sweareth by the Gift that is upon the Altar, is bound. Theophrastus says, that the Tyrians forbad the use of such Oaths as were peculiar to Foreigners, and particularly of Corban; which, as[k] Josephus informs us, was in use only among the Jews.

Jesus Christ reproaches the Jews in the Gospel with the cruelty which they shewed towards their Parents, and says that to excuse themselves from giving any part of their fortune to them, they would tell them, May what you ask of me be corban, and [a] Concil. Trident. Sess. xiv. c. 4. Contritio est animi dolor ac detestatio de peccato commisso, cum proposito non peccandi de cætero. [i] Vide Joseph. Antiq. l. 18. c. 1, 2, 3. & de Bello, l. ii. c. 12.

[k] Apud Joseph. l. i. contra Appion.

* The Form of this Vow is in express Terms mentioned in the Talmud: And tho' such a Vow as this is against both Nature and Reason, yet the Pharisees, and the Talmudists their Successors approve of it.

and consecrated to God, or, May all that I am able to give you, be corban, and devoted to God in such a manner, that neither you nor I may be able to employ any thing of it to our use; or, lastly, I swear by corban, or the Gift which is made to God, that I will not assist you in any thing whatsoever. S. Matthew expresses much after this manner the reply which Children made to their Parents; It is a Gift by whatsoever thou mightest be profited by me [k]. The Offering which I make to God will be of service to you, I have devoted that to God, which you ask of me; it is no longer either yours or mine, but you will share in the merit of my Offering.

Josephus[l] remarks, that among the Hebrews, Men and Women sometimes made themselves Corban; that is to say, consecrated themselves to God, or certain Ministries in his service. When Persons of this sort were desirous to release themselves from the obligation which they had thus imposed upon themselves, or the Ministry to which they had devoted themselves, they gave a sum of Money to the Priest, a Man fifty, a Woman thirty Shekels. If they were not in a condition to pay this sum, they agreed with the Priest, and gave him so much as he was satisfied with.

Philo[m] speaking of those who devote themselves to God, relates what Moses says in Leviticus, ch. xxvii. 2, 3, 4. and following verses, He who has devoted his soul, his Life, his Person to God, shall pay the price estimated by the Priest. A man from twenty to fifty, shall give fifty shekels, according to the measure of the Sanctuary; and a woman thirty. From five to twenty a boy shall pay twenty shekels, and a girl ten. From a month old to five years, five shekels shall be given for a male child, and three for a female. From sixty and above, a man shall give fifteen, and a woman ten shekels. If he who has made the vow is too poor, he shall present himself before the Priest, and shall pay according to the estimation which shall be made of him. What is the reason, says Philo, that in all this there is no consideration of the age, wealth, or other qualities of those who make the Vow? To this he answers, The reason is first, because the Vow is of equal dignity, let the condition of those who make it be what it will. 2°. It is not decent to value those who make Vows, as we do Slaves, who are rated according to their beauty, their graceful stature, or good health. The third and principal reason is this, that equality of Conditions, which is despised by Men, is considered and esteemed by God.

Moses speaks farther of different sorts of Corban, or Dedications made by the Hebrews, of some part of their Estates, which was afterwards redeemed, or if it consisted in Cattle was sanctified, in the manner appointed by the Legislator. Lev.

When a Man had devoted all his for- xxvii. 9, 10, &c.
tune, he was forbidden to make use of it; if all that he was to give his Wife, or his Father and Mother, was declared Corban, he was no longer permitted to allow them necessary subsistence. They who in the Acts of the Apostles made a Vow neither to eat nor drink, till they had kil- Acts xxiii.
led S. Paul, in some sort made every 12.
thing Corban that belonged to them; or every thing that might supply them with Meat and Drink. The Sons mentioned in the Gospel, who declared every thing Mat. vii.
Corban that they could contribute to the 11.
support of their Father and Mother, were induced to this cruelty by some transport of Passion only; for had they done so through avarice, what could they have gained by devoting that to God which they refused their Parents? But without devoting it to God, they were satisfied with declaring it to be Corban with respect to those to whom a part of it was due; for example, they said, my whole fortune as to you is Corban, I can give you no share of it: I have made a Vow to communicate nothing of it to you[n].

To facilitate the practice of these Vows, which were so contrary to Charity and Religion, or rather to confirm and increase the spirit of Superstition in the People, the Jewish Doctors did not require them to be pronounced in the most formal manner; it was of little consequence whether the word Corban were so much as mentioned, tho' this was most in use, provided something was said which might come near it. These are the Vows, thus imperfect in the terms of them, which the Talmudists call Handles[o], because, as it is sufficient to take a Vessel by the handle, in order to lift it up all intire; so to compleat a Vow, it is enough to pronounce any word of it: and if any said, May this be as the Temple to me, or as the Altar, or as the Fire, or lastly, as the Sacrifice this was not to be dispensed with. They permitted even Debtors to defraud their Creditors, by consecrating their debt to God[p], as if the thing were theirs, and not their Creditors.

Corbona[*] signifies also the Treasury of the [l] Antiq. l. iv. c. 4. [illegible]

[m] Philo de specialib. legib. p. 774.
[n] Basnage Hist. des Juifs l. vii. c. 19. [o] ידות ansæ or manus, handles, hands. [p] Vide Capell in Mat. i. 15. et Origen.
[*] By this word such Persons were likewise meant, as devoted themselves to the service of God and his Temple, Joseph. contra Appion. lib. i. There are various Cases relating to this Practice in the Mishnah, under the Title Nedarim.

the Temple, where the Offerings which were made in Money were deposited. The Jews taking up the Money which Judas cast into the Temple, after he had betrayed Jesus Christ, made a scruple of laying it up in the Treasury of the Temple, (Mat. xxvii. 6.) because it was the price of Blood; and an Offering of such a nature was esteemed to be impure. They resolved therefore to purchase a field with it, to be a burying place for Strangers.

CORD. To put Cords about ones Reins, or to girt ones self about with a Cord, was a mark of Sorrow and Humiliation. God looseth the bond of kings, and girdeth their loins with a girdle, says (Job xii. 18.) Job. The servants of Benhadad King of Syria presented themselves before the King of Israel with sackcloth upon their loins, (1 Kings xx. 31, 32.) and ropes on their heads, imploring Ahab's clemency to Benhadad. Isaiah iii. 24. threatens the Daughters of Sion with giving them pro zona funiculum, Cords for Girdles.

CORD, Funiculus is often used for Inheritance, I will give thee the land of (Psal. cv. 11.) Canaan the Cord of thine inheritance. Jo- (Ezek. xlvii. 13.) seph hath a double Cord, a double Portion: Which expression had its Original from their custom of measuring land with a Cord; so Joshua distributed to every Tribe a certain number of Cords or (Pf. xv. 6.) Acres, &c. Funes ceciderunt mihi in præclaris, my Lot is fallen in an excellent Country.

(2 Sam. xxii. 6.) The cords of hell compassed me about; or as the Hebrew reads it, the cables of Hell, of the Grave, closed me in. He alludes to the Fillets which were bound about dead Bodies: He farther calls them in the same place, the bands of death. The Septuagint, instead of cables of Hell, have translated it in Psalm xviii. 6. the (2 Pet. ii. 4.) pains of death. S. Peter says, that God dragg'd the rebellious Angels into Hell with the Cables of Hell, thereby meaning Cords of such a solidity and strength, as nothing is capable of resisting.

The Cords of Sinners, funes peccatorum (cxix. 61.) circumplexi sunt me, are the snares with which they catch weak and innocent People. The Cords of Sins mentioned by the wise Man, Prov. v. 22. are the consequences of crimes and bad habits: Sin never goes unpunished, either in this World or the other; and the bad habits which are contracted, are as it were indissoluble bands, from which it is almost impossible to secure ourselves.

(Baruch vi. 43.) Baruch speaks of a very extraordinary custom among the Babylonians. The women with cords about them sitting in the ways, burn bran for perfume: but if any of them drawn by some that passeth by lie with him; she reproacheth her fellow that she was not thought as worthy as herself, nor her cord broken. He alludes to the ceremony mentioned by Herodotus[t]; the Babylonian Women, says he, have a custom of prostituting themselves once in their lives, in honour of Melitta: they stand near the Temple of the Goddess with Cords about their heads, as marks of their devoting themselves: They are separated from one another by lines; into these separations Strangers enter, carry off those whom they like best, and break the Cords which hang about their heads.

To stretch a cord or line about a city, signifies to ruin, to destroy it intirely, to level it with the ground. Jeremiah, Lament. ii. 8. The Lord hath purposed to destroy the wall of the daughters of Zion; he hath stretched out a line, he hath not withdrawn his hand from destroying.

The Cords extended in setting up Tents, do likewise furnish several Metaphors; for example, the Cords of Jerusalem shall not be broken, nor the nails which fasten them be pull'd out. And in another (If. xxxiii. 20, 23.) place, Thy cords are loose, they could not well strengthen their mast. And Jeremiah ch. x. v. 20. My tabernacle is spoiled, and all my cords are broken.

CORNER, Angulus, is taken for the extremity of any Land, Country, Habit, of the Beard and Hair, of a People, Building, Table, Altar, &c. Ye shall not round the corners of their heads, neither shalt thou mark the corners of thy beard, says Moses. Thou shalt not cut it off intirely (Lev. xix. 27.) towards the ears, at the extremity of the Chin. All Israel, all the extremities of the people, omnes anguli populorum; and all the Tribes assembled together at Mizpeh. In the opinion of some, by the extremity of the people, is meant all the (Judg. xx. 2.) People without exception, from one end of the land to the other. Others think this expression denotes the principal and first[*]. See likewise 1 Sam. xiv. 38. Draw near all ye chief (or corners) of the people. And Isai. xix. 13. They have reduced Egypt, even they who are the stay (corner) of all the tribes thereof. And Zephaniah iii. 6. I have cut off the nations, their corners are desolate. In all these passages the Corner of the People seems to denote the whole Body of the People from one Corner to another.

The Corner sometimes signifies the most devoted place, the part of the Edifice most in sight. Zachary speaking of the Tribe of Judah after their return from [t] Herodot. l. i. c. 199.

[*] And so our English Translation understands it: that reading the Original פנות כל־העם the Chief of all the People: And in the following Passages referr'd to by our Author, it adheres generally to the same Interpretation of the word פנות.

Zech. x. 4. from the Captivity, says, Out of him came forth the corner, out of him the nail. This Tribe shall afford Corners, Heads; it shall produce the Corner Stone, the Messiah
If. xxviii. 16. Psal. cxvi. 22. Mat. xxi. 42, &c. reproved and rejected by the Jews, but exalted to great Glory by his heavenly Father. Corner is taken likewise for the most obscure place of a House, Prov. xxi. 9. xxv. 24. It is better to dwell in a corner of the house top, than with an angry woman in a wide house; and Acts xxvi. 26. S. Paul speaking before Agrippa of matters relating to our Saviour and his resurrection, calls him to witness, and tells him, that these things are known sufficiently, and that they were not transacted in a Corner.

COREÆ. Josephus[a] says, that Coreæ was the first place in Judæa, on the North side of it. This Town lay near the Castle of Alexandrium, which was situated on the top of a Mountain in the way between Coreæ and Jericho[b].

CORIANDER, a small round Seed, of a good scent. Moses says, that the Manna which God gave the Israelites in the Wilderness, as to the form of it, was Exod. xvi. 31. Num. xi. 8. like Coriander seed; as to its colour, was white, or the colour of Bdellium, as Moses describes it in those very places, where he compares it with Coriander seed.

CORINTH, a celebrated City, the Capital of Achaia seated on the Isthmus which separates the Peloponnesus from Attica. S. Paul came to preach at Corinth
Acts xviii. 1, 2, & seq. in the year of J. C. 52. This City was one of the best peopled, and most wealthy of all Greece. Its situation between two Seas drew thither the Trade of both the East and West from all parts. Its Riches produced Pride, Ostentation, Effeminacy, and all manner of Vices, which are the consequences of too great Plenty. Lasciviousness particularly was not only tolerated there, but in some sort consecrated, by the worship of Venus, and the publick prostitution of those who were devoted to her. The Corinthians as well as other Greeks, pretended to Philosophy, Politeness and Learning. Such was the condition of Corinth, when S. Paul arrived there: These were the Monsters which he was to encounter.

He lodged there with one Aquila and his Wife Priscilla, who, as well as he, made Tents; thus he got a Livelihood by the labour of his own hands, to prevent his being burdensome to any one. He preached every Saturday in the Jewish Synagogues, and converted some who heard him. From Corinth he wrote his two Epistles to the Thessalonians in the year of J. C. 52. Some time after, observing, that the Jews of Corinth, instead of being benefited by his Instructions, opposed him with very blasphemous language; he shook his Raiment, and said, Your Blood be upon your own heads, I am clean; from henceforth I will go unto the Gentiles. He went therefore and Acts xviii. 6, 7, 8.
lodged with Justus sirnamed Titus, who was a Gentile indeed, but one who feared God: And many of the Gentiles afterwards embraced the Faith. S. Paul suffered a great deal at Corinth, but Jesus Christ appeared one night to him, and said, Be not afraid, for I have much People in this City. Encouraged by these words, he continued eighteen Months at Corinth, or in the neighbouring places. Acts xviii. 11.

He departed from thence in the fifty fourth year of J. C. and went to Jerusalem. Acts xviii. 18.
About two years after, that is to say, in the year of J. C. 56. He wrote his first Epistle to the Corinthians from Ephesus, where he was at that time. Herein the Apostle reproves some particular Persons, who disturbed the Peace of this Church, and, upon pretence that there were different Sects and Parties in the Church, as well as among the Philosophers, called themselves the followers of Paul, of Peter or Cephas, and of Apollos, according to their different affections. He complains likewise that there were some 1 Cor. i. 10, 12.
disorders in their Assemblies, that there were Law-suits among them, and that a Christian had committed Incest with his Mother-in-law his Father's Wife. This Letter was sent by Stephanus, Fortunatus and Achaicus. It had all the Success S. Paul could hope for, since it produced a saving sorrow, great vigilance against the vices wherewith he had reproached them, and a very beneficial dread of God's anger. They repaired the scandal which had been given, and expressed abundance of zeal against the Crime of the incestuous person. 2 Cor. vii. 9, 10, 11.

S. Paul having understood the good effects which his first Letter had produced among the Corinthians, wrote a second to them, in the year of J. C. 57. He wrote from Macedonia, and probably from the City of Philippi. He expressed his satisfaction at the Conduct they had observed with regard to the incestuous person; justified himself in those particulars, 2 Cor. ii. 5—11.
which the false Apostles had objected to him, and exalted the Gospel Ministry above that of Moses. He glories in the Ch. iii, iv, vi, x.
Labours and Persecutions which he had suffered; and lastly, exhorts the Corinthians to prepare their Alms which they designed to send to the Faithful in Judæa. This second Epistle was carried by Titus, and another Brother, whom the Churches had associated with him, in order to collect a Antiq. l. xiv. c. 6. b Antiq. l. xiii. c. 24. xvi. 2. xiv. 6.

lect the Charity of the Faithful. Some think this Brother to have been S. Luke, others Barnabas. There is a great deal of probability, that S. Paul came himself to Corinth, towards the end of this fifty seventh year [c].

CORNELIUS, Centurion of a Cohort belonging to the Legion firnamed Italian. He was a Gentile, but one that feared God, was constant at his Devotions, and did many charitable Acts. His whole Family served God as he did. He had learned these pious Practices in all probability from the Jews, who were very numerous at Cæsarea, where he was in Garrison. While he was one day fasting and praying, about three a clock in the afternoon, he saw an Angel in a vision very distinctly, who enter'd into his Chamber in the form of a Man, cloathed in a bright glittering Robe, and called him by his name, saying, thy Prayers and thine Alms are come up for a memorial before God: Send therefore presently to Joppa, and call for Simon Peter, he shall tell thee what thou must do, that thou and thy whole Family may be saved. After this the Angel informed him where Peter lived, and so withdrew.

Acts x. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, &c.

When the Angel was departed, Cornelius called two of his Servants, and a Soldier, who feared God: To these he related what had happened, and sent them to Joppa with a request to Peter, that he would come to him. They immediately set out upon their Journey, and the next day arrived there, about noon, or something later. Before their arrival, Peter went upon the Terrass of the House where he lodged, and while he was there praying, he fell into an extasy, and saw something like a large cloth held by the four corners, which descended to him from Heaven. In this cloth were Beasts, Birds, and creeping things of all kinds; and he heard a voice, saying, Rise, Peter, kill, and eat. The meaning of which words was, that there was nothing impure which God declared to be pure. He excused himself from touching any thing, because he had never tasted any thing unclean. But the voice answered him, Call not that unclean which God has purified. The same thing was repeated three times, and then the Cloth was drawn up into Heaven.

At the same time the three Men arrived at Joppa, whom Cornelius had sent thither; and the Holy Spirit inwardly suggested to him, that they came by his direction, and that he should make no difficulty of going with them. Peter therefore received them, detained them that day, and the next departed with them. The next day about three in the afternoon they reached Cæsarea. Cornelius waited for S. Peter with all his most intimate Friends and Relations, whom he had got together for this purpose. As soon as he understood that he was near, he went out to meet him, and threw himself at his Feet. But S. Peter raised him, saying to him, I my self also am a Man. They proceeded therefore to the house, and entered it conversing together. Cornelius gave him a particular Relation of what had happened to him, and told him, that he, and all who were there present, expected him to declare what God should reveal to them by his mouth.

Then Peter in few words told him, that Jesus Christ had been sent by God for the Salvation of all Men, to be Judge both of the quick and dead, and to grant remission of Sins to such as should believe in him: That the Jews had unjustly crucified him, but that God had raised him from the dead, and his Disciples had eat and drunk with him after his Resurrection.

While S. Peter was discoursing in this manner, the Holy Ghost, which had purified their Hearts by Faith, descended on all those who heard him; and they began to speak divers Languages, and glorify God; which extremely surprized the believing Jews, who came from Joppa with S. Peter. Then said he, Can any one refuse these People Baptism, who have already received the Holy Ghost as well as we? And he commanded them to be baptized in the name of Jesus Christ. Cornelius desired S. Peter to stay some days with him, which he did without any difficulty. The news being brought to Jerusalem, that one uncircumcised had been baptized, the Faithful there were very much offended; for hitherto the door of Faith had not yet been opened to the Gentiles. But S. Peter returning to Jerusalem, and relating what had passed to them, they were appeased, and glorified God, who had thus imparted the Gift of Repentance to the Gentiles, in order to prepare them for that inestimable one of eternal Life.

Acts xi. 1, 2, & seq.

Usuardus and others of the Latins, make Cornelius Bishop of Cæsarea in Palestine. The Apostolical Constitutions take notice likewise of one Cornelius, as Bishop of this City next after Zachæus [d]; But they do not tell us that he was the Centurion, of whom we are now speaking. Eusebius, who was Bishop of this Church, does not reckon him among his Predecessors. We have the Acts of Cornelius, but they are not an original or authentick piece. Some modern Greeks make make him Bishop of Ilium, others of Scepsis, which is not far from it. The Greeks in their Menologies, treat him as a Martyr. They keep his Festival on the thirteenth of September, and the Latins on the second of February. S. Jerom says, that the House which Cornelius lived in at Cæsarea, was afterwards changed into a Church, which S. Paula visited with great Devotion in the year of J. C. 385.

[c] Vide Acts ix. 2. & 2 Cor. xii. 14. xiii. 1. Usher, Tillem. alii.

[d] Constit. Apostol. l. vii. c. 46.

CORNU-STIBII, an Horn or Vessel full of Paint or Antimony. In old times Horns were much used instead of Vessels, and Antimony was imployed in colouring the Eyes, and dilating the Eye-lids: For black and large Eyes were thought to be the most beautiful. In the Hebrew we read, Horn of Phuc. Now, the word Phuc, signifies sometimes Antimony, and sometimes a precious Stone. The Septuagint translate it, Horn of plenty, or Amalthæa's Horn: The Chaldee, sparkling like an Emerald.

Job xlii. 14. קרן פוך 70. Κέρας ἀμαλθείας. 1 Chr. xxix. 2. Isai. liv. 11.

CORSEUS, the name of a River, which runs near Cæsarea in Palestine. Ptolem.

I. CORUS, or Omer, a sort of Hebrew Measure, containing ten Baths, or seventy five Gallons and five Pints, as a Measure of things liquid, and thirty two Pecks and one Pint as a Measure for things dry [*]. When God sent Quails a second time into the Israelites Camp, every one gathered so large a quantity of them, that they who got least had ten Corus's. Qui parum, decem coros.

II. CORUS, a sort of wind, which in Summer rises in the West, and is called at present the North East. S. Luke in the Acts says, that the Vessel which carried S. Paul to Rome, went from the Fair Havens to Phœnice, which is a port in the Island of Crete, and lies between the Winds called Africus and Corus; that is to say, the South-West and North-East.

COSAM, Son of Elmodam, and one of our Saviour's Ancestors, according to his human Nature. Luke iii. 28.

COSTOBARUS, an Idumæan descended from one of the most illustrious Families of the Country, whose Ancestors had been Priests of the God Chosen, who was worshipped by the Idumæans, before they were subdued by John Hircanus, and by him compell'd to receive Circumcision [x]. Herod the Great, to whom Costobarus had been very serviceable, gave him his Sister Salome in Marriage. But Costobarus, pushed on by an unmeasurable ambition, intended to persuade the Idumæans to shake off the Jewish Yoke, and wrote to Queen Cleopatra, desiring her to ask this Kingdom of Mark Antony, imagining that this Princess would set the Crown upon his Head. Herod, upon a discovery of this Conspiracy, determined to put Costabarus to death: But Salome his Sister, and Costobarus's Wife, obtained his Pardon, and preserved his Life.

Sometime after, Costobarus having quarrelled with Salome, she separated from him, and accused him afterwards to Herod, of being concerned in the Conspiracy, which Antipater, Lysimachus, and Dositheus were engaged in, and of saving and receiving into one of his Castles the Children of Babas, whom Herod had commanded to be executed, when he took Jerusalem. These Accusations upon enquiry proving true, Herod put Costobarus to death [y], in the year of the World 3978. before the vulgar Æra 26.

II. COSTOBARUS, a Relation of King Agrippa's, having put himself, together with one Saul, at the head of a Troop of Thieves and Villains, did an infinite deal of Mischief in Judæa. They left Jerusalem after the defeat of Cassius, foreseeing well the Misfortunes with which their Country would be overwhelmed [z], and went away to Cestius, who sent them to Nero, at that time in Achaia, that they might lay before him the State of Judæa, and impute the whole Cause of the War to Florus's ill conduct.

COTTON, in Latin Gossypium, a kind of white soft Wool, which is found in a sort of brown Nut, growing upon a Shrub, the Leaves whereof are like those of a Sycomore Tree, and almost of the same Figure. This Plant puts forth abundance of beautiful yellow Flowers, finer than those of that kind of Mint which smells like Musk; the ground of this Flower is of a Purple colour, and all striped within. There is an oval Bud that appears in the middle, and grows in time as big as a Pigeon's Egg. When it is ripe, it turns black, and divides itself at top into three parts; the Cotton of it looks as white as Snow, and with the heat swells to the largeness of a Pullet's Egg. There are three black Berries in the bud as big as Lupines that stick close together.

It is our opinion, that the Scripture speaks of Cotton under the Hebrew name Schesch, which in Latin is translated Byssus. The word Xylinum, which signifies Cotton, may be derived from Schesch or Xes שש Schesch, Byssus. Exod. xxv. 4.

[x] Antiq. l. xv. c. 11. [y] Ibid. [z] Antiq. l. xx. c. 8. p. 699. & de Bello l. ii. c. 25. p. 821.

[*] The Corus or Omer was most commonly a measure for things dry, and the greatest that was used among the Jews. As of Barley, Lev. xxvii. of Wheat, 1 Kings iii. 2. 2 Chr. ii. 1. It contained, according to the Rabbins, ten Ephahs, or thirty Sata or Seahs. Corus is the most usual term in the historical Writers, and Omer or Chomer among the Prophets. Arbuthnot's Tables, &c. p. 100.

Xet and Linum, and that of Goffypium, which fignifies the fame thing, may be formed from the Hebrew Ægos, a Nut, and Pioth, Mouths, becaufe the Nut, which produces Cotton, opens itfelf, and fhews the Wool which it is filled with. See our comment upon Exodus xxv. 4. p. 333.

COVENANT. The word Teftamentum is often ufed in holy Scripture, and Diatheke in the Greek, to exprefs the meaning of the Hebrew word Berith, which fignifies Covenant; from whence come the words Old and New Teftament, to denote the Old and New Covenant. The firft Covenant with the Hebrews, is that fworn between God and Abraham, when the Lord chofe Abraham and his Pofterity for his People, and gave them Circumcifion for a mark of his Covenant with them; which was folemnly renewed at Sinai, where principally the Old Covenant begins, as comprehending all thofe who obferve the Law of Mofes. The New Covenant, whereof Jefus Chrift was the Mediator and Author, and which was cemented by his Blood, comprehends all who believe in him, and are in his Church. This fucceeded the Old Covenant, and will fubfift to the end of Ages.

ברית Berith. Fœdus. Græc. διαθήκη Teftamentum.

The firft Covenant between God and Man, was that which he made with Adam at his Creation, when he required him to forbear the ufe of the forbidden Fruit. The Lord took the man, and put him into the garden, and commanded him faying, Of every tree of the garden thou mayeft freely eat: but of the tree of knowledge of good and evil thou fhalt not eat of it; for in the day that thou eateft thereof thou fhalt furely die, or you fhall become mortal. This, fays S. Auftin, is the firft Covenant which God made with Man. [a] Teftamentum autem primum quod factum eft ad hominem primum, profectò illud eft: Quà die ederitis, morte moriemini: Hence it is written, Teftamentum a fæculo morte moriens.

Gen. ii. 16.

Eccl. xiv. 17. according to the Greek.

The fecond Covenant, is that which God made with Man after his Fall, by promifing him not only forgivenefs, provided he repented; but alfo the coming of the Meffiah, who fhould redeem him and all his Race from the death of Sin, and from the fecond death, which is that of Eternity. St. Paul in many places fpeaks to us of this Covenant, whereby the fecond Adam has redeemed and delivered thofe from Death, who had been condemned to die, by the procurement of the firft Adam. As in Adam all die, fo in Chrift fhall all be made alive. And in another place, As by one man fin entred into the world, and death by fin, and fo death paffed upon all men, for that all have finned---- as by one man's difobedience many were made finners, fo by the obedience of one many fhall be made righteous. And God faid to the Serpent, I will put enmity between thee and the woman, and between thy feed and her feed: it fhall bruife thy head, and thou fhalt bruife his heel. The Woman's Pofterity which fhould bruife the Serpent's Head, is the Meffiah, who by his death hath been the deftruction of the Devil, who had the power of Death.

1 Cor. xv. 22.

Rom. v. 12—19.

Gen. iii. 15.

Heb. ii. 14.

A third Covenant, is that which God made with Noah, when he directed him to build an Ark, or large Veffel, wherein he might preferve all the Animals of the Earth, and convey a certain number of Men into it, that by their means the new World after the Deluge might be repeopled.

Gen. vi. 18. With thee will I eftablifh my Covenant.

This Covenant was renewed an hundred and one and twenty years afterwards, when the Waters of the Deluge having fallen, and Noah with his Wife and Children left the Ark, God faid to him, Behold I eftablifh my Covenant with you, and with your feed after you; and with every living creature that is with you, from all that go out of the Ark, to every beaft of the earth: fo that all flefh fhall not be cut off any more by the waters of a flood: and I will fet my bow in the cloud, and it fhall be a token of a covenant between me and the earth.

Gen. ix. 8, 9, 10, 11.

All thefe Covenants were generally between Adam and Noah, and all their Pofterity. But that which God made afterwards with Abraham, was more limited, it concerned this Patriarch only, and his Family, which fhould be derived from him by Ifaac. The other Defcendants of Abraham by Ifhmael, and the Sons of Keturah, were to have no fhare in it.

Gen. xii. 1, 2, 3, &c. xv. 4, 5—18.

The Mark and Seal of this Covenant was the Circumcifion, which all the Males of Abraham's Family were to receive, upon the eighth day after their Birth. The Effects and Confequence of this Covenant are difcernible throughout all the Hiftory of the Old Teftament; the coming of the Meffiah is the Confummation and End of it. The Covenant of God with Adam forms what we call the State of Nature; that with Abraham explained farther in the Law of Mofes, conftitutes the Law in all its rigour; the Covenant of God with all Mankind, through the Mediation of Jefus Chrift, makes the Law of Grace.

Gen. xvii. 10, 11, 12.

In common difcourfe, we feldom fpeak but of the Old and New Teftament, of the Covenant between God and the Pofterity of Abraham, and of that which he hath

[a] Aug de Civit. Dei, l. xvi. c. 27.

hath made with all Men by Jesus Christ, because these two Covenants contain in the way of Eminence all the rest, which are Consequences, Emanations, and Explanations of them: For example, when God renewed his Promises to Isaac and Exod. ii. 24. vi. 4-7. ib. xix. 5, 6, &c. xx. 1, 2, 5, &c. Jacob, and made a Covenant at Sinai with the Israelites, and gave them his Law: When Moses a little before his death, received the Covenant which God
Deut. xxix. had made with his People, and recalled to their remembrance all the Miracles which he had wrought in favour of them:
Josh. xxiii. xxiv. 25. When Joshua perceiving himself to be near his end, swore with the Elders of the People, that they would observe an inviolable Fidelity to the God of their Forefathers; all this was no more than a consequence of the first Covenant made 2 Kings xxiii. 1, 2, 3. 2 Chr. xxxiv. 26. Esdr. x. 3. Neh. ix. 38. with Abraham. Josiah, Esdras, and Nehemiah renewed in like manner at different times their Engagements and Covenant with the Lord; but this renewal of them was only an Act of Zeal, and a promise of observing the Law already given to their Fathers with more Fidelity.

The greatest, most solemn, most excellent, and most perfect of all the Covenants which God ever made with Men, is that which he entred into with us through the Mediation of Jesus Christ: That eternal Covenant which must subsist to the end of Ages, whereof the Son of God is the Guarantee, which is cemented and confirmed with his Blood, the End and Object whereof is Eternal Life, the Priesthood, Sacrifice and Laws whereof are infinitely more exalted than those of the Old Testament. See S. Paul in the Epistles to the Galatians and Hebrews.

COVERING of Legs and Feet, used by the Hebrews. The Hebrews, commonly speaking, had their Legs and Feet covered, particularly in the Field and in Cities; but in their Houses, and in private very frequently, they wore no Covering to these parts. Sometimes they Exod. iii. 5. laid it aside out of respect, as Moses before the burning Bush, Joshua before the Josh. v. 15. Angel, who appeared to him in the Plain Ex. xxx. 19. of Jericho, the Priests in the Temple during the time of their Service; sometimes out of a Principle of Sorrow and Repentance, as David did when he departed from Jerusalem, during Absalom's Rebel-2 Sam. xv. 30. lion, and the Jews upon the great day of Expiation, and in the time of mourning.
God forbids Ezekiel to undress his Legs, and mourn for his Wife who was just Ezek. xxiv. 17. dead. Isaiah received Orders to go barefoot, and pull off his Clothes, to denote in a more express manner the future Captivity of Egypt. Isai. xx. 2.

Some of the Antients believed [a], that our Saviour had no Shoes, and generally walked barefoot; but others maintain the contrary. S. John Baptist says, that he was not worthy to bear or to untye our Saviour's Shoes; and it is not credible, Mat. iii. 11.
that in a matter so indifferent, he would depart from the Custom of his Nation, John i. 27.
or permit his Apostles to wear Shoes, if Mark vi. 9.
he himself had worn none.

Women of Quality covered their Feet and Legs with something very rich, as we may see by the Spouse in the Canticles, Judith and Ezekiel, who places precious materials for this use among the Presents which he made his Wife, meaning by her his People. The Scripture says, that Judith x. 3. xvi.
Judith, with the Finery of this part of her Dress, raised the Eyes of Holofernes.
The Shoes which the Lord gave his Spouse, were of a Purple colour. Ezek. xvi. 10.

The matter of this Covering for their Feet and Legs, was of Leather, Linen, Rush, or Wood; for we have nothing certain in this particular; what they generally used was of a very low price; and it was said in a proverbial way among them, as vile, as contemptible as his Shoes. They sold the poor for a pair of Amos ii. 6. viii. 6.
shoes, says Amos. The Scripture testifies the disinterestedness of Samuel, that he received not so much as a Shoe from any one. Soldiers sometimes wore Brass Ecclus. xlvi. 20.
and Iron upon their Feet and Legs: Fer- Deut.
rum & æs calceamentum ejus. See the xxxiii. 25.
Article Sandals.

COUNCIL, in Latin, Concilium. This word is sometimes taken in general for all sorts of Assemblies; sometimes for the meeting of the Sanhedrim, at others for a convention of Pastors met together to terminate Ecclesiastical Affairs, whether they relate to Faith, Discipline or Manners. Thus the Assembly of the Apostles and Priests at Jerusalem, called to- Acts xv.
gether to determine, whether the yoke of 7, 8, & seq.
the Law should be imposed upon the Gentile Converts, is reputed the first Council of the Christian Church. The same Apostles, soon after the Ascension of our Saviour, were cited, and appeared before the Sanhedrim, which ordered them to be scourged, and forbad them to preach the Doctrine of Jesus Christ. But they did not submit to this Sentence, and departed out of the Assembly, thinking themselves happy to have suffered something for the name of their Divine Master. See hereafter Sanhedrim. Acts v. 41.

Some Authors give us an account of a Succession of the Jewish Councils, which they

[a] Hieronym. ad Eustochium de servanda Virgin. Ita & Dionys. Chartus. Bonavent. Lyran. &c.

they believe to have been held before and after the coming of our Saviour: But there is no mention of these pretended Councils in the Scripture. As to the first Council convened at Jerusalem, after which it has been proposed to model all those that have been since assembled, it ordained, that the yoke of Circumcision should not be imposed upon the Gentile Converts, nor any other legal Observances; but that they should be obliged to abstain from Meats sacrificed to Idols, from Fornication, from things strangled, and from Blood. I say nothing here of other Councils held in the Church since the time of the Apostles, because there is no mention of them in the Scripture. Some believe, that the Apostles met in Council to compose the Creed: This is a particular which we shall examine under the Article Symbolum.

COUNSEL. Besides the common signification of this word, we may observe, that it is used frequently in Scripture for the Decrees of God, the Orders of
Gen. xlv. 8. his Providence. Non vestro concilio, sed Dei voluntate huc missus sum: It is an effect of God's Decree, and by the direction of his Providence, that I was brought hither, rather than by any design concerted by you. God frustrates the Counsel, the Views, the Designs of Princes; but the counsels of the Lord
Ps. xxxiii. 11. stand for ever. His Desires, his Will, his Resolutions are executed, without any thing's being able to oppose them. The counsels of God are terrible against
Ps. lxvi. 5. the children of men, his Views, his De-
Ps. cvii. 11. signs. They have contemned the counsel of the most High; they have opposed his Will. I have declared unto you all the Acts xx. 27. counsel of God, his Will, his Doctrine.
Luke vii. 30. The Jews rejected the counsel of God against themselves, the Favours of God, his Designs of saving them. God will ma-
1 Cor. iv. 5. nifest the counsels of the Heart, the Designs, Thoughts, the most secret Resolutions. Jesus Christ in Isaiah ix. 6. according to the Septuagint, is called Magni consilii Angelus; the Angel, the Minister, the Executor of this great and admirable Design of God, for the Salvation of Mankind.

COUNTRY, Patria. By this word is meant the Land where we were born, and the Town where we dwell.

It is taken likewise for Family; for example, Afferte Domino patriæ gen-
Ps. xcv. 7. tium; bring Sacrifices unto the Lord, O ye Kindreds of the People; ye People of foreign Nations come and offer your Sacrifices unto the Lord. Patria in Greek signifies a Race, a Nation.

The Heavenly Country, denotes the happiness of Heaven, which is hoped for by all Christians. We have here no continuing city, but we seek one to come, says S. Paul, Hebr. xiii. 14.

Patria voce in the Book of Macca- 2 Mac.
bees, signifies the Hebrew tongue, or Sy- vii. 8. 21.
riac, Respondit voce Patria? He answer- 27. xii. 37.
ed in his Mother tongue in Hebrew, xv. 27.
which was the language of his Country. The Author makes this distinction, because this whole Affair of the Martyrdom of the Maccabees was transacted before the Greeks, and even in the midst of Antioch, where Greek was spoken.

COURIERS. See Posts.

COURT, in Hebrew, Chazer; in Latin, Atrium. The great Courts belonging to the Temple of Jerusalem were three, the first called the Court of the Gentiles, because the Gentiles were allowed to enter so far, and no farther. The second was called the Court of Israel, because all the Israelites, provided they were purified, had a right of admission. The third Court was that of the Priests, where the Altar of Burnt-offerings stood, where the Priests and Levites exercised their Ministry. Common Israelites, who were desirous to offer Sacrifices, were at liberty to bring their Victims as far as the inner part of the Court, but they could not go beyond a certain Vail of separation, which divided it into two; and the Laity withdrew as soon as they had delivered their Sacrifices and Offerings to the Priest, or had made their Confession, with the Ceremony of laying their Hand upon the Head of the Victim, if it were a Sin-offering.

As to the Form, Ornaments, and Dimensions of the Court of the Temple, see the Article Temple, and the Plans which have been made of it.

Before the Temple was built, there was a Court in the Tabernacle, but not near so large as that in the Temple, and encompassed only with Pillars, and Vails hung by Cords. See the Article Tabernacle. These Courts were intirely after the fashion of the Egyptian Temples, belonging to which there were large Courts surrounded with Colonnades. The same in proportion were visible in the Palaces of Kings, and the Houses of great Men, wherein there were great Courts, as appears from the Palaces of Solomon, and King Ahasuerus mentioned by Esther. Esth. iv.
The Evangelists in the History of our 11. v. 1.
Saviour's Passion, speak of the High vi. 4.
Priest's Court; and S. Luke mentions the Mat. xxvi. strong armed Man who guardeth the 58. John palace; that is to say, the Guard, who xviii. 15.
continues always armed at a great Man's Luke xi. 21.
door, as we see Swisses at the Gates of great Houses.

Ezek. xlvii. 17. xlviii. 1. Court, Atrium, is often used for a City; Atrium Ennon, Atria Netophati, the Cities of Ennon and Netophath. In the Hebrew this is still much more frequent; for all the Towns, with the word Hazer are so called, as if it were said, the Court of Suza, &c. Hazer-Suza, Hazer-Shual; in like manner also Hazera, Hazerim, Haziroth, are names of Towns, and signify Courts. The Courts of Jerusalem are put for the City itself; Stantes erant pedes nostri in atriis tuis, Jerusalem.

COOS or Cos, an Island in the Archipelago, opposite to Cnidus and Halicarnassus. S. Paul departing from Miletus, came to Coos, and from thence went to Acts xxi. 1. Rhodes.

COZ, the Father of Anub and Zobebah, 1 Chr. iv. 8.

COZAR. The Oriental Historians relate [b], that Chozar, or Khosar, the seventh Son of Japheth, having separated from his Brethren, who were settled in different places of the Countries included within Great Tartary, came as far as the Banks of the River Volga, and there built a City which he called by his name, and sowed Millet round about it, which is the only Grain that grows in that Country. The Land has retained the name of Chozar, and the Inhabitants are known by that of Chozarians. It is situated to the north of the Caspian Sea, and extends itself from the Volga eastward. The Caspian Sea, by the Persians called the Sea of Chozar, borrowed its name from him.

The Jewish Authors [c] pretend, that Cozar or Chozar was Grandson to Japheth by Thogorma, that he founded the Kingdom of Cozar, whereof the City of Thogorma is one of the principal in the Country. The Rabbin Petachias [d] assures us, that he continued eight days in this Kingdom, which a Vein of the Sea separates from Tartary; that from the Frontiers of this Kingdom issue seven great Rivers; that there are two Seas separated a day's Journey from one another. There is such a stench arises from one, that all who sail that way are killed by the bad scent. The City of Thogorma is situated upon the Mountains of Ararat. The Law of Mahomet is observed there. You go from thence to Nisibe, which is eight days Journey distant from it. There are three Synagogues there.

Another Jewish Traveller [e], being inquisitive to know whether the Scepter continued still in Judah, and there were still any Country in the World where the Jews enjoyed regal Rights, was informed by a Jew, Physician to a certain Prince, that in the Kingdom of Cozar the King made profession of the Law of Moses, and he was confirmed in this opinion, when he saw the Letters of Joseph King of Cozar, to a Spanish Rabbin.

Abulfaragius writes, that the Cozarians and Georgians [f] are the same People, and Eutychius Patriarch of Alexandria says, that the Emperor Heraclius procured considerable succours against the Persians, from the King of the Cozarians, and that in return he promised them a Throne; that is to say, an honourable seat in the Assemblies at his Imperial Palace. Edrissi in his Geography relates, that among the Cozarians every Man follows the Religion which appears best to him, and that they enjoy an intire liberty of Conscience, that there are Mussulmen, Christians and Jews mingled among them. It is affirmed, that the Caliph Abdalmelech made War with the Cozarians in Armenia, that he burnt them in their Churches, that he defeated them at the Iron Gates, and that they who remained turned Christians.

Notwithstanding all these Testimonies, there are still some Men of Learning [g], who question much whether there be in reality any such Kingdom as that of Cozar, or rather who maintain it to be evident, that there is none, that what ever is said of it is founded only upon Fables, and that neither Jews nor Christians have hitherto been able to shew the Situation of it. I should choose rather to say, that this Country at present is not known to our Geographers by the name of Cozar; but after the Testimonies which we have produced from the Oriental Authors, can there be any doubt of there being such a Country, and that it is well known to them?

However this may be, it is related, that about the Year of Jesus Christ 740, a certain King of Cozar desiring, in consequence of a dream which he had [h], to make himself acquainted with all Religions, that so he might be able to discern which was best, sent for a Philosopher, a Christian and a Mahometan, disputed with each of them; and was not affected with any of their Reasons. After this he sent for a Jew, whose name was Sangari, who succeeded so well as to persuade him, that the Jewish Religion was the only true one.

We

[b] De Herbelot Bibl. Orient. p. 1102. Khozar.
[c] Basnage Hist. des Juifs, t. 3. l. v. c. 1.
[d] Apud Buxtorf. in Cozri Præfat.
[e] Isaac Son of Abraham, 1562.
[f] Bibl. Orient. p. 1003.
[g] See Basnage Hist. des Juifs, l. v. c. 3.
[h] Vide Libr. Cozri a Buxtorf. editum & Latine versum.

We have Sangari's supposed Conference with Cozri, wherein certainly such things are to be read, as are very improper to convince an Infidel. But at last Cozri being converted, discovered his secret in confidence to the General of his Army; both of them departed privately from Cozar, and came fortunately to certain Mountains, where the Jews were celebrating the Sabbath. There the King and his General received Circumcision, made profession of Judaism; and upon their return to the Capital, engaged the People of the Country to take the same resolution. If the Letter from Joseph King of Cozar, to the Spanish Rabbi Chardac, were genuine, we should be obliged to own, that Judaism subsisted in the Kingdom of Cozar, till the end of the fourteenth Century, since this Rabbi lived about the year 1394. See Bartolocci Bibl. Rabbin. t. 2. p. 853.

But both this Letter from King Joseph and the pretended Conversion of the King of Cozar, are very dubious; it is very probable that the Book called Cozri, which the Jews so much value, that they would have it all got by heart; that this Book, I say, which includes the History of this Conversion, and Rabbi Sangari's Arguments, is a pure Romance. The Jewish Author of the Hebrew Book entitled, Meor-enaim[a], questions whether there ever were such a King of the Cozarians, who embraced the Religion of the Jews. This Confession from an Author of this Nation, in a matter of such consequence, is very remarkable.

COZBI, the Daughter of Zur a Prince of the Midianites. This young Woman going with others of her Sex and Age into the Hebrew Camp, engaged some of the principal Israelites by her Allurements to commit the most ignominious Crimes, and among the rest, to be guilty of Idolatry. Zimri the Son of Salu, of the Tribe of Simeon, having entred publickly the Tent where she was, Phinehas the Son of Eleazar followed him, and thrust them both through their Bodies with his Sword, in the midst of their infamous embraces.

Numb. xxv. 6-15.

CRASSUS*. When Marcus Crassus was upon the expedition against the Parthians, he came into Judæa, and took eight thousand one hundred Talents of Gold, and two thousand Talents of Silver out of the Treasury of the Temple at Jerusalem; and as he intended farther to carry off the sacred Vessels, and richest Vails of the Temple, the Priest Eleazar, who had the keeping of them, told him, that he would shew him a Beam of massy Gold, if he would promise him upon Oath, that he would touch nothing else. Crassus swore, he would not; whereupon Eleazar discovered a golden Beam to him, which weighed three hundred Mina's; now a Mina is two pounds and an half Hebrew. This Beam lay concealed in another hollow one of Wood, upon which were hung the richest Vails of the Temple. But the avarice of Crassus was not yet satisfied with all this Wealth; for after this he carried off all the Gold that was in the Temple. It was not long ere the vengeance of God overtook him, and punished him severely for his Sacrilege: For having invaded the Territories of the Parthians, he perished there with the greatest part of his Army.

In the year of the World 3950, before J. C. 50 before the vulgar Æra 54.

CREATOR, Creation, to create. These Terms properly signify a Passage from Non-entity to Being; the production of something out of nothing, or the Act of God, producing things out of nothing. The Hebrews make use of the verb Bara, to signify Creation properly speaking, and have no words, which now accurately express it. But this, as well as the Latin, Creo, is used also sometimes to denote the Conformation of Matter only, the change of its Form, State and Situation. Creation successive and simultaneous. See upon this Subject the Article Sabbath.

ברא Bara. Ποιεῖν, κτίζειν.

CRESCENS. S. Paul in his second Epistle to Timothy, chap. iv. v. 10. says, Crescens is departed to Galatia, or Gaul[b], and Titus to Dalmatia. Eusebius, Theodoret, Epiphanius, the Chronicon Alexandrinum, Nicephorus, an anonymous Author cited by Oecumenius, and Dorotheus maintain, that Crescens preached in Gaul. S. Jerom, Usuardus and Ado affirm the same. It is believed by some, that he founded the Church of Vienne in Dauphiny; and this is a Tradition handed down in this Church. Serrarius in his History of Mentz, says, he was the Apostle of the Church of Mentz, and cites Abbot Rupert to justify his Opinion: But he confesses, that neither the Missal nor Breviary of this Church, nor any antient Monument whatever, speaks of [a] Vide Bibl. Orient. p. 1003. col. 2. Basnage loco citato.

[b] Ita Theodoret. Euseb. libri quidam Εἰς Γαλλίαν. Alii passim in Γαλατίαν.

* He was celebrated for his great Wealth and Avarice. Dr. Prideaux tells us from Plutarch, that after he had consecrated the tenth of all he had to Hercules, had feasted all the Roman People at ten thousand Tables, and given to every Roman Citizen a Donation of as much Corn as would last him three Months, he found the remainder of his Estate to be seven thousand one hundred Roman Talents, which amounts to above a Million and an half of our Money. Prid. Connect. &c. Part i. B. v.

of Crescens as Founder of the Church of Mentz.

The Tradition of the Church of Vienne is not much better grounded. This Tradition is not very antient; it is not two hundred years since the name of S. Crescens was first put into the Litanies of this Church. In the Disputes which were afoot between the Churches of Arles and Vienne, concerning the right of a Metropolitan, no one ever thought of taking any advantage from the Mission of S. Crescens. It is true, there is a Letter produced from Pope Paul I. to Charlemain, wherein he says, that Crescens, a Collegue of the Apostles, was Master of the City of Vienne: But this Letter having been produced in these later Times only, there is reason to suspect, that it is spurious. Crescens died, as the Latins say, on the twenty seventh of June, as the Greeks on the thirtieth of July. The Apostolical Constitutions [l] fix his Apostleship in Galatia, and declare that he died there.

CRETE, the Isle of Crete, now called Candia, in the Mediterranean S. Paul made Titus, his dear Disciple, Bishop of Crete, and in the Epistle which he wrote to him, charges him to rebuke the People of this Island severely, and in strong terms, to prevent their being fond of Jewish Fables, human Ordinances, and the Observances of the Law: For as he
Tit. i. 12, 13. adds, the Cretians, as one of their own Prophets or Poets bears witness, are always liars, evil beasts, slow bellies. This Cretian Prophet, whom the Apostle speaks of, is Epimenides, a Native of Crete, who asserts this particular so much to the disadvantage of his own Countrymen. St. Chrysostom, Theodoret, and many others, make Callimachus the Author of this remark cited by S. Paul, because there are two verses which are certainly his, the purport whereof is this, The Cretians are always liars, for they have erected a monument to thee, O King Jupiter, who art not dead, but on the contrary art immortal. Notwithstanding the verses quoted by S. Paul are certainly Epimenides's, the first words whereof only were cited by Callimachus.

In the Article Caphtor or Caphtorim, we said, that this was the antient name of Crete; that the Philistines came from thence, and that the name of Ceretim or Cretim, which is so often mentioned in the Scripture, was the same as that of Cretians. See our Dissertation concerning the Origin of the Philistines, prefixed to the first Book of Samuel.

CRISPUS, Chief of the Jewish Synagogue at Corinth, was converted by Acts xviii. 8.
S. Paul, and baptized by the same Apostle, about the year of J. C. 52. Some 1 Cor. i. 14.
affirm [m] Crispus to have been Bishop of Ægina, an Island near Athens. The Greeks observe his Festival on the fourth of October.

CROCODILE, an amphibious, cruel, voracious Animal, in shape almost like a Lizard, but much larger. It is found principally in the Nile. Some likewise have been seen in the River Darat, in Mauritania [n], and in the Indies [o]. It seems as if there had been some also in Palestine, since Pliny and Ptolemy both speak of a City called Crocodilon, between Ptolemais and Cæsarea in Palestine. The Crocodile is covered with very hard Scales, which are not to be pierced without great difficulty; excepting under the Belly, where the Skin is tender. It has a wide Throat, with Teeth sharp, and separated, which enter one within another; of these it has several rows. It is very low upon its Feet, and crawls almost on the Earth. It runs with great swiftness, but does not easily turn itself. It lives a long time, and is said to grow continually till its death; but this is not at all probable. There are some of fifteen or eighteen Cubits long.

Crocodiles lay their Eggs upon the Ground, or on the Sand near the Waterside. Their Eggs are like Goose Eggs; and sometimes they lay sixty of them. They cover them in the Sand, that the heat of the Sun may contribute to hatch them. When their Bowels are taken out, or they are wounded, they smell very agreeably. There are several ways of taking them. Sometimes they are caught with great Hooks, baited with Hog's flesh, which they love mightily: At other times they are taken in Pits covered with Boughs and Earth, which they fall into, and are not able to get out. It is said, that the Ichneumon or Indian Rat, which is as large as a tame Cat, breaks the Crocodile's Eggs as often as it finds them on the Shore, and that it gets into the very Belly of this creature, while it is sleeping with its Throat open, gnaws its Intrails, and kills it.

The word Crocodile is supposed to come from the Greek, Croco-deilos, which signifies afraid of Saffron; because in reality this creature abhors the Flower and smell of Saffron. Its sight is very piercing, when it is upon the Ground; but in the Water it sees but dimly. The Egyptians we know adored the Crocodile. It is said to spend the four Winter ter Months under Water, without eating any thing. The Egyptians paid divine Honours to it [a], particularly the Inhabitants of Arſinoe, and they who dwelt in the Neighbourhood of Thebes, and the Lake Mœris. But the People of Tentyra and Elephantis killed and eat them. It is our Opinion, that Job ſpeaks of theſe People in the following words. Let them curſe it that curſe the day, who are ready to raiſe up a Leviathan, or to awake the Crocodile, let them curſe the day of my birth. See our Comment on this Paſſage. See likewiſe Pſal. lxxiv. 15. Thou ſmoteſt the heads of the Leviathan in pieces, and gaveſt him to be meat for the people in the wilderneſs.

[l] Constit. l. viii. c. 46. [m] Ibid. [n] Strabo. l. xvii. Plin. l. vi. c. 1. & v. 9. [o] Plin. l. vi. c. 20.

Job gives an admirable deſcription of the Crocodile, under the name of the לויתן Leviathan, in the xl. Chapter, the 20
Leviathan and following Verſes, and in the xli. 1,
Κροκόδειλος. 2, &c. See Bochart, De Animal. Sacr. parte 2. l. v. c. 16. Ezekiel, xxix. 3, 4. and xxxii. 2, 3. directs his ſpeech to the King of Egypt, under the name of Leviathan, or Crocodile. Behold I am againſt thee, thou great dragon, that lieſt in the midſt of thy rivers, which haſt ſaid, my river is mine own, and I have made it for myſelf. There are ſome [b] who think, that the name of Pharaoh, which commonly denotes the King of Egypt, does properly ſignify a Crocodile.

LAND CROCODILE. This Animal is otherwiſe called Stinx; it lives partly in the Water, and partly upon the Land; it has four ſhort ſlender Legs like a Lizard; its Snout is ſharp, and its tail ſhort and thin. It is covered with ſmall Scales, diſpoſed in very good order, of a Silver colour, in ſome places browniſh, and particularly upon the Back of Gold colour. It always continues ſmall, and is hatch'd in Egypt, near the Red Sea, in Lybia and the Indies. It has a ſtreak all along its Body, from the Head to the Tail.

In Leviticus there is mention of a kind of Crocodile, in the Hebrew called Levit. xi. Choled, which the Septuagint tranſlate
27. חלד Land Crocodile, and is numbered among
70. Κροκόδειλος χερσαῖος. the unclean Animals. This Land Crocodile is a ſort of Lizard, which feeds upon the ſweeteſt Flowers it can find; this makes its Intrails to be very much valued for their agreeable ſmell. S. Jerom [c] ſays, the Syrians eat Crocodiles of this kind, which live upon the Land only. Some Interpreters tranſlate the Hebrew Choled, Tortoiſe, or green Frog. S. Jerom has followed the Septuagint, and tranſlated it Crocodile.

CROSS. By the word Croſs, we underſtand a Gibbet made of two pieces of wood put croſs-wiſe; whether they croſs with right Angles at the top of one of them, or in the middle of their length, or like a S. Andrew's Croſs, or fork-wiſe. The Greek, Stauros, which ſignifies a Croſs, is put often for a piece of Wood only fixed in the Ground, by the Latins called Palus or Vallum: But the Croſs properly ſpeaking, reſembles a T, and the Croſs which Jeſus Chriſt was nailed to, is commonly believed to have been of this ſort. The Croſs was the puniſhment of the vileſt Slaves; it was called Servile ſupplicium [d]. To be crucified was a great mark of Infamy to Soldiers, Officers, and Men of Quality. This Penalty was ſo common among the Romans, that Pains, Afflictions, Troubles, and unproſperous Affairs were called Croſſes, and the verb cruciare was uſed for all ſorts of Chaſtiſements, and Pains of Body and Mind.

The Puniſhment of the Croſs was common among the Syrians, Egyptians, Perſians, Africans, Greeks, Romans and Jews. Pharaoh's chief Baker was beheaded, according to Joſeph's prediction, and his Carcaſe afterwards faſtened to the Croſs. Gen.
Haman prepared a great Croſs to hang 19.
Mordecai upon, but he was himſelf executed upon it. Joſhua gave orders for Eſth.
hanging the King of Ai upon a Croſs. 10.
Moſes in like manner hung the Princes Joſh.
of Iſrael upon Stakes or Croſſes, who 29.
had fallen into the abominations of Baal-peor. Every one knows, that this Pu- Num.
niſhment was very common among the xxv.
Greeks and Romans, and it is needleſs to produce proofs and examples of it; which are every where to be met with in Hiſtory.

The Jews confeſs, that indeed they crucified People in their Nation, but deny that they inflicted this Puniſhment on any alive: They firſt put them to death, and then faſtned them to the Croſs, either by the hands or neck; accordingly many inſtances are to be met with of Men thus hung upon a Stake after death. But there are indiſputable proofs to be produced, of their crucifying men frequently alive. The worſhippers of Baal-peor and the King of Ai, whom we have mentioned, were hung up alive, and ſo were the Deſcendants of Saul, who were put into the hands

[b] Bochart. de Animal. Sac. P. ii. l. v. c. 16. p. 795.
[d] Lipſius de cruce, l. i. c. x. 12.
[c] Hieronym. contra Jovinian. l. ii.

[a] Quis neſcit——qualia demens
Ægyptus portenta colat? Crocodilon adorat
Pars hæc: illa pavet ſaturam ſerpentibus Ibin.
Juv. Sat. xv.

SEVERAL WAYS OF CRUCIFYING.

2 Sam. xxi. 9. Psal. xxii. 17. Zech. xii. 10. hands of the Gibeonites. The Psalmist speaking of the death of the Messiah, says, They pierced my hands and my feet, I may tell all my bones. The Prophet Zechary says, that at the day of Judgment, the Jews shall look upon him whom they have pierced with Nails. Aspicient ad me quem confixerunt. Josephus [q] relates, that Alexander King of the Jews having ordered eight hundred of his rebellious Subjects to be crucified, commanded their Wives and Children to be executed before their Eyes at the foot of their Cross, while they were yet living. See our Dissertation on the capital Punishments of the Jews, prefixed to the Comment upon Deuteronomy, p. xlii, &c.

Deut. xxi. 22. The Law ordained, that the persons executed should not be left upon the Cross after Sun-set, because he that is hanged in this manner is cursed by God. His Body shall not remain all night upon the tree, but thou shalt in any wise bury him that day; for he that is hanged is accursed of God. The King of Ai having been crucified by Joshua's Orders, Josh. viii. 29, 30. his Body was left upon the Cross no longer than till the evening. The Jews [r] believe, that the Souls of those who remain upon the Gibbet, and without burial, enjoy no peace, and receive no benefit from the Prayers of other People, but wander up and down till their Bodies are buried; which agrees with the notion which the Greeks and Romans had of this matter. Homer Iliad 4. and Virgil's Æneid. 6.

> Nec ripas datur horrendas & rauca fluenta
> Transportare prius quam sedibus ossa quierint.

The Cross which our Saviour was nailed to, was made in the form of a T, that is to say, of the old Samaritan Tau [s], which resembled the Greek Tau, and not that of the present Hebrews. But we are not to understand it so rigorously; for the Tau is one line drawn over another at right Angles, whereas our Saviour's Cross represented a line crossing another at right Angles, and traversing it. †. Thus old Monuments, the Coins of the Emperor Constantine, and the antient Crosses describe it to us. S. Jerom [t] compares it to a Bird flying, a Man swimming, or praying with his Arms extended like a Cross. Besides the Trunk therefore, and the Arms, there was a piece of Wood which rose above them: And on this Pilate ordered the following words to be inscribed, Jesus of Nazareth King of the Jews, which exposed the Crime whereof our Saviour was supposed to be guilty.

Sometimes the Criminal was crucified on a Tree, and fastened to it with Cords: After this manner Tiberius ordered the Priests of Saturn to be crucified at Carthage upon Trees, before the Temple of their God: [u] Saturni sacerdotes in eisdem arboribus templi sui obumbratricibus scelerum, votivis crucibus exposuit. Ausonius [x] after this manner describes Cupid crucified on a Tree.

> Hujus in excelso suspensum stipite Amorem
> Devinctum post terga manus, substrictaq; plantis
> Vincula mœrentem, nullo moderamine pœnæ > Affigunt.

Sometimes he that suffered was fastned with his Head downwards: Thus S. Peter chose to be crucified, out of respect to his Master Jesus Christ, not thinking himself worthy to be fixed to the Cross like him [y]. Seneca speaks of this punishment [z], Alios converso capite in terram suspendere.

Eusebius [a] remarks, that in Egypt the same Punishment was inflicted upon several Martyrs. Sometimes a Fire was kindled at the foot of the Cross, that so the Sufferer might perish by the Smoak and Flame. The Emperor Alexander Severus, commanded one to be executed in this manner, who was a Cheat, a Quack, and a dealer in Smoak, that by this means there might be some relation between his Crime and his Penalty [b]. Præcone dicente: fumo punitur qui fumum vendidit.

The common way of crucifying was by fastening the Criminal with Nails, one at each Hand, and one at both his Feet, or one at each of them; for this was not always performed in the same manner; the Antients representing Jesus Christ to us, as sometimes crucified with four Nails [c], and sometimes with three [d]: They were likewise bound frequently with Cords; and this Penalty which seems in one sense gentler, because it occasions less pain, in another was more cruel, because the condemned Person by this means was made to languish for a longer time. Arbori infelici recte suspendite [e]. S. Andrew is said to have been thus fastened to the Cross with Cords. [f] he continued also three days alive upon it. Our Saviour in the following words, foretold, that S. Peter would die upon a Cross. When thou wast young thou girdest thy- John xxi. 18.

[q] Joseph. l. xiii. c. 22. Antiq. [r] Talmud, tract. Sanhedr. Rab. Bar-Nachman in Beraschith Rabba c. 22.
[s] Hieronym. in Ezech. c. ix. [t] Idem in Marc. xi. [u] Tertull. in Apolog. c. 8.
[x] Auson. in Cupidine affixo. [y] Chrysost. in Petr. & Paul. Abdias in Petro, &c.
[z] Senec. Consol. ad Marc. c. 20. [a] Euseb. Hist. Eccl. l. viii. c. 8. [b] Lamprid. in Alexandro.
[c] Cyprian de Passione: clavis sacros pedes terebrantibus. [d] Greg. Naz. carm. de Christo Patiente.
[e] Tit. Liv. l. i. [f] Abdias l. iii. Hist. Apostol.

thyfelf and walkedft whither thou wouldeft: But when thou fhalt be old, thou fhalt ftretch forth thy hands, and another fhall gird thee, and carry thee whither thou wouldeft not. They who were going to be nailed in this manner to the Crofs, were fo girt about: [g] Tunc Petrus ab altero cingitur, cum cruci adftringitur. They were loaded with Fetters, and fo led to the place of Execution, where they were faftened to the Crofs with Cords [h].

Sometimes they ufed both Nails and Cords. Lucan fpeaking of one who had been crucified, who was afterwards taken down from the Crofs, fays [i],

Laqueum nodofq; nocentes
Ore fuo rupit.
Infertam manibus chalybem, nigramq; per artus
Stillantis tabi faniem, virufq; coactum Suftulit.

Altho' the condemned perfon was generally fixed to the Crofs with Nails; yet fometimes it was otherwife. The holy Martyr Pionius having been fentenced to undergo this Punifhment, ftript himfelf, extended himfelf upon the Tree, and gave his Members to the Soldiers to be faftened with Nails. When they ufed both Cords and Nails, there was no inconveniency in lifting up the Perfon who was to fuffer together with the Crofs, he was fufficiently upheld by the Cords, and people concerned themfelves very little about leffening the Pains and Torments of a Malefactor condemned to die in this manner.

Before they nailed him to the Crofs, they generally fcourged him with Whips, or leathern Lafhes, which was thought to be feverer, and more infamous than to be fcourged with Cords. Sometimes little Bones, or pieces of Bones were tied to thefe Scourges, that fo the condemned perfon might fuffer more feverely. Our Saviour was cruelly fcourged during his Paffion. Pilate having pronounced Sentence againft him, ordered him to be fcourged, and delivered him up to be crucified. Slaves when guilty of any (Mat. xxvii. 26.) great Crime, were often faftened to a Gibbet or a Crofs; and in this condition they were led about the City, and beaten with Rods. [k] After this manner our Saviour was loaded with his Crofs; and (John xix.) as he funk under the burthen, Simon the Cyrenian was conftrained to bear it after him, and with him.

The Criminal was crucified quite naked [l]. The Saviour of the World in all probability, was not ufed more tenderly than others, upon whom this Punifhment was inflicted. The Soldiers divided his Cloaths among them, and caft Lots for his Tunick, which is an under Garment, (Mat. xxvii. 35.) worn over the Flefh like a Shirt. Chriftians out of refpect, and a principle of (John xix. 23, 24.) Modefty, have reprefented Jefus Chrift covered in a decent manner, fometimes drefs'd intirely, [m] fometimes covered from his Loins to his Knees, and fometimes with thofe parts only covered with a Vail which Modefty requires us to conceal: But this does by no means prove the general practice to be fuch, nor that they had this regard to Jefus Chrift, whom they did not know, and whofe defign it was to load himfelf with the Shame and Punifhment of our Sins.

Several Queftions have been ftarted concerning our Saviour's Crofs. Some [n] think that it was made of four different pieces of Wood, viz. Cyprefs, Cedar, Pine and Box. S. Bernard [o] fays, it was made of Cyprefs, Cedar, Olive and Palm Wood. The Foot or Bafis of it was of Cyprefs, the Top of it of Cedar, the Chapiter of it, if it may be fo called, was of the Olive Tree, and the Arms of the Palm Tree. Proba Falconia in her Rhapfodies, fays, it was made of Oak.

Ingentem quercum decifis undique ramis Conftituunt.

The Author of Hiftoria Scholaftica, and many others after him, tell us, that the Queen of Sheba, as fhe entered Solomon's Palace, which was called the Houfe of Cedar, took notice of a Beam there, which, as fhe foretold, would at fome time or other be made ufe of in the execution of a Man, who fhould caufe the Deftruction of all Ifrael. Solomon, to prevent this Misfortune, ordered, as they fay, that this Beam fhould be buried in that very fpot where the Pool was in the Sheep-Market, which is taken notice of in S. John. At the time of our Saviour's (John v. 2, 3, 4.) Paffion, this piece of Wood was difcovered, and ufed in making up his Crofs. Others not content with thefe Fables, add further, that Seth, the third Son of Adam, going to Paradife, procured of the Angel, who kept guard there, three kernels of the Tree of Life, which he planted on his Father's Grave. From thefe three Kernels fprung three little Wands, which joined together, formed the Beam of Solomon's Palace lately mentioned [g] Tertull. in Scorpiac. [k] Theophylact. in Joan. [i] Lucan l. vi. de Magâ Theffalâ.

[h] Lipf. l. iii. c. 5 de cruce & l. ii. c. 2, 3. [l] Lipf. l. ii. de cruce c. 7. Artemidor. [illegible]
[m] I have feen in the Houfe of Refuge belonging to the Abby of Epternach at Luxemburg, a Manufcript Volume containing the four Gofpels in Gold Letters, of a Royal Magnificence and Beauty, given by the Emperor Otho, and the Emprefs Theophanis, wherein our Saviour and the Thieves are reprefented upon the Crofs drefs'd in all their Cloaths. [n] Chryfoft. feu alius Serm. de cruce Beda in Collectan.
[o] Bernard in Cant. vii. v. 8.

4

tioned, which was afterwards uſed in the Crucifixion of our Saviour. But the bare relating of ſuch Fables, is doing them too much Honour.

Some ſay, this Croſs was fifteen Foot high; that the Arms of it were ſeven or eight Foot long; that the Top on which the Title or Sentence of Chriſt's Condemnation was faſtened, was a piece of Wood added afterwards, with a Board on which theſe words were written, Jeſus of Nazareth King of the Jews. But it is not eaſy to get any certain knowledge of theſe matters, which neither the ſacred Writers, nor the primitive Fathers take any notice of. Thoſe Authors who have ſpoken of them, are too modern to prove a matter of fact of this Nature.

Painters commonly repreſent the Croſs to be pulled down, when our Saviour is faſtened to it, and afterwards to be ſet up again, and the Body of our Saviour to be raiſed with it: Speculative perſons make uſe of theſe Conſiderations to aggravate the exceſs of pain which he endured at his Crucifixion. But this opinion is not at all probable. Is it common to have the Gibbet firſt pulled down, when the Criminal is to be hang'd upon it, in order afterwards to put it up again, when the perſon to be executed is faſtened to it? The ſhaking and motion of the Croſs, together with the weight of the Body, might, without any thing elſe, have broken the crucified perſon's Hands and Feet, and have looſened him from the Croſs with inexplicable Pains. Nonnus, Author of the Tragedy intitled, The ſuffering Jeſus; S. Auſtin, and the moſt learned Interpreters [a], are of opinion, that J. C. was nailed to the Croſs, as it ſtood already erected.

It has been the opinion of ſome [b], that below the crucified Perſon's Feet, there was a kind of Footſtool, or piece of Wood jutting out, upon which his Feet were laid and faſtened. S. Gregory of Tours [c] particularly intimates this, and there are many Croſſes to be ſeen made after this manner. It muſt be confeſſed, that without this the Criminal could not continue long nailed to the Croſs, the whole weight of his Body bearing upon his Hands. But others aſſert [d], that there are no marks of this Footſtool to be ſeen in the deſcriptions of the Croſs, which the moſt antient Greek and Latin Writers have left us. But they ſpeak of a kind of wooden Horſe, upon which the ſuffering perſon was, as it were, mounted, that ſo his Hands might not be torn aſunder by the weight of his Body. This was a large Peg fixed about half way the Croſs: As appears very clearly in Juſtin [e], Ireneus [f], and Tertullian [g]: And the ſame is aſſerted by ſeveral able criticks [h].

In the Article Wine, we ſhall ſpeak of the Wine made of Myrrh, which was given our Saviour to drink upon the Croſs. Sometimes they who were faſtened upon the Croſs, lived a good while in that Condition; S. Andrew is believed to have continued three days alive upon it. Euſebius ſpeaks of certain Martyrs in Egypt [i], who were kept upon the Croſs till they were ſtarved to death. It is ſaid, that S. Victorinus the Martyr lived three days upon the Croſs [k], and that the Saints Timotheus and Maanes lived nine days upon it [l]. Pilate was amazed at Jeſus Chriſt's dying ſo ſoon, becauſe naturally he muſt have lived longer, if it Mark xv. 44. had not been in his Power to have laid down his Life, and to take it up again. The Thighs of the two Thieves were broken, in order to haſten their death, that their Bodies might not remain upon the Croſs on the Sabbath day, and to comply with the Law of Moſes, which forbids John xix. 31, 32, 33. the Bodies to be left there after Sun-ſet. Deut. xxi. 22. But among other Nations they were ſuffered to continue there a long time. Sometimes they were devoured alive by Birds and Beaſts of Prey [m].

——Cruxillum tollat in auras,
Viventeſque oculos offerat alitibus.

And generally they were devoured after their death by Wolves, Dogs, and Birds: If the Croſſes were higher than uſual, they either were a prey to the Birds, or putrified, and fell in Pieces. Guards were appointed to obſerve, that none of their Friends or Relations ſhould take them down, and bury them [n]. The Hiſtory of the Epheſian Matron, and the Soldier who was ſet to guard the Croſſes, is very well known. The Roman Soldiers, who had crucified Jeſus Chriſt and the two Thieves, continued near the Croſſes, till the Bodies were taken down from thence.

The Hebrews do not pray for thoſe of their Nation who are left hanging on the Gibbet, or at leaſt they do not pray for them in publick, and in the Synagogue, as is the practice for other dead perſons during during eleven Months immediately after their deceafe [o]. Befides, they did not permit the Relations of the Perfons executed to place their Kinfmen in the Tombs belonging to their Families, till their Flefh had been firft confumed in the publick Sepulchres [p]: Then they were allowed to remove their Bones into private Sepulchres. It was perhaps for this reafon, that Jofeph of Arimathea defired leave from Pilate, to lodge the Body of Jefus in his own Tomb, that he might not be thrown into the publick Burying-place appointed for Criminals.

[a] Vide Bynæum de morte Chriſti l. ix. c. 6. art. 7. Lipſ. de cruce l. ii. c. 7. [b] Lipſ. not. in l. ii. de cruce c. 10. Fuardent. not. in Iren. l. ii. c. 42. Neuſ. in Nonni Par. in Joan. xx. 18. [c] Gregor. Turon. de Gloria Martyr. l. i. c. 9. [d] Scaliger. Anim. in Euſeb. digreſſ. de litter. Gonicar. origine lit. T. Bynæus de morte Chriſti, l. iii. c. 5. art. 11, 12, 13. [e] Juſtin. Dial. cum Tryphone. [f] Iren. l. i. c. 46. [g] Tertull. l. ii. contra Nationes. [h] Scaliger. loco citato. Salmaſ. de cruce. Bartholin. de latere Chriſti aperto, & de cruce. Bynæus l. iii. c. 5. art. 12. [i] Euſeb. l. 8. c. 8. παρέμειναν τε ζῶντες αὐτῶν καὶ ἐπ' αὐτῶν ἰκρίων λιμῷ διεφθάρησαν. [k] Martyrol. 5. Sept. [l] 3 Maii Martyrolog. [m] Prudent. περὶ στεφ. Cor. xi. [n] Vide Lipſ. de cruce l. ii. c. 15, 16.

Jefus Chrift fays often in his Gofpel, that he who would be his Difciple, muft take up his Crofs and follow him: The Crofs is the fign of Ignominy and Sufferings; it is, as I may fay, the Device and Glory of Chriftians. S. Paul fays, that he is crucified with Jefus Chrift, and that he glories only in the Crofs of Chrift; that they who are Chrift's have crucified the flefh with the affections and lufts. Jefus Chrift is the way that we are to follow: There is no attaining to that Glory and Happinefs which is promifed to us by any other means than by the Crofs. [Gal. ii. 19. Idem vi. 14. Gal. v. 24.]

